FOREWORD

IT has long been the wish and purpose of the Author to publish such a Book as the "BIBLE STUDENT'S COMPANION." He has long regarded it as a desideratum on account of its proposed Comprehensive Exposition, its Usefulness to persons who study the Sacred Word or engage in Christian Work. Such a Book he now presents to the public, and he presumes that it will be appreciated on account of its adaptation for usefulness.

The Author requests the reader to carefully inspect the following pages, and observe the Descriptions of Persons and Places, the Explanations of Difficult Portions of the Word of God; the succinct Elucidation of important subjects in Doctrine, Precept, and Practice, and specially to mark the Comprehensive Concordance, commingled with the whole, and he will find, it is presumed, a vast mass of useful and interesting matter, which probably will induce him to think that the "BIBLE STUDENT'S COMPANION" is unique in its design, and well calculated to be useful as a Book of Reference.

The Book has been a work of immense labour, requiring great research, frequent consultation of Commentaries, and the Original Languages, and the Works of Antiquaries, Travellers, Ancient and Modern Historians, and persons familiar with Eastern Archaeology. In every case he has consulted the best authorities to assist in preparing this important work. In the explication of most subjects he has exercised his own judgment, as influenced by his love of the Scriptures, and his reverence for Evangelical Truth as contained in the Bible.

The advantages of this Bible Handbook over similar works will be,

1. It contains, for its size, more actual explanations of and commentaries on the Word of God. The Biography of the Scriptures has been treated of in a concise manner, as it can be read more interestingly in the Bible itself.

2. It quotes more extensively portions of Scripture to be explained, thus making it a Brief Critical Commentary on the whole Bible.

3. It gives the modern names of places in most cases where there is any certainty.

4. It gives the Meaning and Pronunciation of Scripture Proper Names. This will be found very valuable by the Biblical student, as all Bible names, unlike our modern appellations, have a real signification, as Noah, Abram, Abraham, Machpelah, Jesus, Siloam (Sent), and such like indicate.

5. A considerable portion of the Description of Places and Countries in the East is new. To obtain such information, recent and eminent travellers and writers have been consulted.

6. The name of each book in the Bible is given, with its meaning, pronunciation, and a clear synopsis of what is known of the writer, date, design, and style.

7. It contains a Concordance, based on Cruden's, which will enable the student of Scripture to find almost any word or text in the Old and New Testament. Its utility will at once be apparent. This is a new feature in a Bible Dictionary, and it must give the Book great importance and value.

The whole is designed with the object of presenting a real work-day Companion to the diligent student of the Bible: Completeness first, Correctness next, and Compactness third, being the chief points before the Compiler.

W. NICHOLSON.

RULES FOR PRONUNCIATION.

1. WHEN a vowel ends a syllable, with the accent on it, it must have its long open sound : thus Na'-bel, Je'-hu, Si'-mon, Tu'-bal, have the accented vowels sounded as in pa'-per, me'-tre, bri'-dal, no'-ble, bru'-tal.

2. When a consonant ends a syllable, the preceding vowel is short, thus, in Sam'-u-el, Lem'-u-el, Sim'-e-on, Sol'-o-mon, Suc'-coth, the vowels in the first syllables are sounded as in tan'-ner, plen'-ty, prin'-ter, col'-lar, sum'-mer.

3. I at the end of a word, though not accented, is long : thus, in A'-i, A-ris'-a-ri, the final i has its long sound, as in vi'-al. When it is combined with a vowel, to prevent mistake, it is expressed in the pronunciation by y, as in Le'-vi, pronounced Le'-vy.

4. I unaccented ending a syllable, is pronounced like short e : as A'-ri-el, Ab'-di-el, pronounced, A'-re-el, Ab'-de-el.

5. When the vowels ai are pronounced as a diphthong, they are by some sounded like the ay in day ; and when they occur in the middle of a word, and are followed by a vowel, the y is sounded with the syllable following : thus Isaiah is pronounced Izay'-yah, and Benaiah, Ben'-a-ya. It is not unusual, however, to hear this ai sounded as a diphthong in Greek ; thus many of the Episcopalian clergy pronounce Isaiah, I-zy'-ah, which sounds very pedantic. And where they obtain their warrant, it is difficult to tell ; however it is not according to the Hebrew idiom. At the end of a word the sound is exactly like that of the affirmative above-mentioned, the e being less prominent than in the middle of the word.

6. Ch is pronounced like k, as Chebar, Enoch, &c. Cherubim and Rachel, seem to be perfectly Anglicised, as the ch is always sounded as in cheer, child, riches, &c. The same with cherub, except it means a city of the Babylonish empire, when it is pronounced Ke'-rub.

It had been better if most of these words had been written with a K, instead of a C, as it tends to mislead a common English reader, to pronounce the C like an S.

“ Before the Norman conquest, C was used to express the power of K, as in the Latin language : but after this a change was effected, and the power of C was established as an equivalent of S before E, T, and Y. This like most innovations, introduced confusion.”

The Latins had not a K, and they used S, which gives a soft sound to words which ought to have a hard one ; as Cephas, pronounced Sefas ; according to the Greek it ought to be Kefas, because it is spelled with a K in that language. The same may be said of C, or Caph, and Ch in the Hebrew language, which are always hard. How many words are thus wrongly pronounced, as Cedron, Cenchrea, &c., &c. Surely the Hebrews and Greeks knew how to pronounce their own language, and we ought to conform to them as far as possible. What right have we to change the pronunciation ? We ought to follow them in such matters, and not the Latins.

7. Gentiles, as they are called, ending in ines and ites, as Philistines, Hivites, Hittites, &c., being Anglicised in the translation of the Bible, are pronounced like formatives of our own, as Philistines, Whitfieldites, Jacobites.

8. Many names also of persons are spelt differently in the New Testament, as they are taken from the Greek translation of the Old Testament : as Noe for Noah, Elias for Elijah, Osee for Hosea, and Jeremy for Jeremiah. In some of the names also of the New Testament, it will be observed that their Latin form has been retained in several places, by an oversight in the translators, as Timotheus for Timothy, Silvanus for Silas, and Marcus for Mark.

9. When a should have the long open sound, as in pa'-per, it has been expressed in the pronunciation by ay ; and when it should have the broad sound, as in ra'-ther, it is expressed by ah.

10. When the letter g is used in the pronunciations, it must have its hard sound, as in gold ; its soft sound, as in ginger, is expressed by the letter j.

Observe.—Many Proper names in the Bible (e. g. Baal-Hermon, Nathan-Melech) are combinations of two or more names which occur separately in other passages : in these cases, only the simple names have been given, unless there was something significant in their meaning. Thus the words above, and many others similar, must be looked for under their component parts.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE MEANING OF SCRIPTURE PROPER NAMES.

THE scripture names of both persons and things are generally remarkable for their signification. A knowledge of these cannot fail materially to assist the reader in understanding many passages in the Bible. In several instances, names were given immediately by God ; in others they were imposed by a spirit of prophecy ; and many, both persons and things, received their denominations from some particular circumstance in their history.

Thus God called our first parents Adam, which signifies earth, or red-earth, because from the earth man was created, Gen. ii. 7 ; v. 12. He changed the name of Abram, which signifies high-father, to Abraham, the father of a great multitude, or of nations, Gen. xvii. 5, and that of his wife, Sarai, my lady, to Sarah, lady or princess of a multitude, ver. 15, 16, and Jacob, a supplanter, to Israel, a prince with God, xxxii. 28.

By a prophetic spirit some names were imposed, as Noah, signifying comfort, and Jesus, a Saviour. Many names were given on account of some peculiar circumstance in their history, as Isaac, laughter or gladness, Gen. xvii. 17 ; xviii. 12 ; xxi. 3—6. Bethel, the house of God, Gen. xxxviii. 17—19. Moses, taken from the water, Exod. ii. 10.

It should be observed that those names which begin or terminate with EL, or begin with JE, or end with IAH, were generally designed to express some relation to God :—as Bethel, the house of God ; Israel, a prince with God ; Jeremiah, the exaltation of the Lord.

Some persons and things had two or more names, and they are sometimes called by one and sometimes by the other. For example, Jacob was called Israel ; Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, was called Ruel, Exod. ii. 18. iii. 1. Uzziah was called Azariah, 2 Kings xvi. 1. 2 Chron. xxvi. 1. Isa. i. 1. Paul was the Roman name of the apostle, while his Jewish name was Saul.

OR, THE BIBLE EXPLAINER

EXPLANATION.—THE words are first given as they occur in the Bible, then the pronunciation as nearly as possible. The meaning, when given, follows the pronunciation. Every word is divided into syllables by hyphens (-); and all letters not separated by one of these, are to be pronounced as one syllable. The accent (') shows that the syllable over which it is placed, is that on which the greatest stress of the voice is to be laid.

AAR

AAR

AARON, Ay'-ron, (signifies) lofty, a mountain of strength.—He was the son of Amram and Jochebed, and of the tribe of Levi. By Divine direction he was consecrated to the office of High-priest by Moses, his brother. He was the first High-priest under the Jewish economy. He was born about the year 2430; B. C. 1574. He was an eloquent man, and on that account was appointed spokesman to Moses, who shrank from that office because of his defection in speech. Aaron married Elisheba, the daughter of Aminadab. He had four sons, Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar. Aaron and his sons were Divinely appointed priests in the tabernacle, and were anointed with the holy oil, and invested with the sacerdotal garments. During the absence of Moses in the Mount, Aaron was sadly afflicted with the idolatrous disposition of the people. They made a golden calf, and prostrated themselves before it. In such conduct they imitated the idolatrous nations. Their idol for worship was probably designed to represent the idol Apis or Mnevis, as worshipped by the Egyptians. The worship of the golden calf was exactly the mode of celebration which Herodotus describes as practised by the Egyptians at the feast of Apis:—"Some of the women play on castanets, and the men on the flute; when Apis appears, all the Egyptians manifest their joy by feasting." Thus the poor deluded Israelites forgot God, and before their idol "sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play." The conduct of Aaron was undecided, and too compliant, and therefore very censurable. Moses justly rebuked him; but averted from him the Divine wrath. This sin was punished by the destruction of 3000 of the Israelites.

During the infliction of the plague on the murmuring Israelites, Aaron, at the command of Moses, took a censer with incense, and amidst the congregation stood between the living and the dead, to make an atonement for them, and the plague was stayed; Num. xvi. After the schism of Korah, the Lord confirmed his appointment to office by the miracle of the budding rod and other signs; See Num. xvi. and xvii. Aaron was forbidden to enter the land of Canaan, because he did not acknowledge the power of God in the miraculous supply of water in the desert of Zin. In obedience to the Divine command, Aaron, in the last year of the sojourning of Israel in the wilderness, and the 123rd year of his age, ascended Mount Hor, and died, and was probably buried by Moscs and Eleazar. On his way to the mount, his official robes were transferred to his son and successor in the priesthood. He died A. M. 2552; B. C. 1451.

AB.—The eleventh month of the Jewish civil year, and the fifth of their sacred. It answered to the moon that began in July and consisted of thirty days.

ABADDON, A-bad'-don, the destroyer.—He is called "the angel of the bottomless pit," whose name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon; but in the Greek tongue, Apollyon; Rev. ix. 11. The name is generally applied to Satan. Those who think that the locusts mean the Saracens, consider that the name applies to Mahomet. And those who refer the locusts to the Catholic clergy, apply the name to the Pope.

ABAGTHA, A-bag'-thah, father of the wine-press.—Chamberlain to King Ahasuerus, Esther i. 10.

ABANA, Ab'-a-nah, or A-ba'-nah, stony.—Abana and Pharpar, the two rivers of Syria, which Naaman the leper thought "better than all the waters of Israel." Abana is probably the Barradi, or Chrysorrhoeas, which was at the foot of Lebanon, and runs towards the south. Perhaps the Pharpar is the Orontes, which, rising to the north-east of Damascus, passes Antioch, and after a course of 200 miles to the north-west, loses itself in the Mediterranean Sea. 2 Kings v. 12. These two rivers supplied abundance of water to Damascus, and rendered the country around one of the most beautiful and fertile spots in the world. Most of the rivers of Judea were dry most of the year. Hence the national prejudice of Naaman is not surprising.

A range of mountains east of the Jordan, between the river Arnon and the Jordan. It included Mount Nebo, Pisgah, Peor, &c. Num. xxxiii. 48, 49.

ABASE, to make low, to humble, &c.

Job 40. 11. every one proud a. him

Is. 31. 4. lion will not a. himself

Ezek. 21. 26. exalt low and a. high

Dan. 4. 37. walk in pride able to a.

Phil. 4. 12. how to be a. and how to 2 Cor. 11. 7. offence in a. myself.

ABATED, Gen. 8. 8. After 250 days waters a.: 11.

Lev. 27. 18. shall be a. from estimation

Judg. 8. 3. then their anger was a.

ABBA, Ab'-bah, father.—It is a Syriac word, derived from the Hebrew Ab. It signifies my father. The word is used by our Lord in his agony, Mark xiv. 36, and by Paul, when he recounts to believers their glorious privileges, foremost of which he places, "the spirit of adoption, by which we cry, Abba, (which means) my Father; Rom. viii. 15. We thus perceive, both in the term itself, and the manner of using it, how endearing and consoling is access to God which the Christian enjoys. Abba was the Oriental term by which children lovingly addressed their parents; it was never used by slaves in a family. The word Abba is the same read either backwards or forwards, and may hint the love of God in eternity past, and in eternity to come. The love of God the Father is the same to his children in every scene and circumstance, in adversity and in prosperity, &c.

ABBA, Mark 14. 36. a. Father, all things are possible to thee

Rom. viii. 15. whereby we cry a. Father

Gal. iv. 6. sent his Spirit into your hearts crying a. Father

ABDI, Ab'-dy, my servant.—The father of Kish. 2 Chron. xxix. 12.

ABDIEL, Ab'-de-el, a servant of God.—The head of a family of the Gadites; 1 Chron. v. 15.

ABDON, Ab'-don, a servant of Judgment.—The son of Hillel. He was chief judge or ruler of Israel eight years, Judges xii. 13.—Also a son of Micah; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 20.—A city of Asher; Josh. xxi. 30.

ABEDNEGO, A-bed'-ne-go, servant of light.—His Hebrew name was Azariah; he received his new name from Nebuchadnezzar, when appointed to serve in his palace; Dan. i. 4, 7. He was one of the three youths ordered by Nebuchadnezzar to be cast into the fiery furnace at Babylon; Dan. iii. 26.

ABEL, Ay'-bel, vanity, vapour, mourning.—The second son of Adam and Eve. He is celebrated for his faith, and as having been the first martyr for the sake of the Messiah, and as the first human being who experienced death, and obtained eternal life with God. God respected Abel's sacrifice, because offered by faith in the Messiah; Heb. xi. 4. He brought the victim to the altar, confessed that his life was forfeited by his sins, and could only be redeemed by blood, and that blood he believed would be shed by Christ the Seed of the woman, of which his sacrifice was a type. No doubt this doctrine was divinely promulgated, and Abel gladly availed himself of it. To him it was the glad tidings of salvation! The acceptance of his sacrifice by God, provoked his brother Cain to envy, jealousy, and revenge, and in his wrath he slew Abel; Gen. iv. 2—16.

There are several references to Abel in the Scriptures. Our Saviour distinguishes him by the title "righteous." He ranks among the illustrious elders mentioned in Heb. xi. and is justly called the "first martyr."

ABEL-BETH-MAACAH, Ay'-bel-beth'-may-a-kah, the mourning of the house of Maacah.—A town north-west of Damascus; 2 Sam. xx. 14—22.

ABEL-MAIM, Ay'-bel-may'-im, the mourning of the waters.—A city of Naphtali; 2 Chron. xvi. 4.

ABEL-MEHOLAH, Ay'-bel-mehol'-lah, mourning of weakness, or sickness.—A town of Manasseh, the native place of the prophet Elisha; 1 Kings xix. 16.

ABEL-MIZRAIM, Ay'-bel-miz-ra'- im, the mourning of the Egyptians; Gen. l. 11.

ABEL-SHITTIM, Ay'-bel-shit-tim, mourning of the thorns.—A city in the plains of Moab, beyond Jordan, opposite to Jericho. Num. xxv. 1; xxxiii. 49.

ABEZ, Ay'-bez, an egg, muddy.—A city in the tribe of Issacher. Josh. xix. 20.

ABI, Ay'-by, my father.—The mother of Hezekiah. 2 Kings xviii. 2.

ABIA, Ay-by'-a, course of, Luke i. 5. The priests were divided into 24 classes, courses, or orders, and they ministered at the altar in rotation; 1 Chron. xxiv. These courses or orders were distinguished by the name of the leading member of the family from which the order was taken. The eighth of these courses fell to Abia, and to this course belonged Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist.

ABIAH, A-by'-ah, the Lord is my Father.—The second son of the prophet Samuel, and brother of Joel; 1 Sam. viii. 2.

gent Father.—One of David's worthies. 2 Sam. xxiii. 31.

ABIASAPH, A-by'-a-saf, a gathering, a consuming father.—One of the sons of Korah; Exod. vi. 24.

ABIATHAR, A-by'-a-thar, excellent father.—The father of Ahimelech, and tenth high-priest among the Jews; 2 Sam. viii. 17. He was a faithful high-priest during the reign of David, and especially during the rebellion of Absalom. There were two high-priests in Israel at the same time.—Abiathar in the party of David, and Zadock in the party of Saul; 2 Sam. viii. 17. But in consequence of his supporting Adonijah in his pretensions to the throne of David, Solomon, upon becoming king, expelled Abiathar from the priesthood; 1 Kings ii. 27, and conferred the office upon Zadock. Thus was fulfilled the word of God to Eli; 1 Sam. ii. 31; for Abiathar was the last of the priests of the house of Thamar, to which Eli belonged; and Zadock was of the house of Eleazar; and in this way the priesthood reverted to its former course. The Abiathar in Mark ii. 26, has been thought to be the same with Ahimelech. Probably both officiated at the same time, and both received the title, the name of either was used to designate that period.

ABIB, Ay'-bib, green fruits, ears of corn.—The first sacred, and seventh civil month of the Jewish year. It answered to our March. It is also called Nisan. In the middle of this month the Jews began their harvest. On the 14th day the Passover was eaten. See Lev. xxv. 8, 9, 10. This change of beginning, as to the sacred year, took place at the redemption of Israel from Egypt; Exod. xii. 2.

ABIDAN, Ab'-e-dan, father of judgment.—A son of one Gideon; Num. vii. 60.

ABIEL, Ay'-be-el, God my Father.

—The father of Kish and Ner, and grandfather of King Saul, 1 Sam. ix.

1.—Also a distinguished man in David's army; 1 Chron. xi. 32.

ABIEZER, Ay-be-e'-zer, father of help.

Chron. xi. 28.

ABIEZRITE, Ay-be-ez'-rite.—Jo-ash, the father of Gideon, was one;

Judges vi. 11.

ABIGAIL, Ab'-e-gale, joy of the

ii. 16. The wife of Nabal, a prosperous shepherd, who lived near the Dead Sea. She manifested great prudence and promptitude in trying to avert the wrath of David, caused by the insulting treatment which his messengers had received from her husband, 1 Sam. xxv. 3, 14—22. David, eventually on account of her beauty and prudence, became enamoured of her, and when Nabal died, he married her. David had a sister of the same name: 1 Chron. ii. 16.

ABIHAIL, Ab-e-hay'-il, the father of strength.—The name of several eminent men among the Hebrews. 1 Chron. v. 14; Num. iii. 35; Esther ii. 15.—Also the name of some women, 2 Chron. xi. 18, 19.

ABIHU, A-by'-hu, he is my father.—The son of Aaron the high-priest, destroyed with his brother Nadab, by fire sent from God, Lev. x. 1, 2. They used strange fire instead of that upon the altar of burnt offering. Some suppose that they were beguiled into this sin by the use of wine. Such a supposition is authorized by the solemn prohibition, given in connection with their sin and fate, viz., that the officiating priest was to drink neither wine nor strong drink. Lev. x. 1—11.

ABIHUD, A-by'-hud, the father of praise or confession, 1 Chron. viii. 3.

ABIJAH, A'-bi-jah, the will of the Lord—The son of Rehoboam, 2 Chron. xii. 16. He succeeded his father on the throne of Judah, and, like him, observed not the laws of God. He reigned three years.—Also a son of Jeroboam, the first king of Israel, a youth who feared God, and on that account, was early removed from the evil about to come on his father's house; 1 Kings xiv. 1—18.—“In him was found some good thing towards the Lord God of Israel.” O what a glorious trait! Had he lived to wear the crown, he would have destroyed the idol-calves which his father had set up, and permitted his subjects to go to Jerusalem to worship. We see what is of greatest value in God's esteem; and that which is truly good in a person is only that which is good towards God. The piety of Abi-jah flourished amid uncongenial circumstances. His father was extremely wicked; and had cast God and his worship behind his back; 1 Kings xix. Probably he would try to corrupt his son also; but this prince adhered closely to the pure religion of Israel; and he was the only person in the family who manifested his hatred to idolatrous worship. What a loss was the death of such a prince to his nation!—Also the wife of Ahaz, and mother of King Hezekiah; 2 Chron. xxix. 1.

ABIJAM, A-by'-jam, father of the sea.—Same as Abijah, 1 Kings xiv. 31.

ABILENE, Ab-e-le'-ne, father of the apartment, or mourning.—A small canton in Syria, between Libanus and Antilibanus. Lysanias was governor here in the fifteenth of Tiberias; Luke iii. 1.

ABIMAEL, A-bim'-a-el, a father sent from God.—Gen. x. 28.

ABIMELECH, A-bim'-e-lech, father of the king.—A name of Philistine kings, as Cæsar was of the Roman Emperors. It was a name of office or dignity. The king of Gerar; Gen. xx. 1, &c. B. C. 1899. Being deceived by Abraham, he took Sarah to be his wife; but warned in a dream of her relation to Abraham, he was restrained from sin.—Also another king of Gerar, in the time of Isaac, B. C. 1804. He was deceived also by Isaac respecting his wife Rebekah, while they dwelt in Gerar, in consequence of a famine in Canaan. Also the name of a judge in Israel, Judges ix. 18. He put to death 70 of his brothers who dwelt in his father's house at Ophrah, leaving only Jotham, the youngest, alive. The subjects of Abimelech at last revolted, and he met with many defeats. He was afterwards mortally wounded by part of a millstone hurled upon his head by a woman from the top of a tower in Thebez. In order that his death might not be attributed to a woman, he commanded his armour-bearer to stab him with his sword, Judges ix. 54—57.

ABINADAB, A-bin'-a-dab, father of willingness.—The son of Jesse, 1 Sam. xvi. 8.—The son of Saul, 1 Sam. xxxi. 2.—The son-in-law of Solomon, 1 Kings iv. 11.

ABINOAM, A-bin'-o-am, father of beauty or comeliness.—The father of Barak, Judges iv. 6.

ABIRAM, A-by'-ram, father of altitude.—Son of Hiel, the Bethelite, Josh. vi. 26; 1 Kings xvi. 34.—The son of Eliab; one that conspired with Korah and Dathan, and was destroyed with them; Num. xvi. 1.

ABISHAG, Ab'-c-shag, error of my father.—A young female, native of Shunem, married to David in his old age, 1 Kings i. 3. When David died, Adonijah desired Abishag in marriage; but Solomon perceiving his policy, put him to death; 1 Kings ii. 13—25.

ABISHAI, A-bish'-a-i, the present of my father.—The son of Zeruiah, David's sister, and one of David's generals, 2 Sam. xxi. 17.

ABISHALOM, A-bish'-a-lom, the father of peace.—The father of Maachah, mother of Abijah, king of Judah, 1 Kings xv. 2.

ABISHUA, A-bish'-u-ab, father of salvation or magnificence.—The son of Phineas, 1 Chron. vi. 4.

ABISHUR, Ab'-e-shur, the father of the wall, or my father is upright.—The son of Shammai, of the posterity of Judah, 1 Chron. ii. 28.

ABITAL, Ab'-e-tal, father of the dew.—One of David's wives, and mother of Shephatiah, 1 Chron. iii. 3.

ABITUB, Ab'-e-tub, father of goodness.—The son of Hushim, 1 Chron. viii. 11.

ABIUD, A-by'-ud, father of praise.—The son of Bela, 1 Chron. viii. 3; Matt. i. 13.

ABJECTS, base men, Ps. 85. 15. Low base persons, and probably hired assassins.

ABLE, when applied to God, denotes his gracious power, and includes his love, faithfulness, and grace. It is necessary to remember this, in order to perceive the force of such declarations as Rom. 4. 21; 2 Cor. 9. 8; Eph. 3. 20.—Able.

ABNER, Ab'-ner, my father's lamp.—The son of Ner, uncle of king Saul, and a distinguished general of his army, 1 Sam. xiv. 50. After Saul's death, he made Ishbosheth, son of that prince, king, and supported Saul's family seven years, in opposition to David, 1 Sam. xiv. 50; xvii. 55—58. xxvi. 5—14; 2 Sam. ii. Ishbosheth being disgusted at an imaginary crime of Abner's, declared he would betray the kingdom into David's hands, and accordingly commenced a correspondence with him, appointing an interview at Hebron for that purpose. Abner was treacherously murdered by Joab, 2 Sam. iii. This happened A. M. 2956. David manifested his detestation of such conduct by honouring Abner with a public funeral; he followed the bier as chief mourner, and composed an elegy on his death; 2 Sam. iii.

ABOMINATION, a thing hateful. Idolatrous worship is an abomination, and all unnatural practices, which were customary among the heathen, and formed a part of their devotions; Lev. xi. 43.; xviii. 30.; xx. 25. Sin is called an abomination, because detestable to God and good beings. Various gross practices are so called. Wearing the dress of the opposite sex. Deut. xxii. 5. Lying, Prov. xii. 22. False weights, Isa. lxvi. 3. False doctrines, Rev. xvii. 4. Abomination of Desolation, Dan. ix. 27, or "the abomination of the desolator," referring to a prediction of the pollution of the temple by Antiochus Epiphanes, who erected an idolatrous altar on the altar of burnt-offerings, and unclean things to be there offered to Jupiter Olympius, to whom the temple itself was dedicated.—The phrase also denotes the Roman army, under the command of Titus. ABRAM, } Ay'-bram, father of

ABRAHAM, } Ay'-brah-ham, fa- } ther of a great multitude. The son of Terah, born at Ur, a city of Chaldea, A. M. 2008. His history occupies a large part of the book of Genesis, and is intimately connected with both the Jewish and Christian dispensations.
It was common for a prince, or other superior to bestow a new name, commonly taken from some remarkable point in the life of the person receiving it, Gen. xvii, 5. See such changes, Gen. xli, 45; 2 Kings xxiv, 17.
The extended name was given him as indicative of the promise of a numerous posterity which was made to him.

Abram is called "The Friend of God." He was the founder of the Jewish nation, God's peculiar people, termed Israel after the flesh. He was "the father of the faithful," or head of the true Israel, that innumerable company, of both Jews and Gentiles, who imitate his faith, and become part-takers of his blessedness; Rom. ii, 28, 29; ix, 4-8.

Little is said of Abram till he had arrived at years of maturity. His parents were strangers to the true

God, and idolaters; Josh. xxiv, 2.
When 75 years of age, the Lord appeared to him, and commanded him to quit the place of his abode, and migrate into a strange land, where he should sojourn, till, under the Divine direction, he should come to a country which should be given him to possess.
Promises were made that from him should spring a numerous and powerful people, that his name should be great, and that he should become a blessing to the human race. So deep was his conviction of the Divine call, and so firm his faith in the providence and care of God, that although uninformed of the nature of the country, and the character of the inhabitants, yet he promptly obeyed, and "went out, not knowing whither he went."
He took with him his aged parent
Terah, his brother Nahor, his wife Sarai, and his nephew Lot, with all his possessions. They first settled in Haran, or Charran, in Mesopotamia; but after the death of Terah, Abram, under Divine direction, went to Canaan. He left Nahor in Haran;
Gen. xi, 31; xii, 1, 5; Acts vii, 2.

In Canaan God again appeared to him, to confirm all his former promises, and to assure him that he would give the whole of that country to his posterity; a promise which must have appeared very extraordinary to one who was hitherto childless and far advanced in life. But a famine compelled him to leave Canaan, and go down into Egypt where corn abounded. Sarai was at this time 65 years of age, and probably very beautiful.
Abram, aware of the character of the Egyptians, directed Sarai to call herself his sister, fearing that if they knew her to be his wife, they would take her and kill him. Sarai acquiesced in this act of dissimulation. At length her beauty captivated the king of Egypt, who, for her sake, showed extraordinary kindness to her supposed brother. Favours were conferred on Abram in great abundance, and in a little time he saw himself possessed of vast numbers of sheep, oxen, camels, asses, men and maid-servants, besides gold, silver, and other valuable articles, which Pharaoh lavished upon him—a paltry recompense after all for the loss of an amiable wife! The conduct of Abram, on this occasion, is one of those circumstances in the life of this illustrious man over which one would gladly throw a veil. It was an action very unworthy of so eminent a character; but there are spots in the sun; and it is an evidence of the truth of Scripture history, that the writers never disguise the failings of the best of men, but relate with scrupulous impartiality their vices as well as their virtues.

Pharaoh and his house became afflicted with the most awful plagues, which convinced them on whose account they were suffering, and Abraham was sent for, and severely censured by the king of Egypt for deceiving him in a matter so important. His wife was restored to him unstained in her conjugal fidelity, and Abram was commanded instantly to depart from his dominions with all the wealth he had obtained.

As the famine was over in the land of Canaan, Abram returned, and upon the altar which he had formerly built, near Bethel, he offered a sacrifice of thanksgiving for his great deliverance. In process of time, the flocks of Abraham and Lot greatly increasing, and disputes respecting the watering and pasturing arising among the shepherds, Abraham resolved amicably to separate from his nephew. This separation secured the unmingled descent of the Abrahamic race. Then the Lord appeared again, and renewed his promise to give all that land to him and his posterity. Leaving Bethel, he went to the land of Mamre, in Hebron, where he built an altar to God. There he contracted a friendship with three influential men, brothers, viz., Mamre, who gave the name to the country, Aner, and Eshcol. About this time, Lot was taken prisoner by Chedorlamer and his allies; a disaster which had no sooner reached the ears of Abram, than he communicated the intelligence to his three friends, Mamre, Aner, and Eshcol, who cheerfully granted him their assistance, and joining three hundred of his own men to their respective forces, they marched in pursuit of the conquerors, surprised them during the night at Dan, pursued them as far as Hoba, on the left of Damascus, and having rescued Lot out of their hands, with his family, servants, and cattle, brought him back to his former habitation. The king of Sodom, on this occasion, came out to meet Abram, and congratulated him on his success, offering him all the booty which he had retaken, except the men and women; but, with that generosity which is always characteristic of an independent mind, the patriarch nobly refused to accept any share whatever of it, "lest the king of Sodom should have it to say, I have made Abram rich." Here Melchisedec met and blessed him; and to that high priest of the true God, and King of Salem, he presented the tithes of all the spoil. Gen. xii. xiii. xiv. Heb. vii.

For the fifth time the Lord appeared in vision to the patriarch, saying, Fear not, Abram, I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward; Gen. xv. 1. Hitherto he had silently acquiesced in the Divine promises; but now he presumes to put the question to the Most High, how these things could be fulfilled, while he was childless, and would soon have to bequeath all his property to Eliezer, his steward. The Lord condescended to assure him that not Eliezer, but a son of his own should be his heir. Then commanding him to lift up his eyes towards heaven, and survey the innumerable stars, the Lord promised to make him the father of a still more numerous offspring. Abraham was then 85 years old, and Sarai, who was considered past child-bearing, was turned 74. These things were sufficient to "stagger" his faith; but "Abram believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness. But the faith of Sarai was put severely to the test. The delay of the promise, and her age being that of sterility, made her resolve to be a mother, at least, by adoption, according to the custom of that age and country. She therefore gave to her husband one of her handmaids, an Egyptian, to be his secondry wife, who bore Ishmael. Children so born have the privilege of legitimacy. When Abraham was 100 years old, and his wife 90, the Lord appeared to him again, ratified his former covenant with him, changed his name from Abram to Abraham, re-assuring him that he would make him the father of many nations, that kings should descend from him, and his posterity should possess the land of Canaan. At this time circumcision was instituted, as a sign of the covenant. Abraham was again assured that Sarai should bear him a son, and that in future she should not be called SARAI, my lady, but SARAH, a princess. Abraham hastened to obey the Divine command, and with Ishmael, and all the men of his house, was circumcised.

He was one day sitting at the door of his tent, when three mysterious strangers appeared. The promise of a son, to be born from Sarah, was renewed by the principal visitant, a promise which Sarah received with a laugh of unbelief. Abraham courteously accompanied them towards the vale of Jordan, and the angel who had made the promise, announced the awful ruin impending over the wicked cities of the plain. Abraham, influenced by pity, interceded on their behalf; nor did he cease expostulating, until he had obtained a promise, that if only ten righteous persons were found there, the Lord would spare them for their sakes. When he had ceased to intercede further on their behalf, the Lord departed from him, and he returned to his own house, full of anxiety, we may be certain, for the issue of this impending catastrophe: "And Abraham gat up early in the morning, to the place where he stood (interceding) before the Lord; and he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace. But God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow." Gen. xix. 27.

At length the appointed time arrived—the promise was fulfilled—Isaac was born, and on the eighth day his father circumcised him. The birth of Isaac changed the circumstances of Ishmael; and as Sarah saw him mocking her son, she said to Abraham, "Cast out this bondwoman and her son, for Ishmael shall not be heir with Isaac." Abraham ultimately complied, God giving his sanction, promising to protect Ishmael, and to make him a powerful nation. See Gal. iv. 29.

Twenty-five years after this event, B. C. 1872., the severe trial of Abraham's faith occurred. He was required to offer his son Isaac for a burnt-offering on Mount Moriah. Without questioning the severity of the Divine command, Abraham resolved to obey, and ascended the Mount for that purpose. The altar is erected—the fire kindled. It was a solemn, an awful occasion.

The awful silence is at length interrupted by the voice of Isaac. "And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father? And he said, Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood; but where is the lamb for a burnt-offering?" Oh! what an eloquent appeal was that! how powerfully calculated to rouse all the sensibilities of the soul of Abraham, and to overturn all his resolutions! But his faith nobly triumphed over all that reason could oppose, or nature suggest; for, "being fully persuaded that what God had promised he was every way able to perform, he staggered not at the divine promise through unbelief, but was strong in faith, giving glory to God." By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac; and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son, accounting that God was able to raise him up even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure. Heb. xi. 17—19. Abraham calmly replied to his son's question, that God would provide himself with a lamb for a burnt-offering. Little did he apprehend how prophetically he uttered these words; for no sooner had Abraham bound his son upon the wood, and stretched out his hand to give the fatal blow, than a voice from heaven addressed him:—"Abraham, Abraham! Lay not thine hand upon the lad, for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me." The sincerity of his faith was now fully attested by his works. "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered up Isaac his son upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect. And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness, and he was called THE FRIEND OF GOD," James ii. 22, 23. And now Abraham, casting his eyes around him, discovered a ram, the victim which God was to provide, caught by the horns in an adjoining thicket; and, assisted by his son, he offered it up instead of the latter. At this time God renewed all his promises, and ratified them by his oath. "By myself have I sworn," was the solemn asseveration, "that because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thy only son from me, that in blessing, I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and, in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, because thou hast obeyed my voice," Gen. xxii. 1—19.

The offering up of Isaac was designed to show to Abraham the day of Christ, which he clearly saw, and was glad. He received him from the dead "in a figure," a type, which truly pointed to the resurrection of Christ.

Twelve years after this event, his domestic happiness was interrupted by the death of Sarah, aged 127 years. Having purchased the field of Machpelah, with the cave and sepulchre in it, he there buried his wife with due solemnities. His next care was to marry his son Isaac to Rebekah, a distant relative, daughter of Bethuel, grand-daughter of Nahor, Gen. xxvi. Abraham afterwards married Keturah, by whom he had six sons, who became heads of six different Arabian tribes. He lived to the age of 175. He died B. C. 1822, and was interred by his sons Isaac and Ishmael, in the cave of Machpelah, along with Sarah his wife; Gen. xxv. 10.

From Abraham sprang the Jewish nation. It was their constant boast that Abraham was their father. All their civil and religious privileges originated with him; their conservation as a distinct people was promised; Gen. xxii. To them as Israelites, belonged the typical adoption, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the service of God, and the promises; and of them, as pertaining to the flesh, Christ came. But the highest honour conferred upon Abraham is with relation to his spiritual seed, and considered as "the father of the faithful." The apostle Paul, Rom. iv. 11, expressly calls him "the father of all them that believe," whether Jew or Gentile; and again in the same chapter, ver. 16, "the father of us all." He also terms him, "the heir of the world," ver. 13. This has an evident reference to the covenant which God made with him, Gen. xvii., in which he not only promised to make him "a father of many nations," but that in him "all nations of the earth shall be blessed."

Abraham affords us a pattern of faith and patience. The Apostle says, "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should afterwards receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went;" Heb. xi. 8. So every believer must submit to the will of God.—must sacrifice whatever competes with his duty to God, and, self-denyingly, "seek for glory, honour, and immortality, even eternal life in the heavenly Paradise. By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise, for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God;" Heb. xi. 9, 10. All Christians should follow his example, and "pass the time of their sojourning here in fear," remembering that "if the earthly house of their tabernacle be dissolved, they have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens;" 2 Cor. v. 1. Abraham was truly a stranger and a pilgrim; the only land he possessed in Canaan was the grave he had purchased. Great was the simplicity of his faith; a faith that obeyed without reluctance, and followed with the utmost promptitude; that shrunk from no duty, however arduous, and recoiled not from the most fiery trial. "They which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham."

ABRAM, a high father; Gen. 12. 1, 4; 13. 1, 14; 14. 14; 15. 1; 16. 1

ABRAHAM, father of a great multitude; Gen. 17. 5; 18. 1, &c. 20. 1; 21. 2; 22. 1; Rom. 4. 1—22; Gal. 3. 7; 4. 22; Jas. 2. 21.

ABRAHAM said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass, and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you; Gen. xxii. 5. How could he return with Isaac, when he was going to make him a burnt-offering? The Apostle answers, "By faith Abraham when he was tried, offered up Isaac, accounting that God was able to raise him up even from the dead, from whence he also received him in a figure;" Heb. xi. 17, 19. He knew that at the birth of Isaac, both he and his wife were dead to the purposes of pro-creation; that his birth was a kind of life from the dead; that the promise of God was most positive,—In Isaac shall thy seed be called; Gen. xxi. 12; that this promise could not fail; that it was his duty to obey the command of his Maker; and as easy for God to restore him to life after he had been a burnt-offering, as it was for him to give him life in the beginning. Therefore he went fully-purposed to offer his son, and yet confidently expecting to have him restored to life again. We will go yonder and worship—perform a solemn act of devotion which God requires, and come again to you.

Abraham's bosom.—This is figuratively spoken of as the resting-place of Lazarus; Luke xvi. 22, 23. The words suggest the idea of a banquet in an Eastern hall, and the custom of reclining at meals, on their left elbows, on a couch. By this arrangement, the head of one person was brought nearly into the bosom of the person who reclined above him, and the guests were so arranged that the most favoured was nearest the host; John xiii. 23; xxi. 20. Abraham's bosom was a phrase used by the Jews to signify the rest of the heavenly paradise. As Abraham was exalted to the highest state of happiness in heaven, so, to be in his bosom, denoted the greatest heavenly felicity.

ABSALOM, Ab'-sa-lom, father of peace.—The son of David, by Maacah, the daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur. He was distinguished for his fine form and beautiful countenance; 2 Sam. xiv. 25, 26. He was the delight of his father, admired by the court, and almost idolized by the people. Tamar, his sister, was violated by Ammon, a son of David by another wife. Absalom was determined to revenge, and for two years he cherished that spirit. Then he invited all the royal family to his house, to celebrate the feast of sheep-shearing, and when Ammon was exhilarated with wine, he caused him to be assassinated. Fearing the displeasure of his father, he fled and took refuge in Geshur with his grandfather, king Talmai. He was eventually admitted to his father's presence by his strategy, and by the influence of his uncle Joab, 2 Sam.

xiii. 13. Absalom was characterized by notorious vices, and by unnatural rebellion. He was assiduous in trying to alienate the minds of his father's subjects, and attaching them to his own interests; 2 Sam. xiv.

Accompanied by two hundred men, who, entirely unacquainted with his rebellious projects, seem to have followed him in the simplicity of their hearts. Absalom proceeded to Hebron, at the same time sending his emissaries through all the tribes of Israel, with orders to proclaim by sound of trumpet, that Absalom was king at Hebron. The effect clearly showed how successful this unnatural young man had been in stealing to himself the hearts of the people. For no sooner was his standard erected at Hebron, than it was resorted to by such a concourse of men, that David was compelled to flee from Jerusalem, whither Absalom now proceeded without hesitation, and where he was received by the populace with joyful acclamation. 2 Sam. xv. 1—12.

How affecting was the unnatural conduct to the mind of David! "What a scene," says a late traveller in the Holy Land, when describing the Mount of Olives, which the royal Psalmist ascended on this occasion to offer his sacrifice to God, before he took his last farewell of Jerusalem; "what a scene does the sublime, though simple description given by the inspired writer, 2 Sam. xv. 30, present to the imagination of every one who has felt the influence of filial piety, and especially of the traveller, standing upon the very spot where the aged monarch presented to heaven the offering of his wounded spirit! "And David went up by the ascent of Mount Olivet, and wept as he went up, and had his head covered, and he went barefoot: and all the people that were with him covered every man his head; and they went up weeping."

Absalom's triumph was of short duration. The royal army, under Joab, routed the rebels, put 20,000 of them to death, and compelled the usurper to seek his safety in flight.

Mounted on a mule, he fled into the forest of Ephraim, where, passing under an oak, his head became entangled in its branches, and his mule proceeding rapidly at the moment, left him suspended by his hair, unable to extricate himself. His pursuers found him in this state, and killed him with darts. The affection which the kind man had for him, induced him to give strict orders to his troops to spare his life, if he should fall into their hands; and when he heard of his death, he mourned over it in most plaintive and affecting strains. "O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! Would to God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" 2 Sam. xviii. 33.

ABSTINENCE. Among the Jews, various kinds of abstinence were ordained by their law. Among the primitive Christians, some denied themselves the use of such meats as were prohibited by that law; others looked upon this abstinence with contempt; as to which Paul gives his opinion, Romans xiv. 1, 3. The council of Jerusalem, which was held by the apostles, enjoined the Christian converts to abstain from meats strangled, from blood, from fornication, and from idolatry, Acts xv. Upon this passage, Dr. Doddridge observes, "that though neither things sacrificed to idols, nor the flesh of strangled animals, nor blood, have or can have any moral evil in them, which should make the eating of them absolutely and universally unlawful; yet they were forbidden to the Gentile converts, because the Jews had such an aversion to them, that they could not converse freely with any who used them. This is the reason which James assigns in the 21st verse, and it is abundantly sufficient. This reason is now ceased, and the obligation to abstain from eating these things ceases with it. But were we in like circumstances again, Christian charity would surely require us to lay ourselves under the same restraint."

ABYSS, without bottom—a deep mass or fund of waters—refers to the water which God created with the earth, which our translators render by deep. Darkness is said to have been on the face of the deep, or abyss; Gen. i. 2. Sometimes it means the deep sea; sometimes the grave, Rom. x. 7; also hell, or the bottomless pit; Luke viii. 31; Rev. ix. 1; xi. 7. The ancient Hebrews, (and the Easterns now) thought that the abyss, the sea and waters, encompassed the whole earth; that the earth was immersed, and floating upon the abyss, like a water-melon, swimming in and upon the water, which covers a small moiety of it. They believed that the earth was founded upon the waters, or at least that it had its foundation on the abyss. Under these waters, and at the bottom of this abyss, are confined the Rephaim, or wicked giants, who, while on earth, caused the nations to tremble. Prov. ix. 18; xxi. 16. In these prisons the kings of Tyre, Babylon, and Egypt, are described as suffering punishment for their pride and cruelty. The abyss is represented as the abode of evil spirits, and of powers opposed to Christ and his church; Rev. ix. 1, 2; xi. 1; xxii. 1—3.

ACCAD, Ak'-kad, a pitcher, a spark.—One of the four cities built by Nimrod in the land of Shinar, and said to have been the "beginning of his kingdom;" Gen. x. 10. Modern travellers have stated that the ruins of this city are to be seen about nine miles from the present Bagdad.

ACCEPT, to take pleasure in. To meet a favourable reception, Malachi i. 10. Believers are made accepted in the beloved, Eph. i. 6. This is the prayer of the church; the Lord accept thy burnt-offerings, Psalm xx. 3. No prophet is accepted in his own country. His countrymen do not value or honour him, as they ought. "An acceptable time," is the time while God waits to be gracious to men, Psalm lxxix. 13. He who seeks salvation from sin and ruin should notice, that now is the accepted time, and now is the day of salvation. There is a sinful acceptance of persons in showing partial respect in judgment or otherwise, Prov. xviii. 5.

ACCESS to God, to his grace, and church, is one of the most important and valuable privileges of believers ; Rom. v. 2 ; Eph. ii. 23 ; iii. 12. Christ suffered to bring us to God ; 1 Pet. iii. 18. This great privilege consists in complete liberty for sinners to worship God by faith in Christ, without terror, and with the assurance of his love to them. The word alludes to the worship of the temple, which consisted of an outer and inner court, and the most holy place. The last was regarded as the peculiar residence of Deity, and symbolized the heaven of heavens. Entrance into it was permitted by no one except the high-priest, once a year. All others worshipped with their eyes fixed on the sacred spot, concealed from all by a veil. Christ, by his fulfilment of the law, and the endurance of its penalty, has removed all hinderances to fellowship with God.—The term may also be borrowed from the usage of Eastern courts, where an official person conducted the stranger into the presence of the king. Our Conductor, is Jesus our Saviour.

naan, belonging to the tribe of Asher, but not conquered by them ; Judges i. 31. It first became an important city in the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, by whom it was enlarged and beautified, and from whom it was long called Ptolemais. During the Crusades it was called Acon ; but after its occupation by the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, it was called St. Jean d' Acre, or Acre. The neighbourhood was famed for sand of a vitreous nature, which the Sidonians used in making glass. The Christian religion was early established here, and here Paul visited the saints, in his way to Jerusalem ; Acts xxi. 7. It had bishops from the second to the third century. It became famous during the Crusades. Modern travellers describe remains and fragments of buildings, which, no doubt, belonged to the earliest ages, such as pillars for galleries, and slabs of fine marble &c. The modern town is large ; it assumed greater importance about the middle of the last century, when it was taken by the Arab Sheik, Daher. Djezzer Pasha, who succeeded him, strengthened the fortifications, and improved the town. This place has become familiar to the minds of Britons, as the scene of much valour shown by Sir Sydney Smith, in 1799, against the arms of Napoleon I. In 1832, Ibrahim Pasha besieged it for nearly six months, and threw into it 35,000 shells. It was then considered impregnable. It was eventually taken by Admiral Stopford, under whom Sir Charles Napier was most conspicuous and heroic. By the explosion of a powder-magazine, the garrison and town were reduced to ruins.

ACCURSED, devoted to destruction, Deut. xxi. 23 ; Josh. vi. 17, 18. "Calling Jesus accursed," speaking con-temptibly of Christ, 1 Cor. xii. 3.
 Something that lies under a curse, or sentence of excommunication. In the Jewish idiom, accursed and crucified were synonymous : among them, every one was accounted accursed who died on a tree. This will explain Rom. ix.
 2, where the apostle wishes himself accursed after the manner of Christ,
 (i. e.) crucified, if happily he might by such a death, save his countrymen.

Dr. Bandinel renders the passage with a parenthesis, as a very natural and forcible aggravation of the poignancy of Paul's feelings for his brethren ; namely, that he himself had once been all that they now were, and which he now perceived to be nothing short of being an accursed out-cast from Christ, their long-expected Redeemer, and from all the blessings of his salvation, though he too, like them, had been so blinded, as even to glory in that awful state.

Then the passage will read : "I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart (for I myself, once was,
 and even gloried in being an accursed out-cast from Christ) on account of my brethren, my kinsmen according to

 xxvii. 37.—It was a common custom to affix a label, in black letters on a white ground, to the cross, briefly stating the crime for which the criminal suffered. This is still the case in China, when a person is crucified. Sometimes a person was employed to carry this before the criminal, while going to the place of punishment. Matthew calls it an ac- cusation ; for it was false that ever Christ pretended to be KING OF THE JEWS, in the sense of the inscription.
 He was accused of this ; but there was no proof of the accusation. From John xix. 1, we find that the Jews wanted the accusation to be altered :
 "Write," said they, "that HE said, I am king of the Jews ; thus trying, by a vile falsehood, to justify their conduct in putting him to death. Pilate rejected their request. Both Luke ch. 23. 38, and John, ch. 19. 20, say that this accusation was written in the other side of the brook Siloam

Called the Potter's field, because pottery was made from its clay; Fuller's field, because cloth was dried in it; and Aceldama, because purchased with the money for which Christ was betrayed; Zech. xi. 12. 13. Matt. xxvii. 8. Acts i. 19. Maundrel was shown this spot, as still used by the Armenians for a grave-yard. It is now about 100 feet long, and 40 broad, and is called Campa Sancta, on account of the veneration in which it is held by Christians.

ACHAIA, A-kay'-yah, grief, trouble—Denotes the whole of Greece, as it existed in a Roman province: or Achaia Proper. a district in the northern parts of the Peloponnesus, on the bay of Corinth, and in which the city of that name stood. Used in the former sense, 2 Cor. xi. 10, and in the latter, Acts xviii. 1, 12; xix. 21; Paul passed through Achaia on his way to Jerusalem.

ACHAICUS, A-kay'-e-kus.—A native of Achaia; 1 Cor. xvi. 17.

ACHAN or ACHAR, Ay'-kan, Ay'-kar, he that troubles. Joshua vii. 1; 1 Chron. ii. 7.—A son of Carmi, and descendant of Judah. At the taking of Jericho, contrary to the command of Joshua, Achan secreted in his tent a wedge of gold, and other valuables; Joshua vi. 17; vii. 1. He was detected by the employment of the lot. The treasure was found secreted in his camp. As a punishment, he and his family were stoned to death, the latter probably having been partakers of the crime.—Also one of Esau's descendants; Gen. xxxvi. 27.

ACHAN. "And all Israel stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire after they had stoned him with stones. And they raised over him a great heap of stones, &c." Josh vii. 24—26. Were the family and the cattle stoned—were they burned with fire? Dr. Adam Clarke is of opinion that Achan only was stoned, and that his substance was burned with fire; or that even if his oxen, &c., were destroyed, yet his sons and daughters were left uninjured, and became witnesses that they might be deterred from imitating their father's conduct. The reason for this opinion is, that the children of Achan could not justly suffer with him because of the law, Deut. xxiv. 16, unless they had been accomplices in his guilt, of which there is no evidence. Had his family been stoned, the heap of stones would have included them also; whereas, it is "raised over him."

ACHIM Ay'-kim, confirming, revenging, Matt. i. 14.

ACHISH, Ay'-kish, thus it is, how is this?—The Philistine king of Gath, to whom David fled for shelter from Saul, and with whom he afterwards formed an alliance through fear of Saul. Achish treated him with great kindness and confidence, 1 Sam. xxi. 10. Also the name of a king of Gath in Solomon's time, 1 Kings ii. 39, 40.

ACHMETHA, Ak'-me-thah, or Ecbatana, a city of Media. Ezra vi. 2. It is now called Hamadan. Remnants of towers and sun-dried bricks indicate a more ancient city than the present one. The ancient city was surrounded by seven walls, and ranked among the most celebrated and beautiful cities of the East.

ACHOR Ay'-kor, trouble.—A valley between Jericho and Ai, where the Israelites were distressed by the sin which Achan committed. Josh. vii. 24. As Achor signifies trouble, it is predicted that to the Israelites it would become a place of hope and joy when they should return from captivity.

ACHSAH, Ak'-sah, adorned.—Daughter of Caleb, and wife of Othniel; Josh. xv. 16.; Judges i. 12.

ACHSHAPH, Ak'-shaf, poison, tricks, one that breaks, &c.—A city of Palestine near Mount Tabor, in the tribe of Asher; Josh. xii. 20.

ACRE, The English acre is 4840 square yards; the Roman, 3,200; and the Egyptian, 3,698; but the Hebrew acre appears to mean as much as one yoke of oxen could plough in one day. "Ten acres of vineyard yielding one bath, and the seed of an homer producing an ephah," Isa. v. 10, means that the land should be afflicted with a dreadful sterility; for such a crop is scarcely a tenth part of the seed sown.

ACTS of the APOSTLES.—This book records the labours, trials, and transactions of the Apostles, particularly of the Apostle Paul, for a period of about thirty years after our Lord's ascension. That it was written by Luke is affirmed by the voice of antiquity, and is proved by its dedication to Theophilus, the same as his Gospel is dedicated. See Luke i. 1—4; Acts i. 1. He went with Paul to Rome when he went to that city as a prisoner. That Luke was at home is evident from Col. iv. 14; Philemon 24. Hence he was the writer of the narrative of the journey to that city. He was a constant witness of occurring events. Luke does not furnish a general account of the first Christian churches, and he is silent concerning labours of most of the Apostles; nor does he notice the propagation of Christianity in Egypt, or in the countries bordering on the Euphrates and the Tigris, &c. The principal design of this book is, first, to show the miraculous establishment of Christianity, by the Holy Spirit, upon the Apostles and the churches, according to the promise of Jesus Christ; and, secondly, to unfold the gracious purposes of God, in admitting the Gentiles into his church, according to the prediction of the Old Testament. The Acts were written, it is supposed, about the 64th or 65th year of our Lord. The style is purer Greek than the other books of the New Testament; it is simple, vigorous and graphic. By some writers the Acts of the Apostles has been called "the Gospel of the Holy Ghost," and the "Gospel of our Saviour's resurrection."

ADALIA, Ad-a-ly'-ah, one that draws water, poverty, cloud, death.—The fifth son of Haman, Esther ix. 8.

ADAM, Ad'-am, earthy, taken out of red earth.—The first man, and father of the human race; Gen. i. 26. The name given to man in general; Gen. v. 1, 2. The second Adam, the Lord Jesus Christ; Rom. v. 14; 1 Cor. xv. 22, 45; 1 Tim. ii. 13.—Name of a city; Josh. iii. 16.

With regard to the creation of man, we are taught by the Mosaic narrative, to follow the Divine Artist, first in the production of the inanimate elements, next of vegetable, and then of animal life, till we come to the masterpiece of the creation, man endued with reason and intellect. The house being built, its inhabitant appeared; the feast being prepared, the guest was introduced; the theatre being decorated and lighted up, the spectator was admitted to behold the magnificent scenery in the heavens above and the earth beneath—that seeing he might understand, and understanding adore the Divine Architect and Creator. The account of Adam's creation is given in Gen. ch. 1 & 2; "Let us make man" (Adam) "in our own image;" "God created the man" (the Adam) "in his own image." "The Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground," a beautiful form, reflecting the wisdom, power, and benevolence of the great Creator.

They whose profession has led them to examine the structure of this astonishing piece of mechanism, contemplate the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the formation of the human body. An examination of its parts, and the admirable skill with which they are disposed, brought Galen upon his knees, in adoration of the wisdom with which the whole is contrived, and incited him to challenge any one, upon a hundred years' study, to show how the least fibre or particle could have been more commodiously placed, either for use or beauty. And while the world shall last, genius and diligence will be producing fresh proofs that we are "fearfully and wonderfully made;" that "marvellous are the works;" and, above all, this capital work of the Almighty, demonstrating that the hand which made it must indeed be divine.

The living soul was breathed into man by the inspiration of the Almighty. He was made "in the image and likeness of God." As God is a Spirit, the similitude must necessarily be a spiritual one, and the reference must be to the rational and immortal soul. That image was lost and defaced by sin; but we see its nature when restored by Jesus Christ, the second Adam. The image restored was the image lost, and that in which Adam was created. Hence we read of "the new man, which after God is created;" and also of man being "renewed after the image of him that created him;

Eph. iv. 24; Col. iii. 10. He was created sinless. In his understanding there was no error, and no obliquity in his will. He was created holy, "upright," and happy. His Creator invested him with lordship over the works of his hands, giving him dominion over "the fowls of the air, and the fishes of the sea; over the cattle, and over all the earth." Eden was the place of his abode, a garden of fertility and beauty, of grandeur and magnificence, unscathed by sin. To Adam thus profusely crowned with blessings, one thing was wanting—a partner to share his bliss, and this was given. "I will make him a helpmeet for him," said the Almighty; and "he made the woman, and brought her unto Adam." We are not informed how long they continued in a state of innocence; but the Scriptures assure us that they lost it. In Gen. ii. 9, we read of "the Tree of Life, in the midst of the garden," and "the Tree of Knowledge of good and evil." They were material trees, yielding material fruit, and adapted for the nourishment of the body. To the first Adam might have free access, and eat of the fruit without reserve. It is also plain from the narrative, that it had a symbolical signification; and that it was intended to be to him a pledge of the happiness which he should continue to possess so long as he remained innocent; and accordingly when he had sinned, and forfeited the happy life which was originally conferred upon him, he forfeited also all right to the pledge, and was debarred every access to it. Gen. iii. 22-24.

But the Tree of the Knowledge of good and evil was given as a test of Adam's obedience, and was accompanied with an express, positive prohibition, "thou shalt not eat of it," sanctioned by an awful threatening, "for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii. 17. The prohibition of the fruit of this tree then, was the touchstone of his obedience; and the threatening of death in case he did eat of it, plainly implied a continuance of the happy life of which he was possessed, so long as he continued obedient. But reasonable as was this command, and however easy of observance, Adam fell before it. His wife, beguiled by the tempter, "that old serpent the devil," ate of the fruit of "the Tree of the Knowledge of good and evil;" "she also gave unto her husband, and he did eat," ch. iii. 6. It would appear from what the apostle says relative to this subject 1, Tim. ii. 14, that "Adam was not deceived;" he seems to have sinned with his eyes open; and, probably, overcome by his affection for his wife, he "hearkened to her voice," and plunged headlong into her sin.

Of the awful effects of their transgression, they soon began to be sensible. Deprived of their innocence, shame, remorse, and a consciousness of guilt, took possession of their minds. Their eyes were now opened, as indeed the tempter had said they would be; but it was only to discover "sights of woe."

"Earth felt the wound, and Nature from her seat, Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe,
That all was lost."

The first indication of their guilt was a consciousness of shame, and the next an attempt to hide themselves from God. Punishment was denounced against each party. The serpent was punished by degradation; the woman by painful childbearing and subjection; and the man by toil, labour, and anxiety; and that such has been the lot of his posterity, the uniform experience of every age attests the melancholy fact. The earth, which at first was the garden of the Lord, now began to bring forth thorns and thistles; and, in the sweat of his face, man was sentenced to eat bread, until he returned to the dust. Yet mercy was mingled with judgment. Their incensed Creator and Judge did not exclude his sinful creatures from his care; he provided for them coats of skins, with which he clothed them instead of the fig leaves which they had formerly put upon themselves; perhaps also to intimate that, henceforth, they could only have access to the divine presence by the medium of sacrifices, or that the latter were then instituted to prefigure the way of salvation through the great sacrifice which was once to be offered in the end of the world. But Adam, as now fallen, could no longer remain an inhabitant of the earthly Paradise. That he might not put forth his hand, and take also of the Tree of Life, and live for ever, the Lord sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from which he was taken; an expressive declaration of the important change in the condition of our first parents. "The Lord," it is said, "drove out the man."

"The world was all before them, where to choose Their place of rest and Providence their guide:
They hand in hand with wandering steps and slow
Through Eden took their solitary way."

The remaining portion of Adam's history well corresponds with the change in his condition! The corruption of his nature was early evinced by the conduct of the offspring which he begat in his own likeness; when, of his first two sons, one of them fell by the murderous hands of the other. Concerning his other children, the Scripture history only records the name of Seth, probably because it was through the line of the latter that the knowledge and worship of God were preserved; for it is noticed on the birth of his son Enos, that then men began to call upon the name of the Lord. The life of Adam was extended to 930 years. (See under the word Fruit.)

ADAMI, Ad'-a-my, my man, red, earthy.—A city of Palestine. Josh. xix. 33.

ADAMANT. A beautiful stone, of the hardest kind, generally called diamond. Diamonds are chiefly obtained in India, from the mines in Golconda, Visapoor, Borneo, and Brazil. Its great hardness makes it cut glass, resist an intense fire, &c. The hearts of sinners are compared to adamant. Zech. vii. 12.

ADAR, Ay'-dar, high, eminent.—The 12th month of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, and the 6th of their civil, answering to our February, and sometimes to March. As the Jews calculated by the lunar year, they added every third year a month, which they name a second Adar. The 14th and 15th were devoted to the feast of Purim.—Also the son of Ishmael, Gen. xxv. 15.—A king of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 39.—The name of a place; Josh. xv. 3.

ADBEEL, Ad'-be-el, vapour, a cloud of God.—The third son of Ishmael. Gen. xxv. 13.

ADDAN, Ad'-dan, lord, foundation.—A city in the empire of Babylon. Ezra ii. 59.

ADDAR, Ad'-dar, one that commands.—A son of Bela. 1 Chrou. viii. 3.

ADDER, a venomous reptile, brought forth alive, and not hatched from eggs, as are most serpents. It is often called a viper. In our translation of the Bible, we find the word Adder five times. Shephiphon, Gen. xlix. 17, is probably the Cerastes; a serpent of the viper kind, of a light brown colour, which lurks in the sand and the tracks of wheels in the road, and suddenly bites the unwary traveller, and the legs of horses, &c. By comparing the Danites to this artful reptile, the patriarch intimated by stratagem more than by open bravery, they should avenge themselves of their enemies, and extend their conquests.—Pethen in Ps. lviii. 4; xci. 13, signifies an Asp. We may perhaps trace to this the Python of the Greeks. In Ps. cxl. 3. the word Achsub occurs, derived from a word which signifies to bend back on itself, supposed to be the tarantula or Eastern spider. There is also the Tziphoni, or Basilisk, which is said to kill with its breath; Prov. xxiii. 32; Isa. xi. 8; xiv. 29; lviii. 4.

In Ps. lviii. 5. the effect of music upon serpents is stated. That they might be rendered tame and harmless by soft musical sounds, was an opinion which prevailed early and universally. Many ancient authors mention this effect, Virgil especially. It is mentioned in Sir H. Blunts' Voyage into the Levant, by Shaw, Bruce, and all travellers who have been in the Levant. It is impossible to charm some adders and serpents. Avicenna mentions some that are deaf, or some may be deaf by accident; or they may appear to be so. It appears from the Scripture that the adder takes precaution to avoid the fascination: "The deaf adder that stoppeth her ear; which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming never (ever) so wisely;" Ps. lviii. 4, 5. "I will send serpents among you, which will not be charmed, and they shall bite you;" Jer. viii. 17.

ADITHAIM, Ad-e-thay'-im, assemblies, testimonies.—A city belonging to the tribe of Judah. Josh. xv. 36.

ADJURE. It was a custom among the Jews to adjure, which was by a form of execration laid on the person if he did not answer truly. It was the same as administering an oath is now; so that though Christ held his peace when merely interrogated, he acknowledged when adjured, or put on oath, that he was the son of God. Matt. xxvi. 63.

Levite, Ezra x. 30.—Also, a valiant man of the tribe of Manasseh, who left his party to follow David. 1 Chron. xii. 20. Name of Jehoshaphat's general. 2 Chron. xvii. 14.

ADONIBEZEK, Ad'-o-ne-be-zek, the lightning of the Lord, the Lord of Bezek.—The king of the city of Bezek, about 17 miles from Shechem. Judges i. 5. A bloody and oppressive tyrant, subdued by the Israelites, who disabled him by cutting off his thumbs and great toes, so that he could neither fight nor fly. He regarded the punishment as just.

ADONIJAH, Ad-o-ny'-jah, Jehovah is my Lord.—The fourth son of David, by Haggith. His name forms a wonderful compound of two glorious names of the Lord; Adoni; Lord, Master, and Jah, meaning Jehovah. After the death of Amnon and Absalom, he aimed at the throne; but was prevented by the interposition of Bathsheba, the mother of Solomon; 1 Kings i. 1—5, &c. For his attempting to usurp the throne, he was put to death; 1 Kings ii. 13—25. Name of two Levites. 2 Chron. xvii. 8; and Neh. x. 16.

ADONIKAM, A-don'-e-kam, my Lord hath raised me. He returned from Babylon with 666 of his family. Ezra ii. 13.

ADONIRAM, Ad-o-ny'-ram, my Lord is most high.—Son of the king of Hamath; 1 Chron. xviii. 10. Also, The principal receiver of Solomon's tribute. 1 Kings v. 14. He was sometimes called Adoram. He was the agent of oppression, and the people stoned him to death; 1 Kings xii. 18.

ADONIZEDEC, A-don-e-ze'-dek, justice of the Lord.—A Canaanite; and King of Zedek or Jerusalem, when the Israelites invaded the land of Canaan; Josh. x. 1—27. A. M. 2553.

ADOPTION. An act by which a person takes a stranger into his family, and treats him as his own child. The practice was not an Hebrew one. (Calmet.) The word adoption comes from the Greek word uiothesia, which means, placing as a son. Adoption is common among the Turks, the Greeks, and Armenians. The child so adopted is carried with its parents before the Cadi, and declared heir, the parents renouncing all future claim to it, by a writing which is witnessed; and a child thus adopted, cannot be disinherited. Pharaoh's daughter adopted Moses, Ex. ii. 10. Mordecai adopted Esther, Esther ii. 7.—Spiritual adoption is God's receiving sinners into his family of grace, and constituting them his sons and daughters. Civil adoption was allowed of and provided for the relief and comfort of those who had no children; but in spiritual adoption, this reason does not appear. The Almighty was under no obligation to do this; for he had innumerable spirits whom he had created, besides his own Son, who had all the perfections of the divine nature, who was the object of his delight, and who is styled the heir of all things, Heb. i. 3. When men adopt, it is on account of some excellency in the persons who are adopted: thus Pharaoh's daughter adopted Moses because he was beautiful and fair, Acts vii. 20, 21; and Mordecai adopted Esther because she was his uncle's daughter, and exceeding fair, See Esther ii. 7; but man has nothing in him that merits this divine act, Ezek. xvi. 5. In civil adoption, though the name of a son be given, the nature of a son may not: this relation may not necessarily be attended with any change of disposition or temper. But in spiritual adoption we are made partakers of the divine nature, and a temper or disposition given us becoming the relationship we bear, Jer. iii. 19.

There is no adoption, says the great Charnock, without regeneration. "Adoption," says the same author, "is not a mere relation: the privilege and the image of the sons of God go together. A state of adoption is never without a separation from defilement," 2 Cor. vi. 17, 18. The new name in adoption is never given till the new creature is formed. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," Rom. viii. 14. Yet these are to be distinguished. Regeneration, as a Divine act, gives us a likeness to God in our nature; adoption, as a legal act, gives us a right to an inheritance. Regeneration makes us formally his sons, by conveying a principle, 1 Pet. i. 23; adoption makes us relatively his sons, by conveying a power, John i. 12. "By the one we are instated in the divine affection; by the other we are partakers of the divine nature."

The privileges of adoption are every way great and extensive. 1. It implies great honour. They have God's name put upon them, and are described as "his people, called by his name," Eph. iii. 15. They are no longer slaves to sin and the world; but, emancipated from its dreadful bondage, are raised to dignity and honour. Gal. iv. 7. 1 John iii. 1, 2.—2. Inexhaustible provision and riches. They inherit all things. Rev. xxi. 7. All the blessings of a temporal kind that are for their good shall be given them! Ps. lxxxiv. 11. All the blessings of grace are treasured up in Jesus Christ for them. Eph. i. 3. All the blessings of glory shall be enjoyed by them. Col. i. 27. "All things are yours," says the apostle, "whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours." 1 Cor. iii. 22.—3. Divine protection. "In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence, and his children shall have a place of refuge." Prov. xiv. 26. As the master of a family is engaged to defend and secure all under his roof, and committed to his care, so Jesus Christ is engaged to protect and defend his people. "They shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings and quiet resting-places." Isa. xxxii. 18. Heb. i. 14.—

4. Unspeakable felicity. They enjoy the most intimate communion with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. They have access to his throne at all times, and under all circumstances. They see divine wisdom regulating every affair, and rendering every thing subservient to their good. Heb. xii. 6-11. The laws, the liberties, the privileges, the relations, the provisions, and the security of this family are all sources of happiness; but especially the presence, the approbation, and the goodness of God, as the Governor thereof, afford joy unspeakable and full of glory. 1 Pet. i. 8; Prov. iii. 17; Heb. iv. 16.—5. Eternal glory. "The inheritance of the saints is incorruptible, undefiled, and never fadeth away." 1 Pet. i. 4. "Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." 1 John iii. 2. In the present state we are as children at school; but in heaven we shall be as children at home, where we shall always behold the face of our heavenly Father, for ever celebrating his praises, admiring his perfections, and enjoying his presence "So shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. iv. 17.

ADORAIM, Ad-o-ray'-im, strength of the sea, A city of Palestine, built and fortified by Rehoboam. 2 Chron. 11. 9.

ADORAM, A-do'-ram, their beauty, their power, &c.—Rehoboam's treasurer, 1 Kings 12. 18. Also David's principal treasurer, 2 Sam. 20. 24.

ADORATION, signifies the homage paid to a superior being. The word occurs not in our version; but it is synonymous with kissing the hand, a common Eastern custom, mentioned in the Scriptures. It is compounded of the Latin ad, to and or, oris, mouth, Job xxxi. 26, 27. Kissing the hand was a part of idolatrous worship, Job xxxi. 26, 27. It was also a mark of respect used to kings, &c. Judges xviii. 19.—Adoration, or worship, is due only to God. It consists not in mere form, but in the sincere homage of the heart.

ADRAM-MELECH, A-dram'-mek, the cloak or glory of the king.—A deity of the Sepharvaites, who seems to have been worshipped as the God of flocks and herds.—2 Kings xix. 37. Also the name of a son of Sennacherib, who, with his brother Sharezer, slew their father in the temple of Nisroch. Isa. xxxvii. 38.

ADRAMYTIUM, Ad-ra-mit'-teum, the court of death.—It is by some geographers affirmed to be the same with Thebes in Egypt. Others maintain, with more probability, that this city was in Mysia, opposite Lesbos. The latter was situated at the foot of Mount Ida, and was founded by a colony from Athens. It was a place of much commerce, Acts xxvii. 2; but it is now a poor fishing village and is called Cramati.

ADRIA, Ay'-dre-a.—A sea, now called the Gulf of Venice, on the coast of Italy. Paul, in going to Rome, suffered an extreme tempest in this sea. Acts xxvii. 27.

ADRIEL, Ay'-dre-el, the flock of God.—The son of Barzillai; he married Saul's daughter. 1 Sam. xviii. 19.

ADULLAM, A-dul'-lam, their testimony, their prey.—A beautiful city in the southern territories of the tribe of Judah, near the Dead Sea, Josh. xv. 35. Memorable from the cave in the neighbourhood, where David concealed himself from Saul, and Achish king of Gath. 1 Sam. xxii. 1; Gen. xxxviii. 1.

ADULTERESS, or Harlot. An apostate city or church. Isa. i. 21; Rev. xvii. 5.

ADULTERY. Conjugal infidelity, Mark x. 11. This crime is destructive of personal, domestic, and national happiness. It denotes the greatest depravity of heart, and the absence of all social affections. It is hateful to all the right feelings of humanity, and has been reckoned the blackest crime, next to murder, and deserves the severest punishment. The law of Athens authorised the husband to kill the man whom he detected in the act of dishonouring him. The Roman laws were very severe against it. From the earliest ages, God expressed his indignation against it; Gen. xx. 3, 7; xxxix. 9. Read the Seventh Commandment. See Matt. v. 28; Job. xxxi. 1, 9—11. By the law of Moses, the adulterer and the adulteress' were stoned to death, Lev. xx. 10; Deut. xxii. 22—24. The mysterious mode of detecting and punishing sin among the Jews is detailed in Num. v. 11—31. This test was ordained by God, and was miraculous. —Adultery also means idolatry, it being a breach of the covenant of fidelity towards God, which he condescends to represent as a marriage contract. Jer. iii. 8, 9; v. 7, and Rev. ii. 22.

ADULTERY, woman taken in; John viii. 3—9. The law was, that both the culprits should be brought before the council, where, if condemned, the whole audience, COUNCIL INCLUDED, were to stone them. By bringing this woman only to Jesus, the Jews were guilty, 1. Of great partiality, as they ought to have brought the adulterer also; 2. They desired Jesus to take on himself the office of the council, which would have been assuming political power, and would have endangered his life: this plot he retorts on themselves by saying; "Do you, on your own proposals, assume that conduct which you well know the council would pursue in such a case; consider this prisoner as ipso facto condemned by the circumstances in which she was apprehended; therefore, do you cast stones at her, as the council would cast stones at a person so condemned." This they declined, being aware of its tendency; and they shrank from that action to which they had urged Jesus. To this his words seem more particularly to allude, "Let him, who is without sin—not moral guilt, merely, but political offence—he who can be innocent in assuming that power of life and death, which is legally lodged elsewhere, let him act the judge, and stone her." And so speaking to the woman, "Has nobody officially condemned thee—executed the condemnation of the law on thee, by stoning thee? neither do I officially condemn thee;—I do not execute condemnation on thee by stoning thee: remember the narrow escape thou hast now experienced: go, and sin no more."

ADUMMIM, A-dum'-mim, earthly or bloody things. A mountain and city. Josh. xv. 7; xviii. 17. Jerome says it was called the place of blood on account of the frequent shedding of blood by robbers who infested that part. The road was very rugged, solitary and mountainous. Here Christ laid the scene of the parable of the good Samaritan; Luke x. 30—36. The road at the present day is infested with robbers.

ADVERSARY. One who sets himself in opposition to another. Satan is distinguished by this name; 1 Peter v. 8. "Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him;" Matt. v. 25. An adversary means a plaintiff, or a person to whom money is owing.

A Roman who had a law-suit with another person, first tried to arrange the matter amicably. If not successful, he called on his adversary to go with him before the prætor. If he refused, he called a person as a witness, saying, May I take you as a witness? If the person consented, he presented the tip of his ear, which the complainant touched. After this he could force the defendant to go before the magistrate with him, and even lay hands on him for the purpose; this explains Matt. xviii. 28, where one servant laid hands on the other, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest. If he agreed with the complainant on the way, the affair was at an end, which explains the sentence, whilst thou art in the way with him.

ADVOCATE. One who pleads the cause of another. The original word, paracletos occurs in 1 John ii. 1; John xiv. 16; xv. 26; xvi. 7. The title of Christ and the Holy Spirit. Christ is at the right hand of God as the Intercessor of his people. He pleads their cause; for he died for them; for the fulfilment of the promises made to the church; for the extension of his kingdom, and for the utter subversion of all his foes. "He must reign till he has put all enemies under his feet." Then he feels for his people, sympathizes, being "*touch-*ed with a feeling of their infirmities;" Heb. iv. 15. He is therefore a comforting Advocate. Not all the Hallelujahs of heaven can cause him for a moment to intermit his advocacy for his church. For it is not their deservings, but his love, not what they have done, nor can do, for themselves, but what he can do for them, that becomes the standard of his grace. What they are, and what they merit, is not taken into the account. They reckon themselves and all their deeds as nothing. But they are his, for he has redeemed them with his precious blood; and he must, and will lovingly,

ADVOCATE, denotes a comforter and an instructor, and is applied to the Holy Spirit; John 14. 16.; 15. 26.; 1 John 2. 1.

AFFLICT, or AFFLICTION.—

That which causes a sensation of pain. Calamity or distress of any kind. The afflictions of the saints are represented in the Scripture, as appointed, 1 Thess. iii. 3. Job v. 6, 7; numerous, Psalms xxxiv. 19; transient, 2 Cor. iv. 17. Heb. x. 37; and, when sanctified, beneficial, 1 Peter i. 6; Psalms cxix. 67, 71. They wean from the world; work submission; produce humility; excite to diligence; stir up to prayer; and conform us to the divine image. To bear them with patience, we should consider our own unworthiness; the design of God in sending them; the promises of support under them; and the real good they are productive of. The afflictions of a good man, says an elegant writer, never befall without a cause, nor are sent but on a proper errand. These storms are never allowed to rise but in order to dispel some noxious vapours, and restore salubrity to the moral atmosphere. Who that for the first time beheld the earth in the midst of winter, bound up with frost, or drenched in floods of rain, or covered with snow, would have imagined that Nature, in this dreary and torpid state, was working towards its own renovation in the spring? Yet we by experience know that those vicissitudes of winter are necessary for fertilizing the earth; and that under wintry rains and snows lie concealed the seeds of those roses that are to blossom in the spring; of those fruits that are to ripen in the summer; and of the corn and wine which are in harvest to make glad the heart of man. It would be more agreeable to us to be always entertained with a fair and clear atmosphere, with cloudless skies, and perpetual sunshine; yet in such climates as we have most knowledge of, the earth, were it always to remain in such a state, would refuse to yield its fruits; and, in the midst of our imagined scenes of beauty, the starved inhabitants would perish for want of food. Let us, therefore, quietly submit to Providence. Let us conceive this life to be the winter of our existence. Now the rains must fall, and the winds must roar around us; but, sheltering ourselves under him who is the "covert from the tempest," let us wait with patience till the storms of life shall terminate in an everlasting calm

AGABUS, Ag'-a-bus, a locust.—
 One of the prophets of the Christian church, and supposed to be one of the 70 disciples of Christ. He foretold the famine which occurred under the emperor Claudias, A. D. 44, Acts xi.

 28. A few years after, he met Paul at Cesarea, and foretold the sufferings he would have to endure at Jerusalem ; Acts xxi. 10. Tradition reports that he suffered martyrdom at Antioch.

AGAG, Ay'-gag, roof, floor.—A common name of the princes of Amalek. Num. xxiv. 7. The one here mentioned was very powerful in the time of Moses. Another person of the same name was captured by king Saul when the Amalekites were destroyed ; 1 Sam. xv. 8. His life was spared, but he was afterwards brought to Samuel, who hewed him to pieces, 1 Sam. xv. 33, a punishment which prevailed among Eastern nations, at that time. He did it not by his own sword, but by that of an executioner. What things, magistrates and generals do, in an official way, to their subjects, servants, or soldiers, they are said to do themselves ; qui facit alterum, per facit per se. By his cruelties, Agag deserved death, and Samuel like a magistrate or judge, condemned him to execution. Lord Bolingbroke, and Thomas Paine call him a priest, in order to degrade the ministers of religion generally. Yet he was not a priest, but a judge, or chief magistrate.

AGAR, Ay'-gar, a stranger, that fears.—Mount Sinai. Gal. iv. 24, 25.
 See Hagar.

AGATE. A precious stone, beautifully variegated, and nearly transparent. It probably derives its name from Achates, a river of Sicily, where the gem was formerly found in great abundance. It was anciently known, because it was the second stone in the third row of precious stones in the high-priest's breast-plate, Ex. xxviii.
 19 ; Ezek. xxvii. 16. The Hebrew word shebo, indicates Sheba as the place where it was found, and from which the Jews imported it.

AGE, the whole continuance of a man's life, Gen. xlvii. 28, times past, present, or to come, Eph. ii. 7 ; iii. 5.
 "And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?" It is well sometimes seriously to reflect on our age and condition in life. Our days are but few, and they are rapidly hastening away. But should we be spared to extreme old age, to what purpose shall we live, if we live not to the glory of him who is our kind Benefactor and best Friend? Our real life should be reckoned from the time of our devotedness to him, rather than from the time of our natural birth; for it may be truly said, if we live not to him, we are dead while we live.

AGONY. The word refers to the contests in the Olympic Games; also painful conflict, bodily pain, anguish of soul. In the Gospels, the word is used to describe the dreadful struggle which the Redeemer experienced in Gethsemane; See Matt. xxvi. 36—46; Mark xiv. 32; Luke xxii. 44. "He began to be sorrowful," says Matthew; "he began to be sore amazed," says Mark; "he began to be very heavy," say both these evangelists. These expressive terms are explained by one who well knew their force, as representing him as "on a sudden possessed with horror and amazement; encompassed with grief, and overwhelmed with sorrow; pressed down with consternation and dejection of mind; tormented with anxiety and disquietude of spirit." Matt. xxxvi. 37; Mark xiv. 33.

If the language of the evangelist be expressive, still more fearfully significant are the words of our Lord himself: "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death." What dreadful emphasis is here! I am sorrowful—my soul is sorrowful—my soul is exceedingly sorrowful—my soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death. And let it not be forgotten, that he who thus heaps superlative upon superlative in expressing his own anguish, was as all his history proves, distinguished not less by magnanimity than by mildness,—not more by activity in duty, than by patience in suffering. Again and again, "with strong crying and tears, he made supplication to him who was able to save him," for deliverance, if it was possible, from the sorrows of that hour. And as if his cries and tears were not sufficient evidence of his inward sufferings, all the pores of his body pour forth a still more lively representation of the bitter anguish of his soul. "Being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly, and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." The heart of our Saviour was as, it were, "melted like wax in the midst of his bowels," and all the parts of his body inflamed with anguish and agony. But who can tell what he suffered from his infernal and human foes; what he suffered from his friends; and, severest of all his agonies? what he suffered from his Father. O that loud and exceeding bitter cry, "My God, my God! why hast thou forsaken me?"

AGRIPPA, A-grip'-pa, causing pain at his birth.—Surnamed Herod, was the son of Aristobulus and Mariamne, and grandson to Herod the Great, born A. M. 3997, received part of the kingdom of Judea from Caius Caligula, A. D. 37; and four years after, from Claudius, the remaining part. After having reigned seven years, he was for his impious pride punished by God with a dreadful disease, which put a period to his life in the space of five days. See Acts xii. 23. On the death of this prince, Judea again returned to the Romans, and was placed under the administration of governors, till its ruin, A. D. 70.—2. Agrippa, II. son of the preceding Agrippa, obtained from Claudius some authority over the temple and sacred treasury, and power of appointing or deposing the high priest; which he enjoyed till the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple. Before this prince, and his sister Bernice, it was that Paul reasoned so powerfully and eloquently, as to make Agrippa himself confess, that he was almost persuaded to become a Christian. Acts xxvi. 1, &c.

AGUR, Ay'-gur, a stranger, gathering. Prov. xxx. begins, "The words of Agur, the son of Jakeh." Some suppose that Solomon describes himself by this appellation. Agur, it appears, had seen much of the world, and had learned wisdom by what he had seen. He had seen the evils connected with wealth, and also with poverty, and therefore he uttered his very important prayer; Prov. xxx. 8, 9.

AHA, Ay'-hah a term of contempt and triumph. Ps. lxx. 3; Ezek. xxv. 3.

AHAB, Ay'-hab, the brother of the father.—A king of Israel, the son and successor of Omri. A wicked king, who, in crime, exceeded all his predecessors. 1 Kings xvi. 29. He married Jezebel, daughter of Ethbaal, king of Zidon, who introduced the idolatries of her country. He became a worshipper of Baal and Ashtaroth. He died of wounds which he received in battle with the Syrians, according to the prophecy of Micaiah; 1 Kings xvi. 29; xxii. 40. Also the name of Kolaiah. See Jer. xxix. 21, 22.

AHARHEL, A-har'-el, another host. 1 Chron. iv. 8.

AHASBAI, A-has'-ba-i, trusting in me, brother of age. 2 Sam. xxiii. 34.

AHASUERUS, A-has-u-e'-rus, prince, chief.—The king of Persia, who advanced Esther to be queen, and at her request delivered the Jews from the destruction plotted by Haman, Esther i. 1. Also the name given in Scripture to Cambyses, the son of Cyrus, Ezra iv. 6; though Kitto, Scaliger, Jahn, and others, think that he was Xerxes, the son of Cambyses, and successor to Darius. Also the name given to Astyages, king of the Medes. Dan. ix. 1.

AHAVAH, A-hay'-vah, essence, generation. A river of Assyria, where Ezra assembled the captives who returned to Judah. Ezra viii. 15.

AHAZ, Ay'-haz, one who takes or seizes.—The son of king Jotham, and twelfth king of Judah, and the most wicked. He made his children pass through the fire, shut up the temple, and destroyed its sacred vessels. His people abominated his conduct, and gave him a dishonourable burial. 2 Kings xvi.; 2 Chron. xxviii. Also the father of Jehoahaz; 1 Chron. viii. 36.

AHAZ, Sun-dial of.—"And Isaiah cried unto the Lord; and he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz;" 2 Kings xx. 11. These ten degrees did not mean ten hours; they were ten divisions of time on this dial; nor did the sun go ten degrees back in the heavens; nor the earth turn back upon its axis from east to west, contrary to its natural course.

This miracle may have consisted in a supernatural refraction of light. By horizontal reiraction, the sun appears above the horizon when he is actually below it. By imparting supernaturally increased powers of refraction of light to the atmosphere, the rays go back to an equal extent to the new power given. This miracle was known at Babylon; probably the going back of the shadow was visible there, and in all the world; 2 Chron. xxxii. 31. The historians of Egypt speak of the sun as having appeared four times in an unusual manner, twice when he set, and twice when he rose, which perhaps may allude to the miracles of Joshua and Isaiah; ch. xxxviii. 8.

AHAZIAH, A-ha-zy'-ah, possession, vision of the Lord.—Son of Ahab, king of Israel, and imitated him in his idolatrous practices; 1 Kings xxii.

51. &c. In the second year of his reign, the Moabites revolted against him, and refused the tribute, which they had paid to Ahab. Having received a dangerous hurt by a fall from the terrace of his house, he sent messengers to consult Beelzebub, the god of Ekron, about his recovery. These were met by the prophet Elijah, reproved for their reverence for idols, and sent back to Ahaziah with the assurance, that he should die of his illness. The words of the prophet were verified by the death of Ahaziah, after a reign of two years. He died, before Christ 896; and, as he left no children, he was succeeded by his brother Jehoram, or Joram. See 2 Kings i.—Also the king of Judah, son of Jehoram. At the age of 22 he succeeded his father. He was related to the house of Ahab, and he was characterized by the same vices. He was slain by a party of Jehu's army. See 2 Kings ch. viii. 24—29; and 2 Chron. ch. ix. 27—29; xxii. 1, &c.

AHAZIAH. Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, 2 Chron. xxii. 2.—In 2 Kings viii. 26, it is said he was twenty-two years old. Lightfoot suggests that the author of Chronicles computed from the accession of the house of Omri; his mother's name being Amaliah, the daughter of Omri. The original properly signifies, "Ahaziah was the son of the two and forty years," viz. of the house of Omri. The same mode of reckoning is adopted 2 Kings xxiv. 8, compared with 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9.

He could not have been forty-two years old without being two years older than his father. The Syriac and Arabic versions read twenty-two. And it is probable, says Dr. A. Clarke that the Hebrew text read so originally, for when numbers were expressed by single letters it was easy to mistake nem or m, FORTY, for caph, or c, TWENTY, the Hebrew letters are so much alike, and still more similar in the ancient Hebrew, or Samaritan.

AHBAN, Ah'-ban. The son of Abishur. 1 Chron. ii. 29.

AHER, Ay'-her. 1 Chron. vii. 12.

AHI, Ay'-by, my brother.—A descendant of Gad, 1 Chron. v. 15. Also of Asher. 1 Chron. vii. 34.

AHIAH, Ay'-hy'-ah, brother of the Lord.—Secretary to king Solomon, 1 Kings iv. 3. Also the son of Ahitub, the high-priest. 1 Sam. xiv. 3.

AHIAN, A-hy'-an, brother of wine. 1 Chron. vii. 19.

AHIEZER, A-hy-e'-zer, brother of help.—Num. i. 12.

AHIHUD, A-hy'-hud, brother of vanity.—1 Chron. viii. 7.

AHIJAH, A-hy'-jah, brother of the Lord.—The prophet of the Lord, who dwelt at Shiloh, and foretold the death of Abijah, son of Jeroboam, when his wife came to inquire whether the child should survive; 1 Kings xiv. 2, &c.—2. Ahijah, son of Baasha, king of Israel, 1 Kings xv. 27.—3. The son of Pelon, one of David's officers. The keeper of the temple treasury; 1 Chron. xxvi. 20.—4. Son of Esrom, of the tribe of Judah; 1 Chron. ii. 25.

AHIKAM, A-hy'-kam, a brother that raises up.—The son of Shappan, and father of Gedaliah; 2 Kings xxii. 12.

AHILUD, A-hy'-lud, a brother born.—The father of Jehoshaphat, David's Secretary; 2 Sam. viii. 16.

AHIMAAZ, A-him'-a-az, brother of the council.—Son and successor of Zadok the high-priest. He resembled his father in his fidelity to David, and hazarded his life in his service, during the conspiracy of Absalom; 2 Sam. xv. 27, 36; xvii. 15—21. Ahimaaaz was very swift-footed, and in consequence selected to be the messenger of Absalom's defeat and death to his father David; 2 Sam. xviii. 19—33.

AHIMAN, A-hy'-man, a brother prepared.—A giant of the race of Anak, who dwelt at Hebron, Num. xiii. 22.

AHIMELECH, A-him'-me-lek, brother of the king.—He was the son of Ahitub, and brother of Ahia, whom he succeeded in the high-priesthood.

He is called Abiathar, Mark ii. 26 ; 1 Sam. xxii. 9. ; of the character of Ahimelech, and his associates in the priest's office, we know little.

AHIMOTH, A-hy'-moth, brother of death.—A son of Elkanah, a descendant of Levi ; 1 Chron. vi. 25.

AHINADAB, A-hin'-a-dab, a willing brother, a brother of a vow.—The son of Iddo ; 1 Kings iv. 14.

AHINOAM, A-hin'-o-am, the beauty and comeliness of the brother.—The wife of King Saul ; 1 Sam. xiv. 50. Wife of David ; 1 Sam. xxx. 5, and 17—20.

AHIO, A-hy'-o, his brother, his brethren.—Son of Abinadab, and Be-riah ; 2 Sam. vi. 3. ; 1 Chron. viii. 14.

AHIRAH, A-hy'-rah, brother of iniquity.—The son of Enan, chief ruler of the tribe of Naphtali ; Num. i. 15 ; vii. 78.

AHIRAM, A-hy'-ram, brother of craft or protection.—A son of Benjamin ; Num. xxvi. 38.

AHISAMACH, A-his'-a-mack, a brother of strength.—The father of Aholiab, the famous artificer, employed by Moses in building the tabernacle ; Exod. xxxi. 6.

AHISHAHAR, A-hish'-a-har, brother of the morning.—Son of Bilhan, descendant of Benjamin ; 1 Chron. vii. 10.

AHISHAR, A-hy'-shar, brother of the prince.—High steward of Solomon's household ; 1 Kings iv. 6.

AHITHOPHEL, A-hit'-o-phel, brother of foolishness, ruin.—A native of Gillo, he was David's counsellor, but joined in the rebellion of Absalom, and assisted him with his advice. His artful schemes were defeated by the counsel of Hushai. Because his counsel was refused, or because he foresaw the defeat of Absalom, and his own death as a traitor, he hanged himself ; 2 Sam. xvi. & xvii. A. M. 2981 ; B. C. 1023.

AHITUB, A-hy'-tub, brother of goodness.—The son of Phineas, and grandson of the high-priest Eli. His father was slain in an engagement with the Philistines, and he succeeded Eli ; 1 Sam. iv. 11. xxii. 11. A. M.

2888. Also the son of Amariah, and father of Zadok, 2 Sam. viii. 17 ; 1 Chron. vi. 8.

AHLAB, Ah'-lab, which is of milk.—A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Asher ; Judges i. 31.

AHLAI, Ah'-lay, beseeching, sorrowing.—1 Chron. ii. 31 ; xi. 41.

AHOAH, A-ho'-ah, a thistle, a thorn, a fish-hook, brotherhood.—Third son of Bela, and grandson of Benjamin ; 1 Chron. viii. 4.

AHOLAH, A-ho'-lah, his tabernacle, his tent.—This word and Aholibah are two fictitious names adopted by the prophet Ezekiel, to represent the idolators of the kingdoms of Judah and Samaria. Their sin and punishment are represented in Ezekiel 23.

AHOLIAB, A-ho'-li-ab, the tent of the father.—An individual of the tribe of Dan, who assisted in building the tabernacle, Exod. xxxv. 34.

AHOLIBAH, A-ho'-le-bah, my tent or my tabernacle is in her. See Aholah.

AHOLIBAMAH, A-ho-lib'-a-mah, my tabernacle is exalted.—The wife of Esau, Gen. xxxvi. 2.—Also a descendant of Esau, name of a duke, 1 Chron. i. 52.

AHUMAI, A-hew'-ma-i, a meadow of waters, a brother of waters.—A descendant of Judah, a Zorathite, 1 Chron. iv. 2.

AHUZAM, A-hew'-zam, their taking possession.—The son of Naarah, a descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 6.

AHUZZATH, A-huz'-zath, possession, apprehension.—The friend of Abimelech, king of Gerar ; Gen. xxvi. 26.

AI, Ay'-i, mass heap.—A city of Palestine, situate west of Bethel, and at a small distance north-west of Jericho. It is called by the LXX, Gai, and by Josephus, Ajath, Gen. xii. 8 ; Josh. vii. 2, &c.—It was the name of one of the chief cities of Moab, Jer. xlix. 3.

AIAH, A-i'-ah, a raven ; alas, where is it ?—The mother of Rizpah, Saul's concubine ; 2 Sam. xxi. 8.

AIATH, A-i'-ath, an hour.—A city of Palestine ; Isa. x. 28.

AIJELETH SHAHAR, A-i'-ja-leth Sha'-har, rendered variously. Eastern songs bear such titles as this, which some translate, 'Hind of the Morning,' alluding to the persecuted Messiah; Ps. xxii.; title.

AIJALON, or AJALON, Ad'-ja-lon, a chain, strength, a stag.—A city of the Canaanites: the valley adjoining to which is memorable in sacred history from the miracle of Joshua in arresting the course of the sun and moon; Josh. x. 12, 13. Aijalon was afterwards a Levitical city; Judges i. 35. There were several other cities of this name.

AIN, Ay'-in, a fountain.—A city of Judah; one of those granted to Simeon, deriving its name, perhaps, from being well supplied with springs; Josh. xv. 32; 1 Chron. iv. 32. Ain is found in combination with other words, as En-gedi, the fountain of kids; En-she-mesh, fountain of the sun, &c.

AIR. One of the elements of nature. (1.) To beat the air, is to labour in vain, 1 Cor. ix. 26.—(2.) To speak to the air, is to speak unprofitably, 1 Cor. xiv. 9.—(3.) The word is used to point out the nature of Satan's power, as "prince of the power of the air," Eph. ii. 2—1 Thess. iv. 17. caught up in the air.—Rev. ix. 2, air darkened.—xvi. 17, vial into the air.

The air or atmosphere surrounds the earth to the height of about 50 miles from its surface. Air has a considerable weight. About 2,160 pounds weight of it presses on every square foot; and allowing the surface of a human body to be 15 square feet, the pressure of air on it must amount to 32,400 pounds weight. But this pressure is not felt, because our bodies contain such a portion as serves to buoy them up. Its principal components are oxygen and nitrogen gases, with a small variable proportion of carbonic acid and water. Air is necessary to the existence of man, animals, and plants. The winds keep it pure. Creatures living in water also need air. Some of these often come to the surface to breathe, and those which have gills make air for themselves out of water. If there were no air, we could neither see, hear, nor speak; there could be neither clouds nor rain. If the air were to be destroyed, the whole world would cease to exist. The air is the medium through which the Deity communicates to man the most valuable favours, light, heat, rain, and snow; and through it we look with wonder and delight on the splendid luminaries which dispel the gloom of night, &c.

AKKUB, Ak'-kub, supplanter.—The son of Elieonai, 1 Chron. iii. 24.—A porter of the temple, 1 Chron. ix. 17.—A teacher of the law, Neh. viii. 7.

AKRABBIM, Ak-rab'-bim, scorpions; Num. xxxiv. 4.

ALABASTER. A white stone used for ornamental purposes, and said to have derived its name from Alabastron, a town of Egypt. It is now applied to a white species of marble, or sulphate of lime, called gypsum. It was used in the making of small vessels or urns, which were large at the bottom, and narrow at the top, so as to be easily stopped, and thus made them fit for containing ointments and perfumes. Sometimes they were made of Onyx Alabaster, or carbonate of lime, on account of its colour resembling that of the fingernails. These boxes or vessels were also made of glass, silver, or gold. It was customary at feasts among the great, to anoint the hair of the guests with costly perfume. To this custom Horace often alludes. A brother of Æschines the orator was a painter of alabaster boxes; Ps. xxiii. 5; xlv. 7: Matt. xxvi. 7: Mark xiv. 3: Luke vii. 37.

ALABASTER BOX, "breaking of:" knocking off the seal, not breaking the vessel; Mark xiv. 3.

ALAMETH and ALEMETH, Al'-a-meth and Al'-e-meth, hiding, youth.—A city pertaining to the tribe of Benjamin, and given to the priests; 1 Chron. vi. 60. A son of Becher; 1 Chron. vii. 8. A son of Jehoadah, of the tribe of Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 36.

ALAMMELECH, A-lam'-me-lek, God is King.—A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Asher; Josh. xix. 26.

ALAMOTH, 'virgins;' the word may signify, concerning the virgins; possibly, meaning a choir of singing girls. Ps. 45; title.

ALEXANDER, Al-ex-an'-der, the helper of men.—Alexander the Great was the son of Philip, king of Macedonia, and his successor. By Daniel he is symbolised by a leopard with four wings, and by a one-horned he-goat, running over the earth so swiftly as not to touch it; Dan vii. 6; viii. 4—7. In the image which Nebuchadnezzar saw in his dream, Dan. ii. 39, the belly of brass symbolized Alexander and the Greeks. He was divinely appointed to destroy the Persian empire, and to set up in its place the Grecian monarchy. He began to reign B. C. 336. The son of Simon, the Cyrenean, who assisted Christ in bearing his cross; Mark xv. 21.—Alexander Lysimachus, brother of the famed Philo, and reckoned the richest Jew of his time. He was in the council which imprisoned the apostles for healing the impotent man; Acts iv. 6.—Also a Jew of Ephesus, who addressed the rabble; Acts xix. 33,—And an artificer in copper, a public teacher in the Christian church, who had corrupted the faith, not from ignorance, but deliberately in opposition to his judgment, influenced by his love of the word; 1 Tim. i. 20.

ALEXANDRIA, Al-ex-an'-dre-a.--A famous city of Egypt, built by Alexander the Great, named after its found-der, who peopled it with colonies of Greeks and Jews; it is situated between the Mediterranean Sea and the Lake Mæris; Acts xviii. 24; xxvii. 6. After the destruction of Carthage, it was, for ages, the chief city in the world, next to Rome. Its commerce extended to every part of the then known world. The Ptolemies made it their royal residence, and each successive monarch laboured to embellish it. When the Romans, in their vast conquests, annexed Egypt to their empire, they respected and preserved the beauties of this city, and it continued to flourish. Its ancient glory is proved by the spacious ruins, and fragments of obelisks, and colonnades, and temples. Traces are seen of streets in straight lines, and other ruins indicate the most magnificent palaces. One of the obelisks, called Cleopatra's needle, yet stands. The Pharos, erected on an islet at the entrance of the harbour, was reckoned one of the wonders of the world. It cost 800 talents. "On the outside of the southern gate, a detached column eighty-eight feet high, forms the most commanding object connected with the city and its environs. It has been erroneously called "Pompey's Pillar," and "the Pillar of Severus." It is the great column which served as the principal ornament of the famous Serapeum, a vast building consecrated to the worship of an Egyptian divinity, and which, after the destruction of the Museum of the Ptolemies, became the receptacle of the Alexandrine library, and the resort of men of letters. Here, as in a place of safety, Caracalla feasted his eyes with the massacre of the people of Alexandria. Under the Saracens it soon began to decay. They madly burnt its famous library of 700,000 volumes, A. D. 642. Numerous Jews resided here, engaged in trade and commerce; 50,000 of whom were murdered under the Emperor Nero. When the Arabs took it as above, they found 40,000 Jews who paid tribute. It was in a ship belonging to Alexandria that Paul sailed for Rome; Acts xxvii. 6. Christianity was early planted in this place. Mark the Evangelist is said to have first preached here. Here Apollos was born, Acts xviii. 24. It has now dwindled to a village, with nothing remarkable but the ruins of its ancient grandeur.

ALIAH and ALIAN, A-ly'-ah, A-ly'-an, high.—Descendants of Esau; 1 Chron. i. 40. 51.

ALIEN, stranger, or a person born in another country, and not admitted to the privileges of the citizens of the country in which he resides. Ex. 18. 3.; Job 19. 15.; Ps. 69. 8.; heathens, Deut. 14. 21.; Is. 61. 5.; Lam. 5. 2.; Heb. 11. 34.

All men; that is, all kinds of men, Matt. x. 22.

All the world. This meant the Roman empire; a frequent expression in classical writers; Luke ii. 1.

ALLEGING, affirming, proving, Acts 17. 3.

ALLEGORY. A symbolical discourse, nearly resembling a parable or fable, generally used in the East to teach or illustrate some principle or doctrine. Thus by this figure, Hagar and Sarah are said to represent the two covenants, "which things," or events in the history of Isaac and Ishmael "are an allegory," or have been allegorised. The Greek word is a verb, and not a noun; Gal. iv. 24—31. An allegory is a continued metaphor. Thus the prophets represented the Jews under the allegory of a vine, planted, nurtured, and watered by the hand of God, but which instead of producing good fruits, brought forth sour grapes; Isa. v. 4. The parable of the sower, may be regarded as an allegory. There we have statements respecting the sower, the seed, and the results of sowing the seed—that is the parable. Next we have the explanation and application by the Great Teacher. "The seed is the word of God," &c., Luke viii. 5—15; the latter makes it an allegory.

ALLELUIA, or HÄLLELUJAH, Al-le-lu'-yah, praise ye the Lord.—An expression always used in public praise, especially at the great festivals and on solemn days. A similar term begins and ends the Greek hymns to Apollo, and from which probably is derived "Alla, Alla," the Mahometan call upon God. The word is found in the beginning of many of the Psalms, particularly Ps. xlv., and all those which follow. Some Psalms were called "Hallel." It is a word used by the heavenly worshippers, Rev. xix. 1—6

ALLON, Al'lon, an oak, strong.—The name of a man; 1 Chron. iv. 37: The name of a city; Josh. xix. 33.

ALLON-BACHUTH, Al'-lon-bak'-kuth, the oak of weeping.—The place where Deborah was buried; Gen. xxxv. 8.

ALMIGHTY. The attribute of Jehovah, which belongs to him alone, as the Creator and Upholder of all things. By this attribute used as an appellation, he is known and addressed. The original word is very expressive, denoting his all-sufficiency, and was understood by the sacred writers as implying not only Almighty power, but all possible excellence, boundless knowledge, infinite wisdom, goodness, justice, and truth.—See All-sufficiency.

ALMODAD, Al-mo'-dad, the measure of God.—The son of Joktan, a descendant of Shem; Gen. x. 26.

ALMON, Al'-mon, hidden.—A city; Josh. xxi. 18.

ALMON-DIBLATHAIM, Al'-mon-dib-la-thay'-im, a hiding in a heap of figs.—The fortieth encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness; Num. xxxiii. 46.

ALMOND. A tree resembling the peach in its leaves and blossoms, but the fruit is larger and more compressed, the external green coat of which is thinner and drier when ripe, and the shell not so rough. In Judea it blossoms in January, and bears fruit early in April. It blossoms earlier than any other tree; hence its Hebrew name, SHAKAD, to make haste, to be in a hurry, or to wake early. See Jer. i. 11, 12. The white hair of old age is represented by the blossoming of the Almond-tree, on account of its snowy whiteness, and its appearance in winter; Eccles. xii. 5.

ALMUG-TREE. Some suppose it to be coral, which grows in the shape of a tree. More probably the ebony. It is thought to be the tree which Solomon ordered from Tyre, of which he made pillars for the temple, and for his own palace. Musical instruments were made of this wood. It is supposed to have been a kind of sandal-wood, valued for its fineness, fragrance, durability, and susceptibility of a beautiful polish; 1 Kings x. 11.

ALOES. Tournefort reckons fourteen kinds of the aloe-tree. The American aloe is famous for its fine flowers, which are of the lily kind; the Asian for the useful drug prepared from it. The drug called aloe, famed for its purgative qualities, is formed of the juice of the leaves, hardened in the sun. That which is most nicely prepared is called the socotrine, the next is called hepatic, and the coarsest is the horse aloe. Aloes were anciently used for the embalming of dead bodies, and as a perfume; John xix. 39; Prov. vii. 17. The Lign Aloe differs from the above, Num. xxiv. 6; Ps. xlv. 8. It is very fragrant and valuable, on account of its adaptation for the finest cabinet and ornamental work. A rich perfume is extracted from it by the people of India.

ALL-SUFFICIENCY of God, is that power or attribute of his nature by which he is able to communicate as much blessedness to his creatures as he is pleased to make them capable of receiving. As his self-sufficiency is that whereby he has enough in himself to constitute him completely blessed, as a God of infinite perfection; so his all-sufficiency is that by which he hath enough in himself to satisfy the most enlarged desires of his creatures, and to make them completely blessed. We practically deny this perfection, 1. When we are discontented with our present condition, and desire more than God has allotted for us; Gen. iii. 5; Prov. xix. 3.—2. When we seek blessings of what kind soever in an indirect way, as though God were not able to bestow them upon us in his own way, or in the use of lawful means, Gen. xxvii. 35.—3. When we use unlawful means to escape imminent dangers, 1 Sam. xxi. 13; Gen. xx. and xxvi.—4. When we distrust his providence, though we have had large experience of his appearing for us in many instances, 1 Sam. xxvii. 1; Psalm lxxviii. 19; 2 Chron. xvi. 2; 1 Chron. xiv. 9, 13; Josh. vii. 7, 9.—5. When we doubt of the truth or certain accomplishment of the promises, Gen. xviii. 12; Psalm lxxviii. 7—12; Isa. xlix. 14.—6. When we decline great services, though called to them by God, under a pretence of our unfitness for them, Jer. i. 6, 8.

The consideration of this doctrine should lead us—1. To seek happiness in God alone, and not in human things, Jer. ii. 13.—2. To commit all our wants and trials to him, 1 Sam. xxx. 6; Heb. xi. 19; 2 Cor. xii. 8, 9.—3. To be courageous in the midst of danger and opposition, Psalm xxvii. 1.—4. to be satisfied with his dispensations, Rom. viii. 28.—5. To persevere in the path of duty, however difficult, Gen. xvii. 1.

ALOTH, Ay'-loth.—A place in Palestine; 1 Kings iv. 16.

ALPHA, Al'-fah, the first letter in the Greek alphabet, Omega is the last.—Alpha corresponds to the Hebrew Aleph. Both are applied to Christ, Rev. i. 8; xxi. 6; to signify his eternal existence, and that he is the Author and Finisher of our faith, and the Perfecter of it in heavenly glory; Rev. xxii. 13, compare with Isa. xli. 4; xliii. 10; xlv. 6; xlvi. 12.

ALPHEUS, Al-fe'-us, thousand, chief.—The father of James and Jude; Matt. x. 3; Luke vi. 15; xxiv. 18, supposed to be Cleophas.—The husband of Mary, supposed to have been the sister of the holy virgin, hence James is called the brother of our Lord.—The father of Levi, or Matthew, Mark ii. 14.

ALTAR. A kind of table, or elevated place, or platform, on which the ancient sacrifices were offered. The offering of sacrifices prevailed before the flood; instance, Cain and Abel; Gen. iv. 3, 4. The first altar of which we read, is that which was erected by Noah; Gen. viii. 20. The patriarchs offered sacrifices on altars. They were built of earth or unhewn stone, as that built by Jacob at Bethel; Gen. xxviii. 18; and another by Moses; Ex. xx. 24. This altar was to be made of earth. If made of stone, it was to be rough, and not ornamented, without the use of an iron tool! There was to be nothing elaborate or in figure, lest the people should become idolaters. The short time required for erecting such altars elucidates 1 Kings xviii. 21—40, the contest between Elijah and the prophets of Baal. The altars of the tabernacle and temple were two.

1. The Altar of burnt offerings.—It was a kind of square chest, made of shittim wood, about seven feet six inches square, and four feet six inches high. It was hollow, and overlaid with plates of brass. On the top was a brazen grate through which the ashes of the offering fell into a pan below. In the middle there was a projection on which the priest stood while officiating. The altar had four rings, or staples, into which poles, covered with brass, were placed, when it was moved from place to place by the Levites; Ex. xxvii. 1—8. The furniture of the altar was made of brass. The fire used on this altar was perpetually maintained. It was kindled miraculously, and it was fed with the utmost care. In Solomon's temple, the altar was much larger, being thirty feet square, and fifteen feet high, and made of brass. In the second temple, it occupied the same position; but it was much larger, and more beautiful.

2. The Altar of Incense, sometimes called the golden altar. It stood within the holy place, and near to the inmost veil; Ex. xxx. 1—6. It was made of shittim wood, overlaid with gold, and was three feet high, and eighteen inches square. It had horns made of gold, and round the flat surface was a border of gold, underneath which were rings, to receive the staves, made of shittim wood, and also overlaid with pure gold. In Solomon's temple, the Altar of Incense was made of cedar; 1 Kings vi. 20. The Altar in the second temple was removed by Antiochus Epiphanes, and restored by Judas Maccabæus; but in the arch of Titus it does not appear among the representations of the spoils of the temple. Upon this Altar incense was burnt every morning and every evening, so that it was literally perpetual; Ex. xx; xxvii. Neither burnt-offering, nor meat-offering, nor drink-offering, was permitted upon this Altar. It was stained with blood only once a year, when the priest made atonement; Lev. xvi. 18, 19.

AM. I am that I am. One of the distinguishing names and characters of Jehovah; Ex. iii. 14. It declares a right and power of existence, exclusive of every other being. The Septuagint gives the phrase, I am he who exists, that is self-existent. The Arabic paraphrases them, The Eternal, who passes not away. The Jerusalem Targum, "He who spake and the world was; who spake, and all things existed." As the words signify, I will be what I will be, some have supposed that God simply informed Moses, that what he had been to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, he would be to him and the Israelites, and perform the promises made to them respecting the promised land. The words certainly denote the eternity and self-existence of God. Plato in his Parmenides, treating sublimely of the nature of God, says, "nothing can express his nature; therefore no (earthly) name can be attributed to him." But He that is I am, is, and must be, always, and eternally the same. His existence is a self-existence, undivided, independent, subject to no change and impossible to be any other; the same yesterday, and to-day and for ever; Heb. xiii. 8. I am gives vitality and veracity to that he has spoken, and is an absolute, infallible pledge for the fulfilment of all his promises.

AMAL, Ay'-mal, labour, iniquity.—1 Chron. vii. 35.

AMALEK, Am'-a-lek, a people that licks up or uses ill. The grandson of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 12. The Arabians have a tradition respecting an Amalek, who they say was the son of Ham, and grandson of Noah. Moses speaks of the Amalekites long before the son of Eliphaz was born, viz., in the days of Abraham, when Chedorlaomer king of Elam, devastated their country; Gen. xiv. 7.

AMALEKITES, A-mal'-e-kites.—The Amalekites, according to the Arabian historians, descended from a grandson of Noah, named Amalek; hence the parable of Balaam; Num. xxiv. 20. Some tribes inhabited the country that lies near the Red Sea, and between Havilah and Shur; 1 Sam. xv. 1—7. One of those sadly annoyed the Israelites after they had emerged from the Red Sea; in the deserts of Rephidim they attacked them in the most barbarous manner, killing all the Israelites who through weakness, were not able to keep up with the main body. But these attacks were repelled; for Joshua headed the warriors of Israel, gave them battle, and defeated them; Ex. xvii. 8—14. They were afterwards conquered by Gideon; Judges iii. 13; and then by Saul; 1 Sam. xv; and by David; 1 Sam. xxx. 1, 2.

AMAM, Ay'-mam, mother, fear of them, people.—A city belonging to the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 26.

AMANA, Am'-a-nah, integrity and truth.—A mountain beyond the Jordan; Song. iv. 8. This passage may allude to this mountain, although some refer it to Amanus, a chain which separates Syria from Cilicia, to which Solomon's dominions extended.

AMARIAH, Am'-a-ry'-ah, the Lord says, excellency of the Lord.—1 Chron. vi. 7, 11. The father of the high priest Ahitub.—One who returned from Babylon; Ezra. x. 42.—The grandfather of the prophet Zephaniah; Zeph. i. 1.

AMASA, A-may'-sah, a forgiving people.—The son of Ithra and Abigail, David's sister, whom Absalom, at his rebellion, appointed general of his army. He probably was esteemed by the soldiers, for notwithstanding his treachery, David, to free him from the thralldom of Joab, appointed him to command the army designed to put down the last insurrection raised by the adherents of Saul. He was so inactive that Abishai was ordered to occupy his place; and he had so little vigilance, that Joab, under the impulse of envy or revenge, found it easy to assassinate him; 2 Sam. xvii. 25; xix. 13; xx. 4—12.—The son of Hadlai; 2 Chron. xxviii. 12.

AMASAI, A-mas'-a-i, strong.—The son of Elkanah; 1 Chron. vi. 25; xii. 16—18.

AMASHAI, A-mash'-a-i, the gift of the people.—One who returned from Babylon; Neh. x. 13.

AMAZIAH, Am-a-zy'-ah, the strength of the Lord.—One of the kings of Judah, the son of Joash, whom he succeeded, A. M. 3165. 2 Chron. xxiv. 27. He acted wisely in the beginning of his reign, but after conquering the Edomites; 2 Kings xiv. he carried off their gods, and acknowledged them for his own, by adoration and offering incense. He then proclaimed war against Joash, king of Israel, who defeated his army, and took him prisoner. After this he reigned fifteen years at Jerusalem, but turned not to the Lord. A conspiracy was formed against him, the leaders of which assassinated him, as he fled to Lachish.—2. Priest to the golden calves set up at Bethel; Amos vii.

AMBASSADOR, A person sent as the representative of a sovereign prince or state, on any public business to a foreign country; 2 Chron. xxxii. 31. Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah, the servants of king Hezekiah, are probably alluded to by the prophet Isaiah under the title, "Ambassadors of Peace." Compare 2 Kings xviii. with Isaiah xxxiii. 7. In the name of their master they earnestly solicited a peace from the Assyrian monarch, but were made to "weep most bitterly" with the disappointment and refusal. Paul styles himself and fellow-apostles the ambassadors of Christ, commissioned by him, not only to proclaim pardon to guilty rebels, but to "beseech men, in Christ's name, to be reconciled to God," 2 Cor. v. 20. They were put in trust with the gospel; were sent forth to bear witness to the truth among the nations, to persuade men by every motive of terror and of love, calculated to influence the human heart, to receive the divine testimony; and to invite, exhort, and entreat men to believe in Christ, that they might be saved.

AMITTAI, A-mit'-tay, true fearing.—The father of the prophet Jonah. Chap. i. 1; 2 Kings xiv. 25.

AMINADAB, A-min'-a-dab, prince of the people.—The son of Aram, the father of Naashon and Elisheba; Ex. vi. 23.—The brother of Korah; 1 Chron. vi. 22.—A Levite, and inhabitant of Kirjathjearim; 1 Sam. vii. 1. The chariots of Aminadab are mentioned, Song vi. 12, as being extremely light. Perhaps referring to some skilful charioteer, whose horses were remarkably swift.

AMMAH, AMMI, Am'-mah, Am'-my, my people.—A hill where Asahel, brother of Joah, was slain by Abner, near Gibeon; 2 Sam. ii. 24.—Name of the ten tribes; Hosea ii. 1.

AMMIEL, Am'-me-el, God with me.—One deputed to view the land of Canaan; Num. xiii. 12.—The father of Bathshua; 1 Chron. iii. 5.—The father of Machir; 2 Sam. ix. 4.—The son of Obed-edom; 1 Chron. xxvi. 5.

AMMIHUD, Am-my'-hud, people of praise.—Father of Elishama; Num. i. 10.—The father of Shemuel; Num. xxxiv. 20.—The father of Pedahel; Num. xxxiv. 28. The father of Talmai, king of Geshur; 2 Sam. xiii. 37.

AMMISHADDAI, Am-me-shad'-day-i, the people of the Almighty.—The father of Abiezer, a prince of the tribe of Dan; Num. i. 12.

AMMIZABAD, Am-miz'-a-bad, the dowry of the people. The son of Benaiah, an officer in David's army; 1 Chron. xxvii. 6.

AMMON, Am'-mon, a people.—The son of Lot; Gen. xix. 38, and the father of the Ammonites. In 1 Chron. xix. 7, (which see) the children of Ammon are said to have hired 32,000 chariots, which appears an incredible number. The original word is a collective noun, signifying cavalry or riders. Then the meaning is, they hired 32,000 auxiliaries, who were usually mounted on chariots or horses, but who occasionally served as foot-soldiers, which agrees with 2 Sam. x. 6, where the Syrian auxiliaries amount exactly to 32,000, besides 1000 men whom they hired of the king of Maachah, and who, probably, were infantry.

AMMONITES, Am'-mo-nites.—The descendants of Ammon, the son of Lot. They took possession of a country called by their name after having driven out the Zamzummims, its ancient inhabitants. They had kings, were uncircumcised, and were employed in husbandry. They were implacable enemies to the Israelites. Jer. ix. 25, 26; Deut. ii. 19, &c.

The conduct of David in putting the Ammonites under saws, and harrows of iron, &c. on the capture of Rabbah, has been spoken of as extreme cruelty.—But the cavils of objectors are unfounded. The Hebrew prefix, (Beth) used throughout the verse, signifies to as well as under; and to put the people to saws, harrows, axes, and brick-kilns, means only to employ them as slaves, in sawing, making iron harrows, hewing wood and making bricks. Hence in English we say, put a person to the plough, or to the anvil, &c. The erroneous interpretation has been taken from 1 Chron. xx. 3, where David is said to have cut them with saws, &c. &c. on which place it is to be observed that instead of he sawed or cut with saws, seven of the manuscripts, collated by Dr. Kennicott, have, he put them to, &c. There is no real discrepancy between the two passages, even according to the present reading. The verbs sher and yesher signify to regulate, to rule to order, &c. Therefore the obvious meaning of the passage in 1 Chron. xx. 3, is that David subjected the Ammonites to the arduous employments specified, which is also the idea conveyed by the author of Samuel.

AMNON, Am'-non, faithful and true.—The eldest son of David. His history is recorded 2 Sam. xiii. 1, &c. Also the son of Shimon; 1 Chron. iv. 20.

AMOK, Ay'-mok, a valley.—A priest; Neh. xii. 7.

AMON, Ay'-mon, faithful, true.—The governor of Samaria, who kept the prophet Michaiah in custody; 1 Kings xxii. 26.—The fourteenth king of Judah; 2 Kings xxi. 19.—One of the Nethinims; Neh. vii. 59.

AMORITES, Am'-o-rites, bitter, rebels, babblers.—The descendants of Hamer. The fourth son of Canaan; Gen. x. 16. They occupied that portion which afterward constituted the lots of Reuben, Gad, Manasseh, Dan, Judah, Simeon, and Benjamin. As they were the most powerful of the devoted tribes, all the Canaanites sometimes went under their name. Judg. vi. 10; 2 Kings xxi. 11.

AMOS, Ay'mos, loading, weighty.—The fourth of the minor prophets, who had been a herdsman in Tekoa. He lived in the times of Uzziah; and was contemporary with Isaiah, Hosea, and Joel. He prophesied to reclaim the Israelites from idolatry. Also father of the prophet Isaiah; Chap. i. 1.—The son of Nahum, and father of Mattathias, mentioned in the genealogy of our Saviour; Luke iii. 25.

AMOS, Book of.—Amos followed Joel in his prophecies, and being a herdsman, and a dresser and grower of the sycamore fruit, many of his figures are drawn from the scenes in which he was engaged. He prophesied during the early part of Isaiah's ministry. His prophecy relates chiefly to the ruin and restoration of the Jews. As a writer, his eloquence and taste are remarkable. He equals any of the prophets, not only in splendour and variety of imagery, but also in beauty and elegance of diction. Hence Bp. Lowth says, "Our shepherd is not a whit behind the chief of the prophets." The strophes in ch. ii. & iii. are beautiful, and prove his literary skill and taste.

AMPHIPOLIS, Am-fip'-o-lis, a city surrounded.—A city of Turkey in Europe, formerly the capital of Macedonia, surrounded by the river Strymon. It was built about 470 years B. C., by Cymon, the Athenian. Paul and Silas passed through it in their way from Philippi to Thessalonica. It has long been in ruins; an obscure village now stands on part of its site. It is now called Emboli by the Turks. (Acts xvii.)

AMPLIAS, Am'-ple-as, large, extensive.—An individual highly esteemed by Paul; Rom. xvi. 8.

AMRAM, Am'-ram, an exalted people.—The son of Kohath, the father of Aaron, Miriam, and Moses;

Exod. vi. 18.—Also the son of Bani; Ezra. x. 34.

AMRAMITES, Am'-ram-ites. Num. iii. 27.

AMRAPHEL, Am'-ra-fel, one that speaks of hidden things or of ruin.—The king of Shinar, one of the confederated monarchs, who warred against the kings of Sodom, and captivated Lot; Gen. xiv. 1, &c.

AMZI, Am'-zy, strong, mighty.—A Levite, who served in the temple; 1 Chron. vi. 46.

ANAB, Ay'-nab, a grape, a knot.—A city in the mountain of Judah, from which Joshua expelled the Anakims; Josh. xi. 21.

ANAH, Ay'-nah, one who answers or sings.—The son of Zibeon, and father of Esau's wife; Gen. xxxvi. 24.

ANAHARATH, An-a-hay'-rath, dryness, burning.—A city belonging to the tribe of Issachar; Josh. xix. 19.

ANANIAH, An-a-i'-ah.—Assistant of Ezra; Neh. viii. 4.

ANAK, Ay'-nak, a collar, an ornament. The son of Arba, who gave his name to Kirjath-Arba, or Hebron; he had three sons, whose descendants were fierce giants; Num. xiii.

ANAKIMS, An'-a-kims.—The descendants of Anak.—They were so gigantic in stature, that the spies sent out by Moses considered themselves, and were considered by them, as mere grasshoppers; Num. xiii. 33; they were so tall, strong, and fierce. The Israelites, under Joshua, destroyed many of this gigantic race, and their strong holds, and caused the remnant to take refuge in the cities of the Philistines. Some of their posterity remained, till David and his warriors destroyed the whole race, when they slew Goliath, of Gath, &c.

Recent travellers report;—We see on both sides enormous masses of rock very peculiar in form. Some are relics of vast terraces of vast size. Some appear like doors of houses—stone doors—or temples, &c. We seem to be looking on the remains of some Cyclopean city. It is not their size that strikes us, but their curiously mingled order and confusion, as they lie down in the ravine at our right, or rise above each other on the hill-slope at our left. We see no pillars, no ornaments, no inscriptions. This city must have belonged to a far antiquity, a time of rude, unadorned, but massive architecture, when men unable to apply any great amount of power, took advantage of natural peculiarities, such as the withdrawing cave, or the outstanding boulder, and instead of shaping their materials to their plan, shaped their plan to their materials. Yet the scene is not a bare one; There is no stream below, no rill trickling down the cliffs, no moss vivifying the dead stone; but there is quite a wilderness of rich brushwood overspreading the whole. Not shrubs merely, but trees, have taken possession of every free inch of soil; the ballut, the privet, and the fir rooting themselves in each crevice, and forming an exquisite network of green, through whose interminable meshes the grey patches of the old rock came up like the tombstones of some primeval cemetery.

“What city has this been? What relics are these? They are not Roman, nor Jewish, nor patriarchal. They belong to an antiquity beyond these. Had we been in Sicily, we should have said, The Cyclops have been here; this is their workmanship. Had we been in the Hauran, we should have concluded that we had stumbled into some of the cities of Og, king of Bashan, which Mr. Porter has so well described.

the Rephaim were the original occupiers of Southern Judea. They were the first that took possession of its mountains, building cities, and swaying no feeble sceptre over a large region around. They were evidently a warlike and formidable tribe. It was not of hordes of savage wanderers or herdsmen that Moses made mention; Deut. ix. 1, 2. And even though we may admit that the report of the spies was greatly coloured by their fears, yet their language indicates the character of the Rephaim tribe.—Bonar.

ANANI, An-ay'-ny.—The son of Elioenai; 1 Chron. iii. 24.

ANANIAH, An-a-ny'-ah, the cloud or deliverance of the Lord.—A city of Palestine; Neh. iii. 23.—A Jew employed in building the walls of Jerusalem; Neh. xi. 32.

ANANIAS, An-a-ny'-as, the cloud of the Lord.—A high priest of the Jews. Acts xxii. 12. It was he before whom Paul was summoned; Acts xxiii. When the Apostle began his defence, Ananias ordered him to be struck on the mouth. Feeling the injustice of such treatment, the Apostle rebuked the high priest, and uttered a prophetic judgment against him. “And they that stood by said, ‘Revilest thou God’s high-priest?’” Then Paul said, “I wist not, brethren that he was the high-priest,” &c. The infidel says, “How could he be ignorant of that fact?” Ans. For some reason Ananias had been a few years before deposed from office, and as a prisoner sent to Rome. Jonathan succeeded him as high-priest, but having been murdered by Felix, an interval occurred in which the office was vacant. During this interval Paul appeared before Ananias, who had assumed the office of President of the Sanhedrim without any authority. Hence Paul’s answer was true. This base man sufferred the judgment denounced by the Apostle. In the beginning of the Jewish war, the assassins set fire to his house, and compelled him to secrete himself, but being found in an aqueduct, he was captured and slain.

Also one of the first Christians. He was a rich man, and sold an estate under the pretext of displaying his liberality and love to the cause of Christ. But he reserved a part of the purchase-money, and carried the rest to the Apostle Peter, declaring that the sum was the whole price realized by the sale. His dissimulation was detected by Peter, who severely rebuked him for it, telling him that he had lied unto God, and not to men. At that instant Ananias fell down dead at the apostle's feet. Three hours afterwards his wife Sapphira coming in, and entirely ignorant of the awful judgment that had befallen her husband, Peter put the same question to her, that he had previously put to Ananias; and she, participating in the same falsehood, was instantly struck dead, in the same manner; Acts v. 1—10. This dreadful catastrophe took place in the year of Christ 33 or 34, very soon after the day of Pentecost, and produced, as indeed it was well suited to do, a most solemn and alarming impression upon the whole church, and on as many others as heard of it.

Also a disciple of Christ at Damascus, to whom the Lord appeared in a vision; and informed him of Saul's conversion to the Christian faith, and of the eminent services which he was afterwards to perform as an apostle; instructed him where he should find him, and what he should do to him; Acts ix. 10.

ANATH, Ay'-nath, an answer, a song.—The father of Shamgar, a judge of Israel; Judges iii. 31.

ANATHEMA, MARANATHA, A-nath'-e-ma, Ma-ran-ath'-a. The former word signifies accursed; and the latter, the Lord cometh; 1 Cor. xvi. 22. This language must not be regarded as an imprecation, but as a prediction of what would certainly come upon the Jews, if they did not repent, and of what actually came upon them, because they continued to hate and execrate Christ. See also 2 Tim. iv. 14, where it must be read in the future, according to Griesbach, and others;—The Lord will reward him (Alexander) according to his works.

The apparent imprecations in the Old Testament must also be regarded as predictions; the imperative mood being put for the future tense, agreeably to the known idiom of the Hebrew language, and shown to be so put by the future being used in other parts of the prediction, as in Ps. xxviii. 4, 5. See also Gen. xx. 7; xlii. 18; xlv. 18. As the prophets are often commanded to do a thing, when it is only intended that they should foretell it, (Isa. vi. 10, and Jer. i. 10.) so they often foretell a thing by commanding it to be done; (Isa. xlvii. 1; “Come down, i. e. thou shalt come down, &c.”) and they often express their predictions in an address to God, the union of which two idioms, gives them the appearance of imprecations; Isa. ix. 3. read, they shall joy, &c.

In Deut. xxvii. 15—25, not one imprecation is authorised by the original. It should have been, Cursed are they, &c.

Psalms lv. is a plain prophecy of the untimely fate of Ahithophel, and is so interpreted by the Chaldee paraphrase. Verse 15, should read, “Death shall suddenly seize upon them; they shall go down, &c.” Also Ps. cix. is a prediction; first of the fate of Doeg the Edomite, and secondly of Judas, See Acts i. 20.

ANATHEMA, 1 Cor. 16. 22. let him be a. maranatha

ANATHOTH, An'-a-thoth, answer, affliction.—The son of Becher, 1 Chron. vii. 8. A city in the tribe of Benjamin; It is supposed to be the same as Anata, about three or four miles from Jerusalem; Josh. xxi. 18. It was one of the cities of refuge; 1 Chron. vi. 60.

ANCESTORS, Lev. 26. 45. remember covenant of a.

ANCHOR. An instrument for stopping the course, or fixing a ship at sea. Hope is figuratively represented as the anchor of the soul, to keep it steady in the sea of life. Sometimes an anchor may lose its hold; then the ship will drive, and be imperilled. But the anchor is dropped anew, and the ship is stayed. When the soul loses its hold of Christ, it is driven hither and thither by tempests among rocks of pride, and quicksands of error. The only remedy is repentance and faith in Christ's pardoning love, and casting the anchor anew within the veil.

The Christian can never steer safely unless he thus acts. If he thus casts his anchor, he will weather every storm, and sail joyfully towards the heavenly port. Even the ship at anchor is never quite free from motion, though the sea may be quite calm. The sea will swell, and the vessel roll, and greatly alarm and disorder the passengers. And so are all believers, though secure in Christ, through rolling billows of adversities, they are "troubled on every side, and have fightings without, and fears within." But the cable of faith, to which the anchor of hope is united, is superior to all human trusts and hopes, and keeps the soul safe amid all perils, even in death itself. This divine apparatus, faith and hope, will secure the soul, till it steers into the port of eternal glory.

ANCIENT. Old, of former times, 1 Chron. iv. 22; Job xii. 12; 1 Sam. xxiv 13. God is called the Ancient of days, Dan. vii. 9, 13, 22; indeed the appellation belongs to the ever-blessed Trinity, the sacred Three in One, and denotes eternity past, and also immutability as to the future.—Ps. cxix. 100.

Ancient, 'With the ancient, is wisdom.' In early times, before wisdom accumulated from generation to generation, and was transmitted by writing and printing, long life always gave the advantage in gaining knowledge; Job xii. 12.

ANDREW, An'-drew, a stout and strong man.—An apostle of Jesus Christ, a native of Bethsaida, and brother of Peter. He had been a disciple of John the Baptist, but hearing the latter testify of Jesus, that he was "the Lamb of God," Andrew followed the Saviour, and seems to have been the first disciple that attached himself to the Messiah when he entered upon his public ministry; John i. 35—40. Andrew was no sooner made acquainted with the character of Jesus, than he proceeded in search of his brother, Simon Peter, and introduced him also to the Saviour, with whom they passed a day previous to their going down to attend the marriage at Cana in Galilee; John, ch. 2. Very little is related of Andrew by the Evangelists. The events in which he was concerned are recorded in Matt. iv. 18—20; Mark xiii. 3; John i. 35—40; vi. 3—13; xii. 22. After Christ's ascension, he preached some years at Jerusalem. Having remonstrated with Ægeas, a pro-consul in Achaia, for his obstinate adherence to idolatry, he was cruelly scourged and fixed to a cross in the form of an X, on which he died. Hence the name of St. Andrew's Cross.

ANEM, Ay'-nem, an answer, a song, of them.—A city of the tribe of Issachar; 1 Chron. vi. 73.

ANER, Ay'-ner, an answer.—A city of Manasseh, 1 Chron. vi. 70.—Also a Canaanite; Gen. xiv. 13.

ANGEL. The word is derived from the Greek, angellos, literally, a messenger, or tidings-bringer. It answers to the Hebrew, malak, which in Ethiopic, and in Arabic, signifies to send, and in the former, to serve, minister, employ. The term is applied to Intelligent beings, employed by God as the ministers of his Providence; Ezek. x. 8, &c. Heb. i. 4-7, 14; Matt. xxv. 31. They are the highest order of intelligent beings. Hence they are called thrones, dominions, principalities, and powers, in the immense and eternal empire of Jehovah. Angels, therefore, who are called by these names, are the beings who, under God, the Supreme Ruler, hold, throughout his dominion, authority, and power. All other finite beings are, therefore, beneath them in dignity, and subordinate to them in station. The same truth is also completely evident from the place assigned them for their residence. "I am Gabriel, said the angel, who appeared to Zechariah in the temple; I am Gabriel, who stand in the presence of God. "And before the throne," says St. John, "there was a sea of glass, like unto crystal; and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four living ones, full of eyes before and behind. And they rest not, day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, who was, and who is, and who is to come;" Rev. iv. 6, 8. And again, Rev. vii. 11; "All the angels stood round about the throne, and worshipped God, saying, Amen." "In the year that king Uzziah died," says the prophet Isaiah, "I saw also Jehovah sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up; and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphim; each one had six wings; and one cried to another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is Jehovah of hosts! the whole earth is full of his glory." In the same manner is the same subject exhibited to us, and with a sublimity not inferior, by the prophet Ezekiel, concerning the cherubim; and by the prophet Daniel, concerning the myriads of the heavenly hosts. Angels, then, surround the throne of God, stand in his immediate and awful presence, and worship continually at his feet. What beings, let me ask, can we rationally suppose would be admitted to a communion so intimate with their Creator, an access to him so near, a distinction so wonderful? To this there can be but one answer. Every man will without hesitation say, "None but those who sustain the first character, and the highest station among created beings."

Nor is the same truth much less evident from the glory and splendour; with which these celestial beings have customarily appeared in the present world. When the angel came to roll away the stone from the sepulchre of Christ, his countenance was like lightning, and his raiment, white as snow: and for fear of him, the keepers became as dead men. "And I saw," says St. John, "another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and a rainbow upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire." All these circumstances of splendour, greatness, and awfulness, surround these illustrious beings, while employed as the ministers of God in executing his commands. They were, therefore, the proper emblems of their character, and the proper accompaniments of their station. But we cannot be at a loss concerning the suitableness of the circumstances to beings of a character and station superior to every created thing, which we are able to conceive. Beings of whom this is the ordinary dress, and characteristic splendour, must undoubtedly be exalted above all others hitherto supposed by the mind of man.

(2.) The activity of angels is astonishing; Psalm civ. 4. Heb. i. 7; Dan. ix. 21.

(3.) Angels are possessed of knowledge superior to that of any other created beings. They are called living ones—full of eyes within, according to the apostle John in the book of Revelation. Gen. iii. 24; Eph. iii. 10.

The name is also applied to the Apostate spirits; Matt. xxv. 41; Jude 6. The pastors or bishops of churches; Rev. i. 20; ii. 1, 8, 12, 18; iii. 1, 6, 14. The Angel of the Church means the Pastor who presides over a congregation of believers. Angel of the Lord Jesus Christ; Zech. i. 11, who before his true manifestation in the flesh, frequently assumed the form of an angel, or human messenger. In the Hebrew he is sometimes called the "Angel Jehovah;" and very often while appearing as an angel, he uses language unequivocally implying that he was God; Gen. xvi. 7, 10; xxii. 11—14; xxxi. 10—13; Exod. xiv. 19; Isa. lxiii. 9; Acts vii. 38.

Angels, 'by the disposition of angels,' signifies, amidst the attending ranks of angels.—Barnes. Dr. Boothroyd renders it, 'by the ministry of angels;' Acts vii. 53.

ANGER is that motion, or passion, of the human mind, which we experience on receiving or supposing that we have received, an injury or affront; and which prompts us to repel the injury, and to avenge it on the offending party. Anger when it becomes strong, is called wrath; when it makes outrages, it is fury; when it becomes fixed, it is termed hatred; and when it tends to injure any one, it is called malice; all these wicked passions spring from anger; Gen. xlix. 7; Ps. xxxvii. 8; Eph. iv. 26.

Do nothing in anger, for that is like putting to sea in a storm.

To reprove in anger, is like giving a sick person a medicine scalding hot.

Passionate persons are like men who stand on their heads, they see all things the wrong way.

ANIAM, Ay'-ne-am, the strength of people, the ship of people.—The son of Shemidah ; 1 Chron. vii. 19.

ANIM, Ay'-nim, answers.—A city of Judah ; Josh. xv. 50.

ANISE. A small plant of the same family as Dill, and very common in Judea. The seed is carminative and fragrant.

ANNA, An'-nah, gracious, merciful—The daughter of Phanuel, a prophetess and widow of the tribe of Asher ; Luke ii. 36, 37. She was a very devout woman. When Simeon held the infant Redeemer in his arms, and enunciated the prophetic blessing, she was present, and praised God for the fulfilment of his promise to redeem the lost.

ANNAS, An'-nas, one that answers, afflicts.—The son of Seth, and high-priest of the Jews ; John xviii. 13. The office was no longer in one direct descent from Aaron, or for life. Annas was made high-priest, and deposed by the Romans. Three of his sons were put into that office in succession, and then his son-in-law, Caiaphas, who continued high-priest throughout the administration of Pilate. But Annas had still the honorary title of "high-priest," though deposed ; and was a man of great rank and influence among the Jews.

ANOINTED, to pour oil upon ; Ex. xxix. 7. Anointings were frequent under the law, and respected both persons and things : whenev kings, priests, or prophets, were set apart to their offices : because the offices and those who held them, more or less typified "him whom the Father sanctified, and sent into the world," to execute these great offices in the church ; Ex. xxviii. 41 ; 1 Sam. ix. 16. For this cause Jesus was called the Lord's Christ, his Messiah, or Anointed one ; Luke iii. 22 ; lxi 1 ; Ps. xxiii. 5 ; Zech. iv. 14 ; John ix. 6.

Anointest. "Thou anointest my head with oil, and my cup runneth over ;" Ps. xxiii. 5. The Easterns often anoint their visitors with fragrant perfumes, and give them a cup of choice wine, which they fill till it runs over. The first showed their love and respect ; the latter implied that while they remained there, they should be liberally treated.

Anointing. "Anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord ;" James v. 14. A custom connected with miraculous cures ; not to fit for death, but to restore to life.

ANT. A little insect famous for its social habits, its economy, unwearied industry, and prudent foresight. It has offered a pattern of commendable frugality to the profuse, and of unceasing diligence to the slothful.

Solomon calls the ants "exceeding wise, for, though a race not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer." He therefore sends the sluggard to these little creatures, to learn wisdom, foresight, care, and diligence; Prov. vi. 6; xxx. 25. Some have stated that the corn which is laid up by ants, would shoot under ground, if they did not prevent it. They, therefore, bite off all the germs before they lay it up; and the corn in their cells will produce nothing. Such was the opinion of Bochart and others.

But Solomon does not affirm that the ant deposited in her magazine stores of grain; but that, with much foresight, she makes use of the proper seasons to collect a supply of provision sufficient for her purposes. There is not a word in them implying that she stores up grain or other provision. She prepares her bread, and gathers her food, namely, such food as is suited to her, in summer and harvest; that is, when it is most plentiful; and thus shows her wisdom and prudence, by using the advantages offered to her.

ANTICHRIST. A word of Greek origin, signifying a person or power, actuated by a spirit opposite to the spirit of Christ. It is compounded of Anti, against, and Christos, Christ. In the days of John, there were already many antichrists; 1 John ii. 18; iv. 3. These persons denied the manifestation of Christ in the flesh to atone for sin. The term has been commonly applied to the church of Rome, which is thought to be described, 2 Thess. ii. 4. Compare Dan. vii. 24, 25, and Rev. xvii. 1—6.

ANTIOCH, An'te'-ok, instead of a chariot.—There were sixteen cities of this name; but only two are mentioned in Scripture. 1. The capital of Syria, on the river Orontes, about 300 miles north of Jerusalem, and 30 miles from the place where the Orontes flows into the Mediterranean Sea. For its magnificence and extent, it was called the Queen of the East. "Antioch and Alexandria," says Gibbon, "looked down with disdain on a crowd of dependant cities, and yielded with reluctance to the majesty of Rome itself." Antioch was nearly square, had many gates, and was adorned with sumptuous palaces, temples, fountains, gardens, and groves of cypress, olives, bay, &c. It was strongly and beautifully fortified both by nature and art. The soil naturally fertile, was refreshed by a thousand rivulets, issuing from the hills, and running into the Orontes, through a romantic valley. It was built by Seleucus Nicator, about 300 years B. C., and called after his father Antiochus. The Turks call it Antakia. Here the disciples of Christ were first called Christians; Acts xi. 26.

Here Paul and Barnabas preached, and Chrysostom preached here in the fourth century with great success. It was the birth-place of Luke the Evangelist and Theophilus. This church was famous for many hundred years. At one time the population amounted to about half a million. In the reign of Theodosius it contained 100,000 Christians. Antioch suffered from seven successive earthquakes in the course of four centuries. Justinian repaired it, A. D. 529, and called it Theopolis, or the city of God. Eleven years after, Cosrhoes, king of Persia took it, butchered the inhabitants, and burnt it. Justinian caused it to be rebuilt. Cosrhoes took it a second time, and destroyed its walls, A. D. 588. In the year A. D. 538, sixty thousand of its inhabitants perished in an earthquake. In 1188 it was demolished by the Saracens. In 1822 a tremendous earthquake completely destroyed the remains of this once splendid city; and it is now little else than a heap of ruins. In this city the Christians manifested their love to Christ, in raising large contributions for the poor Christians of Judea, as a provision against the famine foretold by Agabus; and so late as the fourth century, the church of Antioch supported not less than three thousand persons out of the public donations; Acts xi. 27—30. At length the church declined through the influence of pride, pomp and formality, the growth of fashion and the decay of charity. At the end of the fourth century, real religion was rapidly disappearing, and the foundations of that great apostacy were laid, which, during the fifth and sixth centuries, over-spread the whole Christian world, and led nearly to the extinction of the churches in the East. Antioch is still a miserable and wretched place; the buildings are constructed of mud.

and are wretched and comfortless. It now bears the name of Antakia.

2. ANTIOCH. A city of Asia Minor, in Pisidia. Here Paul and Barnabas preached; they were violently persecuted, and compelled to leave the city; Acts xiii. 14.

ANTIPAS, An'-te-pas, against all. Antipas-Herod, or Herod-Antipas, the son of Herod the Great, and Cleopatra of Jerusalem. The same that married his brother's wife Herodias, and beheaded John the Baptist. Matt. xiv. 3, 4; Mark vi. 17, 18; Luke iii. 19, 20. The same that ridiculed Christ, by dressing him in a gorgeous robe; Luke xxiii. 11.—Also the faithful martyr mentioned Rev. ii. 13. He is said to have been one of our Saviour's first disciples; he suffered at Pergamos.

ANTIPATRIS, An-ti-pa'-tris, against his own father.—A town in Palestine, named Antipatris by Herod, in honour of his father Antipater; Acts xxiii. 31. It was situated in a pleasant valley, near the mountains, in the way from Jerusalem to Cesarea, about 17 miles from Joppa, and 42 from Jerusalem. Paul was brought to this place on his way to Cesarea; Acts xxiii. 31. It was formerly called Capharsalama; 1 Maccabees vii. 31, but was of little note till enlarged and adorned by Herod. An Arabian village now occupies its site.

ANTITYPE. That which answers to a type. The paschal lamb was a type; Christ the Antitype.

ANTIQUITY. Old times, great age, the people of old times. It is applied to the city of Tyre; Isa. xxiii. 7; "Whose antiquity is of ancient days," or of the earliest date.

ANTOTHIJAH, An-to-thy'-jah, answers of the songs of the Lord.—The son of Shishak; 1 Chron. viii. 24.

ANUB, Ay'-nub, a grape.—The son of Coz; 1 Chro. iv. 8.

APE. A species of monkey, which bears a rude resemblance to the human form. It was imported by Solomon, 1 Kings x. 22. Some nations have worshipped the ape, particularly the Egyptians and the Hindoos. The creatures referred to in Lev. xvii. 7, are supposed to be apes.

APELLES, A-pel'-lees, to exclude, to separate.—A disciple approved in Christ; Rom. xvi. 10. By some he is supposed to have been the same as Apollos.

APHARSACHITES, A-far'-sa-kites. Ezra. v. 6.

APHEK, Ay'-fek, a stream, vigour.—The name of several cities of Syria. 1. In the tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. iv. 1, 2, &c.—2. In the valley of Jezreel; 1 Sam. xxix. 1.—3. In the tribe of Asher; Josh. xix. 30.—4. A city of Syria; 1 Kings xx. 26.

APHEKAH, A-fe'-kah. A city of Palestine, supposed to be the same as Apek; Jesh. xv. 53.

APHIA, A-fy'-ah, speaking, blowing. 1 Sam. ix. 1.

APHSES, Af'-sees.—One of the twenty-four appointed by David, for the service of the temple; 1 Chr. xxiv. 15.

APOCRYPHA, a number of books often placed between the Old and New Testaments. They were not admitted by the ancient Christians into the canon of Scripture. None of them were ever received by the Jews. They are not found in the catalogue of the canonical books made by Mileto, bishop of Carthage, in the second century; nor does Origen in the third, or Epiphanius in the fourth, acknowledge their authenticity. Few of them were allowed to be canonical until the ninth and tenth centuries, when the ignorance both of the people and of the clergy was most deplorable. The popish council of Trent voted them to be authentic, and they are still retained by the Roman Catholics. Some of these books contain useful history and wholesome advice, but others are puerile and fabulous.

APOLLOS, A-pol'-los, one that destroys or lays waste. A Jew of Alexandria, who came to Ephesus during the absence of Paul, at Jerusalem; Acts xviii. 24. He was an eloquent man, and mighty in the Scriptures. Being fully instructed in the Christian faith, Apollos went to Achaia, and arriving at Corinth, was useful in convincing the Jews, out of the scriptures, that Jesus was the Christ. The attachment of many of the Corinthians to Apollos, who were captivated by his eloquent address, had nearly produced a schism in that church, and was evidently one reason of the apostle's writing his first letter to them, in which he exceedingly blames their conduct in that respect. "Now this I say," says he, "that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ." 1 Cor. i. 12. "Who," says he, "is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man? I have planted, and Apollos watered; but God gave the increase," ch. iii. 4—6. Whether this unhappy state of things made its appearance among the Corinthians during the time that Apollos continued with them, does not appear; but it is plain that he was with Paul at Ephesus, at the time the apostle wrote his first epistle to that church, 1 Cor. xvi. 8, 12; and there are two things which may be fairly deduced from this last passage. One is, that the contentions of the rival factions, in the church at Corinth, had not in any degree diminished the fervent love that subsisted between Paul and Apollos. For, while on the one hand, Paul could hear of the Corinthians giving the preference to Apollos as a preacher, so little was he moved by the spirit of jealousy lest his glory should be eclipsed by the more splendid talents of his rival, that he "greatly desired Apollos to return unto them :” and on the other hand, so little ambitious was the latter to be at the head of a party, that no entreaties of the apostle could prevail upon him to go near them, while things remained in that unhappy state. What a lesson to Christians in modern times !

APOLLYON, A-pol'-le-on, one that exterminates or destroys.—It is a Greek word answering to the Hebrew Abaddon ; Rev. ix. 11.

APOSTLE. A messenger, or one who is sent on some business. It is applied to the Saviour who was sent from heaven to assume our nature, and in our nature to redeem fallen man by the death of the cross ; Heb. iii. 1.—It is applied to the twelve men whom Christ chose as his disciples, and whom he deputed to preach the gospel to mankind ; Mark xv. 16, 20. The word comes from apostello, to send forth. Their names, and the charge given them by their Lord and Master are recorded ; Matt. x. 5—42.

The inspiration of the apostles is evident from the Redeemer's promise. See John xiv. 26 ; John xv. 26, 27 ; John xvi. 13, 14. In this promise are included the following things ;—(1) That the Spirit would certainly come to the apostles, after the ascension of Christ.—(2) That he would testify to them concerning Christ : he shall testify of me.—(3.) That this testimony would be accompanied by the coincident testimony of the apostles : and ye also shall bear witness, &c.—(4.) The Spirit of truth should receive from Christ that which was his ; viz. his truth, pleasure, or gospel ; and should declare it to the apostles : he shall receive of mine, and shall declare it unto you.—(5.) That he should glorify Christ in this communication.—(6.) That he should show to the apostles things to come, or future things : or in other words, should endue them with the gift of prophecy.—(7.) That he should guide the apostles into all truth ; that is, into all evangelical truth ; the truth by way of eminence.—(8.) That he should teach them all things ; that is, all things which they needed to be taught originally ; or which Christ had not already taught them : he shall teach you all things.—(9.) That he should bring up to the full view of their memory the things which Christ had taught them : and shall bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

They went forth to preach the name of the Lord Jesus. Persecution was before them—death stared them in the face. They braved all ; for they had seen Christ, his majesty and glory—had associated with him—had beheld his miracles, and received their commission immediately from him. He breathed upon them, and they were endued with power to work miracles. They went forth and preached in his name, wrought miracles, spoke with tongues, and executed every part of their ministry in the name, and by the power of Christ. Thousands were converted by them in Judea ; they spread the gospel from Hindostan to Gaul, and planted churches throughout a great part of the Roman empire, in Persia, Ethiopia, India, in the islands of the sea, &c. &c. Were they not disinterested ? What had they to gain ? Nothing ; but every thing to lose, and suffer. This certainly proves their mission Divine, and the gospel to be true. Think again of their inspiration, their miraculous gifts, their overwhelming influence, and it will be evident that the Apostles could have no successors.

APPII FORUM, Ap'-pe-i-fo'-rum, the village of Appius. A place about 54 miles from Rome, (the Three Taverns was situated nearer the city,) near the modern town of Piperno, on the road to Naples. To this place some Christians from Rome came to meet Paul; Acts xxviii. 15.

APPLE. The APPLE-TREE is not the same as the apple-tree in England. Our apple is not found in Palestine. The apples which the inhabitants of Palestine eat at this day, are of foreign growth, and are a very indifferent fruit. The apple-trees, of which the prophet Joel speaks (ch. i. 12,) and which he mentions among the things so pleasant to the people of Judea, cannot be those that we call by that name. The prophet says, "The vine is dried up, and the fig-tree languisheth; the pomegranate-tree, the palm-tree also, and the apple-tree, even all the trees of the field are withered; because joy is withered away from the sons of men."

What is translated in our English version of the Scriptures, is not the Apple-Tree, but the CITRON. The fruit of this tree when fully ripe, has a beautiful golden appearance. It was thought the noblest of the trees of the wood, and that its fruit was very sweet and pleasant. The fruit was delicious; Song ii. 3—of the colour of gold; Prov. xxv. 11—extremely fragrant; Song vii. 8, and proper for those to smell who are ready to faint; Song ii. 5. These descriptions answer to the Citron-tree. Citron-trees have a noble appearance; their size is magnificent; the leaves are beautiful, continuing in constant succession; the branches are never denuded, as many trees are in our country, and in other northern climes.

Their fragrance is most exquisite and refreshing. Hence the Church is represented as saying, "As the citron-tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons;" Song ii. 3. This is a delicate compliment, comparing the elegant appearance of the Prince, amid his escort, to the superior beauty with which the citron-tree appears among the ordinary trees of the forest; and the compliment is heightened by an illusion to the refreshing shade, and the exhilarating fruit. Any shade must, in so hot a country, yield great delight; but the shade of the citron-tree must have yielded double pleasure on account of its ample foliage and fragrant smell.

The Hebrew word for citron, is Taphnah, which means to breathe. Thus the citron-tree, as to its leaves, blossoms, and fruit, breathes, or exhales the most delightful fragrance. Is not this a figurative and very apt illustration of the influences of Christ's Spirit?

"More sweet the fragrance which thy breath exhales Than Citron groves refreshed by morning gales.

APPLES 'of gold in pictures of silver;' Pro. xxv. 11. Harmer judges that citrons were meant and not apples. Boothroyd translates it, 'Like apples of gold among figures of silver.' It is generally thought, that net or basket work is intended. 'Like golden balls, resembling apples, in a silver net-work basket.' That is, an excellent saying, caution, reproof, or admonition is as the most acceptable gift in the fairest conveyance or receptacle. The words "like apples of gold in pictures of silver;" must be thus read,—"like the gold coloured citron, so beautiful and refreshing, served up in open work, or silver filigree baskets"—The Easterns excel in filigree silver work.

Dr. Adam Clarke says, they form the silver wire into the appearance of numerous flowers... "I have seen animals formed of this filigree work, with all their limbs, and every joint in its natural play. Fruit-baskets are made also in this way, and are exquisitely fine."

APPLE of eye, Deut. 32. 10; Ps. 17. 8; Prov. 7. 2; Lam. 2. 18; Zech. 2. 8. In these passages reference is made to the keen sensibility of the ball of the eye. They denote God's most careful protection and security.

AQUILA, Ak'-wil-la, an eagle.—

A native of Pontus, in Asia-Minor, and converted by Paul to the Christian religion. He was a tent-maker, and the apostle wrought and lodged with him at Corinth; Acts xviii. 2, 3. The friendship between them was strong and constant. Priscilla cherished the same disposition as her husband, and both were zealous and untiring in their efforts to extend the cause of the Redeemer. They exposed themselves to the greatest danger on Paul's account. Their work of faith, labour of love, and patience of hope under all their sufferings, were well known and appreciated by all the churches in Asia and Europe; Acts xviii. 26, 27; Rom. xvi. 3, 4; 2 Tim. iv. 19.

AR, Ar, awakening, uncovering.—

The capital of Moab, situated in the hills near the river Arnon, about 17 miles from the Dead Sea. It was destroyed by an earthquake in the time of Jerome, and a late traveller discovered ruins about a mile and a half in circuit, answering to this place. It was also called Rabbath-Moab; now El-rabba; Num. xxi. 15.

ARA, Ay'-rah, cursing, seeing.—A son of Jether, a descendant from the patriarch Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 38.

ARAB, Ay'-rab, multiplying, sowing, sedition, a window.—A city of the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 52.

ARABAH, Ar'-a-bah.—A city belonging to the tribe of Benjamin; Josh. xviii. 18.

ARABIA, A-ra'-be-a, evening, a place wild and desert, because this country was inhabited by different kinds of people.—A large country of Asia, lying partly on the east, but chiefly southward of Canaan. Its greatest length from east to west is about 1620 miles; and its greatest breadth from north to south about 1350. It has the Indian Ocean on the south, the Red Sea and Isthmus of Suez on the west, Canaan and Syria on the north-west and north, the mountains of Chaldea and the Persian Gulf on the east. It is ordinarily divided into three parts.

1. Arabia Petraea, or the rocky, on the north-west, and which is now called Hejaz. In the south-west part of it now stand the famed cities of Mecca and Medina, so much visited by Mahometan pilgrims. This division contained the land of Edom, Kadesh Barnea, Paran, Cushan, &c. The people of this part are called "Men of the east." Gen. xxv. 6; Judg. vi. 3.

2. Arabia Deserta, which lay eastward of Canaan, and comprehended the land of Uz, of Ammon, Moab, Midian, with the country of the Itureans, Hagarenes, &c. In this part was Mount Sinai. The inhabitants have in all ages dwelt in tents, and led a wandering life. They are at present called Bedouins.

3. Arabia Felix, or the happy, on the south of the two former, between the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea. Scarcely any part of Arabia is well watered; but Arabia Felix is the most so, and is famed for its opium, myrrh, cassia, and other drugs, and also for fine spices and fruits.

The Arabians are, in general, the descendants of Ishmael. The descendants of Abraham by Keturah, as well as those of Lot and Esau, dwelt also in this land, and either mixed with or supplanted the inhabitants. The Arabic language is one of the most ancient in the world, and is remarkable for its copiousness. The ancient Arabic was without points. The present Arabic characters are modern.

Of all nations, says Calmet, the Arabs have spread most over the world, and, in all their wanderings, they have, more than any other nation, preserved their language, manners, and peculiar customs. They are cunning, ingenious, poetical, superstitious, vindictive, sanguinary, and thievish. In character and customs they have scarcely varied since the days of the patriarchs. Christianity was early extended over this country, and we read of martyrs, councils, &c., in Arabia.

The face of the country is sterile, being almost destitute of rivers, lakes, and springs, to temper the climate and refresh vegetation. The hills are barren—the plains present a continued wilderness, interspersed with a few patches of verdure. The shores, however, are so fruitful that the inhabitants reap three successive harvests in the year.

In the plains of Arabia rain is not frequent. In several parts the seasons may be distinguished into wet and dry; but in different districts these seasons occupy different periods. The Aurora borealis is unknown here; but the meteors called shooting stars, are frequent. In many places the heat is oppressive; and around Mecca and Mocha the drought and heat are such as would destroy every species of vegetation, were it not for the heavy night dews.

The Euphrates and the Tigris are almost the only rivers that water any part of the country. The mounts Sinai and Horeb are immense masses of granite rocks; the former has only rain water, while the latter abounds with springs and fruits-trees. Nearly all the mountains are craggy and precipitous. The minerals are gold and silver, the onyx, the sardonyx, cornelian, and agate, &c. &c. In the vicinity of the Red Sea are many vegetable productions, as the tamarind tree, cotton tree, pomegranate, fig tree, sugar cane, palms, cocoa, coffee-tree, dates, oranges, almonds, apricots, peaches, liquorice, senna, balm, &c. The inhabitants cultivate wheat, barley, maize, beans, lentils, rape, tobacco, indigo, &c.

The Arabs are not united under one sovereign—the desert is claimed by tribes governed by chiefs, on whom age, wisdom, or courage, have bestowed authority—the cultivated parts of the country are divided among many independent chiefs, who assume different titles according to the extent of their power; such as Iman, or Imir, or Emir. The title of Sheik, common to inferior districts, appears to be rarely connected with ecclesiastical dignity.

ARAD, Ay'-rad, a wild ass.—A city in Arabia Petrea; Num. xxi. 1; xxxiii. 40.—The name of the king of the place.

ARAH, Ay'-rah, the way or traveller.—The son of Ulah; 1 Chron. vii. 39. See also Ezra ii. 5.

ARAM, Ay'-ram, magnificence, one that deceives.—The fifth Son of Shem, Gen. x. 22. He was the father of the Syrians, or Arameans. Also the son of Esrom, and father of Aminadab; Ruth iv. 19; Matt. i. 4.

ARAN, Ay'-ran, an ark, their malediction.—A son of Dishan, and descendant of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 28.

ARARAT, Ar'-a-rat, the curse of trembling.—A lofty mountain in the country of the same name, on which rested Noah's ark. Part of the province which was formerly so called, lies in Turcomania, and the rest is in Persia. It has Georgia on the north, Media on the east, Assyria on the south, and Lesser Asia on the west. It is now owned by Russia. Here the rivers Euphrates, Tigris, Araxes, and Phasis, have their source. The mountain of Ararat, upon which Noah's ark rested, was probably the Ardah or finger-mountain, north-east of Armenia. It stands in a large plain, 36 miles east from Erivan, rising in a conical shape, to the height of about 15,000 feet above the level of the sea, and is visible nearly 200 miles distant. The summit is perpetually covered with snow. The middle part is infested by Tigers. Some poor flocks feed, and two monasteries are to be seen at the foot of the mountain.

In describing Ararat, Ker Porter says, "It appeared as if the hugest mountains in the world had been piled upon each other to form this one sublime immensity of earth, and rocks, and snow. The icy peaks of its double heads rose majestically into the clear and cloudless heavens; the sun blazed bright upon them, and the reflection sent forth a dazzling radiance equal to other suns."

Dr. Parrot, a German, in the employment of Russia, after enduring incredible fatigue, reached the summit. He calculates its height at 17,260 English feet; and the plain on which it stands is said to be 7,000 feet above the sea. But an earthquake in 1840 completely changed the aspect of the country. Vast was the destruction of houses and property to a great extent.

ARAUNAH, A-raw'-nah, ark, song, curse.—A Jebusite whose threshing-floor was situated on that part of Mount Zion where the temple of Jerusalem was afterwards built; 2 Sam. xxiv. 16, 18.

ARBA, Ar'-bah, four.—The name of a giant; Gen. xxiii. 2.

ARCHELAUS, Ar-ke-lay'-us, the prince of the people.—The son of Herod the Great; Matt ii. 22. He governed the kingdom of Judea with violence and injustice. Joseph, upon his return from Egypt, with the young child Jesus, and his mother, having heard that Archelaus reigned in Judea, in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither, and therefore dwelt at Nazareth.

ARCHEVITES, Ar'-ke-vites.—A people who petitioned Artaxerxes against rebuilding Jerusalem; Ezra iv. 9.

ARCHI, Ar'-ky.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xvi. 2.

ARCHIATAROTH, Ar-ke-at'-a-

roth, the longitude of crowns.—The same as Ataroth-addar; Josh. xvi. 2, 5.

ARCHIPPUS, Ar-kip'-pus, governor of horses.—Bishop of the church at Colosse; Col. iv. 17.

ARCTURUS, Ark-tew'-rus, a gathering together.—A star near the tail of the Great Bear; Job ix. 9; xxxviii. 32. Probably the constellation Bootes.

ARD, Ard, one that commands.—The youngest son of Benjamin; Gen. xlv. 21.—Son of Bela; Num. xxvi. 49.

ARDON, Ar'-don, ruling.—Son of Caleb; 1 Chron. ii. 18.

ARELI, A-re'-ly, the light or vision of God.—A son of the patriarch Gad; Gen. xlv. 16.

AREOPAGITE, A-re-op'-a-gite; Acts xvii. 34.

AREOPAGUS, A-re-op'-a-gus.—The hill of Mars, formerly situated in the middle of the city of Athens; a place where the magistrates held their supreme council; there they took cognizance of various crimes, and awarded punishments; they rewarded or assisted the virtuous, and were peculiarly attentive to blasphemies against the gods, and to the performance of the sacred mysteries. There are still to be seen the seats of the Judges, cut in the rock. Paul when cited before them on a charge of setting forth strange gods, preached so ably that he was dismissed, and Dionysius, one of the judges, was converted. Perhaps others also. Acts xvii. 19, &c.

ARETAS, Ar-e'-tas, one that pleases.—A king of Arabia, whose daughter Herod Antipas married, and afterward divorced, on account of which Aretas declared war against Herod, which proved disastrous to him; Acts ix. 23, &c.; 2 Cor. xi. 32, 33.

ARGOB, Ar'-gob, a turf of earth, curse of the well.—A district of Manasseh, in Bashan, beyond Jordan. It contained 66 cities; Deut. iii. 13, 14. — Also a place in Samaria; 2 Kings xv. 25.

ARGUE, Job 6. 25, & 23. 4.

ARIDAI, A-rid'-a-i.—The ninth son of Haman, who was hanged with his nine brethren; Esther ix. 9.

ARIDATHA, A-rid'-a-tha.—The sixth son of Haman; Esther ix. 8.

ARIEH, A-ry'-eh.—An officer of Pekah, king of Israel; 2 Kings xv. 25.

ARIEL, Ay'-re-el, the altar, light. The capital city of Moab; Ezra viii. 16. — It refers to the altar of burnt-offerings, or to Jerusalem; Isa. xxix. 1, 2, 7; Ezek. xliii. 15, 16.

ARIMATHEA, Ar-re-ma-the'-ah, a lion dead to the Lord.—Arimathea was anciently called Ramah, or Ramatha, and is generally supposed to be the modern Ramle or Ramla. It is a pleasant town, standing in a fertile plain, about thirty-five miles north-west of Jerusalem, on the high road to Jaffa, and containing a population of about 5,000 souls, who are principally occupied in husbandry. Some consider this to be the same place with Ramathaim-Zophim, Samuel's country (1 Sam. i. 1), but this is disputed. Arimathea lay west of Jerusalem, and Ramathaim north, in the mountains of Ephraim. Joseph was an honourable person, and a pious counsellor or member of the Sanhedrim; Luke xxiii. 50.

ARIOCH, Ay'-re-ock, long, your drunkenness, your lion.—King of El-lasar; Gen. xiv. 1. — Also a general; Dan. ii. 14.

ARISAI, A-ris'-a-i.—The eighth son of Haman; Esther ix. 9.

ARISTARCHUS, A-ris-tar'-kus, the best prince.—Paul's companion, often mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. He was a Macedonian, and a native of Thessalonica, and supposed to be brother to Barnabas. He accompanied Paul to Ephesus, and shared his labours at that place. He was sent as a prisoner to Rome, or became one when he was there, for Paul called him "my fellow-prisoner;" Col. iv. 10.

ARISTOBULUS, A-ris-to-bew'-lus, the best counsellor.—A person mentioned Rom. xvi. 10.

ARK. The floating vessel built by Noah, under Divine direction, for the preservation of himself and his family, and the several species of animals, during the deluge. The form of the ark was an oblong with a flat bottom, and a sloped roof, raised to a cubit in the middle. It had no helm, or rudder, or masts; nor was it sharp at the ends for cutting the water. Its form was calculated to cause it to be steady on the water without rolling. It was made of gopher wood; a general name, Parkhurst says, for such trees as abound with resinous juices, as the cedar, cypress, pine, fir, &c. To prevent leakage, it was covered with bitumen, or pitch, which becomes very hard on exposure to the air.

The length of the ark was to be 300 cubits, the breadth 50 cubits, and the height 30 cubits. Allowing the cubit to be 18 inches, the ark must have been 450 feet in length, 75 feet in breadth, and 45 feet in height. But that the ancient cubit was more than 18 inches, has been demonstrated by Mr. Greaves, who travelled in Greece, Palestine, and Egypt, in order to ascertain the weights, moneys, and measures of antiquity. He measured the pyramids in Egypt, and comparing the accounts which Herodotus, Strabo, and others give of their size, he found the length of a cubit to be 21 inches and 888 decimal parts out of 1000, or nearly 22 inches. Hence the cube of a cubit is evidently 10,486 inches. And from this it will appear that the 300 cubits of the ark's length make 547 feet; the 50 for its breadth, 91 feet 2 inches, and the 30 for its height 54 feet 8 inches. It is evident then that the ark was a vessel capable of containing more than all the persons and animals said to have been in it, with food sufficient for each for more than twelve months. This vessel as Dr. Arbuthnot computes it to, was about 81,062 tons in burthen; and as the largest East India ships are reckoned at 1,300 tons' burden, the ark of Noah must have had capacity equal to more than 60 of those surprising vessels! Large West India ships are reckoned at about 500 tons' burden; but Noah's ark had capacity equal to more than 160 of such great ships!

There can be no doubt, despite the cavils of infidels on this subject, that the ark was constructed on strictly scientific principles, and of such dimensions as to answer the end of its construction. Naturalists have divided the whole system of zoology into classes and orders. There are 6 classes:

1. Mammalia, or animals with teats, which class contains 7 orders, and only 43 genera, if we except the seventh order, cete, i. e. all the whale kind, which would live in the waters of the deluge. The different species in this class amount to 543, excluding the cete.

2. Aves, birds, contains 6 orders, and only 43 genera, if we exclude the third order, anser, or web-footed fowls, all of which could very well live in the water. The different species in this class, the anser excepted, amount to 2,372.

3. Amphibia, contains only two orders, reptiles and serpents; these comprehend 10 genera, and 366 species; but of the reptiles many could live in the water, such as the tortoise, frog, &c. Of the former there are 33 species, of the latter 17, which reduce the number to 316. The whole of these would occupy but little room in the ark; for a small portion of earth, &c., in the hold would be sufficient for their accommodation.

With the three last of these, viz. fishes, insects, and worms, the question can have little to do.

Bishop Wilkins supposes that quadrupeds do not amount to 100 different kinds, nor birds which could live in water to 200. Of quadrupeds he shows that only 72 species needed a place in the ark; and the birds he divides into 9 classes, including in the whole 195 kinds, from which all the web-footed should be deducted, as these could live in the water, such as proceed from a mixture of different species, and such as change their colour, size, and shape, by changing their climate, and then seem to be of a different species, when they are not.

Dr. Cumming has written ably on this subject, in answer to Dr. Colenso and he says, "But, the cubit is really 1 foot 9 inches, then the proportions of the ark would be as follow:—the length of it 525 feet, or about the length of the Great Eastern steamship; the breadth of it would be 87 feet 6 inches; and the height of it would be 52 feet 6 inches; and the capacity of the ark, calculated in cubic feet, would be 2,500,000 feet. a proof that it must have had the capacity of nearly ten ships of the size of the Duke of Wellington warship, one of our largest line of battle ships. Again, Professor Hitchcock, the eminent Christian and geologist, says, "Allowing that there are a thousand species of mammalia, 600 kinds of birds, 2,000 kinds of reptiles, and 120,000 insects;"—an allowance vastly larger than that which I suggested last lecture, and perhaps more correct—then Professor Hitchcock says, "allow a million cubic feet for the mammalia," (that is, chiefly the four footed beasts,) 800,000 cubic feet for birds, 100,000 cubic feet for reptiles, and 100,000 feet for insects; and there would be half a million of cubic feet still left for Noah and his family;" forming a very large and respectable suite of cabins. So that when we take the actual facts of the case, the improbability is diminished to the merest trifle; and the certainty of course is that there was a provision, according to the historic record, be it true or be it false, adequate to all the demands and exigencies of the case.

Some writers, judging that the extinct species and those known by us, could not have had room in the ark, presume that the deluge was universal merely as to mankind, and that only a limited portion of the earth was inhabited. In his "Origines Sacrae," Bishop Stillingfleet adopts and defends the view of a partial deluge as far as the earth was concerned, but a universal one as to mankind. He thinks the design of preserving the animals, &c., in the ark was, afterwards to produce living and domestic animals for the use of man immediately after the flood. It was his opinion that the animals were not of course, destroyed in other parts of the world.

After the nicest examination and computation, and taking the dimensions with the greatest exactness, the most learned and accurate calculators, and those most conversant in the building of ships, conclude that, if the ablest mathematicians had been consulted about proportioning the several apartments in the Ark, they could not have done it with greater correctness than the account given in Genesis.

Jer. 3. 16. shall say no more a. of covenant

ARK of the COVENANT, a small chest or coffer, three feet nine inches in length, two feet three inches in breadth and two feet three inches in height, in which were contained the golden pot that had manna, Aaron's rod, and the tables of the covenant. The ark was deposited in the holiest place of the tabernacle. It was taken by the Philistines, and was detained twenty (some say forty) years at Kirjathjearim; but the people, being afflicted with emerods on account of it, returned it with divers presents. It was afterwards placed in the temple.

The lid or covering of the ark was called the propitiatory or mercy-seat; over which two figures were placed, called cherubims, with expanded wings of a peculiar form. Here the Shechinah rested both in the tabernacle and temple in a visible cloud: hence were issued the Divine oracles by an audible voice; and the high-priest appeared before this mercy-seat once every year on the great day of expiation; and the Jews, wherever they worshipped, turned their faces towards the place where the ark stood.

In the second temple there was also an ark, made of the same shape and dimensions with the first, and put in the same place, but without any of its contents and peculiar honours. It was used as a representative of the former on the day of expiation, and a repository of the original copy of the holy Scriptures, collected by Ezra and the men of the great synagogue after the captivity; and, in imitation of this, the Jews to this day, have a kind of ark in their synagogues, wherein their sacred books are kept.

Noah understood his ark to signify CHRIST; and the whole process the Lord appointed for the preservation of his people by the ARK referred to Christ. The Holy Ghost directed Peter to tell the church, that the like figure, even baptism, doth also now save us; not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience towards God, by the resurrection; 1 Peter iii.

20, 21. So that the ark and baptism, and all things connected with this deliverance of Noah and his family, all set forth Christ. Noah was saved from the water by the ark, as Christ, which that ark prefigured, saveth us. Not the baptism, no more than the waters of the flood saved Noah; for the waters would have destroyed Noah, and all with him, but for the ark. And all external institutions of every kind, be they what they may, if resting upon them, instead of resting wholly upon him, whom they signify, will destroy, instead of proving beneficial. The Holy Spirit, by Peter, calls it a figure; and the Church of God does well to call it no more. But the Church is not saved by figure, but in substance; and that is Christ; Isa. xlv. 24. Every thing but Christ is a shadow; He, and He only, is the substance; Prov. viii. 21; Heb. x. 1.

ARKITES, Ark'-ites.—A people of ancient Canaan, who settled in Phœnicia and Syria; Gen. x. 17.

ARM, the symbol of strength or power; Job. xxxviii. 15; Ps. x. 15; Jer. xlviii. 25; Ezek. xxx. 21. Hence it denotes God's infinite power; Ps. lxxxix. 13; xcvi. 1; Isa. liii. 1. 'Stretched out arm,' alludes to eastern warriors baring and stretching out the arm to enable them to fight; Exod. vi. 6; Isa. lii. 10.

ARM, 'break thou the arm of the wicked;' that is, his power and strength; Ps. x. 15.

ARM, 'made bare;' Isa. lii. 10. Arm expresses power: making bare, preparation for action, in allusion to the tucking up the long sleeve of the east. "The Lord hath made bare his holy arm is most lively; for the loose sleeve of the Arab shirt, as well as that of the outer garment, leaves the arm so completely free, that, in an instant, the left hand passing up the right arm makes it bare; and this is done when the soldier is about to strike with his sword, in order to give his right arm full play. The figure represents Jehovah as suddenly prepared to inflict some tremendous yet righteous judgment, so effectual, that all the ends of the world shall see the Salvation of God.

ARMAGEDDON, Ar-ma-ged'-don, the mountain of destruction.—Alluding to Megiddo, where Sisera and the host of Jabin were overthrown in the days of the Judges; Judg. v. 19. Situated at the foot of Mount Carmel, the scene of much slaughter. Hence referred to as the place where the church shall be exposed to great sufferings and imminent danger; but where God will destroy his enemies; Rev. xvi. 16.

ARMENIA, Ar-me'-ne-a.—A province of Asia, supposed to take its name from Aram; Isa. xxxvii. 38. It is a large country stretching north from Mesopotamia to the mountains of Tsheidir and Djanik, which separate it from the Euxine Sea. It has the Mediterranean on the south-west, the Black Sea on the north-west, and the Caspian Sea on the east, and its western boundary is about 600 miles east of Constantinople. It is an extensive table-land, having mountains of moderate height; the mountainous range of Ararat is very high. The Euphrates, the Tigris, the Araxes, and other rivers, have their source in Armenia. The people are in a state of degradation and corruption. It has recently been visited by two American missionaries, and they so represent it.

ARMONI, Ar'-mo-ny.—The son of Saul and Rizpah; he was hanged by the Gibeonites; 2 Sam. xxi. 8.

ARMOUR. The offensive armour of the Hebrews, consisted of swords, darts, lances, javelins, bows, arrows, and slings. The defensive armour consisted of helmets, cuirasses, bucklers, armour for the thighs, &c. 1 Sam. xvii. 54; 2 Kings iii. 21, &c. "Put on," says Paul, "the whole armour of God," that is, the shield of faith, or confidence in Christ, and in his grace and promises, which can effectually shield our souls from the fiery darts of Satan; the helmet, or hope of salvation, ever aspiring after heaven; the breast-plate of righteousness, or the righteousness of Jesus, which he wrought out for and imputes to those who love him. The girdle of truth strengthens the loins, and the gospel of peace shoes the feet; for all may be called to suffer in the cause of Christ. These are the defensive weapons; the only offensive weapon is the sword of the Spirit, that is, the Word of God. In 2 Cor. vi. 7, it is called the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, implying that in all circumstances, even in the worst, it is sufficient. It is the armour of light, Rom. xiii. 12, and thus calculated to vanquish the powers of darkness. The apostles were well armed with these weapons; they stood in the front of the battle, and Paul says, they were "not carnal, but mighty through God, to the pulling down of strong-holds," &c. 2 Cor. x. 4.

ARNAN, Ar'-nan, rejoicing, their ark.—One of the posterity of the patriarch Judah; 1 Chron. iii. 21.

ARNON, Ar'-non, rejoicing, their ark, the light of the sun.—A river, rising in the mountains of Gilead, east of Jerusalem, about 50 miles long; it flows on rapidly, and discharges its waters into the Dead Sea; Num. xxi. 24. It was formerly the boundary line between the land of Moab, and Canaan, east of the Jordan.

AROD, Ay'-rod, ruling, descending.

—A son of Gad, and father of the Arodites; Num. xxvi. 17.

ARODI, Ar'-o-dy, ruling, descending, domineering lion.—One of the sons of the patriarch Gad; Gen. xlvi. 16.

AROER, Ar'-o-er, heath, tamarisk, the nakedness of the skin.—A city on the borders of Moab and Ammon. Deut. ii. 36; iii. 12; Isa. xvii. 2. There were several cities of this name. See Josh. xiii. 25; Judges xi. 33; 1 Sam. xxx. 28.

ARPAD or ARPHAD, Ar'-pad or Ar'-fad, the light of redemption.—A city of Syria. Its site is not known. It was powerful, and it could not be far from Hamath; 2 Kings xviii. 34; Isa. x. 9.

ARPHAXAD, Ar-faks'-ad, one that heals or releases.—The son of Shem, and father of Salah; Gen. xi. 12.

ARRAY. This word sometimes respects clothing; Esther vi. 9. Sometimes it regards war, see 2 Sam. x. 9. Nebuchadnezzar arrayed himself as a shepherd with the land of Egypt, when he covered it with his troops; Jer. xliii. 12. The terrors of God set themselves in array when his judgments are like a numerous and formidable army; Job vi. 4.

ARROW, a missile weapon of offence, slender, pointed, and barbed, and shot with a bow. The Israelites learned its use from the Philistines, among whom we find no mention of it before that battle in which Saul fell; 1 Sam. xxxi. 3. Some think that when David came to the throne, he taught the use of the bow; 2 Sam. i. 18 and took some of the Philistine archers, named Cerethites, to be his body guard. Divination by arrows was a method of presaging events, used by the ancients; Ezek. xxi. 21 by writing the names of kings, towns, or countries, on arrows, which were put into a quiver, then shaken, and the arrow drawn with a name upon it, declared the will of the gods.

The arrows of God are the terrible apprehensions of his displeasure, which wound and torment the conscience; Deut. xxxii. 23; Job vi. 4; Psalms xxxviii. 2. And his various judgments, thunder, lightning, tempests, famine, and every other distress; 2 Sam. xxii. 15; Ezek. v. 16; Hab. iii. 11; Lam. iii. 12. His word and spiritual influence, which was sharp and powerful in piercing and turning the hearts of men; Ps. xlv. 5. The arrows of wicked men are their malicious purposes; Ps. xi. 2. Their false, abusive, and slanderous words; Prov. xxv. 18; Jer. ix. 8; Ps. lxiv. 3; lvii. 4; Prov. xxvi. 18.

ARROWS, 'as arrows in the hand of a mighty man; so are children,' &c., Ps. cxxvii. 4. The orientals are accustomed to call brave and valiant sons, the 'arrows and darts' of their parents because they are able to defend them.

ARTAXERXES, Ar-taks-erks'-ees, great king, or silence of light—1. A king who obstructed the building of the temple, Ezra iv. 7—24. He usurped the empire after the death of Cambyses, pretending to be Smerdis, son of Cyrus, whom Cambyses had put to death, B. C. 522.—2. A king of Persia, who reigned 40 years, and died B. C. 424 or 425. In the seventh year of his reign he permitted Ezra and his countrymen who were willing, to return into Judea. This king is supposed to have been Artaxerxes Longimanus, the same who, about 13 years afterwards, allowed Nehemiah to return and rebuild Jerusalem.

ARTS,—'curious arts,' 'magical arts,' such as sleight of hand, and other methods of deceiving and cheating the vulgar; Acts xix. 19.

ARVAD, Ar'-vad.—A city of Phœnicia, situated in a small island south of Tyre; Ezek. xxvii. 11. It was celebrated for the immense number of its buildings, which, in some respects, surpassed those of Rome—for liberty—skill in manufactures and the arts—for enterprise and success in naval commerce. Arvad is now a deserted ruin.

ARUBOTH, Ar'-u-both.—A city or country belonging to the tribe of Judah; 1 Kings iv. 10.

ARUMAH, A-rew'-mah, or A-roo'-mah, high, exalted.—A city near Shechem, where Abimelech dwelt; Judg. ix. 41.

ARZA, Ar'-zah.—Governor of Tirzah, formerly a capital of Samaria; 1 Kings xvi. 9.

ASA, Ay'-sah, physician, cure.—The son and successor of Abijam, king of Judah: he began to reign A. M. 3049, and B. C. 955. He acted at the beginning of his reign with great wisdom and piety, by expelling the Sodomites, breaking the idols, and demolishing their altars, in all the cities of Judah. But in the latter part of his reign, he sent large presents to Benhadad, king of Syria, requesting his assistance against Baasha, king of Israel. For which application, as implying a distrust of God's power and goodness, to help him, he was reproved by the prophet Hanani; with which reproof he was so exasperated, that he put the prophet in chains, and at the same time gave orders for the execution of many of his friends. At last he grew extremely peevish and passionate, which perhaps might arise from the acuteness of his disorder, supposed to be a severe gout, which killed him, A. M. 3,090, in the forty-first year of his reign. He was succeeded by his son Jehoshaphat.

ASHAEL, As'-a-hel, the work or creature of God.—The son of Zeuriah, and brother of Joab. He was killed by Abner, in the battle of Gibeon; 2 Sam. ii. 18, 19.

ASAI AH, As-a-i'-ah, the Lord hath wrought.—A servant of king Josiah, sent by him to consult Huldah, the prophetess, concerning the book of the law; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 20.—A prince of the tribe of Simeon; 1 Chron. iv. 36.—A prince of the tribe of Levi; 1 Chron. vi. 30.

ASAPH, Ay'-saf, one that assembles.—Father of Joah; 2 Kings xviii. 18.—A Levite celebrated for his skill in music in the days of David. This name is prefixed to several Psalms; he was the son of Barachias; 1 Chron. vi. 39.

ASARELAH, As-a-re'-lah, blessedness of God.—Son of Asaph, a singer in the temple; 1 Chron. xxv. 2.

ASCENSION of CHRIST, his visible elevation to heaven. The ascension of Jesus Christ was not only pre-signified by many Scripture types, but also by many remarkable Scripture prophecies; Ps. xlvi. 5; cx. 1; Dan. vii. 13, 14; Mic. ii. 13; Ps. lxviii. 18.

The evidences of his ascension were numerous. The disciples saw him ascend; Acts i. 9. 10. Two angels testified that he did ascend; Acts i. 11. Stephen, Paul, and John, saw him in his ascended state; Acts vii. 55, 56; ix; Rev. i. The marvellous descent of the Holy Spirit demonstrated it; John xvi. 7, 14; Acts ii. 33. The terrible overthrow and dispersion of the Jewish nation is a standing proof of it; John viii. 21; Matt. xxvi. 64.

The time of his ascension. It was forty days after his resurrection. He continued so many days on earth, that he might give many repeated proofs of his resurrection; Acts i. 3; that he might instruct his followers in every thing which pertained to the abolishment of the Jewish ceremonies; Acts i. 3; and that he might open to them the Scriptures concerning himself, and renew their commission to preach the gospel; Acts i. 5. 6; Mark xvi. 15.

The manner of his ascension. It was from Mount Olivet to heaven; Acts i. 12; not in appearance only, but in reality and truth; visibly and locally; a real motion of his human nature; sudden, swift, glorious, and in a triumphant manner. He was parted from his disciples while he was solemnly blessing them; and multitudes of angels attended him with shouts of praise; Ps. lxviii. 17; xlvi. 5, 6.

The effects or ends of Christ's ascension were, 1st, To fulfil the prophecies and types concerning it. 2nd, To take upon him more openly the exercise of his kingly office. 3rd, To receive gifts for men both ordinary and extraordinary; Ps. lxviii. 18. 4th, To open the way into heaven for his people; Heb. x. 19, 20. 5th, To assure the saints of their ascension also; John xiv. 1, 2.

ASHBEL, Ash'-bel, an old fire. — The second son of Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 1; Gen xlvi. 21.

ASHDOD, Ash'-dod, inclination, pillage. — Azoth, according to the Vulgate; or Azotus, according to the Greek. A city of the tribe of Judah, formerly possessed by the Philistines, and rendered famous by the temple of their god Dagon. It lies upon the Mediterranean Sea, about nine or ten miles north of Gaza. Situated on the road from Syria to Egypt, it became a strong place, and the possession of it was deemed very important. Hence it was secured by the Assyrians before they invaded Egypt. It is now in a state of ruin; fragments of columns, capitals, and cornices of marble, lie on the ground, yet it still abounds with fine old olive-trees, and with almost every kind of fruit and vegetables; Josh. xv. 47. Modern name, Shdood.

ASHDOTH-PISGAH, Ash'-doth-piz-gah, inclination, eminence. — A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Reuben; Deut. iii. 17.

ASHER, Ash'-er, blessedness. — The son of Jacob and Zilpah. The province allotted to this tribe was a maritime one, stretching along the coast, from Sidon on the north, to mount Carmel on the south; Gen. xxx. 13.

ASHES, the earthy part of wood, and combustible bodies, remaining after they are burnt. To repent in sackcloth and ashes, is frequently used to express mourning for sin, any great calamity or distress, the consequence of sin. A ley, or lustral water, made with the ashes of an heifer, sacrificed on the great day of expiation, was used in purifications; Num. xix. 17. To be dust and ashes, is the humble confession of Abraham to God; Gen. xviii. 27. To return to dust, is the sentence passed by God on the transgression of man; Gen. iii. 19; Job xxxiv. 15.

ASHES, Lev. 4. 12. carry bullock where a.
Num. 4. 13. take a. from altar
19. 9. man clean shall gather a.
2 Sam. 13. 19. Tamar put a. on head

Ps. 102. 9. I have eaten a. like bread
Is. 44. 20. he feedeth on a.

Mal. 4. 3. wicked shall be a. under feet

ASHES, — 'eaten ashes,' a metaphor, meaning lived on grief, Psalms cii. 9.

ASHES, — 'he feedeth on ashes;' proverbial for bestowing labour in vain; Is. 44. 20.

ASHIMA, Ash'-e-mah, the fire of the sun. — The name of an idol worshipped by the people of Hamath; 2 Kings xvii. 30.

ASHKENAZ, Ash'-ke-naz, a fire that distils or spreads. — The eldest son of Gomer, and grandson of Japheth, who gave his name to the country in the north and north-west of Asia; Gen. x. 3.

ASHNA, Ash'-nah. — A city; Josh. xv. 33.

ASHPENAZ, Ash'-pe-naz. — A governor of Nebuchadnezzar's eunuchs. Dan. i. 3.

ASHTAROTH, Ash'-ta-roth, stocks, riches. — The city of Og, king of Bashan; Josh. ix. 10. It was one of the chief cities of, and is said to be the same as the present Mezereib on the route of pilgrims from Damascus to Mecca.

ASHTORETH, Ash'-to-reth, stocks, riches. — Or Astarte, a goddess of the Zidonians, an image of the moon, worshipped as the queen of heaven; Judges ii. 13; x. 6; Deut. i. 4; 1 Kings xi. 33.

ASHURITES, Ash'-ur-ites.—People of Assyria; 2 Sam. ii. 9.

ASIA, Ay'-she-a, muddy, boggy.—One of the four great divisions of the earth, situate between 25 and 148 degrees of longitude east from London, and between the equator, and 72 degrees of north latitude, bounded by the frozen ocean on the north, by the Pacific ocean on the east, by the Indian ocean on the south, by the Red sea on the south-west, and by the Mediterranean and Euxine seas on the west and north-west, being four thousand eight hundred miles long from east to west, and four thousand three hundred broad from north to south. The ancient Hebrews were perfectly unacquainted with the present division of the earth, and the word Asia does not occur in the Old Testament; but frequently in the books of the Maccabees, and in the New Testament. That part which lies between Mount Taurus on the east, and the Hellespont on the west, is now called Asia the Less, or Natolia, from its eastern situation with respect to Constantinople, a word curtailed from Anatolia. Asia, in these passages Asia Minor; viz. Acts xix. 26, 27; xx. 4, 16, 18; xxvii. 2. In the following passages, Roman or Proconsular Asia, viz. Acts. ii. 9; vi. 9; xix. 10, 22; 2 Tim. i. 15; 1 Pet. i. 1; Rev. i. 4, 11. Asia Minor contained the provinces of Bithynia, Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Cilicia, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Lycaonia, Phrygia, Mysia, Troas, (all of which are mentioned in the New Testament,) Lydia, Ionia, Æolus, (which are sometimes included under Lydia,) Caria, Doris, and Lycia. Asia Minor was that part of the world most peculiarly distinguished by Heaven above all others. There the first man was created; there the patriarchs lived, the law was given to Moses, and the greatest and most celebrated nations were formed there; thence the first founders of cities and nations in other quarters of the world brought their colonies. Lastly, in Asia Jesus Christ appeared; where he wrought the salvation of mankind, died and rose again; and thence the light of the Gospel was diffused all over the world. Laws, arts, sciences, and religion, almost all, had their origin in Asia.

ASIA.—"All they which dwell in Asia heard the word of the Lord," Acts xix. 10, may mean that all classes of men in Asia heard the gospel, and not that the word was preached in every place, though the Apostles itinerated very extensively.

ASIEL, Ay'-se-el, the work of God.—One of the posterity of the patriarch Simeon; 1 Chron. iv. 35.

ASK,—"he promised whatsoever she would ask;" Matt. xiv. 7. A foolish custom then of Eastern monarchs with favourites; Esther v. 3, 6.

ASKELON, As'-ke-lon, weight, balance, fire of infamy. A city in the land of the Philistines, between Azoth and Gaza, near the Mediterranean Sea, about 65 miles from Jerusalem. Now a poor village called Ascalaam; Judg. i. 18; 1 Sam. vi. 17.

ASLEEP, Songs 7. 9. lips of those a. to speak
Matt. 25. 40; Mark 14. 40. findeth disciples a.
 1 Thess. 4. 13. ignorant concerning them a.

ASMAVETH, As'-mav-eth, a strong death.—One of king David's worthies. See Aznureth.

ASNAH, As'-nah.—One who returned from the captivity; Ezra ii. 50.

ASNAPPER, As-nap'-per, unhappiness, fruitless.—The king of Assyria, (supposed to be Esar-haddon) who sent the Cutheans into the country of the ten tribes; Ezra iv. 10.

ASP. Supposed to mean the bæten of the Arabs; a very venomous serpent, whose poison produces an universal gangrene, and kills in a few hours. It is spotted with black and white and is about a foot long, and half an inch thick; Deut. xxxii. 33; Job. xx. 14, 16; Ps. lviii. 4; xci. 13; Isa. xi. 8. It is the aspic of the ancients, and is so called now by the learned of Cyprus. For an infant child to play upon the hole of such a venomous serpent, would seem to be most presumptuous; hence the force and beauty of the prophet's description of a "sucking child playing on the hole of the asp," &c. Isa. xi. 8, to represent the peace and security of the reign of Christ.

ASPATHA, As'-pa-tha.—The third son of Haman, who was hung; Esther ix. 7.

ASPHALTITES, Lake of.—See Dead Sea.

ASRIEL, As'-re-el, the beatitude of God.—The son of Gilead; Num. xxvi. 31.—The son of Manasseh; Josh. xvii. 2.

ASS.—There are various species of this animal in the east, far larger and more beautiful than those of Europe, and more valuable than ours; they were therefore used for travelling, and purposes of state; Gen. xii. 16; xxii. 3; Judg. x. 4; Zech. ix. 9; Matt. xxi. 2—7.

ASS, 'white'; these are the finest species, perfectly white. They sell at, and are hired at a much higher price than the others; Judg. v. 10. In Turkey they are ridden by the most honourable females. Ass 'wild'; the wild ass is probably the Onager of the ancients. It is taller and more dignified than the domestic ass, and has an unconquerable passion for liberty; Gen. xvi. 12; Job xxxix. 5.

In 2 Kings vi. 25, we read of a great famine, when "an ass's head was sold for eighty pieces of silver." No extremity could compel the Jews to eat any part of this animal for food, therefore the meaning must be a vessel containing bread, a stated measure, or pile. In 1 Sam. xvi. 20, when it is said that Jesse sent to Saul "an ass of bread," laden with, has been added by our translators. The Septuagint renders gomer, arton, a chomor of bread. So we find in the Greek poet Sosibius, "He ate three times in the space of a single day, three great asses of bread," arton treis onous.

In Gen. xvi. 12, it is predicted of Ishmael that he should "be para adam, a wild-ass man;" rough, untaught, and libertine, as a wild-ass. So of Ephraim; Hosca viii. 9, he is called "a solitary wild ass by himself," or, perhaps, a solitary wild ass of the desert. The Arabians use the phrase to the present day, 'the wild ass of the desert' to describe an obstinate, indocile, and contumacious person.

ASS'S HEAD.—"And there was a great famine in Samaria: and, behold they besieged it until an ass's head was sold for four-score pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung for five pieces of silver;" 2 Kings vi. 25.

Respecting the ass's head; the piece of silver was probably the drachm, worth about seven pence three farthings of our money; the whole amounting to about two pounds nine shillings. The cab was a sort of quart measure. Dove's dung was a sort of parched pulse; so called from its shape and colour; it is still used.

ASSUAGE, Gen. 8. 1; Job 16. 5. 6.

ASSUR, As’-sur.—Assyria is so called; Ezra iv. 2.

ASSURANCE is the firm persuasion we have of the certainty of any thing, or a certain expectation of something future.

Assurance of the Understanding is a well-grounded knowledge of divine things founded on God’s word; Col. ii. 2.—Assurance of Faith does not relate to our personal interest in Christ, but consists in a firm belief of the revelation that God has given us of Christ in his word, with an entire dependance on him; Heb. x. 22.—Assurance of hope is a firm expectation that God will grant us the complete enjoyment of what he has promised; Heb. vi. 11.

ASSURE. To make certain, confirm; Lev. xxvii. 19. Also to embolden; John iii. 19.

ASSYRIA, As-sir’-e-a, happy.—An ancient kingdom of Asia, deriving its name from Ashur, who built its capital, Nineveh. It included all the countries and nations from the Mediterranean Sea on the west to the river Indus on the east. Its chief seat was on the banks of the Euphrates or Tigris. By degrees it included Media, Persia, Chaldea, Mesopotamia, Syria, Palestine, and; part of Arabia. It is probable that Chedorlaomer conquered all the countries between the Euphrates and Egypt; Gen. xiv. 4–7. That his power over them was of short duration, may be concluded, because the first allusion made to Assyria in the records of Israel, which often refer to the neighbouring nations, is in the reign of Menathem, (B. C. 761.) king of the ten tribes, who were subdued by Pul the Assyrian king. Twenty years later Tiglath-pileser appears a powerful sovereign; and after the lapse of eighteen years, his successor Shalmaneser, carried Israel captive, and peopled their land by foreign races. Sennacherib was, perhaps, more aspiring than the able sovereigns whom he succeeded. He also sought to conquer Egypt and Judea, but there he was humbled and mortified. On his return to Assyria he was assassinated by his sons. Probably he is the Sennacherib of the Greeks, whose unsuccessful expedition against Egypt is mentioned by Herodotus. Nineveh was the metropolis of Assyria, and its vast extent and population indicate the magnificence and power of its sovereigns. It was taken and destroyed by the Medes, and with it the Assyrian power ceased for ever. From this period, the history of Assyria is merged in that of the four great empires; Gen. ii. 14; 2 Kings xv. 29; xvi. 7.

ASTRAY, Ps. 119. 176; Is. 53. 6; Matt 18. 12; Luke 15. 4; 1 Pet. 2. 25.

ASTROLOGERS. People who impose on the credulity of the vulgar by pretending to foretell things to come. The science is said to have been originated in Chaldea. Astrologers were in high esteem among the Babylonians; Dan. i. 20; ii. 2; and other nations; Dan. ii. 10. And also with the ungodly Jews; Isa. xlvi. 13, 14, 15. The Scriptures style them star-gazers, monthly prognosticators, magicians, sorcerers, Chaldeans, soothsayers, and wise-men.

ASUPPIM, A-sup'-pim, gatherings.—The Treasury place of the temple of Jerusalem; 1 Chron. xxvi. 15.

ASYNCRITUS, A-sin'-kre-tus, incomparable.—An individual mentioned Rom. xvi. 14.

ATAD, Ay'-tad, a thorn.—The threshing floor, where the sons of Jacob and the Egyptians who accompanied them, mourned for that patriarch; Gen. 1. 10, 11.

ATARAH, At'-a-rah, a crown.—One of the wives of Jerahmeel, the mother of Onan; 1 Chron. ii. 26.

ATAROTH, At'-ta-roth, crowns.—The names of two cities, one in the tribe of Gad; Num. xxxii. 3, 34; the other on the frontiers of Ephraim; Josh. xvi. 7.

ATHACH, Ay'-thak, thy hour, thy time.—A city in the tribe of Judah; 1 Sam. xxx. 30.

ATHALIAH, Ath-a-i'-ah, the hour of the Lord.—A son of Uzziah, of the tribe of Judah; Neh. xi. 4.

ATHALIAH, Ath-a-ly'-ah, the time of the Lord.—The daughter of Omri, king of Samaria, and wife of Jehoram, king of Judah; 2 Kings 11.

ATHENS, Ath'-ens, without increase, of Minerva.—Athens, anciently the capital of Attica, is situated on a beautiful plain, in the finest part of Greece, on the Gulf of the Ægean Sea, which runs up to the Morea, and is built on a peninsula formed by the junction of the rivulets Cephissus and Ilissus. It is about 250 miles to the south of Berea, 35 miles to the east of Corinth, 100 miles north-west of Sparta, and upwards of 300 south-west of Constantinople.

It was founded by Cecrops and an Egyptian colony, 1550 years before Christ; and in the most ancient times was called Cecropia, from the name of its founder, which name, in after times, was retained merely by the Acropolis. Under the government of Erichonius, it received the name of Athens, probably from Minerva, who was called by the Greeks Athena. At its first foundation it only occupied the eminence where the Acropolis or citadel subsequently stood; but in progress of time the plain below was irregularly filled with buildings, which constituted the site of the ancient, as it now does that, of the modern city.

The way to the Acropolis was through the Propylæa, a magnificent gateway, adorned with two wings, and two temples most beautifully sculptured and painted. Marble steps led to the summit of the hill, on which were erected the temples of the guardian divinities of Athens. On the left was the temple of Pallas Athene (Minerva,) containing a column, said to have fallen from heaven, and an olive tree said to have sprung spontaneously from the earth at the command of the goddess. On the right the Parthenon reared its lofty head, the noblest triumph of Grecian architecture, and the admiration of the world. It met the eye of the traveller from whatsoever part he came, as its ruins do now. It was built of white marble, and was about 100 feet wide, 226 feet long, and 70 feet high. It abounded with columns of the most elaborate character. The architrave along the exterior of the nave, was beautifully sculptured with the representation of a procession in honour of Minerva. In the temple stood a beautiful statue of Minerva, celebrated for its size, (nearly 40 feet high) the richness of its materials, and its exquisite workmanship. It was made of gold and ivory, and was carved by the celebrated Phidias; and the same precious materials were in the decorations of the sculptures which adorned the exterior of the temple. The goddess was represented standing, covered with her regis, holding in one hand a lance, and in the other a figure of victory. The groups in the pediments, the work of Phidias, even in their mutilated remains, are the admiration of all lovers of the arts. At the foot of the Acropolis, on one side was the Odeum, or Music-hall, and the theatre of Bacchus; on the other side was the Prytaneum, where the chief magistrates and most meritorious citizens were entertained at a table at the public expense.

After Paul's sudden departure from Berea he proceeded to Athens, whose population he found plunged in such gross idolatry, that the number of idols is said to have exceeded thirty thousand, so that it came to be no uncommon expression "that it was easier to find a god than a man in Athens." Hesiod says that they amounted to 30,000. At the period of the Apostle's arrival a large portion of the people's time was occupied in inquiring for and reporting news, curious to know every thing, and divided in opinion concerning religion and happiness. The great Apostle of the Gentiles taking opportunities here to preach Jesus Christ, was carried before the judges of the tribunal, called the Areopagus, where he gave an illustrious testimony to the truth, and exhibited a remarkable example of powerful reasoning; Act xvii.

Mr. Stevens, an American traveller, and who recently visited the spot, says,—“Passing under the Arch of Adrian, outside the gate, on the plain toward the Ilissus, we came to the ruined Temple of Jupiter Olympus, perhaps once the most magnificent in the world. It was built of the purest white marble, having a front of nearly two hundred feet, and more than three hundred and fifty in length, and contained one hundred and twenty columns, sixteen of which are all that now remain; and these, fluted and having rich Corinthian capitals, tower more than sixty feet above the plain, perfect as when they were reared.

A magnificent propylon of the finest white marble, the blocks of the largest size ever laid by human hands, and having a wing of the same material on each side, stands at the entrance. Though broken and ruined, the world contains nothing like it even now. If my first impressions do not deceive me, the proudest portals of Egyptian temples suffer in comparison. Passing this magnificent propylon, and ascending several steps, we reached the Parthenon, or ruined Temple of Minerva; an immense white marble skeleton, the noblest monument of architectural genius which the world ever saw. Standing on the steps of this temple, we had around us all that is interesting in association, and all that is beautiful in art * * Pericles, with the illustrious throng of Grecian heroes, orators, and sages, had ascended there to worship; and Cicero and the noblest of the Romans had gone there to admire. * * The great temple stands on the very summit of the Acropolis, elevated far above the Propylæa and the surrounding edifices, Its length is two hundred and eight feet, and breadth one hundred and two. At each end were two rows of eight Doric columns, thirty-four feet high and six feet in diameter, and on each side were thirteen more. The whole temple within and without was adorned with the most splendid works of art, by the first sculptors in Greece; and Phidias himself wrought the statue of the goddess, of ivory and gold, twenty-six cubits high, having on the top of her helmet a sphinx, with griffins on each of the sides; and on the breast a head of Medusa wrought in ivory, and a figure of victory, about four cubits high, holding a spear in her hand and a shield lying at her feet. Until the latter part of the seventeenth century, this magnificent temple, with all its ornaments, existed entire."

Mr. Gadsby, whose recent travels are most enchanting, thus describes Mars Hill. "It is a limestone rock, having steps cut in it, leading to small platforms, overlooking the space below. To these platforms I ascended. On one of them Paul stood when he delivered that memorable oration; Acts xvii. 22, 23, &c. "Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious." From this platform, he would have a view of the temples, then perfect in their majesty, above him, and of his audience, possibly consisting of thousands, below. Casting his eyes upwards, and pointing to those dazzling and stupendous buildings, he exclaimed, "God dwelleth not in temples made with hands." And then turning towards the harbour, in which were the ships, with the signs of their gods on their masts, silvered and gilt, and of which he would have a view, and referring also to the idols in the temples and the colossal image of Minerva in the open air, he added, "We ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or stone, graven by art and man's device." How suitable the discourse, how expressive every word!

Of the Areopagus, he says, "It is at the top of Mars' Hill. The ascent is by steps cut in the rock. On the summit are several platforms and seats, on which the council used to sit. The judges who formed the council were called Areopagites, and the council of the Upper Council. This council constituted not merely a civil but a sacred court, having supreme control over the religion and morals of the state. The introduction of new deities, the regulation of public worship, and the education of youth were their peculiar care. By their wisdom they were supposed to be able to save the country from danger when even the gods had failed. One writer says it was an ingenious device, to connect the court of the Areopagus with the worship of the people. And so it was; but neither the Greek nor the Roman priests are one whit behind their Pagan ancestors in their species of ingenuity. Dionysius, the Areopagite, was called under Paul's ministry; Acts xvii. 34.

He visited the Stadium, and says, "The Stadium is of a semi-elliptical shape, something like a horse-shoe, and is close to the river. The seats were originally of white marble, and would accommodate 25,000 people. These are now all destroyed. Here also is a subterraneous passage, through which the vanquished made their escape, as the jeers of the people knew no bounds. Plato says, "At first they shoot forth impetuously, but at the end of the race they are smothered with ridicule, their ears flagging on their shoulders, and themselves slinking off uncrowned." The victors were usually rewarded with a crown or wreath, made of olive leaves, innumerable flowers were showered upon them, and they were conveyed to their homes in triumphal chariots, amid the acclamations of the people. A white stone was also sometimes given them, on which were inscribed their names and the value of the prizes they had won. This custom is probably referred to in the Revelation: "To him that overcometh will

I give a white stone, and in the stone a new name written;" ii. 17; "And I will write upon him the name of my God, and my new name;" iii. 12. The Council of the Areopagus at Athens also gave their judgments by means of stones. A white stone was for acquittance and a black stone for condemnation; so that when the Lord says he will give a white stone, it is intended as a symbol of acquittal, having overcome those who opposed him."

When not engaged in war with their neighbours, or in controlling their own rulers, the Athenians devoted their attention to a vast variety of pastimes, such as the feast of Minerva, Bacchus, and those of Eleusis—Auguries, the greatest reproach of human reason—Oracles, a blinding of the faculties of the mind, and by which a thousand frauds and imposture were daily practised—games, and combats—races of various kinds; and above all, their ardour and eagerness in theatrical amusements.

The power of this people consisted in their ships amounting to 300—the cavarly, archers, and pikemen, who were ready at all times to defend the country, not reckoning the troops that guarded the walls of Athens, and the ports of Attica—they could call to their assistance a thousand tributary towns, and command the fleets of Chios, Lesbos, and Corcyra. And their treasury contained 9,700 talents, besides a great quantity of gold in the temples of the gods.

From its first foundation till its overthrow it had different kinds of government—Monarchic until the death of Codrus, when that species of power was abolished, and the state governed by thirteen perpetual, and 317 years after, by seven decennial, and lastly after an anarchy of three years, by annual magistrates called Archons. Under this democracy, the Athenians signalized themselves by their valour in the field, their munificence, and the cultivation of the fine arts.

attention to the education of their youth, both as regards the body and the mind—their Academies were held in great reputation, so much so, that the Romans, in the more polished ages of their republic sent their youths to finish their education at Athens—the fame which their schools had acquired under Socrates and Plato, was maintained by their degenerate and less learned successors: and they flourished, though with diminished lustre, till an edict of the Emperor Justinian suppressed with the Roman Consulship, the philosophical meetings of the Academy.

They were considered as possessing such very high military qualities that Xerxes, when he invaded Greece, chiefly directed his arms against Athens—these qualities were nobly exhibited in the battles of Marathon, of Salamis, of Platea, and of Mycale; from these successes they became haughty and arrogant—distinguished for their love of liberty, their good men were the most just and equitable in the world; while their bad citizens could not be surpassed, for impiety, perfidiousness, or cruelty.—They were easily enraged, and soon appeased—ungrateful to their best citizens—humane to their enemies—possessed of an insatiable curiosity, and famed for their eloquence, learning, talents, wit, patronage, and knowledge of the arts and sciences; but notwithstanding all these they were sunk in the grossest superstition and idolatry.

ATONEMENT. The Hebrew word signifies covering, and intimates that our offences are, by a proper atonement, covered from the avenging justice of God. Our English word seems to be thus formed at-one-ment. The word has a variety of significations, such as, reconciliation, satisfaction, propitiation, and expiation. In order to understand the manner wherein Christ becomes an atonement, we should consider the following propositions, 1. The great God having made man, appointed to govern him by a wise and righteous law, wherein glory and honour, life and immortality, are the designed rewards for perfect obedience; but tribulation and wrath, pain and death, are the appointed recompense to those who violate this law; Gen. iii; Rom. ii. 6, 16; Rom. i. 32.—2. All mankind have broken this law; Rom. iii. 23; Rom. v. 12.—3. God, in his infinite wisdom, did not think fit to pardon sinful man, without some compensation for his broken law; for, 1. If the great Ruler of the world had pardoned the sins of men without any satisfaction, then his laws might have seemed not worth the vindicating.—2. Men would have been tempted to persist in the rebellion, and to repeat their old offences.—3. His forms of government among his creatures might have appeared as a matter of small importance.—4. God had a mind to make a very illustrious display both of his justice and grace among mankind; on these accounts he would not pardon sin without a satisfaction.—5. Man, sinful man, is not able to make any satisfaction to God for his own sins, neither by his labours, nor by his sufferings; Eph. ii. 1, 8, 9.—6. Though man be incapable to satisfy for his own violation of the law, yet God would not suffer all mankind to perish.—7. Because God intended to make a full display of the terrors of his justice, and of his divine resentment for the violation of his law, therefore he appointed his own Son to satisfy for the breach of it, by becoming a proper sacrifice of expiation or atonement; Gal. iii. 10, 13.—8. The Son of God being immortal, could not sustain all these penalties of the law which man had broken without taking the mortal nature of man upon him, without assuming flesh and blood;

Heb. ii. 13, 14.—9. The Divine Being having received such ample satisfaction for sin by the sufferings of his own Son, can honourably forgive his creature man, who was the transgressor; Rom. iii. 25, 26.

Now that this doctrine is true will appear, if we consider, 1. That an atonement for sin, or an effectual method to answer the demands of an offended God, is the first great blessing guilty man stood in need of; Mic. vi. 6, 7.—2. The very first discoveries of grace which were made to man after his fall implied in them something of atonement for sin, and pointed to the propitiation Christ has now made; Gen. iii. 15.—3. The train of ceremonies which were appointed by God in the Jewish church are plain significations of such an atonement; 2 Cor. iii; Col. ii. 7, 8, 9; Heb. x.—4. Some of the prophecies confirm and explain the first promise, and show that Christ was to die as an atoning sacrifice for the sins of men; Dan. ix. 24—26; Isa. liii.—5. Our Saviour himself taught us the doctrine of the atonement for sin by his death; Matt. xx. 28; John vi. 51; Luke xxii. 19.—6. The terrors of soul, the consternation and inward agonies which our blessed Lord sustained a little before his death, were a sufficient proof that he endured punishments in his soul which were due to sin; Mark xiv. 33; Heb. v. 7.—7. This doctrine is declared, and confirmed, and explained at large, by the apostles in their writings; 1 Cor. xv. 3; Eph. i. 7; 1 John ii. 2, &c. &c.—8. This was the doctrine that was witnessed to the world by the amazing gifts of the Holy Ghost, which attended the gospel.

BAAL, Bay'-al, Bel or Belus, denoting Lord.—An idol of the Chaldeans and Phœnicians, Canaanites, &c. The Phœnicians worshipped the sun under this name. The term Baal, an appellative, served at first to denote the true God, amongst those who adhered to the true religion. But when various nations degenerated into idolatry, they retained this name with some epithet annexed to it, as stated hereafter. As to the precise being or thing presented under the term Baal, there is considerable difference of opinion. It appears to have been one of the heavenly bodies. Probably the sun, as Ashtaroth is thought to have been the moon: or rather neither, originally, the astral spirit residing in one of them.

The gods, Baal-berith, worshipped by the Shechemites, Judg. viii. 33; ix. 4, 46; Baal-peor, the god of the Moabites; Numb. xxv. 1—9; and Baal-zebub, the god of the Philistines at Ekron; are probably the same god under various modifications.

BAALAH, Ba'-al-ah, her idol, a spouse.—The city called Kirjathjearim, Josh. xv. 9; 1 Chron. xiii. 6.

BAALATH, Bay'-a-lath, proud lord.—A city of Dan, Josh. xix. 44.

BAAL-HAMON, Bay'-al-hay'-mon, a populous place.—Name of the place of Solomon's vineyard. Song viii. 11.

BAAL-HANAN, Bay'-al-han'-an. He who succeeded Saul as King of Edom, Gen. xxxvi. 38; 1 Chron. i. 49.

BAAL-HAZOR, Bay'-al-hay'-zor, lord of court.—A city in the tribe of Ephraim, where Absalom kept his flocks, and where he murdered his brother Amnon, 2 Sam. xiii. 23.

BAAL-HERMON, Bay'-al-hermon, the possessor of destruction.—A city of the tribe of Issachar 1 Chron. v. 23.

BAALE, Bay'-al-e, my Lord.—The place from whence David fetched the ark. 2 Sam. vi. 2.

BAALIM, Bay'-al-im, lords.—The plural of Baal. Judges ii. 11, &c.

BAALIS, Bay'-a-lis, a rejoicing.—The king of the Ammonites; he sent Ishmael to kill Gedaliah. Jer. xl. 14.

BAAL-MEON, Bay'-al-me'-on, the idol, the master of the house.—A city in the tribe of Reuben. Num. xxxii. 38.

BAAL-PEOR, Bay'-al-pe'-or, master of the opening.—One of the titles of Baal, perhaps derived from Mount Peor, one of the most celebrated seats of his worship. Some, however, think that it was a goddess similar to Osiris, Venus, or Adonis, whose worship was characterized by its obscene impurities. Num. xxv. 1—3.

BAAL-PERAZIM, Bay'-al-per-azim, master of divisions.—The place where David routed the Philistines; 2 Sam. v. 20; about 3 miles southwest of Jerusalem. The name was given in consequence of the victory, and hence the allusion, "The Lord shall rise up as in Mount Perazim."

BAAL-SHALISHA, Bay'-al-shal'-e-shah, the third idol.—A place about 15 miles from Diaspolis; 2 Kings iv. 42.

BAAL-TAMAR, Bay'-al-tay'-mar, lord of the palm-tree.—A place near Gibeon, where the children of Israel fought those of the tribe of Benjamin. Judges xx. 33.

2 Kings i. 2. This deity is called the prince of the devils. Matt. xii. 24.

BAAL-ZEPHON, Bay'-al-ze'-fon, lord of the watch.—Probably the temple of some idol, which served at the same time for a place of observation, and a beacon for sailors and travellers. Exod. xiv. 2, 9.

BAANA, Bay'-a-nah, in affliction, answering.—The son of Ahihud, governor of Taanach, &c. 1 Kings iv. 12.

BAANAH, Bay'-a-nah. in the answer, in affliction.—An officer belonging to Ishbosheth, 2 Sam. iv. 2. Also one of Solomon's purveyors. 1 Kings iv. 16.

BAARA, Bay'-a-rah, a flame, a purging. 1 Chron. viii. 8.

BAASEIAH, Bay-a-sy'-ah, making or pressing together.—One of the ancestors of Asaph. 1 Chron. vi. 40.

BAASHA, Bay'-a-shah, in the work, he that lays waste.—The son of Ahijah, and commander-in-chief of Nadab's armies. 1 Kings xv. 27, &c. Baasha killed his master treacherously at Gibbethon and usurped his throne, which he possessed 24 years. His reign was filled with war and treachery. To make his throne secure, he massacred all the relatives of his predecessor. This barbarous conduct fulfilled the prophecy denounced against the house of Jeroboam, by Ahijah the prophet, 1 Kings xiv. 1, &c.

BAASHA.—In the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa, Baasha, king of Israel, &c. Baasha died in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of Asa, and therefore could not have come against Judah in the thirty-sixth. Hence Archbishop Usher, agreeably to the marginal reading, reckons it to be the thirty-sixth year after the division of the kingdom into Israel and Judah; 2 Chron. xvi. 1.

founded by the descendants of Noah, in the plains of Shinar, about 100 years after the deluge. "And they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and burn them throughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar;" Gen. xi. 3. Their bricks were much larger than ours; some were seen by Mr. Gadsby, fifteen inches long, nine inches broad, and five inches thick. Though it was the general custom to harden them by the heat of the sun, brick-kilns were not unknown; 2 Sam. xii. 31; Jer. xliii. 9; Nah. iii. 14.

The Hebrews, in building their city and tower were resolved to have them strongly erected. They said "Let us make brick, and burn them throughly." In that place there was material very suitable for bricks, and a bituminous substance which is said to ooze from certain springs in that plain, like tar or pitch, and this they used for cement. We read, Exod. i. 13, 14, that the Egyptians compelled the Hebrews to make bricks. Clay abounded on the banks of the Nile, and in places where it was not sufficiently strong, it was mixed with straw.

The Israelites, being slaves, had to do this work during their servitude in Egypt. The sculptures on the Egyptian monuments represent foreigners as so employed, and the taskmaster with his rod is very prominent.

In building this tower, some have foolishly said their design was to get up to heaven—"a tower whose top may reach unto heaven." Hence arose the fable, among the Poets, of the Giants trying to get up to heaven, by putting one mountain upon another. The words, "unto heaven," mean a tower of very great height. Thus we read of "cities great, and walled, and fenced up to heaven." Had they designed the tower as a refuge from the flood, they were foolish to erect it on a plain; for if they had raised the tower to the greatest possible height, it would have been far below the tops of the highest mountains. Nor does it appear to have been designed for an idol's temple, as some have supposed. The history of the affair does not warrant such a supposition. It was not for the name of a god, but for their own name, that they proposed to build. Nor was the confounding of their language adapted to defeat such a design. Idolatry prevails as much under a variety of languages as it would under one.

Some have supposed that the tower was intended to be a monument of architectural ambition, like the pyramids of Egypt; but this supposition does not agree with the history of it. It contains no such deep laid scheme as intimated in verse 6, and given as the reason of the Divine interference. Their design was founded in ambition; for they said "Let us make us a NAME." It required union, for which purpose they proposed to build a city, that they might live together, and concentrate their strength and counsels. This is noticed by the Lord himself: "Behold the people are one," saith he, "and have all one language;" and his confounding their language was to destroy this oneness, by scattering them abroad upon the face of the earth. It was necessary to have means of defence. They would have a tower to the city, to which the citizens might repair in times of danger, and so high as to bid defiance to the arrows or missives of any attacking foe.

The great object which the builders had in view was that of a UNIVERSAL MONARCHY, by which all the families of the earth, in all future ages, might be held in subjection. At this time, Nimrod, the grandson of Ham, must have been alive, and in his prime. And as he was the first person who aspired to dominion over his brethren, and as it is expressly said of him, that the beginning of his kingdom was Babel, nothing is more natural to suppose that he was the leader in this famous enterprise; and his design was to make himself master of the world.

The height of this tower, according to one historian, was 220 yards, considerably higher than St. Paul's Cathedral in London, which is about 133 yards high, making a difference of 87 yards. It was 149 feet higher than the Great Pyramid in Egypt. The tower of Babel consisted of eight towers one above another. These eight towers, being as so many stories one above another, were each of them 75 feet high, and in them were many large rooms with arched roofs supported by pillars; all of which were made parts of the temple, after the tower became consecrated to that idolatrous use. The highest story was made the most sacred, and in it their chief devotions were performed. The ascent to the top was by stairs on the outside round it; perhaps there was an easy sloping ascent on the outside of the outer wall, which, turning by slow degrees, in a spiral line, eight times round the tower, from the bottom to the top, had the same appearance as though there were eight towers placed one above the other.

Over the whole, on the top of the tower, was an Observatory, by means of which the Babylonians became more learned in astronomy than all other nations. Dr. Prideaux says, "Till the time of king Nebuchadnezzar, the temple of Belus contained no more than the (central) tower, and its rooms served all the occasions of that idolatrous worship." But he enlarged it by vast buildings erected round it, in a square of two furlongs on every side, and a mile in circumference, which was one thousand eight hundred feet more than the square at the temple of Jerusalem, for that was but three thousand feet round; whereas this was four thousand eight hundred.

On the outside of all these buildings was a wall enclosing the whole, which may be supposed to have been of equal extent with the square in which it stood; that is, two miles and a half in compass, in which were several gates leading into the temple, all of solid brass: Also the brazen sea, the brazen pillars, and the other brazen vessels, which were carried to

Babylon from the temple of Jerusalem, seemed to have been employed in the making of them. Nebuchadnezzar put all the sacred vessels, which he carried from Jerusalem, into the house of his god at Babylon, or temple of Bel. This temple stood till Xerxes demolished the whole of it, and laid it in rubbish, having first plundered it of its immense riches, among which were several images or statues of massy gold; one of them is said to have been forty feet high, probably that which Nebuchadnezzar set up in the plains of Dura.

"The ruins of this tower," Mr. Rich says, "appeared a solid pile composed in the interior of sun-burnt bricks; it was faced with fine brick having inscriptions on them, laid in a very thin layer of cement; and it was reduced by violence to its present ruinous condition. The upper stories have been forcibly broken down, and fire has been employed as an instrument of destruction, though it is not easy to say how or why. The facing of fine bricks has been partly removed, and partly covered by the falling down of the mass, which it supported and kept together. It is probably in the same state in which Alexander saw it, who judged that ten thousand men could only remove the rubbish preparatory to repairing it, in two months. If it required half of that number to disencumber it, the state of dilapidation must have been complete. The immense masses of vitrified brick which are seen on the top of the mount appear to have marked its summit since the time of its destruction. The rubbish about its base was probably greater, the weather having dissipated most of it in the course of so many ages, and possibly portions of the exterior facing of fine brick may have disappeared at different periods."

BABBLE, to utter unprofitable words.—The serpent will bite without enchantment; and a babbler is no better. Men under the influence of liquor often speak foolish and mischievous things. When it is asked,

"Who hath contentions? who hath babbling?" The answer is, "They that tarry long at the wine," Prov. xxiii. 29; Eccl. x. 11; Acts xvii. 18. Teachers of pure religion must "shun profane and vain babbling," otherwise their usefulness will be greatly hindered. "O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called; which some professing, have erred concerning the faith," 1 Tim. vi. 20.

BABYLON, Bab'-be-lon, confusion, mixture.—It was the capital of Babylonia, or Chaldea, in Asia. Semiramis is said by some, and Belus by others, to have founded this city. But Nebuchadnezzar finished it, and made it one of the wonders of the world. When young he invaded Judea, ravaged the country, destroyed the city and temple, and carried the inhabitants captive to Babylon. He seized the sacred utensils, which he deposited in the temple of his god Belus.

He warred against Egypt, Tyre, and other nations, which he reduced to vassalage, and raised the Babylonish power to its greatest height. Under him Babylon became "the glory of kingdoms, and the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency." Having destroyed Nineveh, he spent the resources of his empire, and the immense spoils of the conquered nations, in the enlargement and embellishment, and fortification of his favourite city. The city stood on a beautiful, fertile, and extended plain; and was built in the form of an exact square; each side being 15 miles long, and the circuit 60. The walls were 87 feet thick, and 350 high. They were surrounded by a deep ditch lined with bricks, and filled with water. On each side of this vast square, were 25 gates, or 100 in the whole, of solid brass, and of great strength and beauty. Between each gate rose 3 towers, 10 feet higher than the wall, and at every angle there was a similar tower. From each gate a street extended, in a straight line, to the opposite gate; thus forming 50 streets, 15 miles long, and 150 feet wide; 25 of which streets ran from north to south, and were crossed at right angles by 25 others, running east and west. The city was thus divided into 576 squares, each about a mile and a quarter in compass. Round each square, lofty and highly finished houses were erected, and the interior space had yards, gardens, and pleasure-grounds.

An open space of 200 feet wide encircled the city, between the buildings and the walls of the city. A branch of the Euphrates, running north and south, divided this vast collection of buildings into two equal parts. To secure the city from inundation and surprise from the river, walls as thick as those which surrounded the city, were built from the bottom of its channel to a great height. The walls on each side of the river extended $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles above and below the external walls of the city. When these walls were built, an artificial lake was dug on the west of Babylon, 40 miles long, 40 miles broad, and 75 feet deep. Into this lake the river was turned, till its walls were completed, and then restored to its natural channel. The multitude of lakes and canals rendered the soil very moist, and nourished abundance of willows. Hence the language of the Psalmist; —“By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down; yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion. We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof;” Ps. cxxxvii. 1, 2. See also Isa. xlv. 27; Jer. li. 13, 36.

A bridge of exquisite workmanship, a furlong in length, was thrown over the Euphrates, in the centre of the city, at the Eastern extremity of which stood the ancient palace of the Kings of Babylon and Assyria, which occupied a space of ground equal to four of the squares already described; each measuring more than a mile in length. Nebuchadnezzar erected a magnificent residence for himself on the western side of the bridge, which was called the New Palace, covering 9 similar squares, and extending nearly 2 miles in length and breadth. The two palaces communicated with each other by a tunnel, carried under the bed of the river, 12 feet high, and 13 feet wide, through which intelligence or succour might be easily conveyed. The queen of Nebuchadnezzar, who had been educated in Media, now Persia, a mountainous country, disliked the level plains of Shinar. Her indulgent husband selected a plot of ground near the New Palace, and by an artificial plantation, he imitated the elevated lands in Media or Persia.

The ascent to this garden, was like going to the top of a mountain, and it had buildings and apartments out of one into another. Under the steps to the ascent were built arches, one above another, which supported the whole plantation. The highest arch upon which the platform of the garden was laid, was 50 cubits high. The garden was surrounded with battlements and bulwarks. The walls were very strong, having been built at enormous cost; they were 22 feet thick, and every sally-port, 10 feet wide; over the several stories of this fabric were laid beams of massy stones, each 16 feet long, and 4 broad. The roof was first covered with reeds, daubed with abundance of bitumen, and upon them were laid double tiles, cemented together with durable mortar, and over all were placed sheets of lead, that the wet might not rot the foundation.

Upon all these was laid earth of convenient depth for the growth of the largest trees. The soil was planted with all sorts of trees, which, both for greatness and beauty, might delight the spectators. To admit the roots of large trees, prodigious hollow piers with tubes, were built, and filled with mould. The arches contained many stately rooms of all kinds, and for all purposes, and were well lighted. Water was ingeniously raised from the river to the highest part of this structure, and distributed all over the terraces. In these hanging gardens, as they were called, grew the largest trees, the most beautiful shrubs, and the richest flowers. An elegant flight of steps led from one platform to another; so that the queen enjoyed near her own palace an elegant substitute for her native hills.

Nebuchadnezzar built a magnificent temple round the tower of Babel, and greatly embellished the tower. Here he deposited his immense treasures, especially the spoils of the temple of Jerusalem. Here, probably, was deposited the golden image, consecrated by him in the plain of Dura. An ancient writer says, "that a statue of pure gold was found there by Xerxes, worth three millions and a half of our money. So large was the city of Babylon, that, according to Xenophon, the inhabitants of the quarter remotest from the place where the invading army entered, did not know of its capture for several hours after. Four or five capital cities, with many towns and villages, were afterwards built out of the ruins of this ancient metropolis. Its splendid towers and palaces, and the pride and luxury of its inhabitants, were proverbial among surrounding nations. Babylon was famed for costly manufactures, such as rich carpets, tapestry, and splendid raiment.

In Scripture Babylon is described as the greatest and most powerful city in the world—Babylon the great! Of what other city are terms used, equally haughty, equally magnificent? She is called, the Golden city, the Glory of Kingdoms, the Beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, the Tender and Delicate, the Lady of Kingdoms, a Lady, a Queen, for ever, who says, I am; and none else beside me; Isa. xiv. 4; xiii. 19; xlvii. 1, &c. These, and other terms, equally peculiar, express her beauty; and as for her power, she is called the Hammer of the whole Earth; Jer. l. 23; also the Battle-Axe! the Weapons of War! proper to break in pieces nations, and to destroy kingdoms; Jer. li. 20.

In the thirty-eighth year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, when these magnificent undertakings were completed, the exulting prince surveyed the splendid scene from the highest terrace of its hanging garden, and proudly exclaimed, "Is not this great Babylon which I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?" Scarcely had these proud words escaped his lips, when a voice from heaven addressed the astonished boaster; "O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken; the kingdom is departed from thee." The alarming threatening was instantly executed. The king deprived of his reason was driven out from the society of men, and spent several years amongst the beasts of the desert. Then his understanding returned to him, and he acknowledged the justice and power of the Most High; Dan. iv.

A year after his restoration, the king died, and the reigns of his successors were short and distracted. Belshazzar, his grandson, was a weak and wicked prince, and his reign was short. The Medes and Persians, under Cyrus, having defeated the forces of Belshazzar in the field, next attacked the city. But its strong fortifications, and numerous garrisons, rendered it impregnable. The inhabitants feeling themselves secure, derided from their walls the attempts of Cyrus; yet that general persevered.

Cyrus being informed that a great annual festival was to be celebrated in Babylon, when the monarch, the nobles, &c., indulged for several days in intemperance, and judging that little care would then be taken to guard the city, he resolved to attack it at that time. He sent a party of his men up the river to cut its banks, at a certain hour, and turn its current into the lake made by Nebuchadnezzar.

zar. Then posting half of his forces at the place where the river entered the city, and the other half at its exit from the walls, he commanded them, when the channel of the river was passable, to enter it, and march, under the guidance of two nobles who had revolted from Belshazzar, directly into the city. The troops advanced in the dead of the night, and finding the brazen gates, which led from the river, open and unguarded, and the inhabitants drunk, they entered the streets, met at the royal palace, and surprised and slew the guards. The drunken king, rushing out with his sword drawn, to inquire the cause of the uproar, was instantly put to death, with all his attendants. The besiegers took possession of the palace, and the whole city yielded to the conquerors, and Cyrus proclaimed himself king, before Christ, 540 years. Soon afterwards the seat of government was removed to Shushan in Persia; Dan. iv. 5.

Babylon ceased to be a royal city, and awfully and rapidly declined in riches and population. The banks of the river were never repaired; and the waters spreading over the country converted it into a marsh, while the walls were suffered gradually to decay. For seven succeeding centuries Babylon is not mentioned; and in 1173, it was wholly destroyed. In 1574, its site was overrun with venomous reptiles, and approached with danger. Strabo declared that in the reign of Augustus it appeared a great desert.

Sir Robert Ker Porter thus describes the present site of Babylon;—"The majestic stream of the Euphrates, wandering in solitude like a pilgrim monarch, through the silent ruins, still appeared a noble river, under all the sad disadvantages of its desert-tracked course. Its banks were hoary with reeds, and the grey osier-willows were yet there, upon which the captives of Israel hunged their harps. But how is the scene changed since then! Once those broken hills were palaces, and those long undulating moulds were streets."

This vast solitude, once filled with the busy subjects of the proud daughter of the East, now wasted with misery, her habitations are not to be found, and for herself 'the worm is spread over her.' The records of the human race do not present a contrast more striking than that between the primeval magnificence of Babylon, and its long desolation."

Observe how the predictions respecting Babylon were exactly fulfilled! The period of the first capture of Babylon was most precisely foretold. Isaiah had fixed it at the close of the captivity of the Jews, and Jeremiah limited that captivity to seventy years. Of Cyrus the Lord said, "He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure; even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built; and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid;" Isa. xlv. 28. This declaration was fulfilled, for Cyrus ordered the return of the Jews to their own country, and furnished them with the means of rebuilding their temple; Ezra i. 1-4. Jeremiah is still more explicit. Speaking of the Jews and the neighbouring nations, he says,—See Jer. xxv. 11, 12.

The agents to effect this ruin are distinctly stated. The leader is mentioned by name; Cyrus should command the besieging army; and his soldiers be Persians, Medes, Armenians, and their neighbours:—"Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, even to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him;" Isa. xlv. 1. "Go up, O Elam; (the ancient name for Persia, from Elam, the son of Shem,) "besiege, O Media," says Isaiah, when predicting this interesting event; Isa. xxi. 2. "Behold," says he, "I will stir up the Medes against them which shall not regard silver; and as for gold they shall not delight in it;" Isa. xiii. 17.

"Call together against her," exhorts Jeremiah, "the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashkenaz;" regions which either formed part of the kingdom of Media, or being in its immediate vicinity, were leagued with it. "Prepare against her the nations, with the kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion;" Jer. li. 27, 28. Media, Armenia, and other districts from which the army of Cyrus was drawn, lay to the north of Babylonia; the prophet, influenced by the Spirit, says,—

"Out of the north there cometh up a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein; they shall remove; they shall depart, both man and beast;" Jer. l. 3, 9, 10; Isa. xlvii. 11; "I have laid a snare for thee," exclaims the prophet Jeremiah, "and thou art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware; thou art found, and also caught, because thou hast striven against the Lord;" Jer. l. 24, 25. "The night of my pleasure," as if Belshazzar had said, "hath he turned into fear unto me;" Isa. xxi. 4. "And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake;" Jer. li. 57. God is represented as commanding the deep to be dry;—"Thus saith the Lord to the deep, Be dry, and I will dry up thy rivers;" Isa. xlv. 27. Jer. l. 38. Speaking of the final attack on Babylon, the prophet Isaiah says, "Thus saith the Lord to Cyrus... I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut. I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight; I will break in pieces the gates of brass;" &c. Isa. xlv. 1—3.

"One post," says Jeremiah, "shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another, to show the king of Babylon that his city is taken at each end;" Jer. li. 31. How exactly and minutely were these prophecies fulfilled! The prophets might have been witnesses of the awful events. The prophets foretold the transactions that would take place in the monarch's palace. Belshazzar is represented as saying, "My heart panted, fearfulness affrighted me; the night of my pleasure hath he turned into fear unto me;" Isa. xxi. 4. Again, Isa. xiii. 7, 8. Compare these prophecies with what actually took place at the close of the siege, in the banqueting-room of king Belshazzar, as recorded by Daniel, who was an eye-witness of the scenes. See Dan. v. 5—31.

In his terror Belshazzar cried aloud for the astrologers, and others, and promised them riches and honours to explain the mysterious appearance on the wall, but they were speechless. Daniel deciphered the awful oracle, which was immediately fulfilled; for "in that night was Belshazzar, the king of the Chaldeans, slain;" Dan. v. 5—31. The prophets also foretold that the destruction of Babylon should be complete and perpetual;—"Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah." "It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation; neither shall the Arabian pitch his tent there: neither shall the shepherds make their fold there: but wild beasts of the desert shall lie there," &c.; Isa. xiii. 19—22.

"For I will rise up against them, saith the Lord of hosts, and cut off from Babylon the name, and remnant," &c. "I will make it a possession for the bittern, and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the Lord of hosts;" Isa. xiv. 22, 23. It was the gross impiety, the insolent pride, the luxury, and cruelty of the Babylonians, that exposed them to the wrath of God. In their zeal for idolatry, they reviled the true God, and cruelly persecuted his servants. Hence the vengeance of God was threatened against idolatry. "Babylon is taken," says the prophet; "Babel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces;" Jer. l. 2, 3. "I will punish Bel in Babylon," Jer. li. 44.

"Babylon," says Isaiah, "was given to pleasures, dwelt carelessly, and said in her heart, I am, and none else beside me. I shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children. But these two things shall come to thee in a moment in one day, the loss of children and widowhood; they shall come upon thee in their perfection, for the multitude of thy sorceries and enchantments;" Isa. xlvii. 7-9. Her king proudly defied Omnipotence. "Thou hast said in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north. I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High;" Isa. xiv. 13-16. But his cruelty to the chosen people of the Lord, completed his guilt, and sealed his doom. "Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will plead thy cause, and take vengeance for thee. And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, an astonishment, and an hissing without an inhabitant;" Jer. li. 35-37.

Captain Mignam says, "Our path lay through the great mass of ruined heaps on the site of shrunken Babylon. I cannot convey an adequate idea of its dreary lonely nakedness. Our guides told us that all the ruins abounded with lions, and other wild beasts." Thus the prediction was fulfilled, that wild beasts of the desert should lie there, and their houses be full of doleful creatures, and that the wild beasts should cry in their desolate houses.

BABYLON. There were two Babylons—one in Egypt, and the other in Assyria; we do not learn from ecclesiastical history that there was any church at the former place; and, with respect to the latter, it was almost deserted in the days of the Apostles; 1 Pet. v. 13.

BABYLON—Papal Rome; Rev. xiv. 8. Also Rev. ch. xvii. and xviii. An appellation given to the false church by the writer of the Apocalypse. As the ancient Babylon was the chief of idolatrous cities, she is taken as a fit emblem of the monstrous guilt and extensive influence of idolatrous and papal Rome, each in its turn being the mother of harlots, and the abominations of the earth. See Jer. l. 38; li. 7, and compare with the above passages. Thus, as Babylon of old was the first of all idolatrous cities, it is adopted as the fittest emblem to declare the enormous guilt, and the extensive and withering influence of idolatrous Rome; each in its turn being the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth; the former corrupting the heathen world with her idolatry and fornication, and Papal Babylon corrupting the Christian. O what mischief has Popery done! What thousands of holy men and women has she slain!

BAÇA, Bay'-kah, mulberry trees, fountains.—The name of a place or valley, where were mulberry trees, under which were dug reservoirs of stone to catch rain water; Psa. lxxxiv. 6. The Jews, in their journeyings, passing through the valley of Baca, made it a well: the rain also filled the pools. Here they stopped for refreshment, as they went to worship at Jerusalem. Having acquired new vigour, they went from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appearing before God. So should the Christian traveller refresh himself by the ordinances and promises, as he travels towards the heavenly Canaan.

people, or Lord of the people.—A prophet of the city of Pethor, or Bosor, upon the Euphrates, whose intercourse with Balak, king of the Moabites, who sent for him to curse the Israelites, is recorded by Moses; Num. 22. to 24. Whether Balaam was a true prophet or a mere pretender, reckoning to predict future events, has been the subject of much controversy. That he was not of the seed of Abraham, is certain. Jerome thinks that he was a true prophet; that he knew the true God, and erected altars to him, but that he was corrupted by avarice; 2
Pet. ii. 16. It appears that some did possess the prophetic spirit who were not distinguished by righteousness; 1 Kings 13. King Saul was, for a time, among the prophets. So with Caiaphas, the high-priest. It will be found so at the judgment day; Matt. vii. 22. Very likely Balaam had once been a good man, and a true prophet, till he began to love the wages of unrighteousness, and in prostituting his office to covetousness, and, influenced by Satan, he became an idolater, though when he prophesied, God might make him an instrument to enunciate present and future things. Though he felt himself irresistibly moved to prophesy good of Israel, and received the most explicit information of the purposes of heaven respecting them, which were unalterable, yet he adopted every possible means to obtain the favour of their inveterate enemy. He often boasted of his ardent zeal for truth, and determination to speak only as God commanded him, while he must have been conscious, that had he not been under divine restraint, he would gladly have cursed Israel. That such was the state of his mind he fully proved, when Balak threatened him with the loss of reward; for he then wickedly proposed the diabolical scheme, which succeeded in inflicting severe sufferings on Israel; and he perished in battle among the enemies of the chosen race; Num. xxv. 1—3; xxxi. 8, 16.

BALAAM'S ASS, Num. xxii. 28. This is a literal narrative of a real transaction. (2 Pet. ii. 14—16) however infidels may laugh at it. Dr. Adam Clark shrewdly remarks, "when God opens the mouth, an ass can speak as well as a man. The ass was enabled to utter certain sounds, probably as parrots do, without understanding them, and whatever may be said of the construction of the ass's mouth, &c., yet an adequate cause is assigned for this wonderful effect, viz., "the Lord opened the mouth of the ass." The miracle was proper to convince Balaam, that the mouth and tongue were under God's direction, and that the same Divine power which caused the dumb ass to speak contrary to its nature, could make Balaam in like manner utter blessings contrary to his inclination. The giving of articulation to a brute is no more to the Deity, than the making of the blind to see, or the deaf to hear. 1 Cor. i. 27. The more vile the means were, the better to confound the unrighteous prophet.

BALAAM,—'doctrine of,' means luring to idolatry, Rev. ii. 14; 'way of,' 2 Pet. ii. 15; 'error of,' preferring gain to godliness, Jude 11.

BALADAN, Bal'-a-dan, without judgment.—The name for a king of Babylon; Isa. xxxix. 1; 2 Kings xx. 12. Called by profane authors, Bel-esus, Nabonassar.

BALAH, Bay'-lah, old, worn.—A city. Josh. xix. 3.

BALAK, Bay'-lak, one who lays waste.—The son of Zippor, king of the Moabites, who desired Balaam to curse the people, Num. xxii. 2; Rev. ii. 14

BALANCES.—In ancient times gold and silver were paid by weight; therefore it was customary for traffickers to carry with them a pair of scales or balances, and different weights. Unjust persons carried two sorts of weights, the lighter to sell with and the other to buy with. See Prov. xx. 23; Mic. vi. 11. Unjust dealing is disreputable, and offensive to God; Prov. xi. 1. Men are weighed in the balances when they are tried by the law of God, Dan. v. 27. The balancings of the clouds is the manner in which they are poised in the air; Job. xxxvii. 16.

ern nations was to tear off the hair, and to cut off the beard as a token of mourning on the death of a relative. It was a Heathen custom, and forbidden to the Israelites; Jer. xvi. 6; Deut. xiv. 1. Baldness was regarded as disgraceful, because it caused a person to be suspected of leprosy; Ezra ix. 3; Neh. xiii. 25; Isa. xv. 2.

BALSAM or BALM.—Balm is a contraction of Balsam. It is a gum or resin extracted from the balm-tree, which grows in various parts of Arabia and Canaan. The estimation in which it was held as a medical drug, is not only apparent from Scripture, but Pliny, Strabo, Diodorus Siculus, Tacitus, Justin, Solinus, and others, celebrate its virtues as such. That of Gilead was reckoned the best. The Arabs sold it to the Egyptians, and the Jews to the Tyrians, Gen. xxxvii. 25; Ezek. xxvii. 17. Its specific gravity is lighter than water. Great value was set upon this drug in the East. The Ishmaelites, or Arabian merchants, trafficking with the Arabian commodities into Egypt, brought balm with them from Gilead as a part of their cargo; Gen. xxxvii. 25. The Balsam-tree was cultivated to great perfection in the gardens near Jericho. Josephus says;—"Now here is the most fruitful country in Judea, which bears a vast number of palm-trees, besides the balsam-tree, whose sprouts they cut with sharp stones, and at the incisions they gather the juice which drops down like tears."

Pliny says, "But to all other odours whatever, the balsam is preferred, produced in no other part but the land of Judea, and even there in two gardens only; one no more than twenty acres, the other still smaller." Vespasian and Titus carried each of them one to Rome as rarities, and Pompey boasted of bearing them in his triumph." "When Alexander the Great was in Juria or Vale of Jericho, a spoonful of balm was all that could be collected on a summer's day; and in the most plentiful year, the great royal park of these trees yielded only 6 gallons, and the smaller one only 1 gallon. The quantity from one producing tree does not exceed 60 drops per day. Justin says, "The space of the valley contains two hundred thousand acres, and it is called Jericho. In that valley there is a wood, as admirable for its fruitfulness, as for its delight, for it is intermingled with palm-trees, and opobalsamum." As to its healing properties, Jeremiah makes an eloquent and pathetic expostulation, when he expresses his grief that the spiritually wounded and diseased state of the daughter of Zion should remain, when there was a healing balm and a Divine Physician; Jer. viii. 22; xlv. 11; li. 8. The balm was an emblem of the Redeemer's healing power. As the juice from the balsam tree was extracted by piercing the bark with a sharp instrument, what a striking figure it was of the wounds received by the Saviour, as he hung bleeding on the cross.

"One of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came blood and water;" John xix. 34. That ruffian perpetrated the act to gratify his barbarous humour, and the malignity of the Jews; but the most important ends were accomplished under the direction of an over-ruling providence. Then the fountain of spiritual healing was opened. Christ died that we might live. If Messiah did not die, our guilt is yet unatoned for; the justice of God is not satisfied, and the penalty of the law is still to be endured. The death of Jesus is the life of our hope, and the price of our redemption.

Jer. 8. 22. is there no b. in Gilead, 46. 11, & 51. 8; Ezek. 27. 17.

BAMOTH, Bay'-moth, the high places, Num. xxi. 19, 20.

BAMOTH-BAL, Bay'-moth-bay'-

al, the high places of Baal.—A city beyond Jordan; Josh. xiii. 17.

BAND,—‘military,’ signifies the same as cohort, or regiment. The Roman cohort consisted of a thousand men, commanded by a tribune, Acts x. 1. Material chains, Luke viii. 29; Acts xvi. 26. The drawings of divine love, Hos. xi. 4. Government and laws, which, like fetters, restrain men from evil, Psal. ii. 3; Zech. xi. 7-14. Faith and love, which attract the soul to Christ, Col. ii. 19. To have no bands in death, is an expression used to denote that some wicked persons die under the guilt of sin, and yet are so hardened, as to be unconscious of their miserable condition, Ps. lxxiii. 4.

BANI, Bay-ny.—One of David’s worthies, 2 Sam. xxiii. 36. A Levite, Neh. iii. 17. See also Neh. viii. 7; Ezra ii. 10.

BANNER.—Banners were borne in times of war to assemble, direct, distinguish, and encourage the troops. The different tribes of Israel were distinguished by banners or standards, Num. ii. 2. They were flags distinguished by their colours, the colour of each tribe being analogous to the colour of the stone set in the breastplate of the high priest; and the great standard of each of the four camps combined the colours of the three tribes which composed it. Probably also the names of the tribes appeared on those banners, or ensigns.

The brazen serpent was a temporary ensign; and the Jews usually employed long poles which had at the end of each a vessel containing fire, the brightness of whose flames indicated the party to whom it belonged. The ensign is the symbol of rank or government. The Lord Jesus is the ensign, around which all who desire salvation with eternal glory assemble; and all who maintain, at all hazards, their fidelity to him, shall receive the crown of life; Isa. xi. 10; Rom. xv. 12; Ps. xx. 5; lx. 4.

BANQUET, a splendid feast, Esther v. 5; Amos vi. 7. The Lord has prepared a blessed feast in the kingdom of gospel grace, for the free use of all who hunger and thirst after righteousness, Isa. xxv. 6; lv. 1. In the means of grace, believers, in waiting on the Lord, have many times reason to say, “He brought me to the banqueting-house, and his banner over me was love,” Song ii. 4.

BANQUET, ING, Esth. 5. 4. let king and Haman come to b.

BAPTISM.—Baptism is an ordinance or positive institution of the New Testament; and it is the bounden duty of all who profess to be the disciples of Christ solemnly to observe it, and to observe it in the manner which the word and example of Christ authorize. That it is obligatory, is evident from the example of the Lord Jesus Christ who himself was baptized by John; and who, by his disciples baptized those who were convinced of his Divine mission and believed on him as their Lord and Saviour. It is evident also from the commission which Christ gave to his disciples, Matt. xxviii. 19, and from the practice of the disciples in baptizing all believers. JEROME, the most learned of all the Latin Fathers, says, in reference to the commission, “They first teach all the nations; then when they are taught they baptize them; for it cannot be that the body should receive the sacrament of baptism, unless the soul has before received the true faith. CALVIN says, “Because Christ requires teaching before baptizing, and will have believers only admitted to baptism, baptism does not seem to be rightly administered, except faith precede it.” The same opinion is expressed by SAURIN, BAXTER, and many others.

Infant Baptism is deemed by some Divines an innovation; though some have urged on its behalf Apostolical tradition; and others Scripture precept and example, which, they think, warrant Infant Baptism. DR. FIELD, however, says, "The baptism of Infants is named a Tradition, because it is not expressly delivered in Scripture that the Apostles did baptize infants; nor any express precept there found that they should do so." BISHOP PRIDEAUX says, "Pædobaptism rests on no other Divine right than Episcopacy." Curcellæus, (a learned Divine of Geneva, and Professor of Divinity,) says, "The baptism of infants, in the two first centuries after Christ, was altogether unknown, but in the third and fourth was allowed by some few." SALMASIUS, SUICERUS, and VENEMA, &c., were of the same opinion. TERTULLIAN says, "Let them come to baptism when they are grown up; when they can understand; when they are taught whither they are to come. Let them become Christians when they can know Christ..... Let them know how to seek salvation that you may appear to give to one that asketh."

It may be asked, For what design was baptism administered to infants when first introduced? Ans. To purge the guilt of original sin, and thereby secure the salvation of their souls.—ORIGEN, A. D. 230, says, "Let it be considered, what is the reason that whereas the baptism of the church is given for the forgiveness of sins, infants also are by the usage of the church baptized; when, if there were nothing in infants that wanted forgiveness and mercy, the grace of baptism would be needless to them." CYPRIAN, A. D. 253, held the same opinions. GREGORY NAZIANZEN, A. D. 380, says, "A child dying unbaptized, and a person grown to years who desires baptism, but by some accident does not obtain it, will not (doxasthessthai) be glorified." BASIL, A. D. 380, held the same views, and so did AMBROSE, A. D. 390, CHRYSOSTOM, A. D. 398, &c.

&c. And many at the present day, believe in baptismal regeneration. Such a doctrine is irrational, unphilosophical, and unscriptural; nay more, it is soul-ruining, and must be of human invention.

Well might SUICERUS, professor of Greek and Hebrew at Zurich, say, "This opinion of the absolute necessity of baptism, arose from a wrong understanding of our Lord's words, Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven; John iii. SALMASIUS, the very learned historian and critic, says, "An opinion prevailed that no one could be saved without being baptized; and for that reason, the custom arose of baptizing infants." DR. OWEN, and others, were of the same opinion.

With regard to the MODE of baptism, there is a diversity of opinion; some advocate immersion, others sprinkling or pouring. It is but candour to confess that the argument is in favour of immersion. It was the ancient mode. In commenting upon Matt. iii. 13, 16, &c., the baptism of Christ, Dr. Macknight, Dr. Lightfoot, Dr. Adam Clarke, J. G. Vossius, Bp. Taylor, and others, say that Christ was immersed. And on John iii. 23, Calvin, Dr. Whitby, Dr. Doddridge, favour immersion. On the baptism of the Eunuch, Dr. Towerson, Calvin, Dr. Doddridge, &c., favour immersion. On Rom. vi. 3; Col. ii. 12, Dr. Wall, Dr. S. Clarke, Dr. Wells, Dr. Nicholson, Bp. of Gloucester, Dr. Doddridge, Whitfield, John Wesley, Dr. Whitby, &c., say that in those passages there is an allusion to the ancient mode of baptism by immersion.

It is but candour also to confess that the original words Bapto and Baptizo primarily signify to immerse. The opinions of more than a hundred of the most eminent writers support this statement. Dr. Cox, a few years ago requested Mr. Ewing the author of a Greek Lexicon, to refer him to a single authority for a different interpretation:—"I now once again demand of Mr. Ewing to point me out the Lexicon, which does not give dipping, plunging, or immersing, as the unquestionable, settled, and universally admitted primitive signification of the contested terms."

With regard to the Doctrinal Import of Baptism; 1. Baptism teaches the penitent sinner's purification from sin; Acts ii. 38; xxii. 16.—2. It teaches a believer's spiritual Burial to the evil practices of the world; Rom. vi. 3; Col. ii. 12.—3. It teaches a believer's resurrection to a new life of piety and godliness—same passages.—4. It teaches the union of the believer with God. He is "baptized in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit"—"baptized into Christ," and has "put on Christ."—5. Baptism represents the Merits of Christ, as the "Fountain opened for sin;" 1 Cor. vi. 11, compared with Acts xxii. 16, and Rev. i. 5.—6. It represents Christ's sufferings, burial, and resurrection; Matt. xx. 22; Luke xii. 50.—7. It represents the believer's resurrection from the dead, as procured for him by the resurrection of Christ; 1 Cor. xv. 23, 29.

BAPTIZED FOR THE DEAD; 1 Cor. xv. 29; "Else what shall they do who are baptized for the dead," &c., that is, if there should be no resurrection of the dead hereafter, why is baptism so significant a symbol of our dying and rising again, and also of the death and resurrection of Christ? Dr. Adam Clarke says, "This is the meaning—If there be no resurrection of the dead, those who in becoming Christians, expose themselves to all manner of privations, severe sufferings, and a violent death, can have no compensation, nor any motive sufficient to induce them to expose themselves to such miseries. But as they receive baptism as an emblem of death, in voluntarily going under the water, so they receive it as an emblem of the resurrection to eternal life, in coming up out of the water; thus they are baptized for the dead, in perfect faith of the resurrection;" ver. 30—32. — Dr.

Doddridge simply renders "baptized for the dead" in the room of the dead, who are just fallen in the cause of Christ; but their place is supplied by a succession of new converts, who fill up their places, just as ranks of soldiers that advance to the combat in the places of their companions who have just been slain before their eyes.

BAPTIZE WITH FIRE; Matt. iii. 11. Supposed by some to refer to the miraculous effusion of the Holy Spirit; Acts ii. 3, 4. By others to the "fiery trials," which would attend a profession of Christ, as persecution, imprisonment, and death. The most direct meaning is, He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, whose influences possess all the refining and melting power of fire. Fire enlightens, comforts, and consumes. So the Spirit enlightens the minds of sinners, directs them to Christ for salvation and peace, and thus he becomes their Comforter. He makes them holy, showing the evil of sin, and the beauties of holiness; like fire, he consumes sin in the soul, and kindles there the holy flame of Divine love and zeal. The passage was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost; see Acts ii. 2—4.

BAR. Used poetically for a sea in Ps. ii. 12; Prov. xxxi. 2. It corresponds to the term Ben in the New Testament used in combination with proper names.

BARABBAS, Ba-rab'-bas, son of the father of confusion. A notorious robber, guilty also of sedition and murder, who was preferred to Christ by the Jews; John xviii. 40.

BARACHEL, Bar'-a-ke'l, who blesses God.—The father of Elihu; Job. xxxii. 2.

BARACHIAS, Bar-a-ky'-as, who blesses God.—The father of Zacharias, mentioned, Matt. xxiii. 35. It is probable that the prophet Zechariah, who is called the son of Berechiah; Zech. i. 1, was slain, and that fact was well known by record or tradition.

BARAK, Bay'-rak, thunder, in vain.—Son of Abinoam, who was chosen by God to deliver the Israelites from the bondage of Jabin, king of the Canaanites; Judges iv. 6.

BARBARIAN.—The Greeks gave this name to all foreigners, as the Chinese now do; Rom. i. 14; 1 Cor. xiv. 11.

BARBAROUS 'people.'—As the Greeks regarded all as Barbarians who did not speak their language, this term does not imply savage, but only those of unintelligible speech; Acts xxviii. 2.

BARE, (1.) Naked or uncovered; Lev. xiii. 45; Isa. xxxii. 11. (2.) Plain or real; 1 Cor. xv. 37. (3.) Deprived of outward comforts; Jer. xlix. 10. (4.) Taken away; Jer. xiii. 22. (5.) BAHURIMITES, Ba-hew'-rim-ites.—The inhabitants of Bahurim; 2 Sam. iii. 16.

BARIAH, Ba-ry'-ah; 1 Chron. iii. 22.

BAR-JESUS, Bar-je'-sus, son of Jesus.—A sorcerer in the Isle of Crete; Acts xiii. 6. Luke calls him Elymas. He endeavoured to hinder Sergius Paulus from embracing Christianity. He was severely rebuked by the Apostle, and smitten with blindness. The pro-consul, who was an eye-witness of this miracle was converted to the Christian faith. It is stated by Origen that Bar-Jesus, or Elymas was afterwards converted, and that Paul restored his sight.

BAR-JONA, Bar-jo'-nah, the son of a dove, or Jonas.—Simon Peter is thus called; Matt. xvi. 17.

BARKOS, Bar'-kos.—One whose children were Nethinims; Ezra. ii. 53.

BARLEY, a well-known grain,

now used principally for malt liquor, but anciently for cattle and to make coarse bread; 1 Kings iv. 28; 2 Kings iv. 42; John vi. 8—10. It is still used very generally for the latter purposes in Wales.

BARNABAS, Bar'-na-bas, the son of consolation.—A disciple of Christ, and Paul's companion in labours. He was a Levite, a native of Cyprus, whose proper name was Joses, the Apostles added to it Barnabas; Acts iv. 36. He was educated at Jerusalem under Gamaliel. He is thought to have been one of the seventy disciples chosen by Christ. "He was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith;" Acts xi. 24. He possessed land, but disposed of it to promote the spread of the gospel. As he did this soon after the day of Pentecost, he must have been an early convert. He introduced Paul to the Christians at Jerusalem, and assured them of the reality of his conversion; Acts ix. 26, 27. He and Paul zealously laboured together at Antioch for two years, and many sinners were brought to Christ through their instrumentality. But the time had come when Barnabas and Paul were no longer to act conjointly. A difference of opinion arose between them respecting the propriety of taking with them Mark, their former associate. In the issue, Paul chose Silas for his companion, and Barnabas took Mark, and sailed for Cyprus, where the sacred historian closed his account of him; Acts xv. 36—41. It would appear from 2 Cor. viii. 18, 19, that Paul and Barnabas became reconciled and co-workers in the work of the Lord.

BARREL of meal. 1 Kings 17. 14.

BARREN. The word is applied to the soil, to animals, and to human kind. Believers are not barren when the graces of the Spirit are in lively exercise; 2 Pet. i. 5—8. Persons who live in the midst of gospel privileges, are represented as trees in the garden of the Lord, and they are barren and worthless when no fruit appears to the glory of God; Luke xiii. 6, 9.

BARREN. This was a reproach among the Jewish women: God's blessing on marriage said, 'Be fruitful and multiply;' they also each aspired to the honour of becoming the mother of the Messiah. This illustrates Gen. xxx. 1; Judg. xiii. 2; 1 Sam. i. 6; Isa. liv. 1.

BARSABAS, Bar'-sa-bas, son of, return, of rest.—Joseph Barsabas, surnamed Justus, was one of the first disciples of Jesus Christ, and probably one of the seventy; Acts i. 23.—This was also the surname of Judas, one of the principal disciples, as mentioned Acts xv. 22, &c.

BARTHOLOMEW, Bar-thol'-o-mew, a son that suspends the waters.—One of the twelve apostles, supposed to be Nathanael, one of the first disciples of Christ; Matt. x. 3. This opinion is founded on the circumstance, that as the evangelist John never mentions Bartholomew in the number of the apostles, so the other evangelists never mentioned Nathanael. And as in John i. 45, Philip and Nathanael are mentioned together as coming to Jesus, so in the other evangelists Philip and Bartholomew are constantly associated together. The supposition also acquires additional probability, from considering that Nathanael is particularly mentioned among the apostles to whom Christ appeared at the sea of Tiberias, after his resurrection; Simon Peter, Thomas, and also Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, the sons of Zebedee, viz. James and John, with two other of his disciples, probably both Andrew and Philip; John xxi. 2. If it be indeed the same individual, called by different writers after different names, Christ has drawn a fine character of him in a few words, "Behold, an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile;" John i. 47.

BARTIMÆUS, Bar-te-me'-us, the son of Timeus, or of the honourable.—A blind man of Jericho, to whom Christ gave sight; Mark x. 46—52.

BARUCH, Bay'-ruk, who is blessed, who bends the knee.—The son of Neriah; he was of illustrious birth, and of the tribe of Judah, Jer. xxxvi. 4. He was the disciple and scribe of Jeremiah, and suffered much persecution through his adherence to his master. He accompanied him into Egypt, and after the death of Jeremiah, Baruch retired to Babylon, where he died in the twelfth year of the captivity, according to the rabbins.—Also Baruch who assisted to build the walls of Jerusalem; Neh. iii. 20. See also Neh. x. 6; xi. 5.

BARZILLAI, Bar-zil'-la-i, son of contempt, made of iron.—A native of Rogelim, in the land of Gilead, and an old friend of David, who assisted him in his troubles when he was forced away from Jerusalem by his son Absalom; 2 Sam. xvii. 27. See also 2 Sam. xxi. 8; Neh. vii. 63.

BASHAN, Bay'-shan, in the tooth, in the change or sleep.—One of the most fertile cantons in Canaan, east of Jordan, and famed for its pasturage and cattle. Wherever there are streams, the soil is covered with the most luxuriant herbage and grass of the brightest green; Deut. iii. 1; Isa. xxxiii. 9; Ezek. xxxix. 18. It was distinguished for its herds of superior cattle, its forests of lofty timber, and its populousness. Argob alone contained 60 walled cities and towns, besides numerous unwalled towns and villages. Hence the "strong bulls of Bashan," "rams of the breed of Bashan," and "the tall oaks of Bashan," became proverbial for strength, energy, and influence; Isa. ii. 13; Psalm xxii. 12, &c. Mr. Buckingham describes the country as still abounding with beautiful, verdant, and fertile pastures, offering abundance of pasturage to the flocks that pass through them.

The earliest reference in Scripture to this district, is found in Gen. xiv. 5. Chederlaomer and his allies from the plains of Mesopotamia, in their attack on the inhabitants of Palestine, are said to have fallen first on the "Rephaims in Ashteroth Karnaim." The Rephaims, that is, "the giants," were aboriginal inhabitants of Bashan. A few, like Og, King of Bashan, and Goliath of Gath, are found existing at a later period of sacred history. The massive ruins strewing the plains and hills of Bashan still testify to the giant size of their earliest occupiers, and yield numberless images of Astarte, adorned with the crescent moon, which gave her the name of Carnaim, upon her brow. It is probable that Kenath, the modern Kunawat, is the very city that the Mesopotamian warriors "smote" with the edge of the sword. Here, says Mr. Porter, "a colossal head of Ashteroth, sadly broken, lies before a little temple, of which probably it was once the chief idol."

Four hundred years after the expedition of Chederlaomer, Bashan was again invaded. The shepherd tribes of Israel, attracted by its rich pastures, chose it for their possession, and before their warlike hosts, Og, its king, fell slain, with his warriors, on the broad plain before Edrei. The conquest begun by Moses was completed by Jair, a distinguished chief of Manasseh. It is said that he took no less than sixty great cities, "fenced with high walls, gates, and bars; besides unwalled towns a great many;" Deut. iii. 4, 5, 15. The cities are there to this day, and contain some of the most ancient architecture now existing in the world. "Bashan," says Mr. Porter, "is literally crowded with towns and large villages, and though the vast majority of them are deserted, they are not ruined. I have more than once entered a deserted city in the evening, taken possession of a comfortable house, and spent the night in peace. Many of the houses are perfect, as if only finished yesterday. The walls are sound, the roofs, unbroken, the doors, and even the window-shutters in their places." The walls are built of large squared blocks of basalt, quarried from the volcanic rock on which they stand. The roofs are formed of slabs of the same material, stretching across from wall to wall. Even the doors and shutters, hung by pivots, are of stone. From the battlements of the castle at Sulcah, thirty such towns and villages I counted, but which for five centuries have been without inhabitants.

Astonishing is the description of Bashan by Mr. Porter, and cogent are his arguments as to the truth of the Bible statements. We take the following from his admirable work denominated, "The Giant Cities of Bashan," &c.

"I had often read of Bashan, how the Lord had delivered into the hands of the tribe of Manasseh, Og, its giant king, and all his people. I had observed the statement that a single province of his kingdom, Argob, contained threescore great cities, fenced with high walls, gates, and bars, besides unwalled towns a great many. I had examined my map, and had found that the whole of Bashan is not larger than an ordinary English county. I confess I was astonished; and though my faith in the divine record was not shaken, yet I felt that some strange statistical mystery hung over the passage, which required to be cleared up. That sixty walled cities, besides unwalled towns a great many, should exist in a small province, at such a remote age, far from the sea, with no river, and little commerce, appeared to be inexplicable. Inexplicable, mysterious though it appeared, it was true. On the spot, with my own eyes, I had now verified it. A list of more than one hundred ruined cities and villages, situated in these mountains alone, I had in my hands; and on the spot I had tested it, and found it accurate, though not complete. More than thirty of these I had myself visited, or passed close by. Many others I had seen in the distance. Of their high antiquity I could not, after inspecting them, entertain a doubt. Here, then, we have a venerable record, more than three thousand years old, containing incidental description, statements, and statistics, which few men would be inclined to receive on trust, which not a few are attempting to throw aside as 'glaring absurdities,' and 'gross exaggerations,' and yet which close and thorough examination proves to be accurate in the most minute details. Here, again, are prophecies of ruin and utter desolation, pronounced and recorded when this country was in the height of its prosperity; and now, if I were asked to describe the present state of plains, mountains, towns, and villages, I could not possibly select language more appropriate, more accurate or more graphic, than the language of these very prophecies. My unalterable conviction is, that the eye of the omniscient God alone could have foreseen a doom so terrible as that which has fallen on Moab and Bashan."

BASHAN-HAVOTH-JAIR, Bay'-shan-hay'-voth-jay'-ir.—The country of Argob, settled by Jair and his family; Deut. iii. 14.

BATANÆA, Ba-ta'-ne-a.—It was the ancient kingdom of Bashan, situated to the north-east of Galonites. It was part of the territory of Herod Antipas, and is not mentioned in the Testament.

BAT.—This animal has often been ranked with birds; but it has the mouth of a quadruped, not the beak of a bird; it is covered with hair, not feathers; it produces its young alive, not from eggs; and in general much resembles a mouse. Bats were declared by Moses to be unclean, Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18, 19.

BATH, ba'th. — A measure for liquids, being the same with the ephah, and containing ten omers, or seven gallons and a half, 1 Kings vii. 26; 2 Chron. iv. 5. To bathe, see Lev. xv. 5. When the terrible judgments of God are abroad, his sword is said to be bathed in heaven, Isa. xxxiv. 5.

BATHRABBIM, Bath-rab'-bim. — The name of a tower; Song vii. 4.

BATHSHEBA, Bath'-she-bah, the seventh daughter, or daughter of an oath. — The daughter of Eliam, and the wife of Uriah the Hittite; 2 Sam. xi. 1—27. Called also Bathshua; 1 Chron. iii. 5. She became the wife of David, after her husband was slain by his guilty contrivance. She was the mother of Solomon.

BATTERING-RAM. — This was a long beam of strong wood, usually oak. One end was shaped like a ram's head, and when repeatedly and forcibly driven against a wall or fortification, it fractured it or beat it down. Sometimes fifty or a hundred men, or more, were employed to propel it. It was sometimes fixed on wheels.

BATTLE. — To turn the battle to the gate, is to fight valiantly, and drive back the enemy, who hath got as it were into the heart of the city, Isa. xxviii. 6. The battle is not to the strong, is not always gained by the most powerful, Eccl. ix. 11. The Lord fought with Sennacherib's army in battles of shaking; by shaking of his hand, an easy display of power, he cut them off with a terrible and alarming destruction, Isa. xxx. 32, and xxxvii. 36.

Jer. 50. 22. sound of b. in land

BATTLEMENT. — The eastern houses being built with flat roofs, for the purposes of walking on, &c., battlements or balustrades were necessary to prevent falling off, or to fight from with an enemy. Or it signifies the towers, walls, and fortifications of cities; Jer. v. 10. A Jew who had not a battlement on his roof, was held guilty of the death of him who fell from it; Deut. xxii. 8.

BATTLEMENT, S, Deut. 22. 8. shalt make b. for roof

Jer. 5. 10. take away her b. are not Lord's

BAVAI, Bav'-a-i. — The son of Henadad, and one that returned from the captivity; Neh. iii. 18.

BAY-TREE. — A beautiful and luxuriant evergreen tree growing in its native soil, spreading itself most luxuriantly. It abounded in the neighbourhood of Antioch, especially at the village and grove of Daphne, famous for the temple of Apollo. It is common also in the south of Europe. Probably it was of the laurel kind, and from it triumphal crowns were made for the victors and heroes of ancient days. Its beautiful appearance, its delightful shade, and the rich fragrance of its leaves, emblematically represent a man of wealth and prosperity; "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay-tree," &c.; Ps. xxxvii. 35.

BAZLITH, Baz'-lith. — One whose children were Nethinims; Neh. vii. 54.

BAZLUTH, Baz'-luth. — One whose descendants returned from the captivity; Ezra ii. 52.

BDELLIUM, Del'-le-um, a precious stone; Gen. ii. 12; Num. xi. 7. Thought to be the beryl crystal. Also a gum, which has the same name. It resembles myrrh; it is fragrant; the taste is bitter and pungent.

BEALIAH, Be-a-ly'-ah, the god of an idol.—One of the thirty brave men in David's army; 1 Chron. xii. 5.

BEALOTH, Be'-a-loth.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xv. 24.

BEAM, a piece of timber, 1 Sam. xvii. 7. The staff of Goliath's spear was like a weaver's beam. A strong plank used to support the roof of a building, 2 Kings vi. 2. The psalmist, speaking of the majesty and power of God, civ. 2—5, says, "Who stretcheth out the heavens like a curtain; who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters; who maketh the clouds his chariot," &c. When the Redeemer is condemning rash judgment, and showing its evil tendency, he says, Matt. vii. 3, 4, "But why dost thou look at that little infirmity, which is but like a mote, in thy brother's eye, while thou observest not the much greater fault, which is like a beam in thine own eye? Or how canst thou say to thy brother, with any appearance of justice, Hold still, and I will take the mote out of thine eye; while, behold, there is a beam in thine own eye? Thou partial hypocrite, begin thy reformation at home, and clear out the beam from thine own eye, or correct the errors of thy judgment, and the enormities of thy life; and then wilt thou better discern how to remove the mote out of thy brother's eye, and mayest attempt it with more decency, and greater success.

BEAM out of timber, Hab. 2. 11.
Matt. 7. 3. considerest not b. in own eye Songs 1. 17. b. of our house are cedar

BEAR, to carry, Jer. xvii. 21; Matt. xxvii. 32. to suffer or endure, 2 Cor. xi. 1; Rev. ii. 2. to bring forth, Gen. xviii. 13, to produce or yield, James iii. 12., to uphold, or support; Ps. lxxv. 3, to be punished for, Numb. xiv.

34. Figuratively, to bear the infirmities of the weak, Rom. xvi. 1. is to comply with their weakness so far as not to use our liberty to their offence, and to bear with them in their failings through ignorance or weakness, and not to condemn or despise them. Christ is said to bear the iniquities of his people, Isa. liii. 11.

BEAR. A well known quadruped and beast of prey. It is a native of America, and the northern parts of Europe and Asia. Towards the pole it is large and white; in other places it is smaller, and of a dark dusky brown. This animal is common in Palestine. David says, 1 Sam. xvii. 34, 36, that he fought with bears and lions; Elisha, 2 Kings ii. 23, 24, having cursed some of the children of Bethel for their insolence, two she-bears issued from a neighbouring forest, and devoured forty-two of them, as appears from 1 Sam. xvii. 34—37; 2 Sam. xvii. 8; 2 Kings ii. 24; Prov.

xvii. 12; xxviii. 15; Isa. xi. 7; lix. 11; Lam. iii. 10; Hos. xiii. 8; Amos v. 19.

Dr. Shaw says that these rugged animals are not peculiar to the bleak regions of the north, being found in Barbary; and Thevenot informs us that they inhabit the wilderness adjoining the Holy Land, and that he saw one near the northern extremities of the Red Sea.

BEARDS,—‘shaved off one half of their beards; 2 Sam. x. 4. The beard in the east is dressed and kept with great care, and is valued as the life itself. An Arabian losing his beard would feel more degraded than any one among us in being publicly whipped. To show any contempt towards it by plucking it, or even to touch it, except from respect or courtesy, was deemed a great insult; while to kiss it respectfully was regarded as a signal of courtesy. Plucking out the beard, cutting it entirely off, or neglecting to dress it, manifested deep mourning; Ezra ix. 3; Isa. xv. 2; Jer. xli. 5; xlvi. 37.

Under the law, beasts were classed into three divisions. (1.) Some were most pure; as oxen, sheep, goats, turtles, and pigeons. These, perhaps, were all that were reckoned clean at Noah's entrance into the ark; Lev. i. and xxii. 18, 19, and xxvii. 3; Gen. vii. 8, and viii. 20. (2.) Some were simply clean, and might be eaten as common food, but not sacrificed. This kind included a variety of such four-footed beasts, as both chewed the cud and divided the hoof; a variety of fowls, and all fishes that had fins and scales; together with four sorts of the locust kind of insects; but if any of these died without being killed, or had been torn, and so probably touched by an unclean beast, they became unclean; Lev. xi. 3, 9, 22; Deut. xiv. 4—6, 9, 20; Exod. xxii. 31. (3.) The rest of the animals were unclean. See Lev. xi; Deut. xiv. Beasts of the earth sometimes denote ravenous beasts; Jer. xv. 3.

Some of the heavenly powers, are called beasts; Rev. iv. v. and vi. but the word ought every where to be rendered LIVING CREATURES, as in Ezekiel i. Saints compare themselves to beasts, because of their ignorance and stupidity; Prov. xxx. 3; Psalm lxxiii. 22. Men in general are called beasts for their carnality, earthliness, ignorance, unteachableness, contention, hurtfulness to one another, Eccl. iii. 18. And the mildest animals, as oxen, cows, calves, sheeps, lambs, and doves, are emblems of the saints; while lions, bears, wolves, and serpents, are made emblems of the outrageously wicked; Isa. xi. 6, 7, 8. The most powerful animals, as eagles, lions, bullocks, he-goats, rams, leviathan, &c., are made emblems of kings and others, powerful and wealthy. The subjects of the kings of Assyria, Chaldea, and Egypt, are represented as beasts lodged under the shadow of their protection, as animals under a tree; Ezek. xxx. 6; Dan. iv. 14. Wicked men are called beasts, for their unreasonableness, earthly-mindedness, neglect of eternal things, and rage against God and his people; 1 Cor. xv. 32; 2 Pet. ii. 12. The Chaldean, Persian, Grecian, Roman, and Antichristian empires, are likened to beasts, because by methods carnal, cruel, and unjust, they were erected and maintained; Dan. vii. 11, and viii. 4; Rev. xii. xiii. and xvii. The scarlet-coloured beast, that carries the Roman antichrist, is the bloody empire of Rome, parted among persecuting princes enslaved to popery; Rev. xvii. 3. The passage of the Hebrews through the Red Sea and wilderness is likened to a beast going down into, or along a valley; it was easy and safe under the protecting influence of God; Isa. lxi. 14.

BEASTS—'fought with beasts at Ephesus.' 1 Cor. xv. 32. This passage is supposed to be by some, hypothetical, depending on the 'if.' By others, metaphorical, gladiators being put for beasts. And by others, as a fact; founded on the theatrical customs of the times, when men armed were constrained or paid to fight with beasts as a spectacle.

BEAT,—'the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them;' Acts xvi. 22. The criminal to be beaten, was always stripped naked; the lictors, who were sent to inflict punishment, thus beat them with rods. Beat 'in every synagogue.' Beating or scourging, was often done in the synagogue; Acts xxii. 19.

"BEATETH the air." So boxers in the games did from practice: hence the allusion; 1 Cor. ix. 26. It is also a proverbial expression for a man's missing his blow, and spending it, not on his enemy, but on empty air.

BEAUTY, (1.) comely appearance. But in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty; from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him; 2 Sam. xiv. 25. Saul and Jonathan were the beauty of Israel; 2 Sam. i. 19. (2.) Glory or dignity. Zion was the perfection of beauty; but in her captivity her beauty is represented as having departed. "And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed; her princes are become like harts that find no pasture; and they are gone without strength before the pursuer;" Lam. i. 6. (3.) Salvation and joy. "To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified;" Isa. lxi. 3. — (4.) Holiness and purity of moral character. And thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty; for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord God. See Ezek. xvi. 11, 12, 13, 14; Psalms xc. 17. To worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness, is to worship him in Christ his Holy One, in whom his purity is fully displayed; and in the exercise of holiness in heart and life; 1 Chron. xvi. 29; Ps. xxix. 2; xcvi. 9; and cx. 3. (5.) The grandeur of the temple; Ezek. vii. 20, Isa. lxiv. 11; Ps. xlvi. 2; l. 2; Lam. ii. 1. (6.) The fertility of the valley; Isa. xxviii. 4. (7.) The feet of Christian ministers are beautiful in the esteem of all who love the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, when they labour diligently in the work of the ministry; Isa. lii. 7; Rom. x. 15. (8.) Christ is beautiful in his person, office, and glorious work. "In that day shall the Branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel; Isa. iv. 2. (9.) Female beauty; Esther i. 11; Gen. xxix. 17. Rachel was beautiful and well-favoured. — And Jacob loved Rachel. How noble is the contemplation of beauty joined with wisdom, innocence, and piety!

BECHER, Be'-ker, the first-begotten.—The son of Ephraim; Num. xxvi. 35. Also a son of Benjamin; Gen. xli. 21.

BECHORATH, Be-ko'-rath, first-fruits.—The great grandfather of Kish, the father of King Saul; 1 Sam. ix. 1.

BEDS. Along the sides of the wall, or floor, a range of narrow beds or mattresses were often placed; and for further ease, &c., several velvet or damask bolsters were placed upon these mattresses, indulgences alluded to by the "stretching of themselves upon couches, and by the sewing of pillows to arm-holes;" Amos vi. 4; Ezek. xiii. 18. At one end of each chamber, there is a little gallery, raised three, four, or five feet above the floor, with a balustrade in front of it, with a few steps likewise leading up to it. Here they place their beds, a situation frequently alluded to in the Holy Scriptures; (Gen. xlix. 4; 2 Kings i. 6—16; Ps. cxxxii. 3.) which may likewise illustrate the circumstance of Hezekiah's turning his face, when he prayed, towards the wall. The narrow mattresses serve the double purpose of a seat by day, and a bed by night. The place of honour on these seats is the corner, which explains Amos iii. 12. "The children of Israel shall be taken out that dwell in Samaria, in the corner of a bed." Mr. Hanway describes the beds of Persia as consisting "only of two cotton quilts, one of which is folded double and serves as a mattress, the other as a covering, with a large flat pillow for the head." Was it on such a bed as this that Saul slept; 1 Sam. xxvi. 7? And was not the bed of the paralytic of this description? Luke v. 19; Mark ii. 4, 11.—"Arise, take up thy bed," that is, thy mattress—the quilt spread under thee.

BED,—'make all his bed;' 'turn all his couch;' be his kind nurse; Ps. xli. 3. In the book of Esther i. 6, we read of beds made of "gold and silver," which may receive illustration from modern Asiatic furniture. Forbes, in his "Oriental Memoirs," says: "The divan, or hall of audience, as also the room for receiving guests in private houses, is generally covered with a Persian carpet; around which are placed cushions of different shape and size, in cases of gold and silver kincob, or of scarlet cloth embroidered; these are occasionally moved into the courts and gardens, and placed under the shahmyanah for the accommodation of company." The bed decked with "tapestry" coverings, and with "carved works," mentioned in the book of Proverbs, vii. 16, may also receive illustration from the pen of the traveller. Du Tott, describing one to which he was conducted to repose upon, says, "fifteen mattresses of quilted cotton, about three inches thick, placed one upon another, formed the ground work, and were covered by a sheet of Indian linen, sewed on the last mattress. A coverlet of greensatin, adorned with gold embroidery in embossed work, was in like manner fastened to the sheets, the ends of which, turned in, were sewed down alternately. Two large pillows of crimson satin, covered with the like embroidery, in which there was no want of gold or spangles, rested on two cushions of the sofa, brought near to serve for a back, and intended to support our heads. The taking of the pillows entirely away would have been a good resource, if we had had any bolster; and the expedient of turning the other side upwards having only served to show they were embroidered in the same manner on the bottom, we at last determined to lay our handkerchiefs over them, which, however, did not prevent our being very sensible of the embossed ornaments underneath." This extract may also serve to show the degree of luxury to which the Hebrews had arrived in the time of the prophet Amos, who describes them as reposing on "beds of ivory," and stretching themselves upon their couches; Amos vi. 4.

There is only one passage in which the bed is introduced figuratively to which we would allude, and that is very emphatic and interesting. The prophet Isaiah, in describing the blessedness of the righteous in death, speaks of the grave in which they repose as a bed. "He shall enter into peace: they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness;" Isa. lvii. 2. Yes, to the righteous the grave is a bed, in which he sweetly reposes, alike free from care and pain, from sin and sorrow.

BED,—'the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it,' &c. Proverbial, to signify insufficient defence; Isa. xxviii. 20.

BEDAD, Be'-dad, alone.—A king of Moab; Gen. xxxvi. 35.

BEDAN, Be'-dan, door, bar, alone.—Supposed to be Jair who judged Israel twenty-two years; 1 Sam. xii. 11.

BEDEIAH, Be-dy'-ah, the only lord.—One who returned from the captivity; Ezra x. 35.

BEDSTEAD, Og's bedstead—"Be-hold his bedstead—nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth; Deut. iii. 11. That metallic bedsteads were used we have the testimony of profane, as well as sacred history. The Persians had beds of gold and silver; Esth. i. 6. This was the privilege of royalty. But Eastern bedsteads are not like ours. They consist of a platform raised on posts and beams, two or three feet above the ground; and the platform for supporting the bedding is not of sacking, but of wood, or of whatever material the other parts of the bedstead is made. It is boarded up at the sides, head, and foot, to retain the bedding, as in a trough. Sometimes the strong leaf-stems of the palm-tree are applied to the purpose of making bedsteads, in the East; but, for the most part, they are made of wood. They are not longer, in proportion to the human figure, than those with which we are acquainted.

Of the length of Og's bedstead, it has been observed that the "cubit of a man," which is mentioned in the text, "means the popular measure, being the length of the arm from the top of the little finger to the elbow, or about eighteen inches. Og's bedstead was, therefore, thirteen feet six inches long, and six feet broad; or, if we take, with some, the larger measurement of the cubit, fifteen feet and a half long, by six feet ten inches broad. Therefore, taking Mainnonides' reckoning, that a bed is generally a third part longer than a man, Og would be six cubits high; that is, either nine feet high, or, at most, ten feet and a half. The allowance of six cubits, or thereabouts, is very probable; for the height of Goliath was six cubits and a span, and he also was of the race of the old giants of Palestine.

BEE. A well-known insect, and found in nearly every part of the globe. Canaan was celebrated as a land flowing with milk and honey. Bees there abounded. The wild bees formed their combs in the crevices of the rocks, and in the hollows of trees. In Deut. i. 44, the enemies of Israel are compared to bees. Bees even in England, when irritated, have been known to kill a horse. The Psalmist refers to them in like manner; Ps. cxviii. 12. The figurative expressions, "the Lord shall hiss for the fly," in Isa. vii. 18, may allude to the practice of calling out the bees from their hives by a peculiar hissing sound, or to the habit of one species going forth to labour at the short buzzing sound which the queen bee makes with her wings while she is perched on the top of her cell. Some say that the reference is to the custom of calling the attention of any one in the street by a significant hiss or hem, &c.

BEELIADA, Be-el'-i-a-da, an open field.—One of David's sons, 1 Chron. xiv. 7.

BEELZEBUB, Be-el'-ze-bub.—See BAALZEBUB.

BEER, Be'-er, a well.—Name of a place in the land of Moab, where the Israelites encamped; Num. xxi. 16. Also a town in the tribe of Judah, to which Jotham fled; Judges ix. 21. Probably the El-birch of the present day, a large village, having about 700 inhabitants; about 12 miles north of Jerusalem.

BEERA, Be-e'-rah.—The son of Zophah; 1 Chron. vii. 37.

BEERAH, Be-e'-rah.—A head of the tribe of Reuben, carried into captivity by Tiglath-pilezer; 1 Chron. v. 6.

BEER-ELIM, Be-er-e'-lim, the well of the princes; Isa. xv. 8; thought to be the same with Num. xxi. 18.

BEERI, Be-e'-ry.—A Hittite, father-in-law to Esau; Gen. xxvi. 34. Also the father of Hosea; Chap. i. 1.

BEER LAHAI-ROI, Be'-er-la-hay'-i-roy, the well of him who lives and sees me.—A well situated between Kadesh and Bered, near to the desert of Shur. It received its name in consequence of the appearance of an angel to Hagar when a distressed exile; Gen. xvi. 14.

BEEROTH, Be-e'-roth.—A city belonging to the Gibeonites; Josh. ix. 17. Also a station of the Israelites; Deut. x. 6.

BEER-SHEBA, Be-er'-she-ba, the well of an oath, or the well of seven.—A place where Abraham made a covenant with Abimelech. It was about 70 miles south of Hebron. As Dan was the northern boundary of Canaan, towards Tyre, the expression, "from Dan to Beersheba," denoted the whole sacred territory, Dan being the northern, and Beersheba being the southern extremity. Beersheba has many interesting associations. See Gen. xxi. 31; Josh. xv. 28; xix. 2; 2 Chron. xix. 4; 1 Sam. viii. 2; 1 Kings xix. 3; Neh. xi. 27, 30; 2 Sam. xvii. 11. Beersheba seems to have been a favourite abode of the patriarchs. It became afterwards a town of some note. The book of Genesis has associated Beersheba with many interesting circumstances, and the allusions to it in other parts of Scripture are numerous.

Mr. Gadsby describes it as the most lovely spot he had seen since he left Europe. He says, "There was abundance of food for both man and beast. Hills and valleys were alike covered with verdure, and the number of flocks of sheep and goats was exceedingly large." Recent travellers have found wells of water near the supposed site of Beersheba. Mr. Robinson says, "Near the water-course are two circular wells of excellent water, more than fifty feet deep. They are both surrounded with drinking-troughs of stone, for the use of camels and flocks."

One of the wells may be the same that Abraham dug at the time he made the covenant with Abimelech. Beersheba was a memorable spot to Jacob. When he departed to see Joseph in Egypt, he, and his retinue, halted at this place, and here he offered sacrifices to the God of his father Isaac; Gen. xvi. 1. Here it was that he passed his youth with his father Isaac; Gen. xxvii. 6; and from it he was driven by the anger of his brother Esau, when he had obtained the blessing of his father; and when in the memorable night that followed, he received the first manifestation of God at Bethel; Gen. xxviii. 10, &c.

BEETLE, Lev. xi. 22.—Supposed to have been of the locust family. The Egyptians paid it divine honours.

John 1. 14. we b. his glory as glory
Rev. 11. 12. their enemies b. them

BEHEMOTH, Be'-he-moth.—Supposed to be the hippopotamus, or river horse. This ugly and bulky animal is about 17 feet long, 15 feet in circumference, and 7 feet in height; with jaws extending upwards of two feet, and its hard skin will resist the stroke of a sabre, Job. xl. 15.

The hippopotamus is nearly as large as the rhinoceros. (It is represented in the engraving.) The head of the animal is enormously large, and the jaws extend upwards two feet, and they are armed with four cutting teeth, each of which is twelve inches in length. The body is of a lightish colour, thinly covered with hair. The legs are three feet long. Though amphibious, the hoofs, which are quadrifid, or cloven into four, are unconnected with membranes. The hide is so thick and tough as to resist the edge of a sword or sabre.

Although an inhabitant of the waters, the hippopotamus is well known to breathe air like land animals. On land, indeed, he finds the chief part of his food. It has been pretended that he devours vast quanties of fish; but it appears with the fullest evidence, both from the relations of many travellers, and from the structure of the stomach, in specimens that have been dissected, that he is nourished solely, or almost solely, on vegetable food; though occasionally on aquatic plants, yet he very often leaves the waters, and commits wide devastations through all the cultivated fields adjacent to the river.

Unless when accidentally provoked, or wounded, he is never offensive; but when he is assaulted or hurt, his fury against the assailants is terrible. He will attack a boat, break it in pieces with his teeth; or, where the river is not too deep, he will raise it on his back, and upset it. If, when on shore, he is irritated, he will immediately betake himself to the water, and there, in his native element, manifest all his strength and resolution.

Bochart justly argues, that the Behemoth cannot be the elephant, because the strength of the elephant consists not in his belly; for though his hide on his back is very hard, yet on his belly it is soft. On the other hand, the description agrees well with the river-horse, the skin of whose belly is not only naturally as thick as on other parts of the body, but is a degree hardened, or made callous, by its being dragged over the rough stones at the bottom of the river. The skin, indeed, is so remarkably firm and thick as to be almost impenetrable, and to resist the force of spears and darts. This gave occasion to that hyperbole which Ptolemy mentions, lib. vii. c. 2, "The Indian robbers have a skin like that of river-horses; such as even arrows cannot penetrate."

The expression also, "he moveth his tail like a cedar," furnishes a strong presumption that the hippopotamus is intended in the text, and not the elephant, whose tail, like that of the hog, is small, weak, and inconsiderable. It is, according to Buffon, but two feet and a half or three feet long, and rather slender; but the tail of the hippopotamus, he observes, resembles that of the tortoise, only that it is incomparably thicker. The tail of the hippopotamus, Scheuchzer observes, although short, is thick, and may be compared with the cedar for its tapering, conical shape, its smoothness, thickness, and strength. But, although it is thick, short, and very firm, yet he moves and twists it at pleasure; which, in the Bible, is considered a proof of his prodigious strength.

Some critics think that the elephant is intended, and some the mammoth or mastodon. Dr. A. Clarke was of this opinion. He says, "That to which the part of a skeleton belonged, which I examined, must have been by computation not less than twenty-five feet high, and sixty feet in length! The bones of one toe I measured, and found them three feet in length! One of the very smallest grinders of an animal of this extinct species was full of processes on the surface more than one inch in depth, which showed that the animal had lived on flesh. I have just now weighed and found it, in its dry state, four pounds eight ounces avoirdupois; the same grinder of an elephant I have weighed also, and found it just two pounds. The mammoth, therefore, from this proportion, must have been as large as two elephants and a quarter, and as it appears to have been a many-toed animal, the springs which such a creature could make must have been almost incredible; nothing by swiftness could have escaped its pursuit. God seems to have made it as a proof of his power; and had it been prolific, and not become extinct, it would have depopulated the earth. Creatures of this kind might have been living in the days of Job." We incline, however, to the opinion that the river-horse is the animal described by Job.

BEKAH, Be'-kah.—A Jewish coin, value half a shekel, about ls. 1½d; Exod. xxxviii. 26.

BEL, ancient, subject to change.—Supposed to have been the symbol of the sun, though some think this idol symbolized Jupiter; Isa. xlvi. 1; Jer. l. 2; li. 44. This idol is the same as the Chaldean Baal. It is thought that the worship of the same idol passed over to Phœnicia, and then to Carthage. Hence the names Hannibal Asdrubal, &c. A temple was erected to Bel at the top range of the tower of Babel, having many statues of this idol, and one of solid gold. It was demolished by Xerxes, who carried off the immense wealth which the temple contained.

BELA, Be'-la, destroying.—The son of Beor, king of Dinhabah, in the eastern part of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 32.

son of the patriarch Benjamin. Gen. xlv. 21.

BELIAL, Be'-Je-al, wicked. — A word denoting a lewd and profligate fellow, who regards neither God nor man. Thus the inhabitants of Gibeah, who abused the Levite's wife, are termed "certain sons of Belial," Judges xix. 22. Hophni and Phineas, the unruly sons of Eli, the high priest, are also called "sons of Belial," on account of their indecent behaviour in the tabernacle of the Lord, 1 Sam. ii. 12. Some apply this name to Satan, 2 Cor. vi. 15.

BELIAL, devil, furious and obstinate in wickedness, Deut. 13. 13; Judg. 19. 22, and 20. 13; 1 Sam. 1. 16, and 2. 12, and 10. 27, and 25. 17. 53, and 30. 22; 2 Sam. 16. 7, and 20. 1, and 23. 6; 1 Kings 21. 10. 13; 2 Chr. 13. 7; 2 Cor. 6. 15.

BELIEVE, signifies, (1.) barely to assent to Gospel truth, Acts viii. 13. Thou doest believe that there is one God: thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble, James ii. 19. (2.) To receive and depend upon Jesus Christ for life and salvation, John i. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name, John iii. 15, 16; Rom. ix. 33; x. 4. (3.) To be fully persuaded, John vi. 69. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God. (4.) To hope and expect, Psalm xxvii. 13. I had fainted, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living. (5.) To be confident and assured; 2 Tim. i. 12.

The devils, we are told, believe and tremble. Our part is to believe and love. But it is hard to convince people that nothing short of this can be true Christian faith. So, because they are something terrified by the thought of God, they fancy they believe, though their hearts are far away from Him.

BELLOWS. "The bellows are burned, the lead is consumed of the fire; the founder melteth in vain; for the wicked are not plucked away. Reprobate silver shall men call them, because the Lord hath rejecteth them;" Jer. vi. 29, 30. This refers to the process called cupellation. Precious metal to be combined with a baser kind is put with a due proportion of lead, into a crucible made of burnt bones, called a cupel. Being subjected to heat, the lead is converted into a glassy calx, which dissolves and attracts all the imperfect metals, and leaves that which is precious pure from alloy. In this process the lead has been consumed, the bellows burned, and there was no scoria running down the sides of the cupel to indicate that all was right within. Every kind of chastisement and instruction had been exhausted upon the Jews; but there was not reformation; they were fit for nothing but to be rejected.

BELLS. Moses ordained, that the lower part of the blue tunic, which the priest wore when he performed religious ceremonies, should be adorned with pomegranates and golden bells, intermixed equally at certain distances; Exod. xxviii. 33—35.

BELLS—'of the horses, Holiness,' &c. Zech. xiv. 20. An allusion to the custom in the east of inscribing mottoes on the horses' trappings. They were attached to the bridles and belts of war-horses in order to train them to the noise and tumult of battle. The Persian royal robe had similar bells attached. Many of the Eastern kings and nobles have now bells suspended on their persons for ornament, and to give notice of their approach.

BELSHAZZAR, Bel-shaz'-zar, master of the treasure.—The last king of Babylon, and the grandson of Nebuchadnezzar ; Dan. i. 7. During the time that Babylon was invested by a conquering army under Cyrus, he gave a banquet to a thousand of his nobles and courtiers ; and when he was heated with wine, he commanded that the vessels of gold and silver, which Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem, to be brought to the banqueting-hall, that he and his nobles and his wives and concubines might drink out of them. Thus he manifested his vanity, profaneness, and pride ; he feared neither God nor man. In the midst of the feast, while the king and his guests were profanely jovial and absorbed in pleasure, a strange phenomenon suddenly arrested their attention, and interrupted their mirth. A Divine hand appeared on the wall, and wrote certain mysterious words there, which Daniel, the prophet of God, interpreted ; “MENE MENE TEKEL, UPHARSIN,” meaning, “God hath finished thy kingdom, Thou art weighed in the balances and found wanting. Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians ;” Dan. v. 5, 6. In the course of the night the city was taken by Cyrus, and Belshazzar was slain. “The city,” says one, “was deemed impregnable ; and the king and his people, confident their enemies would, in despair, raise the siege, from their lofty walls and towers, derided them. Cyrus however persevered, and employed each month the twelfth part of his army in carrying on his plans. He at length succeeded by stratagem. Knowing that the citizens were busy in preparing for a great festival, he employed the soldiers at some distance from the city, to divert the Euphrates from its course through the city. He conducted it into a lake, or, as Xenophon says, into a large ditch, and rendered it easy to be forded. Meantime he prosecuted with vigour the siege, so that the citizens remained ignorant of his designs. On the night of the festival, he made one half of the army pass through the channel from above, and the other from below the city, to meet at the gates, which formed the entrance from the river. These gates had been left open from the negligence or intoxicated state of the keepers. Drunkenness was a prevailing vice in all ranks of the Babylonians. Imitating the shouts of the revellers, the army surrounded the palace. The king imagining that the noise proceeded from a drunken mob, ordered the guards to open the gates and ascertain the cause of the clamour. Instantly the enemy rushed in, overthrew every thing that opposed them, penetrated the royal apartment, and slew the monarch. “All who were seen in the streets were put to the sword, and the houses of those who annoyed the invaders from the roofs were burnt.” Herodotus informs us that the part of the city near the river was in possession of the Persians, before their entrance was known in the centre of the city ;—a circumstance indicative of its vast extent.

BELTESHAZZAR, Bel-te'-shaz-zar, who lays up treasures in secret.—A name given to Daniel at the court of Nebuchadnezzar; Dan. i. 7.

BENEVOLENCE, due, 1 Cor. 7. 3.

BEN-HADAD, Ben-hay'-dad, the son of clamour.—The king of Syria, who came to the assistance of Asa, king of Judah, against Baasha, king of Israel. 1 Kings xv. 18.—Also king of Syria, son of the preceding; he made war upon Ahab, but was defeated; 2 Kings vi. 24.—Also the son of Hazael, defeated by Jehoash, three times, and compelled to surrender the country beyond the Jordan; 2 Kings xiii. 24.

BEN-HAIL, Ben-hay'-il, the son of strength.—Jehoshaphat sent him to all his cities, to instruct the people, and reclaim them from idolatry; 2 Chron. xvii. 7.

BENINU, Ben'-e-nu, our sons.—See Neh. x. 13.

BENJAMIN, Ben'-ja-min, son of my right hand.—The youngest son of Jacob and Rachel, who was born A. M. 2272; Gen. xxxv. 16, 17, &c.—His mother died immediately after his birth, and with her last breath called him BENONI, son of my sorrow. Jacob however changed his name to Benjamin, and he proved a great comfort to the aged patriarch, by whom, and by his brother Joseph, he was greatly beloved.

When the Israelites came up out of Egypt, and Moses by divine command numbered in the wilderness all those that were capable of bearing arms, the descendants of Benjamin amounted to thirty-five thousand four hundred. The country allotted to them, on the settlement of the tribes in Canaan, lay contiguous to that inhabited by the tribe of Judah. And when the house of David became rent under the reign of Rehoboam, ten of the tribes having revolted, that of Benjamin continued steady in its attachment to Judah, and formed a part of that kingdom; 1 Kings xii. 17—23. When Moses pronounced a solemn benediction on the children of Israel before his death, of Benjamin he said, "The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him, and Jehovah shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders;" Deut. xxxiii. 12. Jacob also had, when on his death-bed, previously delivered the following prophetic oracle concerning this tribe, "Benjamin shall raven as a wolf; in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil;" Gen. xlix. 27. It was from the tribe of Benjamin that Paul, the great apostle of the Gentiles, gloried in having descended; Phil. iii. 5.

BENJAMITES,—that were slain are said in Judges xx. 35, to be 25,100, but in verse 46, they are reckoned only at 25,000. So Mark says, xvi. 14, that Christ appeared to the eleven, though Thomas was absent. There are similar examples in profane writers. 100 acres of land were by the Romans called centuria, but afterwards the same term was given to double that number of acres. The tribes into which the population of Rome was divided, were so denominated, because they were originally three in number; but the same appellation was retained, though they were afterwards augmented to thirty-five. There is no cause therefore for infidels to rail on this account, for to speak in round numbers, characterizes the ancient as well as the modern writers.

BENJAMIN'S MESS.—Among the ancients each one had a dish to himself. They expressed esteem by supplying their most honoured guests with a profusion of food: variety, rather than quantity, may, however, be meant by that served to Benjamin; Gen. xliii. 34.

BENO, Be'-no.—A descendant of Levi; 1 Chron. 24. 26.

BEN-ONI, Be-no'-ni.—son of my grief.—The name which Rachel gave her son, whom Jacob named Benjamin, not wishing to have his name as a constant memorial of his beloved Rachel's death; Gen. xxxv. 18.

BEN-ZOHETH, Ben-zo'-eth, the son of separation.—One of the posterity of Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 20.

BEON, Be'-on, in affliction.—A city beyond Jordan; Num. xxxii. 3.

BEOR, Be'-or, burning.—The father of Balaam; Num. xxii. 5.—The father of Bela; Gen. xxxvi. 32.

BERA, Be'-ra, a well.—A king of Sodom, in the time of Abraham, tributary to Chederlaomer; Gen. xiv. 2.

BERACHAH, Ber'-a-kah, blessing.—One who repaired to king David at Ziklag; 1 Chron. xii. 3.

BERACHIAH, or BERECHIAH, Ber-a-ky'-ah, or Ber-e-ky'-ah, speaking well of the Lord.—One of the posterity of Levi; 1 Chron. vi. 39.—A descendant of king David; 1 Chron. ix. 16. — A descendant of Judah; 1 Chron. iii. 20. See also Neh. iii. 4, 30.

BERAIAH, Be-ra-i'-ah, the choosing of the Lord.—A descendant of Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 21.

BEREA, Be-re'-ah, heavy, weighty.—A city of Macedonia, about twenty miles west of Thessalonica, on the river Astræus, near Mount Pindus. It is now called Vereia and has about 20,000 inhabitants, Greeks and Turks. There Paul preached the gospel with great success; for the Jewish residents are described as "more noble," more ingenuous, or candid, than those of Thessalonica, because they diligently searched the Scriptures, to discover the truth of the doctrines taught by the Apostles.

BEREAVE. To deprive, to take from. Great trouble; Lam. i. 20. — To rob; Hos. xiii. 8. — To be left destitute; Jer. xviii. 21.

BEREAVE, Jer. 15. 7. I will b. them of children, 13. 21.

BERI, Be'-ry, my son, or my corn.—A descendant of Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 36.

BERIAH, Be-ry'-ah, in fellowship, or envy.—The son of Asher, the father of Heber; Gen. xlvi. 17.

BERITH, Be'-rith, covenant.—A deity worshipped by the Canaanites; Judges ix. 46.

BERNICE, Ber-ny'-se, bringer of victory.—The daughter of Agrippa, also king of the Jews. She and Agrippa sat in pomp, and heard the discourses which Paul delivered before Festus. She was one of the most voluptuous and fascinating ladies of the age. She was betrothed to Marcus, son of Lysimachus, governor of Alexandria, and afterwards married to Herod, king of Chalcis, her own uncle. On the death of her husband, she married Polemon, king of Pontus; but she left him, and returned to Agrippa, her brother, and lived with him in incest. They were objects of satire to the Roman poet, Juvenal.

BERODACH BALADAN, Be-ro'-dak bal'-a-dan, the son of death.—The son of Baladan, king of Babylon, who sent ambassadors to king Hezekiah, with letters and presents, when he heard he had been sick; 2 Kings xx. 12. This became a snare to that good king.

BEROTHAI, Ber'-o-thay, wells.—A city; 2 Sam. viii. 8.

BEROTHAH, Be-ro'-thah, wells.—A city of Syria, supposed to be Beroth; Ezek. xlvi. 16.

BERYL.—A beautiful pellucid gem, in colour like the sea, or of a bluish green. It was the tenth stone in the breast-plate of the high priest; and is found in the East Indies, Peru, Siberia, &c.; Exod. xxxix. 13; Ezek. x. 9; Dan. x. 6; Rev. xxi. 20.

BETAH, Be'-tah, confidence.—A city of Syria; 2 Sam. viii. 8.

BETEN, Be'-ten, the belly.—A city of Canaan, on the borders of the tribe of Asher; Josh. xix. 25.

BETH, house.—A word combined with various names. Sometimes means habitation, abode, temple, place.

BETHABARA, Beth-ab'-ba-rah, the house of passage.—A place beyond Jordan, where John baptized; John i. 28. From its name, it is probably the place where the Jordan was fordable. No doubt there was a ford there. Probably the Bethbara, Judges vii. 24.

BETH-ANATH, Beth'-a-nath, the house of affliction.—A city on the borders of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 38.

BETH-ANOTH, Beth'-a-noth, the house of affliction.—A city in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 59.

BETHANY, Beth'-a-ny, the house of song, of affliction.—A town situated at the foot of Mount Olivet, about two miles from Jerusalem; John xi. 18. It was here that Martha and Mary lived, with their brother Lazarus, whom Jesus raised from the dead.

Christ often visited Bethany, especially just before the close of his mission on earth; and it was the scene of some of the most interesting events of his life; Matt. xxi. 17; xxvi. 6; Mark xi. 11, 12; xiv. 3; John xi. 1—46; xii. 1—3. Bethany is now a poor miserable little village, consisting of a cluster of mud hovels, inhabited by about twenty families. Travellers are shown the pretended site of the grave of Lazarus.

It does not, however, correspond with the idea formed in the mind, from reading John xi. 38. In the village is pointed out a ruin, as the site of the house of Mary and Martha—the dwelling of Simon the leper—the spot where the barren fig tree withered under the curse, and the place where Judas hanged himself. From this place Jesus ascended into heaven; John xi.; Luke xxiv. 50.

Though the hamlet is poor, the surrounding country is very pleasant. Mr. Gadsby, a recent traveller, says, "We arrived at the south side of Bethany. Turning to take a view of the way we had come, I was struck with the magnificence of the view. We have nothing in England to equal it. Bethany stands on a lovely spot, though it is left to run wild. From its elevation I caught a glimpse of the Jordan and the Dead Sea, the former winding its dazzling course along, with the mountains of Moab beyond, about 30 miles from us."

"How delighted I was one evening," says Professor Porter, "when seated on a rocky bank beside the village, reading the story of Lazarus, to hear a passing villager say, 'There is the tomb of Lazarus, and yonder is the house of Martha!' They may not be, most probably they are not, the real places; but this is Bethany, and the miracle wrought there still dwells in the memory of its inhabitants. And when the unvarying features of nature are there too—the cliffs, the secluded glen, the Mount of Olives—few will think of traditional 'holy places.' From the place where I sat I saw—as Martha and Mary had seen from the housetop—those blue mountains beyond Jordan, where Jesus was abiding when they sent unto Him, saying, "Lord, behold, he whom Thou lovest is sick," John x. 40; xi. 3. I also saw the road "from Jerusalem to Jericho" winding past the village, and away down the rocky declivities into the wilderness. By that road Jesus was expected; and one can fancy with what earnest, longing eyes the sisters looked along it—ever and anon returning and looking, from the first dawn till waning twilight. And when at last He did come, and Martha heard the news, one can picture the touching scene, how she ran along that road, and with streaming eyes and quivering lips uttered the half-reproachful and still half-hopeful cry, "Lord, if Thou hadst been here my brother had not died."

BETH-ARABAH, Beth-ar'-ra-bah, the house of sweet smell. Two cities mentioned; Josh. xv. 6, 61; xviii. 22.

BETH-ARAM, Beth-'ar-am, the house of height.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xiii. 27. Now called Livias.

BETH-ARBEL, the house of ambush.—A place in Armenia; Hosea x. 14.

BETH-AVEN, Beth-ay'-ven, the house of vanity.—The same as BETHEL. This city on the revolt of the ten tribes, belonged to the kingdom of Israel, and there Jeroboam set up the golden calves; whence the prophet calls it in derision, BETHAVEN, the house of vanity; Hosea iv. 15, instead of BETHEL, the house of God.

BETH-AZMAVETH, Beth-az'-ma-veh, the house of death's strength.—A place mentioned; Neh. vii. 28.

BETH-BAAL-MEON, Beth-bay'-al-me'-on, idol of the dwelling-place.—A city in the tribe of Reuben; Josh. xiii. 17.

BETHBARAH, Beth-bay'-rah, the chosen house.—A place beyond Jordan; Judges vii. 24. Same as BETHBARA.

BETH-BIREI, Beth-bir'-re-i, the house of my Creator.—A city in the tribe of Simeon; 1 Chron. iv. 31.

of the lamb.—A city in the tribe of Dan; 1 Sam. vii. 11.

BETH-DAGON, Beth-day'-gon, the house of fish, of corn, of the god Dagon.—Cities in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 41. And of Asher; Josh. xix. 27.

BETH-DIBLATHAIM, Beth-dib-la-thay'im, the house of dry figs.—A city in Canaan; Jer. xlvi. 22.

BETH-EL, Beth'-el, the house of God.—A city which lay about twelve miles to the north of Jerusalem, on the road to Shechem. Its original name was Luz. It was called Bethel because God manifested himself there to Jacob in a vision; Gen. xxviii. 19. Here Jacob passed a night on his way to Mesopotamia, and had the vision of the miraculous ladder; in the morning he took the stone which he had made his pillow, poured oil upon it, and set it up for a pillar, calling the place Bethel, and impressed with the Divine manifestations, he exclaimed "this is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." The most remarkable circumstance connected with this place is recorded, ch. xxxi. 13; "I am the God of Bethel, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me." How amazing it is that Jehovah should speak thus of any spot of this earth!

Bethel was a favourite resort with Jacob, and he repaired to it to perform the vow he had made to God in the day of his distress; Gen. xxxv. 1—15. At Bethel the ark of the covenant was long lodged, and probably the tabernacle also; Judges xx. 26. Afterwards on account of its idolatry, it was destroyed; Hosea iv. 15; x. 5; Amos v. 5, 6. See Bethaven.

BETH-EMEK, Beth-e'-mek, the house of deepness.—A frontier city of the tribe of Asher; Josh. xix. 27.

BETHER, Be'-ther, mountains of separation, or of spices.—Mountains of Bether; Song ii. 17, translated Mountain of Spices. According to Eusebius, they were about twelve miles from Jerusalem. Probably BETH-HORON.

BETHESDA, Beth-es'-da, the house of effusion, of pity.—The name of a public pool, or bath, at Jerusalem, which had five porticos or piazzas round it; John v. 2, &c. There are still some remains of it. That which travellers are shown as the pool, is a dry basin or reservoir, measuring 360 feet in length, and 130 feet in breadth, and 75 feet in depth to the bottom. The opinion is that it is not probable that the water of this pool was medicinal, for its utility then would not be periodical. Its power to heal is ascribed to a supernatural influence operating at certain seasons, perhaps at certain of the great festivals. This influence is plainly ascribed to an angel or messenger, and the common opinion that he was one of the angelic hosts, seems most consistent with the language, which is certainly too highly metaphorical for the otherwise simple narrative, if applied to the virtue of minerals in the water, or to any unknown agent. Tertullian says the water ceased to cure any disease, after the Jews persevered in rejecting Christ; John v. 1—7.

BETH-GADER, Beth-gay'-der.—One of the descendants of Caleb; 1 Chron. ii. 51.

BETH-GAMUL, Beth-gay'-mul, the house of recompense, of the camel.—A city in the tribe of Reuben; Jer. xlviii. 23.

BETH-HACCEREM, Beth-hak'-se-rem, or Beth-hak'-ke-rem, house of the vineyard.—A city on an eminence between Jerusalem and Tekoa; Jer. vi. 1; Neh. iii. 14.

BETH-HARAN, Beth-hay'-ran, the house of a hill.—A fenced city of Gilead; Num. xxxii. 36.

BETH-HOGLA, Beth-hog'-lah.—Cities in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 6.—And of Benjamin; Josh. xviii. 21.

BETH-HORON, Beth-ho'-ron, the house of wrath, of liberty.—The names of two cities in the tribe of Ephraim, built by a female called Sherah; 1 Chron. vii. 24. One was on an eminence, the other in a valley.

BETH-JESHIMOTH, Beth-jesh'-e-moth, the house of desolation.—A city in the tribe of Reuben, situated between the mountains of Abarim and the river Jordan. It stood near the junction of the Jordan with the Dead Sea, about 10 miles south-east of Jericho; Josh. xiii. 20.

BETH-LEBAOTH, Beth-leb'-a-oth, the house of lionesses.—A city in the tribe of Simeon; Josh. xix. 6. Called Lebaoth; Josh. xv. 32.

BETH-LEHEM, Beth'-le-hem, the house of bread, of war.—A city in the tribe of Judah; and also called Ephrath fruitful, Gen. xlviii. 7; or Ephrath; Micah v. 2; and the inhabitants of Ephrathites; Ruth i. 2; 1 Sam. xvii. 12. So called to distinguish it from Bethlehem in the tribe of Zebulun; Josh. xix. 15. It is beautifully situated on an eminence, overlooking Tekoah, six miles south-east of Jerusalem, in a district watered by a small rivulet, and richly covered with olives, vines, fig-trees. In this place David was born, and spent his early years as a shepherd. Hence it is called the city of David. Here also the scene of the beautiful narrative of Ruth, is laid. But its highest honour is, that here our divine Lord condescended to be born of woman; Micah v. 2.

The cave in which it is said our Saviour was born, was not within the city. The church, built over it by the empress Helena, still exists, but is blended with the necessary repairs and restorations from the devastations of inimical hordes of Mahometans and others, during the Crusades, and especially at the close of the thirteenth century. Near it are said to be the chapel of the innocents and their sepulchre; as well as the sepulchres of Jerome, of Eusebius, and of Paula and Eustochius. The tomb of Rachel, near Bethlehem, is of no antiquity. Dr. Clarke found Bethlehem a larger place than he expected, and describes the first view of it as imposing. It is built on the ridge of a hill which overlooks the valley reaching to the Dead Sea, of which it commands a distinct prospect; so that any phenomenon elevated over Bethlehem, would be seen from afar in the east country, beyond the Dead Sea. The convent is not in the town, but adjacent; it has the air of a fortress, and might even stand a siege against the Turks. The inmates manufacture crucifixes and beads for the devout, and mark religious emblems on the persons of pilgrims, by means of gunpowder. The Doctor descended into the valley of Bethlehem, where he found a well of "pure and delicious water," which he thinks is that so ardently longed for by David; 2 Sam. xxiii. 15.

BETHLEHEM, "And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me to drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem!" It is said there were seventy fountains there, whose waters were denominated golden, and of which it was death for any one to drink, except the king, and his eldest son; 2 Sam. xxiii. 15. "And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Bethlehem, and brought it to David: nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the Lord;" 2 Sam. xxiii. 16.

When the three valiant men, so full of love to their monarch, brought the water to the king, he refused to drink it; for as the men risked their lives he considered it as their blood, and thus gave a noble instance of self-denial. When the army of Alexander the Great was greatly oppressed with heat and thirst, a soldier brought him a cup of water; he ordered it to be taken back, saying, I cannot bear to drink alone, while so many are in want, and this cup is too small to be divided among the whole. They were both noble examples; but David added piety to bravery; he "poured it out unto the Lord."

BETH-MAACHAH, Beth-may'-akah, house of bruising.—A city of Palestine; 2 Sam. xx. 14.

BETH-MARCABOTH, Beth-mar'-ca-both, the house of bitterness, chariots wiped out.—A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Simeon; Josh. xix. 5.

BETH-MEON, Beth-me'-on, the house of the dwelling-place.—A city belonging to the Moabites, in the tribe of Reuben; Jer. xlviii. 23.

BETH-NIMRAH, Beth-nim'-rah, the house of rebellion.—A city in the tribe of Gad, in Gilead; Numbers xxxii. 36.

BETH-PALET, Beth-pay'-let, the house of expulsion.—A city in the south part of the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 27.

BETH-PAZZEZ, Beth-paz'-zez, the house of dividing asunder.—A city in Palestine, in the tribe of Issachar; Josh. xix. 21.

BETH-PEOR, Beth-pe'-or, the house of gaping.—A city of Moab, given to the tribe of Reuben; Deut. iv. 46.

BETHPHAGE, Beth'-fa-je, the house of early figs.—A small village in Mount Olivet, and somewhat nearer Jerusalem than Bethany; Matt. xxi. 1.

BETH-RAPHA, Beth'-ra-fah, the house of health.—A descendant of the patriarch Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 12.

BETH-REHOB, Beth'-re-hob, the house of liberty.—Same as REHOB. A city of Syria; 2 Sam. x. 6.

BETHSAIDA, Beth-say'-e-da, the house of fruits of hunters.—A city on the lake of Galilee, near where it receives the Jordan. It belonged to the tribe of Naphtali, at the north end of the lake of Gennesaret. Christ often visited this place, in which resided Peter, Andrew, Philip, and probably Nathanael. Many of his miracles were performed here; Mark viii. 22—26; John i. 44, 45. Afterwards built into a magnificent city by Philip the tetrarch, who called it Julius, out of respect to Julia, daughter of Augustus Cæsar. Though frequently blessed with the Saviour's ministry, and his working of miracles, the conduct of the inhabitants exemplified the prophetic complaint, "Who hath believed our report?" Isa. liii. 1. Hence that affecting declaration, "Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not;—Woe unto thee, Chorazin! Woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the day of judgment than for you;" Matt. xi. 21, 22; Luke x. 13.

These woes have been accomplished long ago, as Bethsaida exists in little more than the name, being a hamlet, consisting of only a few poor cottages. In its vicinity are the ruins of a large cistern, the remains of a church, and a mass of broken columns.

BETH-SHAN, Beth'-shan, the house of ivory, change.—A city of the half tribe of Manasseh, not far from the west side of the Jordan; 1 Sam. xxxi. 10.

BETHSHEMESH, Beth'-she-mesh, the house of the sun.—A city of the tribe of Judah; Josh. xxi. 16.—A city in the tribe of Issachar; Josh. xix. 22.—A city in the tribe of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 38; Judges i. 33.—In 1 Sam. vi. 19, we read that the Lord smote 50,070 inhabitants of Bethshemesh for looking into the ark; which number in the Arabic and Syriac versions, is 5070. Three of the Mss. collated by Dr. Kennicot, and Josephus, read simply seventy men, and omit 50,000. Seventy is evidently the true number: for as Bethshemesh was but a "small village;" it is improbable that it could contain so many as 50,000 inhabitants.

BETH-SHITTAH, Beth-shit'-tah, house of thorns.—Gideon pursued the Midianites to this place; Judges vii. 22.

BETH-TAPPUAH, Beth-tap'-puah, the house of an apple tree.—A city in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 53.

BETHUEL, Be-thew'-el, filiation of God.—The son of Nahor and Milcah. He was Abraham's nephew, and the father of Rebekah, the wife of Isaac; Gen. xxii. 22, 23.

BETHUL, Be'-thul, the virgin of the Lord.—A city in the tribe of Simeon; Josh. xix. 4.

BETH-ZUR, Beth'-zur, the house of a rock.—A city of Judah, being south of Edom; Josh. xv. 58.

BETROTH. Betrothing or espousing was a solemn promise of marriage made by two persons, each to the other, at such a distance of time as they agreed upon. The agreement was in this form: "On such a day of such a month, in such a year, A. the son of A. has said to B. the daughter of B. be thou my spouse according to the law of Moses and the Israelites, and I will give thee, for the portion of thy virginity, the sum of two hundred zuzims, as it is ordained by the law. And the said B. has consented to become his spouse upon these conditions, which the said A. has promised to perform upon the day of marriage. To this the said A. obliges himself; and for this he engages all his goods, even as far as the cloak which he wears upon his shoulder. Moreover, he promises to perform all that is intended in contracts of marriage in favour of the Israelitish women. Witnesses, A. B. C." The promise by a piece of silver, and without writing, was made before witnesses, when the young man said to his mistress, "Receive this piece of silver, as a pledge that you shall become my spouse." After such espousal was made, (which was generally when the parties were young,) the woman continued with her parents several months, if not some years, before she was brought home and her marriage consummated; Judges xiv. 8.

BEULAH, Be-u'-lah, married. — A name given to the Jewish church, to denote Divine union care, and love; Isa. lxii. 4.

BEWAIL, to be deeply affected, to mourn, Lev. x. 6; Deut. xxi. 13. imports an extreme measure of grief, Luke viii. 52; 2 Cor. xii. 21.

BEWARE, to take care, Prov. xix. 25, to have a singular and special regard to, Exod. xxiii. 21. There are several things of which Christians ought to beware, viz., of forgetting God, Deut. vi. 12, of evil thoughts, Deut. xv. 9, of things forbidden, Judg. xiii. 4, 13, of dangers foretold, 2 Kings vi. 9, of God's wrath, Acts xiii. 40, of false teachers, Matt. vii. 15, of evil workers, Phil. iii. 2, of the error of the wicked, 2 Pet. iii. 17, of covetousness, Luke xii. 15; xx. 46.

BEWARE OF DOGS, Phil. iii. 2. — Probably alludes to Isa. lvi. 10, 11, 12. The Jews used to call the Gentiles dogs. The apostle so calls false teachers, cautioning against them as against devouring dogs. It was a custom at Rome to chain their dogs at the doors of their houses, and to put an inscription over them, "Beware of this dog." To this there may be an allusion.

BEWITCH. — To deceive and to delude—to practise sorcery upon, to mislead by delusive pretences; Gal. iii. 1.

BEWITCHED YOU, Gal. iii. 1. — The Easterns are much given to superstition, and greatly fear witchcraft. They suspend from their children's necks the figure of an open hand, as a counter charm to an evil eye. Even adults carry about them scraps of the Koran. The phrase is employed by Paul as an allusion, not as a confirmation of the practice.

BEYOND, on the other side, Gen. 1. 10. Over and after, Lev. xv. 25. To pass over, 1 Sam. xx. 36; 1 Kings xiv. 15; 1 Chron. xix. 16; Ezra iv. 17, 20; Neh. ii. 7, 9; Isa. vii. 20; Zeph. iii. 10. Beyond measure, Mark vi. 51; 2 Cor. x. 14.

BEZALEEL, Be-zal'e-el, in the shadow of God. — The principal artificer of the tabernacle; Exod. xxxi. 2.

BEZEK, Be'-zek, lightning, in chains. — A city in the tribe of Judah; Judges i. 4—7.

BEZER, Be'-zer, or BOZRA, or BOSTRA, munition, or vine branches.—A city beyond Jordan; Deut. iv. 43. A descendant of Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 37.

BIBLE.—The word is derived from the Greek biblos, a book, biblos being the name of a plant, the leaves of which were used for writing upon. Rolls of these were called biblia, books, or bibles. Before this name was used, the sacred books were denominated the scripture or writing, from graphe; or the scriptures, the sacred writings, the sacred letters, from graphai.

The Arrangement of the Books of the Bible is literary, or according to the character of the subjects. In following the usually received order, the Pentateuch may first be considered, and a wide range of observation is presented by its genuineness and credibility; and the variations between its Samaritan and Hebrew copies; with the literary characteristics of these five books.

The Historical books from Joshua to Esther inclusive, are collections from the authentic records of the Jewish nation, with numerous references, to "the Book of Jasher," "Chronicles of Kings," and writings of Gad, Nathan, and Iddo; and are supposed to have been finally arranged by Ezra.

The Poetical writings—as they have been anciently styled—include from Job to Solomon's Song. They are by the Jews classed among the Holy Writings, and comprise productions of very different periods of time, and exceedingly varied literary complexion.

The prophetic character was ascribed to Enoch and others: but reckoning from Moses to Malachi, we find a series of prophets, who flourished in a continued succession during a period of more than one thousand years. The different kinds of prophets, their schools, situation, manner of living, nature of their inspiration, collected writings, mode of prophesying, number and order of their books, &c., &c., are topics replete with interest, on which it would be easier to write pages than paragraphs.

The historical writings of the four Evangelists have been long and generally styled Gospels, as containing the cheering intelligence of Messiah's advent and vicarious substitution for the human race. Their general scope, sources, number, and importance, might be indefinitely amplified.

The Acts of the Apostles, with regard to title, author, genuineness and authenticity, scope, chronology, contents, style, and importance, can here be only adverted to.

There are not fewer than twenty-one Apostolic Epistles, exhibiting the finest specimens of christian correspondence, and the fullest establishment of Sacred doctrine. Their nature and importance, order and number, contents and respective style, &c., &c., suggest a multitude of particulars, on which it is regretted that the present limits will not allow an enlarged disquisition.

The Revelation or Apocalypse of John properly closes the books of the Holy Scripture. Its genuineness, from external and internal evidence, date, occasion, scope, contents, and peculiar style, have been animadverted upon by various authors; but certainly are not even now incapable of additional illustration.

Character of the Sacred Writers.—Moses is placed first; an extensive writer, perhaps indebted to documents furnished by Shem, Abraham, Jacob, and others; his style, phraseology, &c., are also worthy of notice.

The book of Job is of deep antiquity; whether written by himself, or Elihu, or Moses, or Solomon, is uncertain. Properly entitled the "Idumean Encyclopædia."

Joshua is a faithful historian. His division of the conquered nations is thought to have given the first idea of Geographical charts. He is distinguished for pious fidelity rather than literary fame.

Samuel, on every account, sustains here a pre-eminent distinction; honoured with the prophetic spirit from childhood, and founder of the prophetic schools, he was most competent to write with accuracy and intelligence his valuable historical records.

David's incomparable muse has been universally acknowledged and eulogized, and by a competent critic, it has been stated that his gited influence evidently created a new era in the productions of the Hebrew muse. The most inspired aspect of his genius appears to present itself when he looks abroad on the universe with the eye of a poet, and with the breast of a glad and grateful worshipper. As a specimen, read Ps. civ.

Solomon, with whose very name we associate every thing that is intelligent, was a universal writer, and his unrivalled Proverbs, &c., which we now possess, are perhaps but the fragments of his mighty and matchless genius—the noblest intellectual structure in ruins!

Taking the Prophets in historical order, the name of Jonah first appears; whose book is a beautiful prosaic recital, except the thanksgiving ode.

Amos interests the heart by his fellow-feeling for the poor and oppressed, while he pleases the fancy by the rural wildness of his imagery, and impresses the memory by a circumstantial distinctness in his graphic touches.

The style of Hosea is concise, but abrupt; and he is obscure in the perspective arrangement of the blessings and calamities which he pourtrays.

The Prophet Micah is sometimes peculiarly grand and graceful. The commencement and close of his books are almost dramatically impressive.

The highest rank in Hebrew Poetry, is, by universal consent, assigned to Isaiah. Collectively viewed, his poetry forms the greatest tablet both of awfully solemn, and of joyfully beautiful, conceptions, ever exhibited in poetic prediction. He is far from surpassing all the Hebrew poets in individual passages; but in his fulness, force, majesty, and propriety, he comprehends more excellencies of the poetical character than any of them.

The book of Nahum contains a spirited prediction of the siege of Nineveh; and he is ranked among the most classically poetical of the Minor Prophets, superior to them all in boldness, ardour, and sublimity.

Joel's few but precious relics are very highly finished and flowing; and they abound in sweet and elevated touches; he surpasses Isaiah in appropriateness, and is much imitated in the Revelation.

Habakkuk's tone of prophecy accords with the probability of his having lived very near the crisis of Jewish calamities. His warning is like the sound of an alarm-bell at dead of night; yet he is not without a magnanimous and pious confidence; and his third chapter is a model of lyrical sublimity.

Far different was the effect of his country's sufferings on the tender mind of Jeremiah. His genius seems to bend, and his voice to falter, under the burden of prophecy; and, though sometimes pleasingly affecting, he generally prolongs the accents of grief to monotony, and seldom avoids tautology, or reaches compression, except when he abridges the predictions of other prophets.

Another great poet is Ezekiel, and even his grandeur is not of the simplest and purest character. His fancy is daring and ingenious—we are sometimes lost in objects that stun and dazzle the imagination.

Daniel, educated under a foreign clime, and even writing partly in Chaldaic, departs still farther from the old simplicity of Hebrew taste, in his perpetual visionary and angelic machinery.—He is more a historian than a prophet.

Haggai was among the first of the prophets who comforted the Jews after their return from captivity; and Malachi was the last. In both of them the spirit of poetry manifestly declines, as the reign of divination draws towards its conclusion—when the words of Mic. iii. 6. were most affectingly fulfilled.

The style of Matthew (for he demands the first notice in the Sacred Classics of the New Testament), is every where plain and perspicuous—has wonderfully united simplicity and energy in his relations.

Mark too is plain, simple, and easily understood. He narrates the deeds of Christ more than His discourses, and those deeds ever give fragrance to Him who delighted to go about doing good.

The profession of Luke was a physician (Col. iv. 14), and therefore he was a man of letters; his writings indicate a liberal education; he has many Hebraisms, but more Græcisms than any other writer of the New Testament—he discriminately marked diseases, &c.—altogether a pure, copious, and flowing style.

All the writings of Paul bespeak him a man of the most exalted genius, and the very strongest abilities—a fervid conception, a glowing but chastened fancy, a quick apprehension, and an immensely liberal heart—an excellent scholar, a great orator, a most spirited writer, eminently acquainted with Grecian and Hebrew literature.

Every part of Peter's writings evince a mind that felt the power of the Gospel, and a soul that glowed with the most ardent zeal for its general diffusion—he writes with the authority of a first man in the college of the Apostles.

In the writings of John there is a very close analogy between his Gospel and Epistles, both of sentiments and expressions—residence at Ephesus improved his Greek—singularly perspicuous and uniformly benevolent.

The Truth of the Bible.—We cannot consider all the evidences, but only make one general statement, viz., First, that the Bible is free from forgery. The very great number of particular circumstances of time, places, persons, &c., mentioned in the Old Testament, is an argument both of their genuineness and truth. We never find that forged or false accounts superabound thus in particularities, as they do in the books of the Bible. There is always some truth when many particularities are related, and they always seem to bear some proportion to one another. Thus there is a great want of the particulars of time, place, and persons, in Manetho's account of the Egyptian dynasties, Ctesias's of the Assyrian kings, and those which the technical chronologers have given of the ancient kingdoms of Greece; and agreeably thereto, these accounts have much fiction and falsehood, with some truth; whereas, Thucydides's history of the Peloponnesian war, and Cæsar's of the war in Gaul, in both which the particulars of time, place, and persons are mentioned, are universally esteemed true, to a great degree of exactness.

Secondly, a forger, as a relater of falsehoods, would be careful not to mention so great a number of particulars, since this would be to put into his reader's hands criteria whereby to detect him. Thus we may see one reason of the fact mentioned in the last paragraph, and which, in confirming that fact, confirms the proposition here to be proved.

Thirdly, a forger, or a relater of falsehoods, could scarcely furnish such lists of particulars. It is easy to conceive how faithful records kept from time to time by persons concerned in the transactions should contain such lists; nay, it is natural to expect them in this case, from the local memory which takes strong possession of the fancy in those who have been present at such transactions; but it would be a work of the highest invention and greatest stretch of genius to raise from nothing such numberless particularities, as are almost every where to be met with in the Scriptures.

Fourthly, if we could suppose the persons who forged the books of the Old and New Testaments, to have furnished their readers with the great variety of particulars therein mentioned, notwithstanding the two reasons here alleged against it; we cannot, however, conceive but that the persons of those times when the books were published, must by the help of these criteria have detected and exposed such forgeries or falsehoods. For these criteria are so attested by allowed facts, as at this time, and in this remote corner of the world, to establish the truth and genuineness of the Scriptures, as may appear even from the preceding arguments, and much more from the writings of commentators, sacred critics, and such other learned men as have given the historical evidences of revealed religion in detail; and, by parity of reason, they would suffice even now to detect the fraud, were there any: whence we may conclude, à fortiori, that they must have enabled the persons who were upon the spot, when the books were published, to do this; and the importance of many of the particulars recorded, as well as many of the precepts, observances, and renunciations enjoined, would furnish them with abundant motives for this purpose.

Therefore, we conclude, that the very great number of particulars of time, place, persons, &c., mentioned in the Holy Scriptures, is a proof of its genuineness and truth, even independently of the consideration of the agreement of these particulars with history, both natural and civil, and with one another.

Bible, Truth of. There are four grand arguments for the truth of the Bible. 1. The miracles it records. 2. The prophecies it contains. 3. The goodness of the doctrine. 4. The moral character of the penmen. The miracles flow from Divine power, the prophecies from Divine understanding, the excellency of the doctrine from Divine goodness, and the moral character of the penmen from Divine purity. Thus Christianity is built upon these four immovable pillars, the power, the understanding, the goodness, and the purity of God.

The Bible must be the invention either of good men or angels, bad men or devils, or of God.

It could not be the invention of good men or angels, for they neither would nor could make a book and tell lies all the time they were writing, saying, Thus saith the Lord, when it was their own invention.

It could not be the invention of bad men or devils, for they could not make a book which commands all duty, forbids all sin, and condemns their souls to all eternity. We therefore draw this conclusion: The Bible must have been given by Divine Inspiration.

BICHRI, Bik'-ry first-born, or first-fruits.—A Benjaminite, the father of Sheba, remarkable for his rebellion against David; 2 Sam. xx. 1, 2.

BIDE not in unbelief, Rom. 11. 23.

—Captain of the guards to Jehu, king of Israel; 2 Kings ix. 25.

BIER. This word is derived from the verb to bear, and means that on which something is borne; a hand-carriage or couch used for the dead; 2 Sam. iii. 31; Luke vii. 12. &c. Herod, according to Josephus, was carried to his sepulchre on a bed, or rather bedstead, of gold, enriched with precious stones, upon which the body lay on a purple bed, and was covered with a purple pall. The great men of Rome were borne in the same way to the funeral pile on beds of state. The corpse was not then put into a coffin. The same custom still prevails in the East. On a similar bier though inferior, the son of the widow of Nain was carried to his grave.

BIGTHAN, Big'-than.—Esth. ii. 21. See BIGTHA.

BIGTHANA, Big'-tha-nah.—Esth. vi. 2. See BIGTHA.

BIGVAI, Big-va'-i, in my body—

One of Ezra's companions from Babylon; Ezra 8. 14.—One who returned from captivity; Ezra ii. 2.

BILDAD, Bil'-dad, old friendship, or old love.—The Shuhite, one of Job's friends, who evidently mistook his case; conceiving that as Job was a great sufferer, he must therefore be a hypocrite or great sinner, and so justly plagued of God for his sins. Frequently his denunciations were passionate and sublime; Job ii. 11, &c.

BILEAM, Bil'-e-am, the ancient of the people, the devourer.—A city in the tribe of Manasseh, on the other side of Jordan; 1 Chron. vi. 70.

BILGAH, Bil'-gah, ancient countenance.—The chief of the fifteenth band of priests; 1 Chron. xxiv. 14.

BILGAI, Bil'-gay.—A prince who sealed the covenant; Neh. x. 8.

BILHAH, Bil'-hah, one who is old, troubled.—Rachel's handmaid, given by her to Jacob, her husband, as a concubine; Gen. xxx. 3, 4.

BILHAN, Bil'-han.—A son of Ezer, a descendant of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 27.—A son of Jediael; 1 Chron. vii. 10.

BILL, an obligation, promise in writing, or bond of assurance; Luke xvi. 6, 7. A bill of divorcement, so called, because the woman was thereby declared to be cut off from her husband; Deut. xxiv. 1.

BILL, Deut. 24. 1. 3; Is. 50. 1; Jer. 3. 8; Mark 10. 4; Luke 16. 6. 7. take thy bill and write BILLOWS. The judgments of God against Babylon are compared to the raging billows of the ocean; Jer. li. 42.—Great troubles and afflictions; Ps. xlii. 7; lxxxviii. 7. Unstable persons; James i. 6.

BILSHAN, Bil'-shan.—A returned captive; Ezra ii. 2.

BIMHAL, Bim'-hal.—A descendant of Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 33.

BIND, and LOOSE, with respect to guilt, denotes condemnation or absolution, or binding on, or loosing from guilt; Matt. xvi. 19. With respect to the law, these terms declare whatever is lawful or unlawful, permitted or forbidden, binding on the former, and loosing from the latter; Matt. xxiii. 4. To bind the law on the hand for a sign; Deut. vi. 8. about the neck; Prov. vi. 21. is to have it continually in view, never to lose sight of it, i. e. never to have it out of mind. To bind by a vow; Num. xxx. 2, 4. To restrain from vices, as bound by the word; Ps. cxlix. 8. To comfort and heal; Isa. lxi. 1; Luke iv. 18. "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek: he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

23. 4. b. heavy burdens and lay
Bindeth up, Job 5. 18. Ps. 147. 3.

BIND, LOOSE,—signify authority in church discipline. The apostles abolished and confirmed under the Spirit's guidance: forbidding circumcision, allowing purification, &c.; Matt. xvi. 19.

BIND 'them about thy neck,' alludes to the custom of wearing the Divine precepts on the forehead and wrists; Deut. vi. 8; Prov. iii. 3.

BINEA, Bin'-e-ah, the son of the Lord.—A descendant of Saul; 1 Chron. viii. 37.

BINNUI, Bin'-nu-i, building.—A prince who repaired the walls of Jerusalem, after the captivity; Neh. iii. 24. A Levite, father of Noadiah; Ezra viii. 33.

BIRD or BIRDS. The name oph by which birds are called in the Hebrew language, says Mr. Harris, refers to their power of flying. TZIPPOR, a common name for all birds, especially small birds, as the sparrow, &c. ATT is a bird of prey. BARBARISM, 1 Kings iv. 33, fowls fattened to the greatest delicacy. Birds are distinguished by the Jewish legislator, into clean and unclean, that is, such as might be eaten and such as might not. Such as feed upon grain and seeds were allowed for food, and such as devoured flesh and carrion were prohibited.

Birds were offered for sacrifice on many occasions; Lev. i. 14, 15, 16, and v. 7, 8.

Moses, to inspire the Israelites with sentiments of tenderness towards the brute creation, orders, if they find a bird's nest, not to take the dam with the young, but to suffer the old one to fly away, and to take the young only; Deut. xxii. 6. This is one of those merciful constitutions in the law of Moses, which respect the animal creation, and tended to humanize the heart of that people, to excite in them a sense of the Divine Providence extending itself to all creatures, and to teach them to exercise their dominion over them with gentleness.

BIRDS.—Unclean Birds represent- ed unbelievers and idolaters, and birds of prey, tyrannical, unjust and oppressive rulers, and are also descriptive of destructive armies; Acts x. 12; Rev. xviii. 2; Jer. xii. 9; Ezek. xvii. 3—7; Hosea viii. 1; Dan. vii. 4.

BIRDS FLYING,—‘As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem,’ rather as birds hovering, the image being taken from birds hopping backwards and forwards, and more especially seems to allude to the flying of a dam about her young ones when assailed by an enemy; Isa. xxxi. 5.

BIRD, hasteth to snare, Prov. 7. 23.

BIRSHA, Bir'-sha, in evil, a son that beholds.—King of Gomorrah, who was at war with Chederlaomer and his allies; Gen. xiv. 2, &c.

BIRTH, the exclusion of the fœtus from the womb; Ex. xxviii. 10; this is natural birth. It likewise denotes a supernatural birth, which exceeds the power of nature, as the birth of Christ; Matt. i. 18. Also a spiritual birth or regeneration, John i. 13, which is the acting from new principles and new motives, formed in the soul by the Spirit of God, enlightening the understanding, influencing the will, and renewing the heart. Figuratively, it is taken for heavy anguish and distress, 2 Kings xix. 3. See Regeneration.

BIRTH, Gen. 40. 20. third day which was Pharaoh's b. day

Is. 66. 9. shall I bring to b. and not?

BIRTH-RIGHT.—“And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birth-right,” Gen. xxv. 31. “Birth-right,” or primogeniture. The first-born were peculiarly consecrated to God; Exod. xxii. 29. They were next in honour to their parents; Gen. xlix. 3. They had a double portion of their father's goods; Deut. xxi. 17. The first-born succeeded the father in the government of the family or kingdom; 2 Chron. xxi. 3; and had the sole right of conducting the service of God, both at the tabernacle and temple. The birthright was a matter of vast importance; also it was a transferable property, as this transaction proves.

27. 36. he took away my b.-r.

43. 33. first-born according to b.-r.

1 Chro. 5. 1, Reuben's b.-r. given to the sons of Joseph.

BIRZAVITH, Bir'-za-vith.—A descendant of Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 31.

BISHLAM, Bish'-lam.—An officer of the king of Persia; Ezra iv. 7.

BISHOP.—It literally signifies an overseer. Sometimes ministers are called bishops, or overseers, also Presbyters, in English, elders, on account of their age or gravity; and pastors, ministers, and teachers, on account of their various duties relating to the spiritual interests of the people; Acts xx. 17—28; Phil. i. 1.

The word is derived from the Greek episkopos, an overseer, inspector, one who has the inspection, or oversight, a superintendent. It corresponds to the Hebrew, pakid, an overseer, officer, deputy, from pakod, to take notice of, visit, review, oversee; and is applied to an overseer of an army; Num. xxxi. 14; Judg. ix. 26, 28, to a civil or religious officer; Neh. x. 9. In the New Testament, it is once applied to Christ; 1 Pet. ii. 25; but in all other places, it describes men who have the oversight of his flock; Acts xx. 28, &c.

The late Rev. Mr. Goode, in his valuable "Dictionary of the Bible," on the article Bishop, says, "Under the New Testament, bishop, or overseer, is restricted to spiritual rulers. Nor, when applied to mere men, does it ever signify more than a pastor or presbyter. And nowhere are any but deacons marked as subordinate to bishops; Phil. i. 1; 1 Tim. iii. It is agreed by Stillingfleet, Dodwell, and others of the most learned Episcopalian, that the office of bishops above other pastors in the church has no foundation in the oracles of God. During the first three centuries of Christianity the pastors of particular congregations were so called; but in the fourth and subsequent centuries the mystery of Antichrist began to work; and such was the ambition of the clergy in the more noted cities, that they never rested heaping their own devised dignities one above another till his Holiness mounted the summit, as their universal head!"

BISHOP, 1 Tim. 3. 1. Tit. 1. 7. 1 Pet. 2. 25. return to b. of your souls. Phil. 1. 1. with b. and deacons

BITE, taken properly for the biting of serpents; Numb. xxi. 6; Eccl. x. 8, 11; Amos ix. 3. Cockatrices; Jer. viii. 17. Figuratively, to bite one, is grievously to afflict him, whether by backbiting, detracting, speaking ill of, rebuking, taunting, or any other injurious dealing; Hab. ii. 7; Gal. v. 15. Dan an adder that biteh; Gen. xlix. 17.

BITHIA, Be-thy'-ah, daughter of the Lord.—A female of the tribe of Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 18.

BITHRON, Bith'-ron, division in his examination, daughter of the song, of anger, of liberty.—A place in Palestine, on the east side of Jordan; 2 Sam. ii. 29.

BITHYNIA, Be-thin'-e-ah, violent precipitation.—A province in Asia-Minor, bounded on the north by the Euxine or Black Sea, on the west by Mysia, on the south and east by Phrygia and Galatia, and on the east by Paphlagonia. The principal cities in this province were Prusa, Nice, Nicomedia, Chalcedon, Libyssa, and Therna. The capital was Nice.

Bithynia is a romantic and beautiful country, intersected with lofty mountains and fertile valleys, abounding in fine forests, and well watered by two large streams of the Sangarius or Sacaria, and Parthenius or Bartin Su, with their numberless tributary streams. The Sacaria flows amid flowery meadows and smiling slopes, and is, in general, a hundred yards wide, deep and rapid, and falls into the Euxine.

Nicomedia, now Isniemid, was the capital of the country, and has been compared, for its beauty and richness, to Rome, Antioch, and Alexandria; though inferior to these in size, it equalled them in splendour. Nicomedia owed its chief grandeur to Dioclesian, who spared no cost in order to render it a place worthy of the residence of a Roman emperor. He built there a circus, several palaces, a mint, an arsenal, an imperial dome for his consort, and another for his daughter. In 358, A. D. Nicomedia was utterly ruined by an earthquake, so sudden and violent that all the houses were at once overturned, and the inhabitants to a man, buried in the ruins. No vestiges now remain of its aqueduct, amphitheatre, and temple, nor of the buildings of Dioclesian; but an old church is all that is now left of an imperial city.

Nice, so celebrated in ancient history and the early ages of Christianity, became a village with about 150 wretched houses, inhabited by Jews, who manufactured earthenware, or sold silk. Of late years Nice has completely changed, and become a great resort of invalids, and the nobility, attracted by its salubrious climate, and the beauty of the country. Scutari, the ancient Chrysopolis, near the termination of the Thracian Bosphorous, not far from Chalcedon, has 50,000 inhabitants; and Boorsa, formerly Prusa, one of the finest cities of Asia Minor, situated in a fertile and finely wooded plain, has 50,000 inhabitants, and numerous mosques and public fountains. The artisans of this place are very skilful, and the silk, satin, and tapestry of Boorsa are highly valued.

The gospel was preached there probably by those who were present at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost; Acts ii. 9, 10. A popular writer says, That multitudes embraced the gospel is plain from Pliny's celebrated letters to the emperor Trajan, who had appointed him proconsul of this province. The idol-temples were deserted; the pagau-ritual was neglected from want of worshippers; the cities, towns, villages, and even farm-houses, were possessed by Christians, many of whom suffered the loss of all things, and even their life, rather than renounce their adorable Saviour and Lord. Pliny bears testimony to their moral excellence; the only crime of which he accuses them was their glory, an obstinate adherence to their faith in Christ Jesus. Neither he nor his successors in the unholy, unjust, and unprofitable work of persecution for integrity and a good conscience, succeeded in restoring idolatry to its former power. Christianity triumphed to that extent that the most celebrated Christian council was held in Nice, the metropolis of Bithynia, A. D. 325.

BITTER, (1.) that which is contrary to sweet; Isa. v. 20. (2.) Sorrowful; Exod. i. 14. "And they made their lives bitter, with hard bondage, in mortar, &c." (3.) Churlish; Col. iii. 19. "Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them." (4.) Afflictive; 2 Kings xiv. 26. "For the Lord saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter," &c. (5.) Envy; James iii. 14. (6.) The end of a strange woman; Prov. v. 4. "Her end is bitter as wormwood, sharp as a two-edged sword." (7.) Great grief and anguish of spirit; Matt. xxvi. 75. BITTERN, kippod, a fowl of the heron kind. Some have supposed that the porcupine is meant. But the majority suppose it to be the night-heron. It is common in fenny countries, skulks among the reeds and sedges, and ordinarily stands with its neck and beak straight upward. It suffers people to come very near it; and if it is unable to escape it will strike at them. It resorts, like the heron, to ruined buildings in solitary places. It flies mostly in the dusk of the evening, and makes a plaintive and doleful noise among the reeds. Its voice resembles the bellowing of a bull, and in some places it is called "bull of the bog." Nineveh and Babylon became a possession for the bittern, when the spot was partly turned into a fen or pool of water.

The habits and instincts of the bittern give us a clue to the force and propriety of the prophetic denunciation against Babylon; Isa. xiv. 23, "I will also make it a possession for the bittern, and pools of water: and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the Lord of hosts." Zephaniah employs similar imagery in his prophecy of the overthrow of Nineveh;—"The Lord will make Nineveh a desolation, and dry like a wilderness. Both the cormorant and the bittern shall lodge in the upper lintels of it; their voice shall sing in the windows; desolation shall be in the thresholds;" Zeph. ii. 13, 14.

BIZTHA, Biz'-tha.—A chamberlain of Ahasuerus.—Esther i. 10.

BLACK, Blackness.—In prophecy generally symbolical of affliction, disease and distress; Job xxx. 30; Jer. viii. 21; xiv. 2; Lam. v. 2. Fear is also symbolised by blackness; Joel ii. 6.

BLASPHEMY. Injurious expressions against God; 2 Kings xix. 3; Matt. xii. 32; Rev. iii. 1, 5, 6. No one who considers the character of God, as infinitely wise, holy, just, and good, can be surprised that the offence is regarded as most wicked, and was so fearfully punished. It is the highest form of impiety. By the law of Moses it was punished with death. In the original, when the word is not applied to God, it is rendered revile, rail, speak evil, &c. Matt. xii. 32; xxvii. 39; Mark xv. 29.

BLASPHEMY against the Holy Ghost. This is spoken of Matt. xii. 31, 32; Mark iii. 28, 29; Luke xii. 10. The Great Teacher uttered these words just after he had cured a demoniac, who was blind and dumb. The Pharisees ascribed the miracle to Satanic agency. — “But the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.” The Spirit was given unto Christ without measure. Jehovah said, “I have put my Spirit upon him.” Isa. xlii. 1. When he opened his commission, he said, “The Spirit of the Lord is upon me,” &c. Luke iv. 18. But the Pharisees said he was in league with Satan, and all his works they attributed to his infernal agency. This was the sin against the Holy Ghost, of which they were guilty. That this, and nothing else, is that sin, is evident from the connexion in this place, and more particularly from Mark iii. 28—30, which has this clause in addition, “Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.”

Therefore the matter is very clear—the unpardonable sin, as some term it, is ascribing the miracles of Christ, wrought by the power of God, to the influence of the devil.

For God’s anger and power, Job iv. 9, “By the blast of God they perish, and by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.” (5.) Sudden and secret judgment, Isa. xxxvii. 7.

BLEMISH.—Put for the abusing of a person, Lev. xxiv. 19, 20. Beasts which were offered in sacrifice under the law were to be without blemish, Deut. xvii. 1. The priests were required to be without blemishes, and the defects which were accounted blemishes are described, Lev. xxi. 18—20; xxii. 20—24. Their bodily perfection was a symbol of the immaculate purity of Christ, who, as a lamb without blemish, and without spot, offered himself to God for our sins, 1 Pet. i. 19; Rev. xiii. 8. Mere professors of religion, worldly conformists, and hypocrites, “are spots and blemishes,” &c., Jude 12; 2 Pet. ii. 13.

BLESS, to make happy, which, properly, is the act of God alone, the author of every blessing. God blesses, especially, by the rich provision which he has made in his glorious plan of redemption, by the supplies of his grace, and by the gifts of his Holy Spirit, whereby man is enabled to serve him acceptably in this world, and to receive a meetness for that eternal inheritance in heaven, where he will be perfectly happy in the enjoyment of God for ever. This word is often used in an inferior sense, and man is said to bless God when, with a grateful heart, he praises him for benefits received, and lives to his glory. He may be said to bless his fellow-creatures, when he wishes them every good, and uses his best efforts to promote their welfare.

BLESSING.—The benefit or favour itself is called a blessing, Josh. xv. 19; 1 Sam. xxv. 27, because accompanied with good wishes or blessings. The means of conveying a blessing; such was Abraham, because the progenitor of Christ, Gen. xii, and thus the Jews were a blessing, because Christ was to descend of them according to the flesh, Isaiah xix. 24. The blessing of Abraham, Gal. iii. 14, that conferred on Abraham; namely, free justification, and reconciliation with God, through faith in Christ. The blessings of heaven above denote rain or dew in abundance; blessings of the deep, or of water from springs, so valuable in hot countries; blessings of the breasts and of the womb; great fruitfulness of women and cattle, Gen. xlix. 25. Blessing is usually reckoned the eighth part of prayer, and consists in blessing God, which has a distinct sense from praise or adoration, and distinguished also from thanksgiving. In Psalms cxlv. 10, it is said, All thy works praise thee, and thy saints bless thee; that is, even the inanimate creation, which are the works of God, manifest his attributes and his praises; but his saints do something more, they bless his name; which part of worship consists in these two things: (1.) In mentioning the glorious attributes of God with inward joy, satisfaction, and pleasure, thus, We delight, O Lord, to see thy name honoured in the world, and we rejoice in thy real excellencies: we take pleasure to see thee exalted above all: we triumph in the several perfections of thy nature, and we give thanks at the remembrance of thy holiness." Thus we rejoice and bless the Lord for what he is in himself, as well as what he has done for us: and this is a most divine and unselfish act of worship. (2.) Wishing the glories of God may for ever continue, and rejoicing at the assurance of it, thus, May the name of God be for ever blessed: May the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, be for ever ascribed to him! May all generations call him honourable, and make his name glorious in the earth!

BLIND and BLINDNESS, either corporeal, as want of bodily eye-sight, John ix. 1; or mental, affecting the mind, Exod. xxiii. 8. The blind and lame, 2 Sam. v. 6, an insult offered by the Jebusites to David. One great design of the appearance of Christ in this world was to give light to the blind, bodily and mentally, Isa. xxxv. 5, compared with Luke vii. 21, 22; Mark x. 46—52. Partial and total blindness was and still is prevalent in some parts of the East, which may be attributed to the miasmatic state of the atmosphere, quantities of floating dust, sleeping on the housetops, &c. The law commanded mercy to be shown to the blind, Lev. xix. 14; Deut. xxvii. 18. Blindness was one of the dreadful modes of punishment under Eastern monarchs. In allusion to this, blindness of heart, is particularly noticed, Isa. vi. 9, 16; Mark iv. 12. Those who teach the gospel without understanding it, are called blind leaders of the blind; Matt. xv. 14.

BLIND and LAME.—This perplexing translation is rendered by Drs. Geddes and Boothroyd, ‘sentinels and patrols;’ 2 Sam. v. 6.

BLIND AND LAME FOR SACRIFICE.—Lambs and sheep when bestowed as gifts to great personages as a mark of distinction, were always fat, sound, and perfect. A lean or maimed animal would have been resented as an insult. What emphasis does it give to Mal. i. 8, 13, which read.

BLIND.—‘Who is blind but my servant? or deaf,’ &c.; Isa. xlii. 19. This difficult passage is rendered by Lowth:—

‘Who is blind but my servant?
 And deaf as he to whom I sent my messengers?
 Who is blind as he who is perfectly instructed?
 And deaf as the servant of Jehovah!’

Isaiah, observes Boothroyd, ‘admonishes the Israelites. God has given them his own word, and sent to them his prophets, yet they had loved and served idols. Who, therefore, so blind and stupid as they? But their blindness was wilful.’ ‘Who is blind but my servant,’ implies that prophets and priests were blind also.

BLOOD is that red liquid circulated in the arteries and veins of the animals which have bones, and consisting of a brinish water called serum, and of solid parts, which appear as red globules, serving for the support of life, and for the nourishment of the parts of the body.

"It was not to be used for food, because it was the life of the animal. This sentiment of Moses has excited the wonder of many. Numerous, patient, and persevering, have been the investigations of the learned, in all ages and countries, to ascertain what is the life of the animal; and the only satisfactory result of the whole has been, what they might have soon known, had they believed the Jewish legislator, "blood is the life thereof."

"This is the most complex substance of the animal body. It is composed of several distinct constituents, each of which is endowed with specific properties, and the combinations of the whole are so peculiar, that there is nothing perfectly analogous to it." Separated from the animal, and exposed to the air, it is found to consist of a solid and fluid part. In the former part is discovered what is called fibrin, which is known to be the most important constituent of the blood; for it is the principal part of all the structures of which the body is composed; it forms the basis of muscle, and in the lower animals, in which distinct muscular fibre cannot be traced, it probably performs the function of muscle. "It has been fully ascertained, by the most skilful discoverers, that blood consists of innumerable particles, each highly organised, and it is established on indubitable evidence, that the blood which maintains the life of all the other parts of the body, is itself alive."—Davidson.

Blood has several significations in Scripture, as that of guilt, Acts xviii. 6; punishment, Matt. xxvii. 25; death or murder, Gen. iv. 10; man's fallen nature, Ezek. xvi. 6; John i. 13; the reason and wisdom of fallen man, Matt. xvi. 17; the first man, Acts xvii. 26; juice of the grape, Gen. xlix. 11; the sacramental symbol, or representation of the blood of Christ, whereby the new covenant or testament was confirmed, Matt. xxvi. 28; Heb. x. 29; the death and sufferings of Christ, Rom. iii. 25; "Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood," &c. The blood of Jesus Christ is the price of our salvation: "his blood has purchased his church," Acts xx. 28. As believers "we are justified by his blood, and saved from wrath," Rom. v. 9. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace," Eph. i. 7. "Having made peace through the blood of his cross."

BLOOD.—"That ye eat neither fat nor blood," Lev. iii. 17. The reason of this prohibition was, because they were God's part of every sacrifice.

BLOOD.—This blood is the frequent symbol of slaughter and mortality, as in Isa. xxxiv. 3; Ezek. xiv. 19; Rev. xiv. 20.

BLOOD.—"His blood be on us, and on our children;" this was remarkably answered forty years afterwards, when a million of people perished in the siege of Jerusalem, and their blood ran down the streets like water, often extinguishing the flaming articles in the burning city. Thousands were crucified, so that there was at last no more room for crosses, Matt. xxvii. 25.

BLOODY SWEAT. "And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly, and his sweat was, it were, great drops of blood falling down to the ground ;" Luke xxii. 44. Aristotle and Diodorus Siculus both give instances of a bloody sweat produced by great agony. Like phenomena are mentioned in Loti's Life of Sectus v. ; Sir J. Chardin's History of Persia ; and by De. Thou. Some persons suppose that this language is figurative, and only affirming that our Saviour's sweat was externally excessive. Dr. Macknight in his "Harmony of the Gospels," with great propriety, remarks that the Greek article, osei, does not always denote similitude, but sometimes reality, and agrees in opinion with Bartholinus de Cruce, and many others, who affirm, "That our Lord's sweat was really mixed with blood to such a degree, that its colour and consistency were as if it had been really blood."

He afterwards observes, that history puts the possibility of this matter beyond a doubt. Charles IX, of France, died of a malady in which his blood gushed out of all the pores of his body. Voltaire, in his Universal History, thus describes it :—"Charles IX died in his 25th year. The malady he died of was very extraordinary ; the blood gushed out of all his pores. This accident, of which there are some instances, was owing either to excessive fear and to violent passion, or to a warm and melancholy constitution."

To this passage may be added the testimony of Horstius, who, in describing a particular disease attended with extravasated blood under the cuticle, or false skin, observes, That it proved fatal to a pregnant woman, by a hæmorrhage from the gums. In this case hot baths and sudorific medicines were absurdly employed, and they produced a bloody sweat.

This disease has recently been more attentively examined, and is called by the late eminent Dr. Willan, "Purpura Hæmorrhagica." It has been known in some instances to come on very suddenly after great exercise of body, and distress of mind. In it the smaller vessels on the external and internal surfaces of the body appear to lose their contractile power; and from this want of tone, suffer the red particles of the blood to pass through them, and consequently, to be suffused under the outer skin, giving the appearance of red or livid spots. Many cases occur, in which the least exertion, or even slightest pressure, such as is used in feeling the pulse, causes a violent, and sometimes a fatal hæmorrhage.

It seems, therefore, not improbable that in our Saviour's inexpressible agony such a degree of exhaustion was induced as to deprive the minute vessels on the surface of the body of their usual containing power ; in consequence of which loss, not merely a watery fluid, but the red particles of the blood also, passed through the pores of the skin, so that this phenomenon might, with strict and literal propriety, be called a Bloody Sweat.

BLOOD and WATER.—"Forthwith came thereout blood and water :"
John xix. 34. By some this has been regarded as miraculous, and symbolic, the blood symbolizing pardon, and the water purification. This circumstance has been represented as impossible by infidels, who have said that blood will not flow from a corpse ; but surgical testimony proves that a deep incision immediately after death will cause a flow of blood. The piercing of his side evinced the reality of the Redeemer's death. Modern infidels have questioned the reality of his death ; but the soldier's spear confutes them, and the circumstance also proves his humanity,—a "partaker of flesh and blood." It is very likely that Christ was not quite dead when he was pierced, that his blood was not congealed, but fluid, and was poured out from that wound which must have extinguished vitality.

William Stroud Esq., M.D., London, 1847, who wrote a Treatise on the Physical Cause of Christ's death, says, "Agony, when intense, produces violent palpitation, bloody sweat, oppression of the chest, loud cries, and ultimately rupture of the heart. Such rupture is usually attended with immediate death, and with an effusion into the pericardium" (the bag containing the heart) "of the blood previously circulating through the organ; which when thus extravasated, although scarcely in any other case, separates into its constituent parts so as to present the appearance commonly called blood and water. The immediate cause is a sudden and evident contraction of one of the ventricles, usually the left, on the column of blood thrown into it by similar contraction of the corresponding auricle; prevented from returning backwards by the intervening valve, and not finding a sufficient outlet forwards in the connected artery, the blood reacts against the ventricle itself, which is consequently torn open at the point of greatest distension, or least resistance, by the influence of its own reflected force. A quantity of blood is hereby discharged into the pericardium, and having no means of escape from the capsule, stops the circulation by compressing the heart from without, and induces almost instantaneous death. In young and vigorous subjects the blood thus collected in the pericardium soon divides into its constituent parts, namely, a pale watery liquid, called serum, and a soft clotted substance of a deep red colour, termed crassamentum; but except under similar circumstances of extravasation, this distinct separation of the blood is seldom seen in the dead body."

BLOOD OF SPRINKLING, that speaketh better things than that of Abel, Heb. xii. 24.—God accepted Abel's sacrifice, and was well pleased with it; for Abel offered his sacrifice by faith in the great promise of the Redeemer's sacrifice. But the blood of Christ's oblation is infinitely more precious than the blood of Abel's sacrifice, as Jesus is infinitely superior to Abel. The blood of Christ avails for millions upon millions of true penitents; but that of Abel's sacrifice could avail only for himself.

Some have referred the above language to Abel's blood as shed by Cain, and that the blood of Jesus speaks better things than it does, because the blood of Abel called for vengeance; but the blood of Christ for pardon. But this interpretation is very puerile, and unworthy of notice.

BLOOD, 'not of blood,' or not of bloods; not by the union of parents, however illustrious; the Hebrew language makes use of the plural to show the excellency of a thing; John i. 13. The evangelist referred to the Jews priding themselves in being the descendants of Abraham; See Matt. iii. 9.

BLOOD, 'resisted unto blood'; Heb. xii. 4. An allusion to the boxers in the games, for this effusion of blood commonly happened in the combat with the cestus, to which figure the apostle is adverting. The cestus was a set of strong leather thongs, or boxing-gloves, filled with plummets of lead, or iron, to give force to the blows. It is true, as if the Apostle had said, that you have entered the Christian warfare; but as yet you have done little battle, compared with those blessed martyrs who have preceded you, and who fought with the enemy, and "sailed through bloody seas."

BLOTTING 'out the hand-writing of ordinances;' Col. ii. 14. This refers to a bond, by which a person binds himself to some payment or duty, which stands in force against him till the obligation is discharged. Bonds were cancelled, by blotting them out with a pen, or by striking a nail through them. Then the bond became useless. In Eph. ii. 15, the ritual ordinances are meant, which separated the Jews from the Gentiles; but here the curse denounced against the transgressors of the moral law.

BOANERGES, Bo-an-er'-ges, sons of thunder.—A name given to both James and John. They were so called on account of their fervid spirit, and their future fidelity and boldness in proclaiming Divine truth. They were faithful to the death of martyrdom. James suffered death, and John was banished, for the name of Christ—a proof that they shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God.

BOAR, a male swine, declared unclean under the law. This animal in its wild state is extremely fierce and voracious. The persecuting enemies of the Lord's people, in other times, who wasted and destroyed them, are compared to the wild "boar of the wood;" Psalm lxxx. 13.

The Rev. Mr. Lewes, was proceeding in the dusk of the evening from Constantinople to Therapia. Passing a vineyard, he observed an animal of large size rushing forth from among the vines. The Greek syrogee, who was riding first, exclaimed, 'Wild boar! wild boar!' and really it proved a wild boar, retreating from the vineyards to the woods. 'What has the wild boar to do with the vineyards?' asked Mr. Lewes. 'Oh!' said the guide, 'tis the custom of the wild boar to frequent the vineyards and devour the grapes.' And it is astonishing what havoc a wild boar is capable of effecting during a single night. What with eating and trampling under foot, he will destroy an immense quantity of grapes. With what fatal propriety does this affecting image retain its force, up to the present moment! Still is the vine of Israel broken down, ravaged, cut down, burnt with fire.

BODY. An assemblage or community is called a body; 1 Cor. x. 17.—Jesus says, Matt. vi. 22. “If thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light;”—if thy intentions be upright, thy whole conduct will be agreeable; or, if thine eye be single, if thou art liberal and beneficent, all thy actions will be good; and thou wilt avoid many sins which attend avarice. Paul speaks of a spiritual body; 1 Cor. xv. 44, in opposition to the animal. Our present body is an animal body; but our resurrection body will be spiritual, neither gross, heavy, frail, nor corrupting, &c.—Body is opposed to shadow, figure; Col. ii. 17. The ceremonies of the law, the festivals of the Jews, are figures and shadows realized in Christ, &c. The fulgor of the Godhead resides bodily in Jesus Christ; Col. ii. 9, not figuratively, but really and essentially.

BODY,—‘this is my body;’ Matt. xxvi. 26, that is, represents my body: a scripture mode of expression. Compare Gen. xli. 26, 27. Dr. Adam Clarke well observes; “Christ had nothing in his hands, at this time, but part of that unleavened bread which he and his disciples had been eating at supper, and therefore he could mean no more than this, viz. that the bread which he was now breaking represented his body, which in a few hours was to be crucified for them. Common sense, unsophisticated with superstition and erroneous creeds, and reason, unawed by the secular sword of sovereign authority, could not possibly take any other meaning. “But,” says a false and absurd creed, “Jesus meant, when he said, HOC EST CORPUS MEUM, This is my body, and HIC EST CALIX SANGUINIS MEI, This is the Chalice of my blood, that the bread and wine were substantially changed into the body, including flesh, blood, bones, yea the whole Christ,

For denying this, what rivers of righteous blood have been shed by state persecutions, and by religious wars. Well may it be asked, “Can any man of sense believe, that when Christ took up that bread and broke it, it was his own body which he held in his own hands, and which he himself broke to pieces, (broke his own body!) and which he and his disciples ate? ate his own body—how absurd! HIS OWN BODY ATE HIS OWN BODY!!) still more absurd!!!

Had the Saviour spoken in Latin, following the idiom of the Vulgate, he would have said, Panis hic corpus meum significat, this bread signifies my body: or, hoc poculum sanguinem representat; this cup represents my blood.—In the Hebrew, Chaldee, and Chaldeo-Syriac languages as used in the Bible, there is no term which expresses to mean, signify, or denote, though both the Greek and Latin abound with them; hence the Hebrews use a figure, and say, it is, for it signifies. So Gen. xli. 26, 27, “The seven kine are (that is, represent) seven years.” “The ten horns are, (that is, signify,) ten kings,” and many other scriptures.

Suppose we enter a museum, and we see statues, we are sure to say, This is Shakspeare, this is Fox, this is Pitt, this is Nelson, &c. We know that the statues are not the identical persons, but only the representations of those great men. When Christ took the bread and brake it, and said, This is my body, who, but the most stupid of mortals, could imagine that he was, at the same time, handling and breaking his own body?

BODY ‘of this death,’ Rom. vii. 24. The apostle alludes to the mode of punishment inflicted by ancient tyrants, the binding of a dead body to a captive, and compelling him to drag the offensive body with him wherever he went. What a punishment was this! The dead body was bound to the poor wretch face to face. This k of its weight, of the ghastly distorted face opposite to his, of its dreadful stench, as it was rapidly decomposing, and of being compelled to drag such a mass of corruption and filth from place to place.

Virgil assures us that this was a punishment actually inflicted by tyrants. The Apostle could not have used a more forcible image. Who shall rescue me, miserable captive as I am, from the body of this death? from this perpetual load, which I carry about with me; and which is cumbersome, offensive and odious as a dead carcass tied to a living body to be dragged about with it wherever it goes!!

BONE, that part of the body which is white and hard, affording support to the whole fabric, Job x. 11; the dead body, 1 Kings xiii. 31; the whole man, Job. xx. 11; Psalms xxxv. 10. "All my bones shall say, Lord, who is like unto thee, which deliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him; yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him!" Holy confidence and comfort of mind, Psal. li. 8. "Make me to hear joy and gladness; that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice." Kinsmen according to the flesh, Gen. xxix. 14; Judges ix. 2; Gen. ii. 23.—Spoken of Christ and his church, Eph. v. 30. "For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." The valley full of bones, mentioned Ezekiel xxxvii. 1—14, is a striking representation of "the whole house of Israel," first in their dead, and second in their revived state. Speaking generally, the history of these bones may denote, (1.) The deplorable condition of unconverted men, who are dead in trespasses and sins, Eph. ii. 1; 1 Tim. v. 6. The valley of the world is extensive. And there were "very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry." All hope of revival, appeared to be "lost and cut off." The prophet was called to survey the bones, "and pass by them round about." The whole vision was calculated to make deep and lasting impression on his mind. And God saw good to propose a very singular question to him, as he stood pondering over the melancholy scene:—"Son of Man, can these dry bones live?" Can these dead souls live? What is thy judgment in this matter? Chilling and disheartening as the prospect was, the prophet knew the power of God to "do every thing." He therefore answered very modestly, and with caution, "and he said, O Lord God, thou knowest." (2.) Ezekiel was now commanded to prophesy to the bones. "Prophesy, son of man, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live." As the man of God prophesied to the bones, and cried for the animating breath of the Spirit to do his gracious office, he informs us of a noise, a shaking, and a union, or coming together, among them. At length, sinews, and flesh, and skin covered them, "and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army."

BONE.—"And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones," &c. There is a very delicate and expressive meaning in the original, which does not appear in the version of our Bible. When the different genera of creatures were brought to Adam, to assign their proper names, it is probable that they passed in pairs before him, and as they passed, received their names. To this circumstance these words refer. Instead of this now is, (Zoth happaam) we should render more literally, This turn, this creature which now appears before me, is flesh of my flesh, &c. The creatures that had passed already before him were not suitable to him, and therefore it was said, For Adam there was not a help-meet found, (ver. 20,) but when the woman came, formed out of himself, he felt all that attraction which consanguinity could produce, and at the same time saw that she was in her person and in her mind every way suitable to be his companion.

BONNETS, Isa. iii. 20.—This refers to the head-dress, or turban of the Eastern females, the general form of which is, that it is a cap bound round with one or more handkerchiefs, or shawls folded high and flat. Those of the upper class are ornamented with jewels, gold spangles and coins. The high priest's bonnet was a magnificent head-dress, formed of about eight yards of linen, gracefully arranged in circular folds. On its front was a gold plate, with those awful words inscribed, "HOLINESS TO THE LORD." Exod. xxxix. 28, 30.

BOOK. In Hebrew, Sepher, in Greek, Biblos, in Latin, Liber. The English word, book, from the Gothic Boka, or the Saxon. Boc, meaning a beech-tree, on the bark of which our ancestors were accustomed to write. Anciently plates of lead and copper, the barks of trees, bricks, stones, marble slabs, ivory, wood, &c., were the first materials employed upon which memorials, events, &c., were engraved or written, to be transmitted to posterity. The letters which Rabshakeh delivered from Sennacherib to Hezekiah, are called a book. The contract which Jeremiah confirmed for the purchase of a field, is called by the same name. Ahasuerus's edict in favour of the Jews is likewise called a book. Job writes, that his judge or his adversary would himself write his sentence. The writing likewise which a man gave to his wife when he divorced her, was called a book of divorce.

BOOK.—Ezra opened the book; Neh. viii. 5. The oldest books were in the form of a roll made of sheets of the finest bark of trees, or of the leaves of the papyrus, or linen. Relics of Rolls of papyrus are still extant. Afterwards parchment was used, and most of these books were rolls consisting of one or more skins rolled on a stick, called a volume, from the Latin word volumen, which signifies a folding or rolling up. The following passages allude to books in the form of rolls; Ezra vi. 2; Isa. viii. 1; Jer. xxxvi. 2—6; Ezek. ii. 9. Zech. v. 1; Rev. v. 1. The parchments of Paul, probably contained his right as a Roman citizen; 2 Tim. iv. 13. The first notice of a library of books is in Ezra vi. 1, 2, and the oldest books are those of Moses and Job. Several hundred years elapsed from their age to that of Homer, or Hesiod, the most ancient authors, except the Jewish. The copies of the Scriptures, used by the modern Jews, in all parts of the East

mentions one of great age, fixed by tradition near the commencement of the Christian era, and which was found in a coffin of the black Jews of Abyssinia, consisting of a roll, not of vellum, but of a soft flexible leather, made of goat's skin and dyed red. The skins were sewed together, and the roll was about fifty feet in length.

BOOK. "Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a BOOK!" Job xix. 23. The word, "printed" should have been, described, traced out, or inscribed in a register. The art of printing did not exist in Job's time. It never existed till the year 1440. The writing was then put upon the leaves of the papyrus. Or it was done by an iron stile on plates of lead, or some other metal.

BOOK OF LIFE,—alludes to the register of the congregation of Israel, admitted to the temple worship. All others were as dead to the external privileges of the chosen. A pious Israelite dreaded the extirpation of his name from this book. Moses was willing to endure it for Israel; Exod. xxxii. 32. O the felicity of being a member of the holy assembly in heaven, having the name written in the book of life,—the Lamb's book of life! Phil. iv. 3; Rev. iii. 5; xiii. 8; xxi. 27; xxii. 19.

BOOKS of the Ephesians. Read Acts xix. 19. So Horace addressing the enchantress Canidia, conjures her "by the books (libros carminum) of incantations, potent enough to call down the stars from heaven." The Ephesian letters were no other than enchantments; or certain combination of letters, which pronounced with certain intonations, or worn on parchments as amulets, were believed to expel diseases or evil spirits. Their books explained these arts.

BOOK of JUDGMENT, and the BOOK of REMEMBRANCE. — "The judgment was set, and the books were opened;" Dan. vii. 10. Alluding to what is practised, when a prince calls his servants to account; or to the custom of the Persian kings who had a book in which a daily record was made of the acts of their servants, by which they were guided in their treatment of them, conferring dignity, honour, and wealth, on the faithful, and death, in its most terrific forms, on the treacherous. Thus "God the judge of all, when he opens the books of Remembrance and Conscience, will render to every man according to his works;" Esth. vi. 1—11; Dan. vii. 10; Mal. iii. 16; Rev. xx. 12.

BOOK.—To EAT A BOOK, Rev. x. 9. This expression is figurative, implying diligent consideration. It is used analogically, just as Christ said, "He that eateth my flesh," &c.; John vi. 51, 54. We say of an intent reader, "He devoured the book which I lent him."

BORROW.—"Every woman shall borrow of her neighbour," &c., Exod. iii. 21, 22. This procedure has been objected to on the ground of dishonesty—borrowing without any intention to pay. But there is no ground for objection. The word which our translators have rendered borrow, simply signifies to ask, to require, to demand. In three passages on this translation, ch. iii. 22; xi. 2; xii. 35; the Septuagint has aitesei, shall ask; and in the two former, the Vulgate has postulabet, shall demand. The English Bible had it so, till the edition of Becke, in 1549; the Geneva, Barker's, and some others, have asked. The Israelites were therefore to ask or demand of the Egyptians a recompence for their past services—a restoration only of that property of which they had been despoiled. This is implied in ver. 22, "Ye shall spoil the Egyptians." The word spoil in the original signifies to regain or recover, and is used in 1 Sam. xxx. 22, and other places. Remember also what is said Ex. iii. 21, "And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians; also ch. xi. 3; xii. 36. In addition to the fear which made them "urgent" (ch. xii. 33) for the Israelites to depart, the Lord *touch*ed, or influenced their minds to give freely that which the people demanded, or asked for. "They sent them out of the land in haste," ch. xii. 33. On this Mr. Bryant says, "The Egyptians never expected nor wished for the return of the Israelites, and, therefore, they could not expect the return of the jewels and raiment." In point of fact there could be no borrowing in the case, because if accounts were fairly balanced, Egypt would be found still in considerable arrears to Israel. The Egyptians had never any right to the services of the Hebrews. Egypt owed its policy, its opulence, and even its political existence, to the Israelites. What had Joseph for his valuable services? Nothing! He had neither district, nor city, nor lordship in Egypt; nor did he reserve any to his children. All his services were gratuitous. Jacob and his family, it is true, were permitted to sojourn in Goshen; but they were not provided for in that place; for they brought their cattle, their goods, and all that they had into Egypt, Gen. xlv. 1, 6, so that they had nothing but the bare land to feed on; and had built treasure-cities, and fortresses, and also two whole cities, Pithom and Rameses, without any compensation whatever; and besides, they were cruelly abused, and were obliged to witness the daily murder of their male infants.

BOSOM, that part of the body which encloses the heart; Exod. iv. 6. The arms; Psalms cxxix. 7. The Son, which is in the bosom of the Father; John i. 18, signifies, who is one with the Father, beloved by him, and acquainted with his councils and will. ° Render into their bosom; Psa. lxxix. 12, denotes the sensible punishment of the wicked. He shall carry them in his bosom; Isa. xl. 11, signifies he shall perform the offices of a shepherd towards his people, according to their capacities and infirmities. Giving into the bosom; Luke vi. 38; "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom." The eastern garments being long and folded, and girded with a girdle, admitted of carrying much corn or fruits of that kind in the bosom.

BOSOM,—'pluck it out of thy bosom.' In some parts of the East, the hand is kept in the bosom by persons unemployed; Ps. lxxiv. 11.

BOSOM,—'leaning on Jesus's bosom;' this denoted the confidence of friendship. The Jews reclined on couches at their meals; and therefore one guest leaned on the bosom of another. This explains Luke xvi. 22, 23; John i. 18; xiii. 23.

BOSRAH, or BOZRAH, Bos'rah, or Boz'rah, in tribulation.—The metropolis of Idumea, in the half-tribe of Manasseh, Gen. xxxvi. 33.—The same as Bezer in the wilderness. It was a place of refuge, Josh. xx. 8. There is a remarkable prophecy respecting this place; Isa. lxiii. 1—3.

This prophecy is descriptive of the conquest of Christ over his foes and ours. See Isa. xxxiv. 6. It is supposed to refer to Rev. xix. 13, 16.

BOTTLE.—In the East, bottles were made of the skins of animals, sewed together, and of various sizes. These are still seen among the Arabs, and some of them hold about 60 gallons of water; two of which are the load of a camel. When these bottles have been in use for some time, the seams are apt to give way, especially if exposed to heat. This shows the propriety of our Lord's words, Matt. ix. 17, "Men do not put new wine into old bottles; else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved." See Gen. xxi. 14; Josh. ix. 4. The similitude seems to denote, that it would be improper to put his disciples on the same austerities that John put his, considering their low measure of knowledge and strength.

The Egyptians had ornamental vases made of hard stone, alabaster, marble, glass, porcelain, ivory, bone, bronze, silver, and gold. As early as Thothmes III, supposed to be the Pharaoh of the Exodus, B. C. 1490, vases of splendid workmanship existed, specimens of which are in the British Museum.

Bottles of earthen materials were used in the time of the prophets; this is evident from Jer. xix. 1, 10, 11; xiii. 12-14.

BOTTLE.—"I am become like a bottle in the smoke," Ps. cxix. 83. Vessels of gold and silver were used in the courts of princes. But in the Arabs' smoky tents, leathern bottles would very soon be withered by the smoke. The comparison is striking. As if he had said, "My appearance, in my present state, is as different from what it was when I dwelt at court, as the furniture of a palace differs from that of a poor Arab's tent."

BOTTLE.—"Put thou my tears into thy bottle;" Ps. lvi. 8. The Easterns, the Hebrews, and the Romans, were accustomed to put tears into bottles or tear-urns. These urns were of different materials and shapes; some of glass, some of earth, and some of agate. They were placed in the sepulchres of the dead, as a memorial of the distress and affection of the survivors. In their annual lamentations for the sons of Ali, the Persians shed tears, which the priests collect with pieces of cotton, and press them into a bottle. The meaning of the Psalmist is, Let my distress and my tears be ever before thee, excite thy kind remembrance of me, and plead with thee to grant me all the relief needed.

BOW.—An ancient military weapon for shooting arrows. Symbolically, "if he turn not he hath bent his bow," Ps. vii. 12; i. e. if the wicked one repent not, God will punish him; Gen. xxi. 20; xxvii. 3, 4.

BOW, "abode in strength," Gen. xlix. 24; i. e. his virtue, patience, temperance, faith, and his hope in God continued firm, by which he overcame all his trials.

BOW in the clouds. See Rainbow.

BOW.—"My bow was renewed;" that is, my strength, Job xxix. 20.

BOW.—"Thy bow was made quite naked," Hab. iii. 9. This alludes to Eastern warriors who never unsheathed their bows till the moment of attack.

BOW.—To 'bow down' signifies humility and respect. It was a common mode of salutation in the East to kneel on one knee, and bow the head till it touched the ground. See Gen. xxxiii. 3.

BOWELS.—It appears that the Hebrews conceived that the viscera were the seat of the intellect and of the tenderest passions; hence they speak of the yearning of the bowels as indicating strong compassion, Ps. li. 6; Isa. lxiii. 15; Jer. xxxi. 20; Phil. i. 8; ii. 1.

er.—The name of a rock which Jonathan the son of Saul climbed when he went to attack the Philistines;
1 Sam. xiv. 4.

BRACELETS; Isa. iii. 19.—Some of the bracelets of the East, says Chardin, rather resemble manacles than bracelets. Their weight is very great, and their shape is sometimes flat, but more usually round, or semi-circular, taking a cubical form at the section where they are open to admit the hand. Some have several bracelets on the arm. Among Eastern princes it is a badge of royalty, and probably was so regarded in the time of David; 2 Sam. i. 10. The royal bracelet was of the richest materials, and worn above the elbow;
the common bracelet on the wrist.
Among the higher classes they are made of gold, silver, amber, and mother of pearl. Those of silver are the most common, but poorer females are often obliged to wear rings of copper, brass, horn, glass beads, &c.;

BRAMBLE.—A prickly shrub, Judges ix. 14, 15; Ps. lviii. 9. Symbolically, a person of low condition, or of base habits; Luke vi. 44.

BRANCH.—The bough of a tree, Ps. civ. 12. One of the titles of Messiah; Isa. xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5; xxxiii. 15; Zech. iii. 8; vi. 12. Trees, in Scripture, denote great men and princes, and branches and plants denote their offspring. So Christ is the living Vine, and believers are the branches, John xv. 5, 6. He is called a Branch in reference to his human nature. Isaiah says, "There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots, and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him." He is a Branch, and upon him shall hang the unspeakable blessings of pardon, peace, hope, and heaven. The word is used to denote the church of God. Hence that fine allegory, "Return, O God of hosts, look down from heaven, and behold the branch, which thou hast made strong for thyself;" Ps. lxxx. 15. See Isa. iv. 2; John xv. 1—6. It is also applied to Joseph to denote his prosperity; Gen. xlix. 22.

BRANCHES.—"Cut down branches, and strewed them;" Matt. xxi. 8. Alludes to a practice in the East and other countries, to strew flowers and branches of trees in the way of conquerors and renowned princes. Cato was so honoured at the end of his expedition; so Agamemnon, and when Xerxes passed over the Hellespont, the people strewed his way with myrtles.

figurative application declares it to be copper. "Thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass;" Isa. xlvi. 4. Figuratively, a people obstinate in sin, Isa. xlvi. 4. The infinite power of the Redeemer, Rev. i. 15.

BREACH.—The rupture in the walls of a fenced or fortified city by warlike engines or by modern artillery; Num. xiv. 34. Blemish or bruise; Lev. xxiv. 20. Awful judgment or punishment; 2 Sam. vi. 8.

BREACH.—"And ye shall know my breach of promise;" Num. xiv. 34. Some have rendered this passage, "And ye shall experience my displeasure or vengeance," on the ground of its harshness, as applied to the Divine Being. Others think the passage right, understanding "breach of promise," as meaning no more than a revocation of the former covenant which was conditional. As God had promised to bring the people into the land of Canaan, provided they kept his statutes, and as they had broken their engagements, he was no longer bound by his covenant, which he declares he will annul.

BREAD.—Food in general; Gen. iii. 19; xviii. 5; xxviii. 20. The Hebrews had several modes of preparing it. It was ground by a hand-mill, by one or two persons, and was made into dough or paste, in the kneading-trough. They baked it like the modern Arabs, in a hole in the ground heated, covering it with glowing ashes or coals. Sometimes they made thin, hard, and brittle cakes; these were broken by the head of the family, after asking a blessing. It was turned several times till it was sufficiently baked. A cake not turned was not fit for use; and this was the emblem of the indecision of the idolatrous Jews; Hos. vii. 8. The bread of the Jews was generally made of wheat. Barley and other grains were sometimes used; Judg. vii. 13. Sometimes grain was parched; Ruth ii. 14. The unleavened bread was made very thin, and was broken, not cut; Lam. iv. 4; Matt. xiv. 19; xv. 36; xxvi. 26.

Manna is called bread, Neh. ix. 15; John vi. 31. By the bread of tears, Ps. lxxx. 5; and the bread of sorrow, cxxvii. 2, are to be considered heavy afflictions, which destroy appetite, &c. By the bread of wickedness, and the bread of deceit, Prov. iv. 17; xx. 17, are meant acquisition by fraudulent means.

Christ, the true food of the soul, is compared to bread, John vi. 33, 41, 51.

BREAD OF MOURNERS, Hosea ix. 4.—Accounted unclean, because it came in contact with the dead.

BREAD.—"Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days," Eccl. xi. 1. It refers to the custom of the Easterns of sowing rice on land well saturated, or covered with water, which was necessary to its being productive. "We passed some canals conveying water to lands above the level of the river. These are supplied by water wheels, sometimes they are turned by oxen, or by buffaloes. They are banked by very lofty walls, constructed of mud, hardened by the sun. One of them, upon the western side of the river, extended to the lake Maadie. The land thus watered produces three crops in each year; the first of clover, the second of corn, and the third of rice. The rice grounds are inundated from the time of sowing nearly till harvest: the seed is commonly cast upon the water, a practice twice alluded to in Scripture. Balaam prophesied of Israel that "his seed should be in many waters;" and in the above passage in which Solomon exhorts to acts of useful labour, the effects of which will be gratifying. "Sow thy seed," as if the sacred penman had said, "and after about 180 days, thou shalt see a yellow harvest before thee. Never slacken thy efforts, or forbear to act, because the result may not be apparent at once, and the success may seem to hang upon a variety of contingencies."

BREAST-PLATE.—A piece of defensive armour for the breast, Rev. ix. 9. "And they had breast-plates, as it were breast-plates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle." The breast and head being particularly exposed in battle, and wounds in these parts being extremely dangerous, the ancients carefully defended the breasts and the heads of their soldiers by armour, to which the apostle, 1 Thes. v. 8, compares the Christian virtues of "faith and love." In the parallel passage, Eph. vi. 14, the expression is, "the breast-plate of righteousness." The breast-plate of faith and love being made of more precious materials than any metal, and being of a truly heavenly fabric, will render the heart, the seat of the affections, invulnerable. The apostle's meaning, stripped of the metaphor, is this; that to defend our affections against the impressions of outward and sensible objects, nothing is so effectual as faith in the promises of Christ, and love to God and man, Isa. lix. 17; 1 John v. 4.

BREAST-PLATE of the HIGH-PRIEST, Exod. xxviii. 15. — 30. — A piece of golden embroidery about ten inches square, which on special occasions, the high-priest wore on his breast. It was set with twelve precious stones, each bearing the name of one of the tribes of Israel. These precious stones were set in four rows, three in each row, and were divided from each other by the little golden squares in which they were set. The two upper corners were fastened to the ephod by blue ribbons with golden hoops, from which it was not to be loosed; Exod. xxviii. 28; and the two lower corners to the girdle of the ephod, by two ribbons with golden rings and hooks. It was called The Memorial, to remind the priest how dear the tribes should be to him, whose names were upon his breast. It was also called the "breast-plate of judgment," because the high-priest either asked counsel, or publicly delivered the counsel of the Most High.

BRICKS.—"And they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar and in brick, and all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigour;" Exod. i. 14. Bricks were anciently made of unbaked clay compacted with straw. In Egypt the clay was brought in baskets from the Nile, and worked to a proper temper by the feet of the labourer, who was usually a slave or captive. The Israelites were subjected to hard bondage; it was a life of the most painful servitude, and made bitter by the cruel manner of their treatment while performing their tasks; so that they became weary of life through such tyranny.

Josephus says, "The Egyptians contrived a variety of ways to afflict the Israelites; for they enjoined them to cut a great number of channels for their river, and to build walls for their cities and ramparts, that they might restrain the river, and hinder its waters from stagnating upon overrunning its own banks. They set them also to build Pyramids, and wore them out, and forced them to learn all sorts of mechanical arts, and to accustom themselves to hard labour." Philo, another Jewish historian, bears nearly the same testimony.

Mr. Gadsby, in his visit to Thebes, once a magnificent city with superb temples and palaces, and 100 gates, but now in ruins, says, "Near the Rameseum are some ruins of brick walls, some of the bricks having on them the cartouche of Thothmes I, and others of Thothmes III. "Two of these bricks (of Thothmes III,) I procured and conveyed to England. They contain no straw but particles of rubbish, which I apprehend to be the meaning of the word "stubble." It must be borne in mind that the name Pharaoh means king. It is derived from Phra, which signified the sun. The Egyptian kings likened themselves to the sun. Hence we often see them represented with a disk, or representation of the sun upon their heads."

"It is generally admitted that Thothmes III was the Pharaoh of the Exodus, as he refused to find straw for the Israelites, and compelled them to seek for stubble, and as in Tomb No. 35 at Thebes, there is a representation of the Israelites making bricks, with taskmasters over them, I think there can be no reasonable doubt that these bricks were made by the Israelites." Doubtless the Israelites were at Thebes, and there they made bricks; for we read that they were "scattered over all the land of Egypt;" Exod. v. 12. In the representation their faces are portrayed as unlike those of all other captives represented as making bricks; the Israelites are represented as unlike any other people."

"At one place the people were making bricks, with straw cut into small pieces and mingled with clay to bind it. They were exactly employed as the Israelites used to be, 'making bricks with straw,' for a similar purpose—to build extensive granaries for the bashaw—treasure cities for Pharaoh."—Jowett's Travels in the East.

A great multitude of strangers were constantly employed in the brick-fields of Thebes and other parts of Egypt. But the most remarkable agreement with the Pentateuch is in the fact, that a small portion of chopped straw is found in the composition of the Egyptian bricks. This is evident from an examination of those brought by Rosellini from Thebes, on which is the stamp of Thothmes III, the fifth king of the eighteenth dynasty. "The bricks," remarks Rosellini, "which are now found in Egypt, belonging to the same period, always have straw mingled with them, although in some of those that are most carefully made, it is found in very small quantities." According to Rosellini, straw was used in order that the bricks, (they were not for the most part burned, but dried in the sun,) might be more firm, especially those of coarse clay and more roughly formed. Prokesch says, "The bricks (of the first pyramid of Dashoor) are of fine clay from the Nile, mingled with chopped straw. This intermixture gives the bricks an astonishing durability." We are carried much farther by the comparison of our history with a picture discovered in a tomb at Thebes, of which Rosellini first furnished a drawing and an explanation; "Explanation of a picture representing the Hebrews as they were engaged in making brick." We will first give an abstract of the account of Rosellini. "Of the labourers," says he, "some are employed in transporting the clay in vessels, some intermingling it with the straw; others are taking the bricks out of the form and placing them in rows; still others with a piece of wood upon their backs, and ropes on each side, carry away the bricks already burned or dried. Their dissimilarity to the Egyptians appears at first view; the complexion, physiognomy, and beard permit us not to be mistaken in supposing them to be Hebrews. They wear at the hips the apron which is common among the Egyptians, and there is also represented as in use among them a kind of short trousers. Among the Hebrews, four Egyptians, very distinguishable by their mien, figure, and colour, are seen; two of them, one sitting and the other standing, carry a stick in their hand, ready to fall upon two other Egyptians, who are here represented like the Hebrews, one of them carrying on his shoulder a vessel of clay, and the other returning from the transportation of brick, carrying his empty vessel to get a new load. The tomb belonged to a high court officer of the king, Rochsceré, and was made in the time of Thothmes III, the fifth king of the eighteenth dynasty." The question, "How came this picture in the tomb of Rochsceré?" Rosellini answers as follows:—"He was the overseer of the public buildings, and had the charge of all the works undertaken by the king. There are found represented therein still other objects of a like nature; two colossal statues of kings, a sphinx and the labourers who hewed the stone,—works which he by virtue of his office had caused to be performed in his lifetime." To the question, "How came the representation of the labours of the Israelites at Thebes?" It is answered, "We need not suppose that the labours were performed in the very place where they are represented, for Rochsceré was overseer of the royal buildings throughout the land, and what was done in the circuit of his operations could, wherever performed, be represented in his tomb at Thebes. It is also not impossible that the Hebrews went even to Thebes. In Exodus v. 12, it is said that they scattered themselves through the whole land of Egypt in order to procure straw."—Rosellini.

BRICKS OF THE PRYAMIDS.—Professor Unger, the celebrated Viennese botanist and palæontologist, has recently published some remarks on the bricks of the ancient Egyptians, especially those of the pyramid of Dashour, which was built about 3,400 years before our era. One of them on being examined through the microscope by the Professor, he discovered that the mud of the Nile, out of which it was made, contained not only a quantity of animal and vegetable matter, but also fragments of many manufactured substances; whence we must conclude that Egypt must have enjoyed a high degree of civilization upwards of 5,000 years ago. Professor Unger has been enabled by the aid of the microscope to discover in those bricks a vast number of plants which at that time grew in Egypt. The chopped straw, clearly discernible in the body of the bricks, confirm the description of the manner of making the latter, such as we find it in Herodotus and in the book of Exodus.—Engineer.

BRIGHTNESS. Light or lucidness; Isa. lix. 9.—Beauty and temporal glory; Dan. iv. 36.—The future glory of the church; “And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising; Isa. lxii. 1.—The glory of the person and character of Christ; Heb. i. 3; Rev. xxii. 16.

BRIGHTNESS OF HIS GLORY, Heb. i. 3. The resplendent outbeaming of the essential glory of God. Hesychius interprets it by “the splendour of the sun.” A similar phrase is used in the Apocrypha, Wisdom vii. 26, speaking of the Divine wisdom, “For she is the splendour of eternal light, and the unsullied mirror of the energy of God, and the image of his goodness. The original word augasma, (brightness) is that which has splendour in itself; apaugasma, is the splendour emitted from it; but the inherent splendour, and the manifested splendour are radically and essentially the same. Christ, therefore, is of the very same essence with the Father.

BROTHER. Or in the natural sense, the child of the same parent or parents. Sometimes a near relation; Gen. xxix. 15; Gal. i. 19. The former was a nephew, the latter a cousin. In 1 Chron. vi. 39, it refers to a person of the same time, or a companion. In the New Testament, it denotes the spiritual relationship of the children of God to each other, by gracious adoption; Gal. 3. 26; Eph. 3. 15; Rom. viii. 14-16. Believers are related to Christ as their Elder Brother, and to one another for his sake; Mark iii. 33, 34; they are called to the enjoyment of all spiritual blessings; Eph. i. 3; and are heirs of the heavenly inheritance; 2 Thess. ii. 14; 1 Pet. v. 10. It is on this new relationship that Christ's new command of brotherly love is founded; John xiii. 34; and the reciprocal duties he enjoins have all an immediate respect unto it; Gal. vi. 6.

Matt. xii. 20. The Eastern shepherds, while watching their flocks, amuse themselves with playing on a pipe made of a reed. These rude instruments are liable to frequent accidents from bruises, &c. : but as they are all of small value and easily made, the owner breaks them in two when injured, and throws them aside with little concern; this illustrates the above passages. In the Scripture, a reed is the emblem of weakness; Ezek. xxix.

BUKKI, Buk'-ky, void.—A high-priest of the Jews, son of Abishua, and father of Uzziah; 1 Chron vi. 5.

BUKKIAH, Buk-ky'-ah, the dissipation of the Lord.—A musician of the temple of Jerusalem; 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

BUL, Bull, changeable, perishing.—The eighth month of the Jewish sacred year, and the second month of their civil year. On the sixth of this month they fasted, as a memorial of Nebuchadnezzar's cruelty in destroying the children of Zedekiah before his face; 2 Kings xxv. 7.

BULL. One of the animals offered for sacrifice. The Jews never castrated any of their animals, nor do the Mahometans to this day. Their oxen were therefore bulls, properly so called. Besides the tame kind, there is a wild kind of bulls, said to be exceeding large, swift, and fierce, and to dwell in large woods, as of Livonia and Ethiopia. Another kind of wild bulls, or buffaloes, are often tamed; and by having an iron ring in their nose, are made to submit to the plough, though they never entirely lose their natural fierceness.

BULLS 'of Bashan.' Full fed, proud, and insolent animals; a common image of the wicked and the enemies of the church of God; Ps. xxii. 12; lxxviii. 30; Isa. xxxiv. 7.

BULLOCK. "And the skin of the bullock, and all his flesh, with his head, legs, inwards, and his dungshall he (the priest) carry forth without the camp, &c.;" Lev. iv. 11. Bishop Colenso imagines that the camp was twelve miles square. Mr. Porter says the camp was a mere central spot, like a palace in the midst of a capital. Bp. Colenso says, "The offals of these sacrifices would have had to be carried by Aaron himself, or one of his sons, a distance of six miles. . . . "We have to imagine the priest having himself to carry on his back on foot, from St. Paul's to the outskirts of the metropolis, the skin, and flesh, and head, &c. &c.; and the people to carry out their rubbish in like manner, and bring in their daily supplies of water and fuel, &c.! Further we have to imagine half a million of men going out daily, and the 22,000 Levites a distance of six miles—to the suburbs for the common necessities of nature! The supposition involves an absurdity."

In answer to this, remember that the camp, instead of being twelve miles, or six miles from the centre on each side, was probably under a mile. But it may be asked, How could the priest carry a bullock on his back, outside the camp, to a clean place, any distance? The Rev. Mr. McCaul says that the Hebrew verb, "shall carry out," is vehotzi. The Hebrew language has a conjugation called the Hiphil, or causative conjugation, and the verb "shall carry out," is in this conjugation, meaning, he shall cause to be carried out. The order was given to the high-priest not personally to carry forth the bullock; but he was commanded to cause it to be done. A commander is sent to take a fortress, or city; does he take it, or his soldiers? By his skill and commands to his soldiers, he causes it to be done. General Grant conquered the confederates or Southern soldiers of America. He did not do it himself; but he caused it to be done by the instrumentality of the Federal troops.

As to the "common necessities of nature," Bp. Colenso, is very short-sighted. How have large armies acted—armies like those under General Grant, for so long a time encamped before Richmond—and ancient armies, how did they act?—Such objections are absurd, and indicate a want of common sense. See Camp.

BULRUSH.—A reed growing in marshy ground, on the banks of the Nile. It grows about 13 or 14 feet high. The stalks are elastic, soft, and can easily be interwoven very closely; Exod. ii. 3, 5. Pharaoh's daughter made the ark for Moses of Bulrushes. Small sailing vessels were made of Bulrushes in Egypt. They were very light, and carried only one person. In shallow or dry places of rivers, they were carried to a deeper part. The Bulrush is the Papyrus. The pith was used as food. The inner bark was prepared, cut into strips, and cemented together for writing materials. Its preparation for food strikingly elucidates the words in Rev. x. 8—10; "Take the book, and eat it up."

BULRUSHES, Ex. 2. 3; Is. 18. 2, & 58. 5.

BULWARKS. A fortification raised by an enemy besieging a city, Deut. 20. 20; Ecc. 9. 14.—A strong frontier fort, or rampart; 2 Sam. 20. 15; Ps. 48. 13. The defence of the church by Almighty power, is called a bulwark; Ps. 48. 11—14; Is. 26. 1.

BUNAH, Bew'nah, building or understanding.—A descendant of the patriarch Judah; 1 Chron. ii. 25.

BUNNI, Bun'ny, building me.—A Levite who returned from the Babylonish captivity; Neh. ix. 4.

BURDEN.—A common epithet for an oracle or prophecy, or sentence, announcing the decision of Jehovah; Isa. xiii. 1; xv. 1; xix. 1; &c.—A load or weight of any thing; Jer. xvii. 27.—The oppression of Israel in Egypt; Exod. ii. 11. In opposition to this Christ says, "My yoke is easy; my burden is light," Matt. xi. 30. So it is to the regenerate, to whom the commandments of Christ are not grievous, because they are led by the Spirit, and have their sins forgiven them; but to the unregenerate, they are as a grievous burden. The Psalmist says, "I will run in the way of thy commandments, when thou hast enlarged my heart," Ps. cxix. 32.—Afflictions, Ps. lv. 22. Every thing which distresses or perplexes us, whether as to this life or that to come, is called our burden; and concerning these, the exhortation runs, "Cast thy burden on the Lord," Isa. ix. 4; Acts xv. 28.—Sin, which is the heaviest burden, Psalm xxxviii. 4; "For mine iniquities are gone over my head; as an heavy burden they are too heavy for me." Heb. xii. 1. It is to such as are oppressed with this burden, that our Lord says, "Come unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—We are enjoined to bear each other's burdens, Gal. vi. 2; "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." That is, seeing ye are all subject to infirmities, support and uphold one another, through love. We can never truly exercise the law of love, unless we put ourselves in the place of our brethren, considering ourselves, lest we also be tempted.—For taxes, toils, and fatigue, and the office of magistrate; Hosea viii. 10; Matt. xx. 12; Exod. xviii. 22. As every man must give an account to God for his own deeds, and in that view to "bear his own burden," Gal. vi. 5, it behoveth every one to be much more careful to get his own works approved of God, than to condemn others.

BURDENSOME STONE.—"I will make Jerusalem a burdensome stone;" Zech. xiii. 3. The strength of slaves and young men were formerly tested by lifting great stones. Dr. A. Clarke says that this passage probably refers to that stone which was thrown on the breast of a culprit adjudged to lose his life by stoning, by which the whole region of the thorax, heart, lungs, liver, &c., was broken to pieces.

BURNING.—“And they made a very great burning for him,” 2 Chron. xvi. 14. The Greeks and Romans burnt dead bodies, throwing large quantities of aromatics, &c., into the fire. But the Jews copied the practice probably from the ancient Egyptians, not of burning bodies, but of burning spices, &c., at their funerals, 2 Chron. xxi. 19; Jer. xxxiv. 5. Along with aromatics, spices, &c., they burnt the bed on which they lay, and other household stuff, that none might have the honour to use them when they were gone.

BURNT.—“They shall be burnt with fire,” Lev. xx. 14. Dr. A. Clarke thinks, from the humanity of the laws of Moses, that the word should be limited to branding.

BURNT with hunger. — “They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat,” Deut. xxxii. 24. Till recent discoveries this passage was not understood. Dr. Cumming says, “Burnt with fire we all understand; but burnt with hunger seems altogether a mystery. But it expresses the most exact scientific truth. A man that dies of hunger is literally burnt to death. You ask how? Why because the atmosphere he breathes, containing oxygen—that substance that rusts iron by acting on it—if he does not take food, and therefore has no carbon furnished, which is necessary to constitute by its contact with oxygen in the human lungs the vital warmth of the human body, the oxygen acts upon the tissues, and upon the lungs themselves, and a man that dies of hunger is literally and truly burnt to death. That which is the most recent discovery of science was well known to Moses; and yet the rash Bishop Colenso tells us that Moses did not know science, and that to expect that he would speak scientifically exact, is to expect what is extravagant and absurd; and that he learnt in Natal a great deal more than Moses learnt from God Almighty.

BURNT-OFFERING.—A “whole burnt-offering” was a sacrifice in which the victim was wholly burnt on the altar. A “burnt-offering” was the fat of the intestines and kidneys, and the fat tail of sheep, burnt after having been sprinkled with salt. The right fore-quarter was the portion of the priest, and the rest was given back to the offerer, who commonly ate it as a feast, and invited widows, orphans, and the Levites, &c., to partake. See Sacrifice.

BURY. To inter. Burial is the interment of a dead body in the ground; Gen. xxiii. 4. The Jews called a burying-place “the house appointed for the living,” to show that they believed in the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection; and when they bear a dead body to the grave, they address themselves to those who lie there, as if they were still alive, and say, “Blessed be the Lord who hath created you, fed you, brought you up, and at last, in his justice, taken you out of the world. He knows the number of you all, and will in time revive you. Blessed be the Lord, who causeth death, and afterwards restoreth to life.”

It was customary among the Jews for the children or near kindred to close the eyes of the dying; Gen. xlvi. 4. A loud and general wailing was consequent upon the decease; John xi. 19, 31, 33. The body was wrapped in folds of linen cloth, and the head bound round with a napkin; John xi. 44. Probably every limb was bound, and therefore a large quantity of linen was used. This was especially the case in Egypt, as the unwrapping of mummies shows. When the body was thus enveloped it was placed on a bier, in readiness to be borne to the grave. Among the Jews the bier was followed to the grave by the nearest relation; 2 Sam. iii. 31; Luke vii. 14. Other persons attended, and sometimes mourners were employed to attend the body; Jer. ix. 17; Ezek. xxiv. 17; Matt. ix. 23. This is still the case in the East, in Africa, and even among the Irish. The ullaloo of the latter is precisely the same, both in sense and sound, as the olooleh of the Arabians, which is a strong and dreadfully mournful cry uttered by the relatives of a person as soon as he dies.

Jacob was embalmed, and when Joseph died; Gen. 1. 26, he was embalmed and put into a coffin, an honour always conferred upon persons of distinction only, coffins not being generally used in Egypt. As to the Egyptian repositories of the dead, all the bodies were not enclosed in chests, and placed in niches. Most of them were simply embalmed, wrapped in long pieces of linen, and placed in rows without any ceremony. Some were wrapped in cerecloths without having been embalmed; for nothing but rotten bones have been found when they were unwrapped. Coffins were made of marble, stone, various woods, &c., and some were made of several layers of pasteboard, glued together curiously, plastered and painted with hieroglyphics.

Burning the dead was not countenanced among the Hebrews. But this was the case with Saul and his sons; 1 Sam. xxxi. 12; Amos vi. 10, refers to a time of general sickness, and the burning of those who died of the plague was designed to prevent the spread of the contagion. The Hebrews were careful even to bury their enemies; 1 Kings xi. 15; Ezek. xxxix. 14. The smell and pollution of dead bodies required it. To be deprived of burial, or cast into an unclean place, they regarded as a terrible calamity.

1, 2. "And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire, out of a bush. And he looked, and behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed." That this angel, or messenger, was the angel of the covenant, and not a created angel, is a clear case from what followed, where the same Almighty speaker, who called to Moses from the bush, called himself also the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, verscs 4, 6. A bush burning with fire, and not consumed, is a striking emblem of our fallen nature, justly exposed, by reason of sin, to the indignation of Jehovah; but still preserved, because the Son of God dwells in that nature to prevent destruction. And the emblem is heightened to the fullest representation in that it was a bush, and not a tree like the cedar of Lebanon, in which the Lord appeared in a flame of fire. Our blessed Lord, when tabernacling in substance of our flesh for the purpose of salvation, did not come in pomp and grandeur, but in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh; Rom. viii. 3. But besides this intention manifested by the bush on fire, and not consumed, in which the Lord was pleased to begin the first manifestation of himself to Moses, there seems to have been another token of divine love intended by it. Israel was now groaning under the rigorous burden of Egypt from their task-masters. A bush, therefore, being surrounded with flames, and yet not reduced to ashes, became a very striking resemblance of Israel, in the furnace of affliction, and still surviving the hottest blowing of their enemies. So the Lord himself expressed it in an after day of the church, when bidding the people look back to the time of Jacob's trouble; Dent. 33. 16. The church of the living God, in all ages, is a bush burning with fire; when from corruptions within, and temptations without, and the persecutions of the ungodly all around, the fire of affliction besets the Lord's people, and threatens instant destruction. And how is it that they are not consumed, but from being sustained by a power greater than their own? The Lord is in the midst of Zion; she shall not be moved; Zeph. iii. 17.

BUTTER. With us an unctuous substance produced by agitating the cream of milk till the oil separates from the whey; but in Scripture it signifies cream or liquid butter. In the East children were fed with butter and honey; Isa. vii. 15, 22, that is, with cream and honey, so very common in Palestine. Butter and honey were used together, and were regarded as the richest productions of the land. The same compound is still used by Arabs. Instead of butter, the Orientals sometimes use vegetable oils.

BUTTER.—"Washed my steps with butter;" Job xxix. 6. Chandler says that it was usual for men to tread on skins of cream, in order to separate the butter from its more watery part. It was made in very large quantities; on which account such a method might be preferred for expedition. Therefore, figuratively, the sentence denotes great prosperity. It is said of a wicked man, Job xx. 17, "He shall not see the rivers, the floods, the brooks of honey and butter." Mr. Goode says, "Honey and butter are the common results of a rich, well watered pasturage, offering a perpetual banquet of grass to kine, and of nectar to bees; and thus loading the possessor with the most luscious luxuries of pastoral life. The expression appears to have been proverbial, and is used here to denote a very high degree of temporal prosperity.

CAB.—A Hebrew measure of capacity, both liquid and dry, containing three pints and a third, wine measure; and two pints and five-sixths, corn measure; 2 Kings vi. 25.

CABBON, Kab'-bon, as though understanding.—A city mentioned Josh. xv. 40.

CABIN.—A small cell or room in a prison; Jer. xxxvii. 16.

CABUL, Kay'-bul, displeasing, dirty.—The name which Hiram, king of Tyre, gave to the district containing twenty cities, assigned to him by Solomon, for his services in building the temple; 1 Kings ix. 13.

CÆSAR, Se'-sar, one cut out.—A name, which after becoming dignified in the person of Julius Cæsar, was given to all the Roman emperors till the destruction of that empire. In Scripture, the reigning emperor is generally designated by this name, without expressing any other distinction; Matt. xxii. 21; Acts xxv. 10. The Cæsars mentioned are, Augustus, or Cæsar Augustus, Luke ii. 1; he was nephew and successor of Julius Cæsar. The Senate gave to him Augustus as a complimentary title, and it descended upon his successors. Cæsar Tiberius, Luke iii. 1; xx. 22—25. Cæsar Claudius; Acts xi. 28; and Cæsar Nero, Acts xxv. 8, 11. Paul said, "I appeal unto Cæsar;" that is, "I refer the decision of my case to Nero, the present Emperor."

CÆSAR'S HOUSEHOLD; Phil. iv. 22.—Cæsar's household servants, officers of his courts or guards, may be here intended. The cruel and diabolical Nero was then Emperor of Rome; but it is not improbable that the Empress Poppæa was favourably inclined to Christianity, as Josephus relates, (Antiq. l. xx. 7), that "she was a worshipper of the true God." Jerome states, that St. Paul had converted many in Cæsar's family; for, being by the Emperor cast into prison, he became more known to his family, and turned the house of Christ's persecutor into a church.

CÆSAREA, Se-sa-re'a, a bush of hair.—A city and port of Palestine, built by Herod the Great, and dedicated to Augustus Cæsar. It is on the coast of the Mediterranean, between Tyre and Joppa, about 60 miles from Jerusalem. Anciently it was a small town called the Tower of Strabo, and had an inconvenient and exposed harbour. Herod the Great built the city to honour the name of Cæsar, to whom, when completed, it was dedicated by its founder, in the twenty-eighth year of the Emperor's reign. It is now called by the Arabs Kissary. The port was termed Sebastus, that is, Augustus. The city itself was made a colony by Vespasian, and is described on its medals, many of which are still extant.

The harbour was greatly improved by Herod the Great, who made it one of the most convenient havens on the coast. He made a mole in the form of a crescent, spacious enough to allow a whole navy to ride in it at anchor, being carried out 200 feet into the sea. It was a work of immense labour and expense, being built of stones brought from a distance, many of which were fifty feet long, eighteen broad, and nine feet deep. The foundation of the pier was dug twenty fathoms below the bottom of the sea. It was one of the most wonderful works of antiquity.

The buildings of the city were all of marble, both palaces and private dwellings. All round the port were superb buildings of polished marble, constructed with great uniformity; and in the centre, on an elevated spot, was a temple dedicated to Augustus Cæsar, and it became a noted seaport. The walls of the present town were built in the time of the crusades, by Louis IX. of France; they are built of small hewn stones, and about a mile in circumference, and defended by a broad fosse. A little from the south-west corner of the walls, there are the ruins of a very strong castle, of the same date as the walls. This is full of fragments of very fine marble pillars, and a beautiful grey alabaster. Apparently it has been constructed on the ruins of a Roman temple, as immense pillars of granite form the foundation. There are also the ruins of a large church, which probably was the cathedral of the archbishop, who had twenty bishops under him.

Napoleon Bonaparte, Emperor of France, giving an account of the size of Acre, says, "We encamped the following night on the ruins of Cæsarea, surrounded by fragments of columns of marble and granite, which announce its former grandeur."

The remains of this city, although still considerable, have long been resorted to as a quarry. The Pasha of Acre brought from them the columns of rare and beautiful marble, and the other ornaments of his palace, bath, fountain, and mosque. The place now is only inhabited by jackalls and beasts of prey. There are crocodiles in the river. Perhaps there has not been in the history of the world an example of any city, that in so short a time rose to such an extraordinary height of splendour as did Cæsarea, or that exhibits a more awful contrast to its former magnificence by the present desolate appearance of its ruins. Not a single inhabitant remains. Its theatres once resounding with the shouts of multitudes, echo no other sound than the nightly cries of animals roaming for their prey. Of its gorgeous palaces and temples, enriched with the choicest works of art, and decorated with the most precious marbles, scarcely a trace can be seen.

"When I saw it," says Mr. Gadsby, a recent traveller, "Cæsarea was one mass of ruins. Marble pillars, huge stones, &c., met the eye at every turn, and hills upon hills of ruins lay in every direction. In one place it appeared as if a rich colonnade had fallen in a mass, the white marble pillars lying in the ruined wall, horizontally. Part of a wall was standing, nearly 24 feet thick."

It was at Cæsarea that Peter converted and baptized Cornelius, the Centurion, and his kinsmen, the first-fruits of the Gentiles. It was here that Philip the deacon, and his four daughters, having the spirit of prophecy, dwelt. It was in the amphitheatre of Cæsarea, that Herod Agrippa, arrayed in garments of royalty, and seated on his throne, surrounded by his minions, being smitten by an angel of the Lord, was devoured by worms, because he assumed unto himself the glory which was due to God.

It was here that the prophet Agabus foretold that Paul should be bound at Jerusalem, and delivered into the hands of the Gentiles; and it was here that Paul, after two years' confinement, so ably defended himself against the Jews, and their Orator Tertullus. See Acts x; xii. 21, 23; xxi. 8; xxiv. 10, &c. Eusebius, the early historian, was born here.

This is the Cæsarea mentioned in the following places: Acts viii. 40; ix. 30; xi. 19; xxi. 8; xxiii. 23—33, xxv. 4—13.

CÆSAREA PHILIPPI, Se-sa-re'-a Fil-lip'-pi.—This place was first called Laish or Lishim; Judges xviii. 29. An ancient medal shows that it was a seat of the worship of Ashtaroth. It is now a small village inhabited by Turks. Philip, the youngest son of Herod the Great, made it the capital of his tetrarchy, Mark viii. 27; hence its name. It was visited by Vespasian, and by Titus after the capture of Jerusalem; and the public games were commenced in which the captive Jews were compelled to fight with one another, or with wild beasts, for the amusement of the spectators, and many perished. It was the residence of the woman healed of the issue of blood; Matt. ix. 20. It is now an inconsiderable village, called Banias, from Paneas, after some grotto in the neighbourhood, sacred to the god Pan.

CALAPHAS, Kay'-a-fas, a searcher.—The high-priest of the Jews, son-in-law to Annas. He was high priest A. M. 4037, the year of Jesus Christ's death; John xi. 49—53; xviii. 24. The former passage contains a remarkable prediction: "It is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not." This language was prophetic, though Caiaphas did not intend it to be so. "And this spake he not of himself: but being high-priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation," &c. He was a wicked man, but the Spirit of God made use of him to declare the Divine purposes, and as he was high-priest, all his announcements were clothed with authority. Christ, when seized by Judas and his band, was led first to Annas and then to Caiaphas; but, as they had no power to inflict the punishment of death, he was transferred to Pilate for that purpose. Caiaphas predicted that Christ should die for the salvation of both Jews and Gentiles; that his death should break down that partition-wall which had hitherto divided them, and gather together the children of God who were scattered abroad, thus making both Jews and Gentiles one fold under one Shepherd; John x. 15, 16.

CAIN, Kane, possession.—The oldest son of Adam and Eve. He was the first man born of a woman. Eve, his mother, was greatly elated at his birth, and exclaimed, "I have gotten a man from the Lord." Some commentators read the words, "I have gotten a man-Jehovah." She apprehended the child to be the promised Seed—the Bruiser of the Serpent's head. But Cain was of that Wicked One; 1 John iii. 12. Christ styles his brother, "righteous Abel," Matt. xxiii. 35. These two brothers were subjected to industrial occupations. "Abel was a keeper of sheep, and Cain was a tiller of the ground." They were religiously instructed. They appeared before God for the same purpose, but with different dispositions. "By faith Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice to God than Cain," Heb. xi. 4. Cain was a wicked man, having no love to God, no faith in him, and therefore the Lord had no respect to his offering, while that of Abel was regarded with complacency. This so enraged Cain that his countenance fell, and God said unto him, "Why art thou wroth,.....If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted?" Certainly thou shalt. "But if thou doest not well, sin lieth at thy door." But Cain instead of doing well, continued in his sinful course. Envy worked in his breast, and his evil passions so completely ruled him, that at length he rose up with murderous rage, and slew his brother! O horrible deed! How soon! How terribly did sin begin to devastate and destroy! It was his own brother, his younger brother, the son of his mother, whom he ought to have loved and protected. He did it covertly. "He talked with his brother," freely and familiarly, lest he should suspect his design. He was a good brother, no doubt kind and affectionate to him.

Cain, a guilty criminal, was arraigned at the bar of God, and even there, with the utmost obduracy and pride, he refused to submit and to confess his guilt. He attempted to conceal his guilt, and dared to lie unto God, and to insult him to his face. Dreadful was the punishment of Cain. Driven from the face of the earth—deprived of God's favour and blessing—without hope—a wanderer, and an outcast from men—to all which he added fear, "Wherever I am, by day or by night, men will seek to slay me!" His conscience was alarmed; he trembled at his doom. "A fugitive and a vagabond;" Gen. iv. 12; or it might be translated—thou shalt be groaning and trembling upon the earth; the horrors of thy murder shall ever haunt thee; thy conscience shall be thy plague. O terrible doom! It was a kind of hell upon earth. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God."

"And the Lord said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the Lord set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him;" Gen. iv. 15. Thus God was pleased to exempt Cain from his fear of being killed; yet not in mercy, but in judgment. He shall not die, but live a monument of Divine justice. Hence the Psalmist says, "Slay them not, lest my people forget; scatter them by thy power, and bring them down, O Lord;" Ps. lix. 11. God is not obliged to send a sinner to perdition; he can call his name Magor-missabib, saying, "Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends;" Jer. xx. 3.

"And the Lord set a mark upon Cain." In the Septuagint, or Greek version of the Scriptures, it is thus translated, "And God set a sign or wonder, before Cain, and persuaded him, that whosoever should find him should not kill him." The Hebrew word means a sign or token, but never a mark. The token or sign which God gave him amounted to a safe passage through the world, so far as respected a punishment from man for his crime. No doubt the guilt on his soul would be visible in a despairing countenance, strikingly indicating to others that God had punished him, and they need not.

CAIN and ABEL, Gen. 4. 1—17; Matt. 23. 35; Heb. 11. 4, & 12. 24; 1 John 3. 12; Jude 11.

CAINAN, Kay-i'-nan, possessor, one that laments.—The son of Enos, and father of Mahalaleel, born A.M. 325; Gen. v. 9.

CAKE not turned, Hosea vii. 8.—The character of the ten tribes; on the one side they professed the true religion; on the other they were practical idolaters. The allusion is to the eastern bread, baked on the hearth, and not sufficiently baked on one side, or not turned at all; baked on one side, and dough on the other.

CAKE.—A finer sort of bread, so called from its being flat and thin, baked on a hearth, previously heated, or on the surface of a strong earthen or stone pitcher by fuel placed inside.

CALEB, Kay'-leb, a dog, a crow, a basket.—The son of Jephunneh, of the tribe of Judah, who accompanied Joshua when he went to view the land of Canaan; Num. xiii. 6. He was one of the most distinguished of men for moral excellence. When they returned they gave a most favourable report. Caleb endeavoured to animate their courage by his glowing account of the country, and to assure them that they were well able to surmount every difficulty. The opposite and cowardly party said, "We saw giants," &c., Num. xiii. 33. Thus they worked upon the fears of the Israelites, and they declared against the project. On hearing this, Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before the whole congregation, and Joshua and Caleb rent their clothes, imploring them to take courage, and march boldly on, for they were sure to succeed, if they "rebelled not against God." The people, still exasperated, were about to stone Caleb and Joshua, when the glory of the Lord appeared upon the tabernacle, and threatened to destroy them. By the intercession of Moses, this was prevented; though the Lord declared that not one of those men who had murmured against him, should ever see the land of Canaan, but should all die in the wilderness. "As for my servant Caleb," it was added, "who hath faithfully followed me, him will I bring into the land, and he shall possess it, he and his children after him;" Num. xiv. 1—24. Joshua also obtained a similar exception, verses 30, 38. When Joshua had entered the promised land, and conquered a considerable part of it, Caleb with those of his tribe came to meet him at Gilgal, and finding that the former was going to divide the land among the twelve tribes, Caleb petitioned to have allotted to him the country which was inhabited by the giants; on which Joshua blessed him, and granted his request. Assisted by a portion of his tribe, he marched against Hebron, and slew the children of Anak: thence he proceeded to Debir, and finding the place almost impregnable, he offered his daughter Achsah in marriage to the hero that should take it. This was done by his nephew Othniel, who in consequence obtained Achsah, with a considerable portion also of territory. —Also the name of a canton in the tribe of Judah; See 1 Sam. xxx. 14. —The name of two persons; 1 Chr. ii. 18, 50.

CALF, the young of a cow, commonly used in sacrifice. Molten calf, which the Israelites worshipped at the foot of mount Sinai; Exod. xxxii. 4, 19. Doubtless an imitation of the Egyptian apis; Acts vii. 41. Two golden calves set up by Jeroboam, the one at Bethel, the other at Dan, the two extremities of his kingdom, from political views, to prevent the return of the ten tribes to the house of David; 1 Kings xii. 27, 28. Calves of our lips; Hos. xiv. 2. denotes sacrifices of praise, and prayer offered to God. "Take with you words, and turn to the Lord: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously: so will we render the calves of our lips," or the fruit of our lips; Hebrews xiii. 15. Praise and thanksgiving is a spiritual sacrifice, and if it come from a heart renewed by grace, shall please the Lord better than an ox or a bullock; Psalm lxxix. 30, 31.

CALLING, (1.) any lawful employment; 1 Cor. vii. 20. (2.) The general invitation to repentance, by the ministry, by providence, or by the motions of the Holy Spirit on the consciences of men, whereby they are warned of their danger, and taught the need of a Saviour; Isa. xxii. 12; Matt. xxii. 14. (3.) That more particular invitation by the preaching of the word, and effectual operation of the Holy Spirit, whereby sinners know, believe, and obey the gospel; Rom. xi. 29.

The term calling may allude to the practice of selecting from the whole body of the Israelites, those most fit for military service. All were called and enrolled, but only the fittest were chosen. "They that are with him (the Lamb) are called, and chosen, and faithful." This declaration alludes to the Roman army, and to the mode of enlistment. On the day of enrolment, the people were called together in the Capitol, the consuls and others chose those who were most likely to serve; the fidelity depended upon the mode in which those called and chosen acquitted themselves in battle. The blessings of the gospel are offered to all. When a needy sinner complies with the requisitions of the gospel, i. e. repents and believes, then the personal election takes place. He rejoices in the forgiveness of sins, union to Christ and his people, and in his regenerated feelings and views. He has the witness of the Spirit within him that he is really one of the called, and his subsequent holy and active conduct renders his calling and election sure.

CALM. "He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof be still;" Ps. cvii. 29. Strange to say, a high wind is preferable to a calm. Even in a stormy wind a ship sails more expeditiously, and reaches her port sooner, than in a calm. A person who has never been on the ocean before may welcome a calm; but the heroic sailor, anxious to accomplish the object of his voyage, will rather hail a brisk gale to waft him to the distant shore, than to roll about in a dead calm, to the injury of his vessel, and the delay of his voyage. Believe it, Christian, the best weather does not make the best voyage heavenwards. It is better for thee to proceed on thy course through the rolling waves of affliction, attended by the ruffling winds of adversity, than to be becalmed by affluence, ease and prosperity. The former through apparent difficulty and danger, will at last waft thee to the desired haven, while the other will detain thee to thy eternal ruin. God sits as King on the swelling flood, and arranges all the trials of his people. Though sometimes they complain, "All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me;" Ps. xlii. 7, yet not one can come nigh them without his permission, nor swell beyond the given bounds; Job xxxviii. 11.

CALNEH, Kal'-neh, our consumption.—One of the cities built by Nimrod, in the land of Shinar; Gen. x. 10. It is believed to be the same as CALNO; Isa. x. 9. It became the winter residence of the Persian kings. It is now in a state of ruins.

CALNO. Kal'-no, consummation.—See Calneh; Isa. x. 9.

CALVARY, Kal'-va-re, or Golgotha, the place of a skull.—A little hill north-west of Jerusalem, which probably received its name, Calvary, or Golgotha, from some imagined resemblance which it had in form to a skull, or, as some think, to its being appropriated for the execution of criminals. It is memorable as the place of our Lord's crucifixion; Luke xxiii. 33. It has a small elevation, about 18 feet high, situate to the north-west of Jerusalem, and without the walls of the city, agreeably to the law of Moses; Matt. xxvii. 33. It now groans beneath the weight of monastic piles, though formerly it was open ground, cultivated for gardens, at the time when Christ suffered without the gate; John xix. 41; Heb. xiii. 12. Contiguous to Mount Calvary was the garden of Joseph of Arimathea, where was the sepulchre of Christ. The emperor Adrian, when he rebuilt Jerusalem, and called it Ælia, profaned the tomb of Christ by filling it up, and placing idols over it. But the empress Helena directed the tomb to be cleared out, and built over it a magnificent church, which is still called the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

In the "Mission of Scottish Church to the Jews," we read;—The church is not remarkable for elegance or beauty, and the pictures, with a few exceptions, are far from being of the first order. In the centre stands a marble house enclosing the sepulchre. We entered and examined the sarcophagus, which is of white marble. Even the monks seemed to be a great deal more taken up with the silver lamps hung over it than with the tomb itself. We were then led to a flat stone of reddish marble, on which, say the monks, the Saviour's body was anoint-

ed. With lighted tapers we descended to a damp dark place, where Helena is said to have found the three crosses. The rock of Calvary, so called by the monks, is only a few paces from the sepulchre. Ascending some twenty steps into a small chapel, the guide lifted up a gilded star in the floor, and showed what is called the hole in the rock where the cross was fixed. In a dark chapel underneath, lighted by a single lamp, he pointed to the well-known fissure in the rock, pretended to be the rent that was made when Jesus died. We had little patience to go round all the spots accounted sacred under the roof of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre; and each of us felt the blush of honest indignation rising in our face at the mingled folly and profanity of the whole scene. To do the monks justice, they seemed to have as little feeling of reverence towards the holy place as we could possibly have, and Ibrahim, our Arab servant who accompanied us, was fully as deeply impressed as any of the party. The fissure in the rock, and the tombs of Joseph and Nicodemus, (so called,) situated in a dark chapel behind the sepulchre, were the only objects which peculiarly drew our attention, both being in the natural rock. As for the rest, if Calvary was really within these walls, then truly Popery has continued to hide the place where the Redeemer died, as completely as she has done the person of the Redeemer himself. The simple work of Immanuel, in its essential native glory, is an idea far beyond the reach of Popery—or perhaps it is perceived, but on account of its innate power, is studiously hid. 'The god of this world hath blinded their minds, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine upon them.'

"On the supposition that this spot is Calvary, the only probable reason that can be given for it being so near the city itself is, that 'the place of a skull' was a sort of trench, by the walls, where criminals were executed. But the longer we remained in the Holy City, the more we were convinced that this is not the true site of Calvary. We are told expressly in Scripture that 'Jesus suffered without the gate.' And also, that 'the place where he was crucified was nigh to the city.' But the site of the church of the Holy Sepulchre is a long way within the walls of Jerusalem. We cannot believe that the ancient city was narrower or smaller in any way than the present Jerusalem. On the contrary, there is reason to believe that it was much more extensive. From the Church, along the Via Dolorosa, to the western enclosure of the Mosque of Omar, is but a five minutes' walk, and yet this must have been the whole breadth of the city, if the present Calvary was without the gate. How contrary is this to the description given by the Psalmist; 'Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together!'

"On the whole, we found it a relief to our minds to rest in the conclusion that the cleft rock and the Holy Sepulchre of the monks, have as little to do with the place where Jesus died, and the rocky tomb in the garden where they laid him, as the polished marbles and gaudy lamps by which the place is disfigured.

"There is no tradition which may lead the mind to any other spot as the site of Calvary. It struck us forcibly that some place among the tombs on the high ground above Gihon, was far more likely to have been the real situation. We could then understand how 'Jesus bearing his cross went forth into a place called the place of a skull,' and 'suffered without the gate.' There would be room for 'the garden,' and the new sepulchre of Joseph might be hewn out of its rocks. But it is wisely ordered that a cloud of oblivion should rest over the spot where Immanuel died, and there is something pleasing to the mind in reflecting, that the turf that was stained with his blood, and the rock tomb where he lay, are left unprofaned by the followers of a blind and wicked superstition."

"If I were to say that I viewed this place with indifference," writes Mr. Gadsby, "I should do violence to my own feelings; for despite all the arguments of Dr. Robinson and others to prove that this could not have been the place of the crucifixion, and despite my most determined hostility to priest-craft in every shape, I could not then, nor can I now believe that this is not Mount Calvary. And yet not one of the objectors is able to point to any place, except this, which in any way answers the description given by the evangelists. We know that the rocks were rent; and here is shown a cleft rock which could not possibly have been accomplished even by wonder-working priests. We know also that in the place where the Saviour was crucified was a garden, that in the garden was a rock in which a new sepulchre was hewn, and that in that sepulchre the body of Jesus was laid; (Compare John xix. 41, with Matt. xxvii. 60;) and here is a rock in which is a cave that has evidently been a sepulchre. Other sepulchres are also shown hard by, which are said to be that of Joseph of Arimathea and his family; and what more likely than that a man's family should all lie near to each other? Yet Dr. R. smiles at the priests, who have "contrived" to bring all these things so close together! Why, had it been otherwise, John's particular account could not have been true; for, as I have already shown, it was in the place where the Saviour was crucified that there was a garden, and in that garden the sepulchre. Let the objectors find some other place which will equally well answer the description given in the New Testament, and then I may see good ground for altering my views; but until this be done, I must be content to be believe that, for once, the priests are right.

It is quite true, as urged by Dr. Robinson, that the site of Calvary, is within the present wall; whereas, we know that the crucifixion took place without the gate; (Heb. xiii. 12;) but my answer to this is, that the wall of the city is not now situated as it was at the time of the crucifixion, and that no man can tell where the wall then stood. Indeed, there were, at one time, two walls, both of which were utterly destroyed by the Roman army under Titus; and there can be no doubt that, in this direction the city wall extends farther west now than it did then, having been re-built hundreds of years afterwards. The sepulchre is situated on the hill of Acra, and now nowhere is either this hill or that of Bezetha, to the N. W. of Acra, mentioned in the Bible. Supposing, therefore, that the walls which existed at the time of the crucifixion, included Calvary, they were the work of Roman hands, and, consequently, would not be revered by the Jews. As the hills enclosed by them formed no part of the ancient city, the Jews would not have considered it polluting the city to execute malefactors within those walls. It was the Jews, not the Romans, who crucified Christ, though they were assisted by Roman soldiers. But the probability is, that the ancient wall commenced at the Tower of David, skirting Zion and Moriah on the north, while it embraced the whole of Zion on the south, the greater part of which, is without the existing wall.

Besides there must have been many Christians in Jerusalem at the time of its destruction, which was only about 37 years after the death of Christ, and as they had greatly increased, it is absurd to think they did not know the identical place where their Lord and Saviour offered himself as a sacrifice for all believers. Smithfield, in London, where so many martyrs were burnt for professing Christ, will, I apprehend, never be forgotten. So with many other places. And could Calvary be forgotten? Calvary, where Jesus died that his church might live?

CAMEL. In Chaldee it is called gamala, in Hebrew, gamal; in Arabic gimel; and in modern Arabic djammer. It is an animal very common in Arabia, Judea, and the neighbouring countries. It is often mentioned in Scripture, as most valuable property; 1 Chron. v. 21; Job i. 3, &c.

His name means to carry. The Camel is a "beast of burden." The old traveller Sandys says, "The camels are the ships of Arabia, their seas are the deserts." The Camel is the most useful animal in the East. As a beast of burden, he possesses great strength and docility, and his swiftness, coupled with his endurance of hunger and thirst, makes him doubly valuable to the inhabitants of desert places. He has a large hunch on his back, and has no horns. He can abstain from water for a long time. He is furnished with an internal paunch or bag, or reservoir, to contain a quantity of water, till it becomes necessary to quench his thirst, and macerate his food; at which time, by a simple contraction of certain muscles. he makes a part of this water ascend into his stomach, or even as high as the gullet. This singular construction enables him to travel 12 or 15 days across the hot dry desert, nearly devoid of water, without again drinking. Though of a heavy and apparently unwieldy form, this animal moves with great speed. With a heavy load of six or eight hundred pounds, on his back, he will travel at the rate of 30 miles a day, and for short journeys he will carry ten or twelve hundred pounds.

"No creature," says Volney, "seems so peculiarly fitted to the climate in which he exists, as the camel. Designing this animal to dwell in a country where it can find little nourishment, nature has been sparing of her materials in the whole of his formation. She has not bestowed upon him the fleshiness of the ox, horse, or elephant; but, limiting herself to what is strictly necessary, has given him a long head, without ears, at the end of a long neck without flesh; has taken from his legs and thighs every muscle not immediately requisite for motion; and, in short, bestowed upon its withered body only the vessels and tendons necessary to connect its frame together. She has furnished him with a strong jaw, that he may grind the hardest aliments; but, lest he should consume too much, has straitened his stomach, and obliged him to chew the cud; has lined his foot with a lump of flesh, which sliding in the mud, and being no way adapted to climbing, fits him only for a dry, level, and sandy soil, like that of Arabia. So great, in short, is the importance of the camel to the desert, that, were it deprived of that useful animal, it must infallibly lose every inhabitant."

Camels have sometimes been used in war; 1 Sam. xxx. 17, for the conveyance of merchandise, Gen. xxxvii. 25; by individuals for private conveyance, Gen. xxiv. 64. The Midianites possessed them without number, Judg. vii. 12. The milk was deemed cooling and healthy in hot climates. Out of the hair, sacks for corn, were made. John the Baptist, we are told, was habited in a raiment of camels' hair; and Chardin assures us, that the modern dervises wear such garments; as they do also great leathern girdles. Camels' hair is also made into those most beautiful stuffs, called shawls; but certainly the coarser manufacture of this material was adopted by John, and we may receive a good idea of its texture, from what Braithwaite says of the Arabian tents; they are made of camels' hair, somewhat like our coarse hair cloths to lay over goods.' By this coarse vesture, the Baptist was not merely distinguished, but contrasted with those in royal palaces, who wore soft raiment, such as shawls, or other manufactures, whether of the same material or not.

CAMELS and young Dromedaries, Esther viii. 10. There is a distinction between the two. The two-humped, or Bactrian camel is scarcely known in south-western Asia. The same animal bears both the names, but the heavy made one retains that of camel, while the light one is trained for running, and then receives the name of dromedary.

CAMELS' "FURNITURE." The pannier resembling a covered chair or cradle, thrown across the back of the camel for ladies; Gen. xxxi. 34.

CAMEL, 'to go through the eye of a needle;' Matt. xix. 24. The following is the opinion of Lord Nugent. He describes himself as about to walk out of Hebron through the larger gate, when his companions, seeing a train of camels approaching, desired him to go through the "eye of the needle;" in other words, the small side gate. This his lordship conceives to be a common expression, and explanatory of Christ's words; 'for,' he adds, 'the sumpter camel cannot pass through unless with great difficulty, and stripped off his load, his trappings, and his merchandise.' A proverb still in use among the Arabs, expressive of great difficulty. To prevent the plundering Arabs from entering into houses, their doors were made very low, not more than three feet high. They train their own camels to make their way on their knees through such small door-ways, an act of difficulty. The comparison of Christ is sufficiently natural; "it would be as easy to force a camel through the eye of a needle, as for a rich man to enter into heaven."

Some Manuscripts read Hamilton, cable, instead of Kamelon, camel. The Koran says, "The ungodly who shall accuse our doctrine of falsity, shall find the gates of heaven shut; nor shall he enter there till a camel shall pass through the eye of a needle." The expression is quite oriental; for the public teachers generally take their figures from circumstances, and things immediately near the place where they speak, or teach. Mr. Gadsby says, 'I incline to the opinion that at the time the Redeemer spake the parable he was with his disciples in one of those public khans, there being no other resting-place before them, and there seeing the people mending their camel saddles, &c., for which purpose they used a long needle like a straight packing needle; he pointed to them, and said, as it were, "Those camels can as soon pass through the eyes of those needles as a rich man can enter into the kingdom of God."'

CAMEL'S HAIR. "And John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins;" Matt. iii. 4. One kind of such raiment was a beautiful sort of cloth made of the fine hair of the camel; it was soft and fine; and was worn by priests and noblemen. Another kind was a coarse stuff made of the long shaggy hair of the camel, which they pull when it is about to fall off. They are still worn by the Eastern dervises, or priests. The Hebrew and other prophets wore such garments.

The garments of camel's hair mentioned in the Old Testament were probably of the finer sort; for they are called a magnificent robe, or burnoose, as the word in the original means; 1 Kings xix. 13, 19; 2 Kings i. 8; Micah ii. 8; Zech. xiii. 4. The self-denying spirit and office of Elijah and John the Baptist induce us to believe that their garments were of the coarser kind.

—A city of the tribe Manasseh, on the other side of Jordan; Judges x. 5.

CAMP. The camp of the Israelites was under the immediate direction of heaven; Numb. ii. 1, 2. The whole body of people was disposed under four battalions, so placed as to enclose the tabernacle in the form of a square, and each under the general standard. (1.) In the vanguard, on the east, were posted Judah, Issachar, and Zebulon, ver. 3—9. (2.) In the right wing, southward, Reuben, Simeon, and Gad, verses 10, 16. (3.) In the rear, westward, Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin, verses 18, 24. (4.) On the left wing, northward, Dan, Asher, and Naphtali, verses 25, 31. (5.) The tabernacle in "the midst of the camp," ver. 17. Some order, it is probable, they had observed hitherto; they came out of Egypt in rank and file; Exod. xiii. 18, but now they were put into a better order. God appointed them their place, to prevent strife and envy among them. And the children of Israel observed the orders given them; ver. 34. "They did according to all that the Lord commanded Moses; and set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their father." They put themselves in the posts assigned them, without murmuring or disputing. Balaam was charmed with the sight of the camp of Israel, chap. xxiv. 5. "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob!"

Before commencing a march, which was only when the cloud moved from over the tabernacle, the people had three warnings by the silver trumpets; one, to pack up their baggage; a second, to assemble to the standards; and a third, to begin the march. The camp of Judah marched first; the tabernacle was then taken down, and the Gershonites, and Merarites, placing the various materials on waggons, followed. Next the camp of Reuben marched, the Kohathites followed with the more sacred furniture of the tabernacle on their shoulders. Next followed the camp of Ephraim, &c., and that of Dan brought up the rear; Num. chapters i. ii. iv. x.

CAMP. "And it came to pass that night, that the angel of the Lord smote in the camp, &c. and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.—Here the Verb not having a Nominative, should have been rendered impersonally; thus—"And at the time of rising in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses." In this way the absurdity of dead men rising up in the morning is avoided; 2 Kings xix. 35.

Bishop Colenso finds fault with the Camp of the Israelites, and states the sacred historian to be in error. He is best answered by Mr. J. L. Porter. "The second point," says Mr. Porter, "supposed to 'demonstrate' an error in the sacred narrative, is the estimated size of the camp in the wilderness,—'not much inferior, in compass, we must suppose, to London.' It is assumed that the whole two millions of people were grouped close together in a camp. This is opposed alike to the whole tenor of the narrative and to common sense. Any one who has had an opportunity of visiting the great Arab tribes of the Syrian desert can see that the Bishop's difficulties are here purely imaginary. The Israelites had immense flocks and herds (Exod. xii. 38;) these, from the necessity of the case, and like the flocks of the modern Bedouin, were scattered far and wide over the peninsula, and probably over the plain northwards. On one occasion I rode for two successive days in a straight line through the flocks of a section of the Anazeh tribe, and the encampment of the chief was then at a noted fountain, thirty miles distant, at right angles to my course; yet the country was swarming with men and women, boys and girls, looking after the cattle. In like manner the great bulk of the Israelites would be scattered over the desert. The camp would thus be a mere nucleus; large, no doubt, but not approaching the exaggerated estimate of Bishop Colenso. Yet, being the head-quarters of the nation, containing the tabernacle, the priests, and the chiefs, and forming the rallying point for the warriors, it was the only place with which the sacred historian was concerned. This view, which is natural, scriptural, and in accordance with the universal practice of Oriental nomads, sweeps away a host of difficulties conjured up by the imagination, and then supported by the arithmetic of Bishop Colenso."

Dr. Cumming adds, The Bishop, you observe, has assumed that the camp, instead of being the palatial and sacred residence of the chiefs, was the great encampment of the whole two millions and upwards in the desert. He has, therefore, been wholly misled in his arithmetic. Had he studied arithmetic more he would have blundered in theology much less.

CAMPHIRE, Kam'-fyre. A fragrant shrub common in Cyprus, and other parts of the East. By Solomon it is made the emblem of admiration and true love. "My beloved is unto me as a cluster of camphire in the vineyards of Engedi."—"Thy plants are an orchard of pomegranates, with pleasant fruits; camphire, and with spikenard; Song i. 14; iv. 13.

This plant is beautiful to the eye and grateful to the smell. The soft deep colour of its bark; the light green of its foliage; the softened mixture of white and yellow with which the flowers collected into long clusters, like the lilac, are coloured; the red tint of the ramifications which support them, form a combination of the most agreeable effect. The flowers diffuse the sweetest odours, and wonderfully perfume the gardens and apartments which they embellish. Females delight to deck themselves with the fragrant clusters, to adorn their chambers with them, to carry them to the bath, and to adorn their persons with them.

The powder of the dried leaves gives an orange tint to their nails, to the inside of their hands, and to the soles of their feet. This custom prevails in Egypt, and the ancient Egyptians practised it, for the nails of the mummies are commonly of a reddish hue.—Camphire is very different from Camphor.

CANA, Kay'-nah, zeal, possession, nest, cave.—A place in Galilee, now called Kefer Kenna, is situated about sixteen miles north-west of Tiberias, and four or five north-east of Nazareth. Dr. Clarke observed among the ruins large stone vessels, capable of holding many gallons, similar to those mentioned in the narrative of the marriage, at which our Lord performed his first miracle; John ii. 1—11. It was here also that the nobleman applied to Christ to heal his son, who was sick at Capernaum, and near death, and though distant above thirty miles, he healed him with his word.—Also, Cana, or Kanah, a place belonging to the tribe of Asher; Josh. xix. 28.

CANAAN the son of Ham. 'Cursed be Canaan,' Gen. ix. 25. The sentence was here pronounced on the descendants of Ham for the crime he committed. Canaan perhaps partook of it, but the sentence was combined with the certainty that he and his race would be what they ultimately were, till God's curse overtook them in the most awful manner. Noah spoke prophetically. These things had been just as they afterwards occurred had Noah never spoken. Besides, the curse pronounced on Canaan, neither fell immediately upon himself, nor on his worthless father, but upon the Canaanites. Some, instead of "Cursed be Canaan," read, "Cursed be Ham," and others, "Cursed be the father of Canaan."

This malediction certainly came upon the Canaanitish nations; for their morals became deeply depraved, and their actions were enormously wicked. In the time of Abraham they were devoted to destruction for their sins; five cities, consumed by fire, as a punishment, and a manifestation of God's hatred of sin. In the time of Moses, their character became worse. They were great idolaters, and guilty of the most revolting crimes. Their children were immolated upon the altars, and burnt in the presence of their parents; they were devourers of human flesh, and deeply immersed in the filthiness of every species of vice.

"A servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren." This was fulfilled when the Canaanites were conquered by the Israelites, the posterity of Shem, who had been in slavery to the Egyptians. In the time of Joshua, the Canaanites invaded their land, when he smote upwards of thirty of their kings, and made many of the people servants to the Israelites. Solomon completed what Joshua had begun, as stated, 2 Chron. viii. 7, 8. And so has it been through every period of the history of this devoted people. The Egyptians, the descendants of Ham, were subjugated by the Persians, who were of Shem, and by the Grecians, who were of Japheth. Tyre, built by the children of Ham, fell successively under the posterity of his brethren. The ruin of Carthage by Rome, confirmed this prediction; Carthage being peopled by the posterity of Ham, and the Romans descending from Japheth. This it was that made Hanibal cry out, in the bitterness of his soul—" Agnosco fortunam Carthaginis!" Ever since, the miserable remainder of this people have been slaves to a foreign yoke; first, to the Saracens, who descended from Shem, and then to the Turks, as they still are. The whole continent of Africa was peopled chiefly by the children of Ham, and long have they lain under the dominion of the Romans, the Saracens, and the Turks. How many thousands have been annually sold and bought like beasts in the market, and conveyed from one quarter of the world to do the work of beasts in another.

CANAAN, Kay'-nan, a merchant, a trader.—Or Palestine, was known under the name of the land of the Hebrews, in the age of Joseph, but in consequence of its being soon wholly occupied by the race of Canaan, it was long distinguished by his name. "Its boundaries are the Mediterranean on the west; Lebanon and Syria on the north; Arabia Deserta, and the lands of the Ammonites, Moabites, and Midianites, on the east; the river of Egypt, the wilderness or desert of Zin, the southern shore of the Dead Sea, and the river Arnon, on the south; and Egypt on the south-west. Near Mount Lebanon stood the city of Dan, and near the southern extremity of the land, Beersheba; and hence the expression 'from Dan to Beersheba,' to denote the whole length of the land of Canaan. Its extreme length was about 180 miles, and its width about 80. By the Abrahamic covenant, recorded in Gen. xv. 18, the original grant of land to the Israelites was 'from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates.' The boundaries of it are most accurately described by Moses in Num. xxxiv. 1—16. Its boundaries, as generally laid down, are Lebanon on the north, Arabia on the east, Idumea on the south, and the sea on the west. Under David and Solomon, its extent was greatly increased, by the conquest of Ammon, Moab, Edom, &c.; 1 Kings iv. 21—24. At the time of the Christian Era, Palestine was divided into provinces, Judea, Samaria, Galilee, Perea, and Idumea. It is in this country most of the remarkable occurrences of Scripture took place.

Under Rehoboam, a dreadful rending asunder of the kingdom took place, which made Judah and Benjamin one kingdom, and the remaining ten tribes another; 1 Kings xii. Jerusalem continued the metropolis of Judah and Benjamin; and this kingdom adhered to the true God, and his proper worship. Samaria became the metropolis of Israel, and that people worshipped golden calves at Bethel and Dan. These separate kingdoms were often at war, to their unspeakable detriment, and were often devastated by foreign enemies. At last, about B. C. 721, Israel was entirely overthrown by Salmancser, king of Assyria, after it had stood about 254 years, and has never since been restored. Judah survived as a kingdom about 130 years longer, and was then, B. C. 590, entirely conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, who carried away with him the most important of the people.

After a captivity of seventy years, they returned gradually; their temple and city, which had lain in ruins, were rebuilt, and they enjoyed peace as a province of Persia. When that monarchy was overthrown by Alexander, Judea (as the whole of Canaan was then called) submitted to the conqueror. After Alexander's death, this country was sometimes subject to Syria, and sometimes to Egypt, and for a time asserted and maintained its independence under John Hyrcanus and his successors. It however was forced, about B. C. 63, by Pompey, to submit to the victorious Romans, who divided it into provinces, and set rulers over them. These provinces, at the time of Christ, were Judea, Samaria, and Galilee. There was also a province on the north, called Perœa, and one on the south, called Idumea, which were considered as belonging to Palestine. It continued thus, in possession of much peace and prosperity, for many years, during which the temple was rebuilt with great magnificence, and in its courts and the renovated streets the Saviour taught, and wrought his wondrous miracles. But the infatuated Jews, after crucifying their Messiah, became unquiet and mutinous, and drew on themselves the vengeance of the Romans, who, under Titus, destroyed Jerusalem, A. D. 70, and terminated wholly the existence of the Jews as a nation.

Since that period, the Israelites have been found in almost every commercial part of the world, and not a few have ever continued on the soil of their forefathers; but their once beautiful land has been constantly suffering under the horrors of servitude and frequent wars. The Saracens, crusaders, Mamelukes, and Turks, have ruled it in succession; and under these last masters, who have possessed it since the year 1317, its sterility and desolation have constantly increased. Its once noble cities are now poor villages, and most of its former villages are utterly extinct.

The territory is now divided into two districts, namely, ACRE, comprising the seaboard, and DAMASCUS, embracing the remainder; each of which is governed by a pacha, or basha. The population is now very mixed, consisting of Turks, (who hold the chief offices), Syrians, Bedouin Arabs, Jews, Copts, Druses, and Christians. The last are, generally, Roman Catholics, Greeks, and Armenians. Many monks reside here, and most of the chief towns have convents. Several denominations of christians have maintained missions here for some years.

The principal Mountains were Lebanon, noted for its cedars and its beautiful scenery. Hermon another part of Lebanon; the summit of it. Tabor, more to the south, was the supposed scene of the transfiguration. Carmel, (the vine of God,) a lofty range on the sea-coast, was remarkable for its excellent vineyards. The Mount of Olives, Moriah, and Calvary are near Jerusalem. Engedi was famed for its numerous brooks and palm groves. Ebal and Gerizim, near the city of Shechem, were the mountains on which the law was to be proclaimed. These and other mountains divided Palestine into various table-lands, leaving two great plains, called the region about Jordan, and the plain of Esdraelon. Some of these valleys and plains were sterile, others were uncommonly fertile.

The land of Canaan is described as "a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills;" Deut. viii. 7. Numerous brooks and streams intersected the land, which greatly contributed to its fertility, and the comfort of its inhabitants. The Jordan is the principal river, which in March or April overflows its banks. Its waters are sweet and salubrious, but rather muddy in the time of overflowing. The river Jabbok falls into the Jordan. A little to the south is the rivulet called the brook of Jazer, and it probably took its rise from a lake near Mount Gilead, called the Sea of Jazer. The other rivulets and brooks are the Arnon, the Sihor, the Kanah, the Kishon, the Kidron, &c.

Palestine is extolled throughout the Bible, for its fertility, riches, and amenity—as a land flowing with milk and honey; Josh. v. 6;—a land in which vines were so numerous and fruitful, that the inhabitant might "wash his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of the grape;" Gen. xlix. 11; "a land for cattle," Num. xxxii. 1, 4;—a land abounding in the most useful minerals, "whose stones are iron," &c.; Deut. viii. 7—9. Read the description given, Ps. lxxv. 8—13.

Another traveller says "We entered a beautiful plain. It must be confessed, that if we could live secure in this country, it would be the most agreeable residence in the world, on account of the pleasing diversity of mountains and valleys, and salubrious atmosphere, which is always filled with balsamic odours from the wild flowers of these valleys, and from the aromatic herbs on the hills."

Dr. E. D. Clarke, describing the country between Sichem and Jerusalem, says, "A sight of this territory alone can convey any adequate idea of its surprising produce: it is truly the Eden of the East, rejoicing in the abundance of its wealth. The effect of this upon the people was strikingly portrayed in every countenance. Under a wise and beneficent government the produce of the Holy Land would exceed all calculation. "Its perennial harvest; the salubrity of its air; its limpid springs; its rivers, lakes, and matchless plains; its hills and vales;—all these added to the serenity of its climate prove this land to be indeed "a field which the Lord God hath blessed."

Mr. Buckingham, travelling through the mountains of Gilead, says;—"We were in a land of extraordinary richness, abounding with the most beautiful prospects, clothed with thick forests, varied with verdant slopes, and extensive plains of fine red soil, now covered with thistles as the best proof of its fertility." "We passed through a country, the beauty of which so surprised us, that we often asked each other what were our sensations, to persuade each other, that the picture before us was not an optical illusion. The landscape varied at every turn and gave us new beauties from every different point of view; and the park-like scenes, that sometimes softened the romantic wildness, reminded us of similar spots in less neglected lands."

Tacitus, Justin and Josephus, ancient writers, are uniform in their testimony as to the fruitfulness of its soil, its exuberant produce, like that of Italy, and the beauty of the climate. It produces, they say, all kinds of fruits; the vine, the olive, and the palm trees, are chiefly cultivated there. Samaria and Judea have abundance of trees, and are full of autumnal fruits, both wild and cultivated.

"It is easy to see," says Maundrell, "that these rocks and hills must have been anciently covered with earth, and cultivated, and made to contribute to the maintenance of the inhabitants, no less than if the country had been all plain; nay, more, because such an uneven surface affords a larger pace of ground for cultivation than a level one." They made borders of stones, and placed them in several lines, along the sides of the hills in form of a wall. Thus they prevented the mould from tumbling or being washed down, and formed many beds of excellent soil, rising gradually one above another from the bottom to the tops of the mountains."

"Thus the very rocks are made fruitful. And perhaps there is no spot of ground in this whole land that was not formerly improved in order to produce something to sustain life. As to the plain countries, nothing can be more fruitful in producing corn, or cattle and milk. The hills, by the methods just described, produce corn, melons, gourds, cucumbers, and also such like garden stuff, which make the principal food of these countries for several months in the year. The most rocky parts of all serve for the plantations of vines and olives, which delight in such dry and flinty places. And the great plain joining the Dead Sea, though fit for no other purpose, is useful for the nourishment of bees, and the production of honey."

In some parts of Judea, according to late travellers, the cultivation on terraced hills is being revived. "The lime-stone rocks, and stoney valleys of Judea," says one, "were entirely covered with plantations of figs, vines, and olive-trees; not a single spot was being neglected." The hills from their bases to their tops, were covered with gardens, free from weeds, and in high agricultural perfection. Even the sides of the most barren mountains, had been rendered fertile, by being divided into terraces, like steps rising one above another. The soil had been obtained with astonishing labour."

The late Dr. Richard Winter Hamilton, eloquently describes the fertility of Palestine:—"A better country than this, earth did not contain. It was 'a delightful' and 'a pleasant land;' 'a goodly heritage of the hosts of nations.' It was variegated and intersected with all the elements of sublimity and beauty, with whatever was bold and gentle. It was prolific without a miracle, and the subject of a periodical one. It was a wealthy place. Aromatic herbs covered its hills, and the fairest flowers decked its glens. The rose was in Sharon, and the lily in the valleys. The voice of the turtle was heard in the land. There roamed the vine, and there clustered the date, and there hung the pomegranate. The cedar towered on the mountains, and the myrtle skirted their sides. No human hand could raise the clusters of Eschol. The south wind, passing over the gardens, caused the spices thereof to flow out. The seasons revolved in their variety, but with a blended sweetness. There was the upland breeze, in which the fir could wave its arms, and the softer air, in which the olive unfolded its blossom. The sun smote not by day, nor the moon by night. The birds sang among the branches. The dew lay thick in Hermon. There was balm in Gilead. The lign-aloe drooped from the river bank. Kidron and Jordan poured forth their streams. The rains also filled the pools. Lakes glistened in the landscape, and cooled the drought. Beautiful for situation was Mount Zion. The cattle browsed on a thousand hills. The excellency of Carmel and the glory of Lebanon set their pinnacles against the deep azure of Canaan's sky. The year was crowned with goodness. The Lord cared for that land, and his eye was always upon it. At the stated period fell the early and latter rain. The pastures were clothed with flocks. The ploughman overtook the reaper; and the treader of grapes him that sowed the seed. The barns were filled with plenty, and the press burst out with new wine. The little hills rejoiced on every side. Precious fruits were brought forth by the sun, and precious things were put forth by the moon. The earliest pass, the valley of Achor, was a door of hope. The vineyards distilled the pure blood of the grape. The fountain of Jacob was upon a land of corn and wine. The inhabitants were filled with the finest of the wheat. It flowed with milk and honey. Its heavens dropped fatness. It was surrounded with munitions of rock. The deep couching beneath spread its sure defence. The land might be called Beulah. The distant glimpse of its prospect refreshed the dying eye of Moses; and of all thy earthly territory this is emphatically thy land, O Immanuel."

CANAAN—its million and a half of fighting men.—If there be no mistake in the numbers (which probably are incorrect, as the Syrian version reads eight hundred thousand in 2 Sam. xxiv. 9. and 1 Chron. xxi. 5.) this vast population is to be ascribed to the extraordinary fertility of the soil. Another solution of this apparent contradiction has been offered by a late writer, which is both ingenious and probable. "It appears," he observes "from Chronicles, that there were twelve divisions of generals, who commanded monthly, and whose duty it was to keep guard near the king's person, each having a body of troops consisting of twenty-four thousand men, which jointly formed a grand army of two hundred and eighty thousand: and as a separate body of twelve thousand men naturally attended on the twelve princes of the twelve tribes, mentioned in the same chapter, the whole will be three hundred thousand; which is the difference between the two last accounts of eight hundred thousand and of one million one hundred thousand."

CANAANITES, Kay'-nan-ites. — These composed the seven nations of the Hittites, Girgashites, Amorites, Canaanites, Perrizzites, Hivites, and the Jebusites; Deut. vii. 1; Gen. x. 18, 19; xv. 18, 21.

CANAANITES, Num. xxi. 3. Their extirpation by the Jews, according to the Divine command, is represented by infidels, as an act of the greatest cruelty and injustice. Their objections will appear groundless by considering:—

1.—The Canaanites were a most depraved and idolatrous race: and to have suffered them to remain and mix with the Israelites would have given sanction to idolatry. The Divine Sovereign has a right to punish wicked nations by the infliction of judgments such as pestilence, or famine, or by the sword of enemies; for we see he actually does so in the course of his Providence; and what essential difference can there be between this and his commanding the Israelites to destroy the wicked Canaanites who were an abominably wicked people. In the time of Abraham, they were so, and even then were devoted to destruction by God: "but their iniquity was not then full." In the time of Moses they were idolaters, sacrificers of their own infants, devourers of human flesh, addicted to unnatural lusts, &c. &c. It could not be contrary to God's moral justice to exterminate a people so wicked. In doing that, he gave a terrible proof of his abomination of vice, calculated to strike the surrounding nations with astonishment and terror, and to impress on the minds of the Israelites what they were to expect if they followed the example of the Canaanites; See Lev. xviii. 28.

2.—Michaelis vindicates the conquest of Canaan by Israel, on the principle that they only took possession by force of their own country, and expelled intruders, who had unjustly seized it. The country called Canaan was unoccupied at the time of Abraham's arrival in it; and his race by Isaac always regarded it as their native country: they never ceased to look forward to the time when they would be able to enforce their just claims; see Gen. xii. 5, 6. Nor could they have acted otherwise than they did, when they resumed their right by entering Canaan, unless they had been almost wholly indifferent in regard to their own best interests and those of their children; for they could not safely reduce to the condition of slaves, or incorporate as equals, any of the seven nations, because in morals and religion they had sunk into the most debased and diabolical state; See Lev. xviii. 1—5.

3.—We have no evidence that any Canaanite was put to death who was willing to leave his country or renounce idolatry. It is indeed certain, that such of the seven nations as submitted to live according to the constitution of Moses were spared, as we see in the case of the Gibeonites. Their being spared certainly implies that the terms of peace were offered to the Canaanites; "There was not a city that made peace with Israel, save the Hurites, the inhabitants of Gibeon, &c." Josh. xi. 19, 20. The preservation of Rahab also; Josh. ii. 12; vi. 22, 23, and a family of Bethel; Judges i. 25. with some other instances; 1 Kings ix. 21, favour this exposition.

4.—The Canaanites had the opportunity to flee elsewhere, as in fact, many of them did. Tradition ascribes the rise of the celebrated republic of Carthage to the Canaanites expelled by Joshua. "Procopius says, they first retreated into Egypt; but gradually advanced into Africa, where they built many cities, and spread themselves over those vast regions, which reach to the Straits, preserving their old language, with little alteration. He adds, that in the ancient city of Tingis, (Tangiers,) founded by them, were two great pillars of white stone, near a large fountain, inscribed in Phœnician characters, 'We are people preserved by flight from that robber Jesus, (Joshua,) the son of Nun who pursued us.' In Athanasius' time, the Africans continued to say, they were descended from the Canaanites; and when asked their origin, they answered Canani. It is generally agreed, that the Punic tongue was nearly the same as the Canaanitish and Hebrew; and this seems to be confirmed by several ancient inscriptions found at Malta, which are in Phœnician characters, but which may be read by means of the Hebrew.

5.—The destruction is not to be attributed to Israel, wholly, even as instruments. The Lord himself, partly by storms and tempests, partly by noxious instruments, and partly by injecting terror into the minds of the inhabitants, perhaps expelled and destroyed more than the Israelites themselves, the miraculous power of God co-operating with them, (Compare Ex. xxiii. 27, 28; Josh. x. 11, &c.) God is the Sovereign of the earth, and the equity of his government is indisputable.

6.—The Almighty has executed judgments on mankind far more severe than this. The whole country of the Canaanites was less than England, and what is this to the drowning of the world? a fact attested by all ancient historians, divine and human, and confirmed by innumerable monuments.

These considerations justify Joshua, and the other Hebrew worthies who engaged in this war, by the Divine command; and unless we admit them in a great degree, we know not how any war can be at all justified, however necessary. Few nations, if any, ever engaged less frequently, or in fewer offensive wars than Israel; and their agricultural habits, and other circumstances, operated against such wars of ambition and conquest. If any individuals, or even the nation, in some instances, did gratify a ferocious spirit, they proportionately violated their own laws, which enjoined love to neighbours, strangers, and enemies.

CANDACE, Kan-day'-se, having possession or forgiveness.—The name of an Ethiopian queen; Acts viii. 27. Her country was the Ethiopia beyond Egypt, the upper Nubia, called by the Greeks, "Meræ;" very likely the present province of Atbara, between 13° and 18° north lat. In this country, and along the upper valley of the Nile, extensive ruins have been found, indicating high civilisation among the ancient Ethiopians. It is a different country from Abyssinia. Pliny testifies that its government was in the hands of woman, who, for several successions, assumed the name of Candace, Acts viii. 27. It is supposed that this queen was converted to the Christian faith through the instrumentality of her eunuch.

CANDLE.—A taper to give light; Luke xv. 8. The reasonable soul; Prov. xx. 27. Gladness and joy; Ps. xviii. 28. Gifts Divinely bestowed on man; Matt. v. 15. A person celebrated for knowledge and wisdom, was called a candle.

CANDLE.—"And the light of the candle;" Jer. xxv. 10. This was a luxury among the Easterns. The Egyptians burn lamps all the night long, and in all the inhabited apartments of the house, and the poorest people would rather retrench part of their food than neglect it.

CANDLE "shined upon my head," Job xxix. 3, rather 'lamp;' it may allude to the lamps which hung from the ceilings of the banquetting rooms of the wealthy Easterns. Candle was also the emblem of prosperity and of posterity.

"CANDLE of the wicked put out," Job xxi. 17. Taking away the light of the candle and total destruction express the same thing. See Prov. xxiv. 20; Rev. xviii. 23.

CANDLESTICK, was made by Moses of hammered gold, a talent in weight, with seven branches, including the shaft, Exod. xxv. 31, 32, put into the tabernacle in the holy place, over against the table of shew-bread, on the south side, in order to give light: its basis was of pure gold: the six branches, three on each side the shaft, were adorned with flowers and knobs alternately, as was also the shaft; upon each was a golden lamp, trimmed every evening. Solomon set up in the temple ten such candlesticks, five on the north and five on the south side of the holy place, 1 Kings vii. 49. On Vespasian's triumphal arch is still to be seen the candlestick, with the other vessels of the second temple. The seven golden candlesticks, Rev. i. 20, are a figure of the church, enlightened by the sevenfold, or various operations of the Spirit of God, chap. ii. 5; xi. 4.

CANKER.—A dreadful disorder which inflames and mortifies the flesh. Frequently there is no cure without cutting away the affected part; 2 Tim. ii. 17; Jas. v. 3.

CANKER-WORM, an insect that destroys the fruits of the earth. They are very numerous, Nah. iii. 15, 16. The land of Judea was plagued by them, Joel i. 4. The canker-worm is by many supposed to be a creeping insect, but the Hebrew word Yelek, no doubt, signifies an insect with wings, and, therefore, we conclude it must have been of the locust kind.

CANNEH, Kan'-neh, a wall.—Ezek. xxvii. 23.—See Calneh.

CAPERNAUM. Ka-per'-na-um, the field of repentance, city of comfort.—A city celebrated in the Gospels, being the place where Jesus principally resided during his ministry. Probably it stood on the sea-coast; that is, on the coast of the sea of Galilee, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephtholim; Matt. iv. 13. It is now called Tell Hum. It was anciently spelled Kefr na hum. It is a common method in curtailling old names to retain only the final syllable. Thus we have Zib for Achzib, and Fik Aphcah, &c. A deserted site is generally named Tell, and not Kefr, (which is applied to a village), and when Capernaum became a heap of rubbish, the Arabs dropped the Kefr, and called it simply Tell Hum. The invariable tradition of the Arabs and the Jews fixes Capernaum at Tell Hum. Here the Lord Jesus wrought his miracles, and delivered some of his most interesting discourses; Mark i. 16—22. It was a great privilege to be blessed with the personal ministry of Jesus; Mark i. 23—31. But they rejected the Messiah, abused their privileges, and persisted in their wickedness. Hence the denunciation; “And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven,” &c.; Matt. xi. 20—24. This denunciation has been long fulfilled. Though once renowned as the metropolis of Galilee, it is now doubtful where it stood.

CAPHTOR, Kaf'-tor, sphere, a buckle, doves, those that inquire.—The island of Caphtor, whence came the Caphtorims, otherwise called the Cherethims or Cherethites, or Philistines; Gen. x. 14; Deut. ii. 23; Jer. xlvii. 4; Amos ix. 7. Bochart thinks it to be Cappadocia, Calmet that it was Crete.

CAPHTORIM, Kaf'-to-rim.—Son of Mizraim; Gen. x. 14.

CAPPADOCIA, Kap-pa-do'-she-a, a sphere.—A large province in the interior of Asia Minor, on the Pontus, separated from Phrygia by the river Halys. It is mentioned Acts ii. 9; also by St. Peter, who addresses his first epistle to the dispersed throughout Pontus. Galatia, Cappa-docia, Bithynia, and Asia. It was celebrated for its mules and horses. It gave yearly to the Persians 2000 horses, and 1500 mules. The horses of Cappadocia were held in such repute at Rome that their use was specially for the emperor alone. Cappadocia was a region of ignorance and wickedness in earlier times. There, however, Christianity gained some illustrious trophies of its power.

CAPTAIN, the head of a family, or tribe, Numb. ii. 3. (2.) An officer in the army, Gen. xxvi. 26. (3.) King or prince, 1 Sam. ix. 16. (4.) The great God, 2 Chron. xiii. 12. "And behold, God himself is with us for our captain," i. e. God will order and prosper the battle for us. (5.) Chief watchman, Jer. xxxvii. 13. (6.) Christ is the Captain of our salvation, Heb. ii. 10, "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." The word here translated captain, says Dr. Macknight, is rendered a prince; Acts iii. 15. The Prince of life; that is, the Captain who conducts men to eternal life, Acts v. 31.

CAPTIVE.—A soldier taken prisoner in war or battle, and held in bonds; 1 Kings viii.; 46. The treatment which they received was barbarous and cruel. They were stripped naked, their heads were shaved, and then exposed to the burning rays of a tropical sun, as they travelled by day, and they were without covering during the cold nights. Such treatment was not confined to the poor, but extended to the wealthy and noble, and to those who had been educated in softness and refinement. They were sold for slaves. Hence Joel says, "They have cast lots for my people; and have given a boy for an harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink;" Joel iii. 3. Sometimes captives were shockingly mutilated. Sometimes their thumbs and toes were cut off; Judges i. 6, 7. and some had their eyes torn out, as Samson and Zedekiah; Jer. lii. 4—11. The word also refers to a spiritual captivity; a bondslave to sin and Satan, 2 Tim. ii. 26.

CAPTIVITY.—A state of thralldom or slavery. God generally punished the sins of the Jews by different captivities or servitudes. The first captivity is that of Egypt, from which Moses delivered them, and should be considered rather as a permission of Providence, than as a punishment of the sins of Israel. See Exodus. Six captivities are reckoned during the government by judges. (1.) Under Chusham-Rishathaim, king of Mesopotamia, which continued about eight years. (2.) Under Eglon, king of Moab, from which they were delivered by Ehud. (3.) Under the Philistines, out of which they were rescued by Shamgar. (4.) Under Jabin, king of Hazor, from which they were delivered by Deborah and Barak. (5.) Under the Midianites, from which Gideon freed them. (6.) Under the Ammonites and Philistines, during the judicatures of Jephthah, Ibzan, Elon, Abdon, Eli, Samson, Samuel. See Judges iii. 8, 12—30, 31; iv., vi., x. But the greatest and most remarkable captivities of the Hebrews were those of Judah and Israel, under the kings of these kingdoms. In the year of the world 3264, Tiglath-pileser, an Assyrian monarch, took several cities belonging to Israel, and carried a great number of the inhabitants, chiefly those of the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and Manasseh, captives into his own country, 2 Kings xv. 29; xvi. 9; 1 Chron. v. 26. About twenty years afterwards, Shalmanezar, his son and successor, marched an army against Samaria, the capital of the kingdom of Israel, which he took, after a siege of three years, and destroyed it, transferring the tribes which had been spared by Tiglath-pileser, to the provinces beyond the Euphrates, 2 Kings xviii. 10, 11.

Josephus assures us that these tribes never returned from their exile. And Jerome, in his comment upon Hosea i. 6, says, that the captivity of the ten tribes continued, and that, in his time, they were subject to the king of Persia. Calmet, and others, believe they did return, and, in proof, cite Hosea i. 10, 11; Amos ix. 4; Obad. verse 18, 20; Isa. ix. 12, 13; Ezek. xxxvii. 16; Jer iii. 18; xxxi. 7—20; xlix. 2. Some of these passages may not have a strict reference; and the matter is doubtful.

The captivities of Judah are four in number. The first under the reign of king Jehoiakim, 600 years B. C., at which time Daniel and his companions were carried captive to Babylon. The second about three years afterwards, when Nebuchadnezzar carried with him three thousand Jews to Babylon, in the seventh year of the reign of Jehoiakim. The third about five years afterwards, when the prince himself and a considerable part of his subjects were carried off to Babylon; and the fourth and last happened under king Zedekiah, A. M. 3416, from which period commences the computation of the seventy years' captivity foretold by the prophet Jeremiah. See 2 Kings xxiv.; 2 Chron. xxxvi.; Jer. xxv., xxvi., xxix., xxxii., xxxiv., lii.; Ezek. xii.; Dan. i. 1, 2.

These captivities were awful visitations, and we need not wonder at the wailings of the Hebrew poets and prophets. See Lam. iv. 19, &c.; Isa. xiii. 9—13; xxx. 26, 21; Joel ii. 10; iii. 15, 16; Amos viii. 9; Ps. xxxvii.

When Cyrus had conquered Babylon, he in the first year of his reign issued a proclamation allowing the Jews to return to their own country, with permission to rebuild the temple and the walls of the city, both of which had been destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar; and he also gave them the vessels of their sanctuary to take back with them, Ezra chap. i. But the entire completion of the prophecies which foretold the end of the captivity, does not seem to have taken effect until the year of the world 3486, when Darius Hystaspes, probably the same who is called Artaxerxes in the book of Nehemiah, sent back the latter, and assisted him to carry into execution what had commenced under Cyrus, their deliverer, Neh. i., ii., to vii. The Jews assert, that only the bran, the refuse of their nation, returned from the captivity; the principal of them continued where they had settled in and near Babylon, where indeed they became very numerous. Certain it is, that though the Jews were brought back from Babylon, yet never was Jerusalem in that glory as before; neither was her temple, state, or kingly dignity, such as formerly; Ezra iii. 12. Many wept when they saw the difference between the latter temple and the former.

'CAPTIVITY CAPTIVE.'—“When he ascended on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men,” Eph. iv. 8. “Captivity captive” alludes to the captives led in chains behind the cars of conquerors, even kings and great men who had taken captive others; a custom peculiar to the Romans, and to Eastern countries in remotest times. The passage predicts the conquest of Christ over Satan, sin, and death.

“Yea, for the rebellious also.” Even for those who were once his enemies, and fought against him. To them he says, “All things are yours,” even all spiritual and celestial blessings; and especially the gracious presence of Christ in life, in death, and in heaven.

CAPTIVE. “And shall be led away captive.” Josephus says, 1,100,000, perished at the siege of Jerusalem, and 97,000 Jews were led into captivity; Luke xxi. 24.

CARBUNCLE. A very elegant brilliant gem, of a deep red colour, mingled with scarlet, and when held up to the rays of the sun, resembling burning charcoal, and second in value to the diamond. It is found in the East Indies; it was the third in the first row of precious stones in the high-priest's breast-plate. Ex. xxviii. 17; Isa. liv. 12; Ezek. xxviii. 13.

CARCAS, Kar'-kas, the covering of a lamb.—A chamberlain of Ahasuerus. Esther i. 10.

CARCASS, the body of a dead animal or person; Lev. 26. 30; Is. 14. 19; 2 Kings 23. 16, 20; Matt. 24. 28; Luke 17. 37.

CARCHEMISH, or CHARCHEMISH, Kar'-ke-mish, a lamb, as taken away.—A city of Mesopotamia, and belonging to the kingdom of Assyria, and was situated in the angle formed by the junction of the Chaboras, (or Chebar,) and the river Euphrates; It is now known by the name Kirkisia. Anciently it was a large city, and surrounded by strong walls; it was considered as a place of great strength and importance.

It was taken by Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt, and retaken by Nebuchadnezzar, in the fourth year of Jehoiachin, king of Judah. It is also implied that this city was conquered by Tiglath-Pileser at another period of its history. (2 Chron. xxxv. 20; 2 Kings xxiii. 29; Isa. x.; Jer. xlvi.)

On the west side of Assyria, it became in times of war the chief key to the empire; and we can easily infer in what an important light it was viewed by the Romans, from the fact of Dioclesian strengthening its fortifications, and thereby rendering it fit to be, on the eastern boundary of the Roman possessions, what it had proved on the part of the Assyrians, a bulwark of their empire.

CARE, anxious thought, or extraordinary, cautious concern. Man's care is lawful when he endeavours to please God, mourns for his sins, and regulates his conduct by the word of God, when he is concerned about the welfare of others, and solicitous for the salvation of their souls; or when he moderately takes thought for the things of this present life, resigning himself, at the same time, to the will of God. 2 Cor. vii. 11, 12. But it is unlawful when he is careful about forbidden things, and makes "provision for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof;" or when he has a perplexing care about lawful things, to the neglect of the worship of God, and distrust of his providence; Phil. iv. 6.

CARMEL, Kar'-mel, a circumcised lamb, harvest, vineyard of God, or, fruitful field.—A city in the tribe of Judah, situated on a mountain of the same name, ten miles east of Hebron. Here Nabal, the Carmelite, the husband of Abigail, who became David's wife, dwelt;—here Saul, returning from his expedition against Amalek, erected a trophy. Here, in the time of Jerome, the Romans had a garrison; no trace of it now remains.

Also the name of a mountain, or range of hills, in Palestine, celebrated for rich pastures, and extending six or eight miles nearly north and south, coming from the plain of Esdraelon, and ending in the promontory or cape which forms the bay of Accho. It is of a whitish stone, with flints embedded in it. It has, on the east, a fine plain, watered by the river Kishon; and, on the west, a narrower plain, descending to the sea. Its greatest height does not exceed fifteen hundred feet. On the side next to the sea is a cave, supposed to have been the place where the prophet Elijah desired Ahab to bring Baal's prophets, when celestial fire descended on his sacrifice, (1 Kings xviii. 19—40); and on the north-east side, there is another cave, supposed to have been the place where the prophet taught his disciples.

Travellers describe it as the most beautiful mountain in Palestine. Its surface is covered with rich and perpetual verdure. Amos refers to Carmel when he says, "If they hide themselves in the top of Carmel, I will search and take them out thence," Amos ix. 3. But, as the height of the mountain will not altogether account for the expression, "hide themselves," it is far from improbable, that there is an allusion to the caves with which it abounded, and which seem to have been places of refuge in the time of Elijah. "The excellency of Carmel" (Isa. xxxv. 2,) if this district be alluded to, may denote either the vineyards and olive-grounds which once clothed the sides of the mountains, or the rich pastures which the range of hills, so designated, seems to have afforded, and which rendered it, "the habitation of shepherds;" Amos i. 2.

"Werode," says Lord Lindsay, "for two hours through a range of sloping hills covered with beautiful valonidis or evergreen oaks—regular English park scenery; then, the trees ceasing, through a continued expanse of sloping downs, till we reached the southern prolongations of Carmel, and also the banks of 'that ancient river Kishon;' henceforward, the hills on both sides were again covered with valonidis and prickly oaks. The road ran close under Mount Carmel, along the banks of the Kishon—a rocky path, winding through oleanders in full bloom, reeds, and wild flowers of every hue—the birds singing sweetly—wood pigeons cooing—and the temperature as fresh and mild as May in England.

"We had already caught a glimpse of the Great Plain of Esdraelon to the east, and presently emerged into that of Acre on the north, a magnificent expanse of the richest land."

CARMI, Kar'-my, my vineyard, lamb of the waters.—Son of Reuben; Num. xxvi. 6.—Also father of Achan; Josh. vii. 1, 18.

CARNAL. (1.) Things belonging to the flesh; worldly things, such as silver and gold, and things needful for sustaining the body; Romans xv. 27; 1 Cor. ix. 11. (2.) Sensual, or governed by sensual appetites. In this sense it is applied to such as are in a natural, unregenerated state, who are enemies to God, and given to sensual pleasures; John iii. 6; Rom. viii. 7. The ceremonial law is called carnal, because it consisted of such rites, ceremonies, ordinances, as only related to the body and the purifying of the flesh, but did not reach the soul; Heb. ix. 10.

CARPENTER. The original word is Tektone, signifying mechanic, or artisan; Latin, carpentum, a waggon, literally, cartwright. It represents the Greek word. It generally signifies one who works, a joiner, a maker of furniture, or a house-carpenter. Joseph, the reputed father of Jesus, was an artizan in wood. According to Justin, he made agricultural implements, as ploughs, yokes, &c. Jesus followed, when old enough, the same occupation. Hence the reproachful question,—“Is not this the carpenter’s son?” Matt. xiii. 55. Very likely he wrought at the same trade, being perfectly submissive and obedient to his parents. An honest trade is no discredit to any man.—He who spends his time in idleness is fit for any business in which Satan chooses to employ him.

CARPUS, Kar'-pus, fruit, or fruitful.—A disciple of Paul, dwelling at Troas. He lodged with him, 2 Tim. iv. 13. He is thought to have been one of the seventy disciples.

CARRIAGE. Load for a man or beast, Is. x. 28; or that on which any thing is carried; Is. xlvi. 1.—“We took up our carriages;” Acts xxi. 15. It means placing their baggage on the mules, camels, or horses.

CART, a machine used in Palestine, to force the corn out of the ear, and bruise the straw; Isa. xxviii. 27, 28. These carts were borne on very low and thick wheels, bound with iron, which were rolled up and down upon the sheaves and straw, to break them, and force out the corn. Waggon or carts were sent to bring Jacob and his household into Egypt; and carts were employed for the removal of the ark; Gen. xlv. 19; Num. vii. 3, 6.

CART-ROPE. “Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity and sin, as it were with a cart-rope;" Isa. v. 18. The sinner racks his invention to sin, and one sin draws on another, till the whole comes to an enormous length and magnitude; compared to the work of a rope-maker increasing and lengthening his rope, with the continued addition of new materials. "An evil inclination," says Kimchi, quoting from the ancient rabbins, "is in the beginning like a fine hair-string, but at the finishing like a thick cart-rope. Thus the sinner may sin long, and add iniquity to iniquity, but the end will come, and the sinner will only reap banishment from God, and the glory of his power."

But may not the language refer to idol sacrifices? The victims offered were splendidly decorated with fillets and garlands. The cords of vanity may refer to the silken strings by which they were led to the altar, some of which were as thick as cart-ropes.

CASSIA, Kash'she-a. A sweet aromatic spice used in making the sacred oil, and other perfumes, Ex. xxx. 24; Ps. xlv. 8.

CASTAWAY. Alluding to worthless and rejected metals. It indicates a worthless person; 1 Cor. ix. 27.

CAST out, to excommunicate; John ix. 34.

CAST 'out in the open field.' Referring to the barbarous custom of exposing infants; Ezek. xvi. 5.

CAST 'out into outer darkness.' A beautiful allusion to the lustre of those illuminated rooms in which feasts were generally held; and the exclusion of unfit persons, to the darkness of night, and perhaps to a dark and lonesome dungeon; Matt. viii. 12.

CAST ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way; Isa. lvii. 14. A cry that is generally heard before the approach of any great prince or conqueror, in the east. Dr. Wolf, when lecturing in Philadelphia, 1837, stated that on entering Jerusalem from the west, in the direction of Gaza, the road, for a considerable distance from Jerusalem, was so full of stones that it was impracticable to ride, and those who were entering the city, were obliged to dismount. When Ibrahim Pacha, son of Mohammed Ali, approached Jerusalem, a considerable number of labourers went before him, and removed the stones from the way, amidst a constant cry, 'Cast up, cast up the way, remove the stones!' And on a standard it was written, 'The Pacha is coming, the Pacha is coming, cast up the way, remove the stones!' See also Isa. lxii. 10. The expression indicates the removal of obstacles and difficulties, preparatory to some important manifestation, or some signal event.

CAST.—To cast metal, is to melt and mould it into a particular shape; Exod. xxv. 12. To cast off; cast away; is to give up any thing; disdainfully, or wrathfully to reject, Judges xv. 17; Ezek. xviii. 31; Rom. xi. 15. God casts off men, and spares not, when he terribly punishes them, Job xxvii. 22. God's casting sin behind his back, or into the depths of the sea, imports, his complete forgiveness of it, and his determined purpose never to punish us for it, Isa. xxxviii. 17; Mic. vii. 19. To cast out, is to reject, Matt. viii. 12; John xv. 6; to excommunicate from the church, John ix. 35.

CASTLE.—A walled enclosure, with a tower or towers strongly built, designed as a place of security from the assaults of foes. Castles were of early origin, Gen. xxv. 16. Though the Ishmaelites were a wandering people, they had their inclosures, or castles, wherein to remove their wives and children in times of war. Doubtless these castles were of rude construction. They were, however, sufficient for the designed purpose, for they furnished the sacred writers with one of their most emphatic figures. See Ps. xviii. 2; Nah. i. 7.

CASTOR, Kas'tor, a beaver.—Castor and Pollux, in heathen mythology, were two brothers, sons of Jupiter and Leda, supposed to be hostile to pirates. The vessel in which Paul went to Rome, had the sign of Castor and Pollux, Acts xxviii. 11. The figures and names of saints are still seen on the prows of Italian and Sicilian ships, whose captains would not sail without one.

CATERPILLAR.—Sometimes the word means the locust. But if not, it is evident that it was a very destructive insect, and employed as an agent to execute the judgments of God. Some think the mole-cricket is meant. In its grub-state it is very destructive to corn and other vegetables; Joel 2. 25.

CATHOLIC.—Universal; this is its meaning, as used by the primitive Christians to distinguish the church of Christ from the heretical sects which had begun to exist. The word Catholic is imprudently assumed by the Popish church in opposition to all who differ from her, and whom she brands with the name of heretic. Call the Romish church Papists, and not Catholics, as it does not apply to them who say they are apostles, and are found liars unto God.

CATTLE.—“And all the cattle of Egypt died,” &c. Exod. ix. 6. This verse has been said to contradict verse 20, where it is said that some of the cattle of Egypt remained alive. The word all is not always used in an absolute, but often in a relative or comparative sense, as implying many, some of all sorts, &c. Probably, the meaning is, “All the cattle that did die belonged to the Egyptians, but not one died that belonged to the Israelites; ver. 4 and 6.

CAUL.—The membranous vessel which contains the heart; “I will rend the caul of their heart;” Hosea xiii. 8.

CAULS, Isa. iii. 18.—Head-dresses; or it refers to the manner in which the Eastern females set the tresses of their hair, as they hung down their backs. The hair is equally divided into a number of braids and tresses, to each of which are added three silken threads, each charged with small ornaments of gold, and terminating in small gold coins. Mr. Lane says of these ornaments, "The sufa appears to be the prettiest, as well as the most singular of the ornaments worn by Egyptian females. The glittering of the burck, &c., and their clinking together as the wearer walks, have a peculiarly lively effect.

CAVES.—Places of habitation, retirement, and concealment. To a cave Lot and his daughters retired after the destruction of Sodom; Gen. xix. 30. In time of war, they afforded an excellent refuge; 1 Sam. xiii. 6. The strongholds of Engedi, where David and his 400 followers hid themselves, can be clearly identified; 1 Sam. xxiii. 29; xxiv. 3. Some of these caves were very large, and generally had but little light. Thus David and his followers were able to conceal themselves in the sides of a cave, that Saul, their pursuer, though he spent some time in the cave, did not discover them; 1 Sam. xxiv. 1—8.

The five kings that attacked Gibeon, after they had been conquered by Joshua, hid themselves in a cave near Makkedah, not far from Adullam. Josh. x. 16. The cave also of Machpelah, in Mount Hebron, is famous as the family vault of Abraham and his descendants; Gen. xxiii.; xxv. 9; xlix. 30; 1. 13. These caverns were all in the south; but it was probably in the mountains of Ephraim, that good Obadiah found two caves, each capable of concealing fifty prophets from the fury of Jezebel; 1 Kings xviii. 4. And the apostle mentions it as no unusual thing for the faithful servants of God to be driven "to wander in deserts and in mountains, in dens and in caves of the earth," Heb. xi. 38. Persons were also buried in caves; Gen. xix. 30; Josh. x. 16; Gen. xxiii. 9; 1 Sam. xxiv. 3; Heb. xi. 38.

CEDAR.—This tree, from its majestic and beautiful aspect, is frequently alluded to in the figurative language of the Scriptures. It is an evergreen rising from 120 to 160 feet in height, and thirty or forty in circumference; and is highly valued on account of its durability and fragrance. Some of these trees are supposed to have stood a thousand years; the metaphor indicates perpetuity of security and bliss. Lebanon, once celebrated for its cedars, produces only few; those of large size are only about seven. The wood is of a beautiful brownish colour, of a fragrant smell, and fine grain. It is never attacked by worms, and is almost incorruptible. It has been found in the ruins of ancient temples, almost without any symptoms of decay, after having lain upwards of 2000 years. It constituted the beams, the ceilings, the wainscot, and even some parts of the walls; several edifices erected by Solomon being built with three rows of hewn stones, and a row of cedar beams; Songs i. 17; Jer. xxii. 14; 1 Kings vi. 15; xviii. 36; vii. 12.

Solomon, for a considerable time, kept 10,000 men continually employed on Mount Lebanon in cutting down and squaring cedar, 1 Kings v. 13. 14. So liberal was he in using it, that two of his structures were denominated from it. Zechariah, when threatening the destruction of the temple, says, "Open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars;" Zech. xi. i. The cedars were frequently chosen to form masts for ships of large burden; Ezek. xxvii. 5. In allusion to the immense quantity of timber which filled the forests of Lebanon, and the numerous herds of cattle with which they were enriched, the prophet, contemplating the greatness of the Creator, and the impossibility of any of his creatures presenting an offering or worship equal to his greatness, exclaims, "Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof sufficient for a burnt offering."

Isa. xl. 16. The Psalmist describes the increase of the saints in spiritual graces and enjoyments, as "growing like cedars in Lebanon."

By prophets and poets they are selected as emblems of prosperity; and of princes and other great men, Ps. xcii. 12; 2 Kings xiv. 9; Isa. ii. 13. Lebanon sometimes means its cedars; as Solomon's palace, "the house of the forest of Lebanon;" which was probably supported by pillars of cedar. So also "He cast forth his roots as Lebanon;" not the mountain, but the cedars on it; Hos. xiv. 5.

CEDRON, Ke'-dron.—A brook between Jerusalem and Mount Olivet, John xviii. 1. Called Kidron, 2 Sam. xv. 23. It is dry, or nearly so, in the midst of summer.

CELEBRATE, To solemnize; Lev. 23 41.—To praise, render famous; Is. 38. 13.

CELESTIAL.—The Apostle, 1 Cor. xv. 40, speaks of human beings, some of whom were clothed with celestial, others with terrestrial bodies. By celestial bodies he means such refined bodies as those possessed by Enoch, Elijah, and Christ himself, and the bodies of the saints which arose after the Redeemer's resurrection.

CENCHREA, Sen'-kre-a, (or according to the Greek, Ken'-kre-a.) millet, small pulse.—A sea-port town belonging to Corinth, in the Archipelago, Acts xviii. 18. A Christian church once existed there; Rom. xvi. 1—4.

CENSER, an instrument of pure gold, 1 Kings vii. 50, used in the service of the sanctuary. (1.) To put fire in, and that on the fire of the altar, Lev. xvi. 12. (2.) Whereon to put an handful of incense, of spices, Exod. xxv. 6; xxxi. 11. (3.) To make atonement, and prevent death, Num. xvi. 46. (4.) Typical representation of the Redeemer's intercession, Rev. viii. 3, 4. "And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne."

CENTURION.—A Roman commander, who had the command of one hundred soldiers. Of one of these Centurions, we read, (Luke vii. 5,) "For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue." Others are mentioned. See Concordance, as below.

CEPHAS, generally pronounced Se'-fas, but more properly Ke'-fas, a stone or rock.—Christ changed Peter's name (John i. 42,) from Simon into Cephas, a Syriac word, signifying a stone, which by the Greeks was rendered Petros, and by the Latins Petrus; both signifying the same.

CESAREA.—See Cæsarea.

CHAFF.—Denotes false doctrine; Jer. xxiii. 28, "Prophet that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." Also worthless irreligious persons are meant by the figure; Ps. i. 4. Chaff which the wind driveth away, refers to the easterns winnowing their corn in the open air, by throwing it up against the wind, Luke iii. 17. 'He will burn, &c., alludes to the custom of burning chaff after the winnowing, that it might not be blown back again, and be mixed with the wheat, Matt. iii. 12.

CHAFF, wicked as, Job 21. 18; Ps. 1. 4. & 35. 5; Is. 5. 24. & 17. 13. & 29. 5. & 41. 15; Dan. 2. 35; Hos. 13. 3. Is. 33. 11. ye shall conceive c.

CHAIN.—Calamity or affliction, symbolically, Lam. iii. 7.

CHAINS.—'Bound with two chains.' The Romans chained the hand of a prisoner to a soldier on guard, Acts xxi. 33. One end of the chain was attached to the right hand of the prisoner, and the other to the left hand of the soldier, Acts xxviii. 20; Eph. vi. 20; 2 Tim. i. 16. Sometimes a prisoner was attached by two chains to two soldiers; Acts xii. 6.

CHAINS.—"The Lord will take away the chains," &c.; Isa. iii. 9. Literally, drops or pendants, referring, no doubt, to various kinds of pendant ornaments, as nose-jewels, ear-rings, &c., made of silver or gold, but sometimes they are of coral, mother of pearl, &c.

CHALCEDONY, Kal-se-do'-ne'.—

A precious stone of a greyish colour, clouded as the modern cornelian, with blue, yellow, or purple. It derived its name from Chalcedon, a town on the Bosphorus, opposite Byzantium, Rev. xxi. 19.

CHALCOL, Kal'-kol, who nourishes, sustains the whole.—A person celebrated for wisdom; 1 Kings iv. 31.

CHALDEA, Kal-de'-a, as demons, as robbers.—A country of Asia, known in ancient times by the name of Shinar. It lay on both sides of the Euphrates. It was bounded by Mesopotamia on the north, and Arabia the Desert on the west, the Persian gulf, and part of Arabia-Felix on the south. The soil is fertile; but rain seldom falls, sometimes scarcely any for eight months. This deficiency is supplied by the annual inundations of the Tigris and Euphrates. The inhabitants laboriously water the lands which lie too high to be overflowed. Its ancient name was Shinar, because the Lord, by the confusion of tongues, did, as it were, shake the inhabitants out of it, to people the rest of the world. It is now called Kaldar.

CHALDEANS, Kal-de'-ans.—The inhabitants of Chaldea, or Babylonians; Job i. 17. They were so accustomed to prognosticate from the study of the heavenly bodies, that the word Chaldean is used by the Greeks and Latins, as synonymous with astrologer.

CHALDEANS, Job 1. 17; Is. 43. 14. & 48. 20; Jer. 38. 8. & 40. 9. & 50. 35; Ezek. 28. 14; Dan. 1. 4. & 9. 1.

CHAMBER, a secret place in a house, Matt. vi. 6.; a place of Christian meeting, Acts xx. 8. The clouds, Ps. civ. 13. ; "He watereth the hills from his chambers." The stars towards the south pole are called "the chambers of the south," Job ix. 9. The room occupied by Elisha, 2 Kings iv. 10, is called "a little chamber." The house might be by the town wall, as Rahab's, Josh. ii. 15, and the chamber being on the wall, the prophet thereby might have the more free ingress and egress; or the meaning of the woman might be to make a little chamber with a wall, a partition, to separate it from other rooms, that he might be the more private. "Bed-chamber," according to the usage of the east, does not mean a lodging rooms, but a repository for beds. Chardin says, "In the east, beds are not raised from the ground with posts, a canopy, and curtains; people lie on the ground. In the evening they spread out a mattress or two of cotton, very light, of which they have several in great houses, against they should have occasion, and a room on purpose for them." In a chamber of beds Joach was concealed, 2 Kings xi. 2. The promises and providences of God are called chambers, Isaiah xxvi. 20.

CHAMBERS OF IMAGERY.—

“Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chamber of his imagery? for they say, The Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth;” Ezek. viii. 12. Probably these images of adoration were similar to those of Egypt, the ox, the ape, the dog, the crocodile, the beetle, &c. They were at that time privately worshipped by the Jewish council. The images were pourtrayed on the walls in vivid colours, as we find those ancient idols are on the walls of the tombs of the kings and nobles of Egypt.

CHAMBERLAIN.—An officer who had charge of the royal chambers and wardrobe; Esth. i. 10, 12, 15. The title in Rom. xvi. 23, probably denotes the steward or treasurer of the city.

CHAMOIS, Sha-moe'.—The original implies, a goat, antelope, or deer; Deut. xiv. 5.

CHAMPAIGN, Tsham'pane.—A plain open country; Deut. xi. 30.

CHANCE, denotes ignorance, not on God's part, but on ours. It has been well defined ‘Direction which we cannot see;’ Eccl. ix. 11; Dr. Wardlaw. Also, to happen, to fall out; Deut. xxii. 6.

CHARGER.—A vessel for holding provisions at table. "Give me here John the Baptist's head in a charger." The heads of criminals were thus exhibited to princes, as a proof that they had been executed, and to gratify their resentment; Matt. 14. 8.

CHARIOT.—The Egyptians possessed chariots at a very early date. Pharaoh caused Joseph to ride in his second chariot through the land, when he interpreted his dreams; Gen. xli. 43. One of the most interesting of the Egyptian paintings represents a person of quality arriving in his carriage, drawn by two horses at an entertainment. He is preceded by a number of footmen, one of whom hastens to knock at the door of the house, another advances to lay hold of the reins, a third carries a stool to assist his master in alighting, and most of them carry their sandals in their hands that they may run with greater ease. We read, 2 Sam. xv. 1, "Absalom prepared him chariots and horses, and fifty men to run before him."

Sometimes the monarch was unattended, and drove furiously with the reins lashed round the waist. Nahum often alludes to chariots which he saw in Nineveh, which implies their use throughout the Assyrian empire. The sculptures recently taken from the excavations of Nineveh and placed in the British Museum, and placed in the British Museum, prove that the use of chariots was earlier than the age of Cyrus. On those slabs may be seen various figures of horsemen, armed men, &c. One represents a chariot drawn by two horses, and containing three persons. One man, probably the chief warrior, appears lifting his right arm, and holding in his left a bow. His tiara is painted red; behind him is a slave carrying a fringed parasol, and at his left is the charioteer, holding the reins and whip. See Nahum iii. 3.

CHARIOTS of IRON.—Chariots with iron scythes fastened to their sides or axles, which, when driven with great force and fury, would cut down the soldiers, as grass is cut down with the scythe; Josh. xvii. 16, 18; Judges i. 19; iv. 3; Dr. Gill. Homer thus describes them:—

'Lo the fierce coursers as the chariot rolls, Tread down whole ranks, and crush out heroes' souls;
Dash'd from their hoofs, while o'er the dead they fly!
Black bloody drops the smoking chariot dye;
The spiky wheels through heaps of carnage tore,
And thick the groaning axles dropped with gore.'

"And the Lord was with Judah, and he drave out the inhabitants of the mountain; but could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron." Judges i. 19. This is an improper translation; it makes Jehovah appear as unable to conquer those who fought with chariots of iron. The first clause, "The Lord was with Judah," should end the 18th verse, and this gives the reason for the success of this tribe; the Lord was with Judah, and therefore he slew the Canaanites that inhabited Zephath, &c. The remaining part of the verse either refers to a different time, or to the rebellion of Judah against the Lord, which caused him to withdraw his support.

Let the verse be thus understood:—
And Jehovah was with Judah, and they destroyed the inhabitants of the mountains; but afterwards, when they sinned, they were not able to drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron. They were left to their own strength, and their foes prevailed against them; Judges ii. 2, 3, 11—14.

CHARIOTS of ISRAEL, 2 Kings ii. 12.—Meaning that Elijah was better to Israel than the strongest force of chariots and horsemen. Alluding to one who is the defence of his country.

The Deity was sometimes manifested to men in all the majesty of royalty, accompanied by an army of chariots and horses, not of flesh and blood, but of fire; and he himself appeared in the cherubic chariot, which for brightness and splendour surpassed that of the fiercest flame or the mid-day sun; 2 Kings ii. 11; Ps. lxxviii. 17. A similar scene in vision represented the triumph of God manifest in the flesh. Thus Ezekiel beheld the cherubic chariot, in glory inexpressible, swiftly carry one, "in likeness as the appearance of a man" upon it, every where. An invisible Spirit moved it on as he pleased, for he was in it, Ezek. i. Analogous to this is the beautiful figure of the apostle, when he presents himself and associates led on in triumphal procession by their Saviour and Sovereign, who subdues all things to himself; 2 Cor. ii. 14—16.

CHARIOTS.—"And David took from him 1,000 chariots and 700 horsemen;" 2 Sam. viii. 4; but in 1 Chron. xviii. 4, it is said that the number of horsemen taken from Hadarezer by David was seven thousand, a far more probable number than seven hundred. When it is known that the Hebrew letters or characters standing for 700 and 7000 are so much alike that the one can scarcely be distinguished from the other, it will be seen how a mistake might easily be made.

CHARITY.—More properly rendered love, 1 Cor. xiii. 1, &c. Charity, in the popular acceptation of the word, is almsgiving. The old English word charity means love, love to God and love to man, which is the fulfilling of the law. True charity is an active principle. It is not properly a single virtue, but a disposition residing in the heart as a fountain; whence all the virtues of benignity, candour, forbearance, generosity, compassion, and liberality flow as so many native streams. From general good will to all, it extends its influence particularly to those with whom we stand in nearest connection, and who are directly within the sphere of our good offices. From the country or community to which we belong, it descends to the smaller associates of our neighbourhood, relations, and friends; and spreads itself over the whole circle of social and domestic life. Not that it imports a promiscuous undistinguishing affection, which gives every man an equal title to our love. Charity, if we should endeavour to carry it so far, would be rendered an impracticable virtue, and would resolve itself into mere words, without affecting the heart. True charity attempts not to shut our eyes to the distinction between good and bad men; nor to warm our hearts equally to those who befriend, and those who injure us. It reserves our esteem for good men, and our complacency for our friends. Towards our enemies it inspires forgiveness, and humanity. It breathes universal candour and liberality of sentiment. It forms gentleness of temper, and dictates affability of manners. It prompts corresponding sympathies with those who rejoice, and those who weep. It teaches us to slight and despise no man. Charity is the comforter of the afflicted, the protector of the oppressed, the reconciler of differences, the intercessor for offenders. It is faithfulness in the friend, public spirit in the magistrate, equity and patience in the judge, moderation in the sovereign, and loyalty in the subject. In parents it is care and attention; in children it is reverence and submission. In a word, it is the soul of social life. It is the sun that enlivens and cheers the abodes of men; not a meteor which occasionally glares, but a luminary, which in its orderly and regular course dispenses a benignant influence, Col. iii. 14; 2 Thess. i. 3; 1 Tim. i. 5; 2 Tim. ii. 22; Tit. ii. 2; 2 Pet. i. 7; Jude 12.

CHARRAN, Kar'-ran, a singing, the heat of wrath.—Called in Genesis (xi. 31.) Haran. This was a place in Mesopotamia, or Syria, between the Euphrates and Tigris, so named in memory of Abraham's late brother Haran; Gen. xi. 28—31. It has still retained its name, and the few Arabs dwelling there call it Harran. Acts vii. 4.

CHASTE. To be chaste is to be pure from fleshly lusts, which war against the spirit, James 4. 1, 5. The church is to be "presented as a chaste virgin to Christ," 2 Cor. 11. 2. There is a chastity of speech, behaviour, and imagination, as well as of body, 1 Pet. 3. 2. "While they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear;" Tit. 2. 5.

CHASTEN, to correct in love, Psalm cxviii. 18; Heb. xii. 5, 6. To punish in justice, Lev. xxvi. 28. To humble one's self before God, Dan. x. 12. "The chastisement of our peace was upon him," Isa. liii. 5, means, the punishment by which our peace, i. e. our reconciliation to God, and salvation or happiness, were to be procured, was laid upon Christ, by God's justice, with his own consent. Or, he was chastised to procure our peace, and to reconcile us to God, Rom. iii. 25; v. 9, 10; 2 Cor. v. 19, 21; Col. i. 20; 1 Pet. iii. 18; ii. 24.

CHEBAR, Ke'-bar, strength, or power.—A river of Chaldea, Ezek. i. 1. Supposed to have arisen near the mouth of the Tigris, and to have run through Mesopotamia to the south-west into the Euphrates. It is connected with the extraordinary predictions of the prophet Ezekiel under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. It is now called Khabour; by the Greeks it was called Chaboras.

CHEDORLAOMER, Ked-or-lay'-o-mer, or Ke-dor-la-o'-mer, generation of servitude.—A king of the Elamites, supposed to be Persians, or a people bordering on the Persian kingdom, Gen. xiv. 1.

CHEEK, 1 Kings 22. 24; Job 16. 10; Is. 50. 6; Lam. 3. 30; Mic. 5. 1; Matt. 5. 39; Luke 6. 29; Deut. 18. 3.

CHELAL, Ke'-lal.—An Israelite who returned from Babylon, Ezra x. 30.

CHELLUH, Kel'-lu.—The name of a place, Ezra x. 35.

CHELUB, Ke'-lub.—A descendant from Asher, 1 Chron. iv. 11.

CHELUBAI, Ke-lew'-bay.—Son of Hezron, 1 Chron. ii. 9.

CHEMARIMS, Kein'-a-rims, black, or blackness.—Zeph. i. 4. The root implies to burn; it may therefore refer to fire-priests, worshippers of Baal, the emblem of the sun.

CHEMOSH, Ke'mosh, as hand-ling, as taken away.—An idol deity of the Moabites, whose worship was connected with the grossest abominations, 2 Kings xxiii. 13. The worship of this idol was introduced among the Israelites by Solomon, 1 Kings xi. 7.

CHENA ANAH, Ke-nay'-a-nah, broken in pieces.—The name of an artificer of king Ahab; 1 Kings xxii. 11.

CHENANI, Ken'-a-ny.—Name of a Levite; Neh. ix. 4.

CHENANIAH, Ken-a-ny'-ah, preparation, rectitude of the Lord.—A chief of the Levites, and master of the temple music; 1 Chron. xv. 22.

CHEPHAR-HAAMONAI, Ke'-far-ha am'-mo-nay.—A city of the Gibeonites; Josh. xviii. 24.

CHERAN, Ke'-ran, anger.—A descendant of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 26.

CHERETHIMS, Ker'-e-thims, who cuts, tears away.—The Philistines, or a particular tribe of them; Ezek. xxv. 16; 1 Sam. xxx. 14; Zeph. i. 5.

CHERETHITES, Ker'-eth-ites.—David had foreign guards called Cherethites and Palathites; 2 Sam. xv. 18. They constituted the king's body guard. They are generally united with the Palethites. They are supposed to have been Philistines, and descended from those taken in the conquest of Canaan. Some render the names "executioners and messengers," and others, "archers and slingers."

CHERISH, to support, nourish, 1 Kings 1. 2; Eph. 5. 28, 29; 1 Thess. 2. 7.

CHERITH, Ke'-rith, calling, piercing.—A rivulet which falls into the Jordan below Bethshean. Near this brook the prophet Elijah concealed himself, to avoid the persecution of Jezebel, and was fed by ravens; 1 Kings xvii. 3, 4.

CHERUB, Tsher'-ub, Cherubim, Tsher'-u-bim, in Syriac, to till or plough.—The figures placed in the holy of holies, at each end of the mercy-seat; Exod. xxv. 18—20. Read the whole passage. Commentators and Biblical writers are not agreed as to the significance of the Cherubim. Parkhurst, Bate, and others, maintain that the cherubim were representations of the blessed Trinity, with the human nature taken into the divine essence. Drs. Doddridge and Mant, with Mr. Wesley, consider them as hieroglyphics of the angelic nature. Dr. Priestley, to have been representatives of all nature. Scott, emblems of the true ministers of the Gospel. Dr. A. Clarke is of opinion, that to whatever order of beings they belonged, they were representatives of the ALL-MIGHTY, and were those creatures by whom he produced the great effects of his power. While Pyle, Faber, Hale, and others, consider them, with more probability, as emblematical representations of the true believers in Christ, in common, of both dispensations—legal and evangelical.

The second passage in which the Cherubim is mentioned, is 1 Kings vi. 23—27.

“And within the oracle he (Solomon) made two cherubims of olive tree, each ten cubits high. . . . And he set the cherubims within the inner house: and they stretched forth the wings of the cherubims, so that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall; and their wings touched one another in the midst of the house.”

These therefore were different from the Cherubim constructed by Moses, which were of solid gold, rising out of each end of the mercy seat—they were of much larger size, and of olive wood. Thus, in the most holy place of Solomon, there were four Cherubim. The two constructed by Moses formed part of the mercy-seat, and were inseparable from it; those of Solomon spread their wings over it, and seem added for the greater glory and ornament of God's house.

The next passage is in Ezekiel; (1st chap.) wherein the four cherubic figures are described as having each the face of a man and a lion on the right side, and the face of an ox and an eagle on the left side. Their wings are stretched upward, and they went every one straight forward, and they turned not when they went—their appearance was like burning coals of fire—and as a flash of lightning—and behold a wheel by the living creatures upon the earth—as for their wings they were so high that they were dreadful. Then follows the throne of God, his glory, and his covenant of grace, typified by the rainbow.

The exact parallel appearance is described in Rev. iv., wherein the four beasts (rather living ones) are the identical symbols of Ezekiel's Cherubim, having the parts of the lion, the calf, the man, and the eagle. Their adorations, (verse 8,) are the same as Isaiah heard, when, rapt in prophetic vision, he saw the Divine glory in the temple, and heard the Seraphim declare his praise. The seven ministering spirits, these cherubic emblems, and the four-and-twenty elders and angels, are thus represented encircling the throne so magnificently described; a splendid exhibition of the Deity. By carefully examining these passages, as the angels, the ministering spirits are distinctly classed, it is impossible to view the Cherubic emblems as partaking of either of those existences. What part they bore in this heavenly scene, let us inquire.

Dr. Doddridge, in his Expositor considers them as hieroglyphics of the angelic nature. The courage of the lion, signifying the courage and vigour with which they execute the commands of God; the ox, their firmness and patience; the man, the image of clearness, of intelligence, and strength of reason; the eagle, the activity and incomparable velocity with which these celestial spirits execute the commands of God.

An old commentator says, “These animals turned not when they went, signifying that nothing diverted them from fulfilling God's commandments. Their wings were stretched upward, to shew their readiness to execute his will. The wheel in the middle of a wheel, as two circles in a sphere, cutting each other at right angles, to signify the stability and uniformity of their motion, and the subserviency of one part of Providence to another. "They turned not when they went," to signify that Providence does nothing in vain, but always accomplishes its end. The height of their wings signified the vast compass of Providence. Their wings being full of eyes, that all the motions of Providence are directed by a consummate wisdom and foresight.

"While they stood they let down their wings," or put themselves in a posture of hearkening to God's voice, and waiting to receive his commands. "The appearance of the bow in the cloud," becomes an evident representation of the Word that was to be made flesh, whose incarnation is the foundation of God's covenant of mercy with mankind.

"From the account in the Revelation we learn that these Cherubic symbols were emblems of true believers in Christ, and of both dispensations, legal and evangelical—being made of gold, may denote their excellency and value—they were not cast in a mould, but were made of the same mass of gold with the mercy-seat, and wrought into this form, which may denote the union of believers to Christ; being in the same mass may signify their dependence on him, their partaking of the same gifts and graces, in the measure vouchsafed by him."

When the first pair were expelled from Paradise, God placed on the eastern side of the garden, Cherubim, to preserve the way to the tree of life: Moses specifies not the form of these beings; but the Israelites were well acquainted with them; for, when ordered to make the Cherubim of the Tabernacle, they apparently were executed without any special directions being sought for or delivered, and, this, no doubt, from their shapes being well known: and Ezekiel describes minutely their figure, as having wings, and being compounded of a man, a bull, a lion, and an eagle. The form of the ox predominated, from his description of their form and feet, and hence some have inferred that the word Cherub does properly denote an ox. Under the Levitical economy, which embodied the leading features of ancient Patriarchism, adapting them to the peculiar circumstances of the Israelites, the Cherubic symbols were placed in the adytum of the Tabernacle, and afterwards in the corresponding sanctuary of the Temple; they were clearly religious hieroglyphics, and whatever was their import under the Law, unquestionably they were the same in primitive Patriarchism; and this will the stronger appear if we attend to the remarkable language employed by Moses in describing the Paradisaical Cherubim. Our translation imperfectly says, that God placed the Cherubim eastward of the garden; but the force of the original Hebrew is, that he placed them in a Tabernacle. Moses also tells us, that with these "Cherubim placed in a Tabernacle," there appeared likewise what our translators render, "a flaming sword," which turned every way," but which is apprehended to mean "a bright blaze of flickering flame." Now an exactly similar manifestation of glory was visible between the Cherubim of the Mosaic Tabernacle; it was the Shechinah, and intimated the presence of Jehovah; and its name Shechinah is a word of the same origin as that by which Moses described the tabernacling of the Paradisaical Cherubim.

Thus, as the Hebrew Church in the Wilderness had the Cherubic symbols placed in a tabernacle, and surmounted by a blaze of glory; so the patriarchal Church at its commencement had the very same symbols, placed in the very same manner, and manifested in the same glory; and we are irresistibly led to conclude that their use and import exactly accorded under both dispensations: and in this view the Levitical ordinance will explain what is meant by "the Cherubim and glory placed to keep the way of the tree of Life;" for the Cherubim, under the Law, were in the Holy of Holies, and no one was permitted to enter that peculiarly sacred place but the High Priest, and he only once in the year. We are further told by the Great Apostle of the Gentiles, that the High Priest was a type of the Messiah, and that his annual entrance into the Holy of Holies, at all other times interdicted, represented the entrance of Christ into Heaven. The language of Scripture infers, that Paradise itself was a type of Heaven; and consequently since the Sacred Adytum was also a type of Heaven, we may be assured that the exclusion of the whole people at large from the Holy of Holies, shadowed out the exclusion of our first parents and their posterity from that paradise of which it was a symbol; that the same blaze of glory interdicted the same approach in both cases: and Moses elucidates the Paradisaical Cherubim by the Levitical Ordinance, and is himself explained by St. Paul: namely, that mankind can have no access to the forfeited tree of life, but must for ever remain excluded from the spiritual Paradise, unless a divine Redeemer recovers for them their privileges, and opens the way to happiness and immortality. Thus, as the first book of Scripture represents the children of Adam shut out from the tree of life, so the last book in the triumphant visions of St. John exhibits them as having free access to the same mystic plant through the merits and intercession of their Great High Priest.

These Mystic Symbols and the Ark of the Covenant, are connected also with the types offered by Noah and his family, as is plainly inferred in the appearance of the Lord above the Cherubim; for he is described both in Ezekiel and the Revelation, in the Law and the Gospel, as clad in a brilliant rainbow, the very sign of peace and favour which he vouchsafed to Noah; and as the Ark after the Deluge rested on the brink of the retiring ocean, so a brazen sea constituted part of the furniture of the temple: and in plain allusion to it, a sea of glass, resembling crystal, is described in the Apocalypse, as flowing right before the Throne of God, in the midst of which are placed the Cherubic animals and the Ark. The compound figures of the Cherubim then are plainly symbols; what they represented, if we view the Noetic family preserved in the ark, as a type of the whole body of the faithful, is most strongly corroborated by Scripture; by St. John they are said, in conjunction with the twenty-four Elders, to fall down before the Lamb, and to acknowledge themselves redeemed to God by his blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and who are the persons thus literally redeemed by the blood of the Lamb out of all the tribes of the earth? Clearly the whole family of the faithful; and as the Cherubic animals, and the twenty-four elders profess themselves to have been thus redeemed; therefore they must be types of the great body of the faithful. And as that great body is also typified by the eight members of Noah's family, floating upon the waves of the deluge in the ark; so also the eight faces of the Cherubim surmounting the ark of the covenant, are a type of the very same import, and each alike represent the whole body of the faithful, floating safely, under the care of their Divine Pilot, in the figurative ark of the Church.

It is said of the Saints, according to our translation, that they are before the throne of God, and that he who sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them; but in the original Greek it is said, that he who sitteth on the throne shall dwell as in a tabernacle above them. Thus the very same place before God's throne is ascribed to the cherubic animals upon the ark, which is here ascribed to the saints; and Jehovah is said to tabernacle above each of them. Whence the plain inference is, agreeably to the acknowledgment of the Cherubic Symbols, that they are redeemed out of all nations by the blood of the Lamb, that the Cherubim are to be viewed as hieroglyphics of the whole body of the faithful, secure within the ark of the Church : thus further Dr. Hales, in his valuable Chronology, (vol. ii. p. 1300,) says, "the four living creatures are supposed by Hutchinsonian mystics to denote the Godhead, by other Commentators, Archangels, or the principal powers of heaven ; both incorrectly, for why should the Deity praise himself? and they are distinguished from angels afterwards in verse 11,—and further are said, to be redeemed themselves by the blood of the Lamb,—they rather indeed represent the whole congregation of the faithful in the four quarters of the world, or the Catholic Church, who daily offer up thanksgiving and praise to God: the four-and-twenty elders represent the priesthood corresponding to the chief priests, or heads of the four-and-twenty courses in the Jewish Church.

If the preceding arguments are correct, they devolve a continuity of symbol and type from our first parents to the last concluding scene of the divine economy ; it demonstrates a patriarchal dispensation, and a Divine appearance among them ; it shows how, in the very earliest ages, "God did not leave himself without witness: here was the tabernacle and shechinah, from which Cain for murder was driven out;" and Paganism throughout the world has been considered to have drawn most of its rites and ceremonies and forms from the Divine ordinances which they have warped and corrupted. By a reference to history, and to many able writers, we might draw out to great length the conformity of the leading hieroglyphic symbols of animal worship throughout the Pagan world, to those mystic primitive representations: we trace in the Levitical law, in the prophetic vision of Ezekiel, as well as of the Christian Church vouchsafed to St. John, the same course of mysterious personifications ; leading from the very beginning of times, to the Great Redeemer, who alone by his intercession and grace could make the desired access free to all who come to eternal life through him. These compound emblems of the Ox, and Lion, the Man, and the Eagle, being then the chosen types under the patriarchal dispensation, also in the Mosaic Law, and in the Christian Church, of "the whole body of the faithful;" and the Gospel itself, whereby the body of the faithful is formed, being the written testimony of the Evangelists Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John ; it appears most reasonable and natural to conclude, that these spiritual symbols, answering in number and character to their high and important office, should have been early appropriated to them, to denote their intimate association and coincidence together.

Those cherubims placed above the mercy-seat, and in the prophetic visions were surrounded by a bright cloud, symbolical of the presence of the Deity. Doubtless they were emblems of spiritual objects of vast importance ; but no one can positively say what they were. The Apostle seems to speak of them as if their development was future ; for having occasion to notice them, he adds, "of which we cannot now speak particularly." Mr. Davidson judiciously remarks—As seen by John, these hieroglyphics appeared more perfect than even when Ezekiel beheld them ; for every figure was living, and thus corresponded with the kingdom of Christ, which differs in nothing more from the church in former times than in its spiritual life ; a kingdom not of meats and drinks, but of righteousness, peace, and joy of the Holy Spirit. That they represented some division of the church of God seems indisputable, for they adopted the song of the redeemed as their own ; Rev. v. 8. 9. This equally discourtenances the supposition that the Trinity or angels are meant. The only probable opinion seems to be, that the cherubim were emblems of the church, and that the figures signified the characteristic features of the worshippers under the respective dispensations. They required in the age of the patriarchs, the courage of lions ; in the prophetic age, the labour and patience of the ox; in the Christian, the quick sightedness and energy of the eagle; and in heaven, the perfection of the man, as exemplified in the Man Christ Jesus. The glory above the cherubim, in which Ezekiel saw the appearance as of a man, was the sign of the Divine presence, realized in God manifested in the flesh. To this, as the throne of grace, all Israel directed their eyes, in every act of religious worship; and the contemplation of it uniformly produced, as the knowledge of God revealed in Christ has ever done, and will do, profound reverence, humility, confidence, and love. We may add, that every manifestation of the splendid glory, the cherubic throne, and of its reality, in Christ glorified, has been a divine token of the merciful purposes and designs of God to protect and bless his true worshippers; Gen. iii. 24; Ex. xxv. 18—22; Isa. vi; Ezek. i; Matt. xvii. 2—7; Rev. i. 13—18. Imitations of the cherubim, more or less conformed to them, were adopted into the worship of idolators of various nations, especially in the East.

CHILD, son, daughter. Child denotes, (1) A son or a daughter, young in age, 1 Sam. i. 22. (2) One weak as a child in knowledge and prudence; Isa. x. 19; iii. 4. 12. 1 Cor. xiii. 11. (3) One young or weak in grace; 1 John ii. 13. (4) Persons unfixed in their principles; Eph. iv. 14. (5) It is sometimes used to express our affection to persons. To become as a little child, or be as a weaned child, is to be humble, teachable, void of malice and envy; Ps. cxxxii. 2.

CHILD, Children, or Sons, are differently understood in Scripture. The descendants of a person, how remote soever they may be, are called sons, or children. Angels are sometimes called children or sons of God; Job i. 6; ii. 1. In the New Testament, believers are commonly called the children of God, by virtue of their adoption, and the prerogatives which Christ purchased for them by the merits of his death and sufferings; John i. 12. And the children or sons of men is an appellation given to Cain's male children, who lived before the flood. The impious or wicked Israelites were called the sons of men; Psalm iv. 2; lvii. 4. but sometimes the term is used without any odious idea, as Psalm viii. 4; xi. 4.

CHILD—'The child shall die an hundred years old.' Thought by some to mean that life shall be prolonged as before the flood, that he shall be considered as a mere child, who is but a hundred years old. And some think that it implies that knowledge shall be so increased that even a child shall know as much as is now acquired by a man of advanced age; Isa. lxx. 20.

Kimchi says, "'No more an infant of days;'" i. e. the people shall live to three or five hundred years of age, as in the days of the patriarchs; and if one die at one hundred years, it is because of some sin; and even at that age he shall be reputed an infant; and they will say of him, "An infant is dead." This will be in the millennium.

CHILDREN, sometimes means inhabitants; Ezra ii. 1; Matt. xxiii. 37, &c.—Also, young men; 2 Kings ii. 24. Also descendants; Ex. xii. 37; John viii. 39.

CHILDREN 'of the bridechamber.' A select number of guests, who were the constant attendants on the bridegroom during the marriage feast; Matt. ix. 15. Christ meant that it would be as inconsistent for his disciples to fast and mourn, while they enjoyed his presence and instructions, as it would be for the select friends of a bridegroom to sorrow during the nuptial festivals.

CHILDREN 'are come to the birth;' Isa. xxxvii. 3. Expressive of a dangerous crisis.

CHILDREN, 'piping,' alluding to little children who in their play, imitated the joyous and funeral songs of their parents, and others, wishing their playmates to join them; but through disinclination, peevishness, or fickleness, they would not unite in either. Thus Christ reproved the Jews, who were so senseless, peevish and perverse, that they relished no form of instruction, whether mournful or cheerful; Matt. 11. 17.

CHILDREN 'of the promise,' the descendants of Abraham, on whom the promised blessings would be bestowed; Rom. ix. 8.

CHILDREN 'of the prophets,' their disciples, pupils, followers; Acts iii. 25.

CHILDREN 'of the resurrection,' Luke xx. 36. A term equivalent to 'the raised up,' or reference to those saints whose bodies "sleep in Jesus," and who, at his coming, "he will bring with him," yea, "raise them up at the last day," and completely change and renovate their vile bodies, and fashion them like to his own.

CHILEAB, Kil'-le-ab, perfection of the father.—The son of king David and Abigail; 2 Sam. iii. 3.

CHILION, Kil'-le-on, finished, complete.—The son of Elimelech and Naomi, of Bethlehem-judah; Ruth i. 1—5.

CHILMAD, Kil'-mad, teaching or learning.—A city of Arabia; Ezek. xxvii. 23.

CHIMHAM, Kim'-ham, as they, like to them.—The son of Barzillai, the Gileadite; 2 Sam. xix. 37, 38. The name of a place near Bethlehem; Jer. xli. 17.

CHINNEROTH, Kin'-ner-oth.—A city of the tribe of Naphtali, to the south of which lay a great plain, reaching to the Dead Sea; Josh. xi. 2; xii. 3; xix. 35.

CHIOS, Ky'-os, open or opening.—An island in the Archipelago over against Smyrna; Acts xx. 15. It belonged to Ionia, and was situated between Lesbos and Samos. It is 30 miles long, and 10 miles broad. It was visited by the Apostle Paul on his voyage to Samos. It is the modern Scio, and was the scene of a horrid massacre of its inhabitants by the Turks in 1812. During the Greek revolution no place suffered so much as this. The inhabitants had regularly paid their very oppressive taxes to the Sultan; but because some few of them joined in the insurrection, the Turks massacred in cold blood 60,000 of them, and sold 30,000 others, and principally young women, into vile slavery. Only about 15,000 escaped. The Turks resembled blood-hounds let loose. Their horrible cruelty can scarcely be imagined, much less described. Scio has been represented as the most lovely of all lovely spots.

CHISLEU, Kis'-lew, rashness, confidence.—The ninth month of the sacred year of the Jews, and the third of their civil. It answers to our November and December; Zech. vii. 1; Neh. i. 1.

CHISLON, Kis'-lon, hope or trust.—The father of Elidad; Num. xxxiv. 21.

CHISLOTH-TABOR, Kis'-loth-tay'-bor, fears.—A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Zebulon; Josh. xix. 12.

CHITTIM, Kit'-tim, those that bruise, gold, staining.—Probably the same as Macedonia, peopled by Kit-tim, the son of Javan, Gen. x. 4. More probably the coasts and islands of the Mediterranean, Num. xxiv. 24.

CHIUN, Ky'-un, or Remphan.—An Egyptian god, whom some think to be Saturn; Amos v. 26; Acts vii. 43.

CHLOE, Klo'-e, green herb.—A Christian female of Corinth, who informed Paul of the divisions there, on account of Cephas, Apollos, and himself; 1 Cor. i. 11.

CHOKE, Matt. 13. 7. 22; Mark 4. 7. 19, & 5. 13; Luke 8. 14. 33.

CHOOSE.—To select, or make choice of, Ps. xxv. 12; Exod. xvii. 9. "And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek." (1.) It is spoken of Christ, Isa. xlii. 1; "Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect," &c. (2.) Spoken of believers who are saved by faith in Christ, as the one mediator between God and man, 1 Peter ii. 9. "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood." Rev. xvii. 14. "Called, and chosen, and faithful." Mark xiii. 20. "The elect's sake, whom he hath chosen." Eph.

CHORAZIN, Ko-ray'-zin, the secret, here is a mystery.—A town of Galilee, peculiarly privileged as one of the principal scenes of Christ's ministry. It is supposed to be the modern Chorazi or Gerazi, a village about 12 miles N. N. E. of Tiberias; Matt. xi. 21; Luke x. 13.

CHOSEN.—"Many called, but few chosen;" Matt. xx. 16. This passage refers to the manner in which the ancients recruited their armies.—The consuls summoned to the Capital all citizens capable of bearing arms, from the age of seventeen to forty-five. They drew up by tribes, and lots were drawn to determine the order in which every tribe should present its soldiers. That which was the first order chose the four citizens judged the fittest to serve in the war; and the six tribunes who commanded the first legion selected one of these four. The tribunes of the second and third legion also made their choice one after another; and he that remained entered into the fourth legion. A new tribe presented other four soldiers, and the second legion chose four. The third and fourth legions had the same advantage in their turns. Thus each tribe successively appointed four soldiers till the legions were complete. They next proceeded to the creation of subaltern officers, whom the tribunes chose from among the soldiers of the greatest reputation. When the legions were thus completed, the citizens who had been called, but not CHOSEN, returned to their respective employments, and served their country in other capacities.

CHRIST JESUS. Eph. ii. 10; Heb. iii. 1. The name of the incarnate Son of God, the Saviour of apostate man. His name is JESUS, the Saviour. His official name is CHRIST. This word is derived from the Greek verb CHRIO, to anoint, and is synonymous with the Hebrew word MESSIAH. Therefore Christos Iesus, Christ Jesus, or the anointed Saviour, is a most important name. "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus (the) Christ whom thou hast sent."

He is called Christ in allusion to the anointing with oil; for, "anciently," says Macknight, "kings, priests, and prophets, were consecrated to their several offices, by the ceremony of solemn unction with perfumed oil: called "the oil of gladness," because it occasioned great joy, both to the person anointed, and to those who were present at the ceremony. Wherefore the Son being appointed of God to the high offices of universal king, priest, and prophet, among men, he is called by way of eminence, the Lord's Messiah, Christ, or Anointed One. But the oil with which God anointed or consecrated him to those offices was not any material oil; nor was the unction external, but internal with the Holy Ghost; John iii. 34, 35.

This anointing implies that he was appointed, commissioned, and qualified. His appointment is stated, John vi. 27; "Him hath God the Father sealed;" and Heb. v. 4; "And no man taketh this honour to himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." His commission is stated, Isa. xlix. 6; Luke iv. 18, &c. His qualification is stated Isa. ix. 6, 7; xi. 2—4. The seal of his mission is to be seen in his stupendous miracles, in his spotless life, in his acts of mercy, in his wonderful teaching, &c. It has been computed that the name Jesus occurs nearly seven hundred times to designate the blessed Saviour. The name Christ occurs about sixty times in the Gospels and Acts, and nearly two hundred and forty times in the Epistles. The compound name of the Redeemer, Jesus Christ, seldom occurs in the gospels, but one hundred and sixty times in the Epistles. The title Christ Jesus occurs only in the Epistles.

The great object of Christ's mission was to save sinners, by making an atonement for them. This is abundantly stated in the Bible. See Concordance which follows.

Messiah was to be a priest after the order of Melchisedec; Ps. cx. 4. Intimations of his priestly character indeed are numerous in the book of Psalms, and the writings of the prophets; in which we are told that he should come "to do the will of God," by accomplishing that which was typified in the sacrifices and offerings that were continually offered under the law, but in which Jehovah had no delight; Ps. xl. 6—8; that he should "make his soul an offering for sin," and "pour out his soul unto death;" Isa. liii. 10—12. or in the language of Daniel, that "he should finish transgression, make an end of sins, (or of sin-offerings,) to make reconciliation for iniquity, and bring in an everlasting righteousness, the Messiah should be cut off, but not for himself;" Dan. ix. 24—26. For the fulfilment of these predictions, see Heb. vii. 20—28; viii. 1, 2; ix. 12—24; and x. 21; 1 Pet. iii. 18.

No man that doubts of his being the only true and most high God, can, in consistency with common sense, allow himself to be a Christian. If Jesus be not the supreme God, he was a setter up of idolatry, encouraging men to worship himself; and Mahomet, who zealously opposed such worship, must be a valuable reformer! If Christ be not God, the Jews did well to crucify him as a noted blasphemer, that made himself equal with God; they did well to persecute his apostles, who represented him as the object of worship. If Christ be not God the whole of the mystery of our redemption is erroneous or trifling. Where is the divine love in sending a nominal God to redeem us? or what can his death avail us, who are not nominal, but real transgressors against infinite Majesty? If Christ be not the supreme God, how obscure, false, absurd, and impious, must the language of the Holy Ghost be, particularly in the oracles relative to him? If Christ be not God, what is the whole Christian religion, but a mere comedy and farce, in which one appears in the character of God who is not really so! What are its miracles, predictions, and mysteries, but a system of magic, invented or fabricated by Satan, to promote the blasphemous adoration of a mere creature?

CHRISTIAN.—The name given to a disciple of Christ. It was first used at Antioch, (Acts xi. 26,) in the year 42. The followers of Christ generally called themselves Brethren, Faithful, Saints, Believers, Disciples. They were named Nazarenes, and Galileans, by the Gentiles. A real Christian is one whose understanding is enlightened by the influences of divine grace, who is convinced of the depravity of his nature, who sees his own inability to help himself, who is taught to behold God as the chief good, the Lord Jesus as the only way to obtain felicity, and that the Holy Spirit is the grand agent in applying the blessings of the gospel to his soul. His heart is renovated, and inclined to revere, honour, worship, trust in, and live to God. His affections are elevated above the world, and centre in God alone. He embraces him as his portion, loves him supremely, and is zealous in the defence and support of his cause. His temper is regulated, his powers roused to vigorous action, his thoughts spiritual, and his general deportment amiable and uniform. In fine, the true Christian character exceeds all others as much as the blaze of the meridian sun outshines the feeble light of the glow-worm.

CHRONICLES.—The name of two books of the Sacred Canon, called by the LXX, Paralipomena, (Things Omitted,) as if they were a supplement to the more ancient sacred history. They were designed to preserve the genealogies of the tribes and families of the people of God. These books are supposed to have been compiled by Ezra, when he engaged to collect every authentic record relative to the Israelites, &c. Two of the sacred books bear this title, as well as other register of events; 2 Kings xxiv. 5; 1 Chron. xxvii. 24; Esther ii. 23.

CHRYSOLITE, Kris'-so-lite. —A transparent precious stone, of a golden colour, mixed with green; Rev. xxi. 20. The Indian Topaz is supposed to be the same, which is of a yellowish green, and very beautiful.

CHRYSOPRASUS, Kris-o-prasus.—A precious jewel of a green colour, with a mixture of yellow. It is classed among the beryls; Rev. xxi. 20.

CHUB, Kub.—Supposed to be the habitation of the Cubeans, placed by Ptolemy in the Marcotis; Ezek. xxx. 5.

CHUN, Kun.—A city of ancient Syria; 1 Chron. xviii. 8.

CHURCH. (1.) An assembly met about business, whether lawful or unlawful, Acts xix. 32, 39. (2.) It is understood of the collective body of Christians, or of all those over the face of the earth who profess to believe in Christ, and acknowledge him to be the Saviour of mankind: this is called the visible church, Eph. iii. 21; 1 Tim. iii. 15; Eph. iv. 11, 12. (3.) Those on earth are also called the militant, and those in heaven the triumphant church, Heb. xii. 23; Acts xx. 28; Eph. i. 22; Matt. xvi. 18. (4.) By a particular church we understand an assembly of Christians united together, and meeting in one place for the solemn worship of God. To this agree the definition given by the compilers of the thirty-nine articles:—"A congregation of faithful men, in which the true word of God is preached, and the ordinances duly administered according to Christ's directions, in all those important things that of necessity are requisite to the same;" Acts ix. 31; Gal. i. 2, 22; 1 Cor. xiv. 34; Acts xx. 17; Col. iv. 15. (5.) The word is now used also to denote any particular denomination of Christians distinguished by particular doctrines, ceremonies, &c.; as the Romish church, Greek church, English church, &c.

CHURL.—A miserly, ill-natured, and crabbed person; Isa. xxxii. 5; 1 Sam. xxv. 3.

CHURNING. "Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter;" Prov. xxx. 33. The method of obtaining butter from milk was nearly the same throughout the East. Mr. Jackson, in his overland journey from India, states that he saw it made in Kurdistan in the following manner:—The milk was put into a sort of bottle, made of a goat's skin, every part of which was sewed up except the neck, which was tied with a string to prevent the milk running out. They then fixed three strong sticks in the ground, in form somewhat like what we often use in raising weights, only on a smaller scale. From these they suspend the goat's skin tied by each end, and continue shaking it backwards and forwards till it becomes butter; and they easily know this by the noise it makes. They then empty the skin into a large vessel, and skim off the butter.

CHUSHAN RISHATHAIM, Kew'-shan-rish-a-thay'-im, Ethiopian, blackness of iniquities.—King of Mesopotamia; Judges iii. 8. He oppressed the Israelites for eight years. From him they were delivered by Othniel.

CHUZA, Kew'-zah, the prophet, Ethiopian.—Steward to Herod; Luke viii. 3.

CILICIA, Sil-ish'-e-a, which rolls, or overturns.—A country in the south of Asia Minor, at the east of the Mediterranean Sea; Its capital was Tarsus; Acts xxi. 39. It was the birth-place of Saul, and of many illustrious men, as Menander, the poet, Chrysippus, the stoic philosopher, and Aratus, the astronomer.

CINNAMON. The aromatic bark of a tree, anciently found in Arabia. The finest is now found in Ceylon. It is not fully ascertained whether the Cinnamon of the present day is the same as that mentioned in the Scriptures. It was one of the ingredients of the holy anointing oil; Ex. xxx. 23.

CIRCLE. "It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth," &c. Isa. xl. 22. Circle means the line round which the earth revolves, and figuratively describes a position from every part of its surface which can be seen.

CIRCUIT, 1 Sam. 7. 16; Job 22. 14; Ps. 19. 6; Eccl. 1. 6.

CIRCUMCISE, to cut off the foreskin, according to the commandment given to Abraham, as a sign of that covenant which God had entered into with him, that out of his loins should proceed the Messiah. To be spiritually circumcised, or to be the spiritual seed of Abraham, is to have the thing signified by that ceremony, and to perform all those duties which circumcision was designed to enforce,—namely, to believe in the Messiah, to put off the old man, and to serve him as new creatures, which is signified by our acceptance of the ordinances of the gospel, and submission to them; Phil. iii. 3.

CIRCUMSPECT: to be circumspect is to be wary and watchful in our conduct, Ec. 23. 13. A man may ruin himself through carelessness, but he cannot save himself without great care and circumspection, Eph. 5. 15. "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise." Some read thus:—See then that ye, upon whom Christ now shines, walk accurately according to his precepts; not as unwise men, provoking your heathen neighbours by imprudent rebukes. See verse 16

CISTERN. A reservoir for water. They were of great value in Palestine, and the construction of them procured for the memory of kings and great men more esteem and honour than perhaps the noblest achievements. From the scarcity of water, no house was complete without a cistern, the destruction of which is selected as a figure of extreme misery, and even of death; Prov. v. 15; Isa. xxxvi. 16; 2 Chron. xxvi. 10; Neh. ix. 25; Ecc. xii. 6; Jer. ii. 13.

When cisterns were empty, there was a considerable deposit of mud at the bottom, and they were used as places of wretched and cruel punishment. Probably into such a pit Joseph was cast; for they were very deep; Ps. xl. 2; Jer. xxxviii. 6.

CISTERN. The left ventricle of the heart is figuratively so called, as it receives the blood passing from the right ventricle through the lungs, in its general circulation. See Ecc. xii. 6.

CISTERNS, 'broken cisterns.'—The easterns obtain water in two ways. They collect the rain-water in cisterns, and other reservoirs, and they dig wells in the earth to procure spring water; the water obtained by the latter method is esteemed superior, and is expressively called, 'living water.' In the east it is a sore disappointment, to find broken cisterns which can hold no water, which are generally ten or fifteen miles asunder; Jer. ii. 13.

CITY, signifies, (1) a walled town, Josh. vi. 3. "And ye shall compass the city, all men of war, and go round about the city." (2) For inhabitants of cities, Jer. iv. 29; "The whole city shall flee—shall go into thickets, and climb up upon the rocks." So Isa. xiv. 31; Jer. xxvi. 2. (3) The church of God; Song iii. 2, 3; Rev. xxi. 2. Represented under the figure of Jerusalem; the city "chosen of God;" the "valley of vision;" "the city of solemnities;" "the city of God." See 2 Kings xxiii. 27; Isa. xxii. 1; xxxiii. 20; Ps. xlvi. 4. The Lord sets his church and people among the wicked, and that for special ends : "I have set thee in the midst of the nations," Ezek. v. 5. And God had peculiar ends in it. The nations and country about were full of ignorance, idolatry, and profaneness ; God recorded his name at Jerusalem, set his worship there, and them in the midst of the nations, that they might make known the true God, the true religion, and the true worship : that they might, by their holy lives, win those that were without, and bring them to serve the God of Israel. Had the Jews been faithful and spiritual in their worship, they might have influenced the nations to have turned from their idols, and from their sins, to the living God. City also refers to the church triumphant in glory, Rev. xxi. 2. "And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband," verses 10, 11, to the end of the chapter. "A city, the building of the wall whereof was of jasper ; its foundations garuished with all manner of precious stones ; its twelve gates, each one of pearl ; and its streets pure gold, as it were transparent glass." But looking round for the temple, the glory and joy of this imperial city, behold, none is to be found ! Was there then a defect here ? Oh, no ! for "the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it." See Rev. xxii. 19. "For he looked for a city, which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God," verse 16 ; Heb. xii. 22. The decay of great cities is a striking emblem of the instability of all earthly glory, Ezek. xxvi.

As they have a time to rise, so they have a time to fall. Tyrus had her day to fall ; ver. 18, 20. Jerusalem formerly called Jebus, 1 Chron. xi. 4, and Salem, Gen. xiv. 18, as it had its time for building, so its day for burning ; Jer. lii. 13. So it was with Jericho ; Josh. vi. 24. Babylon had its time to begin, Gen. xi. 8, and its time to cease ; Isa. xiv. 4. Damascus became a ruinous heap, Is. xvii. 1.

We read of Nineveh's rise, Gen. x. 11 ; we read of her fall, Nahum iii. 7 ; Zeph. ii. 13.

CITIES 'for refuge,' Num. xxxv. 6. There were six of them, and they were easy of access. They were distributed through the land at proper distances from each other, that they might be convenient to every part of the land, and it is said they were situated on eminences, that they might be easily seen at a distance. The roads to them were kept in a good state, and had posts on which were written, Refuge, Refuge ; Deut. iv. 41 ; xix. 2 ; Josh. xx. 2. See also Heb. vi. 18. The names of the cities were Bezer, Gozan, and Ramoth-Gilead, on the east of the Jordan, and Kedesh-Naphtali, Shechem, and Hebron on the west. To one of these cities a person who had unawares and unintentionally slain any one might flee ; and if he reached the city, and was not overtaken by the pursuer or avenger of blood, he was safe within its shelter, provided he did not remove above a thousand yards from its circuit, nor quit the refuge till the death of the high priest then in office. But the manslayer was compelled to undergo a trial ; Num. xxxv. 24, 28. The cases of involuntary murder contemplated by the law are detailed ; Num. xxxv. 22, 23. The refugee, while in the city, had to support himself by some occupation ; idleness was not permitted.—These cities have generally been considered types of Christ, and the blessings of his kingdom ; in this light the apostle viewed them ; Heb. vi. 17, 18.

CITIES. Fenced cities. It was customary, at a very early age, in the East, to surround towns with very high walls. Thus we read of the cities of the Canaanites, that they were "great and fenced up to heaven ;" Deut. ix. 1. This is a strong hyperbole ; yet the walls that surrounded those cities were of no mean height, as those which are now erected by the Easterns indicate. "Few towns," says a recent traveller, "of the least consequence in Western Asia are with-

Towers were sometimes built along with the walls; some were round, some square, placed at regular intervals. The walls were very strong, even double, or triple, so that, should the enemy carry the outer wall, there was another opposed to their force. Such was the case at Jerusalem. Josephus says, "Of these three walls," (which were towards the north,) "the old one was hard to be taken, both by reason of the valleys and of that hill on which it was built, and which was above them. But besides that great advantage, as to the place where they were situate, it was also built very strong: because David, and Solomon, and the following kings, were very zealous about this work."

Sometimes they surrounded the town or fortress with a deep ditch. They had not, however, such an advantage as the Babylonians in this respect; for the ditch which surrounded Babylon could be filled with water from the Euphrates, as occasion required

Over the gate in these walls there was, and is now, a room in which watchmen are stationed, which strikingly illustrates the circumstance of David's retiring to "the chamber over the gate," to mourn for his son Absalom; 2 Sam. xviii. 24—33.

CITIZEN, in the Old and New Testament, generally means, not merely an inhabitant or dweller in a city, but one admitted to its corporate privileges. Citizenship was sometimes derived from birth, (the parents of a child conveying it to him), and sometimes obtained by purchase; both of which sources are alluded to in Acts xxii. 28. The saints are called citizens, because they have entered the church by regeneration and adoption, and are entitled to all its privileges.

CITIZEN, Luke 15. 15, & 19. 14; Eph. 2. 19. fellow-c. with the saints

CLAMOUR.—Peevish tempers and loud quarrelsome words, tend to contention and strife. Jesus was meek and lowly. Noise and clamour are the reverse.

CLAMOUR, Eph. 4. 31. all anger and c. be put away from you

CLAMOROUS, Prov. 9. 13. a foolish woman is c. she is single CLAUDA, Klaw'-dah, a broken voice.—An island near Crete; Acts xxvii. 16.

CLAUDIA, Klaw'-de-a.—A Roman Christian lady, converted to the Christian faith by the ministry of the Apostle Paul; she was either the wife of Pudens, or sister of Linus, and she is said to have first introduced the gospel into Britain; 2 Tim. iv. 21.

CLAUDIUS, Klaw'-de-us.—The fifth of the Roman Emperors: he succeeded Caius Caligula, A. D. 41. In the ninth year of his reign he published an edict for expelling all Jews from Rome; Acts xviii. 2; this edict probably extended to Christians, as they were there confounded under the general name of Jews. Claudius was poisoned by his wife Agrippina, and succeeded by Nero, her son.

CLAUDIUS FELIX.—He was the successor of Cumanus, in the government of Judea. See Felic.

CLAUDIUS LYSIAS.—The chief captain of a band who kept guard at the temple. He rescued Paul from a tumult which the Jews raised against him; Acts xxi. 27, 28, and ch. xxii. from a conspiracy entered into by forty envenomed Jews; Acts xxiii. 21.

CLAY.—“As clay to the seal,” Job xxxviii. 14. When a door or box was to be sealed, it was first locked, and then clay or wax was spread over the key-hole, and then impressed with the seal. Clay was used because it hardens with heat. In Egypt, the granary of Joseph, a large warehouse where the corn that is paid as a tax to the Grand Seigneur is deposited, is carefully sealed by the inspectors or officers to whom it is intrusted: this is done, by covering the locks of the doors with a handful of clay. This custom, which is not uncommon in other parts of the east, may illustrate the assertion;—“It is turned as clay to the seal.”

CLEAN.—(1.) Freedom from the guilt and curse of sin by the blessing of justification, Ps. li. 7. “Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.” (2.) Holiness and purity by the sanctifying influence of grace, John xiii. 10. (3.) That which is without dross, Ps. xix. 9. Ezekiel xxxvi. 25. (4.) Artificially, hypocritically and opinionatively, Matt. xxiii.

25; Luke xi. 39; Prov. xvi. 2. (5.) Being pronounced pure from legal pollution, Lev. xiii. 6, 7. (6.) Purity of moral character, and innocency in the general deportment, 2 Sam. xxii. 21, 22. Purity of heart, or inward holiness, can only be obtained, and preserved, by exercising faith in the blood of the Lord Jesus, 1 John i. 7; Heb. i. 3. “Cleanseth us from all sin.” Titus ii. 14. This blood of atonement cleanseth from the filth and stain of sin, Heb. ix. 14; 1 Peter i. 2; Rev. i. 5, 6. “Now ye are clean through the word,” John xv. 3, being accompanied with the power of the Spirit, John xvii. 17; Eph. v. 26; 1 Peter i. 22.

The adjectives clean and unclean, have a reference to animals, &c., as stated in Lev. xi. 9—47. This distinction existed before the flood, Gen. vii. 2. The design was to keep the Jews distinct from idolatrous and barbarous nations; Lev. xx. 24—26; Deut. xiv. 2, 3, 21. These prohibitions would tend to conserve the people's health; for some of the creatures forbidden were unwholesome.

CLEAR, innocent, discharged from the oath, Gen. xxiv. 8. “Fair as the moon, clear as the sun,” Songs vi. 10. The church of Christ is like the sun risen in his glory, which shall never go down, Isa. lx. 20. To speak plainly what we know to be true, and is likely to minister grace to the hearers, Job xxxiii. 3; Zeph. iii. 9. “And it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark," Zech. xiv. 6. The finally impenitent cannot be acquitted before God, Exod. xxxiv. 7.

CLEAR the guilty, Ex. 34. 7.
Ps. 51. 4. c. when thou judgest
Songs 6. 10. looks forth c. as the sun
Zech. 14. 6. light shall not be c. nor

CLEAR.—"And that will by no means clear the guilty," Exod. xxxiv. 7. The words, "the guilty," are supplementary; and instead of the guilty, we should insert "the wicked," that is, the impenitent. The Chaldee explains it, of "them that turn not." The Jerusalem Targum applies it to the day of judgment when only the impenitent shall be condemned.

 jaws, 22. 15; Ezek. 3. 26.

Acts 11. 23. purpose of heart would c. to Lord

Rom. 12. 9. c. to that which is good

CLEFTS.—"Thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rocks," Jer. xlix. 16. Petra, the capital of Edom, and the houses, were literally cut out of the rocks, as their ruins still show. The rocks in the east abounded with cavities, which were sometimes used as places of defence, and powerful armies have been unable to force them; Judges xv. 8; Jer. xlix. 16; Obad. iii. 4.

CLEMENT, Klem'-ent, mild, good, merciful.—Clement was one of the most eminent ministers of Christ in the apostolic age; Phil. iv. 3. Many suppose that he was the bishop of Rome, who wrote an epistle to the Corinthian church. It is still extant, and is justly esteemed one of the most ancient and valuable of the uninspired records of the first age of Christianity. He survived all the apostles.

CLEOPAS.—Kle'-o-pas, the whole glory.—According to Eusebius and Epiphanius, he was brother of Joseph, both being sons of Jacob. See Matt. i. 16. He was the father of Simeon, of James the less, of Jude, and Joseph, or Joses. Cleopas married Mary, sister to the blessed virgin. He was, therefore, uncle to Jesus Christ, and his sons were first cousins to him; Luke xxiv. 18.

CLIMB, Jer. 4. 29; Joel 2. 7. 9.

CLOAK, put for an upper garment, or travelling coat, 2 Tim. iv. 13. (2.) Excuse or pretext, John xv. 22. (3.) A fair show, 1 Thess. ii. 5. "For neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness: God is witness." (4.) The salvation of God made known to his church, Isa. lix. 17. "He shall put on the garments of vengeance for clothing, and was clad with zeal as a cloak."

CLOAK, Coat.—'Him that taketh away thy cloak,' &c.; Luke vi. 29. The coat was a tunic or under garment, over which was thrown the cloak or gown, when going abroad, or when at work. See Coat.

CLOSE.—Secret, Num. v. 13; near, Jer. xlii. 16; Acts xxvii. 13; Luke ix. 36.

CLOSET, a place of devotion in every Jewish house; generally a small room built above the porch or entrance; Joel 2. 16; Matt. 6. 6; Luke 12. 3.

CLOTHE, to furnish with garments; to invest.

CLOTHED 'in soft raiment.' Worn by effeminate persons, and was an emblem of riches, splendour, effeminacy, wealth, &c.; Matt. xi. 8.

CLOTHES, the outer garments, usually put off when men worked, or ran; Matt. xxiv. 18. The murderers of Stephen 'cast off their clothes,' to render them better able to perform the act of stoning; Acts vii. 58; xxii. 23.

CLOTHES, garments, vestments. The use of clothing is, (1.) To cover our nakedness; "Unto Adam and to his wife, did the Lord God make coats of skin, and clothed them;" Gen. iii. 21; Hos. ii. 9. (2.) To defend against injury, from cold, &c.; Prov. xxxi. 21; xxv. 20; Job xxiv. 7. (3.) To distinguish one sex from another; "The woman shall not wear that which appertaineth to man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garments;" Deut. xxii. 5. (4.) To preserve health, and afford comfort; Job xxx. 18. (5.) To indicate the quality of office, position, profession, &c.; Gen. xli. 42; Esth. vi. 8; Acts xii. 21; Ps. xlv. 13, 14; 2 Sam. xiii. 18. (6.) To adorn the body; Gen. xxvii. 15; Hosea ii. 13; Exod. xxviii. 40. (7.) To testify joy or grief; Joel i. 13; Luke xv. 22. "Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him." Eccl. ix. 8.

CLOUD.—The Scriptures represent the clouds as conservatories of water, Job xxvi. 8. Job, speaking of chaos, says, that God had hemmed in the sea, or the waters, as with a cloud.

and covered it with darkness, as a child is wrapped up in swaddling clothes, Job xxxviii. 9. God went before the Israelites in a cloud, Exod. xiii. 21. He gave the law in a cloud; Exod. xix. 16; Deut. iv. 12. Christ was transfigured in a cloud; Matt. xvii. 5. Clouds have been symbols of the Divine presence, as Exod. xl. 34. By this cloud God took possession of the tabernacle, and manifested his favour; Num. ix. 15; 1 Kings viii. 10—12. God is represented as encompassed with clouds, which serve as a chariot, and veil his dreadful majesty; Job xxii. 14; Isa. xix. 1; Matt. xvii. 5; xxiv. 30; Ps. xviii. 11, 12; xcvi. 2; civ. 3. Armies are compared to a cloud, Ezek. i. 4; Jer. iv. 13.

When Elijah's servant reported to his master, that he saw a "little cloud" arising out of the sea like a man's hand, he commanded him to say unto Ahab, "Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not," 1 Kings xviii. 44. This appearance was considered as the sure indication of an approaching shower, for it came to pass in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain. Mr. Bruce corroborates this relation: "There are three remarkable appearances attending the inundation of the Nile: every morning in Abyssinia is clear, and the sun shines; about nine, a small cloud, not above four feet broad, appears in the east, whirling violently round, as if upon an axis; but, arrived near the zenith, it first abates its motion, then loses its form, and extends itself greatly, and seems to call up vapours from all opposite quarters. These clouds having attained nearly the same height, rush against each other with great violence, and put me always in mind of Elijah's foretelling rain on mount Carmel. The air, impelled before the heaviest mass, makes an impression of its own form in the collection of clouds opposite; and the moment it has taken possession of the space made to receive it, the most violent thunder instantly follows, with rain; and after some hours the sky again clears."

CLOUDS.—Symbolical of troubles, Eccl. xii. 2; Lam. ii. 1; iii. 44; Ezek. xxx. 2; &c. Coupled with 'fire,' they express protection, alluding to the pillar of cloud and fire, Ps. cv. 39; Isa. iv. 5. Also armies, multitudes, numbers; Isa. xlv. 22; Jer. iv. 13; Isa. lx. 8; Heb. xii. 1. Temporary goodness; Hosea vi. 4; mere formalists, Jude 12; seducers, 2 Pet. ii. 17; the infirmities of old age, Eccl. xii. 2.

CLOUD of WITNESSES.—"Compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses;" Heb. xii. 1. A cloud implies a great number. In this sense, the Greeks and Latins frequently use the term cloud to express a great number of persons or things: in Euripides we read of a dense cloud of shields; and in Statius of a cloud of spearmen. There is an allusion to the Grecian games, and cloud well denotes the vast crowd of spectators in the amphitheatre, seated one above another to an immense height. The agonistes, or contenders in those games were often greatly animated by knowing that the eyes of the principal men of their country were fixed upon them; and by this they were induced to make the most extraordinary exertions. Christians are thus made a spectacle to angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect, even to patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and those who died in the faith, &c.

CLOUD and smoke 'by day,' &c. Isa. iv. 5. Alluding to the appearances of the pillar of cloud and fire; Ex. xiii. 21; xl. 38; Zech. ii. 5; the whole being expressive of the visible presence of God.

An emblem of the various tongues and languages in which the apostles were to preach the gospel. They were like flames of fire parted, and these parted flames looked like tongues; so a flame of fire, is, with the Jews, called a tongue of fire.

CNIDUS, Ni'-dus.—A city and promontory of Asia, between Rhodes and Cos, at the East of the Icarian sea. The inhabitants worshipped Venus. The work of the great Praxiteles, which, with other statuary, ornaments, palaces, theatres, &c. decorated this once famous city. It was in the port of Cnidus that the memorable naval combat was decided, which marked the era when the Spartans lost their command of the sea, obtained by their previous victory over the Athenians in the Hellespont. Cnidus long since became a mass of splendid and interesting ruins, rich in proof of its former greatness: its broken cliffs, walls, and towers of its Acropolis—its theatre, the marble steps of which yet remain—the ruins of two magnificent Corinthian temples of white marble, and debris of statuary, friezes, and capitals, &c. all these prove its ancient greatness; Acts xxvii. 7.

COALS.—The coals we read of in the Bible, were coals of wood, or charcoal. They also used thorns, and wood of all sorts; Psal. lviii. 9; Eccl. vii. 6. They collected the dung of cows, and other animals, and dried it for the purpose, as is still the custom of the east, where wood is often very scarce. Grass also is mentioned; Matt. vi. 30. These different sorts of fuel are spoken of in several places in the Bible. As they were all such as burn away very quickly, so the sudden manner in which destruction comes upon sinners, by the wrath of God against sin, is frequently explained by referring to them.

COAL, 'quench my coal,' means my posterity; 2 Sam. xiv. 7.

COALS of fire, 'heap coals of fire upon his head.' Rom. xii. 20. A metaphor taken from the smelting of ore, meaning, thou shalt melt him down by kindness into affection for thee.—Or, if he persevere in his enmity to thee, the issue (though unsought for by thee,) will be that thou by thy patience, shalt engage the wrath of God to fall upon him, and maintain thy cause against him. This is the opinion of Grotius; Prov. xxv. 22. See also Ps. cxl. 9, 10; Isa. xlvii. 14; Ezek. x. 2.

COAL, 2 Sam. 14. 7; Is. 47. 14. and 6. 6; Lam. 4. 8; Ps. 18. 8; 12. and 120. 4 and 140. 10.

COAT.—The Jews wore two principal garments: the interior is called the coat, or tunic; Matt. v. 40. It was made of linen, and encircled the whole body, extending down to the knees. It extended upwards to the neck, and had long or short sleeves. Over this was worn the mantle or cloak; Matt. v. 40. The coat was sometimes woven like a stocking in its proper shape and size, without any seam. Such probably were the coats of fine linen of woven work which were made for Aaron and his sons; Ex. xxxix. 27. And such was the garment which our great High Priest wore previous to his crucifixion; John xix. 23. "His coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout." Such a coat is still worn by the Arabs, and is considered of great value.

COAT OF MAIL. This armour was brought to great perfection. It was flexible, and it yielded to the pressure of the muscles, and to the various motions of the body, displaying the shape, and muscular parts of the wearer. The Greeks and Romans made them of metal, which was cut into the shape of leaves or scales, &c. in such a manner that the pieces fell over each other, like the feathers of a bird, or the scales of a fish.

ed the hoofs of horses, purified them, cut them into slices, making them to resemble the scales of a dragon, or a green pure cone. These they sewed together with the sinews of horses and oxen, and such coats were elegant and strong, often covering a soldier from head to foot.

COAT of many colours, Gen. xxxvii. 3. In the East the young and gay indulged themselves in wearing these inner garments of divers colours and fanciful patterns; and sometimes their parents were weak enough to bestow such marks of distinction on their favourites. Joseph's coat, of many colours, will readily occur to the mind as an instance of this. Princesses, and others, in David's time, were distinguished in a similar manner; 2 Sam. xiii. 18. And the unhappy mother of Sisera anticipated no higher prize for her victorious son, as she fondly thought him, than "a prey of divers colours of needle-work, of divers colours of needle-work on both sides, meet for the necks of them that take the spoil." Judges v. 30.

COATS of skins. Probably from beasts sacrificed by Divine appointment; Gen. iii. 21.

COCK 'crow.'—In the East the cock crows at night, regularly between eleven and twelve, and one and two o'clock. In Matt. xxvi. 34, our Lord is represented as saying, that "before the cock crew," Peter should deny him thrice; so Luke xxii. 34, and John xiii. 38. But, according to Mark xiv. 30, he says, "before the cock crew twice, thou shalt deny me thrice." These texts may be reconciled, by observing, that ancient authors, both Greek and Latin, mention two cock-crowings, the one of which was soon after midnight, the other about three o'clock in the morning; and this latter, being most noticed by men as the signal of their approaching labours, was called by way of eminence, "the cock-crowing;" and to this alone, Matthew, giving the general sense of our Saviour's warning to Peter, refers; but Mark, more accurately recording his very words, mentions the two cock-crowings. The rabbies say that cocks were not allowed to be kept in Jerusalem; it was so holy; and on this ground infidels cavil at the relation; but it is a mere cavil. The cock is not prohibited by the law of Moses; and the Jews could buy and eat them. It is very likely that only the rich kept them. And even now the bird is kept in the East, and on the Continent of Europe, not so much for the purposes of food as to announce the dawn of day. But when the Romans took Palestine, they changed the custom, and established their own.

"The night was divided into four watches, of three hours each, that is, from six in the evening to nine, from nine to twelve, from twelve to three, and from three to six. They are thus set down in Mark xiii. 35; "Watch therefore, for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock crowing, or in the morning."

"These watches, or guards, were declared by the sound of a trumpet; and whenever one guard relieved another, it was always done by this usual military signal. The whole four watches were closed by the blowing of a shrill horn. Drakenborch says, the last trumpet, which blew at three in the morning, was sounded three times, to imitate the crowing of a cock.

COCKATRICE.—A venomous serpent, Isa. xi. 8. The original Hebrew has been variously rendered; the aspic, the basilisk, the hydra, the regulus, the viper, and the cerastes. Many think the basilisk is intended. Michaëlis, the cerastes, or horned serpent. It is very venomous.

COCKLE, a poisonous weed, supposed to be the deadly night-shade; Job 31. 40.

COFFINS, generally speaking are not used in the East; the body is simply wound up in grave-clothes, and placed in the grave; John xi. 44. There are some exceptions; for in some of the sepulchres, stone coffins with sculptured lids, are sometimes found. This was the precise usage of the Easterns. The first notice of coffins in the Bible, is in Gen. 1. 26. Of Joseph it is said, "And they embalmed him, and he was put into a coffin in Egypt." Coffins were more frequently used in Egypt than in any other country in the East. Some of the rich had one, two, or even three coffins one within the other.

COLD is, (1.) Natural, as water may be, the season, the wind, &c.; Jer. xviii. 14; Nah. iii. 17. It is very cold in Syria, and probably also in Palestine, from the 12th of December to the 20th of January, Ezra x. 9. Nay even in the spring and summer, the nights, especially upon mountains, are exceedingly cold, while the days are very hot, Gen. xxxi. 40; John xviii. 18. (2.) Spiritual, which consists in an utter, or very great unconcern about Jesus Christ and divine things, Matt. xxiv. 12.

COLLAR.—An ornament for the neck, Judges viii. 26. Job's disease is thus described:—"It bindeth me about as the collar of my coat."

COLLECTION. A voluntary contribution; 1 Cor. 16. 1, 2.

COLLEGE.—The place where the prophets, or such as were children of the prophets, had their usual abode, 2 Kings xxii. 14; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 22, in which there were masters and seniors, who were called fathers, 1 Sam. x. 12; 2 Kings ii. 12. And they who, as auditors, or attendants, accompanied the ancient prophets, were called children, or sons of the prophets, 1 Kings xx. 35; 2 Kings iv. 38.

COLLOPS.—Small pieces of meat, broiled on the coals, Job xv. 27. It is meant to express great prosperity and luxury.

COLONY.—This word occurs, Acts xvi. 12. Colonies were cities or countries to which Roman citizens had been sent out. They enjoyed the same rights as citizens of Rome, though they had among them Italians, and others. Their object was to look after the proper cultivation of the land, and to extend the Roman power.

COLOSSE, Ko-los'-se, punishment, correction.—A city of Phrygia Minor, which stood on the river Lycus, at an equal distance between Laodicea and Hierapolis; Col. i. 2; iv. 13. It was a large and populous city, but in the time of the Apostle Paul had lost much of its former greatness. Its government was demerocratical, and its first ruler called Archon. Colosse, along with several other cities in its neighbourhood, was swallowed up by an earthquake. One of the first Christian churches was established here. Though it does not appear that

Paul was ever at Colosse, yet, when prisoner at Rome, he wrote an excellent epistle to the Christians there, warning them against vain philosophy and legal ceremonies, demonstrating the excellency of Christ, and the saints' completeness in him; and exhorting them to the duties of their respective stations: this he sent them by Tychicus and Onesimus.

The site of the ancient city is now occupied, partly by a village, and partly with the debris of the former city; the principal ruins of which are, some fragments of old walls on the rock upon which the castle stands—numerous fragments of marble pillars, used as rollers by the inhabitants of Khonas—the remains of three churches, with but few inscriptions; and beyond these, vestiges of an ancient city, arches, vaults, &c.; and the surrounding grounds strewed with broken pottery.

The approach to Khonas is beautiful, abounding with tall trees, from which, as in Italy, are suspended vines of the most luxuriant growth. Its situation is one of the most picturesque kind under the immense range of Mount Cadmus, which rises perpendicular to a very great height behind the village, in some parts clothed with pines, in others bare of soil, with immense chasms and caverns. It is inhabited by Greeks, and governed by a Turkish Aga.

COLOSSIANS, Epistle to.—Colosse early received the gospel, perhaps by Epaphras or Philemon. Paul had doubtless visited it, as we learn that he passed through Phrygia twice. The Colossians having, in consequence of false teachers, several matters to inquire of Paul, sent Epaphras to Rome to obtain the desired information from the Apostle's own mouth. To them he returned a suitable answer, A. D. 62, in which he expresses his joy at the account given of them by Epaphras. He endeavours to guard them against the errors propagated by false teachers who had crept in among them, and who were endeavouring to beguile them with enticing words and false philosophy. He exhorts them to adhere to the doctrines of the gospel, and to set their affections on heavenly things, to prove the purity of their faith, and to glorify the name of Christ.

COLT. The young of a camel, or ass; Gen. xxxii. 15; xlix. 11; Matt. xxi. 5; Zech. ix. 9. Of this colt it is said, "whereon never man sat;" No animal was allowed to be employed, in sacred uses, even among the Heathen, that had been used for any domestic, or agricultural purpose.

COME. (1) Divine manifestation and favour; Exodus xx. 24. "In all places where I record my name, I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee." This coming of God implies nearness, possession and inhabitation; Songs v. 1; Deut. xii. 5; Rev. iii. 20. (2) The judgments of God; Isaiah lxvi. 15; Psalm l. 3; Isaiah xxx. 27. (3) The manifestation of the Son of God; Gal. iii. 19; Acts iii. 19; Isaiah lix. 20. His resurrection; John xx. 19. His coming to judgment; Rev. i. 7, 8. (4) The coming of the Holy Ghost; John xvi. 13. (5) Spoken of Satan; John xiv. 30; Job i. 6. (6) Of angels; Dan. ix. 22. COMFORT. Inward pleasure, joy, support, assistance, consolation; Job 6. 10; x. 20; Ps. cxix. 50, 76.—To strengthen, console; Gen. v. 29; 1 Thess. iii. 2; Isa. xl. 1, 2; xii. 1, 2; xlix. 13. Spiritual comfort is that refreshing pleasure of the soul, which arises from the consideration of what God in Christ is to us, in respect of relation, and of what he has done for us, and infallibly promised to do for us; 2 Cor. i. 5. The Holy Spirit is the author of comfort; the Scriptures are the established ground and means of it; and ministers and godly companions are the instruments and helpers of it; Job x. 20; Psalm cxix. 49, 50; 2 Cor. i. 5, 6, 7; vii. 6, 7.

COMFORTER, (Paraklete) denotes an advocate in a court, one who intercedes for us, a monitor; a teacher; an assistant; a helper; John xiv. 26; xv. 26; xvi. 7. The name has no doubt a reference to his peculiar office in the economy of redemption, namely, that of imparting consolation to the hearts of Christ's disciples, which he effects, by "taking of the things that are Christ's, and showing them to them," or, by greatly illuminating their minds into the meaning of the Scriptures; revealing the Saviour's grace to the most guilty; bringing to their recollection his consolatory sayings; and filling their souls with peace and joy in believing them: thus causing them to "abound in hope," or to have their hopes full of immortality. When the Lord Jesus was about to leave his disciples, foreseeing the persecutions that awaited them on account of their attachment to himself, he promised not to leave them as orphans, but to send the Holy Spirit, as the Comforter, to abide with them, the pledge of their interest in his love, and the earnest of the heavenly inheritance; Romans xv. 13; Eph. i. 13.

 one's spirit, self, way, or salvation, to God, is, upon the faith of his promise, to intrust the same to his care, that he may receive, uphold, direct, preserve, and save us; Psalms xxxi. 5; x.

'COMMIT thy way unto the Lord,' Ps. xxxvii. 5. Commit thy concerns; literally, 'roll thy concerns upon the Lord,' as a man rolls a burden which he cannot carry; the idea is taken from a camel who lies down till his load is rolled upon him.—'And he shall bring it to pass; literally,
 'he shall work;' he will manage thy concerns skilfully and effectually.

COMMON, ordinary or usual, as a common death; Num. xvi. 29, a common evil; Ecc. vi. 1: "Common salvation," Jude 3. The salvation preached in the gospel is called common, because it belongs equally to all who believe; to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews; to men of all nations and conditions. For the same reason, Paul termed the belief of the gospel "the common faith," Tit. i. 4, because an opportunity of believing it was afforded to all. Sometimes that which is ceremonially unclean; Acts xi. 9, to eat with common hands, i. e. with hands unwashed; Mark vii. 2, common bread; 1 Sam. xxi. 4.

COMMON, 'had all things common;' Acts ii. 44. A community of goods was practised at all the Jewish feasts at Jerusalem, and no man's house was his own. So when the Spirit was poured out, on account of the detention at Jerusalem, there was a kind of community for the time being, that none might suffer from want; but the subsequent contributions of the saints show that there was not an equality of property; Acts xi. 29; 1 Cor. xvi. 1.

COMMON HALL. "Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall; Matt. xxvii. 27. This place was the pratorium, or judgment hall; a most magnificent building in the upper part of the city, which had been formerly Herod's palace, as it is sometimes called, but into it the Jews could not enter lest they should defile themselves.

COMMONWEALTH. "Aliens from the commonwealth of Israel;" Eph. ii. 12. Ye were by your birth, idolatry, &c., alienated from the commonwealth of Israel—from the civil and religious privileges of the Jewish people.

- COMMOTION. Tumult, disturbance, trouble, Jer. 10. 22; Luke 21. 9.
COMMUNE, to impart sentiments, to meditate, to converse, Ex. 25. 22; Ps. 4. 4; 64. 5; 77. 6; Gen. 18, 33; Ecc. 1. 16.

COMMUNION, in its strict and proper sense, signifies holding something in common with another, Acts ii. 42. (2) In a more general sense, it denotes conformity or agreement, 2 Cor. vi. 14; Eph. v. 11. (3) It signifies converse, or intercourse, wherein men contrive or consult together about matters of common concern, Luke vi. 11. (4) Communion is also used for the Lord's supper, because we herein make a public profession of our conformity to Christ and his laws; and of our agreement with other Christians in the spirit and faith of the gospel; 1 Cor. x. 16; Rom. xii. 10.

- COMPACT, regularly framed and joined; Ps. 122. 3. The church is compact-ed together; every member has his own proper station and work, and yet all are so joined, as to add to her general glory and welfare; Eph. 4. 16; Col. 2. 19.

COMPANION. (1) A familiar friend; Judg. xv. 22. (2) Co-partner

CONCISION, Phil. iii. 2. Jewish circumcised teachers, who taught that circumcision was necessary to salvation. It is a contemptuous appellation of circumcision, by which the apostle shows, that it was no more than a mere cutting off the flesh, being now no longer a seal of the covenant.

CONIAH, Ko-ny'-ah, the strength, or stability of the Lord. The son of Jehoiakim; Jer. xxii. 28.

CONCLUDE.—To determine; Rom. iii. 23. To resolve finally, Acts

xxi. 25. To declare irreversibly, Gal. iii. 22; "But the scripture hath concluded all under sin," &c. Sinners have been tried and found guilty, the scripture hath shut them up—put them in prison, and locked them up; Rom. iii. 9—20; xi. 32. Blessed are they who are delivered by Christ the great Redeemer!

CONCLUSION, Eccl. 12. 13. c. of matter
CONCORD.—Agreement; 2 Cor. vi. 15.

CONCUBINE.—A wife of the second rank. She differed from a proper wife, in that she was not married by solemn stipulation; she brought no dowry with her; she had no share in the government of the family; nor did her children share of their father's inheritance, Gen. xxv. 6. Through a sinful mistake of the nature of marriage, it was common for the ancients to have concubines.

CONCUPISCENCE, (1) The corruption of our nature, from whence all our actual sin proceeds, Rom. 7. 7; Jam. 1. 14. (2) Actual motions and inclinations of our heart towards sinful deeds, Rom. 7. 8. (3) Unchastity, Col. iii. 5; 1 Thess. 4. 5.

CONDEMN, CONDEMNATION.—To pass sentence on the guilty; Deut. xxv. 1. Sin is the cause of man's condemnation; John iii. 19. As "all have sinned," &c.; Rom. iii. 23, so all are concluded in a state of condemnation; Rom. xi. 32; Gal. iii. 22. But the gospel proclaims pardon and peace. "For by him, all that believe are justified from all things," &c.; Acts xiii. 39. Hence we find the words, justify, justified, and justification, as opposed to the terms condemn, condemned, and condemnation.

CONDEMN.—“Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more,” John viii. 11. That is, “Neither do I pass sentence of condemnation on thee. Go, sin no more.” We are not to consider this declaration as implying a remission of or connivance at her sins; but simply a declaration that, since his kingdom was not of this world, so he would not act as a temporal magistrate. False, therefore, is the conclusion hence drawn by some that Christ did not approve of adultery being punished with death. As the Holy One of God, he could not but disapprove of her wicked conduct; therefore, he said, “Do not continue to sin.” Recollect that the design was an attempt to ensnare our Lord, and his conduct indicated the greatest wisdom and prudence.

Rom. 10. 10. c. is made to salvation
1 Tim. 6. 13. witnessed a good c.

CONDUCT, signifies, (1.) to lead, 2 Sam. xix. 15, 40. (2.) To place, or convey in safety, Acts xvii. 15. (3.) To bring one on his journey, 1 Cor. xvi. 11.

CONDUIT, or Aqueduct, a water course; 2 Kings xviii. 17; xx. 20; Isa. vii. 3; xxxvi. 2

CONEY.

CONEY, or RABBIT, a species of hare with red eyes; Ps. civ. 18; Prov. xxx. 26. Some suppose it to be the gannim or ashkoke, a small harmless animal which builds in rocks; Lev. xi. 5. They are called by Solomon, “the wise and feeble folk.” They are timid and gregarious in their habits; so gentle and timid, that they shrink from the shadow of a passing bird.

CONFECTION. A preparation of sweet spices, to be used in incense and perfume to be offered to God in the sanctuary. It was to be beaten very small. It was typical; for it “pleased the Lord to wound and bruise him” (the Redeemer) who offered himself for a sacrifice of a sweet-smelling savour; Ex. xxx. 35

CONFEDERACY. A covenant agreement between princes, rulers, &c., or nations. See Isa. viii. 12; also Gen. xiv. 3; Ps. lxxxiii. 5; Isa. vii. 2.

CONFER. To talk together on any matter; to advise with; 1 Kings i. 7; Acts iv. 15; xxv. 12.

CONFERENCE. Persons met to talk over any matter, to decide it, or to settle disputes, arrange plans &c.—When Paul was Divinely called to preach the gospel, he “conferred not with flesh and blood;” Gal. i. 16.

CONFESS, plainly to acknowledge a fault: so a prisoner confesses his crime before a judge; Josh. vii. 19. Jesus Christ will confess his people at the last day; will publicly own them his children and faithful servants; Luke xii. 8. They confess him before men, when, notwithstanding danger and opposition, they openly profess and adhere to his truth, observe his ordinances, and walk in his way; Matt. x. 32. To confess God, is to praise and thank him; Heb. xiii. 15. To confess sin, is candidly to acknowledge our guilt before God, who can pardon or punish us; or to our neighbour, whom we have offended, or who can give us proper instruction and comfort; Ps. xxxii. 5; James v. 16; Matt. iii. 6.

On the tenth day of the seventh month, the Jewish high-priest confessed the sins of the whole nation over the head of the scape-goat, which typically bore them into the wilderness; Lev. xvi. 21. During the ten preceding days, it is said, the Jews made particular confession, each of his own sins; if they were breaches of the first table, they confessed them only to God; if they were breaches of the second, they confessed them also to the party wronged. When a criminal was come within ten cubits of the place of execution, he was obliged to confess his crimes, and beg that his death might expiate them.

The duty of confession has been awfully perverted by the Catholic priesthood. They have taught the people to regard private confession of sin to them, as essential to the obtaining of pardon from God. This, of all the methods of priestly domination ever devised, has been the most effectual to enslave ignorant and superstitious minds; and nothing has more tended to withdraw mens' minds from the fear of God to the fear of man. How weak and foolish are some men and women, to be deluded by priests; who, like themselves, are but weak, sinful, and infallible.

CONFIDENCE. Trust in the Lord; Ps. lxxv. 5; Prov. iii. 25; 2 Thess. iii. 4; 1 John iii. 21.—A firm persuasion of the Divine favour;

2 Cor. ii. 3; vii. 16; viii. 22; Gal. v. 10; Philem. 21.—Boldness, courage; Acts xxviii. 31.—A bold and open profession of Christ and his truth; Heb. x. 35.

CONFIDENCE, Job 4. 6, & 31. 24. Ps. 65. 5. e. of all the ends of earth 118. 8. than to put e. in man Prov. 3. 26. Lord shall be thy c. CONIAH, Ko-ny'-ah, the strength or stability of the Lord; the son of Jehoiakim; Jer. xxii. 28.

CONONIAH, Ko-no-ny'-ah, the strength of the Lord.—The name of a Levite; 2 Chron. xxxi. 12.

CONQUER, to overcome, subdue. (1) To prevail against, take away the strength and bring down the power of enemies, Dan. 7. 14; Mal. 4. 3. (2) To bring into obedience and subjection, Phil. 3. 21; 1 Cor. 15. 23. (3) To cultivate, rule over, Gen. 1. 23. Jesus Christ overcame the world.

CONSCIENCE. That faculty by which we discern the moral quality of actions, and by which we are capable of certain affections, (pain or pleasure, &c.) in regarding this quality. It is a capacity more or less active, according to the objects corresponding to it, or for which it is adapted, come under its cognizance. It is the same faculty which is named judgment, or the mental power to discern clearly, accurately, and truly, moral truths and their relations and tendencies; and can only act according as these truths are placed before the mind by immediate revelation, or by human instruction.

Archbishop Trench says, "Conscience," a solemn word, if there be such in the world. Now there is not one of us whose Latin will not bring him so far as to tell him that this word is from "con" and "scire." But what does that "con" intend? "Conscience" is not merely that which I know, but that which I know with some one else; for this prefix cannot, as I think, be esteemed superfluous, or taken to imply merely that which I know with or to myself. That other knower whom the word implies is

God, His law making itself known and felt in the heart; and the work of "conscience" is the bringing of each of our acts and thoughts as a lesser, to be tried and measured by this as a greater, the word growing out of and declaring that awful duplicity of our moral being which arises from the presence of God in the soul — our thoughts by the standard which that presence supplies, and as the result of a comparison with it "accusing or excusing one another."

Conscience is God's king, that he puts in a man's breast, and conscience ought to reign. You may get up a civil war to fight against conscience, but you cannot kill the king. You may dethrone him for a while, but he struggles and fights for the mastery.

Lord Capel well observes, "In this tempestuous world no line holds the anchor of contentment so fast as a good conscience. Man's favour is but a fine thread, that will scarcely hold one tug of a crafty talebearer. Honour slips the noose when vulgar breath, wearied with constant virtue, is more affected to novelty. Riches are gnawn asunder by the greedy teeth of devouring Leviathan's cruel tyrants. But this cable is so strong and well compact, that when force is offered to it, the straining rather strengthens by uniting the parts more close."

CONVERSATION. Mutual in-tween two or more persons. The conversation of Christians should be holy;

1 Pet. ii. 17; honest, ver. 12; without covetousness; Heb. xiii. 5.—The primitive sense of this word refers to the whole course and action of a man's life, as may be inferred from Gal. i. 13; Phil. iii. 20.—“Our conversation, or citizenship is in heaven,”—in allusion to the denizens of some city or corporation. So Christians are strangers here; they are not at home; they belong to a better country, that is, a heavenly one. Heaven is their home.

and their conversation, or conduct, ought to comport with their citizenship of the heavenly Jerusalem.

CONVERSION. A change from one state to another. Conversion may be, (1) Merely external, or that which consists only in an outward reformation.—(2) Doctrinal, or a change of sentiments.—(3) Saving, which consists in the renovation of the heart and life, or a turning from the power of sin and Satan unto God; Acts xxvi. 18. and is produced by the influence of Divine grace on the soul. (4) Sometimes it is put for restoration, as in the case of Peter; Luke xxii. 32. The instrumental cause of conversion is usually the ministry of the word; though sometimes it is produced by reading, by serious and appropriate conversation, sanctified afflictions, &c. In renewing us, God gives us a power; in converting us, he excites that power. Men are naturally dead, and have a stone upon them: regeneration is a rolling away the stone from the heart, and a raising to newness of life; and then conversion is as natural to a regenerate man as motion is to a lively body. A principle of activity will produce action. Regeneration is the motion of God in the creature; conversion is the motion of the creature to God, by virtue of that first principle; from this principle all the acts of believing, repenting, mortifying, quickening, do spring; Ezek. xxxvi. 27. Conversion evidences itself by ardent love to God, Ps. lxxiii. 25; delight in his people, John xiii. 35;

attendance on his ordinances, Psalm xxvii. 4; confidence in his promises, Psalm ix. 10; abhorrence of self, and renunciation of the world, Job xlii. 5; James iv. 4; submission to his authority, and uniform obedience to his word, Matt. vii. 20.

CONVERSION of Gentiles, Acts 15. 3.

CONVERT. To turn men from their evil courses and erroneous systems, and incline the heart to the service of God, and to unite in efforts to make Zion triumphant over sin; Isa. lx. 5.—To renew the heart, and turn from the power of sin and Satan unto God.—To recover one from a sinful fall, or error, Luke 22. 32; James v. 19, 20.

one of the truth of a thing, Acts 18.

28; 1 Cor. 14. 24. (2) To prove one guilty, and thoroughly persuade him of the truth and nature of his faults, Jam. 2. 9; Job 32. 12.

The Spirit convinceth men of sin, when by applying the precepts and threatenings of the law to their conscience, he gives them an affecting view of the facts, nature, ag-gravations, and fruits of their sin,

COOS, Ko'os.—A small island in the Archipelago, now called Stanchio, or Lango. It was formerly noted for its wine, silk, and cotton of a fine texture. Hippocrates, the famous physician, and Apelles the famous painter, were natives of this island. It once had richly endowed temples, which were sacred to Æsculapius and Juno. Paul passed this place in his voyage to Jerusalem. Up to the sixth century Christianity prevailed. It has given place to the Saracenic power—Mohammedanism; xxi. 1.

or decree, Esther iii. 14. Of the Proverbs of Solomon, Prov. xxv. 1.

CORAL. A hard, cretaceous marine production, resembling a plant. It is of various colours, white, black, and red; the latter is the sort usually called coral, and is most valuable. It is formed by animalcula, one of which is not larger than a pin's head. Myriads of these animals form reefs, and ultimately islands. Many of the reefs rise several feet in a year; Ezek. xxvii. 16; Job. xxviii. 18.

CORBAN.—A Syriac term for a gift offered to the temple, and particularly applied to objects solemnly promised to God's service, which promises were inviolable, whatever consequences might result to a man's temporal interest, Ps. xv. 4. The Pharisees, to disguise their covetousness, took occasion from these vows to destroy in their disciples every compassionate feeling and sense of obligation to their relations and the poor. Having the charge of the sacred treasury, they assured the people that if they were liberal in their gifts to the temple, that they had only to say to those who sought any particular thing from them, that it is corban, or devoted, and all obligation to give ceased. Thus, under pretence of zeal for God, but in reality to enrich themselves, they devoured widows' houses, and exalted ceremonial rites above the unchangeable laws of God; Matt. xv. 1—9; Mark vii. 9—13.

CORD.—The cords of the wicked are the snares with which they ensnare the unwary, Ps. cxxix. 4. The cords of sin are the consequences of crimes and evil habits; Prov. v. 22. To draw with the cords of a man, Hosea xi. 4, is to use gentle, persuasive, earnest, and affectionate means, as far as human reason can go, to allure to obedience.

CORIANDEE.—A strongly aromatic plant, bearing a small round seed, fragrant to the smell, and of an agreeable taste; Exod. xvi. 31; Num. xi. 7.

CORINTH, Kor'-inth, which is satisfied, beauty.—A celebrated city, the capital of Achaia, seated on the isthmus which connects Peloponnesus with Attica. It is said to have been founded by Sisyphus, and received its name from Corinthus, the son of Pelops. Its commodious haven and good situation gave it a vast commerce and immense wealth. During a war with Rome, Mummius burnt a part of it to the ground, A. M. 3827. It was afterwards rebuilt under the auspices of Julius Cæsar. It fell into the hands of the Turks under Mahomet II. Corinth, the "prow and stern of Greece," the emporium of its commerce, the key and bulwark of the Peloponnesus, was proverbial for its wealth as early as the time of Homer. Its situation was so advantageous for the inexperienced navigation of early times, that it became of necessity the centre of trade. By its port of Cenchrea it received the rich merchandise of Asia, and by that of Lechæum it maintained intercourse with Italy and Sicily. The Isthmian games, by the concourse of people which they attracted at their celebration, contributed not a little to its immense opulence; and the prodigality of its merchants rendered the place so expensive, that it became a saying, "It is not for every one to go to Corinth."

The Corinthians were distinguished for their learning as well as their wealth. Corinth was called by Cicero the light, and by Florus, the ornament of Greece. But it was rendered infamous in all future ages, by its splendid temple to Venus, to which belonged a thousand female slaves, who prostituted themselves to all for the honour of the abominable goddess. The licentiousness of Corinth was proverbial; a Corinthian and a prostitute were synonymous terms. Many Jews resided here, and had a synagogue. They were, as in every place, the first and most active persecutors of the followers of Christ. Paul endured much during his residence of eighteen months, but he nobly triumphed over the wisdom of the Greeks, the religious pride of the Jews, and the debasing superstition of the whole community.

Paul came to Corinth from Athens, A. D. 52, and lodged with Aquila and Priscilla, who were tent-makers. He preached in the Jewish synagogue, and converted some to the faith of Christ. He suffered much here, but continued in the neighbourhood eighteen months, and then went to Jerusalem. Probably he visited Corinth a second time towards the end of A. D. 57; (Acts xxii. 2; 2 Cor. xii. 14; xiii. 1,) and a third time on his second return to Rome; 2 Tim. iv. 20.

Corinthians, the First Epistle to the, was written from Ephesus. For Paul, on leaving Corinth, where he was establishing a Christian church, and where he wrote his two Epistles to the Thessalonians, proceeded to Asia, and visited Ephesus, Jerusalem, and Antioch, and then passing through Galatia and Phrygia, returned to Ephesus, where he remained three years. Towards the end of his abode there, he wrote this Epistle to the Corinthians, as appears from ch. xvi. 8, where he says, "I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost." Hence the subscription at the end of the Epistle, which states it to have been written at Philippi, is erroneous.

The Church was greatly disturbed by false teachers, some of whom advocated Mosaic ceremonies, and many of the native Corinthian converts were still addicted to their former licentiousness. Paul was called upon to fight against Jewish superstition, heathen licentiousness, and all the sophistry of human learning, which were leagued against him. On hearing of this state of the church, he sent Erastus and Timothy to Corinth, as his messengers and fellow labourers in the Gospel, intending shortly to visit them himself, Acts xix. 22. But before he could accomplish this, he received messengers from Corinth, with a letter from the Church, requesting his advice on various subjects, which had caused so many animosities and divisions among them, and on which those who remained steadfast to him requested his opinion. In answer to these applications, this Epistle was written.

Corinthians, the Second Epistle to the.—Paul, having learnt from Titus that the first Epistle had nearly produced the desired effect, wrote a second time from Macedonia, in the year 57, to assure them of the joy their contrition had given him, to explain why he had not visited them, to inform them of the success of his doctrine elsewhere also, and of the influence, zeal, and faithfulness of his ministerial office. Titus being about to return to Achaia, to forward collections there for the poor Christians in Judea, Paul sent this Epistle also by him to Corinth, in his name, and that of Timothy, who was at that time residing with him in Macedonia.

CORMORANT.—A water raven, reckoned unclean, Lev. xi. 17; Deut. xiv. 17. The word so rendered, Isa. xxxiv. 11, is different, and means a pelican. It was of the unclean class of birds, and its presence is used in the prophetic writings as an emblem of ruin and desolation; Zeph. ii. 14.

CORN. (Hebrew, dagin,) corn of all sorts, and so named from its great increase; including, therefore, (chete) wheat; (shore,) barley, and every other species of grain. Of its vast increase in eastern lands, see Gen. xxvi. 12; xli. 49, and Matt. xiii. 8.

The growth of corn is an emblem of the increasing nature of the Redeemer's kingdom;—"There shall be a handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon;" Ps. lxxii. 16. The gospel, if faithfully and fully preached, with prayer, faith, and love, shall produce a rich harvest of regenerated souls to the great joy of the church.

CORNELIUS, Kor-ne'-le-us, a horn. A centurion of a cohort belonging to the legion named Italian; Acts x. 1—3, &c. He was the first Gentile convert. His conversion, and his receiving the Holy Ghost, is one of the most remarkable incidents in the first age of the church. Peter was prepared by a vision to go to Cæsarea to discharge this important duty; Acts x. 11—16. The command given to Peter was obeyed, and by his agency, God made known to Cornelius the plan of salvation, through the death and resurrection of Christ. Thus the door of faith was opened to the Gentiles.

CORNER-STONE, The principal stone in the foundation of a building; Isa. xxviii. 16; Eph. ii. 20. The chief angle, or foundation corner-stone, the connecting medium, by which both Jews and Gentiles were united in the same building. The idea of the corner-stone so often mentioned in Scripture, is not to be taken from modern or classical architecture, but from that of ruder ages. Imagine a massive stone, like one at Stonehenge, cut to a right angle, and laid in the building, so that its two sides should lie along the two walls, which meet at a corner, and thus binding them together that neither force nor weather could dis-ever them. The foundation stones of ancient buildings were of this character, strong, firm, but befouled with dirt, &c. by its being imbedded in the ground. But some buildings had a head-corner-stone, richly chiselled, and beautifully ornamented, cut to a right angle, and binding the two walls firmly together; for the strength of a building lies in its angles. Behold, the foundation stone which God has laid in Zion! Jesus died for sin and guilt, was buried, but rose again for our justification, and was exalted to the right hand of God as our Priest, Intercessor, and King; he was fully symbolized by the corner-stone below, and by that above.

CORRECT, to chastise. Spoken of God; Job v. 17; Prov. iii. 12. "For whom the Lord loved he correcteth, even as a father the son in whom he delighteth." Jer. vii. 28; v. 3; Zeph. iii. 2; Hab. i. 12. Spoken of man; Prov. xxix. 19; xxiii. 13; Heb. xii. 9; Prov. vii. 22: xxii. 15.

COTTAGE.—"And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers;" Isa. i. 8. All along the side of the Nile there are immense fields of cucumbers, which have a most peculiar appearance, as they are not divided perhaps for many miles together, nor is the sameness of the prospect varied, except by now and then a small shed or hut, raised in the midst of one of these fields, in which a solitary individual resides, to prevent the crop from being plundered, or injured in any way. This illustrates the above passage in which the prophet describes the desolation of Israel;
 "She shall be left as a cottage," &c.

COUNCIL, the sanhedrim; a Jewish tribunal, instituted about two hundred years before Christ. It had seventy-two judges, being chief priests, elders, and scribes; and the high priest was president. Till the Romans conquered Judea, it had the power of life and death; Matt. v. 22.

COUNTENANCE, the mind understood by; Gen. xxxi. 5. "I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before." Hatred, grief, pride, fierceness, and anger, have all been read by the appearance of the countenance:—see Gen. iv. 5; Neh. ii. 2, 3; Ps. x. 4; Dan. viii. 23; Prov. xxv. 23.—The favour of God, and the graces and benefits of his Spirit, are set forth before the eye of faith by "the light of his countenance," Psalm iv. 6. And on the contrary, when faith is weakened, and sensible comfort in some degree lessened, the Lord is represented "as hiding" from the soul "the light of his countenance," Psalm xliii. 1.

COUNTENANCE. "Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause," Ex. xxiii. 3. It means that justice must not be perverted in favour of a poor man, merely because he is poor. Dr. Adam Clarke thus paraphrases it,—“Thou shalt neither be influenced by the great to make an unrighteous decision, nor by the distress of the poor, to give thy voice against the dictates of justice and truth. “Fiat justitia, ruat cælum;” “Let justice be done, though the heavens should be dissolved.”

COURT.—An entrance into a palace or house. The great courts belonging to the temple of Jerusalem were three; the court of the Gentiles, so called, because the Gentiles were allowed to enter so far and no farther; the second was the court of Israel, because all the Israelites, provided they were legally purified, had a right to enter; the third, the court of the priests, where the altar of burnt-offerings stood, and where the priests and Levites exercised their ministry, Esther v. 1. Figuratively, the church of Christ. The desirableness of Christian worship, Ps. lxxxiv. 10. “A day in thy courts is better than a thousand.”

COVENANT.—A mutual agreement between two or more persons, in which something is required to be done, in order to partake of some benefit. God made two covenants with man, the first at his creation, the condition of which was, his perseverance during the whole time of his probation; the reward annexed to this obedience was the continuance of him and his posterity in such perfect holiness and felicity he then had while upon earth, and everlasting life with God hereafter. The penalty threatened for the breach of the command was condemnation; terminating in death temporal, spiritual, and eternal. The seals of this covenant were, the tree of knowledge and the tree of life; and, perhaps, the Sabbath and Paradise, Gen. ii. 3; Gal. iv. 24. This covenant was broken by Adam's eating of the forbidden fruit, whereby he and his posterity were all subject to ruin, Gen. iii.; Rom. v. 12, 19; and without the intervention of the divine grace and mercy, would have been lost for ever, Rom. iii. 23. The second, the everlasting covenant, revealed after his fall, in which is promised not only forgiveness, through the atonement of Christ, but a right to life; and both these freely, as the unmerited gifts of God, through the substitution of Christ, who underwent the penalty, and perfectly fulfilled the law in all its demands, of which his ascension to heaven was a manifest proof, Rom. iv. 25; Eph. i. 7; Heb. vii. 22; viii. 6, 8; Isaiah xlii. 6; 1 Peter i. 20. The administration of the covenant of grace.—The covenant of grace, under the Old Testament, was exhibited by promises, sacrifices, types, ordinances, and prophecies. Under the New it is administered in the preaching of the Gospel, baptism, and the Lord's supper; in which grace and salvation are held forth in more fulness, evidence, and efficacy to all nations, 2 Cor. iii. 6—18; Heb. viii.; Matt. xxviii. 19, 20. But in both periods, the Mediator, the whole substance, blessings, and manner of obtaining an interest therein by faith, are the very same, without any difference, Heb. xi. 6; Gal. iii. 7, 14. In Scripture we read of various covenants; such as those made with Noah, Abraham, and the Hebrews at large. Anciently covenants were made and ratified with great solemnity. The Scriptures allude to the cutting of animals asunder; denoting that, in the same manner, the perjured and covenant-breaker should be cut asunder by the vengeance of God, Jer. xxxiv. 18; Gen. xvii. 9, 13; Dan. xi. 28. Covenant between Jonathan and David, 1 Sam. xviii. 2. Covenant of salt, Lev. ii. 13.

CRAFTINESS, Job 5. 12; 1 Cor. 3. 19;

Luke 20. 23; 2 Cor. 4. 3; Eph. 4. 14.

CRANE, a tall long-necked bird; when extended, between four and five feet from the toe to the beak. It is a bird of passage, whose regular annual return in its season, manifests instinctive knowledge, by allusion to which the Jews were reproved. Hezekiah, in his sickness, is said to have chattered as a crane or swallow; Isaiah xxxviii. 14. The Jews were more stupid than cranes, storks, and turtles; they knew not their proper season; Jer. viii. 7.

CREATE. (1) To make things from nothing; Gen. i. 1. (2) To form things from unfit matter; Gen. i. 21; ii. 19. (3) To implant saving graces, and endowments where they were not; Eph. ii. 10. (4) To recover the heart from apostasy, and cleanse it from great pollution; Psalm li. 10. (5) To bring things about in the course of providence; Isa. xlv. 7. (6) To restore to vigour and flourish; Psalm civ. 30.

CREATED, Bara. "This word," says Parkhurst, "denotes the production either of substance or form, the creation or accretion of substance or matter. Now here it cannot relate to form, because, as it follows in the next verse, the earth was without form (Tohu,) or in loose atoms." It must, therefore, denote to create, produce into being. "The Rabbins," says Dr. Clarke, "who were legitimate judges in a case of verbal criticism on their own language, are unanimous in asserting that the word (Bara,) expresses the commencement of the existence of a thing, or its egression from the nonentity to entity."

Creation, not only signifies the act of making things out of nothing; but also the creatures or things formed from nothing; 2 Pet. iii. 4; Rev. iii. 14. Creature, sometimes denotes all created things; Rev. v. 13. and sometimes only men, whom the Jews called the creature, by way of eminence; Mark xvi. 15.

CRESCENS, Kres'-sens, growing, increasing.—A person named 2 Tim. iv. 10.

CRETANS, or CRETIANS, Kre'-tans, or Kre'-she-ans.—Inhabitants of Crete; Titus i. 12.

CRETE, Kreet, carnal, fleshly.—

An Island in the Mediterranean, nearly opposite Egypt; it is now called Candia; of the church there Titus was bishop; Titus i. 5; Acts xxvii. 12, &c. It was the largest island in that sea, 180 miles long, and from 30 to 40 miles broad. It was once celebrated for the laws of Minos. At one time it was called Hecatompolis, from its 100 cities. The island abounds with mountains. Ida rises 7690 feet above the level of the sea, and is chiefly composed of grey marble. The island has some good harbours. The climate is salubrious; the heat never excessive, and in the plains extreme cold is never felt; during the greatest heats of summer, the atmosphere is cooled by the sea-breezes; most of the year there is a continuity of fine weather, and the air is very congenial to feeble constitutions, and epidemical diseases are almost unknown. It abounds with tropical fruits, and other productions. The Cretans were celebrated for their skill in archery, for being good seamen; but infamous for their falsehoods, debaucheries and piracies. So Paul calls them liars, evil beasts, slow bellies; sluggish, or gluttons; Tit. i. 12. This is a quotation according to Jerome, Socrates, and Nicephorus, from Epimenides.

Among the three thousand persons converted by Peter's sermon, on the day of Pentecost, some were Jews, natives of Crete, who had come up to Jerusalem to worship; Acts ii. 11. It is supposed that Paul visited this island, after his first confinement at Rome; that he went through various cities preaching the gospel, and converted many to the Christian faith; and that being in haste to perform his intended visit to the Hebrews, he left Titus behind him, to settle the different churches, and to "ordain elders in every city;" Titus i. 5.

CRIME, a fault that deserves punishment; Job 31. 11; Ezek. 7. 23.

CRIMSON. One of the seven principal red colours; 2 Chron. ii. 7.

Stuffs for the drapery of Solomon's temple were embroidered in this colour; 2 Chron. ii. 14; iii. 14. It was obtained from the coccus ilicis, an insect which deposits its eggs in the quercus cocciferus; similar to the cochineal insect, called by the Arabs kermes. The text has a reference to the double-dyed crimsons. Thus crimson is a deeper dye than scarlet; hence the force of the figure; Isa. i. 18.

CRISPING-PINS, Isa. iii. 22. A richly ornamented purse which the women wore attached to their girdles. They are commonly made of silk, and wrought with gold and silver. John says that those of the Hebrew females were of solid metal, gold or silver, and were fashioned like a cone with a rich border of cloth at the top.

CRISPUS, Kris'-pus, curled.—The chief of the Jewish synagogue at Corinth, who was converted to Christianity. He was a faithful servant of Christ; some say he was the bishop of the church of Egina, an island not far from Athens; Acts xviii. 8; 1 Cor. i. 14.

CROSS. A tree or a gibbet on which criminals were executed. Crosses were made of two pieces of wood, and they were of three kinds:—1. The Cruz decussata, or cross divided like the letter X, and usually called St. Andrew's cross; 2. The Cruz commissa, or joined cross, consisting of an upright piece of timber, with a transverse piece on the extreme top, at right angles with the first, like the letter T; and, 3. The Cruz immissa, or let-in cross, in which the transverse piece of timber is let into the upright, but placed somewhat below the top of the upright, in this form †. It is the latter cross on which our Saviour is usually represented to have suffered.

To be crucified was deemed the strongest mark of infamy, and was inflicted on the vilest slaves, and the most atrocious transgressors. It was generally accompanied with every possible expression of hatred and contempt. The law pronounced such accursed; Deut. xxi. 23. Hence Jesus is said to have endured the curse; Gal. iii. 13. See Crucify.

CROSS,—used metonymically, for the doctrines of the cross; Gal. vi. 14; ii. 20. 1 Cor. i. 18—23.—Trouble for the sake of religion; Mark viii. 34; Matt. xvi. 24.—The atonement which the cross figuratively represents, is now the theme of evangelical teaching—the foundation of the sinner's salvation, and his hope of eternal life.

Matt. 10. 38. takes not up his c. and follows, 16. 24; Luke 9. 23. & 14. 27,

CROWN.—A head ornament, worn in the East as a mark of dignity and honour. It distinguished the chief rulers, civil and ecclesiastic. The most ancient crowns were simply wreaths of flowers, or leaves, worn as a chaplet round the head. These, and other kinds, have been used by all nations to the present day. In course of time, wreaths of flowers, &c., gave way to metallic crowns, some of them ornamented with precious stones. The crowns of monarchs were sometimes white fillets, bound round the forehead, the ends falling back on the neck; some were made of gold tissue, adorned with the most costly jewels. That of the Jewish high-priest was a fillet, or diadem, tied with a ribbon of a hyacinth colour. It appears from 1 Chron. xx. 2, that the monarch's crown was of pure gold. Crowns were sometimes worn in battle, 2 Sam. i. 10; xii. 30.

Figuratively, the crown denotes honour, splendour, and dignity; "The crown is fallen from our head;" Lam. v. 16. That which adds glory and honour to any one is denominated a crown; "In that day shall the Lord of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people;" Isa. xxviii. 5. See also Isa. lxii. 3; Zech. ix. 16.

The "many crowns" (Rev. xix. 12.) which the Redeemer wears, may be thus regarded:—The crown of creation,—the crown of providence,—the crown of redemption,—the crown of universal empire,—the crown of everlasting joy and glory, that joy and glory which will be the result of the salvation of his people—"the joy that was set before him"—the "travail of his soul."

The "crown of twelve stars," Rev. xii. 1, adorning the church, represented under the figure of a woman, is considered by Bishop Newton to be an emblem of her being under the light and guidance of the twelve apostles.

Believers are said to be a crown to the ministers of the gospel, Phil. iv. 1; 1 Thess. ii. 19; meaning that their salvation, stability, usefulness, and final triumph, are to be desired with more avidity than a monarch's crown, and will confer ten thousand times more honour and real joy.

It is used likewise for reward, because conquerors in the public games were crowned, 1 Cor. ix. 25. John speaking of Christ governing the affairs of his church, says, that on his head were many crowns, Rev. xix. 12, noting his absolute sovereignty, and many triumphs. A crown is a sign of victory, Rev. iv. 4.

CROWN.—"Ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away," 1 Pet. v. 4. The military crowns were conferred by the general in the presence of the army; and such as received them, after a public eulogium on their valour, were placed next his person.—Paxton.

CROWN of life—of glory. Strikingly expressive of the glory, felicity, and immortality of heaven, James i. 12; Rev. ii. 10. Crown of righteousness, because purchased by the infinite merit of Christ the Righteous One, and will be given to those whom he makes righteous; 2 Tim. iv. 8. It is also incorruptible, and shall sustain its radiance for ever, 1 Cor. ix. 25.

CROWN.—"And he took their king's crown from off his head, the weight whereof was a talent of gold, with the precious stones," &c.; 2 Sam. xii. 30; 1 Chron. xx. 2. No human being could sustain so great a weight upon his head, 125 lbs. The Targum says, "And there was set in it (the crown) a precious stone, worth a talent of gold." Dr. Adam Clarke, and others, think, if the original mishkalah, be taken for the value, and not for the weight, then all is plain, as the worth of the crown will be about £5075 15s. 7d. sterling. Hence the added words "with the precious stones;" the gold and the jewels were worth a talent of gold.

Some suppose that it was a crown suspended over the head of the monarch. This latter supposition is very probable, for Athenæus mentions several enormous crowns of this sort, which were used by the Ptolemæis in Egypt. This was also a custom in Persia. Sir W. Ouseley, in his "Travels," says:—"We do not find on their medals any two Sassanian kings wearing crowns exactly alike; each probably distinguished himself by choosing one of a particular fashion, whilst the state crown of Persia, which descended through many generations, from its unwieldy form and excessive weight, was worn only on solemn occasions; and was even then suspended over the royal throne by chains of gold." Juvenal speaks of the crown of a Roman prætor, as being sustained over his head by a slave on state occasions.

CROWN of THORNS.—Probably the nabka of the Arabians is the tree which afforded this crown; it is very fit for the purpose, having many small and sharp spines, well adapted to give pain. This plant grows commonly in the East. The branches are pliant, and the leaves resemble the ivy, being of a very deep green. The crown was produced by cruelty, and the design was mockery. They twined it around his head, to pierce, and assimilate him to a crowned king; to indicate scorn and insult; Matt. xxvii. 29.

CRUCIFY.—See Cross. Before crucifixion the criminal was generally scourged with cords; sometimes little bones, or pieces of bones, were tied to these scourges, so that the condemned person might suffer more severely. It was also a custom, that he who was to be crucified should bear his own cross to the place of execution. After this manner we find Christ was compelled to bear his cross; and as he sank under the burden, Simon, the Cyrenian, was constrained to bear it after him and with him, Matt. xxvii. 32.

When the malefactor had carried his cross to the place of execution, a hole was dug in the earth in which it was to be fixed; the criminal was stripped; a stupefying potion was given him; the cross was laid on the ground; he was distended upon it, and four soldiers, two on each side, at the same time were employed in driving four large nails through his hands and feet. After they had deeply fixed and riveted these nails in the wood, they elevated the cross with the sufferer upon it; and, in order to infix it the more firmly in the earth, they let it violently fall into the cavity they had prepared to receive it. This vehement precipitation of the cross must have occasioned a most dreadful convulsive shock, and agitated the whole frame of the malefactor in a dire and most excruciating manner. These several particulars were observed in the crucifixion of our Lord. Upon his arrival at Calvary, he was stripped; the medicated cup was offered to him; he was fastened to the cross; and, while they were employed in piercing his hands and his feet, it is probable that he offered to Heaven that most benevolent and affecting prayer for his murderers, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

Over the cross was usually placed a superscription indicating the offence for which the criminal was put to death. Among the Romans the crucified person remained on the cross till his body fell to the earth by its own weight; but the Jews were allowed to end the sufferings of the criminal before sunset. This was effected sometimes by setting fire to the cross, or by breaking the limbs with a hammer or mallet, or by piercing the body with a lance; John xix. 31—37.

Crucifixion was not only the most ingenious, but it was likewise the most cruel mode of punishment. The sufferings endured by a person crucified are narrated by George Gottlieb Richter, a German physician, in a dissertation on the Saviour's crucifixion.

1. The position of the body is unnatural, the arms being extended back, and almost immovable. In case of the least motion, an extremely painful sensation is experienced in the hands and feet, which are pierced with nails, and in the back, which is lacerated with stripes.

2. The nails being driven through the parts of the hands and feet which abound in nerves and tendons, create the most exquisite anguish.

3. The exposure of so many wounds to the open air brings on an inflammation, which every moment increases the poignancy of the suffering.

4. In those parts of the body which are distended or pressed, more blood flows through the arteries than can be carried back to the veins. The consequence is that a greater quantity of blood finds its way from the AORTA into the head and stomach than would be carried there by a natural and undisturbed circulation. The blood vessels of the head become pressed and swollen, which of course causes pain and a redness of the face. The circumstances of the blood being impelled in more than ordinary quantities into the stomach is an unfavourable one also, because it is that part of the system which not only admits of the blood being stationary, but is peculiarly exposed to mortification. The AORTA not being at liberty to empty in the free and undisturbed way as formerly, the blood which it receives from the left ventricle of the heart is unable to receive its usual quantity. The blood of the lungs, therefore, is unable to find a free circulation. This general obstruction extends its effects likewise to the right ventricle, and the consequence is an external excitement, and exertion, and anxiety, which are more intolerable than the anguish of death itself. All the large vessels about the heart, and all the veins and arteries in that part of the system, on account of the accumulation and presence of blood, are the source of inexpressible misery.

5. The degree of anguish is gradual in its increase, and the person crucified is able to live under it commonly till the third, and sometimes till the seventh day. Pilate, therefore, being surprised at the speedy termination of the Saviour's life, inquired in respect of the truth of it of the Centurion himself, who commanded the soldiers. (Mark xv. 44.) In order to bring their life to a more speedy termination, so that they might be buried on the same day, the bones of the two thieves were broken with mallets; (John xix. 31—37.) And in order to ascertain this point in respect to Jesus, viz., whether he was really dead, or whether he had merely fallen into a swoon, a soldier thrust a lance into his side, (undoubtedly his left side,) but no signs of life appeared (John xix. 13—37). If he had not been previously dead, a wound of this kind in his side would have put a period to his life, as has been shown both by the physician Eschenbach, and by Gruner. The part pierced was the PERICARDIUM; hence lymph and blood flowed out.—Jahn.

Figuratively, Christ is crucified afresh by those who despise, hate, and blaspheme his person or office, or who utterly reject his righteousness and gospel, Heb. vi. 6. The saints are crucified with Christ, because he represented them in his death, and the Spirit imputes Christ's righteousness to them, Gal. ii. 20. Christ's sufferings are called his cross, Eph. ii. 16; Heb. xii. 2.

CRUCIFIXION—hour of.—Mark xv. 25, states it to be the third hour, and John xix. 14, the sixth hour. The latter is an erroneous translation. In ancient Manuscripts, numbers were written not at length, but with numeral letters, it was easy to confound the letter gamma, Γ with the letter sigma Σ. Therefore it ought to be the third hour, which answers to our nine o'clock in the morning, Acts ii. 15. Of this opinion are Griesbach, Semler, Rosenmüller, Doddridge, Whitby, Bengel, Erasmus, &c., &c.

CRUMBS 'which fell from the rich man's table,' Matt. xv. 27; Luke xvi. 21.—At the feasts of the great, they wiped their hands, not with napkins but with the soft and fine part of the bread, and afterwards threw it to the dogs. Hence these were the crumbs alluded to; and we see the force of the words of the woman of Canaan: "the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table."

CRYSTAL.—A glass-like transparent stone, found in rocks, and hence called rock-crystal. It is called crystal from its resemblance to ice, which is the primary import of the original term, Gen. xli. 40; Job vi. 16; Ezek. i. 22. The crystal of the Bible denotes one of the most beautiful of the precious stones, perfectly transparent, resembling the purest glass. The firmament above the cherubim, the sea of glass before the throne of God, the river of life, and the light of the New Jerusalem, are likened to crystal, to mark their purity, clearness, and illuminating influence, Ezek. i. 22; Rev. iv. 6; xxi. 11; xxii. 1.

CUBIT. This word is derived from the Latin cubitus, the lower arm; it is about 18 inches in length; Gen. vi. 16; Num. xxxv. 4; Deut. iii. 11. The sacred cubit was nearly 22 inches in length; Ezek. xliii. 13. Mr. Greaves, who travelled in the East, to ascertain the weights, moneys, and measures of ancient times, found the cubit to have been rather more than 21½ inches.

CUCKOW. A bird mentioned; Lev. xi. 16, and Deut. xiv. 15. It is a different bird from our cuckoo. The Septuagint, Jerome, and Bochart think that the Hebrew word sacaph answers to the sea-gull. It was declared unclean by the law.

CUCUMBER. It is mentioned first in Num. xi. 5. It is well known here. They are very plentiful in the East, especially in Egypt, and much superior to ours; Isa. i. 8.

Celsius and Alpinus describe the Egyptian cucumbers, as more agreeable to the taste and of more easy digestion than the European.

Hasselquist speaks of a cucumber called chate in Egypt, which may be reckoned among those for which the children of Israel longed. It differs not from the ordinary sort, excepting in size, colour, and softness, and in being more palatable and wholesome.

The cooling properties of this fruit render it also a very serviceable medicine in Egypt. Its pulp, beaten up and mixed with milk, is successfully applied to inflammations, particularly those of the eyes.

CUD, the inner part of the throat of cattle, by the help of which they chew their food, when it returns upwards, after being swallowed; Lev. xi. 3—7; Deut. xiv. 6—8.

CUMBER. To trouble, vex. Mere professors of religion are so compared, because they are unfruitful, and hinder the spiritual growth of others; Luke x. 40; xiii. 7.

CUMMIN, a plant of an oily and spicy quality, somewhat resembling fennel; Isa. xxviii. 25; Matt. xxiii. 23. The herbs here mentioned in this last passage were of small value, and it was a question whether they should be tithed; but the Pharisees made these of importance, and neglected the more important requirements of religion—justice, compassion, and piety.

CUNNING, artful, Gen. xxv. 27; Eccl. 31. 4; 30. 35. Crafty, deceitful; Eph. 4. 14.

CUP. The horns of animals were anciently used as drinking vessels. The Jews had cups at a very early period. Joseph caused his "silver cup" (Josephus says gold) to be put into Benjamin's sack; Gen. xlv. 2. Some were of gold, and richly ornamented. A cup is, 1. An emblem of prosperity and happiness; "My cup runneth over;" Ps. xxiii. 5.—2. Of Divine judgments, and man's misery; Isa. li. 17. See also Ps. cxv. 13; 1 Cor. x. 16; Ps. lxxxv. 8; Matt. xx. 22; xxvi. 39. Alluding to the custom of giving good wine to favoured guests; and an intoxicating, stupefying or poisonous mixture to persons condemned to death.

CUPBEARER, "For I was the king's cup-bearer;" Neh. i. 11. This was an office of honour and emolument among the Persians; he filled the king's cup with wine, pouring some into his own hand before he presented it, and drinking it to ascertain that there was no poison in it.

CUP 'of blessing.' The Jews concluded the passover with a cup so called, because they gave thanks for it by blessing God; 1 Cor. x. 16.

CUP, 'a cup of cold water.' A valuable gift in a hot country, where water is so scarce; Matt. x. 42; Mark ix. 41.

In India the Hindoos go sometimes a great way to fetch water, and then boil it, that it may do the less hurt to travellers when hot; and after that they stand from morning till night in some great road, where there is neither pit nor rivulet, and offer it, in honour of their god, to be drunk by all passengers. This necessary work of charity in these hot countries seems to have been practised by the more pious and humane Jews.

CUP 'of salvation.' Ps. cxvi. 13, means thanksgiving, in allusion to the drinking of the wine at the feast of the peace-offering, or to a master of a family, who at the close of a feast or meal, took a cup in his hand, and gave thanks. See Matt. xxvi. 27.

CUP 'of trembling.' To drink of this, or of "the fury of the Lord," is to become the victim of Divine judgments; Luke xxii. 42; John xviii. 11. The punishment of death is called a cup, because a criminal had given to him a cup of drugged liquor to stupefy him

Meaning jugglery, sleight of hand, consulting oracles, &c. "Many of them also which (attempted, or pretended to use) practised curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men," &c.

Their books were books of incantations, and there were certain obscure words and incoherent sentences, which the superstitious used to write upon their girdles, or even imprint upon their feet or other parts of their bodies, under the idea of securing themselves from harm, or of procuring benefits. Fifty thousand pieces of silver would amount to £6250, if the pieces were shekels, being about half-a-crown each in value; but if they were Attic drachms, which is more probable, as these were used by the Greeks, then at nine pence each, the sum would be £1875.

CURSE. "I will not again curse the ground for man's sake. The original words mean, I will not add to curse the ground,—there shall not be another deluge to destroy the whole earth; "for the imagination of man's heart;" that is, ALTHOUGH the imagination of man's heart should be evil, or should they afterwards become as evil as they have been before, I will not destroy the earth by a FLOOD. God has other means of destruction, and the next time he visits the earth by a general judgment, FIRE is to be the agent; 2 Pet. iii. 7.

CURSE 'me this people;' Num. xxii. 6. Some supposed that some men had power by the help of their gods to devote persons, cities, &c. to destruction.

CURSE. "Let them curse it that curse the day, who are ready to raise up their mourning;" Job. iii. 8. This translation is scarcely intelligible. Dr. A. Clarke, translates it thus;—"Let them curse it who detest the day; them who are ready to raise up the leviathan;" that is, Let them curse my birth-day who hate day-light, such as adulterers, murderers, thieves, &c., for whose practices the night is more convenient; and let them curse it who being, like me, wearry of life, are desperate enough to provoke the leviathan, the crocodile, to tear them to pieces.—Coverdale gives a similar version.

Curse of the law; Gal. iii. 13. This implies loss of communion with God, liability to all the miseries of this life, to death itself, and to the pains of hell for ever. Mr. Warburton observes, 'That the law of Moses does not contain any express threatening of an eternal punishment, &c. May be it does not; but it leaves men to die under the curse, already inflicted, which probably amounts to the same thing. It, so to speak, makes bare the arm of Eternal Justice, and unsheaths the thirsty and gleaming sword, but provides no sacrifice, nor sprinkles any paschal blood to expiate and save. O no! "Strike," is the mandate; and had not the blow been intercepted by the Anointed One, it would have fallen in mighty vengeance upon us.

CYMBAL.—A hollow musical instrument made of brass, which, being struck against another of the same kind, made a sharp shrill sound, 2 Sam. vi. 5. Those who have knowledge and eloquence, without true love to God and men, are compared to a tinkling cymbal, 1 Cor. xiii. 1.

CYPRESS.—‘taketh the cypress,’ Isa. xlv. 14. Idols were made of this tree. It is a tall and strong evergreen, and its wood aromatic and durable. Coffins are made of it in the East, and the mummy-cases of Egypt are found to this day made of this wood. Horace says, “Whatever was worthy to be handed down to posterity was preserved in cedar or cypress wood. The imperishable chests which contain the Egyptian mummies were of cypress. The gates of St. Peter’s church at Rome, which had lasted from the time of Constantine to that of Pope Eugene the Fourth, that is to say, eleven hundred years, were made of cypress, and had in that time suffered no decay. Mr. Gadsby, when visiting Smyrna, wrote, “Groves of cypress trees lie on the right; but I do not like them; they are too sombre-looking, too hearse-like; and yet as they surround the respective cemeteries, they are appropriate and noble. It is supposed that Noah’s ark was built of cypress, called in Genesis “gopher wood;” Gen. vi. 14.

CYPRUS, Sy’-prus, fair, fairness.—A large island in the Mediterranean Sea, situated between Cilicia and Syria, Acts xi. 19, 20; xiii. 4; It is so called from the cypress trees with which it abounded. This tree bears a flower of most delightful fragrance. According to Josephus, it was peopled by the descendants of Chittim. The chief deity was Venus, worshipped under the name of Cypris, or Cypria. A famous temple of hers stood on Mount Olympus. Women were consecrated to her service, and by law compelled to prostitute themselves to strangers. It was one of the first places out of Palestine into which Christianity was introduced, one of the happy effects of Stephen’s martyrdom. Asbestos, emeralds, amethysts, and diamonds are found here. Also, iron, lead, zinc, and silver. On account of its great fertility, it was much frequented by merchants. Corn, wine, and oil were found here in abundance. Barnabas was born, and, according to tradition, suffered martyrdom in Cyprus. It now contains a population of about 60,000, mostly Greeks. The island is about 200 miles long and 75 broad.

CYRENE, Sy-re’ne, a wall, coldness.—A country west of Egypt, and the birthplace of Callimachus the poet, Eratosthenes the historian, and Simon, who bore the Saviour’s cross. Many Jews from hence were at the Pentecost, and were converted under Peter’s sermon; Acts ii. The region is now under the Turkish power, and has become almost a desert. It is now called Cai’roan. Matt. xxvii. 32; Acts ii. 1; xi. 20.¹

CYRENEANS, Sy-re’-ne-ans.—Inhabitants of Cyrene, who had a synagogue at Jerusalem; as had those of many other nations. It is said there were four hundred and eighty synagogues in Jerusalem.

CYRENIUS, Sy-re’-ne-us, who governs.—The governor of Syria, Luke ii. 2. He obliged the Jews to pay the tax for which they had been enrolled at the time of it.

CYRUS, Sy’-rus, as miserable.—Son of Cambyses the Persian, and of Mandane, daughter of Astyages, king of the Medes. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 22, 23; Ezra i. 1, 2. His parents were extremely careful of his education; and he early discovered an uncommon sprightliness, sagacity, and courage. About twelve years of age, his mother carried him to her father's court. His generous, obliging, and heroic behaviour, gained him the affections of the Medes. After five years he returned to Persia. About the fortieth year of his life, he assisted Darius the Mede, his uncle, with 30,000 Persian troops. He reduced the revolted Armenians. Neriglissar, king of Babylon, then intended to reduce the kingdom of Media: his huge army bid fair to swallow up Cyrus and his uncle: but this host was routed, and Neriglissar himself slain.

Two years after the reduction of Babylon, Darius died, and Cyrus, having married his only daughter, he fell heir to the crown. Having perhaps read the Jewish prophecies concerning himself, or only determined by the providence of God, he, of his own accord, in the first year of his reign, issued a warrant for the Hebrew captives to return to their country, and rebuild the temple of their God. About seven years after, in the 30th year of his reign over Persia, and 70th of his life, he died A. M. 3475; Dan. vii. 5; viii. 3, 20; ii. 39; Isa. xlvii. 11; xli. 2, 3, 25; xlv. 26—28; xlv. 1—4, 13; Ezra i., ii., iii.

Pliny notices the tomb of Cyrus, at Pasargadæ, in Persia. Arrian and Strabo describe it, and it is said that Alexander the Great offered funeral honours to his shade there; that he opened his tomb, and found, instead of the treasures he expected, a rotten shield, two Scythian bows, and a Persian scimitar. Plutarch records that there was the following inscription upon the tomb:—"O man, whoever thou art, and whencesoever thou comest, (for come, I know, thou wilt.) I am Cyrus, the founder of the Persian empire. Envy me not the little earth that covers my body." Alexander was greatly affected with this inscription, which set before him, in so striking a light, the uncertainty and vicissitude of worldly things. And he placed the crown of gold, which he wore, upon the tomb in which the body lay, wondering that a prince so renowned, and possessed of such immense treasures, had not been buried more sumptuously than if he had been a private person.

He was raised up by God to deliver the Jews from their captivity, and is represented in Dan. viii. 3—20, under the idea of a ram which had two horns, signifying that he should unite in himself the two empires, that of Media and Persia. The prophets frequently foretold the coming of Cyrus. Isaiah (xliv. 28) mentions him by name two hundred years before he was born. Xenophon acquaints us, that he died peaceably in his bed, amidst his friends and servants; and it is certain, that in Alexander's time his monument was shown at Pasagardæ, in Persia. He died, A. M. 3475. Cræsus, the king of Lydia, having the command of a confederated army sent against Cyrus, amounting to 420,000 men, was defeated by the Persian, and pursued to Sardus, his capital, with an army not amounting to half that number. Having taken Sardus, Cyrus commanded the inhabitants to bring him their gold and silver, and by that means save the place from being plundered. Cræsus was the first to obey the mandate of his conqueror; and either this ready compliance, or the fortitude and magnanimity shown by the Greek, who repeated a saying of Solon, importing "that no man is happy till death," so touched the generous heart of Cyrus, that he ever after highly honoured and esteemed him.

DABBASHETH, Dab'-ba-sheth, flowing with honey.—A town belonging to the tribe of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 11.

DABERATH, Dab'-be-rath, word, thing, bee, submissive.—A town situated in the plain of Jezreel, at the foot of Mount Tabor; probably the present Dabirah, or Deburieh, occupies the site. Josh. xix. 12; xxi. 28; 1 Chron. vii. 2.

DAGON, Da'-gon, corn, or fish.—The principal idol of the Philistines, the upper part formed like a man, and the under part like a fish, Judges xvi. 23; 1 Sam. v. 3; Isa. xlvi. 1; &c. Though so signally disgraced at Ashdod, the worship of it was not abandoned till A. M. 3840, when the Jewish leader Jonathan burnt it and its temple. The figures of this god are not all exactly alike, though all combine the human form with that of a fish. It is thought by some to have been the same as the VISINU of the Hindoos. Near Rangoon, in Burmah, is the Shoe Dagoun, or gilt temple of Dagon.

DALAI AH, Da-la-i'-ah, the poor of the Lord.—A descendant of king David; 1 Chron. iii. 24.

DALMANUTHA, Dal-ma-new'-thah, a bucket, leanness, branch.—A place on the western side of the lake of Tiberias, near Magdala; Matt. xv. 39; Mark viii. 10. Both these statements vary; but are reconciled by considering that Dalmanutha was a city and territory within the district of Magdala. One states the city; the other the district.

DALMATIA, Dal-may'-she-a, deceitful lamps.—A part of old Illyria, on the gulf of Venice; it was visited by Titus; 2 Tim. iv. 10.

DALPHON, Dal'-fon, the house of caves, Esth. ix. 7.

DAMAGE, signifies, (1.) Violence. (2.) Diminution of revenues, Dan. vi. 2. (3.) Wrong, 2 Cor. vii. 9. (4.) Danger or loss, Ezra iv. 22; Acts xxvii. 10.

DAMARIS, Dam'-a-ris, a little woman, Acts xvii. 34. A Christian female converted by Paul's preaching at Athens. Some have supposed that she was the wife of Dionysius the Areopagite, but of this there is no direct proof.

DAMASCENES, Dam'-a-seens; 2 Cor. xi. 32. The inhabitants of the city or province of Damascus.

DAMASCUS, Da-mas'-kus, a sack full of blood, similitude of burning.—

The most ancient city on record, having existed in the days of Abraham, whose steward, Eliezer, was a native of this place; Gen. xv. 2. It is situated on the river Barady, and is about 160 miles northwest from Jerusalem. It is now under the government of the pacha of Egypt, and contains 80,000 inhabitants, or, according to a modern traveller, 200,000. Mr. Connor estimates the Jews in Damascus at 2,500, and the nominal Christians at 20,000, "including Greeks, Latins, Catholics, Maronites, Armenians, and Nestorians." It is computed that 50,000 Mahometan pilgrims annually pass through this city from the north, on their way to Mecca.

According to Josephus, Damascus was founded by Uz, the grandson of Shem and the son of Aram, who gave its ancient name to Syria. The rich and level country round, the abundance of rivers and fountains, would at a very early period attract a settled population. In Abraham's time it was a known landmark, and as such is first mentioned in the account of his pursuit of the kings or chiefs of shepherd-tribes who plundered Sodom and captured Lot (Gen. xiv. 15.)

After this the history of the city is a blank, till its name re-appears on the page of Scripture during the reign of David. The king of Damascus, having allied himself with the enemies of Israel, was overthrown, and his territory occupied by Jewish garrisons, and forced to pay tribute (2 Sam. viii. 6.) Damascus quickly threw off the yoke, and its ruler was an "adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon;" (1 Kings xi. 25.) Fifty years later we find Asa forming an alliance with Benhadad king of Damascus, to strengthen himself against the rival prince of Israel; and from this time the Syrian kingdom exerts a fatal influence upon the fortunes of the chosen people. We may judge of the power which Damascus had now attained, by the fact that a son of this Benhadad invaded Israel with thirty-two kings, chiefs, or governors of provinces, in his train (1 Kings xx. 1.) Ahab twice defeated the Syrians, but the third time was slain in battle. Benhadad's armies were led by Naaman, an able general, but he was a leper. His interview with Elisha, and his miraculous cure in Jordan, are related in 2 Kings v. Mark the proud words of the Syrian soldier; "Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?" These rivers still flow on in their ancient channels, as fresh and as pleasant as ever, while countless generations, who once wandered on their beautiful banks, have passed away for ever.

Elisha foretold the calamities that would come upon Israel through Hazael, King of Damascus. Under his reign the Syrian capital reached a high degree of splendour and power, and the spoils of Jerusalem enriched her temples. In the days of Ahaz the city was taken by Tiglath-pileser, its king put to death, &c; 2 Kings xvi. 9. Then as Isaiah had foretold, "the kingdom ceased from Damascus; xvii. 1-3, and Amos i. 4, 5. Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Rome, possessed Damascus in turn. And seven times passed over it, till the confused noise of warriors was calmed for a season, and then a new and stronger power, not carnal, but spiritual, entered. There the gospel made a noble conquest, when Saul of Tarsus, blind and trembling, was led through its gates a willing captive to the faith.

Through ages of persecution, Christianity flourished; but wealth and pomp corrupted its simplicity, and spiritual death fell upon the churches of the East. Damascus fell before the Saracen arms, and its churches were converted into mosques, and this city became the metropolis of the Mohammedan world. From the Himalayas to the Pyrenes, many vassal nations poured their wealth and glory into it. Its princes lavished their treasures in adding to its beauty,—in building palaces and mosques, baths and colleges, and spacious bazaars, heaped up with gums and spices, with the pearls of Ormus, and beautiful costly silks, and the golden brocades of India.

The beauty of the situation of Damascus, its fertility and the extent of its plains, the purity and salubrity of its streams, the famed Pharpar and Abana—together with the lofty and snow-clad peaks of the hoary Antilibanus, which bound the plain to the west, have ever contributed to render it a place of desirable habitation, even under the iron yoke of a government the most destructive of happiness and improvement of any that have oppressed the human race. The salubrity of the atmosphere renders Damascus a kind of Eden, or terrestrial paradise.

The approaches to this city are on all sides grand and picturesque. On descending the heights which bound it, the city itself bursts upon the view, presenting the most striking scenery that can be well conceived—an extensive plain for the most part covered with trees, and interspersed with numerous villages, and immediately in front—Damascus itself, whose marble and gilded minarets, as intermingled with the trees, and contrasted with the terraced roofs of the houses, produce an effect at once singular and beautiful. The western approach is through a succession of gardens which require nearly three hours to traverse—that on the east is equally beautiful; and the gardens that encompass the city are nearly thirty miles round.

An eloquent writer says:—It is a wilderness of bloom, and fragrance, and fruitage, where olive and pomegranate, orange and apricot, plum and walnut, mingle their varied tints of green—a maze of flowering and scented thickets, pierced with wild woodland glades, that are sweet with roses and jasmine blossom, and alive with bubbling springs and rivulets. And close up to the forest edge comes the yellow desert, and around it are the bare mountains, with the snowy crest of Hermon, standing like a sentinel with shining helmet, on the west—"the tower of Lebanon which looketh towards Damascus." The river 'Awaj, the ancient Pharpar, flows through a narrow valley on the south. As with most Eastern cities, the romantic beauty that charms at a distance fades away on a nearer approach. Through narrow and crooked streets you pass by mud and wooden dwellings, filthy caravanserais, tottering mosques, and heaps of rubbish, where lean dogs sleep in the sun. The houses of the Armenian merchants are elegant and richly furnished. The floors are of cedar or marble, and are covered with magnificent Persian carpets; numerous cushions are spread in the middle of the saloon for the family to sit or recline upon. There is a fine wide street formed by the palaces of the agas, the nobility of the land. The fronts of these palaces towards the street are like long prison-walls, with few windows. But the interior is magnificent. The ornaments of many of the saloons alone cost upwards of £1,000 sterling.

Damascus was called, the Eye of the East, the Pearl of Orient, the Garden of the World. Damascus remains the true type of an Oriental city. Caravans come and go from Bagdad and Mecca, as of old; merchants sit and smoke over their costly bales, in dim bazaars; drowsy groups sip their coffee, in kiosks overhanging the river; and all the picturesque customs of the East mingle in the streets. Everywhere fountains murmur, and waters sparkle and foam. For this is the true wealth, the crowning glory of Damascus—her "living waters and streams from Lebanon." The Barrada, the ancient Abana, breaks through a mountain gorge into the plain, and branches over it in several channels; and from these, by numberless ducts and veins, the priceless treasure is everywhere diffused. It is these waters which steep and nourish the rich masses of forest and garden which screen Damascus with unwithering greenness and shade. They bring life and freshness to the thirsty city, and cool its summer sultriness with draughts from the snows of Lebanon. "The private houses of Damascus, simple in external appearance, exhibit in the interior all the splendour and elegance of a refined luxury; the floors are of marble; alabaster and gildings are displayed on every side. In every great house there are several fountains playing in magnificent basins. The smallest house has three water-pipes, one for the kitchen, another for the garden, and a third for washing. The same magnificence is seen in the mosques, in the churches, and in the coffee-houses. The Chan-Verdy, or Coffee-house of Roses, is considered as one of the curiosities of the Levant."

This city was once famous for the manufacture of sabres, which appear to have been made of thin laminæ of iron and steel welded together, so as to unite great flexibility with a keen edge. The art of making them is lost, since Tamerlane carried off the artizans to Persia.

Damascus has also numerous bazaars; some covered and well-built—specialty that for the reception of the caravans, the roof of which is very lofty, supported by pillars, having a large dome in the centre—an immense fountain adorns the stone floor beneath, around which are the warehouses for the various merchandise—the circular gallery above opens into a number of chambers for the lodging of the merchants—the shops are commodious and well furnished with every kind of article for sale, and every trade or art has its particular quarter. In their bazaars are sold the richest silks and brocades of the east, sabres, balsam of Mecca, and the produce of India and Persia. In the city are several manufactories of soap, glass, lamps, satins, cottous, large round tents, cutlery; and on the river are many water mills and tanyards.

There is still a street bearing the name of Straight. It is a mile long, and is so called because it leads direct from the gate to the castle of the pasha. The house of Judas, the tomb of Gehazi, and the house of Naaman, the Syrian, are still pointed out.

DAMNATION, condemnation.—This word is used to denote the final loss of the soul, Matt. xxiii. 33, but it is not always to be understood in this sense in the sacred Scripture. Thus it is said in Romans xiii. 2, "They that resist shall receive to themselves damnation," that is, condemnation, "from the rulers, who are not a terror to good works, but to the evil." Again, in 1 Cor. xi. 29, "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself;" that is, condemnation; exposes himself to severe temporal judgments from God, and to the judgment and censure of the wise and good. Again, Rom. xiv. 23, "He that doubteth is damned if he eat;" that is, is condemned both by his own conscience and the word of God, because he is far from being satisfied that he is right in so doing.

DAN, Dan, judgment, he that judges.—The fifth son of Jacob; Gen. xxx. 6. Dan had only one son, namely, Hushim, Gen. xlvi. 23, nevertheless, when the Israelites went up out of Egypt, this tribe had so multiplied that it consisted of sixty-two thousand seven hundred men capable of bearing arms, besides the women and children, Num. i. 38. The prediction of Jacob concerning Dan, Gen. xlix. 16, 17, refers to the equality of the tribe with the other tribes, and the crafty and subtle disposition of the Danites. They were distinguished by the stratagems which they employed to defeat their enemies, and secure for themselves ample possession; Num. i. 39; Judges xviii. Samson was a Danite, and was remarkably successful in stratagem.

DAN, a city situated in the northern extremity of Palestine, as Beersheba was in the southern. Hence "from Dan to Beersheba," meaning the whole length of the land; Judges xx. 1; 1 Sam. iii. 20. It seems to have been built, at an early period, by the Canaanites, who called it Laish. But the Danites seized it at the end of the wars conducted by Joshua. It was near this place that Chedorlaomer and his allies were defeated by Abraham. And here Jeroboam set up one of his golden calves. During our Lord's humiliation, Philip the tetrarch called this place, or one in the immediate vicinity, Cæsarea Philippi, having previously caused it to be adorned with many fine buildings and costly ornaments, Gen. xiv. 14; Judges xviii. 19, 30, 31; 1 Kings xii. 29; Mark viii. 27.

DANCE.—The Hebrew word translated dance in our version, signifies to leap for great joy, Ps. xxx. 11; Luke xv. 25; or to praise God by playing on a musical instrument, 2 Sam. vi. 14. Ps. cxlix. 2, 3.

DANCED.—'The daughter of Herodias danced;' Matt. xiv. 6. This act was a violation of modesty, as it was not customary for females to dance before men. They were generally kept from public view.

DANDLED. To fondle on the knee; Is. 66. 12. It denotes that the saints derive comfort and delight, and many gracious benefits in the ordinances of the church.

DANIEL, Dan'e-el, judgment of God.—(1.) A son of David by Abigail, and perhaps the same with Chileab, 2 Sam. iii. 3; 1 Chron. iii. 1. (2.) A priest of Ithamar's family, who attended Ezra to Judea, A. M. 3550; and, about twenty years after, probably sealed Nehemiah's covenant of reformation, Ezra viii. 2; Neh. x. 6.

DANIEL, the prophet.—He was a very pious man, an extraordinary prophet, favoured of God, and greatly honoured of men. He was of the tribe of Judah, and probably connected with the royal family; Dan. i. 3—6. His birth-place is not known. When about twelve years old, he and his associates, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, were carried as hostages to Babylon, with other children of the nobility. Three years after this, the king of Judah cast off the yoke of Babylon, and the whole nation soon went into captivity. Daniel was chosen among other "youths in whom there was no blemish," &c.; Dan. i. 4. It was at that time a custom among conquerors to change the name of their captives, especially such of them as were selected to fill any station about the prince's court, and therefore, by order of Ashpenaz, the master of the eunuchs, Daniel was called Belteshazzar; Hananiah was called Shadrach; Mishael, Meshach; and Azariah, Abednego.

Daniel and his companions made great proficiency in all the sciences of the Chaldeans, their wisdom was found greatly to excel that of the wise men of Babylon, and as a token of the royal favour they were admitted to attend the king's person.

Daniel, by Divine inspiration, interpreted a dream which perplexed the king; and he, consequently, rose high in his favour. He made him chief governor in the kingdom, and the chief of all the wise men in Babylon. Called upon to interpret the king's dream, he did not conceal or palliate the truth, Dan. iv. 8, &c. He warned the proud tyrant of his guilt and danger, and exhorted him to speedy repentance. He acted in the same way when called upon to interpret the hand-writing against the wall, ch. v. 13. Darius succeeded Belshazzar. Daniel's consistent and uniform piety encountered opposition. During this reign, a conspiracy was formed to destroy him. The presidents and princes of the empire were offended with his exemplary piety, and fired with envious rage at his preference. They endeavoured to bring some charge against him for mismanagement of public affairs; but here they were completely frustrated. They determined therefore to make his religion the matter of their accusation. "We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God," ch. vi. 5. In an artful manner they persuaded the king to sign a decree, which flattered his vanity, that whosoever should prefer a petition to any God or man, except to the reigning monarch, within the space of thirty days, should be cast into a den of lions. But Daniel followed the dictates of his own conscience, and swerved not from his faith in the only living and true God. He was cast into the lion's den. But his God delivered him. See Dan. vi.

It is not known when and where he died. It is computed that he was above ninety years old, in the third year of Cyrus, and was still in the Persian court.

DANIEL, Book of.—This book embraces both history and prophecy. The first six chapters are historical, and the remainder chiefly prophetic. His prophecies are remarkably clear and explicit. They relate to the four empires, the Babylonian, Persian, Grecian, and Roman, whose rise and fall he predicted. He foretold the exact time of Messiah's advent. In ch. ix. 24—26, the seventy weeks refer to the precise time of Christ's coming. In prophetic language a week of years signifies seven years, (a week reckoned as a year); if, therefore, we multiply 70 by 7, you will find 490 years, the exact space of time between the seventh year of Artaxerxes, when Ezra was commissioned to restore the Jewish state and the thirty-third year of our Lord when he suffered death on the cross, and completed the work of man's redemption.

DANNAH, Dan'-nah.—A city in Palestine, in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 49.

DARA, Day'-rah, generation, house of the shepherd.—A descendant from the patriarch Judah, 1 Chron. ii. 6.

DARDA, Dar'-dah, the dwelling-place of knowledge.—A wise man, an eminent musician; mentioned 1 Kings iv. 31.

DARE, 1 Cor. 6. 1.; 2 Cor. 10. 12. Rom. 5. 7. some would d. to die

DARIUS, Da-ry'-us, he that inquires and informs himself.—The name of several princes; (1.) DARIUS the Mede, Dan. ix. 1; xi. 1. He was the son of Astyages, king of the Medes, and brother of Mandane, the mother of Cyrus, and successor of Belshazzar; Dan. v. 30, 31. Xenophon speaks of him by the name of Cyaxares.—(2.) DARIUS, the son of Hystaspes, supposed to be the Ahasuerus of Scripture, and the husband of Esther. He allowed the Jews to rebuild the temple.—(3.) DARIUS CODOMANUS, of the royal family of the Persians. He was raised to the throne by the famous prince Bagoas. He is that Darius with whom Alexander the Great contended in war, and defeated in three successive battles; Dan. vii. 5, 6; ii. 39, 40; viii. 5—7. But Bessus and Nabazanes, two of his deputy governors, put him under arrest, and retreated with him to Bactria. If Alexander had overtaken them, they resolved to purchase his favour by delivering up their master; but if he refrained from pursuing them, they resolved to murder Darius, and set up for themselves. Being informed of their treachery, Alexander pursued them with the utmost speed; whereupon they stabbed Darius, and left him bleeding in the chariot. Alexander found him, and wept over the monarch thus abused by his servants; and as he expired of the wounds he had received, Alexander sent his corpse to Sisigambis, his queen, that it might be interred in the sepulchres of the kings of Persia.

DARK, Darkness, the absence, or want of natural light. In Scripture it signifies,—(1) Sin and ignorance; John iii. 19; "Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil;" Isa. ix. 2; lx. 2; Eph. v. 8, 11.—"Ye were once darkness, but now ye are light in the Lord." 1 Pet. ii. 9.—(2) The kingdom of Satan, the angel of darkness, 2 Cor. xi. 14.—(3) Troubles and calamities; Isa. viii. 22; Job iii. 4.—(4) Death, Job x. 22. "A land of darkness, as darkness itself; and of the shadow of death, where the light is as darkness." Ps. cvii. 10.—(5) Obscurity, privacy; Matt. x. 27. "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light."—(6) A bewildered state; Isa. l. 10. "Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that walketh in darkness, and hath no light?" Job xxiii. 8, 9. "I go forward, but he is not there," &c. God's face was hidden from him, his glory concealed, and gracious communications were withheld. But all this was designed for his benefit, and he believed it; for "when he hath tried me," says he, "I shall come forth as gold," more valuable, more pure and refined. The good man loses nothing in the furnace but the dross. (7) Forgetfulness, contempt; Eccl. vi. 4.—(8) "Dark sayings of old." Historical facts in the form of parables or enigmas; Ps. lxxviii. 2.

DARKNESS. "Now from the sixth hour, (noon,) there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour;" Matt. xxvii. 45; Mark xv. 33; John xix. 14. From the established doctrine of eclipses, it is evident, that the darkness at our Saviour's crucifixion was supernatural. He suffered on the day that the passover was eaten by the Jews, on which day it was impossible that the moon's shadow could fall on the earth; for the Jews kept the passover at the time of full moon. Nor does this darkness in total eclipses of the sun last above four minutes in any place, whereas the darkness at the crucifixion, continued three hours and overspread at least all the land of Judæa, or extended over a hemisphere.

An ancient author says, it was the greatest eclipse ever seen, since at noon-day the stars were discernible in the heavens. It happened in the fourth year of the 102d Olympiad, which is that of Jesus Christ's death. And Tertullian refers the heathen to their public archives for an account of this darkness.

DARKNESS over the land of Egypt, "even darkness which might be felt," Ex. x. 21. Darkness caused by a thick heavy vapour and mist, which completely intercepted the rays of the sun, and was most sensibly and painfully felt by the Egyptians. See Ex. x. 22, 23; for "they saw not one another." It was impossible to use artificial light, for the atmosphere was so thick and dense with vapour, that lamps or torches, must have been instantly extinguished. For a graphic description of this darkness, see the Apocrypha, Wisdom ch. xvii. 2—19; Asaph says, "He cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation, and trouble, by sending evil angels among them." Ps. lxxviii. 49.

DAVID, Day'-vid, beloved, dear.—The son of Jesse, of the tribe of Judah, and town of Bethlehem. He was born, A. M. 2919. He was the most celebrated king of Israel. His history is recorded in the books of Samuel, the first book of Kings, and part of the first book of Chronicles. From obscurity he was raised to be a king over God's ancient people, the Jews, and to become an illustrious prophet and the progenitor and type of the Messiah; Micah v. 2. The elevation was so astonishing that it filled him with the most grateful admiration till he died. We have an interesting account of his selection as the successor of Saul, in 1 Sam. xvi. 1. &c. During the melancholy of Saul, produced by Divine rejection, David was introduced to his notice as an accomplished musician, and so completely did he gain the affection of the king, that he made him his armour-bearer; 1 Sam. xvi. 14—23. On the recovery of Saul, he returned to his father's house; 1 Sam. xvii. 15. David was well skilled in the use of the sling, and in a war with the Philistines, he accepted the challenge of their champion, Goliath, and slew him, by which heroism Saul conquered his foes. This feat greatly advanced the reputation of David. The king became attached to him, and retained him at court. But envy soon embittered his honours. Envy entered the breast of Saul when he heard the women exclaim, "Saul hath slain his thousands; but David hath slain his ten thousands!" It filled Saul with indignation and David was compelled to flee. Saul, convinced that he was under the Divine protection, gave him his daughter Michal in marriage; though probably he did so from base policy, expecting that his daughter would ensnare him. But he saw that God protected him, and that his daughter loved David. This rendered his hatred and malice towards him still more and more implacable. It was not long after, that the Philistines renewed their hostilities against the Hebrews. David was in the action, and so conspicuously displayed his prudence and bravery, that he was reckoned superior to all the other generals of Saul's army; his fame rose rapidly, and he was held in the highest esteem for his military abilities and conduct; 1 Sam. xviii. 12—30.

David trusted in God, and was successful in all military undertakings. But he had no freedom from persecution. Every servant of the palace had an order to kill him, 1 Sam. xix. 1, &c. Jonathan, the son of Saul, was his friend and comforter, during these perils, 1 Samuel xx. 12, 13. After this time David can only be regarded as an outlaw. He first retired to Nob, and found a friend in Abimelech the high-priest, who gave him the shew-bread which belonged to the table of the Lord, which David readily ate, and in that act he is vindicated by Christ on the ground of necessity; Matt. xii. 3, 4; 1 Sam. xxi. 1—9. He passed on to Achish, king of Gath, and at length out of the territories of the Philistines for fear of discovery. On this occasion he composed the 56th Psalm, and after escaping from Achish, he composed the 34th Psalm.

In his wanderings he was joined by Abiathar the high-priest, Joab, Abishai, Benaiah, eleven principal commanders of the tribe of Gad, "men of tried courage," &c. Soon after he retired to the wilderness of Engedi, whither Saul pursued him with 3000 men, from whom he had a narrow escape, 1 Sam. xxii; Ps. cxlii.

David's character was awfully stained by adultery and murder, in the case of Bathsheba and Uriah; 2 Sam. xi. 15. These were dreadful crimes, and they made him a sinner of the deepest dye; ver. 27. For some time he appeared to have no remorse; his conscience slumbered. To bring him to a sense and confession of his guilt, the prophet Nathan was sent to him by the Lord; and by an artful parable, the king was brought to pronounce his own condemnation, even without intending or so much as suspecting it, 2 Sam. xii. How deeply David repented, and how truly he bewailed his sin, may be seen by consulting the fifty-first Psalm, which was penned on this occasion. Those who would profit by David's unhappy conduct, may read with advantage, 1 Cor. x. 12; Rom. xi. 20; 1 Tim. vi. 17. Nathan foretold that David's house should be filled with blood, and his wives abused in the sight of the world, as a punishment for this offence, 2 Sam. xii. 11. He was sorely punished in the discords and profigacy of his family. His worst foes were of his own household. Tamar, Amnon, Absalom, are names associated with infamous crimes. A daughter disgraced and ruined, and the instrument of her ruin her brother; that incestuous brother murdered by his brother; that murderer a traitor against his own father, and perishing in battle fighting against him. Who can wonder that David's heart bled, and that he sighed for a resting-place? "O that I had wings like a dove! for then would I flee away, and be at rest: I would haste me from the windy storm and tempest." At length, full of years and infirmities, he placed Solomon on the throne, notwithstanding Adonijah was his elder brother; established the order to be observed in the worship of God in the temple, which Solomon was to build; and died at the age of seventy, of which he reigned forty years, A. M. 2990; after having reigned in Hebron seven years and a half, and in Jerusalem thirty-three, 1 Kings ii. 10, 11. The term David is sometimes used by the prophets to denote the Messiah: see Ezek. xxxiv. 23; Hos. iii. 5.

DAVID, 'a man after God's own heart,' 1 Sam. xiii. 14. Infidels are sarcastic respecting this phrase. But the scriptures never sanction his crimes.—He was a man after God's own heart, in his strict attention to the law and worship of God; in his perpetual recognition of Jehovah alone as the king of Israel, in never attempting to alter his laws, or to change in the least degree, the Israelitish constitution. In nearly all his public official conduct, he acted according to the Divine Mind, and fulfilled the will of his Maker; See 1 Sam. ii. 35, in illustration. The above expression is never used in reference to his private or personal moral conduct.

David's treasures are said to have been incredible, viz: 80 millions sterling, 1 Chron. xxix. 4—7. It is probable that the talent mentioned in the passage was the Syriac talent, according to which the amount collected by David would be £7,087,791, a sum not impossible when we consider the large amount of gold and silver collected by David and his princes, in their successful wars with the Philistines, Moabites, Amalekites, &c., &c.

DAVID for Christ, Ps. 89. 3; Jer. 30. 9; Ezek. 34. 23, 24, and 37. 24, 25; Hos. 3. 5; Is. 55. 3.

DAVID. "How glorious was the king of Israel to-day, who uncovered himself," &c., 2 Sam. vi. 20. We are not to suppose that David could be naked, as the text would seem to imply, for he had on a robe and an ephod, 1 Chron. xv. 27. These were priestly garments, and very close; Ex. xxviii. 32; xxxix. 23, so that no part of the body could be seen. He put off his regal robes, that he might appear in part of the priest's dress. Michal spoke passionately and contemptuously; because David had expressed great zeal and earnestness, she suggested that he had behaved in an indecent manner, and as he had put off his royal robes, she would represent it as if he had improperly stripped himself. A similar case occurs in 1 Sam. xix. 24. Saul "stripped off his clothes also," &c., that is, he threw off his royal robes or military dress, retaining only his tunic.

DAY. That space of time in which the earth performs one rotation upon its axis. It is either natural, astronomical, civil, or prophetic; and its period of commencement, with different nations, has been at noon, midnight, sun-rising, and sun-set. The Jews reckoned their days to begin at sunset, and to continue till the following sunset. Hence Moses places the evening before the morning, Gen. 1. 5, 8, 13, 19, 23, 31; Ps. 55. 17; Lev. xxiii. 5, 32.

DAY, prophetic, a year, Ezek. iv. 6; Dan. ix. 24; Rev. xi. 3. Also an appointed season, Is. xxxiv. 8; and a state of evangelical knowledge, 1 Thess. v. 5.

DAYS, "last days," sometimes the end of the world; but the following passages mean the time of the gospel dispensation; Isa. ii. 2; Micah iv. 1; Acts ii. 17; Heb. i. 2; 2 Pet. iii. 3.

DAYS 'long upon the earth.' Not applicable to individuals, but it was an assurance to the whole nation, that national obedience would secure them possession of the land from generation to generation; Ex. xx. 12.

DAYS, 'after three days.' The Jews reckoned three days as entire, though only one complete day occur red between the two parts of days, Matt. xii. 40.

DAYS, 'length of days in her right hand,' Prov. iii. 16. Alludes to an ancient custom of numbering things and men's ages by the hand and fingers, beginning with the left hand, and when they come to a hundred going on to the right. So that in Wisdom's right hand might be said to be length of days, few persons arriving to that number.

DEACON, is a word derived from the Greek, and signifying servant.

The cause and manner of the appointment of deacons are clearly recorded

Acts vi. 1—6. Paul specifies their duty as consisting in "serving tables,"

Phil. i. 1. The qualifications required for this office are laid down 1 Tim. iii.

8—12. If married, they were to have but one wife; in opposition to the polygamy then common; and the wife must be "grave, not slanderous, sober, faithful in all things." It is thought that there were in the primitive churches, females chosen to be deaconesses, who, as Calmet says, "assisted females to dress and undress at baptism, visited those of their own sex in sickness, and when imprisoned for their faith, &c. They were always persons of advanced age, and were appointed to the office by the imposition of hands." It is thought that such sisters are alluded to 1 Tim. v. 9—18; and that Phœbe was such a one; Rom. xvi. 1.

"DEAD FLIES cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour;" Eccl. x. 1. In the East there is in insects an acrid volatile salt, which, mixed with perfumes, causes them to ferment, and turn to putrefaction. So an imprudent and foolish act spoils the character of him who has the reputation of being wise and good. How many, in an unguarded moment, have damaged the character which before was amiable.

DEAD SEA.—The same as the Lake Asphaltites, in the south-east part of Canaan. It is called the "Salt Sea," Gen. xiv. 3; the "Sea of the Plain," Deut. iii. 17. The Arabs call it "Birket Lut," the Sea of Lot. It covers a once beautiful and well watered plain, on which Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, were situated. Its waters are clear when taken up in a glass, but very bitter, much more salty than common sea water, and of greater specific gravity, so that a man may swim in it with great ease. The air round the lake seems loaded with sulphureous and bituminous vapours, which prevent vegetation, and give that deadly aspect, which all travellers remark. The mountains on each side are about eight miles apart, but the expanse of water is that part does not exceed six in breadth. This lake receives the river Jordan, the river Arnon, and the brook Kidron, besides other rivulets, and has no visible communication with the sea.

The extreme wickedness of the inhabitants of Sodom, &c., kindled the anger of God against them; and he made them a signal and lasting monument of his vengeance. For "the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven; and he overthrew those cities and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of those cities, and that which grew upon the ground." "And Abraham looked towards Sodom and Gomorrah, and towards all the land of the plain: and beheld, and lo, the smoke of the country went up like the smoke of a furnace," Gen. xix. 24, 25, 27.

The lightnings which fell from heaven were, perhaps, joined by volcanic eruptions and earthquakes; and, as the soil abounded with bitumen or pitch, it is probable that the ground caught fire, and completed the work of destruction. The fact is certain; and the awful effects remain to this day. The beautiful and fertile plain of Siddim, which had formerly been pleasant as paradise itself, was changed into an arid and barren heath; so strongly impregnated with salt as to be unfit for any purpose of cultivation, and exhibiting, at every step, marks of conflagration. Both ancient and modern travellers agree in describing it as abounding with cinders and burnt rocks, and the soil composed of ashes, and covered with pebbles which contain so much sulphur, as to burn like a candle. The Jordan also, was arrested in its course by those convulsions, overflowed the level country, and gradually formed a lake, sixty or seventy miles in breadth; which receives the Jordan, the Arnon, and several other considerable streams, though it has no visible outlet.

DEATH is the separation of the soul from the body. It is styled, in Scripture language, a departure out of this world to another; 2 Tim. iv. 7; a dissolving of the earthly house of this tabernacle; 2 Cor. v. 1; a going the way of all the earth; Josh. xxiii. 14, a returning to the dust; Eccl. xii. 7; a sleep; John xi. 11. Death may be considered as the effect of sin; Rom. v. 12; yet, as our existence is from God, no man has a right to take away his own life, or the life of another; Gen. ix. 6. Satan is said to have the power of death; Heb. ii. 14, not that he can at his pleasure inflict death on mankind, but as he was the instrument of first bringing death into the world; John viii. 44. Death, occurs only once, Heb. ix. 27; it is certain, Job xiv. 1, 2. powerful and terrific, called the king of terrors, Job xviii. 14. uncertain as to the time, Prov. xxvii. 1, universal, Gen. v. throughout; (mark the declaration respecting each person)—“and he died.” It is necessary, that God's justice may be displayed, and his mercy manifested: desirable to the righteous; Luke ii. 28—30. The fear of death is to a guilty conscience terrible; but to a good man it should be obviated by the consideration that death is the termination of every trouble; that it puts him beyond the reach of sin and temptation; that God has promised to be with the righteous, even to the end; Heb. xiii. 5; that Jesus Christ has taken away the sting; 1 Cor. xv. 54. and that it introduces him to a state of endless felicity; 2 Cor. v. 8.

DEBASE. To lessen, degrade; Is. 57. 9.

DEBATE, to confer or dispute; Prov. xxv. 9. God debates with his people when he reproves and corrects them; Isa. xxvii. 8. "In measure, when it shooteth forth, thou wilt *de-*bate with it." Rom. i. 29. It signifies contention. "Full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity."

DEBIR, De'-ber, called Kirjath-sepher, a word, an oracle.—A city near Hebron; Josh. x. 39; xii. 13. The first inhabitants of it were giants, of the race of Anak. A town beyond Jordan; Josh. xiii. 26.—A king of Eglon; Josh. x. 3.

DEBORAH, Deb'-o-rah, a word, a bee.—Rebekah's nurse; Gen. xxxv. 8. Also a distinguished female. She was the wife of Lapidoth, and because she was endowed by the prophetic spirit she professed and exercised all the functions of a chief judge in Israel. She dwelt between Ramah and Bethel, under a palm, and the Israelites came up to her for judgment. No eminent prophetess had preceded her, except Miriam; and she was then the first female appointed by God to rule his people. How well she was qualified, and how faithfully she discharged the duties of ruler, her actions fully proved. Her triumphal ode is one of the most sublime on record; Judg. iv. 5.

DEBTOR, one that owes any thing to another. As the creditor has a right to exact payment from the debtor, so God has a right to inflict punishment on the guilty. Thus men are debtors to God by trespassing against him: and their neighbours whom they injure, wrong, or offend. Being a "debtor to the whole law," Gal. v. 3, means, being obliged to keep the whole law of Moses, as the condition of eternal life, and so virtually disclaiming all pardon by Christ. The apostle Paul says, he was "a debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians;" that is, bound by his office to preach the gospel to all nations.

DEBT, Rom. 4. 4; Matt. 6. 12. 18. 27.

Rom. 1. 14. & 8. 12. & 15. 27; Luke 7. 41; Matt. 6. 12.

DECAPOLIS, De-kap'-o-lis, ten cities.—A district of Judea, situated partly on both sides of the Jordan. It is so called because it contained ten principal cities as the name implies. They lay on both sides of the Jordan, and appear to have been the residence of numerous foreigners; Matt. iv. 25, &c. Mark v. 20.

DECAY, to grow less, weaker; Job 14.

11; Neh. 4. 10. Cities and houses are decayed, when broken down, and in a ruinous condition; Ecc. 10. 18; Is. 44. 26.

DECEASE, to die a natural death; Matt. 22. 25. Death; Luke 9. 31.

DECEIT, fraud, guile, (1) Villainous and unjust conduct, carried on under a fair show, Ps. 10. 7; 38. 3. (2) Fair pretences and devices, calculated to impose upon and deceive men, Ps. 38. 12.

Job 18. 7; 2 Cor. 4. 2.

DECEIVE, to deal fraudulently, Gen. xxxi. 7; Lev. vi. 2. To mislead; Deut. xi. 16; Isa. xliiv. 20. To allure, Job xxxi. 9. The Lord deceives false prophets, when he delivers them over to the delusions of their hearts, and frustrates their predictions; Ezek. xiv. 9; Jer. xx. 7.

DECEIVED. "O Lord, thou hast deceived me, and I was deceived," Jer. xx. 7.—This translation is harsh and irreverent. Meeting with an ill return, for the discharge of his office, the prophet appeals to God, that it was not his own ambition which led him to it, but only obedience to the Divine command, "Thou hast over-persuaded me, and I was over-persuaded."

DECEIVE, 2 Kings 4. 28, & 18. 29.

DELIVER, deliverer, and deliverance. To give up, Gen. xl. 13; Ex. v. 18. To rescue from danger or distress; Gen. xxxii. 11. Deliverer is one of the glorious titles by which the glorious Captain of our salvation is distinguished; Rom. xi. 26. "There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and he shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." The deliverer being the son of David, he is said by the apostle to come out of Zion, the city of David, and the seat of his kingdom; Ps. xiv. 7; 1 Thess. i. 10. "Even Jesus which delivered us from the wrath to come." The Redeemer was anointed to "preach deliverance to the captives;" Luke iv. 18. The deliverance from Egypt, from Babylon, &c. were all typical of this great deliverance; and Moses, Joshua, Gideon, and all the other Old Testament deliverers, were types of Jesus Christ in his great office; Josh. x. 12; Judges iii. 9, 15; 2 Sam. xxii; Psal; xl. 17; xlv. 4. Jesus Christ, by his death, delivers those who through fear of death were all their life-time subject to bondage; Heb. ii. 15, 16.

DESCRIBE, to declare, or show the characteristic marks of any person, place, or thing; Josh. 18. 4; Judg.

8. 14; Rom. 4. 6.

DESCRY. "The house of Joseph sent to descry Bethel," means to spy, or to view Bethel; Judg. 1. 23.

DESERT.—Means a country that is rarely or never sown or cultivated; which, though it yields no crops of corn or fruit, yet affords herbage for the grazing of cattle, and occasionally fountains or rills of water. Nabal, who had 3000 sheep, and 1000 goats, dwelt in the wilderness; 1 Sam. xxv. 2. There were several deserts in Canaan, and scarcely a town without one. Some were dry and barren, others beautiful and abounding in good pasture. The desert of Arabia, in which the Israelites wandered forty years, is particularly called "the desert," Exod. v. 3; Ps. lxxviii. 40; cvi. 14; John vi. 31. There was also the desert of Sin, or Zin; Exod. xvi. 1; Num. xx. 1. There was, moreover, the desert of Sinai, which lay at the foot of the mountain of that name: there the people encamped a long time, and received the greatest part of those laws which were delivered them by the ministry of Moses, Exod. xix. 2. The desert or wilderness of Judea, in which John the Baptist preached, lay in the country parts which lay about Jericho, Matt. iii. 1.—A sinful state, the state of the Heathen, &c., &c., are described by the word desert; Isa. xxxv. 1; xliii. 19, 20; li. 3.

DESERTS.—Applied to hilly regions, &c., thinly inhabited; Luke i. 80; Matt. iii. 1.

DESERT.—"Behold he is in the desert," Matt. xxiv. 26. Christ refers to the false Christs, and false prophets, mentioned ver. 24. These impostors generally led their people into the desert places, pretending to be Christs, and to work wonders there. Among these were Simon Magus, Dositheus, Barcocab, who pretended to vomit flames; some were so dexterous in imitating miracles, that they deceived many.

DESERT 'of the sea,' Isa. xxi. 1. This was predicted of Babylon, and such is the appearance of that country now.

DESERT, Ex. 3. 1. & 19. 2; Num. 20. 1; Is. 21. 1. & 35. 1. & 40. 3. & 43. 19. & 51. 3; Jer. 25. 24. & 50. 12; Ezek. 47. 8; Matt. 24. 26.

DESERVE.—To merit good or bad; Ezra ix. 13; Job xi. 6; Psalm xxviii. 4; 2 Tim. iv. 14; Rev. xviii. 6.

DESIRE.—Affection, love; Dan. xi. 37; Song vii. 10.—Delight in life; Eccl. xii. 5.—Longing for promised blessings; Psalm cxlv. 5, 19.—Ardent desire for the means of grace; Psalm xxvii. 4.—Hope; 1 Sam. ix. 20.—Sinful affections, Eph. ii. 3.—Christ was called the Desire of all nations, because he was the promised Redeemer, and earnestly expected; Hag. ii. 7.

DEUEL, De-yew'-el, the knowledge of God.—The son of Eliasaph; Num.
 i. 14.

DEUTERONOMY.—The Greek
 name of the fifth book of Moses, signifying the "second law," a repetition of laws before given. It is compounded of DEUTEROS, second, and NOMOS, law. Its Hebrew name is Deberim, "words or oracles." That part of this book which mentions the death of Moses was added by inspired penmen afterward. The period of time is less than two months. It recapitu-lates, and explains the law, and forcibly urges the people to obedience.
 Of the majesty of the book, and the impressiveness of its records, a calm and thoughtful perusal can alone convey any just idea.

DEVICE. A curious piece of workmanship; 2 Chron. ii. 14; a crafty or subtle project; Ps. x. 2; 2 Cor. ii.
 11; Ecc. ix. 10; Job v. 12; Ps.
 xxxiii. 10; Prov. i. 31, & xii. 2, &
 xiv. 17, & xix. 21; Jer. xviii. 11, 12, 18.

DEVIL.—A fallen angel, or infernal spirit; the implacable enemy and tempter of the human race, especially believers whom he seeks to devour;
 1 Pet. v. 8. He is called Abaddon in Hebrew, Apollyon in Greek, that is, a Destroyer, Rev. ix. 11. Angel of the bottomless pit—Prince of this world, John xii. 31. Prince of darkness, Eph. vi. 12. A roaring lion, and an adversary, 1 Pet. v. 8. A sinner from the beginning, 1 John iii. 8. Beelzebub, Matt. xii. 24. Accuser, Rev. xii. 10.

John viii. 44. Leviathan, Isa. xxvii.
 1. Lucifer, Isa. xiv. 12. Murderer, John viii. 44. Serpent, Isa. xxvii. 1.
Satan, Job ii. 6. Tormentor, Matt.
 xviii. 34. The god of this world, 2
Cor. iv. 4. He is compared to a dog, Ps. xxii. 16. Fowls. Matt. xiii. 4. A fowler, Ps. xci. 3. Lightning, Luke x. 18. Locusts, Rev. ix. 3. A wolf, John x. 12. An adder, Ps. xci. 13. These names are given to the prince of the devils, who, perhaps, was the first leader in that grand rebellion against God, whereby they all fell into a rooted enmity against holiness, and into endless horror, blackness, and despair, Jude i. 6. Devil is put for, (1.) idols, Ps. cvi. 37; 2 Chron. xi. 15. (2.) A wicked man, John vi. 70. (3.) Persecutors, Rev. ii. 10.

The word comes from the Greek, Diabolos, which signifies a calumniator, or accuser, who accuseth us before God, day and night, Rev. xii. 9, 10. He is likewise called Belial, which is a Hebrew word, and signifies one who is good for nothing, a libertine, one that is extremely wicked, 2 Cor. vi. 15. "What concord hath Christ with Belial?" Also Satan, which signifies an adversary, or an accuser in a court of justice, Job ii. 1. "Satan came also among them." He is likewise called the old serpent, Rev. xii. 9, because he conveyed himself in the serpent, when he tempted Eve; and in respect of his serpentine disposition; his poison is always ready, as in a fountain; and runneth continually, as in full streams, both against Christ, and against all his members for his sake. He is also crafty, wise, and subtle as a serpent.

DEVILS.—A common name for evil angels; but the original is demons. The Hebrew, or Greek Scriptures, have no word answering to devils; they only speak of one being, under the appellation of "the devil," the great enemy of God and man. Demons, in the language of the heathen, were imaginary beings, in power superior to men, and inferior to the chief gods; indeed the original word is rendered gods in Acts xvii. 18. They were objects of worship, and they who feasted in the temples, professed to feast or to have fellowship with them. To this Paul alludes in 1 Cor. x. 20, 21

7. & 17. 4. 17. & 22. 12.

DEW of HEAVEN, Gen xxvii. 39.—The Dews in the East are so copious, especially in summer, that the earth is deeply soaked with them, and in the morning appears as if rain had fallen during the night. It sustains vegetation in districts where rain seldom falls. Hence in those climates the dew of heaven was a signal blessing.

DEW.—'Early dew,' Hosea vi. 4. The dews of the night frequently wet to the skin; but by the heat of the sun they are soon entirely evaporated.

DEW.—'As the dew unto Israel,' Hosea xiv. 5. The dews in the East are a great blessing to the earth; having, when putrified in a vessel, a black sediment like mud at the bottom; the sulphur which is found in the dew, may be the chief ingredient of the cement of the earth, sulphur being very glutinous, as nitre is dissolvent. Dew has both these important qualities.

DEW.—Power of Christ in the resurrection, Isa. xxvi. 19.

DEW, Gen. 27. 28; Deut. 32. 2.
Ps. 110. 3. hast the d. of thy youth
Is. 26. 19. thy d. is as the d. of herbs
Hos. 6. 4. goodness is as the early d.
14. 5. I will be as the d. to Israel
Mic. 5. 7. Jacob—as d. from Lord

DIADEM.—A royal head dress, rather different from the crown, and worn by queens. A prince sometimes puts on several diadems. Ptolemy having conquered Syria, entered Antioch in triumph, with the diadem of Asia and Egypt on his head. John saw on Christ's head "many crowns," &c.; Rev. xix. 12; xii. 3. See Job xxix. 14; Isa. xxviii. 5; lxii. 3; Ezek. xxi. 26.

DIAL, 2 Kings xx. 11; Isaiah xxxviii. 6—8.—The word means degrees, or steps, or ascents. In the latter text the sun is said to have gone back; but in the former the shadow, and not the sun, thus appeared. This miracle may therefore have consisted in a supernatural refraction of light. "By horizontal refraction, the sun appears above the horizon when he is actually below it. By imparting supernaturally increased powers of refraction of light to the atmosphere, the rays go back to an equal extent to the new power given." The steps were perhaps those of the palace, which Ahaz had built. Jenour conjectures that as Hezekiah lay on his couch, he saw before him the steps of his father's palace, the shadow of which had passed upon ten of them, and that at his request it turned off, and a full light was thrown upon them, as at noon.—"This miracle was known at Babylon; probably the going back of the shadow was visible there, and in all the world; 2 Chron. xxxii. 31. Herodotus says that the historians of Egypt speak of the sun appearing four times in an unusual manner, twice when he set, and twice when he rose, which perhaps may allude to the miracles of Joshua and Isaiah. A similar phenomenon is said to be noticed in the records of China."

Vitringa observes,—"The Jewish doctors, and ancient Christian fathers, were of opinion that the sun itself went backward. All, however, that the Scripture requires of us is, to admit the fact of the shadow going backward; and this may be accounted for without supposing any uncommon motion, either in the sun or in the earth. Nothing more is required to effect this phenomenon than a reflection of the solar rays; which might have been caused by an alteration in the density of the atmosphere. Besides, the original mentions only the beams, or shadow of the sun, and not that luminary itself. But this endeavour to account for the phenomenon by no means lessens the miracle; for we assign the alteration of the atmosphere to the immediate and extraordinary operation of Providence; and every extraordinary interposition of Providence is essentially and properly a miracle." Vossius also remarks, that neither in the book of Kings, nor in the prophecy of Isaiah, is the sun said to have gone backward, but only the shadow; and this, he supposes

DIAMOND.—The most valuable of all gems, noted for its extreme hardness, purity, and splendid appearance, Zech. vii. 12; Jer. xvii. 1. It is generally called adamant in Scripture. Diamond is the purest carbon known, and will burn like charcoal if exposed to great heat. The value of this and all other precious stones, is estimated by carats. A carat is four grains. The larger a diamond is, the greater in proportion is its value. One is mentioned, belonging to Russia, worth 12 tons of gold! Small pieces of diamond are reduced to powder, which is of the greatest importance to lapidaries, as without it the agate and many other jewels would be of little value, no other substance being hard enough to operate upon them. With this powder, rock crystal is cut into leaves, and cut and polished for spectacles and other optical instruments. In their natural state, diamonds are not brilliant, being covered with an earthy crust.

DIANA, Dy-ay'-nah, luminous, perfect.—A celebrated goddess of the heathens, to whom a magnificent temple was dedicated at Ephesus. She was of the number of the twelve superior deities, and was called by the several names of Hebe, Trivia, and Hecate. In the heavens she was the moon; upon earth she was called Diana; but the infernal Diana was distinguished by the name of Hecate or Trivia; in which character she was invoked by enchantments, and represented as a fury, holding instruments of terror in her hands, and grasping cords, swords, serpents, or burning torches. The appellation of trivia or triformis, appears to have been derived from the custom of representing her sometimes with three bodies, or three heads.

The "great Diana of the Ephesians" was, according to Pliny, a small statue of ebony, made by one Canitia, though believed by the vulgar to have been sent down from heaven by Jupiter. The temple was several times destroyed and rebuilt, until it was finally burnt by the Goths, in the year 260. Diana is said to have been worshipped in Palestine, in the days of Isaiah and Jeremiah, under the name of Meni, or the goddess of the months, or the moon. But the city of Ephesus was chiefly devoted to the worship of Diana, and a considerable traffic was there carried on, in making little models of the temple with the image of the goddess enshrined in them, which the silversmiths sold to foreigners. Hence the clamour of the inhabitants, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians;" Acts xix.

DIBLAIM, Dib'-la-im, a cluster of figs.—Gomer's daughter, whom Hosea married, Hosea i. 3.

DIBLATH, Dib'-lath, paste of dry figs.—A town beyond the Jordan, at the foot of Mount Nebo, or Pisgah; Ezek. vi. 14. Perhaps the same as Riblah, 2 Kings xxv. 6.

DIBON, Dy'-bon, understanding, abundance of building.—A city given to the tribe of Gad, Num. xxxii. 3, 34.

DIBON-GAD, Dy'-bon-gad, abundance of sons, happy and powerful.—A place mentioned Num. xxxiii. 45.

DIBRI, Dib'-ry.—A descendant of Gad, Lev. xxiv. 11.

DIDYMUS, Did'-e-mus, a twin.—The surname of Thomas, John xxi. 2.

DIE, signifies, (1.) the soul's departure from the body, Gen. xxxv. 18. (2.) To be astonished, 1 Sam. xxv. 37. (3.) To be broken off from carnal hope, Rom. vii. 9. (4.) To suffer, John xix. 7; Acts xxv. 11. (5.) To perish eternally, John xi. 26. (6.) The soul's loss of God, Gen. ii. 17. "For in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die."—See Death.

DINAH, Dy'-nah, judgment, who judges. The daughter of Jacob and Leah.

She was seduced by Shechem, son of Hamor; he was afterwards slain by Simeon and Levi, through treachery. At this conduct Jacob was much grieved; Gen. xxxiv. See Gen. xlix. 5. Had Dinah been more discreet and select in her associations, such evil would not have occurred.

DINHABAH, Din'-na-bah, she gives judgment.—A city of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 32.

DINE, DINNER.—Gen. xliii. 16; Prov. xv. 17.

DIONYSIUS, Dy-o-nish'-e-us, divinely touched.—A learned member of the Areopagus at Athens, and a convert of Paul, Acts xvii. 34.

Being at Heliopolis, in Egypt, at the time of Christ's death, on observing the supernatural darkness, he exclaimed, "Either the god of nature suffers, or sympathises with one who suffers." This was before his conversion. According to ecclesiastical history, he became the first bishop of Athens, and that, after great labour and suffering, he was burnt to death as a martyr in the same city, A. D. 95.

DIOTREPES, Dy-ot'-re-feeze, nourished of Jupiter.—A worthless domineering man at Corinth. He was a consequential fellow, and thought himself superior to the apostles; he depreciated all but himself; 3 John 9.

DIPPETH 'his hand with me in the dish,' Matt. xxvi. 23.—After washing hands, the easterns take their food out of the same dish with their fingers. Judas must have sat near Christ, and this, in the east, being a privilege allotted to dearest friends, his treachery was greatly aggravated, Mark xiv. 20.

DISPENSATION.—The ministry of the word of life, 1 Cor. ix. 17. "A dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me," Eph. iii. 2; i. 10. "In the dispensation of the fulness of times." By this some understand the last dispensation of religion, in which all the former dispensations terminated; and which was erected when the time fixed for it by the prophets was fully come. The word, according to Macknight, signifies the plan which the master of a family, or his steward, hath established for the management of a family. Also a plan formed for the management of any business. In the above passage, it means the plan which God had formed for accomplishing the salvation of believers, by gathering them together into one Church, under Christ as their head or governor.

The superiority of the Christian dispensation, as Dr. Watts observes, appears, if we consider, (1.) that it contains the fairest and fullest representation of the moral law; and which is more particularly explained here than in any of the former dispensations. (2.) In this dispensation, the gospel, or covenant of grace, is revealed more perfectly and plainly than ever before; not in obscure expressions, in types and carnal metaphors, but in its own proper form and language. (3.) The rites and ceremonies under this dispensation, are preferable to those in former times, and that in this respect, they are fewer, clearer, and much more easy. (4.) The Son of God, who was the real mediator through all former dispensations, has condescended to become the visible mediator of this dispensation. (5.) This dispensation is not confined to one family, or to one nation, or to a few ages of men, but it spreads through all the nations of the earth, and reaches to the end of time. (6.) The encouragements and persuasive helps which Christianity gives to fulfil the duties of the covenant, are much superior to those which were enjoyed under any of the former dispensations.

DISPERSE, signifies, (1) to place or dispose of; 2 Chr. 11. 23. (2) To go throughout; 1 Sam. 14. 34. (3) To scatter abroad; Esth. 3. 8; Is. 11. 12; John 7. 35; 11. 52; Ezek. 12. 15. (4) To be bountiful and liberal to the poor; Ps. 112. 9. "He hath dispersed; he hath given to the poor." 2 Cor. 9. 9.

DISPERSED among the Gentiles, John vii. 35; referring to the multitudes of Jews who were in Egypt, Asia Minor, Greece, Rome, &c.

DISPLEASE, signifies, (1) doing harm to another; Judg. 15. 3. (2) To be angry; Gen. 31. 35. (3) The wrath of God against sin; Zech. 1. 2; Ps. 60. 1; Deut. 9. 19; Gen. 38. 10; 2 Sam. 11. 27; 1 Chr. 21. 7; Is. 59. 15; Mark 10. 14; 1 Kings 1. 6. Deut. 9. 19. hot or sore d. Ps. 2. 5. & 6. 1. & 38. 1.

DISSOLVE, signifies, (1.) to ruin or lay waste, Nah. ii. 6. (2.) To explain deep and mysterious things, Dan. v. 16. (3.) To melt away, Job xxx. 22. (4.) To deprive of life, 2 Cor. v. 1. The dissolution of the world is an awful event, which we have reason to believe, both from the Old Testament and the New, will certainly take place. (1.) It is not an incredible thing, since nothing of a material nature is formed for perpetual duration. (2.) It will doubtless be under the direction of the Supreme Being, as its creation was. (3.) The soul of man will remain unhurt amidst this general desolation. (4.) It will be an introduction to a greater and nobler system in the government of God, 2 Pet. iii. 13. (5.) The consideration of it ought to have a great influence on us while in the present state. 2 Pet. iii. 11, 12. "Seeing then that all things shall be dissolved," &c.

Tim. ii. 15. Some think it alludes to the priest's dissecting the victim, and separating the parts properly, as some were to be placed on God's altar, and others to be given to the partakers of the sacrifice. — Or to guiding the plough aright, and making straight furrows at regular distance. Perhaps the figure may be taken from the distribution made by a steward, in delivering to each person under his care such things as his office and their their necessities require.

DIVINATION. This comprises the pretended arts by which the ancients endeavoured to penetrate futurity, and the secrets of the invisible world; See Deut. xviii. 9, 14.

DIVORCE. The public dissolution of the marriage contract, or the private separation of man and wife. In some cases, the law of Moses allowed divorcement. It was a mere civil regulation; but it was much abused by the licentious, who were anxious to put away a wife for the most trivial cause; Deut. xxiv. 1—4.

The school of Shammah, who lived a little before our Saviour, taught, that a man could not lawfully be divorced from his wife, unless he had found her guilty of some action which was really infamous, and contrary to the rules of virtue. But the school of Hillel, who was Shammah's disciple, taught, on the contrary, that the least reasons were sufficient to authorize a man to put away his wife: for example, if she did not dress his meat well, or if he found any other woman whom he liked better.

Our Lord declares that it is not lawful, except on the ground of adultery; Matt. v. 31, 32. The Corinthian church was much perplexed concerning divorce. Some of their partners were idolaters, and in some cases, it was a source of misery. They were anxious to know how to act. Mr. Davidson says, "Paul lays down a general rule, 1 Cor. vii. 15. "If the unbelieving depart, let him depart: a brother or a sister is not under bondage with such." In ver. 11 the apostle had declared, that the married party who maliciously deserted the other, was not at liberty to marry again during the other's life, which agrees with Rom. vii. 2. But he here declares that the party who was willing to continue the marriage, yet was deserted, in defiance of every remonstrance to the contrary, was at liberty to marry another. The marriage was by that desertion dissolved with respect to the Christian party that was willing to adhere, and the latter was at liberty to marry again. And surely the justice and reasonableness of this decision cannot be questioned; for why should the innocent party, through the fault of the guilty, be exposed to the danger of committing adultery? It is nevertheless a fact, that, on this point, the laws of some of the nations of Europe, and those of our own country in particular, are quite at variance with the divine law, as delivered by the apostle on this occasion."

DOGS—1. Gentiles, as sunk in impurity, Matt. xv. 26. 2. Idle, luxurious ministers of religion, Is. lvi. 10. 3. Cavilling, unprincipled teachers, Phil. iii. 2; Rev. xxii. 15.

DOG, 'make-a noise like a dog, wander, &c.' Psa. lix. 6, 14, 15. Alluding to dogs which, in eastern cities, are left to prowl about in the streets, which, if they cannot find food for themselves, are left to perish.

DOGS. 'Beware of dogs;' Phil. iii. 2. In the east dogs were the emblems of impudence, petulance, and greediness. It is used by the most dignified characters of the Iliad, and was applied to a whole class of philosophers, who seem to have been little sensible to any disgrace. The Romans chained their dogs at the doors of their houses, with this inscription over each—"Beware of this dog," to which this scripture seems to allude.

DOGS. "For dogs have compassed me," &c. Psa. xxii. 16. Descriptive of the fierce persecuting Jews, by whom our Lord was surrounded at his trial and crucifixion. Dogs in a wild state unite in troops to hunt their prey, and often direct their attacks against the most savage beasts of the forest.

DOR, Dor, generation, habitation. —
 The capital of Nephth-Dor, in the land of Caanan, Josh. xii. 23.

DORCAS, Dor'-kas, the female of a roebuck. —A pious and benevolent woman, Acts ix. 36. The character of Dorcias, as a disciple of Jesus, and truly useful member of society, will not be forgotten so long as the scriptures remain in our hands. "Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was full of good works, and alms-deeds which she did." So attentive was she to her DOMESTIC CONCERNS, and the providing for her family and poor neighbours, that at her death "all the widows stood by Peter weeping, and showing the coats and garments which she had made, while she was with them."

NOTE, to become foolish, Jer. i. 36. To be under the influence of base affections, Ezek. xxiii. 5, 12, 16. To be weak and peevish, 1 Tim. vi. 4. "Knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words."

DOTHAN, Do'-than, law, custom. —A town, twelve miles north of Samaria. It is memorable as the place where Joseph found his brethren, and at which they sold him to the Midianitish merchants; Gen. xxxvii. 13. Here too the Syrians were smitten with blindness; 2 Kings vi. 13.

DOUBLE 'for all her sins,' Isa. xl. 2. —Some think double consolation is meant; others double punishment, or such chastisement as amply sufficed to clear the Divine character, and correct them of the great evil of idolatry.

DOVE. —By the law of Moses this bird was called clean. Doves are very numerous in the East, and are highly esteemed. In their wild state they are called pigeons, and generally build their nests in the clefts of rocks, or in hollow trees. Parkhurst derives the Hebrew name from a root which admits the sense of defenceless, and exposed to rapine and violence; remarkable characteristics of this lovely bird. Accordingly, the dove is used in Scripture, as the symbol of simplicity, innocence, gentleness, and fidelity; Hosea vii. 11; Matt. iii. 16.

The dove was offered in sacrifice; Gen. xv. 9; Lev. xii. 8; Luke ii. 24. As they were numerous in Palestine, the poorest could readily procure a dove for an atonement; Isa. lx. 8. They were usually sold near the temple. In the time of Christ they were publicly sold in the court of the temple, which he regarded as highly profane, and he expelled them; Mark xi. 15. At his baptism, the Holy Spirit descended like a dove, and alighted upon him, indicating that as he was in himself "holy, harmless, and undefiled," so the great object of his ministry was to promote "peace on earth, and good will to men," Matt. iii. 16.

DOVE'S DUNG, 2 Kings vi. 25. — A kind of pease still used by the Arabs; so called from its shape and colour, the ciccr sativum nigrum. Some of the Rabbins affirm that it was the grain taken from the crops of pigeons, which, during the siege filled themselves in the fields. The plant called the "Star of Bethlehem," has been, by Lady Callcott, stated to be the dove's dung of Scripture; for it was known by the two vernacular names of bird's milk, and also pigeon's dung.

DOVE, Ps. 55. 6. & 68. 13. & 74. 19; Songs 1. 15. & 2. 14. & 6. 9; Math. 3. 16; Luke 3. 22; John 1. 32. Is. 38. 14. mourn as d. 59. 11; Ezek. 6. 16; Nah. 2. 7.

DOVES 'to their windows,' Isa. lx. 8. Referring to the eagerness with which the flocks of Gentiles should crowd into the church of Christ. Doves dwelt in conical towers, pierced with a thousand holes, each of which formed a nest, to which windows they flew in an approaching tempest

DOWRY, a portion brought by a husband to his wife, or by a wife to her husband; Gen. xxxiv. 12; Exod. xxii. 17; 1 Sam. xviii. 25.

DRAGON, a word which answers generally to the Hebrew word Thanim, as in Gen. i. 21; Job xxx. 29; Isaiah xxxiv. 13; Ezek. xxix. 3, where it signifies a large fish, such as the whale, crocodile, dolphin, or sea-dragon; or else a venomous land serpent, as in Jer. xiv. 6. Cities reduced to desolation are often described by the prophets, as dens or dwelling-places for dragons; Isaiah xiii. 22; xxxiv. 13; Jer. ix. 11. The tyrants of old who enslaved the Israelites are by the prophets figuratively termed dragons, as in Ezek. xxix. 3; Psalms lxxiv. 13. The Roman empire in its heathen state is termed "the great red dragon;" Rev. xii. 3. And the term dragon is also taken to denote the devil himself; Rev. xx. 2.

DRAGON-WELL, a place east of Jerusalem; Neh. ii. 13.

DRAGON, Ps. 91. 13; Is. 27. 1, & 51. 9; Jer. 51. 34; Ezek. 29. 3; Ren. 12. 3, 17, & 13. 2, 4, 11, & 16. 13, & 20. 2.
DRAGONS, Deut. 32. 33; Job 30. 29; Ps. 41. 19, & 74. 13, & 148. 7; Is. 13. 22, & 34. 13, & 43. 20; Jer. 9. 11, & 14. 6; Mic. 1. 8; Mal. 1. 3.

DRAUGHT. A cesspool; 2 Kings x. 27; fishes caught at one draw of the net; Luke v. 9.

DRAW BACK, Heb. x. 33. The original expressively means, "to sneak, or slink away." Doddridge.

DRAW 'water out of the wells of salvation;' Isa. xii. 3. Referring to a custom at the feast of tabernacles, when the virgin train, dressed in white, drew water from the pool of Siloam with a golden pitcher, and sung Psalms as they went to the temple, and then poured the water mixed with wine on the sacrifices.

DREAM. Those vain images which are formed while we are asleep; "He shall fly away as a dream," Job xx. 8. The Easterns paid great attention to dreams, and applied to those who professed to interpret them; Gen. xl. 5, 8; xli. 15; Dan. ii. 1, 2. The Israelites were forbidden to observe dreams; Deut. xiii. 1—3; xviii. 14, 15. They were to seek counsel of God, and his prophets, and not of the interpreters of dreams, except they were under Divine influence; 1 Sam. xxviii. 15. The Divine will was sometimes made known by dreams. In the case of Abimelech; Gen. xx. 3, 6; Jacob's ladder; Gen. xxviii. 12—14. Joseph had prophetic dreams; Gen. xxxvii. 4, 5. The dreams of the butler, &c. Gen. xl. 12, 18; xli. 25. See Num. xii. 6. DRINK, to swallow liquids. As the allotments of God's providence were often represented among the Jews by a cup, so to receive good or evil at the hand of God is represented by drinking its contents; John xviii. 11. To eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ, is to imbibe, that is, cordially to receive and obey his precepts; John vi. 53; to become one with him, in principle, feeling and action; John vi. 34. As a cordial desire and love of divine truth is often represented as thirsting, so drinking expresses the actual reception of the gospel, and its benefits; John vii. 37.

DRINK is put for (1) the blood of Christ; John vi. 55. (2) Spiritual delight; Song viii. 2. (3) Afflictions; Matt. xx. 23. (4) The wrath of God; Job xxi. 20. (5) Greedy desire; xv. 16.

DRIVE, to compel to go; Exodus
 vi. 1. The wicked being driven away in their wickedness, signifies their dying in sins; Prov. xiv. 32.

DROMEDARY, so called from the Greek word dromo, I run, by reason of its swiftness, a species of camel, with a single bunch on the back; Jer.

 tions of a people are likened to dross;
Isa. i. 25; Psalms cxix. 119; Ezek.
 xxii. 18, 19.

DROUGHT. Thirst, dry weather, which absorbs the moisture of the earth. The rains in the East fell periodically only; and there was great dryness during a considerable portion of the year. See Gen. xxxi. 40; Ps.

 2. Senselessness, the effect of divine judgments; Isa. xxix. 9.

DRUSILLA, Drew-sil'-lah, watered by the dew.—The daughter of that Herod who cruelly beheaded James the brother of John; Acts xii. 1, 2. She was the lawful wife of Azizus, king of the Emeseniens; who, to obtain her, had submitted to the rites of the Jewish religion. She was celebrated for great beauty; but being a very profligate woman, she had forsaken her husband to live with Felix, who had a wife still living, whose name was Drusilla also. She was the niece of Antony and Cleopatra; Acts 24. 24.

DRY. "He shall grow up as a root out of a dry ground;" Isa. liii. 2.
 Predicted of Christ's poverty, and his mean origin. When our Saviour was led away to be crucified, he tells the Jews; Luke xxiii. 31. "If they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?" If such evils befall me, who have deserved no such thing, but rather to be cherished and kindly entreated; what will befall you, who are fitted for destruction, like dry wood for the fire? The prophets sometimes compare a barren and unfruitful people to a dry land, Isa. xli. 18. "I will make the dry land springs of water." I will make the Jews and Gentiles, who are like a dry and barren wilderness, to become fruitful.

DUNG, 'count them but dung,' Phil. iii. 8. Implying the worthless scraps, and sordid offals that are cast to the dogs.

DUNG-HILL, — 'houses made a dunghill.' This was a common punishment among the Romans and Babylonians; Dan. iii. 5, 29.

DURA, Dew'-rah, generation, habitation.—A plain in the neighbourhood of Babylon where Nebuchadnezzar set up his golden image; Dan. iii. 1.

DURABLE, riches and right, Prov. 8. 18.

Is. 23. 18. merchandise for d. clothing

DUST. When the Hebrews mourned, they put dust or ashes upon their heads; Josh. vii. 6; Lam. iii. 29; Isa. xlvi. 1. Dust is used figuratively for the grave; Gen. iii. 19; Job vii. 21; Ps. xxii. 15. Dust also signifies multitude; Gen. xiii. 16; Num. xxiii. 10; Ps. lxxviii. 27.—It signifies a low and miserable condition; 1 Sam. ii. 8; Nahum iii. 18.

Luke 10. 11; Acts 13. 51.

DUST, 'lick the dust,' Ps. lxxii. 9. Expressive of profound submission; even a prince has been compelled to kiss the ground in the presence of a conqueror.

DUST, 'threw dust into the air,' Acts xxii. 23. The Arabs still show their contempt in this way. It is generally accompanied by curses of more awful import. "Soon shalt thou be as that dust, or mayest thou soon be as that dust," says the enraged person. "Look, look at it, thou accursed one; mayst thou soon be like that!" The custom also prevails in Persia. Those who demanded their rights, or justice against a criminal, cast dust into the air, or upon a person or persons. Sometimes they appeared in hundreds at the gate of a prince or governor, and made the most horrid cries, tearing their garments, and throwing dust into the air, at the same time demanding justice.

DUST. To throw dust into the air, was an expression of contempt and malice; Acts xxii. 23; to throw dust on the head, of grief and mourning; Rev. xviii. 19

DUST. "When ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet;" Matt. x. 14. This was a significant action arising from a foolish opinion, that all dust that came from Gentile countries was defiling. Hence they would not allow herbs to be brought out of Heathen countries into the land of Israel, lest dust should be brought with them.

DWELL.—To abide or live in a place. God is said to dwell in the heavens, Ps. cxxiii. 1; and also with him that is of a contrite spirit, Ps. ix. 11; Isa. lvii. 15. Christ dwells in the heart by faith, justifying the believing soul by his merit, renewing it by his grace, purifying it by his Spirit, teaching it by his wisdom, keeping it by his power, and, by his communion and compassion, sharing with it in all its troubles, and supporting it under all its trials, Eph. iii. 17. The Holy Ghost dwells in the soul by his gracious operations, working faith, love, and other graces therein; Rom. viii. 9. The word of God may be said to dwell in a person, when it is diligently studied, firmly believed, and carefully practised; Col. iii. 16. E

EAGLE.—A large fierce bird of prey. Its name is neshet in Hebrew, the lacerator, on account of its rapacious tearing its prey in pieces. It is about as large as a turkey. There are several species of this bird; the largest is called the golden eagle. It has a beak strong and hooked; the feet have three toes before and one behind. The tongue is shaped like that of the human species, the mouth very large, the eyes sunken, but large, bright, and piercing; the wings are very large, and extend a great breadth, and its claws long and terrific. Of all birds it is said to fly the highest, and with the greatest rapidity. In this respect, it is a symbol of successful conquest; Deut. xxviii. 49; Jer. iv. 13; xlviii. 40, 41, 42, &c. Hosea viii. 1; Hab. i. 8. And its great swiftness is a symbol of the rapid flight of time; "My days are passed away as the eagle, that hasteth to the prey;" Job ix. 26. So with riches; they "make themselves wings," &c.; Prov. xxiii. 5. And the persecutors of the church; Lam. iv. 19.

The eagle sees or smells dead flesh at a prodigious distance, and is said to break the bones of its prey to come at the marrow. Every year it moults, becoming almost naked and bald, and "renews its youth," by producing a set of new feathers; Ps. ciii. 5. It is said to do this even when a hundred years old. Hence it is the emblem of renewed strength. See Isa. xl. 31.

Eagle is also symbolical of a king or kingdom, Ezek. xvii. 3. The standards of the Roman army were eagles, Matt. xxiv. 28. The meaning is, "Wherever there is an object devoted by Divine justice to destruction, there will be seen the destroyer:"—thus referring to the Roman army, which was to execute the Divine vengeance against the Jews.

EAGLE.—"As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings; so the Lord alone did lead him," &c.; Deut. xxxii. 11, 12. The eagle's tenderness and care of its young, thus expressed, beautifully symbolizes the care and kindness of Divine Providence. She stirs up her nest to compel the eaglets to fly. She enters the nest, and begins to turn them out, or pulls away one twig after another, till they are in danger of falling out; her design is to render the nest too uncomfortable for them to continue in it. They leave it, and abide on the neighbouring branches or cliffs. The fluttering over her young is to teach them by example to fly, and she makes many efforts to induce them to use their wings. To help, protect, and defend them, she spreadeth abroad her wings, to hide them in case of attack, and to drive off all assailants. She takes the feeble and timid ones, and beareth them on her wings, or back, soars away with them, and at a considerable altitude lets them drop, and thus she compels them to use their wings. In case of failure in flight, she rapidly darts down and places her body under them on which they may alight and rest. Apply this to the kindness and care of Divine Providence, and the manifestation of grace to the sinner.

EAR.—The ear is the instrument or organ of hearing. The word is often used figuratively. Uncircumcised ears describe persons inattentive to God's word; Jer. vi. 10. Heavy ears are the symbol of a dull and sluggish heart, Jer. vi. 10. Itching ears indicate a mind fond of novelty, critical, and fastidious; 2 Tim. iv. 3. An obedient ear, "opened," Ps. xl. 6, denotes one who obeys in all things.

EAR sometimes means the same as to till or plough, as, "ear the ground," 1 Sam. viii. 12; Isa. xxx. 24; a valley "neither eared nor sown," that is, not ploughed or sown; Deut. xxi. 4. "Earing time and harvest," mean the time of planting and reaping; Exod. xxxiv. 21.

EARNEST. It signifies a part of the price given as evidence that a bargain has been made, and as a pledge that the whole price will be paid at the appointed time. The "earnest of the Spirit;" 2 Cor. i. 22; Eph. i. 13, 14; the "first-fruits of the Spirit;" Rom. viii. 23; and "being sealed by the Spirit;" Eph. i. 13; these phrases signify the assurance which the Spirit of adoption gives to believers of their inheritance in heaven; just as the "first-fruits" were pledged to the Jews of the ensuing harvest.

EARNEST Expectation, Rom. viii. 19. The original implies, to lift up our head, and stretch ourselves out as far as possible to hear something very important and agreeable, to gain the first glimpse of a long absent friend, or of a vessel at sea, bearing some precious freight, or some passenger very dear to us.

EAR-RINGS. Rings to put in the ear; Gen. xxxv. 4. "Some of the eastern ear-rings are small, and go so close to the ear that there is no vacuity between them: others are so large that you may put the forefinger between, and adorned with a ruby and a pearl on each side of them, strung on the ring. The women wear ear-rings and pendants of divers sorts: and I have seen some, the diameter of whose round was four fingers, and almost two fingers thick, made of several kinds of metals, wood, and horn, according to the quality." Charadin; Ex. xxxi. 2, 3; Prov. xxv. 12.

EAR-RINGS, Gen. 35. 4; Ex. 32. 2, 3;

EARTH. See Creation. Its Hebrew names are Adamah, Aretz, and Tebel. The first means land, ground, reddish mould, alluding to the colour of the earth. The second is more generally applied to the surface of the earth, in opposition to "the heavens," or Shemim, the upper regions. The third term means the producer, denoting the fertility of the earth. By the earth is meant the terraqueous globe, the earth, and all that it contains, men, animals, plants, minerals, water, fish, &c. Ps. xxiv. 1. "The earth is the Lord's," &c. The word earth often means those who inhabit it; Gen. vi. 13; Ps. xcvi. 1. The whole empire of Chaldea and Assyria are described as all the kingdoms of the earth; Ezra i. 2. The superficial area of the globe is stated to be 196,673,555 square miles; its solid contents at 259,353,417,505 cubic miles. About seven-tenths of the whole surface is occupied by the ocean; the remaining three-tenths consist of land elevated above the level of the sea, and unequally distributed." The earth in all its parts is adjusted with infinite wisdom: in the language of inspiration, Jehovah "hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance."

EARTH. "He hangeth the earth upon nothing." It is evident that Job understood the position of the earth, as now described by modern science, as subject to the great law of gravitation—that the earth gravitates towards the sun, the great central body which governs the motions and distances of all the planets. Job was inspired to know this by the Divine Being himself. His views therefore accorded with modern philosophy, as to the earth's globular form, and perpetual motion in its own orbit, exposing equally both its spheres to the sun, and thereby forming day and night; Job xxvi. 7.

EARTH.—"And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, together with Korah, when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men; and they became a sign," Num. xxvi. 10. There is a discrepancy between this text and the narrative in ch. xvi, and Ps. cvi. 17, from which it would appear, that as Dathan and Abiram were swallowed up with the other Reubenites, so Korah was consumed with the Levites, who burned incense with him. The Hebrew text of this passage was in accordance with this, since we learn from Clement, Ignatius, Eusebius, that the LXX in their time agreed with the Samaritan text, which has undoubtedly preserved the original meaning. It reads thus:—"And the earth swallowed them up, what time that company died; and the fire devoured Korah, with the two hundred and fifty men, who became a sign."

EARTHQUAKE.—A convulsion of the earth, caused by the explosion of subterranean gases, or by some internal volcanic eruption. It is a most awful visitation, on account of its destruction of human life, and devastation of property, &c. Whole cities have been swallowed up by means of earthquakes, and the countries around them ruined. It is probable that the cities of the plain of Zoar were thus engulfed, and converted into a standing lake. There was an earthquake in the reign of Ahab, when Elijah went forth and stood upon the mountain before Jehovah; 1 Kings xix. 11, 12. Also in the time of Uzziah, which, Josephus says "divided a mountain which lay westward of the city, and removed a part of it half a mile out of its place." To this the prophet Amos, ch. i. 1, and Zechariah, ch. xiv. 5, allude. An earthquake occurred at the crucifixion of Christ, accompanied with supernatural darkness, Matt. xxvii. 50, 51; Luke xxiii.

EAST and WEST, denoting the whole world, Isa. xlv. 6; lix. 19;
Matt. viii. 11.

EAST.—Towards the point of the heavens in which the sun rises. Arabia, Assyria, Chaldea, Mesopotamia, Persia, and other countries, lay eastward of the country of Canaan; and Balaam, Cyrus, and the wise men were said, therefore, to have come out of the east; Num. xxiii. 7; Isa.
xlv. 11; Matt. ii. 1, 2. "From the east," Gen. xi. 2, denotes the country east, or south-east of Mount Ararat.
In travelling thence to the plain of Shinar, the descendants of Noah would pass southerly on the eastern side of the mountains of Media until they came opposite to Shinar, or to a point north-east of Babylon, from which, by a direct western course, they would pass to the plain of Shinar, the caravan route of the present day.

21; Ps. 48. 7; Is. 27. 8; Hos. 12. 1,

EASTER.—An improper translation; for the feast of the passover is meant, Acts xii. 4. Easter was the name of a Pagan festival observed in spring by our ancestors, in honour of the goddess Astarte or Eostro, a Saxon goddess, the Ashtaroth of Syria.
In all other places pascha is rendered passover, the true meaning.

EAT—drink, figuratively, denoting the operation of the mind in receiving, understanding, and applying instruction. To oppress and undo, Ps. xiv.

4. It is said in Ezek. iii. 1, "Son of man, eat that thou findest, eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel." Read attentively, meditate thoroughly, impress the things upon thy soul deeply; for thou must declare them with very great affection and tenderness, with exact faithfulness, and with undaunted courage. So in Jer. xv. 16. "Thy words were found, and I did eat them."

In John vi. 53, 56, our Saviour says, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." Except ye partake of those benefits which I purchased by my sufferings in my human nature, ye have no spiritual life, nor communion with God, but continue in your sins, and shall not partake of eternal life. Again, "He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him." There is an intimate union and communion between us, he having a constant dependance upon me for life, which is his dwelling in me; and I giving out a constant influence and quickening virtue to make him live, which is my dwelling in him. And in John iv. 32, he says, "I have meat to eat which ye know not of." I have something to do which I prefer before bodily food, namely, to bring these Samaritans to believe in, and own me for the true Messiah.

The psalmist says, Ps. lxxix. 9, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." That fervent passion which I have for thy house, and service, and glory, and people, hath exhausted my natural moisture and vital spirits.

The ancient Hebrews would have regarded themselves as defiled by eating with people of a different religion. The first notice of this occurs in the history of Joseph; Gen. xliii. 32. Christ offended the Jews by eating with publicans and sinners; Matt. ix. 11. This indisposition to eat with strangers eventually became prevalent throughout the East, especially in India, where the people are divided into castes. The people of one caste will not eat, marry, &c., with the people of another caste. The ancient Hebrews, at their meals, had each his separate table. Elkanah had two wives, and gave portions to each separately. According to Homer, this custom was common among the Greeks.

EATING at TABLE.—The Babylonians and Persians used to recline or lie down on table beds while eating, and the Jews adopted this custom, Amos vi. 4—7. The guests at the royal banquets or feasts, (Esther i. 6; vii. 8,) were placed on beds. Christ reclined in this manner when Mary anointed his feet, John xii. 3; and when John leaned on his bosom, John xiii. 25. His feet were not placed like ours when we sit, but as he reclined, they were easily touched, or wiped by any one coming behind him.

EAT.—"For who can eat, or who else can hasten hitherunto more than I;" Eccl. ii. 25. Coverdale's translation gives the true sense;—"For who maye eat, drinke, or bring anythinge to pass without him?" Read ver. 24, and it will be seen that this reading naturally follows. "This also I saw, that it was from the hand of God; for who can eat, and who can relish without him? For God giveth to man that is good," &c.

EBAL, E'-bal, a heap, collection of old age—A descendant of Esau, Gen. xxxvi. 23.—A celebrated mountain over against Gerizim, Deut. xi. 29; xxvii. 4, 13. It lies to the south of Sichem, or Shechem, now called Nabalus, and is separated from Mount Gerizim by a narrow valley, about three miles long. Ebal is not so beautiful and fertile as Mount Gerizim. The two mountains rise to the height of 800 feet above the surface of the valley which separates them, and about 2,500 miles above the level of the sea. In the valley is the town of Nabalus, the Shechem and Sychar of the Scriptures. It is supposed that Abraham was directed to offer up Isaac on Gerizim, and the precise spot is now pointed out to travellers.

But the event for which these mountains are most memorable is that which took place shortly after the arrival of the Israelites in the promised land; when (according to a previous commandment given by God through his servant Moses) the people drawn up, six tribes on Ebal and six on Gerizim, while the ark and the priests were stationed in the intermediate valley; and, as the priests recited the blessings and curses commanded by God, the tribes on Gerizim responded with "Amen" to the former, and those on Ebal to the latter; see Deut. xxvii., and Josh. viii. 30—35. An altar and stone, with the law inscribed on it, were set up, as previously commanded, on the summit of Ebal; or, as the Samaritan version reads, Gerizim; and the Samaritans ascribe the difference to the Jews having from spite altered the text. The Samaritans, who are now but few in number, and almost wholly confined to Nabalus, still regard Gerizim with peculiar reverence; towards it they turn when praying; to its summit they still repair four times in each year; and there they sacrifice the passover, consisting of seven lambs for the whole people. A level space of bare rock on the surface is regarded by them as particularly sacred; being, as they affirm, the place where the tabernacle and ark of God were pitched. Their temple was erected here when they were prevented assisting to rebuild that at Jerusalem on the return of the Jews from captivity. Thence arose the enmity to which such frequent allusions are made in the gospels; John iv. 20.

EBED, E'-bed, a servant, or labourer.—A person mentioned Judg. ix. 26.

EBED-MELECH, E-bed-me-lek, the king's servant.—An Ethiopian in the court of king Zedekiah. He was instrumental in saving Jeremiah from death by famine; Jer. xxxviii. 7; xxxix. 15—18.

EBENEZER, Eb-en-e'-zer, the stone of help.—The name of a field where the Israelites were defeated; 1 Sam. iv. 1. He called it EBENEZER, the stone of help, saying, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."—Also a memorial-stone erected by Samuel to commemorate a victory over the Philistines; 1 Sam. vii. 12.

EBER, E'ber, one that passes, anger, wrath.—A descendant of Shem, Gen. x. 21.

EBIASAPH, E-by'-a-saf, a gathering father.—Son of Korah, 1 Chron. ix. 19.—Son of Elkanah, 1 Chron. vi. 23.

EBONY.—A tree supposed to be of the palm kind; the wood of which is imported from the East and West Indies. It is extremely solid, and of a jet black, capable of a very fine polish. Ezek. xxvii. 15.

EBRONAH, E-bro'-nah, passing over.—The thirty-first encampment of the Israelites, Num. xxxiii. 34.

ECCLESIASTES, Ek-kle-si-as'-tees, a preacher.—This book was probably written by Solomon at that period of his life when he had fully discovered the absolute vanity of all sublunary pleasures, pursuits, and distinctions, and when he made known to the world that the only satisfying and durable pleasure was to be found in the possession of true religion.

EDAR, E'-dar, a flock.—A place, Gen. xxxv. 21.

EDEN, E'-den, pleasure, or delight.—The residence of our first parents in a state of purity and innocence. The name has been given to several places which from their situation were pleasant or delightful. But the opinion generally received on this subject, is that which places the garden on the lower Euphrates, between the junction of that river with the Tigris and the Persian Gulf, and is still exceedingly fertile. Some have thought it was in the neighbourhood of Damascus; others on the eastern side of Mount Libanus, and others in Arabia Felix, where traces of the word Eden are found. Others have selected some part of Media, Armenia, and the northern parts of Mesopotamia. Probably God by some causes, and especially by the flood, has obliterated every vestige of the once fair and beautiful Eden, the scene of man's dreadful apostacy. Man must have no Paradise on earth; he must seek one to come, even "a better country."

Eden was the name of a district of Mesopotamia, and a pleasant vale, near Damascus; Isa. xxxvii. 12; Amos i. 5.—Also the son of Joah, 2 Chron. xxix. 12.—The houses of Eden might be pleasure-palaces of the Syrian kings, Amos i. 5. Because Eden was so pleasant and fertile, any country pleasant and fruitful is likened to it, or called by its name; Isa. li. 3; Ezek. xxviii. 13; xxxi. 9, 16, 18; Joel. ii. 3.

EDER, E'der.—A city of Judah; Josh. xv. 21.—A son of Mushi; 1 Chron. xxiii. 23.

EDIFY, EDIFICATION.—The original word signifies to build, and is applied to the people of God in association. The apostles represented the church as a house, a building of God, a temple, a habitation. The Lord Jesus is the chief corner-stone of this building—the "sure foundation," and believers are lively stones, built up a spiritual house; Eph. ii. 19—22; 1 Cor. iii. 9, 10; 1 Pet. ii. 5; thus constituting that church, which the Apostle calls "the household of God," Eph. ii. 19, or "the household of faith," Gal. vi. 10. It is evident from this view of the subject, that it is the duty of all believers to associate in holy fellowship for the edification or building up of the church. The promises of God, and the consolations of the Spirit, are not made so much to isolated persons, as to the church as a whole; Eph. iv. 8—16.

The term applied to individual character, denotes endeavours to instruct, comfort, console, and establish one another, by the means of grace, and by conversation and prayer with and for one another.

EDIFY or build up, Rom. 14. 19; 1 Thess. 5. 11; 1 Cor. 3. 1, & 10. 23, & 14. 4, 17; Acts 9. 31.

EDOM, E'-dom, red, earthy, red earth.—Gen. xxxvi. 1. The name of Esau.—A province of Arabia which derives its name from Esau or Edom, who there settled in the mountains of Seir, in the land of the Horites, south-east of the Dead Sea. It signifies red, suggested by his singular appearance at his birth; Gen. xxv. 30; or more probably, because he sold his birth-right for a mess of red pottage; and so this country is most usually called, in scripture, the Land of Edom, and its inhabitants, Edomites. The Greeks corrupted Edom into Idumea; and, in a few instances, the sacred writers have adopted this term; Isa. xxxiv. 5, 6; Ezek. xxv. 15; xxxvi. 5.

The Edomites spread themselves from Mount Seir over a region which extended from the borders of the Ishmaelites eastward to the Desert of Paran westward, and from the Dead Sea north, to the Red Sea on the south. On the eastern bay they possessed two important ports Eloth and Eziongaber; 2 Chr. viii. 17. Hence, that part of the ocean took the name of the Sea of Edom or the Red Sea.

This country had high, inaccessible mountains of rock, on which the inhabitants depended for defence against the attacks of an invader. To this the prophets frequently allude: "The pride of thine heart has deceived thee," says Obadiah to Edom, "O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, whose habitation is high; that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground?" Obad. 3. See also Jer. xlix. 16. The land was formerly fertile and agreeable, though mountainous and rocky, and well fulfilled the promise which Isaac made to Esau; Gen. xxvii. 39. "Thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above." Yet for centuries past, Edom has exhibited only barren rocks, parched with drought, affording nutrition for neither animal nor vegetable life, and over-run with noxious reptiles. Its present desolation is a literal accomplishment of the divine threatenings, "Edom shall be a desolation: every one that goeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss at all the plagues thereof." Jer. xlix. 17; Mal. i. 3.

EDREI, Ed'-re-i, a very great mass, cloud.—A town in the tribe of Manasseh; Josh. xiii. 12. It was a considerable place, judging from its ruins, which cover an extent of two miles in circumference. Also a town in the tribe of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 37.

EGLAH, Eg'-lah, heifer, chariot, round.—The sixth wife of David, and mother of Ithream; 2 Sam. iii. 5.

EGLAIM, Eg'-la-im, drops of the sea.—A city east of the Dead Sea, in the land of Moab; Isa. xv. 8.

EGLON, Eg'-lon, a heifer, a chariot. A king of Moab, to whom the Israelites were in subjection for 18 years. He was assassinated by Ehud; Judges iii. 12—30.—A city whose king was Debir; Josh. x. 3.—The name of a city in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 39.

EGYPT, E'-jipt, that binds or straitens.—A country called in Hebrew, Mizraim. It is six hundred miles long and three hundred broad. It is bounded on the south by Ethiopia, on the north by the Mediterranean Sea, on the east by the Red Sea, and on the west by Lybia; Exod. iii. 20. Egypt is now the 'base of kingdoms,' as declared in prophecy, Ezek. xxix. 15, and has been successively tributary to Babylon, Persia, Greece, Rome, Saracens, Mamelukes, and Turks, during 2000 years, Gen. xxxix. 1, &c. It was anciently called Chemia, or the land of Ham; and the present Copts call it Chemi, perhaps because Ham resided there. The Hebrews call it Mizraim; and the Arabs to this day call it Mesr, from Mizraim, the son of Ham, who peopled it. It is probable that Ham settled in this country, as it is called by the psalmist, "the Land of Ham;" (lxxviii. 12; cvi. 22;) a title given to no other territory possessed by his sons. Pathros was the fifth son of Mizraim, and the father of the Pathrusim. His posterity settled towards the southern extremity of Egypt; and appear to have been numerous. They are often mentioned in connection with the Egyptians, Isa. xi. 11; Jer. xlv. 1, 15; Ezek. xxix. 14. At the extremity of this part of the country stood Syene, the southern boundary of Egypt; ver. 10.

But it was in the northern part of Egypt that most of the transactions connected with the history of the people of God took place. This portion of the country is called by profane writers, Lower Egypt, or the Delta, from its triangular form. It commences about one hundred miles inland, at the place where the Nile divides itself into two great branches, one of which runs north-east, and the other north-west, till they fall into the Mediterranean Sea. Each of these streams formerly divided in its progress into the minor branches, so that the river discharged its waters into the sea at seven distinct outlets; from which it obtained, among pagan writers, the appellation of the "seven mouthed Nile." Several of these at present are choked up; and others grow gradually more shallow. The prediction of the prophet, therefore, appears likely to be literally fulfilled: "The Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea; and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, and make men go over dryshod," Isa. xi. 15.

The tract of country inclosed between the two outermost streams and the sea, formed the kingdom of the Pharaohs, in the times of the patriarchs. The capital city of this state, in the days of Moses, was Zoan; for Asaph says, "He wrought his signs in Egypt, and his wonders in the fields of Zoan." It was the most ancient city in Egypt; since Moses, wishing to convey a striking idea of the antiquity of Hebron, tells us, that it "was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt," Num. xiii. 22. And it continued to be a principal city in the days of Isaiah; xix. 11—13; xxx. 4. At length it perished, Ezek. xxx. 14. On the east of Lower Egypt, towards the sea, between the desert of Paran, and the most eastern branch of the Nile, lay the pleasant land of Goshen, which Joseph obtained of Pharaoh for the residence of his brethren, Gen. xlvii. 6.

Egypt has ever been famous for its fertility. It abounds with the best of vegetables, and cattle of the best quality, and with the finest corn. Abraham removed to it when a famine was in the land of Canaan, and afterwards Jacob and his family. The heat of summer is excessive, but fruits abound. Lower Egypt produces the most excellent dates, almonds, figs, lemons, oranges, olives, &c. Date trees greatly abound; and some villages are surrounded by such numbers, as to seem embosomed in a forest. These form a great source of subsistence. The threat to cut them down, (Jer. xlv. 22, 23,) was, therefore, exceedingly terrible, and involved in utter ruin. The horses are very famous. The river abounds with fish, crocodiles, and hippopotami. The practice of charming snakes so as to carry them about safely, still prevails there. Ps. lviii. 4, 5; Jer. viii. 17.

The vegetable productions of Egypt, in their size, number, and rapidity of growth, almost surpass belief; besides those already mentioned, they consist of lentils, sesamum, mustard, flax, anise, saffron wood, tobacco, rice; pumpkins, melons, and cucumbers, which grow almost visibly, and are said to gain an inch in volume hourly—in many parts the Holcus dura is extensively grown, which forms the prevailing food of the people—citrons, pomegranates, apricots, and bananas, with numerous other valuable fruits. Egypt produces the most beautiful flowers and splendid shrubs to be found on any portion of the globe.

The cause of this great fertility is the annual overflow of the river Nile. Towards the end of May, it begins to rise; and before the end of June overflows its banks, and by degrees covers the whole country; rising about 25 feet above the level of its channel. For about three months, nothing is to be seen from the eminences, but a vast expanse of water; in which are scattered numerous towns and villages, elevated with great labour, and causeways leading from one to another; interspersed with groves and fruit trees, the tops of which alone are visible. At the close of September, the waters begin to subside; and before the end of November the river retires to its usual channel, leaving the land covered with a rich mud. In this, the husbandman sows his seed; and in January and February, the ground is covered with vegetation and ripening corn; and affords a most cheering landscape to the delighted inhabitants. To places which are above the level of the inundation, the water is raised by various mechanical contrivances; and distributed in rivulets over the thirsty ground. These rivulets are regulated by sluices, which the husbandman can open or shut at discretion. He frequently effects this by removing or replacing the stoppages with his foot. In the greatest part of this singular country, rain seldom falls: but the ground having imbibed so much moisture during the inundation, vegetation flourishes through the hottest season, without any fresh supply.

The Nile produces large quantities of excellent fish. The plenty, which even bondmen enjoyed in this country, was recollected with regret by the sensual Israelites, after they had been delivered from slavery. "We remember," they murmured, "the fish which we did eat in Egypt freely, the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic." "We sat by the flesh pots and did eat bread to the full;" Num xi. 5; Exod. xvi. 3. As the Nile so enriched Egypt, it was natural for the people to value it highly. Accordingly they dignified it with the title of "the River," by way of eminence; Exod. i.—xii. "the Egyptian sea;" Isa. xi. 15. "the Flood of Egypt;" Amos viii. 8; ix. 5; boasted, "My river is mine own, I have made it for myself;" Ezek. xxix. 3; and even paid it divine honours.

But the fertility of the soil was not the only source of their affluence. The Egyptians were also extensively engaged in commerce and manufactures. So early as the days of Jacob, caravans from Arabia brought their spices to Egypt, and took back the produce of the country in exchange. The inhabitants excelled in the making of linen from a superior species of flax, with which their fields abounded. Multitudes of people, chiefly women, were employed in the various manufactures. Hence Isaiah, when describing the effects of a dreadful calamity which should afflict Egypt, in order to mark its great extent, says, "They that work in fine flax, and they that weave nets shall be confounded;" Isa. xix. 9. The superior elegance of this article caused it to be much sought after by the delicate and luxurious of other nations. The Jewish ladies decked their beds "with the fine linen of Egypt," Prov. vii. 16: and the rich merchants of Tyre are represented as forming the sails of their gallant ships of "fine linen with brodered work from Egypt," Ezek. xxvii. 7. With all these advantages, the inhabitants and princes acquired immense wealth. This fact is attested by all historians who have noticed them; but the most convincing proofs of its truth exist to the present day, in the stupendous monuments of their almost unlimited resources which still remain. Well therefore might the sacred penman tell us of, "the pomp of Egypt;" "the precious things of Egypt;" "treasures in Egypt;" &c. Ezek. xxxii. 12; Dan. xi. 43; Heb. xi. 26.

The arts and sciences were very early cultivated here, and maintained a greater degree of perfection, for some ages, than was found in any other nation. Hence Pythagoras, Plato, and many ancient philosophers and legislators of Greece and Rome, travelled here to complete their studies. The Egyptians excelled in geometry, astronomy, mechanics, architecture, medicine, agriculture, and most of the arts and sciences. They studied morals, politics, and philosophy; and were esteemed by the best informed of the ancients as the fathers of almost every useful discovery, and the great promoters of human knowledge. The sacred writers confirm this account, when stating the intellectual superiority of Solomon, they tell us, that his wisdom "excelled all the wisdom of the Egyptians;" 1 Kings iv. 30; and represent as a great advantage to Moses, that "he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians;" Acts vii. 22. How awfully conspicuous therefore were the power and indignation of the Almighty, when, on account of the abominable idolatry of this people, "he mingled a perverse spirit in the midst thereof, and caused Egypt to err in every work thereof; when the princes of Zoan became fools, and the wise counsellors of Pharaoh brutish!" Isa. xix. 11—17.

In the time of Abraham both the monarch and his princes recognized God, and respected the rights of matrimony and hospitality; Gen. xii. 10—20. When Joseph, his great grandson, was made prime minister of Egypt, the splendour of the court had greatly increased; yet the sovereign and the nobles acknowledged the wisdom and goodness of Divine Providence, and acted towards the Israelites with great kindness. But when Moses stood before Pharaoh, the government had become despotic; the people were given up to the arts of magic and sorcery; and brute animals were the objects of worship; Exod. i.—xiv. This degeneracy increased, till the Egyptians had raised, not only their deceased worthies, but beasts, birds, fishes, and reptiles, with the most insignificant plants and vegetables, to the rank of deities. An ox was their principal god, and he was associated in their worship with dogs, cats, serpents, insects, leeks, onions, &c. So gross was their superstition, that they became the ridicule of their idolatrous neighbours. Their political spirit sunk with their moral character; and, after suffering dreadful calamities from various invaders, Egypt was at length reduced to a degraded province, tributary to foreign despots. The pages of inspiration are full of the most awful threatenings of the divine vengeance against the cruelty and impiety of this people; and the historians of all succeeding ages conspire to show the exact fulfilment of those predictions. The situation of Egypt at present, and for more than two thousand years past, is a striking comment on the prediction of the prophet Ezekiel. "It shall be the basest of kingdoms; neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: for I will diminish them and they shall no more rule over the nations," Ezek. xxix. 15. See xxx., xxxi., xxxii.; Isa. xix.; Jer. xliii.

Egypt was divided into two districts:—Upper Egypt, or Thebais, and Lower Egypt, or the Delta. The Nile is the largest river of the old world. Rising in the interior of Africa, it enters Egypt by Syene, which borders on Ethiopia, and flows to Cairo, along a valley eight miles broad, between two ridges of mountains, one of which extends to the Red Sea, and the other terminates in the deserts of Lybia. On entering Egypt by Rosetta, the country, though flat, presents a most delightful prospect, by the perpetual verdure of the palm trees on each side of the line; the orchards watered by the river, with orange, lemon, and other fruit trees, which grow in great abundance, present a pleasing aspect, and the same appearance obtains all the way to Cairo.—Throughout the greater extent of the country the land is flat, interspersed with thin woods of palms and sycamores, with villages of mud-walled cottages built on artificial mounds—in the interior one sees only palm trees, single or in clumps, which become more rare the farther he advances—wretched villages and a boundless plain, which at different seasons is an ocean of fresh water, a miry morass, a verdant field, or a dusty desert; and on every side an extensive and foggy horizon, affording but little relief to the eye of the beholder.

Egypt has several lakes, the Mareotis, to the south of Alexandria: this lake was for many ages dried up, till the British, in 1801, cut the dykes of the neighbouring canal, thereby letting in the water on its site, till then occupied by salt marshes, cultivated lands, and even villages—Lake Aboukir, which was dry till 1778, when an irruption of the sea, breaking through the embankment by which it was protected, again covered its site with water—Lake Etko, to the east, which communicates with the sea by a narrow mouth; and that of Menzaleh, formed by the junction of large gulfs.

The remains of antiquity in Egypt are numerous and splendid. They have occupied volumes; but we can only just mention a few. In the ruins of Thebes, the ancient capital of Upper Egypt, the No-Ammon of the prophets, palaces and temples almost entire, with columns and statues innumerable, are still seen; and which appear to be preserved to eclipse the glory of modern grandeur. The obelisks are square taper columns of great height and beauty, covered with hieroglyphics, the sacred language of Egypt. One erected by Sesostris, probably the Shishak of the Scriptures, which is one hundred and eighty feet high, still adorns Rome. The Labyrinth is an immense pile of buildings, including twelve palaces, which contain fifteen hundred rooms above the surface of the ground, and as many beneath it. The Lake Mareotis which was dug to correct the irregularities in the overflowings of the Nile, was at least eighteen or twenty miles in circuit. The Sphynx is the statue of a monster with a human head and neck and a lion's body. The height of the head and neck is twenty-seven feet; the neck, at the juncture with the body, thirty-three feet wide and twenty thick; and the body one hundred and twenty feet long.

But the most celebrated of these antiquities are the Pyramids. These stupendous structures rise from a square base, gradually narrowing towards the summit. Numbers of these erections of all sizes are scattered over every part of Egypt. The most celebrated are situated not far from the place where the Nile divides itself into various branches. The largest of them is built on a rock. The length of each side of its square base is six hundred and ninety-three feet; and the length of the line measuring from the corner to the top, is the same. Its perpendicular height is four hundred and eighty feet; and its base covers upwards of eleven acres of ground. Its sides correspond exactly with the four quarters of the compass. The ascent to the summit is by steps, running all round, made of massy polished stones; the lowest four feet deep and three broad, diminishing in size as they ascend. The top, which from below appears a point, is found to be a plain eighteen feet square. Several apartments and passages have been discovered in the interior of this pyramid; and an oblong trough, that has generally been esteemed a tomb, though some think it was intended for purposes of sacrificing. One hundred thousand men are said to have been employed in constructing this vast pile, who were relieved every three months by an equal number; and thirty years to have been thus consumed before it was completed.

The date of these structures is lost in their remote antiquity; but it is highly probable that they were built by the Israelites during the time of their bondage in Egypt. This, Josephus, the Jewish historian, expressly asserts; and the Scriptures inform us, that the descendants of Jacob built treasure cities for Pharaoh; that the Egyptians made them serve with rigour, and they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field; Exod. i. 11—14. Now though the surface of the pyramids is covered with large stones, yet the interior of many of them is filled with sun-dried bricks, which are composed of clay mixed with straw, the very kind of bricks made by the Israelites. Herodotus, a Greek historian, who lived almost five hundred years before the Christian era, tells us that, in his time, there was an inscription on the great pyramid, stating, that the expense of radishes, onions, and garlic, consumed by the workmen during its erection, amounted to sixteen hundred talents of silver, or about twenty-five thousand pounds sterling; and these are precisely the articles of food on which the Israelites fed gratis, or at the expense of others during their bondage; Num. xi. 5. The Egyptian monarchs usually employed slaves to erect their great works; and frequently engraved on them by way of boast, "No Egyptian had a hand in this structure." In this, they were imitated by Solomon, 1 Kings ix. 17—22. The Israelites therefore, being "Pharaoh's bondmen," Deut. xv. 15, were the class of persons most likely to be employed in raising the pyramids. Herodotus also informs us that the building of the pyramids occupied one hundred years; and if we deduct the time that Joseph governed Egypt and the generation that survived him from the two hundred and fifteen years of the sojourning of Israel in Egypt, there will remain a century for the duration of their servitude. The Egyptians themselves affirmed to Diodorus Siculus, who flourished a little before the birth of our Saviour, that one pyramid was erected by Amosis, and another by Inaron; names which lead the ear directly to Moses and Aaron. Lastly, One of the pyramids has evidently never been completed. Might it not be left in that state when the Israelites fled from Egypt? and be suffered to remain unfinished in consequence of the confusion occasioned by the destruction of the monarch and his princes in the Red Sea?

M. Bunsen says, "The bones of the two oppressors, (Cheops and Chephren, builders of the first and second,) who for two generations tormented hundreds of thousands day after day, have been torn from their sepulchral chambers, which were destined to defy the curiosity and destructiveness of men, and preserve their bodies from the annihilation which they dreaded. But the good and philanthropic king, (Mycerinus, builder of the third,) who put an end to the inhuman oppression of the people, and in consequence of this, lived in poetry and song, even to the latest times, as the people's darling, has, even to our days, although his coffin has been broken open, remained in his own pyramid, and has now, rescued from the mass of ruins, found a resting-place worthy of him.* A notable destiny! The old monarchy of the Pharaohs, of which he was the eighteenth ruler, has passed away; two other monarchies have followed it, and the destroyers of the most ancient have also made their exit from the stage of history. The gods of Egypt have crumbled into dust; 'son of the Pharaohs' is a name of reproach in the Pharaohs' land; even the language has grown dumb among the people. The body of Mencheres, (Myserinus,) however, now rests more securely than it did 5,000 years ago—in the world-ruling island which is protected by the might of freedom and civilization, still more than by the waves which encircle it—amid the treasures of every realm of nature, and the most sublime remains of human art."

The country of Egypt, after many wars, and frequently changing its masters, is at present under the dominion of the Turkish government; and the people, from being the most learned and enlightened in the world, are become abject slaves, and are now sunk into the grossest ignorance.

EGYPT, River of, Josh. xv. 47.—The river of Egypt, and Hamath, formed the two extremities of the country. When Solomon, therefore, at the dedication of the temple, assembled all Israel, from Sihor of Egypt, even unto the entering of Hamath, the river of Egypt, it means that guests from every place between the northern and southern extremities of his dominions, attended on that occasion. It does not mean the Nile, but the Sihor, or the brook Bezor, which runs into the Mediterranean; 2 Chron. xii. 8. See 1 Chron. xiii. 5.

EGYPT, — Symbolical now for wickedness; Rev. xi. 8.

EHI, E'-hy, my brother.—The sixth son of Benjamin; Gen. xlvi. 21.

EHUD, E'-hud, he that praises.—The son of Gera, a Benjamite; Judges iii. 15. A left-handed person who delivered Israel from the oppression of Eglon, king of Moab, who had enslaved them eighteen years. Being appointed to convey to him the annual tribute, Ehud having delivered the present, pretended he had something of importance to tell the king, and having obtained a private audience, stabbed him to the heart with a poniard. See Jud. iii. 15—26.

EKER, E'-ker, barren, feeble.—A descendant of Judah; 1 Chron. ii. 27.

EKRON, Ek'-ron, barrenness.—A city of the Philistines. It fell by lot to the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 45, afterwards given to the tribe of Dan. It was near the Mediterranean, about 34 miles to the west of Jerusalem. It was a powerful city; Josh. xix. 43.

ELADAH, El'-a-dah, the eternity of God.—A descendant of Ephraim the patriarch; 1 Chron. vii. 20.

ELAH, E'-lah, an elm, oak, or oath.—A ruler of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 41.—The son of Baasha, king of Israel; 1 Kings xvi. 6.—The name of a valley, a few miles south-west of Jerusalem, where David slew the giant Goliath; 1 Sam. xvii. 19.

ELAM, E'-lam, a young man, a virgin, secret, an age.—The eldest son of Shem, who settled in a country to which he gave his name; probably Persia.—Elam.—Elam, the town or country peopled by Elam, is to be found in ancient authors under the names of Elana, Elah, Elas, Elan, or Elon; Gen. x. 22.

ELASAH, El'-a-sah, the doings of God.—One of the sons of Pashur; Ezra x. 22.

ELATH, E'-lath, a hind, strength, an oak.—A place in the wilderness; Deut. ii. 8.—A part of Idumea, on the Red Sea, the emporium of Syria in Asia. It was taken by David, who there established an extensive trade. Solomon also built ships there; 2 Chron. viii. 17, 18.

EL-BETH-EL, El-beth'-el the God of Bethel.—A place where Jacob built an altar; Gen. xxxv. 7.

ELDAAH, El'-da-ah, the knowledge of God.—A grandson of Abraham; Gen. xxv. 4.

ELDAD, El'-dad, loved of God.—One of the seventy elders of Israel; Num. xi. 24—25. He and Medah had the gift of prophecy.

ELDERS. Anciently persons were chosen for office, and important duties on account of their age, wisdom, and experience. The Jewish elders were the magistrates and rulers of the people; Ex. iii. 16. The appointment of elders to assist Moses, is narrated; Ex. xviii. 13—26; Num. xi. 16—30. Thus seventy elders were enrolled as judges. From the institution of elders many think originated the Sanhedrim or council of the Jews.

Elder in the New Testament is a general name, comprehending under it all such as have any ecclesiastical function, as apostles, pastors, teachers, or other church officers; 1 Tim. v. 17; Tit. i. 5. The apostle Peter calls himself an elder, "The elders that are among you I exhort, who also am an elder," 1 Pet. v. 1.

ELEALEH, E-le-ay'-leh, burnt offering of God.—A town of the tribe of Reuben; Num. xxxii. 37.

ELEASAH, E-le-ay'-sah, the doings of God.—The son of Helez; 1 Chron. ii. 39.

ELEAZAR, E-le-ay'-zar, help, or court of God.—The third son of Aaron, and his successor in the priesthood; Ex. vi. 23.—He entered the promised land with Joshua, and died there. The high-priesthood was vested in his family to the times of Eli; Num. xx. 26—28; Josh. xxiv. 33.—The son of Abinadab; 1 Sam. vii. 1.—The son of Dodo, one of David's worthies; 1 Chron. xi. 11—18.—The son of Eliud; Matt. i. 15.

ELECT, or chosen, is spoken, (1) of Christ, who was chosen and set apart by God the Father to the great work of mediation and redemption; Isa. xlii. 1; Matt. xii. 18. (2) Of good angels, whom God chose from among the rest to eternal life and happiness: "I charge thee before the elect angels," 1 Tim. v. 21. (3) Of the Israelites, who were God's chosen and peculiar people; Isa. lxxv. 9, 22. (4) Of such as are chosen by God in Christ to eternal life and salvation out of all the nations upon earth; Tit. i. 1. Believers are exhorted by faith and good works to make their "calling and election sure," 2 Pet. i. 10.

EL-ELOHE-ISRAEL, El-el-o'-he-iz'-ra-el, to God the God of Israel.—The name of an altar erected by Jacob; Gen. xxxiii. 20.

ELEMENTS. The constituent parts of compound bodies. Fire, air, earth, and water, used to be called elements; but it is now ascertained that all these are compounds. The earth, in its various kinds of original matter, shall be melted with fervent heat at Christ's second coming; 2 Pet. iii. 10. (See Heavens.) Elements also signify the alphabet of letters, and syllables formed of them; and the phrase is thence used to signify the rudiments, or first principles of a science; Col. ii. 8; Heb. v. 12. The "rudiments of this world," which are not to be used in the gospel-church, are ceremonial laws and human customs, which are not proper for such as enjoy the clear instructions of the gospel; Col. ii. 20—22.

ELEMENTS. "But the day of the Lord will come, as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens will pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with a fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up;" 2 Pet. iii. 10. Estius, by the elements, understands the elements of which this terraqueous globe is composed. But the melting of these is mentioned ver. 12. Macknight thinks, that the apostle is speaking of the electrical matter, the sulphureous vapours, the clouds, and whatever else floats in the air, and the air itself, all which burning furiously, will be disunited and separated. God can effect the great change mentioned by Peter, by resolving the atmosphere, &c., into its primitive elements, and open the bowels of the earth, and let loose its fires.

Sir Roderick Murchison says, "I infer from the increase of temperature in deep mines, and from outbursts of igneous matter, that the existence of a central heat cannot be denied." Sir David Brewster, one of the most accomplished philosophers of the day, stated in 1862, to the University of Edinburgh—"Imprisoning under its elastic crust fire and water, and other elements of danger, their explosive forces are exhausted in the earthquake, and find vent in the volcano, the safety-valve of the great caldron which boils beneath our feet." Dr. Cumming strikingly observes;—"The very earth on which our houses, and our castles, and our banks, and our warehouses are built, is just a charged live shell. The mere surface, a few thousand feet in depth, is the shell; but the interior, some 7,000 miles in diameter, is one ocean of surging fire: and God has only to withdraw the repressive force, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, and the earth and the things that are therein shall all be burned up."

ELHANAN, El-hay'-nan, grace, gift.—The son of Dodo, one of David's warriors; 2 Sam. xxi. 19; 1 Chr. xi. 26.

ELI, E'ly, the offering or lifting up. A high-priest of the Hebrews, who succeeded Abdon, and governed the Hebrews, both as priest and Judge, during forty years. He was a descendant of Ithamar, the fourth son of Aaron. The high-priest's office had been till his time in the family of Eleazar, the elder branch of Aaron's family, and probably was transferred to him by the command of God, as a testimony of his approval of his services as the judge of Israel. See 1 Sam. ii. 27, 28. Thus God highly honoured him.

His old age was embittered by the evil conduct of his two sons Hophni and Phinehas. This he must have attributed to his parental indulgence, and his neglect of salutary discipline and restraint. Hence Samuel was directed to announce to him the judgments that would fall upon his family for such criminal neglect; 1 Sam. iii. 11—18. These judgments were deferred some years, but they fell upon him at last with dreadful severity. Eli appears to have been suitably affected under a conviction of his guilt, and as a true penitent, to have cast himself at the feet of his offended God, 1 Sam. iii. 18. "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good."

His two sons carried the ark with them into battle in order, as they presumed, to secure victory. But they were wicked. The ark was taken, and they were slain. "Eli sat upon a seat by the way-side watching: for his heart trembled for the ark of God." At length the cry of distress was heard, upon the arrival of a messenger, who thus related to him the fatal event of the battle :—"Israel is fled before the Philistines, and there hath been also a great slaughter among the people; and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead, and the ark of God is taken," ch. iv 17. This was more than he could bear. "When mention was made of the ark of God," in the excess of his sorrow, unable to support himself, "he fell backward, and his neck brake, and he died," verse 18. Having attained the age of ninety-eight years, during forty of which he had judged Israel. See 1 Sam. i. 3.

Also, Eli, or Heli; Luke iii. 23.

ELIAB, E-ly'-ab, God my father.—The son of Helon, prince of the tribe of Zebulun, Num. i. 9.—The son of Jesse, David's brother, 1 Sam. xvi. 6.—One who joined David at Ziklag, 1 Chron. xii. 9.—The son of Elkanah, a Levite, 1 Chron. vi. 27.

ELIADA, E-ly'-a-dah, the knowledge of God.—The son of David by one of his concubines, 2 Sam. v. 16.—A general in Jehoshaphat's army, 2 Chr. xvii. 17.

ELIAH, E-ly'-ah, God the Lord.—A descendant of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 27.—One who returned from captivity, Ezra x. 26.

ELIAHBA, E-ly'-ah-bah.—One of David's worthies, 2 Sam. xxiii. 32.

ELIAKIM, E-ly'-a-kim, the resurrection of God.—The son of Hilkiah, Hezekiah's steward, 2 Kings xviii. 18.—Jehoiakim, king of Judah; his name was changed from Eliakim to Jehoiakim, 2 Kings xxiii. 34.

ELIAM, E-ly'-am, the people of God.—The father of Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah, 2 Sam. xi. 3.—A son of Ahithophel, one of David's worthies, 2 Sam. xxiii. 34.

ELIAS, E-ly'-as, God the Lord.—See ELIJAH.—John the Baptist, Matt. xvi. 14; xvii. 12.

ELIAS.—"Art thou (speaking to John the Baptist) Elias? And he saith, I am not;" John i. 21. Supposed to contradict the declaration of Christ in Matt. xi. 14; xvii. 12, 13, in which he declares that John was the ELIAS.—The Jews had an expectation, founded on a literal interpretation of Malachi, that before Messiah came, that very same Elias, or Elijah, would rise from the dead, and appear again on earth. John truly answered that he was not that Elias. But, as he came in the spirit and power of Elijah, our Saviour might with truth assure his disciples that John was that Elias or Elijah, whose coming Malachi had, in a figurative sense, foretold. See Luke i. 17, and Matt. xvii. 13.

ELIASAPH, E-ly'-a-saf, the Lord increaseth.—The son of Deuel, a prince of the tribe of Gad, Num. i. 14.

ELIASHIB, E-ly'-a-shib, the God of conversion.—Son of Elioenai; 1 Chr. iii. 24.—A singer; Ezra x. 24.—A Jewish high-priest. He was the grandson of Joshua, the high-priest, and rebuilt part of the wall of Jerusalem; 1 Chron. xxiv. 12.

ELIATHAH, E-ly'-a-thah, thou art my God.—A son of Heman, and a singer in the temple, 1 Chr. xxv. 27.

ELIDAD, E-ly'-dad, beloved of God.—Son of Chislon, appointed to divide the land of Canaan, Num. xxxiv. 21.

ELIEL, El'-e-el, God my God.—The name of two of David's mighty men, 1 Chron. xi. 46; xii. 11.

ELIENAI, E-le'-e-na-i, the God of mine eyes.—One of the posterity of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 20.

ELIEZER, E-le'-e-zer, the help of God.—A native of Damascus, and steward of Abraham's house, Gen. xv. 1–3.—The son of Moses, Exod. xviii. 4.—A Levite, 1 Chron. xv. 24.—The son of Zichri, a commander under Solomon, 1 Chron. xxvii. 16.—The son of Dodavah, a prophet, 2 Chron. xx. 37.—The name of one who returned from Babylon, Ezra x. 23.

ELIHOREPH, El'-e-ho'-ref, the God of winter, of youth.—A Jewish scribe, 1 Kings iv. 3.

ELIHU, E-ly'-hew, himself, my God.—One of David's worthies, 1 Chron. xii. 20.—A porter of the temple, 1 Chron. xxvi. 7.—A brother of king David, 1 Chron. xxvii. 18.—Grandfather of Elkanah, father of Samuel, 1 Sam. i. 1. — One of Job's friends, the native of a place or country called Buz. He attended the conference between Job and his three friends. After listening to the arguments on both sides, he obtained liberty to speak. He censured Job's three friends for their insinuations of hypocrisy, and being the victim of Divine judgments. He also censures some of Job's unguarded expressions in answer to his three friends; and then in a sublime and affecting manner, he reminds Job of the majesty, purity, and infinite wisdom and justice of the Most High, as motives to humility, submission, and patience; Job ch. 32—37.

The lenity and moderation of Elihu beautifully contrast with the asperity of the other three. His spirit is mild, equitable, free from adulation and severity, and admirably adapted to soothe and comfort the mind of God's afflicted servant.

ELIJAH, E-ly'-jah, God is my Lord.—A Jewish prophet, a native of the town of Tishbe, situated in the land of Gilead, beyond the Jordan. See 1 Kings xvii. ; xviii. 19. He was raised up by Divine Providence to effect most important and glorious purposes; especially to oppose idolatry, &c. Elijah is introduced, saying to Ahab, "As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years," &c.; 1 Kings xvii. 1. These years were three and a half; Luke iv. 25; Jas. v. 17. Revenge from Ahab was expected, and therefore the Lord commanded Elijah to conceal himself beyond Jordan, near the brook Cherith. He obeyed, and there God fed him by ravens. Water being scarce there, God sent him to Zarephath, a city of the Sidonians. To a widow gathering sticks without the city, he applied for water, and then for bread. She said, "As the Lord liveth, I have no bread, but only a handful of meal," &c.; 1 Kings xvii. 12; the miracles he performed are recorded in the following verses.

The famine became extreme, and Ahab sent forth persons to search for forage. Obadiah, one of the royal officers, being thus employed, Elijah met him, and directed him to say to Ahab, "Behold, Elijah is here!" Ahab came and charged him with being the cause of the terrible calamity; to which the prophet firmly replied, that it was the fault of Ahab and his house who had offended God by their idolatries. The test to discover the troubler of Israel is described, 1 Kings xviii. 17, &c. After this, Elijah said to Ahab, "Go, eat and drink, for I hear the noise of abundance of rain." Elijah went to the top of Carmel, and throwing himself on the earth, sent his servant to look toward the sea. He went six times without seeing any thing; but the seventh time reported, that he saw a cloud rising out of the sea, as large as a man's hand. Elijah said to his servant, "Go, and say unto Ahab, Prepare thy chariot, and away, that the rain stop thee not." The king got into his chariot, and went to Jezreel. Elijah girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab's chariot; and the rain fell in abundance.

Jezebel, the wife of Ahab, threatened Elijah for slaying her prophets, which caused him to flee. Why did not he who had wrought such miracles, stand his ground? Alas! his faith failed him, and he conferred with flesh and blood instead of trusting in God. He fled to Beersheba, and from thence into Arabia Petraea. Exhausted with fatigue, he threw himself down beneath a juniper tree, and requested God to take him out of the world. An angel touched him, and said, "Arise and eat." Looking around him, he saw a cake baked on the coals, and a cruise of water; he ate and drank, and again slept. The angel again awakened him, and said, "Rise and eat; the journey is too great for thee." He rose, ate and drank, and went in the strength of that meat forty days and forty nights, unto Horeb the mount of God.

In the cave God said unto him, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" And he said, "I am very jealous for the Lord of hosts; for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left, and they seek my life to take it away." The Lord said, Go forth, and stand at the entrance of thy cave. When there, a strong wind passed by, but the Lord was not in the impetuous wind; after this, the earth trembled, but the Lord was not in the earthquake; after the earthquake there was a fire; but the Lord was not in the fire; after this fire the breathing of a gentle wind; that instant Elijah prostrated himself on the earth, and covered his face in his mantle. The Lord asked him as before, What doest thou here, Elijah? and he answered as before. The Lord said to him, "Return to the wilderness of Damascus, anoint Hazael king over Syria, Jehu king over Israel, and Elisha to be prophet in thy room. Whosoever escapeth the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay; and him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha slay. Nor do thou think, that thou only hast continued faithful to my covenant, for I have reserved seven thousand men in Israel, who have not bowed their knees to Baal, who have not adored him, by lifting up their hands to their mouths and kissing them." Elijah, therefore, departing from mount Horeb, went into the tribe of Ephraim, and called Elisha. Some years after, Ahab having seized Naboth's vineyard, and Jezebel condemned that honest Israelite, the Lord commanded Elijah to reproach Ahab with his crime. Elijah met him going to Naboth's vineyard to take possession of it, and said, "In the very place where the dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall they lick thy blood also. And the dogs shall eat Jezebel by the wall of Jezreel."

Ahaziah, the son and successor of Ahab, having fallen from the platform of his house, sent to consult Baal-zebub, the idol-god of Ekron. Elijah, by Divine command, met the messengers, and assured them that the king would not recover. They returned and related this to the king, who became wroth and sought his life. See 2 Kings i. 5—18. His translation is graphically described, 2 Kings ch. 2. While he and Elisha were walking and talking together, angelic hosts in the form of a fiery or radiant chariot and horses descended, and coming between them separated them; for Elijah mounting the chariot was by a whirlwind carried into heaven, while Elisha, who beheld him ascend, cried to him, "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof;" after which he saw him no more, but gathering up the mantle which Elijah dropped as he was ascending, he returned to the banks of the Jordan, and with Elijah's mantle smote the waters, which again divided, and he passed through them. And by this the sons of the prophets, who were spectators, became convinced that the spirit of Elijah had descended upon Elisha; 2 Kings ii. 1—16.

ELIJAH being fed by ravens, has been ridiculed by infidels, and represented as incredible, &c. All things are possible with God, and no one can doubt his power to have worked a miracle in Elijah's case. However, the original word OREBIM, rendered ravens, signifies Arabian. See 2 Chr. xxi. 16; Neh. iv. 7; where it is correctly rendered Arabian. According to Bereshith Rabba, (a Rabbinical commentary on Genesis,) there anciently was a town near Bethshan, where Elijah concealed himself, and Jerome a learned writer of the fourth century, says, that the Orebim, inhabitants of a town on the confines of the Arabs, gave nourishment to Elijah. His testimony is of great value, because he spent several years in Palestine to enable him to understand, to explain, and translate the Holy Scriptures. The Arabic version considers the word as meaning a people, Orabim, and not ravens or fowls of any kind. Jarchi, a Jewish commentator, gives the same interpretation. It is, therefore, most likely that some of the inhabitants of Oreb or Orbo, furnished the prophet with food, being especially and divinely directed so to do; for we cannot suppose that Elijah would receive his meat from such unclean animals as ravens are, contrary to that law of which he was so zealous and intrepid a defender.

ELIJAH.—“He (Elijah) answered him, Go tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here,” &c.; 1 Kings xviii. 8, 9. It has been asked why Obadiah should fear that Ahab would slay him, for telling him that Elijah was in such a place? The reason is implied in verse 12; namely, that Obadiah feared the providence of God would direct the prophet to avoid the search of Ahab, as he hitherto had done; and that Ahab would put Obadiah to death, for not securing him when he had it in his power.

ELIJAH mocked them, and said, cry aloud—peradventure he sleepeth, &c. See 1 Kings xviii. 27, &c. These taunts of Elijah, were founded on the absurd and grovelling ideas entertained by the Heathens of the gods they worshipped. They ascribed to them certain employments; to one the management of the winds, to another, that of the water, &c; the cares of which were supposed necessarily to distract their minds at particular periods. The same notions still prevail among the Heathen of the limited powers of their deities. Thus Siva, the principal god of the Hindoos, we are told once fell into a profound reverie, and that, in consequence, there were great public calamities. At a particular season of the year he is represented as engaged in the pleasures of the chase. To gratify him with them, his image and that of his favourite wife, are taken from his temple, placed in a car, and carried out to the open fields. Sometimes he is supposed to have gone on a long journey. Sometimes he is said to be reposing, particularly on one occasion, when he assumed the form of a porter, he wearied himself with his task, and fell asleep through fatigue. See Isa. xl. 28.

God.—The Harodite, one of David's valiant men, 2 Sam. xxiii. 25.

ELIM, E'-lim, the rams, the strong, the strags.—The sixth encampment of the Israelites, Exod. xv. 27.

ELIMELECH, E-lim'-e-lek, my God is king.—A person driven by famine from Bethlehem into Moab, Ruth i. 1—5.

ELIOENAI, El-e-o'-en-ay, towards him are my eyes, 1 Chron. iii. 24.

Son of Neariah, 1 Chron. iii. 23. (2)

Son of Becher, 1 Chron. vii. 8. (3)

Son of Meshelemiah, 1 Chron. xxvi. 3. (4) Son of Zerabiah, who separated from his wife because she was of a foreign religion, Ezra viii. 4; x. 22.

ELIPHAL, El'-e-fal, the God of deliverance.—A son of Ur, one of David's great warriors; 1 Chron. xi. 35.

ELIPHALET, E-lif'-fa-let, the God of deliverance.—A son of David; 2 Sam. v. 16.

ELIPHAZ, El'-e-faz, endeavour of God.—Son of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 4.

—One of Job's friends, who came to console with him in his affliction. He was a native of Teman in Idumæa: and as Eliphaz, the son of Esau, had a son called Teman, from whom the place took its name, there is reason to conclude that this Eliphaz, was a descendant of the former. If so, then Job lived in the Patriarchal age; Job ii. 11.

ELIPHELEH, E-lif'-fe-leh, the judgment of God.—A singer and porter in the temple, 1 Chr. xv. 21.

ELISABETH, or ELIZABETH, E-liz'-a-beth, the oath of God.—The wife of Zacharias, mother of John the Baptist. She was a woman of exalted piety, and she had the spirit of prophecy, as is evident from her beautiful songs, Luke i. 5, 6, 41—45. Elizabeth hid herself five months, Luke i. 24. It appears that the ladies of ancient Palestine observed the custom which prevails among the Hindoos and other Eastern females of the present day, who from motives of delicacy, secluded themselves from the society of their nearest acquaintance for a considerable period, immediately previous to the birth of their first child. Ward.

ELISEUS, El-i-see'-us.—The Greek name of Elisha, Luke iv. 27.

ELISHA, E-ly'-shah, salvation of God.—The son of Shaphat, Elijah's disciple, and successor to Elijah, in the prophetic office, 1 Kings xix. &c. Elijah having received God's command to anoint Elisha as his successor, he found him at Abel-meholah ploughing with twelve pair of oxen. He threw his mantle over him as a symbol of his being clothed with the Spirit; and under that influence he immediately left all, and devoted himself to God's service. Immediately after the ascension of Elijah, he gave evidence of his inspiration by smiting the waters of the Jordan, and they parted asunder and opened him a passage! His life, character, acts, &c., are most interesting. The whole should be carefully read and studied. See 2 Kings 2, and following chapters.

ELISHA, the destruction of 42 little children through his instrumentality, is said by infidels to have been an act of cruelty and revenge.—The original word in 2 Kings ii. 23, 24, (NEARIM), little children, also means young persons who are grown up. Isaac was called (NAAR) a lad, when he was twenty-eight years old; Joseph when thirty; and Rehoboam when he was forty years of age. Bethel was a principal seat of Ahab's idolatry; and these men, no doubt, instigated by the priests of Baal, came out from that city to insult the prophet, exclaiming—Ascend, thou bald-head; ascend, thou bald-head, in allusion to Elijah's ascension to heaven, of which they had heard, but which they did not believe. Elisha did not curse them from any petulant temper of his own, but "in the name of the Lord;" that is, he declared and foretold, in his name and authority, the punishment he would inflict upon them, and thus acted as a minister of the Supreme Governor of the world. Such a punishment could not have resulted from the angry resentment of the prophet only, but from a DIVINE IMPULSE.

ELISHAH, E-ly'-shah, it is God, God that gives help.—The son of Javan, Gen. x. 4.

ELISHAMA, E-lish'-a-man, God hearing.—The son of Ammihud, Num. vii. 48.—Two of David's sons, 1 Chron. iii. 6, 8.—The father of Nethaniah, 2 Kings xxv. 25.—A levite, 2 Chron. xvii. 8.

ELISHAPHAT, E-lish'-a-fat, my God judgeth.—The son of Zichri, 2 Chron. xxiii. 1.

ELISHEBA, E-lish'-e-bah, God hath sworn.—The daughter of Amminadab, and wife of Aaron, Ex. vi. 23.

ELISHUA, El-e-shu'-a, God is my salvation.—A son of David, 2 Sam. v. 15.

ELIUD, E-ly'-ud, God is my praise.—Matt. i. 14.

ELIZAPHAN, E-liz'-a-fan.—The son of Uzziel, uncle to Aaron, Num. iii. 30.—One of the deputies appointed to divide the land of promise, Num. xxxiv. 25.

ELIZAR, E-ly'-zar, God is my strength, my rock.—The son of Shedeur, of the tribe of Reuben, Num. vii. 30.

ELKANAH, El-ka'-nah, the zeal of God.—The son of Korah, Ex. vi. 24.—The husband of Hannah, and father of Samuel, 1 Sam. i. 1. See 1 Chron. xii. 6.

ELKOSHITE, El'-ko-shite. — An inhabitant of Elkith, a village in Galilee, Nahum i. 1.

ELLASAR, El'-la-sar, revolting from God.—A city of the Canaanites, Gen. xiv. 1.

ELM. The Hebrew word allah, here rendered elm, is elsewhere translated into oak, Hosea iv. 13.

ELMODAM, El'-mo-dam, God of measure, of the garment.—One named in the genealogy of Christ, Luke iii. 27.

ELNAAM, El'-na-am. — One of David's worthies, 1 Chron. xi. 46.

ELNATHAN, El'-na-than, God's gift.—The grandfather of Jehoiadah, king of Judah, Jer. xxxvi. 12.—A person of consequence mentioned Ezra viii. 16.

ELOI, or ELOHIM, El'-o-hy, El'-o-hym.—One of the names of Deity. The derivation is traced to a root found in the Arabic, meaning to adore. God is great, the High and Lofty One, and must be revered and adored. Elohim is plural, and is generally associated with singular verbs and pronouns—denoting thereby the trinity of persons in the unity of the Godhead, Gen. i. 26.—ELOI, my God.—This word is derived from EL, or ALAH, to adore; or from EL and JAH, the mighty and infinite Jehovah. In Ps. 22. we “read, ELI! ELI! my God, why hast thou forsaken me?” Christ on the cross quoted these words; but he uttered them in the Syro-Chaldaic.

ELON, E’-lon, oak, grove, strong—A city in the tribe of Dan. Josh. xix. 43.—A Hittite, father of Esau’s wife, Gen. xxvi. 34.—A man of Zebulon, Num. xxvi. 26.—A judge of Israel, Judges xii. 11.

ELON-BETH-HANAN, E’-lon-beth’-ha-nan, house of great mercy—A place in the land of Judah, 1 Kings iv. 9.

ELOQUENT, of an elegant and clear speech, penetrating, affecting, animating, &c, Ex. 4. 10; Is. 3. 3; Acts 18. 24.

ELOTH, E’-loth, strong—A seaport of Edom, on the Red Sea, 2 Chron. viii. 17.

ELPAAL, El’-pa-al.—A descendant of Benjamin. 1 Chron. viii. 12.

EL-PARAN, El-pay’-ran.—A place. Gen. xiv. 6.

ELTEKEH, El’-te-keh.—A city in the tribe of Dan. Josh. xix. 44.

ELTEKON, El’-te-kon.—A town in the tribe of Judah. Josh. xv. 59.

ELTOLAD, El’-to-lad.—A town in the tribe of Judah.—Josh. xv. 30.

ELUL, E’-lul, cry, outcry.—The sixth month of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, and the twelfth of their civil, answering to our August and part of September, containing twenty-nine days.

ELUZAI, E-lew’-za-i, God is my strength.—An officer in David’s army; 1 Chron. xii. 5.

ELYMAS, El’-e-mas, a sorcerer, a magician.—A sorcerer struck blind for opposing Paul; Acts xiii. 8, 11.

ELZABAD, El’-za-bad, dowry of God.—Son of Shemaiah, a Levite, a porter of the temple; 1 Chron. xxvi. 7. The name of one of David’s worthies; 1 Chr. xii. 12.

ELZAPHAN, El’-za-fan.—Descendant of Levi; Ex. vi. 22.

EMBALMED ‘him,’ Gen. 1. 26. An ancient art of preserving the body from putrefaction. The Egyptians excelled in it, and the ancient Israelites imitated them. The process was expensive, but effectual. The embalming of the body, was the preservation of it by saltpetre, myrrh, aloes, and other substances, which were either wrapped around it by means of bandages, or were placed in its cavities by incisions made into them. By this means, the bodies of friends were often preserved for ages. Some of those thus prepared still exist, after many hundred of years. Many are to be seen in the British Museum, London.

The price of embalming a single body averaged from £35 to £300; that of the poor was much less. The features of the deceased person were often painted on the coffin. Sometimes it was placed upright against the wall for years, a perpetual memento mori to its survivors. Generally, embalmed bodies were placed in subterraneous vaults in the ground, or in the rock. In these vaults in Egypt, mummies in great numbers have been found after the lapse of two or three thousand years. Sepulchres have been opened in which thousands of bodies have been found, placed in rows one upon another, all preserved by means of bitumen.

EMBOLDEN. To make daring or bold; Job 16. 3; 1 Cor. 8. 10.

EMBRACE. To receive kindly; Gen. xxix. 13.—To shelter from the rain; Job xxiv. 8.—To love wisdom; Prov. iv. 8.—To love and trust the promises; Heb. xi. 13.—Affectionate salutations; Gen. xlviii. 10, 11.

EMBROIDER. Working in gold, silver, or silk thread by the needle, upon cloth, stuffs, or muslins, of various figures. We read of “fine linen and brodered work from Egypt.”

“rayment of needlework,” and “clothing of wrought gold.” The drapery of the tabernacle, the priestly garments, &c., must have been exquisitely beautiful; for in addition to the skill in embroidery which the Israelites acquired in Egypt, much of their skill was the result of Divine direction; Ex. xxviii. 39; xxxv. 35.

EMERALD. A precious stone of a beautiful green colour, and next in hardness to the ruby. The deepest colours are the most valuable. It was one of the stones in the breast-plate of the high-priest; Ex. xxviii. 18.

EMERODS. A disease, the character of which is not exactly known. Most commentators consider it to be what is now called piles; Deut. xxviii. 27; 1 Sam. v. 12.

EMIMS, E'-mims, fears of terrors, people.—Ancient inhabitants of the land of Canaan, beyond Jordan, defeated by Chedorlaomer and his allies; Gen. xiv. 5.

EMINENT, high, honourable, Ezek. 16. 24, 31; 17. 22.

EMMANUEL, Em-man'-u-el, God with us.—One of the titles of the Messiah, which Jesus Christ verified by becoming incarnate, God with us, and dying for guilty man, and then rising from the grave, for his justification; an indication of his eternal power and Godhead. He was “God manifest in the flesh;” Isa. vii. 14; viii. 7; Matt. i. 23.

“The stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Emmanuel,” Isa. viii. 8. St. Matthew says, that this prophecy was accomplished in the birth of Christ, born of the virgin Mary, in whom the two natures, divine and human, were united; and so in this sense he was really Emmanuel, or God with us; Matt. i. 23. Had no prediction taught the world to expect a deliverer; had no miracle declared him the great Lord of the universe; had no voice from heaven proclaimed him the beloved Son of God, he must have stood confessed the predicted Emmanuel, God with us, in his compassion to the miserable, in his patience with the forward, in his forbearance towards the evil and unthankful, in his clemency to the guilty. The gospel of our Emmanuel breathes “peace on earth and good will to men;” its unbounded liberality diffuses its influence over the whole world of mankind; its professed aim and end are to confer all possibly attainable happiness on every human being, in the life which now is, and perfect and everlasting felicity in that which is to come.

EMMAUS, Em'-ma-us, or Em-may-us, people despised. A village seven or eight miles north of Jerusalem, in the tribe of Judah, celebrated as the place for Christ's interview with two of his disciples; Luke xxiv. 13.

EMMOR, Em'-mor, an ass.—The father of Sychem; Acts vii. 16.

EMPTY, Gen. 31. 42, & 37. 24, & 41. 27. Ec. 23. 15. none shall appear before me e. 34. 20; Deut. 16. 16.

EMULATION, means striving to excel in what is good, Rom. 11. 14; in what is evil, Gal. 5. 20.

ENAM, E'-nam, a fountain.—A town; Josh. xv. 34.

ENAN, E'-nan.—A descendant of Naphtali; Num. i. 15.

ENCAMP, signifies to besiege; 2 Sam. xi. 11. To fix tents in journeying; Num. ii. 17; Ex. xiv. 2. To be protected by the angel of the Lord; Psalm xxxiv. 7.

ENCHANTMENTS.—Incantations by lustral fires, fumigations; Ex. vii. 11; Num. xxiii. 23.

ENCOUNTER, to provoke, to dispute; Acts xvii. 18.

ENCOURAGE, to embolden, to animate; Deut. i. 38; 1 Sam. xxx. 6. ‘END of the world,’ Matt. xxiv. 3; 1 Cor. x. 11; Heb. ix. 26. means the conclusion of the age;—the close of the Jewish dispensation, including church and state.

ENDS ‘of the earth,’ Ps. xxii. 27; Ixvii. 7; Isa. v. 26; xli. 5; xlv. 22; the inhabitants of the earth to its remotest parts.

EN-GANNIM, En-gan'-nim, the eye of protection, or well of gardens.—A city in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 34.—A city in the tribe of Issachar; Josh. xix. 21.

EN-GEDI, En'-ge-dy, fountain of the goat or of happiness. A city near Sodom. It is also called Hazazon-Tamar, or the palm-tree city; 2 Chron. xx. 2. It abounded with cypress, vines, and trees producing balm; Song i. 14. Josephus says this city stood near the lake of Sodom, about 30 miles south-east of Jerusalem. It was in the cave of Engedi that David had an opportunity of killing Saul, who was then in pursuit of him; 1 Sam. xxiv. According to travellers who have seen it, the cave was sufficiently large for 600, without being seen from the entrance.

ENGINES. Instruments of war, invented for the preservation of a place; 2 Chron. xxvi. 15. and for destruction; Ezek. xxvi. 9. "He lined.—The son of Jared, and father of Methusaleh; Gen. v. 18—21. He was born. A. M. 622, and to distinguish him from Enoch the son of Cain, he is called the seventh from Adam; Jude 14. Though he lived to a degenerate age, yet he stood the highest in the scale of moral excellence. While multitudes were walking according to their evil propensities, fulfilling the lusts of the flesh, Enoch was humbly and acceptably walking with God. He was like a bright star amid surrounding darkness. The expression “walking with God” is very important. It includes reconciliation with God. Enoch doubtless knew that as a sinner he was lost, and his faith must have discerned the great Mediator, Christ Jesus. He rested upon Christ for Divine acceptance, and God looked upon him through the face of his Anointed. His faith produced that exemplary “walking,” or conduct, which so illustriously distinguished him from his contemporaries. “By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony that he pleased God;” Heb. xi. 5.—The history of Enoch is comprised in three words, (walked with God) while the exploits of an Alexander, a Caesar, or any of the scourges and destroyers of mankind, swell to many volumes.

EN-MISHPAT, En-mish'-pat, fountain of judgment.—A place sometimes called Kadesh; Gen. xiv. 7.

ENOCH. E'-nok, dedicated, discip-

ENOCH. Son of Cain, in honour of whom the first city mentioned in scripture was called Enoch, by his father Cain, who built it; Gen. iv. 17. It was situated east of Eden.

ENOCH. “And Enoch also the seventh from Adam,” Jude 14. He was not the seventh man from Adam that was born into the world, for, probably, thousands were born before him; but he was as the Jews express it, the seventh generation from him.

ENON, or ÆNON, E'-non, a cloud, his fountain.—A place near Salim, by the river Jordan, where John baptized, because it abounded with water; John iii. 23.

all evil.—The son of Seth, and father of Cainan; Gen. iv. 26. Great was the wickedness of the world then; but God had a remnant who feared and loved him. Hence the remarkable statement:—“Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord;” rather, “Then began men to call themselves (or to be called) by the name Jehovah.” Some had always called on or worshipped the Lord; but now that the faithful associated together, apart from the ungodly to observe publicly the rites sanctioned by Heaven. The importance of this separation may be seen in Gen. vi. 1—4.

EPAPHRAS, Ep'-a-fras, foamy.—A native of Colosse, and a faithful preacher. The Apostle calls him "his dear fellow-servant," and "a faithful minister of Christ." He suffered imprisonment at Rome; Col. i. 7; iv. 12.

EPAPHRODITUS, E-paf-ro-dy'tus, agreeable, handsome. An individual sent by the Philippian with money to Paul when a prisoner at Rome. Paul calls him "my brother, and fellow-soldier." Phil. ii. 25; iv. 18.

EPENETUS, E-pen'-e-tus, laudable. Paul's disciple, whom he calls the first fruits of Achaia. He was dear to the Apostle Paul; for he calls him his "well-beloved Epenetus." Rom. xvi. 5.

EPHAH, E'-fah, weary.—The eldest son of Midian; Gen. xxv. 4, who gave his name to a place in the country of Midian, on the eastern side of the Dead Sea; Isa. lx. 6, &c.—A female mentioned 1 Chron. ii. 46.

EPHAH, E'-fa. A measure of capacity for things dry and liquid. For dry it contained three pecks and three pints, and in liquid measure to seven gallons and four pints.

EPHAI, Ef'-a-i,—A Jew mentioned Jer. xl. 8.

EPHER, E'-fer.—The second son of Midian, and brother of Ephah; Gen. xxv. 4; 1 Chron. i. 33.

EPHES-DAMMIM, E'-fez-dam'-mim, the effusion or drop of blood.—A place in Canaan where the Philistines encamped; 1 Sam. xvii. 1. See 1 Chr. xi. 13, 14.

EPHESIANS. Epistle to.—The Apostle Paul successfully laboured three years in this city and the surrounding regions. The number converted principally through his instrumentality was great, and the truths of the gospel were spread over all Asia Minor. To these persons he addressed this Epistle. He wrote it in his prison-house at Rome, A. D. 61, and by it he earnestly sought to impress on their minds the great doctrines of the gospel, and to excite them to a holy conversation in the Lord, and to a manifestation of love, unity and firmness in their Christian warfare. The style of this Epistle is very elevated. Overjoyed with the account which their messenger brought of their faith and holiness, ch. i. 15, and transported with the consideration of the unsearchable wisdom of God, displayed towards the Gentiles, in making them partakers, through faith, of all the benefits of Christ's death, equally with the Jews, he soars high in his sentiments on these grand subjects, and gives his thoughts utterance in sublime and copious expressions. The Epistle seems to have been written in a rapture. Grotius, says, "This Epistle expresses the sublime matters contained in words more sublime than are to be found in any human language; and this character is so just, that no Christian can read the doctrinal part of the Epistle to the Ephesians, without being impressed and roused by it, as by the sound of a trumpet."

EPHESUS, E'-fe-sus, desirable.—A celebrated city of Ionia, in Asia Minor, situated upon the river Cayster, about 45 miles south of Smyrna. It is said to have been built by Ephesus, an Amazon lady, as early as the days of David. It was noted for its famous temple of Diana, which for its size and workmanship was accounted one of the seven wonders of the world. Its length was 425 feet, breadth 220; and it had 127 marble pillars, 60 or 70 feet high, presented by as many kings. Some of these were beautifully carved; the rest were polished. All the provinces of Asia contributed to its building, and 200 years were employed on it. This splendid edifice was seven times set on fire. It was first burnt on the very day on which Socrates was poisoned, 400 years B. C. Again, on the same night on which Alexander the Great was born, by an incendiary, Erostrates, for the purpose of obtaining a name, which he had failed in obtaining by other means. It is now a heap of ruins, the only population being a few wretched Turks, and Greeks, who reside in their miserable huts, in a poor village in the vicinity of its site, so truly has Christ removed his candlestick; Acts xix. 1; Rev. ii. 1.

Among the people of Ephesus Paul stayed, reasoning with the Jews in their synagogues during three months, and returning to them after he had kept the feast at Jerusalem. He then preached the word to them with such success, and performed such miracles among them, that a numerous church was formed there; and it became the centre of Christianity in Asia Minor.

The extent of the walls of the city was four miles, being built in a rough manner, but faced with stone, and defended at intervals by towers. Its site has been frequently changed; and Lysimachus is said to have stopped the drains in the lower part of the city, to drive the inhabitants to the upper part, which was considered a more advantageous situation. Part of one of the entrance-gates still remains, adorned with some fine bas-reliefs.

After the destruction of the magnificent temple of Diana, it was resolved to construct another, to surpass the former in grandeur and beauty. This was accordingly done, it being of the Ionic order, and occupied 220 years to complete. Pliny states that it was 425 feet in length, 220 broad, and supported by 127 columns, 60 feet high—each the contribution of some prince—36 of them being richly carved. The architect, Chersiphron, being on the point of committing suicide, from the difficulties he encountered, was assured by Diana that she would complete that in which he failed, and he was, by these means encouraged to proceed. “Costly and magnificent offerings of various kinds were made to the goddess, and treasured in the temple, such as paintings, statues, &c., the value of which almost exceeded computation. The fame of the temple, the goddess, and of the city itself, was spread not only through Asia, but the world—a celebrity which was enhanced and diffused the more readily, because sacred games were practised there, which attracted competitors and spectators from every country. Nero is said to have despoiled the temple of much of its treasure.” Afterwards it was destroyed by the Goths, and the only remains are the extensive ruins at the head of the present port.

The ruins of the city lie about two days journey from Smyrna, and are comprised in the poor village of Aiasaluck, which consists of a few cottages, fallen even from what it once was as a Mohammedan town. This is attested by a large castle and mosque, containing beautiful stones, enriched with the finest sculpture; and the traveller soon discovers that these are parts of the ruined city. At a distance of half a mile the traces of the desolation are seen. The stadium, now converted into a corn-field, the theatre, the odeon, and the gymnasium, may all be distinguished in outline, and their area is strewn with fine fragments. A particular part of the entablature of a Corinthian temple has been delineated by M. C. Gonfrier, which has perhaps never been surpassed in the richness and variety of the style and the fineness of the execution. But travellers have been unable to point to the spot where the proud monument of architectural science reared its head; and of all that splendid pile of building, a confused mass of thick walls, shafts, columns of white marble, and fragments of various kinds, alone remain. The ruins of a theatre are still visible, consisting of some circular seats, and numerous arches, supposed to be the one in which Paul was preaching, when interrupted by shouts of “Great is Diana of the Ephesians!”

When Dr. Chandler visited the city, in 1764, he found its population consisting of Greek peasants, living in extreme wretchedness and sloth—and inhabiting the wreck of their greatness; some round the substructure of the glorious edifices they had reared; some beneath the vaults of the stadium, once the crowded scene of their diversions; and some in the abrupt precipice, in the sepulchres which received their ashes. “Such are the present citizens of Ephesus, and such is the condition to which that renowned city has been reduced. Its streets are obscured and overgrown. A herd of goats were driven to it from the shelter at noon, and a noisy flight of crows from the quarries seemed to insult its silence. We heard the partridge call in the area of the theatre and of the stadium. The pomp of its heathen worship is no longer remembered; and Christianity, which was then nursed by apostles, and fostered by general councils, barely lingers on in an existence hardly visible.”

EPHLAL, Ef'-lal, judging or praying.—A descendant of the patriarch Judah; 1 Chron. ii. 37.

EPHOD, Ef'-od, to gird or tie.—A kind of ornament, in the form of an upper garment, worn by the priests. There were two kinds, those of plain linen for the ordinary priests; and that of the high-priest, which was richly embroidered blue, purple, scarlet, and gold. It was a short cloak covering the shoulders and breast, divided below the arm-pits into two parts, the anterior covering the breast and the belly; the hinder the back. These were joined on the shoulders with golden clasps, set with precious stones.—It is described, Ex. xxviii. 6; xxxix. 2;—also its robe, 22; 1 Sam. ii. 18.

EPHOD, Ex. 39. 2; Judg. 8. 27, & 17. 5; 1 Sam. 2. 18, & 21. 9, & 23. 9, & 30. 7; 2 Sam. 6. 14; Hos. 3. 4.

EPHPHATHA, Eph'-pha-tha, be opened; Mark vii. 34, 35.

EPHRAIM, E'-fra-im, fruitful.—(1) The younger son of Joseph, born A. M. 2293, and head of a tribe in Israel, which at the time of their deliverance out of Egypt amounted to 40,500 persons. (2) The lot of Ephraim lay about the centre of the Holy Land. (3) The Mountains of Ephraim were highly fertile, except where they approached the Jordan in rocky precipices. (4) There was a forest of Ephraim, where Absalom's army was routed; 2 Sam. xviii. 6—17. (5) From the days of Jeroboam till the ten tribes were carried away captive by Salmaneser, the whole land, not included under Judah, was often called "Ephraim." Jer. xxxi. 6. (6) The city of Ephraim, where Christ retired with his disciples not long before he suffered; John xi. 54.

EPHRAIMITES. "And there fell at the time of the Ephraimites, forty and two thousand;" Judges xii. 6. It is impossible for so many to have fallen, because at the last census of the people, this tribe amounted to only 32,500, which is less than the number said to have been slain by 9,500. The meaning must be 40, and 2000, i. e. 2040, which is much more reasonable.

EPHRAIM, is sometimes put for the ten tribes; Isa. vii. 2; Jer. xxxi. 18.

EPHRATAH, Eff'-ra-tah, abundance.—A town in Judea; Psalm cxxxii. 6; Micah v. 2. It is the same as BETHLEHEM.

EPHRATH, Eff'-rath, abundance, bearing fruit.—Caleb's second wife; 1 Chron. ii. 19. From her it is thought that the city of Ephratah had its name. It is sometimes called Ephrath; Gen. xxxv. 19.

EPHRON, E'-fron, dust.—The son of Zohar, who sold the cave of Machpelah to Abraham; Gen. xxiii. 8, 10.

EPICUREANS, Ep-e-kew-re'-ans, who gave assistance.—A sect of philosophers greatly prevailing in Greece and Rome. Their founder was Epicurus, who flourished about 300 years before Christ. They maintained that the world was made by chance, by the fortuitous concurrence of atoms, that there is no providence, no resurrection, no immortality, and that pleasure is the chief good; but some of them placed this pleasure in the tranquillity and joy of the mind arising from a virtuous course; which is thought by some to have been the true principle of Epicurus. Others understood him in a grosser sense, and placed all their happiness in sensual pleasure. They were apathetic and austere. If they met with misfortunes, they grieved not, if they prospered they rejoiced not. Their minds were steeled against every impression of feeling or pity. As they held that the world and all human affairs are governed by fate, so it was true virtue and happiness not to trouble themselves about any thing. The founder of the sect, Zeno, lived to be 98, and then committed suicide. The Epicureans were not gluttons, but the reverse, considering that as nature is satisfied with little, so ought men to be content with simple and frugal fare.

EPISTLE, or Letter. Twenty-one of the books of the New Testament are called epistles. The first fourteen were written by Paul; the other seven were written, one by James, two by Peter, three by John, and one by Jude. The messages to the seven churches of Asia, recorded in the book of Revelation, are called epistles; Rev. ii; iii.

EPISTLES 'of commendation'; they were adopted in the primitive church; they were letters of introduction, and secured the warmest hospitality; 2 Cor. iii. 1.

ESAIAS, E'-zay'-as.—The same as Isaiah; Matt. iii. 3.

ESAU, E'-sau, formed or finished.

—The son of Isaac by Rebekah, born A. M. 2168, Gen. xxv. 24, &c. His name Esau was given him on account of the red pottage which he asked of Jacob. But his name has a special reference to his being when born, "red, all over like a hairy garment." The account of his selling his birth-right is given; Gen. xxv. 29—34. His marriage with a Canaanitish woman greatly displeased his parents; for he intermingled the blood of Abraham with that of aliens. Esau was deprived of his father's blessing by the artifice of Jacob, and on that account he hated Jacob, and sought to deprive him of life. Jacob fled, and Esau settled in the mountains east of Jordan, and became very powerful. When Jacob returned from Padan-aram, these brothers were reconciled, and subsequently lived on terms of affection. They met again when their father died and was buried. Esau was ardent and rash, as well as generous and frank in his disposition.

In selling the birth-right of Esau, the conduct of Rebekah and Jacob was inconsistent and wicked.

ESPOUSED means something like our engaged; Mary was engaged to be the wife of Joseph. But this engagement among the Jews was too solemn to be broken, and though it took place a year before marriage, it was considered the same as tying the knot.

ESROM, Es'-rom, the dart of joy, division of the song.—A person mentioned Matt. i. 3.

ESSENES. An allusion to this sect in Col. ii. 22. They were more strict in sabbath-keeping than were the Jews. They abstained from animal food, confining themselves to vegetables, and coarse bread, and drinking water. They were so strict that they considered themselves polluted by the touch of any persons not of their own sect, and were careful to cleanse themselves by ablutions from the impurity they had contracted.

ESTHER, Es'-ter, secret, hidden.—

This book contains the history of Esther, a Jewish captive, who by her remarkable accomplishments gained the affection of king Ahasuerus, and, by marriage with him, was raised to the throne of Persia. This history comes in between the sixth and seventh chapters of Ezra, and ought, according to historical connection, or harmony, to be read there.

ESTHER, Book of. This book derives its name from the principal person mentioned in it. It gives an account of a most remarkable deliverance of the Israelites from destruction. Some ascribe the Book to Ezra, others to Jehoiachin, a priest; but Mordecai appears to have been its author. The Ahasuerus mentioned in it is always supposed to be the same person as the Artaxerxes Longimanus of profane history, or as the Darius of Ezra. The points of moral resemblance in the character of Xerxes, as represented by Grecian history, coincide with the character of Ahasuerus in this book.

ESTIMATION. Calculation, judgment; Lev. v. 15; Num. xviii. 16.

ETAM, E'-tam, their bird, or covering.—A city in the tribe of Judah; 2 Chron. xi. 6. It was decorated by Solomon with gardens and streams of water, and Rehoboam fortified it; 1 Chron. iv. 3, 32; 2 Chron. xi. 6. Solomon was accustomed to drive out to this place in his chariot. It was about 50 stadia from Jerusalem. To it Samson retired after burning the harvest of the Philistines; Judges xv. 8.

ETERNAL and ETERNITY.—The words eternal, everlasting, for ever, often imply only for a long time, and are not always to be understood strictly; for example, it is said; Gen. xvii. 8. "I will give to thee and to thy seed the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession." And in chap. xiii. 15. "I will give it to thee and to thy seed for ever," i. e. for a long space of time. And in Gen. xlix. 26. we find "everlasting hills," so called, to denote their antiquity, stability, and duration; and this expression is used to show the long continuance and durability of Joseph's blessing. God promises a throne to David, an eternal kingdom, a posterity that will never be extinguished; that is, that his and his son's empire should be of a very long duration; 2 Sam. vii. 16; 1 Chron. xvii. 14. that it will be even eternal, if hereby the kingdom of the Messiah be understood. Thus, "Thou shalt be our guide from this time forth even for ever;" that is, during our whole life. And in many other places of scripture, and in particular when the word for ever is applied to the Jewish rites and privileges, it commonly signifies no more than during the standing of that commonwealth, or until the coming of the Messiah; Exodus xii. 17; Num. x. 8.

But eternity, when God is the subject in question, always denotes a real eternity; Exodus xv. 18. "The Lord shall reign for ever and ever;" Deut. xxxii. 40. "I lift up my hand to heaven and say, I live for ever." Deut. xxxiii. 27. "The eternal God is thy refuge." The blessed will enjoy eternal life and happiness, and the accursed be cast into eternal fire; the happiness of the one, and misery of the other, will never have an end; Matt. xxv. 46. The Son of God is eternal in the highest sense, without beginning, without end; 1 Tim. i. 17. He is called "a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek," Ps. cx. 4. His gospel, the "everlasting gospel," Rev. xiv. 6. The same gospel, that was from the beginning, and besides which, there neither is, nor ever shall be any other doctrine of salvation revealed while the world endureth. The redemption which he has procured for us, is an "eternal redemption," Heb. ix. 12. Its virtue is of perpetual continuance; such as are redeemed from the guilt and punishment of sin are so for ever. The covenant or New Testament, which he confirmed by his blood, is "an everlasting covenant," Heb. xiii. 20. It is a covenant never to be changed, as the former was: everlasting life is promised in it; and it is of eternal efficacy. The glory and reward which he hath merited for us, is "an eternal weight of glory;" 2 Cor. iv. 17. "Everlasting habitations or tents," Luke xvi. 9. are the habitations appointed by God in heaven for those who are prepared through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth.

The ETERNITY OF GOD is the perpetual continuance of his being, without beginning, end, or succession. That he is without beginning may be proved from (1) His necessary self-existence; Exod. iii. 14. — (2) From his attributes, several of which are said to be eternal; Rom. i. 20; Acts xv. 18; Psal. ciii. 17; Jer. xxxi. 3; Isa. xxv. 1; Eph. iii. 11.

That he is without end may be proved from, (1) His spirituality and simplicity; Rom. i. 23. (2) From his independency; Rom. ix. 5. (3) From his immutability; Mal. iii. 6. (4) From his dominion and government, said never to end; Jer. x. 10; Psal. x. 16; Dan. iv. 3.

That he is without succession, or any distinctions of time succeeding one to another, as moments, minutes, &c. may be proved from, (1) His existence before such were in being; Is. xliii. 13. (2) The distinctions and differences of time are altogether ascribed to him, and not as succeeding one another: he is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever; Heb. xiii. 8; Rev. i. 4. (3) If his duration were successive, or proceeded by moments, days, and years, then there must have been some first moment, day, and year, when he began to exist, which is incompatible with the idea of his eternity; and, besides, one day would be but one day with him, and not a thousand, contrary to the express language of scripture; 2 Pet. iii. 8. (4) He would not be immense, immutable, and perfect if this were the case; for he would be older one minute than he was before, which cannot be said of him. (5) His knowledge proves him without successive duration, for he knows all things past, present, and to come: "he sees the present without a medium, the past without recollection, and the future without foresight. To him all truths are but one idea, all places one point, and all times but one moment."

ETHAM, E'-tham, their strength or sign. — The third encampment of Israel; Num xxxiii. 6. Etham was a considerable town, situated near the extremity of the eastern branch of the Red Sea, not far probably from the place where Suez now stands.

ETHAN, E'-thau, strong, valiant. — One of the wisest men of his age, except Solomon; 1 Kings iv. 34; — several Psalms were written by him, and, among the rest, that sublime composition the eighty-ninth; he was one of the principal masters of the temple of music; 1 Chron. xv. 17.

ETHANIM, Eth'-a-nim, strong, valiant. — One of the Hebrew months; 1 Kings viii. 2. In this month Solomon's temple was dedicated. It corresponds with our September.

ETHBAAL, Eth'-ba-al, towards the idol. — King of the Zidonians, father of Jezebel; 1 Kings xvi. 31.

ETHER, E'-ther.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xv. 42.

ETHIOPIA, E-the-o'-pe-a, in Hebrew, Cush, blackness; in Greek it signifies heat.—A very extensive country of Africa, comprising Abyssinia, Nubia, and Abex. This is not the Ethiopia mentioned Gen. ii. 13, which was near the Euphrates. In every other instance where Ethiopia is spoken of in the Bible, it refers to Nubia. The Ethiopians were a numerous people, and sometimes united under mighty monarchs, who conquered Egypt, and put forth all their strength to conquer Asia. They were distinguished as a commercial people. This was especially true of the inhabitants on the coast of the Red Sea. Though their metropolis was in Africa, yet it is not improbable that they ruled over the Cushites of Arabia; 2 Kings xix. 9; 2 Chron. xiv. 9, 12, 13; Nah. iii. 9. This race was black in Africa; and to this the prophet alludes when he inquires, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin?" The inhabitants on the African side of the Red Sea, or Arabian Gulf, possessed immense wealth in gold, silver, ivory, perfumes, and precious stones. Of this we have proof, in the present of the queen of Candace to Solomon; 1 Kings x. 2. Recent researches of travellers unexpectedly illustrate the account of the sacred writers. On some of the ruins of Kalabashe, female figures are seen with ensigns of royalty,—a proof that queens reigned in this country, in ancient ages. Pliny says, that there was a long succession of queens. In Nubia, ruins equally, if not more wonderful than those of Egypt, have been discovered, which induce some to imagine that, contrary to the general opinion, civilization in the early ages descended the Nile from Ethiopia to Egypt. Christianity was introduced into Ethiopia by the eunuch, minister of Candace, but we know nothing of its progress till A. D. 330. when nominal Christianity became the religion of the country. About that period Frumentius, who had been the chief instrument of its establishment, was ordained bishop by Athanasius, the patriarch of Alexandria. Cosmas, a Greek merchant, A. D. 525, found Abyssinia full of Christian churches and ministers, altogether what is called a Christian country.

ETHNAN, Eth'-nan.—Son of Asher; 1 Chron. iv. 7.

ETHNI, Eth'-ny.—A descendant of Levi; 1 Chr. vi. 41.

EUBULUS, Yew'-bu-lus, a prudent counsellor.—A disciple of Paul; 2 Tim. iv. 21.

EUNICE, Yew-ny'-see, a good victory.—The mother of Timothy, who was a Jewess by birth, but married to a Greek, Timothy's father. She was a pious female, and so was her mother Lois; both believers in the Lord Jesus; 2 Tim. i. 5.

EUNUCH. From the Greek EUNUCHOS, one who guards the bed. In the courts of Eastern kings, Eunuchs had the care of the beds and apartments of princes and princesses. But as only persons who were deprived of their virility, by natural defect, or by manual operation, were in ancient times, employed in Eastern harems, the word eunuch acquired the sense of castratus. The Hebrew word Saris signifies a real eunuch. Frequently it implies only an officer attendant on royalty, whether he be really an eunuch or not. Potiphar, Pharaoh's eunuch, or chief officer, Joseph's master, had a wife; Gen. xxxix. 1, 7. and a child too, if Asenath were daughter to Joseph's master, as some think. God forbade his people to make eunuchs; Deut. xxiii. 1. They were regarded as dry and useless wood. "Behold, I am a dry tree;" Isa. lvi. 3. The word is used to designate persons continent from natural infirmity, so born, and also persons emasculated, or "eunuchs of men."

Our Saviour, in Matt. xix. 12. speaks of a sort of eunuch different from these mentioned, persons "who have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake;" that is, who upon some religious motive do abstain from marriage, and the use of all carnal pleasures; that they may be less encumbered with the cares of the world, and may devote themselves more closely to the service of God.

EUODIAS, Yew-o'-de-as, sweet scent.—A female disciple in the church of Philippi. It is probable that these excellent women had disagreed on some points of doctrine or practice, to which the apostle alludes. He therefore exhorts them to unity; Phil. iv. 2, 3.

EUPHRATES, Yew-fra'-tees, that makes fruitful.—A large river, the source of which is in the mountains of Armenia. It runs 1480 miles through Cappadocia, Syria, Arabia, Chaldea, and Mesopotamia, and uniting with the Tigris below Babylon, it falls into the Persian Gulf, about 50 miles S. E. of Bassora. This river formed the eastern boundary of the dominions of Israel, when they obtained possession of all the promised land; Deut. i. 7; Josh. i. 4. It was the largest river with which they were familiar, separating them from the great kingdoms of the East, whose power they had reason to dread; and therefore it is often mentioned in Scripture as the river, the great river, the river Euphrates. Like the Nile, it is subject to an annual overflow, by which it imparts great fertility to its valley. It is now called Epherat, or Phrat.

EUROCLYDON, Yew-rok'-le-don, a north-east wind, prevalent in the Mediterranean sea, blowing from all points, and dangerous for ships, from its similarity to a whirlwind. It is now called by sailors a Levanter; Acts xvii. 14.

EUTYCHUS, Yew'-te-kus, fortunate.—The name of a young man at Troas, who fell from a window when Paul was preaching, and by him was miraculously restored to life. In an upper room Paul was preaching his parting discourse. The divan, or raised seat, with mats or cushions, encircled the interior of each projecting window; and when the company was numerous, they placed large cushions behind the company seated on the divan, so that a second tier of company, with their feet on the seat of the divan, sat behind, higher than the front row. Eutyclus, thus sitting, would be on a level with the open window, and being overcome with sleep, he would easily fall out from the third loft of the house into the street, and be almost certain, from such a height, to lose his life; Acts xx. 9.

EVANGELICAL, agreeable to the doctrines of Christianity. The term is frequently applied to those who do not rely upon moral duties for their acceptance with God, but are influenced to action from a sense of the love of God, and to depend upon the merits of Christ for their everlasting salvation.

EVANGELIST. A publisher of glad tidings, an order in the Christian church, as Philip; Acts xxi. 8. These persons were not fixed to any church but preached wherever they were led by the Holy Spirit; Eph. iv. 11, 12; 2 Tim. iv. 5. It was applied first to the inspired historians of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and also, in the primitive church, to those who went from place to place, to preach the glad tidings of the everlasting gospel, to visit the infant churches, and ordain ordinary officers, and finish what the Apostles had begun. Of this kind were Philip, the deacon, Mark, Silas, &c.; Acts xxi. 8. The term is now used to signify a minister who travels, and is not settled with any particular people.

EVE, living, enlivening.—The first woman, and the mother of all the human race; Gen. iii. 20. The Hebrew word signifies to live, denoting that she was to be the "mother of all living."

EVIL. Evil specially refers to sin and wickedness. Thus it is said of the wicked kings of Israel, that "they did evil in the sight of the Lord," they transgressed his law; 1 Kings xvi. 25, 30. And in Ecd. ix. 3. "The heart of the sons of men is full of evil." This is criminal or moral evil. It is likewise taken for afflictions or punishments which God inflicts upon a person or people; Job ii. 10. "Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" Isa. xlv. 7. "I make peace, and create evil;" Amos iii. 6. "Shall there be evil in a city, and the Lord hath not done it?" This is the evil of punishment, or penal evil." It is also taken for injuries or wrongs done by one man to another; Prov. xvii. 13. "Whoso rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house." Matt. v. 39. "But I say unto you that ye resist not evil." It is put for dangers or calamities; Prov. xxii. 3. "A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself." He sees public calamities approaching, and uses all lawful means to secure himself. It is taken both for corporeal and spiritual evil of sin and suffering; Matt. vi. 13. "Deliver us from evil."

EXODUS, Eks'-o-dus. a going out.
The second book of Moses: so called in the Greek version, because it relates the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt. It comprises the transactions of about 145 years, that is, from the death of Joseph, A. M. 2369, to the erection of the tabernacle in 2514. In this book we have an account of the oppression of the Israelites by Pharaoh, their prodigious increase, the plagues inflicted in Egypt, the deliverance of the Israelites, and their miraculous passage through the Red Sea; the overthrow of Pharaoh and his hosts; the preservation of the people in the wilderness; the giving of the law from Mount Sinai; and the erection of the tabernacle.

EXORCISM, EXORCIST. To exorcise is to adjure, to expel an evil being. An exorcist is one who drives away evil spirits, or casts out devils. Our Saviour when he sent out his disciples to preach the gospel, gave them power over unclean spirits, to cast them out; Matt. x. 1, by which gift they gained repute among the people, and gave proof that they were sent of God. But those Jewish exorcists, mentioned Acts xix. 13, were only impostors, deluding the people by witchcraft or diabolical agency.

EYE to eye; Isa. lii. 8. Some think it means unanimity of opinion; others as indicating mutual joy in reading each other's eyes.

EYES.—Applied to the Almighty denote his infinite knowledge; Prov. xv. 3; Ps. xi. 4.—His watchful providence; Ps. xxxii. 8; xxxiv. 15.—Applied to Christ, eyes denote his omnipresence; Rev. ii. 18; v. 6; Heb. iv. 13.—Applied to man, they denote the understanding, the eyes of the mind; Ps. cxix. 18; Eph. i. 18.—Also a friendly counsellor; Job xxix. 15.—The whole family of man; Rev. i. 7. Human designs; Deut. xxviii. 54—56.

EYES, 'paintedst thy eyes,' Ezek. xxiii. 40.—The ladies of the East apply antimony to the inner eyelids, by which to augment the brilliancy and fascinating power of the eyes. See also 2 Kings ix. 30; Prov. vi. 25; Jer. iv. 30.

EYE shut, 'He hath shut their eyes,' &c. Isa. xlv. 18. The eyes of their understanding are closed, so that they cannot see; and their hearts are past feeling.

EYES, 'instead of eyes,' Num. x. 31.—Hobab, acquainted with the desert, might have been of great use in guiding to wells, fuel, and other provisions, and guarding against the simoom, marauders, wilds, &c.

EYES of servants, 'look unto the hand of their masters,' Ps. cxxiii. 2. It is common in the East to direct the servants by signs; they watch with great attention the will of their masters; the least wink of the eye, or motion of the fingers, that is imperceptible to strangers, is sufficient to command their services.

Some suppose there is a reference to the chastisement of slaves, who, during the time of infliction, keep their eyes fixed on the hand that punishes. This appears to be countenanced by the following words;—"Have mercy upon us, O Lord;" ver. 3. Stay thy hand in mercy; we will rebel no more.

EZBAI, Ez'-ba-i.—David's worthy.

1 Chron. xi. 37.

EZBON, Ez'-bon, hastening to un- derstand.—A descendant of Benjamin;

Gen. xlvii. 16.

EZEKIAS, E-ze-ky'-as.—Mentioned; Matt. i. 9.

EZEKIEL, E-ze'-ki-el, God my strength.—The son of Buzi, a prophet in the house of Aaron, carried away captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, with Jehoiachin, king of Judah; Ezek. i. 1, &c. He began to prophesy A. M. 3409, being the fifth year of his captivity. Together with many of his countrymen he settled, or was placed, on the banks of the river Chebar, in Mesopotamia, where he was favoured with the divine revelations which are described in his book. He appears to have been mercifully raised up to animate the desponding hearts of his cotemporaries under their sufferings and afflictions, and is supposed to have delivered his prophecies during a period of twenty-one years. His name, which imports "God will strengthen," was happily expressive of that inspired confidence and fortitude which he displayed both in supporting the adverse circumstances of the captivity, and in reproving the sins and idolatrous practices of his countrymen.

EZEKIEL, Book of. The Book of Ezekiel is similar to that of Jeremiah in its scope, but very different in style, being more pointed and severe. It predicts dreadful calamities to be inflicted on Judea and Jerusalem, for idolatry and wickedness; the judgments that would be sent upon the false prophets, who deluded the people with vain hopes, and winked at their sins; the punishments which should befall Ammon, Edom, Philistia, Tyre, and Egypt; the restoration of Israel and Judah; and the blessedness of the gospel church under the coming Messiah.

The style of Ezekiel is characterized by Bishop Lowth as much inferior to that of Jeremiah in elegance, yet in sublimity as not even excelled by Isaiah, though his sublimity is of a totally different kind.

EZEL, E-'zel, going abroad.—The name of a stone mentioned in the agreement of Jonathan and David; 1 Sam. xx. 19.

EZER, E'-zer.—The son of Ephraim; 1 Chron. vii. 21.

EZION-GABER, E'-ze-on-gay'-ber, the backbone of a man, counsel of the man.—A city of Idumea, on the Elanitic gulf of the Red Sea; Num. xxxiii. 35. It appears that the city received the name of Ezion-gaber from a ridge of rocks which was near the mouth of the harbour, and which resembled the back-bone of a man. The city has long since being destroyed, and modern research has been unable to discover a single trace of its remains. At this port Solomon equipped his fleets for the voyage to Ophir: and it was upon the rocks at the mouth of the harbour that the fleet, fitted out for the same place by Jehoshaphat and Ahaziah, was destroyed, agreeable to the predictions of the prophet; Num. xxxiii. 35; 1 Kings ix. 26; xxii. 48.

EZRA, Ez'-rah, helper.—The author of the book which bears his name; he was a priest and scribe of the house of Aaron, and successor to Zerubbabel in the government of Judea. He was the son or grandson of Seraiah, who was slain at Riblah, with his associates, by order of Nebuchadnezzar; Ezra vii. 1, &c; 2 Kings xxv. 18—21. Calmet is of opinion that Ezra was only his grandson, or great grandson, because 130 years elapsed between the death of Seraiah, and departure of Ezra from Babylon, and as we read that a grandson of Seraiah, was the high-priest who accompanied Zerubbabel on the first return to Jerusalem, seventy years before Ezra returned thither, it is inferred that the term son is to be taken for grandson or great grandson; besides the original term means descendant. He was of the sacerdotal family, and in a right line from Aaron. He succeeded Zerubbabel in the government of Judea, by a commission which lasted twelve years, to A. M. 3558.

Ezra was well instructed in the law and the Scriptures, and well able to interpret them. He styles himself a ready scribe, prepared to instruct the people in the Divine statutes; the tradition therefore of his having made a collection of the sacred writings is very probable.

EZRA, Book of.—So called from the name of the priest who wrote it. It is a continuation of the Jewish history after the return from the Babylonish captivity. It embraces a period of 100 years. It is a continuation of Jewish history from the time of which the Chronicles conclude; for it begins with a repetition of the two verses with which the Second book of Chronicles ends. Ezra lived 120 years, and was buried, according to Josephus, in Jerusalem.

EZRAHITE, Ez'-ra-hite. — Mentioned 1 Kings iv. 31.

EZRI, Ez'-ry, a helper.—Son of Chelub. He was at the head of the agricultural department in the reign of David. See 1 Chron. xxvii. 26.

F

FABLES, 'old wives' fables,' 1 Tim. iv. 7. Religious tales of human invention; the traditions of elders, the doctrines of men, silly legends. Of these few people ever possessed more than the Jews. Their Talmud abounds with them. The mythology of the Greeks and Romans, and Popery, abound with silly legends, myths, &c. Peter says, "We have not followed cunningly devised fables," &c. 2 Pet. i. 16. Dr. A. Clarke, and others, think that the Apostle means those cunningly devised fables of the Heathens, concerning the appearance of their gods upon earth in human form; 1 Tim. iv. 7. Such appearances they promulgated as realities. By these the Heathen priests aggrandized their temples, and the legislators and statesmen patronize these fictions for the purpose of maintaining the popular religions. To gain the greater credit to those fables, the rulers instituted what they called the mysteries of the gods in which the fabulous appearances of the gods were represented in mystic shows.—None but the initiated were permitted to be eye-witnesses of one particular show, and such witnesses were called "Beholders;" Tit. i. 14; Matt. xv. 9.

FACE. The face is the index of the mind, because the various passions, &c. are indicated by the aspect of the countenance; as love, hatred, joy, sorrow, pleasure, grief, confidence, despair, &c. Face frequently denotes persons or character. The face of a man is taken for the man himself: "I had not thought to see thy face," that is, thy person; Gen. xlviii. 11. "Before one's face," that is, in his presence; Num. xix. 3. "To withstand a person to his face," is to reprove him boldly; Gal. ii. 11. "The pride of Israel doth testify to his face;" it is an overwhelming evidence of guilt. To fall upon the face was a posture of adoration; Josh. vii. 6. To "accept of one's face," is to show favour; Gen. xix. 21. To "spit in one's face," is a sign of the utmost contempt; Deut. xxv. 9.

Face is applied to God, and denotes sometimes his anger; "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil;" Ps. xxxiv. 16; Rev. vi. 16. Also his love and favour; "Cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved;" Ps. xxxi. 16; lxxx. 7; Dan. ix. 7. Also his omniscience; "Let not my blood fall to the earth, before the face of the Lord;" 1 Sam. xxvi. 20. It means the conduct of his providence; Ex. xxxiii. 14, (presence; in the Hebrew, means face.) All are sinners against God, and the infinite Jehovah will show favour only through Christ; hence the prayer of King David; "Behold, O God, our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed." Regard me in mercy through the mediation of Christ, the anointed Saviour.—It also denotes determined wickedness; Jer. v. 3.

FAITH, means belief, credit, conviction, confidence, trust, a simple act of the mind, comprehended as easily and distinctly by the child or peasant as by the full grown man, or most accomplished philosopher. By it the mind trusts in God, through Christ, for life and immortality; Rom. v. 1; Eph. i. 13, &c. In Heb. xi. 1, the Apostle defines faith; "Now faith is the substance (or firm confidence) of things hoped for, the evidence (or conviction) of things not seen." The things hoped for and not seen included all the promises of God in Christ Jesus, and the conviction and confidence of their certainty and existence, arise wholly from the character of God who has given them. Faith is spoken of as the indispensable condition of justification and acceptance with God; and therefore faith must mean more than the mere assent of the understanding to the truth of a statement. It is belief and trust; it is assent and reliance. It is called by the Apostle trust; Eph. i. 13, 14. Faith, confidence, trust, believing, committing, (2 Tim. i. 12.) in a saving sense, are synonymous, and imply the repose of the soul upon the finished work of Christ for all the blessings of salvation.

By this faith we are said to be justified; Rom. v. 1. We are justified by faith, not formally, as if it were our righteousness, as the meritorious cause of our justification before God; but instrumentally and relatively, as it apprehends and applies to us the righteousness and blood of Christ, which is the object of faith, and which only cleanseth us from all sin, and renders us acceptable to God. It is called the "faith through which we are saved;" Eph. ii. 8. It is by means of faith, as the condition on our part, that we come to be partakers of the blessings of the new covenant. It is a "faith which worketh by love," Gal. v. 6. It is not an idle, inactive, and inoperative grace, but shows itself by producing in us love to God and our neighbour. It "purifies the heart," Acts xv. 9. This grace increaseth from one degree to another; Rom. i. 17, being in some strong and firm; Matt. viii. 13, in others weak and languishing; Matt. xiv. 31. Lastly, this grace is the special gift of God; Eph. ii. 8. "By grace ye are saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." That you believe, is not by any ability of your own; and that you are saved, is not for any worth in yourselves. Likewise in Phil. i. 29. "Unto you it is given to believe on Christ."

As to the properties or adjuncts of faith, we may observe, (1) That it is the first and principal grace: it stands first in order, and takes the precedence of other graces; Mark xvi. 16; Heb. xi. 6. (2) It is every way precious and valuable; 2 Peter ii. 1. (3) It is called in scripture, "one faith;" for though there are several sorts of faith, there is but one special or saving faith; Eph. iv. 5. (4) It is also denominated common faith; common to all the regenerate; Tit. i. 4. (5) It is true, real, and unfeigned; Acts viii. 37; Rom. x. 10. (6) It is progressive; Luke xvii. 5; 2 Thess. i. 3. (7) It appropriates and realizes, or, as the apostle says, is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen; Heb. xi. 1.

The evidences or effects of faith are, (1) Love to Christ; 1 Pet. i. 8; Gal. v. 6. (2) Confidence, Eph. iii. 12. (3) Joy, Rom. v. 11; Phil. i. 25.

(4) Prayer, Heb. iv. 16. (5) Attention to his ordinances, and profit by them; Heb. iv. 2. (6) Zeal in the promotion of his glory; 1 Cor. xv. 58; Gal. vi. 9. (7) Holiness of heart and life; Matt. vii. 20; 1 John ii. 3; Acts xv. 9; James ii. 18, 20, 22.

FAITH. If Christ is the brazen serpent, faith is the eye to behold him; if Christ speaks, faith is the ear to hear him; if a garment, faith puts him on; if a way, faith walks in him; if the truth, faith is the knowledge of him; if the life, faith lives upon him; if he be a prophet, faith sits at his feet and learns; if a priest, faith relies on his sacrifice; if a king, faith submits to his authority. In a word, it approves the whole and every part of Christ in his natures, offices, relations, and names. Wherever Christ is, there would faith be; it follows him as the needle does the loadstone.—Gutherie.

FAITH, 'and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ,' Acts xx. 21. And trust in, or reliance on our Lord Jesus Christ.

FAITH, 'can faith save him?' James ii. 14. The omission of the article, by the translators, has deprived the text of its clearness: it should be, 'Can that faith save him?'

FALL. The fall of man. Man's greatest excellency at first was a perfect conformity to the divine pattern. "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him;" Gen. i. 27. The Divine Being is infinite; he is neither limited by parts, nor definable by passions; therefore the image was not corporeal. Man was created an intelligent, free, spiritual, and immortal being; and, as the Apostle informs us, he was "created in righteousness and true holiness." This is the "image of God." In this state he must have been happy; for he was free from sin and all its sad effects.

This happiness had relation to the two natures, which enter into man's composition; (1) The animal and sensitive, and this consisted both in the excellent disposition of his organs, and in the enjoyment of convenient objects. His body being formed immediately by God, was not liable to those defects which proceed from the weakness of second causes: no blemish or disease, which are the effects of sin, were to be found in him: but all his senses were quick and lively, and able to perform with facility, vigour, and delight, their operations. Not only were his organs excellently disposed, but there were also convenient objects to entertain his sensitive faculties: he enjoyed nature in its original purity, crowned with the benediction of God, before it was blasted with the curse. The world was all harmony and beauty, becoming the goodness of the Creator; and not as it has been ever since the fall, disordered and deformed in nearly all its parts. The earth was liberal to Adam of all its treasures, the heavens of their light and sweetest influences. And he was seated in Eden, a place of great beauty and delight. But, (2) his chief happiness consisted in the exercise of his most noble faculties on their proper objects. The highest faculties in man are the understanding and will, and their happiness consists in union with God by knowledge and love. He saw the admirable beauty of the Creator through the transparent veil of the creatures: and from hence there arose in the soul a pleasure pure, solid, and satisfying.

Man was created perfectly holy, but in a natural, therefore mutable state. He was invested with power to prevent his falling, yet under a possibility of it. He was complete in his own order, but receptive of sinful impressions. Being therefore set upon by the most subtle of those rebellious spirits, who had fallen from their obedience and glory, he was corrupted and seduced by him, and involved both himself and his posterity, in sin and misery. The honour and majesty of the whole law was violated in the breach of that symbolical precept: many sins were combined in that single act.

The Mosaic account is, that a garden having been planted by the Creator, for the use of man, he was placed in it to dress it, and to keep it: that in this garden two trees were placed; one was distinguished, as the tree of life, the other as the tree of knowledge of good and evil: that from eating the fruit of the latter Adam was restrained by positive command, and by the penalty, "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die:" that the serpent, who was more subtle than any beast of the field, tempted the woman to eat, by denying that death would be the consequence, and assuring her that her eyes and those of her husband would be opened, and that they would be "as gods, knowing good and evil:" that the woman took of the fruit, gave of it to her husband, who also ate: and that for this act of disobedience they were expelled from the garden, made subject to death, and laid under various maledictions.

Mr. Wilberforce well observes: "Man is an apostate creature, fallen from his high original, and depraved in all his faculties; prone to evil, which is natural and easy to him, but, alas! disinclined to virtue, which is difficult and laborious; not slightly tainted with sin, but radically, and to the very root: this has always been the condition of man since the fall, in ancient and modern times, in barbarous or civilized nations; and whether we read, or hear, or act, or think, or feel, the same humiliating lesson is forced upon us. Take even the best of the human species, the watchful, the diligent, and self-denying Christian; go with him to his closet, and ask his opinion of the corruptions of the heart, and he will tell you that he knows it from self-observation, and every day's experience strengthens this conviction; yea, that every hour he feels fresh reason to deplore his want of simplicity in intention, his infirmity of purpose, his low views, his selfish unworthy desires, his backwardness to set about his duty, and his languor and coldness in performing it; so that he finds himself obliged continually to confess that he feels within him two opposite principles, and that he cannot do the things that he would."

The fallen state of man is the first page in the book of humiliation, and ought to be read continually.

Whose but his own? Ingrate! he had of me
All he could have; I made him just and right, Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.
Milton.

FALL and Rising. 'This child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel;' Luke ii. 34, plainly meaning that many would be ruined by Christ's coming, and many others would be savingly exalted.

FALSE CHRISTS. "For there shall arise false Christs," &c. Matt. xxiv. 24.—Referring to the impostors who appeared during the siege of Jerusalem. Josephus mentions one of these pretenders, who declared to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that God commanded them to go up into some particular part of the temple, and there they should receive the signs of deliverance. A multitude of men, women, and children, went up accordingly; but, instead of deliverance, the place was set on fire by the Romans, and six thousand perished miserably in the flames, or by endeavouring to escape them.

FAME.—Reputation, honour, report, Gen. xlv. 16; Josh. ix. 9; 1 Kings iv. 31; Isa. lxvi. 19. The fame of Jesus, as to his miracles; Matt. iv. 24; Mark i. 28; Luke iv. 14; v. 15.

FAMILIAR SPIRITS. Those who practised magic or divination were said to be possessed with these spirits, and to have performed their incantations by means of the power of the devil; Lev. xix. 31; Acts xvi. 16.

FAMILY, in scripture, signifies (1) Both saints and angels; Eph. iii.

15. "Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named." Believers in the Lord Jesus Christ on earth; the spirits of just men made perfect, in a separate state; and all the holy angels in heaven, make but one family, of which God is the father and head. (2) Those who are of kin, or who stand related by natural descent; Lev. xxv. 49; Numb. xxvi. 5.

(3) Those who are of the same nation; Amos iii. 1. "The whole family which I brought up from the land of Egypt," Jer. viii. 3; Zech. xiv. 18.

(4) Those who dwell separate and distinct from others, or who belong to the same household; Esth. ix. 28.

"Every family." Judg. xxi. "Every man to his tribe and to his family."

FAMINE.—Great scarcity of food, leading to disease, misery, and death. The first famine is recorded Gen. xii. 10, in the days of Abraham. The next in the time of Isaac; Gen. xxvi. 1, &c. The most remarkable was that which visited Egypt when Joseph was there; Gen. xli. 27. The cause of famine is sometimes natural, as drought, insects, blight, and when the Nile does not overflow in Egypt, &c. Sometimes it is the effect of Divine wrath; 2 Sam. xxiv. 12; Ezek. v. 16; vi. 11; Matt. xxiv. 7. God preserved his people in famine; Job v. 20; Ps. xxxiii. 19; xxxvii. 19. There is a worse famine than scarcity of food; Amos vii. 11.

5. 13; Zeph. 2. 11.

FAN.—A winnowing shovel. In the East, the corn is still winnowed by waving the fan backwards and forwards, with both hands over the corn; and sometimes by throwing the corn with the fan against the wind. It is a symbol of the means by which God purifies his people from moral evil, and inflicts punishment on hypocrites and wicked men; Ps. i. 4; Isa. xli. 16; Jer. iv. 11; xv. 7; li. 1, 2; Matt. iii. 12; Luke iii. 17.

FAR.—“Far exceeding and eternal weight of glory,” 2 Cor. iv. 17. The expression here rendered far more exceeding is infinitely emphatical. It signifies that all hyperboles fall so short of describing that weight, eternal glory, so solid and lasting, that you may pass from hyperbole to hyperbole, and yet when you have gained the last, you are infinitely below it—it is still FAR MORE EXCEEDING.

FARTHING.—The Assar, or Assarion, Matt. v. 26; x. 29. A Roman coin, the tenth part of a Roman penny, or about three farthings English. In Mark xii. 42, the word signifies the quadrans, equal to two mites, or about three-fourths of our farthing.

FAST.—Abstinence from food, either entire or partial, accompanied with humiliation, sorrow for sin, and prayer. See Isa. lviii., for a description. Abstinence from every pleasure of the senses, as well as from food, characterized a religious fast; 1 Cor. vii. 5. Fasting was often practised by the Jews as a religious duty; Josh. vii. 6; Judges xx. 26. Moses enjoined a fast upon the solemn day of expiation; Lev. xxiii. 27, 29. Moses fasted forty days on Mount Horeb; Exod. xxxiv. 28. Elijah fasted; 1 Kings xix. 8. Christ rebuked the Pharisees for their ostentatious and hypocritical fasting; Matt. vi. 16, &c. He did not appoint any fast days, but predicted that after his death, his disciples should fast; Luke v. 33—35. Afflictions soon became common to Christians, and then they fasted; 2 Cor. vi. 5.

FATHER.—He that has a child.

It is a title given to the first ancestor, as Rom. iv. 16; to the inventor and master of a certain art or science, or founder of a particular profession, Gen. iv. 20, 22; to that man who is affected with the miseries of the poor, and takes care to provide for their wants. Job xxix. 16. God declares himself to be the Father of the fatherless; Ps. lxxviii. 5. God is eminently the Father, Creator, Preserver, and Protector of all his creatures, but principally of those who call upon his name, knowing and serving him; Deut. xxii. 6; Rom. viii. 15, 16. The devil is called the father of the wicked; John viii. 44. In church history the term is applied to the Christian writers of the first centuries. It is now customary to give this epithet to very aged and eminent saints.

In a spiritual sense, God is the Father of all those who are reconciled to him by faith in Jesus Christ. "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God," &c., John i. 12. "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate,.....and I will receive you; and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty;" 2 Cor. vi. 17, 18. See Rom. viii. 15, 16; Eph. i. 5.

FEAST.—Feasts were Divinely appointed among the Jews to perpetuate the memory of great and wonderful events. The Sabbath brought to remembrance the creation of the world; the Passover, the departure out of Egypt; the Pentecost, the law given at Sinai, &c. These feasts were designed also for instruction, for then the law of God was read and expounded. The services abounded in symbols and types, and by them Christ was preached. Besides they came from all parts of the land three times a year, and friends met friends, new friendships were formed, and a spirit of nationality was established.

The Hebrews had a great number of feasts. The first and most ancient was the Feast of the Sabbath. It was a day of rest, and holy service; Exod. xx. 8—11; xxiii. 12; xxxi. 12—17, &c.

The Sabbatical year, which returned every seven years, and was entirely set apart for rest; and Jubilee year, which was at the end of seven times seven years, or the forty-ninth year, were feasts too, and may be considered as consequences of the Sabbath.

FEASTS OF CHARITY.—These were called agape; these meals or feasts of love of the primitive Christians, to which they attended previous to the Eucharist, or Lord's Supper.

To those feasts the wealthy gave money, provisions, &c., and the poor partook gratuitously.

The Passover was instituted in memory of the deliverance of the Israelites from the bondage of Egypt. See Passover.

The Feast of Pentecost was celebrated fifty days after the Passover. The design was to commemorate the giving of the law, fifty days after the departure from Egypt. It was called the Feast of Weeks, or the Feast of Harvest; for it was celebrated at the close of harvest, and was a public thanksgiving to God for the bounties of Providence.

The Feast of Trumpets was celebrated at the beginning, or on the first day of the civil year, upon which a trumpet was sounded, proclaiming the beginning of the year, which was in the month Tisri, answering to our September. This day was kept solemnly; all servile business was forbid to be done upon it; and particular sacrifices were offered, Lev. xxiii. 24, 25. The Scripture does not acquaint us with the occasion of appointing this feast.

The Feast of Tabernacles, called in the Hebrew, the feast of tents, lasted eight days. The people were commanded to dwell in tents, or booths, made of the green branches of trees, in memory of their journey through the wilderness forty years. It was one of the three great festivals at which all the males were commanded to appear before the Lord. It is also called the Feast of Ingathering, because it was celebrated at the close of the vintage, when the fruits of the year were all gathered in; Exod. xxiii. 16; Lev. xxiii. 39—44. The feast continued eight days, when the people ceased to labour, and sacrifices of praise were daily offered for the fruits of the earth then gathered in. On the first day they cut down the branches of beautiful trees, with their fruit, which they carried in ceremony to the synagogue. The eighth day was the offering of water.

an omer to obtain God's blessing on their harvest; at Pentecost, their first-fruits, to request his blessing on the fruits of the trees: and in the feast of the tabernacles they offered water to God, partly referring to the water from the rock in the wilderness (1 Cor. x. 4), but chiefly to solicit the blessing of rain on the approaching seed-time. These waters they drew out of Siloah, and brought them into the temple with the sound of a trumpet and great rejoicing. "He who hath not seen the rejoicing on the drawing of this water hath seen no rejoicing at all." Christ, alluding to these customs, proclaimed, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." He takes, as very usual with him, the present occasion of the water-bringing from Siloah, to summon them to him as the true fountain.

The Feast of New Moons, or first days of every month, were in some sort a consequence of the feast of trumpets. And though these were not reckoned among the solemn feasts in Lev. xxiii., yet were celebrated as such, by the sound of trumpets, Num. x. 10; by extraordinary sacrifices, Num. xxviii. 11, 12, &c.; by abstaining from servile works, Amos viii. 5; and by attendance upon the ministry of God's word, 2 Kings iv. 23. Upon these days also some sort of entertainments were made, 1 Sam. xx. 5, 18. And God ordained it thus, that by giving him the first-fruits of every month, they should acknowledge him as the Lord of all their time, and own his providence, by which all times and seasons are ordered.

The Feast of Expiation, or Atonement, was kept on the tenth day of the month Tisri, or September. It was instituted for the expiation or pardon of all the sins and pollutions of all the people, from the High-priest to the lowest person, committed by them during the year; Lev. xxiii. 27, 28.

The Feast of Purim, or Lots, was celebrated among the Jews at Shushan, on the fourteenth day of Adar, or February. It was instituted by Mordecai. at the suggestion of Queen Esther, to commemorate the deliverance of the Jews from the hands of Haman. The word means lot, derived from the lots cast every day for twelve months in the presence of Haman, in order to discover a favourable day for the destruction of all the Jews in Persia, when the lot fell on the thirteenth day of Adar. The Jews still observe the Feast. Perhaps John v. 1, alludes to it.

The Feast of the Dedication, or restoration of the temple which had been profaned by Antiochus Epiphanes. This feast is referred to John x. 22. It was celebrated in the winter. Josephus says it was called the Feast of Lights, because they regarded the restoration of the temple as a light shining upon their darkness. An account of the Dedication in I Macca. 4.

FEATHERS, He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler; Ps. xci. 4.—Significant of affection and protection. The original means a strong wing, as an eagle's, covering largely, and striking severely; Isa. xl. 28—31; Ps. ciii. 5.—See Eagle. How consoling to the Christian! His God will be his Guide and his Guardian, as he passes through this desert world. The comparison is beautifully expressive.

FEET, 'lamp unto my feet,' Ps. cxix. 105.—The word feet denotes actions, as path expresses the general course of life.

FEET 'of him that bringeth good tidings.'—Referring to the messengers who announced the news of deliverance from the Babylonish captivity; Isa. lii. 7; Rom. x. 15.

FEET—necks, 'put your feet upon the necks of kings;' Josh. x. 24; Ps. xviii. 40. A common custom of ancient conquerors, practised upon captive princes.

FEET—of Gamaliel; Acts xxii. 3.—The Jews had Academies, in which their doctors gave comments on the law, and taught the traditions to their pupils. In these schools the tutor's chair is said to have been so much raised above the floor, on which the pupils sat, that his feet were even with their heads.

FEET shod; Eph. vi. 15; Deut. xxxiii. 25.—Shoes, or boots of iron or brass, were part of the armour of ancient soldiers. They would be of great use on hard or stony ways

FELIX, Fe'-liks, happy.—The Successor of Cumanus in the government of Judea; Acts xxiii. 26; xxiv. 3. See Claudius.

FELIX. He was a deputy for the Romans, in the government of Judea. He enticed Drusilla to divorce Azizus, king of Emesa, and then took her as his own wife. He defeated about four thousand assassins, headed by an Egyptian impostor, who had posted themselves in the mount of Olives; Acts xxi. 38. During the administration of Felix, Judea was in a constant turmoil, being infested with robbers and assassins, and overrun with impostors pretending to be the Messiah. It was this prince that trembled at the words of Paul, who was brought a prisoner to his bar; Acts xxiv. 25. He was a bad man, and governed with great injustice and cruelty. In the year 60 he was recalled to Rome, and Festus was sent in his room. The Jews followed him, and complained to the government of his extortion and violence; and he would have been punished with death, had not his brother Pallas, by his credit at court, preserved his life; Acts xxiii. & xxiv.

Felix was the brother of Pallas, the favourite of the Roman Emperor Claudius; and it was through his influence that he was made governor of Judea.

FELLOW. A mean man; Gen. xix. 9; Luke xxiii. 2.—It denotes participation. The Ephesians were "no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God," when brought to realize the saving truths of the new covenant; Eph. ii. 19. The church is here compared to a city which hath its peculiar privileges, and where the inhabitants are all engaged in one common interest, and all the saints are joint citizens. Of this grand city or community, all who believe, are equally free, of whatever nation or country they may be. So that they are no more dwellers, or sojourners in that city, but they are fellow citizens with the ancient people of God, and equally with them entitled to all its immunities. Fellow-heirs; Eph. iii. 6. Fellow-helper; 2

FELLOW. "Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd, and against the man that is my Fellow," Zech. xiii. 7. Dr. Pye Smith renders "My Fellow," the man of my resemblance. Gesenius renders the expression, the man of my fellowship, my nearest kin. Dr. Boothroyd adopts our version, and says, "It may mean his intimate friend and associate, or it may signify the man who is at the same time, a Divine Person and my equal, as enjoying the same nature." "I feel compelled to the conclusion that, not only are attributed here to the Messiah a high official station in the constitution of the kingdom of grace, and a capacity, by possessing the human nature, to suffer and to die, but an actual equality of rank and identity of nature." Dr. Pye Smith.

FELLOWSHIP, or Communion, is a term of great importance in the Scriptures. There is a fellowship to which the people of Christ are admitted with God the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ, the blood of Jesus cleansing them from all sin; 1 John i. 3, 5, &c. There is also a fellowship which they have with one another!—in all the spiritual blessings which the gospel brings to the guilty!—in temporal things, which in a particular manner is pointed to Acts ii. 42. When the disciples of Christ communicate jointly of their worldly substance to the support of the poor, this fellowship takes place. The church connexion is called a fellowship, and is opposed to having fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; Eph. v. 11.

FERVENT. Zealous and active; warm, burning. Fervent in spirit, Rom. xii. 11. A fervent mind, denotes great concern, love, and affection; 2 Cor. vii. 7. Fervent charity or love, is that warm affection to Jesus Christ and his disciples which proceeds from a sense of much forgiveness. The expression is opposed to the character of the Laodicean church; Rev. iii. 15. neither cold nor hot. Effectual fervent prayer, is that which is very earnest, proceeding from the strongest inward desire of heart; Col. iv. 12; James v. 16.

FESTUS, Fes'-tus, festival, joyful.—He succeeded Felix in the government of Judea. He sent Paul, whom Felix had left bound at Cesarea, to Rome, to be tried by Cesar, to whom he appealed; Acts xxv. Festus was very diligent in his efforts to put an end to the disturbances and robberies which had become so frequent in Judea in the reign of Felix, but took no trouble to investigate the claims of Christianity; and when Paul spoke of its mysteries, he thought that much learning had made him mad; Acts xxvi. He died about A. D. 62.

FIERY DARTS.—Alluding to the javelins or arrows used by the ancients in sieges and battles. Livy mentions a javelin having combustible matter at the lower part, which being set on fire, was darted against the enemy, or into towns to burn them. They were quenched by wet hides, or received by the soldiers on their brazen shields. Some think that the allusion is to poisoned arrows, which fired or inflamed the blood. Eph. vi. 16.

FIERY FURNACE; Dan. iii. 6, 11, &c.—In the partial excavation of Babylon, near the Euphrates, a coin was found on which were engraved three figures of men in a burning furnace. A gigantic idol is placed opposite the furnace, and two or three people paying homage to it. This engraving found amid the ruins must be 2500 years old, and perfectly corresponds with the scene described in the book of Daniel. Thus Babylon in ruins, ejects from its bosom a wonderful testimony to the truths of Scripture history.

FIERY SERPENTS, Num. xxi. 6.—The wilderness abounded with serpents, of which sufficient evidence now exists. They are called fiery on account of their vivid fiery colour, or the burning wound which they inflict. Plutarch mentions a species of little serpents which attached themselves to the arms and legs of the people about the Red Sea, and if touched but slightly, they fixed themselves to the flesh; the bite was extremely painful, and like that caused by fire.

FIERY FLYING SERPENTS.—Niebuhr noted a species in Arabia, which quickly ascend trees, and spring from one to another. The Arabs call them “Heir Thiare,” the flying serpent. Lord Anson speaks of a similar species in the island of Quibo.

FIERY TRIAL. Alluding to the furious and bitter persecutions to which some of the first Christians were exposed; 1 Pet. iv. 12. The original word, porosei, means the burning. The metaphor is old, but noble; it represents the Christians at Pontus as having fire cast upon them for the trying of their faith, as gold is tried by fire; ch. i. 7, to which the Apostle alludes.

FIG-TREE. A well-known tree, which flourishes in warm countries. It attains a good degree of perfection in the most southern of the United States. The fruit, which grows from the trunk and large branches, and not from the exterior twigs, as in most trees, is nutritious and medicinal, and is exported in a dried state, to every part of the world. The leaves of the tree are very large, on which account Adam and Eve made aprons of them. The tree itself is large, and some have been mentioned which would shelter three hundred men. 1 Kings iv. 25; John i. 49.

The goodness of God is remarkably apparent in this tree. It flourishes in rocky and barren places, where scarcely any thing else will grow; and a single tree (says Tournefort) will sometimes produce two hundred and eighty pounds of figs. So valuable was this tree in the land of Canaan, that to have it killed, or even to have it fail of its annual fruit, was reckoned a dreadful calamity; Joel i. 6, 7; Hab. iii. 17.

FIG-TREE.—'Under the fig-tree,' John i. 48. In Palestine this tree afforded a good shelter; and in the East Indies some are capable of sheltering fifty; others four hundred horsemen. Haselquist says, "We refreshed ourselves under the shade of a fig-tree, under which was a well, where a shepherd and his herd had their rendezvous, and without either house or hut." Such a spot would be suitable for Nathaniel's devotions.

FIGS.—'The time of figs was not yet,' Mark xi. 13; that is, fig-harvest, or the time of gathering figs was not come. The Passover was in the beginning of summer, about which time the most delicate figs were ripe. See Song ii. 13; Matt. xxiv. 32. On the figtree, the fruit appears before the leaf. The leaves showed that the figs should not only be formed, but well advanced; and the season of reaping not having yet come, removed all suspicion that they had been gathered. Therefore nothing can account for the want of fruit but the barrenness of the tree. Christ pronounced perpetual barrenness on it, to signify that the curse of God would rest on his unfruitful vineyard, the Jewish nation, and that all their glory should fade as the leaves of this tree.

FIGURE.—"The like figure whereunto, even baptism, doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh," &c. Mr. Wesley gives a better translation;—"The antitype whereof, (i. e.) baptism, now saveth us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God), by the resurrection of Jesus Christ; that is, through the water of baptism we are saved from the sin which overwhelms the world as a flood; not, indeed, the bare outward sign, but the inward grace;—a Divine consciousness, that both our persons and our actions are accepted through him who died and rose again for us."

v. 14. Adam was the type or resemblance of Christ. Through him sin came upon all mankind, ver. 12;—and Christ is proclaimed to all the world as the life of men. "As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive;" 1 Cor. xv. 22. "For since by man came death, by man," even Christ, "came also the resurrection of the dead," ver. 21. As in or through Adam guilt came upon all men; so, through Christ, the free gift comes upon all men unto justification of life, Rom. v. 18.

FINISH.—To bring to pass, accomplish, perfect, and put an end to. When our Saviour bowed his head on the cross, he cried with a loud voice, It is finished; the great work which his Father had given him to do was completed; and all that was prefigured and foretold concerning him was ended. He, by his one offering, finished transgression, and made an end of sin. In this point of view, Jesus Christ is called, not only the author, but the finisher of faith.

FIR-TREE.—The Fir-tree is an evergreen of beautiful appearance, whose lofty height and dense foliage afford a spacious shelter and shade.

It was very common in Judea, and grew luxuriantly on Mount Lebanon. The trunk is very straight. The wood was used for spears, musical instruments, furniture, rafters in buildings, and for ships. David played instruments of fir wood. It is a very superior wood for the purpose; it is so soft in its nature, and sonorous in instruments when played.

Of the children of Ephraim, God says, "Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him, and observed him; I am like a green fir-tree; from me is thy fruit found;" Hosea xiv. 8. That is, Israel shall no more associate me with idols as he has done; I will alone be served in spirit and truth, the effect of which shall be fruit to my honour and glory. Great men are likened to fir-trees; Nahum ii. 3. "The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir-trees shall be terribly shaken;" that is, the men in place and honour. The church of Christ in its future state of prosperity is thus described;—"The mountains and hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the fields shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir-tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle-tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, and for an everlasting sign, that shall not be cut off;" Isa. lv. 12, 13.

FIRE.—The word fire is frequently used symbolically, and also as an indication of the Divine presence and influence. On Mount Sinai he appeared to Moses in a flame of fire; or in the burning bush; Exod. iii. 2; xix. 18. It is a symbol of Divine wrath and power—a consuming fire; Deut. iv. 24; Ps. xviii. 12—14. It symbolizes the appearance of God the Judge of all, at the last day; 2 Thess. i. 8; Dan. vii. 10. It denotes destructive calamity, Ps. xviii. 8; lxvi. 12; Isa. xlii. 25; lxvi. 15; Jer. xlvi. 45; Ezek. xxii. 31.

Christ is compared to fire. "He is like a refiner's fire," &c.; meaning that he will consume the wicked by his judgments, and purify his people by afflictions, his word, &c. The Holy Spirit is compared to fire; Matt. iii. 11; Acts ii. 3.—The word of God is compared to fire; "Is not my word like a fire?" Jer. xxiii. 29. It is full of life and efficacy; like a fire, it warms, melts, and heals my people; and is powerful to consume the dross, and burn up the chaff and stubble. The Apostle says, "Every man's doctrine shall be tried by fire; that is, by the light of the word, of what nature it is; 1 Cor. iii. 13.—Fire also denotes persecution; "I am come to send fire on the earth." The publishing of my design to save and govern will be inimical to the carnal mind, and they who espouse it must suffer persecution. The church is compared to a fire, overcoming all her enemies; Obadiah 18.

FIRE on his head.—This refers to the treatment of an enemy, Rom. xii. 20; "Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head." Thou wilt touch him so sensibly, that he will no more be able to stand against such a conduct, than to bear on his head burning coals; but will rather submit and even seek thy friendship, and try by kindness to overbalance the injury; Prov. xxv. 21, 22. The figure is taken from smelting metals. The ore is put into the furnace and covered with burning coals, in addition to the fire underneath; this liquefies the metal.—Act as the Apostle directs, and you will soon soften your enemy, and make him a friend.

FIRE that never shall be quenched, Mark ix. 43.—This is a periphrasis of hell, and is an allusion to the valley of Hinnom, from whence hell has its name here and elsewhere. Kimchi (on Psalm xxvii. 13) says, "that it was a place in the land near to Jerusalem, and was a place contemptible; where they cast things defiled and carcases; and there was a continual fire to burn polluted things and bones; and therefore the condemnation of the wicked in a parabolical way is called Gehinnom."

FIRE E.—'Walketh through the fire,' Isa. xliii. 2, alludes to a stratagem in ancient warfare to set the grass and undergrowth on fire in order to annoy the enemy.

Heb. 3. 6.

FIRMAMENT.—This word is an improper translation from the Vulgate, which has firmamentum. The Hebrew word does not mean any thing firm and solid. Such a translation causes the infidel to cavil, and to ask, "How could a firmament be created, since there is no firmament;

and the false notion of its existence is no more than an imagination of the ancient Greeks?" But the difficulty is removed by referring to the import of the original, and infidels are deprived of their vaunted triumph.

The Hebrew word, rekia, from a root which signifies to spread out, to expand, enlarge, &c., simply signifies, that which is distended, expanded, the expanse, space, or visible arch of the heavens, well known by the name, atmosphere. But of what is this an expansion? Of the celestial fluid consisting of light, air, ether, or of whatever philosophers may please to term it. It is styled the heavens; "Who stretcheth out the heavens like a curtain;" Ps. civ. 22; Isa. xl. 22; xlii. 5.

FIRMAMENT.—The proper punctuation and arrangement of Gen. i. 20, will cause a much better reading;—"Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven." Place a colon at life, and then it may be read, ".....the moving creature that hath life: and let fowl fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven."

FISH.—A class of animals which have no feet, but fins; which respire either by means of gills or lungs; they inhabit the waters, and perform their motions either by means of their fins, or by the flexuous agitations or turnings of their bodies; though there are some species which will occasionally quit the water, and come on land; and some which fly for a time by means of their pectoral fins, which are large, and formed for that purpose; as the hirundo or flying fish. The several kinds of fish have certain obvious and invariable characteristics, according to which they may be arranged into certain series, and under these into separate classes composed of the different genera, which agree in their general characters, though they differ in such as are sufficient to distinguish them under these in their ultimate arrangement. Moses says, that all sorts of river, lake, and sea fish might be eaten, if they had fins and scales; and that such as have not, are unclean; Lev. xi. 9—11; Deut. xiv. 9, 10.

FLAGON.—The meaning is doubtful. It has been understood to have been a vessel or cruse intended for wine, holding about a pint; Isa. xxii. 24. But the original signifies a confection, or cakes formed of dried figs and raisins. The translators appear to have been perplexed, as they have supplied "of wine" in italics without any authority; Song ii. 5; Hosea iii. 1. In 2 Sam. vi. 19, the Septuagint has "pancake;" and in 1 Chron. xvi. 3, it is translated "honey-cake."

FLAMING SWORD, which turned every way; Gen. iii. 24. Literally, a flame turning or folding upon itself. It is thus paraphrased by the Jewish Targum;—"And he thrust out the man, and caused the glory of his presence to dwell of old, at the east of the garden of Eden, above the two cherubim." It was the symbol of the Divine Presence, and the design of such manifestation was the same as that subsequently in the tabernacle and temple; viz., to reveal the will of God for the guidance of his people; to accept the sacrifices offered to him; and favourably to regard the prefigurative atonement made by "the sprinkling of blood," without which there was (after the fall) no "remission." And all this was done "to keep or preserve the way to the tree of life." Immortality being now the object of a new covenant, with other conditions, there were good reasons for not suffering our first parents, thus awfully fallen, to "put forth their hand and eat." The dispensation of Eden was at an end. Old sacraments were abolished, and new ones were to be instituted. In the spirit of repentance and faith, the delinquents were to wait "till one happier man should regain the blissful seat," and open the kingdom of heaven to all believers; himself the true TREE OF LIFE IN THE PARADISE OF GOD. The flaming sword seemed to say, "Adam, your own attempts at salvation are vain; you can never return to immortal bliss by creature effort, or by human merit (a thing imagined—but non-existent;) you can only gain it through "the Seed of the woman," who will hereafter atone for human guilt, and of whose sacrifice for that purpose, the sacrifices I appoint you to offer, will be the precursors and the types.

FLATTER, FLATTERY. An extolling and fawning behaviour, attended with servile compliances and obsequiousness to gain a person's favour, or to decoy into sin, Ps. 12. 2, 3; 78. 36; Prov. 2. 16; 20. 19; Job 32. 21, 22; Ezek. 12. 24; 1 Thess. 2. 5.

FLAX.—A well-known plant of which linen is made. Egypt carried on a great trade in the article of linen, Ezek. xxvii. 7; and the destruction of flax, in one of the plagues of Moses, must have been a great calamity, Exod. ix. 31. The mummy cloth of Egypt was made of linen; and the painted and sculptured representations of the flax cultivation, and the testimony of various writers, prove the high esteem in which the linen of Egypt was held. When it is said the flax had "bolloed," it means that the seed vessels had begun to assume a roundish form.

FLAX.—'Smoking flax,' Matt. xii. 20. Flax was anciently used for the wicks of candles or lamps. It refers to the wick of a lamp, which, for want of oil, becomes dim and ready to go out, so that little remains but smoke.—"He encourages the first beginnings of holy desires in the young convert, and revives the almost expiring spark in the baffled and backsliding believer."—Scott.

The word is used in Scripture for living men, and animals in general; Gen. vi. 13;—for the whole nature of man, as it cometh into the world infected with sin; Rom. vii. 5; viii. 8;—for all that in religion which is outward, and to be seen with the eye, as moral works or ceremonies of the law; Rom. iv. 1; Gal. iii. 3;—for the natural corruptions, which act in opposition to the Spirit in regenerated persons; Rom. vii. 18, 25; Gal. v. 17, 24. Flesh also signifies the human nature of Christ, whereby his divine nature was veiled, even as the mercy-seat, and the most holy place were by the veil; Heb. x. 20. It is also taken for the outward appearance; John viii. 15. "A heart of flesh" denotes a tender, tractable temper and disposition.

FLIES. "If thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies upon thee," Ex. viii. 21. It is the opinion of some that swarms of beetles should be understood, for the word flies is not in the original language. In Ps. lxxviii. 45, they are represented as devouring, which rather belongs to beetles than to flies. Dr. Adam Clarke says that the word flies expresses a multitude of different kinds of insects, such as flies, wasps, hornets, and all kinds of venomous insects and reptiles. According to ver. 24 in Ex. viii. the land was corrupted. Every thing was spoiled, and many of the inhabitants were destroyed, probably having been stung to death by those venomous insects. See Ps. lxxviii. 45.

FLOOD. An inundation of water covering the earth, either in whole or in part. Noah's flood was a general inundation sent by God to punish the corruption of the then world, by destroying every living thing (Noah and his family, together with the animals that were shut up along with them in the ark, only excepted) from off the face of the earth. It is in vain to attempt accounting for this event by natural causes, it being altogether miraculous and supernatural; nor is it a thing impossible, because we cannot account for it. The water employed for this purpose, Moses derives from two sources; namely, the fountains of the great deep being broken up, and the windows of heaven opened; Gen. vii. 11.

By his almighty power, God caused the "waters from above the firmament, and the waters under the firmament," which he had before separated, to meet together for that purpose. "The fountains of the great deep were broken up;" and, by some vast convulsions, or upheavings, the waters from their ample and deep spring in the earth, and from the depths of the ocean, were forced upwards; The "windows," or floodgates of heaven "were opened," and rain poured out impetuously in cataracts, or water-spouts, without intermission, for forty

Philosophers, state that water is composed of two airs, oxygen and hydrogen; and that 85 parts of the first, and 15 of the last, making 100 in the whole, will produce 100 parts of water. Thus these two airs form the constituent parts of water in the above proportions. The electric spark, which is the same as lightning, passing through those two combined airs, decomposes them, and converts them into water, and to this cause we may probably attribute the rain which immediately follows the flash of lightning and the peal of thunder. These two causes concurring were quite sufficient to overflow the earth, and to dissolve the whole terrene fabric, as some naturalists have supposed. This seems determined by the Hebrew word, mabbul, translated flood; the root of the word signifies to mix, mingle, confound, confuse, because the watery and earthy parts of the globe were mixed and confused together.

After the cessation of the supernatural cause of this mighty change, the different particles of matter would settle, according to their specific gravity, and thus form the various strata or beds, of which the earth appears to be internally constructed. By the breaking up of the fountains of the great deep, some philosophers think it refers to "an eruption of waters from the southern ocean." Mr. Kirwin thinks that this is evident from such animals as the elephant and rhinoceros being found in great masses in Siberia, mixed with different marine substances; whereas no animals or other substances belonging to the northern regions have ever been found in southern climates. Had these animals died natural deaths in their proper climate, their bodies would not have been found in such masses. But that they were carried no farther northward than Siberia, is evident from their being no remains of any animals besides those of whales found in the mountains of Greenland. That this great rush of waters was from the south or south-east is evident, from the south and south-east sides of almost all great mountains being much steeper than their north, or north-west sides, as they necessarily would be if the force of a great body of water fell upon them in that direction.

Colonel Sir H. J. Jones ascribes important results to a change in the position of the axis of the earth's rotation, or, as he terms it, evagation of the poles. Evagation means wandering, a going or departure from a position.

"If," says this philosopher, the earth were of uniform density, the poles would traverse the circle of evagation (or wandering) in 300 days, and if the density increases from the surface towards the centre, in about 320 days. The poles, therefore, would reach the farthest distance from their original positions, and produce their greatest effects at the end of 150 or 160 days." "One tremendous result would be the displacement with more or less violence, of the waters of the seas; the continents would be overflowed, and nearly every living creature destroyed."

It is a very remarkable fact, if we merely regard it as one of those curious accidental agreements we sometimes meet with, that the above-named periods agree as nearly as possible, if not precisely, with the period of the greatest elevation of the waters, and with the whole period of the deluge described in Gen. vii. and viii.

"And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth: and all the highest hills, that were under the heaven were completely covered. "And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, &c. And the waters prevailed upon the earth an hundred and fifty days;" Gen. vii. 1, &c.—"And after the end of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated;" Gen. viii. 3. Josephus says, "The waters did but just begin to abate after 150 days, it then ceasing to subside for a little while." "In the 601st year, in the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth.

Allowing 29 days to February, this would make the whole period of the Deluge exactly 320 days."

The flood in addition to the statements of revelation, is established both by tradition and theology. The most ancient natives, Persians, Egyptians, Indians, Scythians, Greeks, Americans, &c. have their respective traditions. The Chinese, (especially Confucius,) refer to it.—"The highest rocky mountains on the east of the Nile, appear a mixture of earth, sand, and shells. The very bowels of them like other mountains, are filled with marine productions."—J. S. Buckingham.—"We discern," says Humboldt, "in the new world, the same succession of strata which we find in the old. The whole appears to have undergone the same catastrophes. Fossil bones of elephants and sea shells are not only found in the plains of America, but also on the elevated regions of the lofty Cordilleras." "Examine the highest eminences of the earth, and they all with one accord produce the spoils of the ocean deposited on them on that occasion: the shells and skeletons of sea-fish and sea-monsters of all kinds. The Alps, the Apennines, the Pyrenees, Libanus, and Atlas, and Ararat, every mountain of every region under heaven, where search has been made, from Japan to Mexico, all conspire in one uniform, universal proof, that they all had the sea spread over their highest summits. Search the earth, you will find the mouse-deer, natives of America, buried in Ireland; elephants, natives of Asia and Africa; buried in the midst of England; crocodiles, natives of the Nile, in the heart of Germany; shell-fish, never known to any but the American seas, together with entire skeletons of whales, in the most inland regions of England; trees of vast dimensions, with their roots and tops, and some also with leaves and fruit, at the bottoms of mines and marl-pits; and that too, in regions where no tree of that kind was ever known to grow; nay, where it is demonstrably impossible they could grow, and what is still more, trees and plants of various kinds which are not now known to grow in any region under heaven."

Hugh Miller, the able geologist, writes, "The great Deluge was a deviation from the ordinary laws of nature, and was effected by the extraordinary interposition of Divine Power. For the especial accomplishment of his revealed will on this awful occasion, "the windows of heaven were opened, and the fountains of the great deep were broken;" "The waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth, and all the high hills that were under the whole heaven were covered;" the turbid turmoil of waters prevailing, or collectively continuing their prolonged swell over the face of the globe for upwards of 300 days, and then as continually retiring or hastening before the "wind" which the Creator made to pass over the "earth"—into their "set bounds."

And who shall presume to calculate the revolutionizing or transposing effects of this mighty inundating advance, and recession, of the ocean waters, under circumstances so peculiar, so appalling? Who can confidently affirm that the present wise and beautiful disposition of sea and land was not, in some considerable degree, at least, then accomplished through the agency of such tremendous action, and the accompanying signified disruption, depression, and elevation of strata.

FLOOD. The waters of the sea, or of a river, are called a flood; Ps. lxvi. 6. Flood symbolises danger; Ps. lxxix. 15.—The assaults of Satan; Isa. lix. 19.—Great abundance; Isa. xlv. 3.

FLOODS came; Matt. vii. 25, 27; Luke vi. 49. In Palestine, slightly built houses were in great danger of being swept away by the violent floods occasioned by the swellings of the Jordan, and the heavy rains. "The rains," says Major Skinner, speaking of Palestine, "when they begin to fall, pour down for three or four days and nights successively, and have often the power of demolishing a town in a night."

FLOOD. "Your fathers dwell on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah the father of Abraham I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood," &c. Josh. xxiv. 2, 3. Infidels have stated that this is a contradiction, because Abraham is said to have been born after the flood. The word "flood" here means the river Euphrates, which flows impetuously as far as Bir, and has its Annual inundations, in consequence of the melting of the snows in the mountains of Armenia, by which a great part of the country is flooded.

FLOOR. See Threshing-floor.

FLOURISH. To spring forth, or bud, Songs 7. 12. To increase in wisdom, honour, or wealth, Ps. 90. 6; 92. 7, 12-14; Is. 17. 11. & 66. 14. Ps. 72. 7. shall the righteous f. 16. & 92. 12, 13, 14; Prov. 11. 28, & 14. 11. 92. 7. when workers of iniquity f. 132. 18. upon himself shall crown f. Is. 66. 14. your bones shall f. Ezek. 17. 24. dry tree to f.

FLOW. To run as in a stream; Ps. 147. 18.—To abound; Joel iii. 18. To melt away; Isa. lxiv. 1, 3.—A fertile country; Ezek. xx. 6.

FLOWER. Frail and vanishing men are compared to the grass that withereth, and the flower of it that falleth down; 1 Pet. i. 24; Isa. xl. 6, 8. It symbolizes the uncertainty of all earthly things, and of human life; James i. 11.

FLUTE, Dan. iii. 5, 10, 15. It was made of reed, horn, wood, &c. Some have supposed it was the Pandæan pipe, or a kind of organ with various pipes, or flageolet with two pipes.

FLUTTER. The compassion of God towards his church is set forth by the eagle's affection to her young; Deut. xxxi. 11.—See Eagle.

FLY. A well-known insect, and declared unclean by the law of Moses; Lev. xi. 42. The Philistines worshipped the god of flies, then called Beelzebub. See Beelzebub. The Lord promised his people, that when they came into the land of Canaan, he would send an army of flies and wasps against the Canaanites, to force them out of their country; Exod. xxiii. 28; Deut. vii. 20. This he effected; Josh. xxiv. 12, and Wisdom xii. 8, and we cannot doubt but that many of the Canaanites did really abandon their country to secure themselves from those troublesome insects. Swarms of flies was one of the miracles with which God plagued the Egyptians, for not suffering the Israelites to depart out of the land of Egypt; Ex. viii. 24.

FLY and FLYING. Spoken of riches, Prov. 23. 5. ('make themselves wings, &c.)—The promptitude of God to help, 2 Sam. 22. 11, ('and did fly,')—The prosperity of the church, Is. 60. 8, ('fly as a cloud, &c.)—The spread of the gospel, Rev. 14. 6.—Human frailty, Ps. 90. 10.

FOAL. A young horse, mule, camel, or ass; Gen. xlix. 11.

FOLD. An enclosure for sheep and other cattle; Isa. xiii. 20. The church and ordinances of Christ are compared to a fold; John x. 1.

FOLLOW. To come or go after one going before; 1 Sam. xxv. 27.—To imitate; Matt. xvi. 24; 1 Cor. xi. 1; John x. 27.—Idolatry; 1 Kings xviii. 21. To pursue with diligence; Phil. iii. 12.

FOLLOW.—'Goodness and mercy shall follow me,' Ps. xxiii. 6, alludes to the stream issuing from the smitten rock and following Israel through the wilderness.

FOLLOW 'the Lamb whithersoever he goeth,' Rev. xiv. 4.—An allusion to the oath taken by the Roman soldiers, part of which was to follow their generals wherever they should lead, 2 Sam. xv. 21.

FOOL, folly, foolishness, are to be understood not only according to their natural and literal meaning, for one who is an idiot, or a very weak man, and for the discourses and notions of fools and madmen; but in the language of Scripture, especially in the book of Proverbs, fool is the usual character of the sinner; and folly and foolishness are put for sin. Psalm xxxviii. 5. "My wounds stink, and are corrupt, because of my foolishness," or my sin. And in Ps. lxxix. 5, "O God, thou knowest my foolishness." Solomon sets the fool in opposition to the prudent man, Prov. xiii. 16, "Every prudent man dealeth with knowledge; but a fool layeth open his folly."

FOOT, FEET.—Figuratively, these words have many applications. They express inclinations, propensities, and the actions of life. To sit at the feet of a person was the posture of humble and obedient scholars; Deut. xxxiii. 3; Acts xxii. 3. The master usually sat upon an elevated position.—To be under any one's feet denotes subjection; Ps. viii. 6; Heb. ii. 8; 1 Cor. xv. 25. These passages refer to the custom of conquerors who placed their foot on the body of vanquished princes, as a token of triumph, &c.—To set one's foot in a place, is to take possession of it; Deut. i. 36.—Nakedness of feet denotes mourning; Ezek. xxiv. 17.—To remove the shoes from the feet was a token of reverence and adoration; Exod. iii. 5; Acts vii. 33.

In old times, it was customary to wash the feet of strangers after a journey, because they either walked barefoot, or wore only sandals; Gen. xviii. 4; xix. 2; xxiv. 32. Widows maintained by the church, were to be such as had washed the feet of the saints; that is, had been ready to do the meanest services for the servants of God; 1 Tim. v. 10. Our blessed Saviour washed the feet of his apostles, and though there is not sufficient reason for regarding this as a positive institution, like the Lord's supper, yet it most plainly and movingly shows that Christians are to be very affectionate, and ready to perform the most humble services for one another.

"A wicked man speaketh with his foot;" Prov. vi. 13; uses much gesture with his hands and feet while he is talking; Ezek. xxv. 6.

FOOT.—"Keep thy foot," Eccl. v. 1. The Jews did so by taking off their sandals, when they entered the sanctuary. See Exod. iii. 5; Josh. v. 15. A custom still observed by the Jews, and the Indian Brahmans, indicative of reverence. Feet often means inclinations, dispositions, actions, &c. So in this passage, "Keep thy foot," &c. And in Ps. cxix. 59; "I turned my feet unto thy testimonies, &c. Also in Eph. vi. 15; "And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace," &c.

FOOT.—"Wateredst it with thy foot," Deut. xi. 10. It is expressive of toil, and refers to the method of raising water by machines turned with the foot, something like a treadmill; or it may mean the digging of rills, in which the foot is used to convey water to cultivated grounds from rivers and reservoirs.

FOOT.—"My foot hath held his steps," Job xxiii. 11. Alluding to the active grasping power the orientals have in their feet and toes, being able to hold things in them in a manner almost incredible; they make the toes perform almost the work of fingers. We bind ours fast from childhood in our close shoes, and only use them for walking. But the orientals use theirs differently; they seize upon an object with their toes, and hold it fast. If they desire to pick any thing up, instead of stooping as we do, they seize it with their toes, and lift it up. An Arab in treading firmly, or in taking a determined stand seems to grasp the ground with his toes, giving a fixedness of position inconceivable to those whose feet are cramped by the use of tight shoes. The meaning here is that Job had fixed himself firmly in the footsteps of God, and had adhered tenaciously to them; or as it is rendered by Dr. Good, "In his steps will I rivet my feet."

FOOT shall not stumble, Prov. 3. 23.

Eccl. 5. 1. keep thy f. when thou goest into the house of God

Is. 58. 13. turn away f. from the sabbath
Matt. 13. 8. if thy f. offend thee cut it off
1 Cor. 12. 15. if f. say because I am not the hand

Heb. 10. 29. trodden under f. the Son of God

FOOTED, Acts 10. 12.

FOOTMEN.—"Run with the footmen," Jer. xii. 5. Footmen may be taken from the Philistines, Edomites, &c., fighting on foot—But see 1 Sam. xxii. 17. Persian princes have still running footmen, trained for it; they will weary out a horse at full gallop, and have been known to run, without intermission, 120 miles in 14 hours.

FOOTSTEPS, signify a good conversation and behaviour, Ps. 89. 51.—Miraculous operations of Divine Providence, Ps. 77. 19; Ex. 14. 28, 29.

FOOTSTOOL, the earth, Is. 66. 1; Matt. 5. 35; Acts 7. 49.—The temple or ark in it, 1 Chr. 28. 2.—The sanctuary, Ps. 99. 5.—The enemies of Christ, Ps. 110. 1; Matt. 22. 44; Luke 20. 43; Acts 2. 35.

FORBEAR, to withhold, or restrain for a time, the exercise of rigorous justice. It is applied to God who is said to be rich in his goodness, and long-suffering, Ex. 23. 5; 1 Cor. 9. 6. Rom. 2. 4. goodness f. 3. 25.

FORBID, Mark 10. 14; Luke 13. 16, & 6. 29; Acts 24. 23, & 28. 31.

FORCES. Soldiers are so called, 2 Chr. 17. 2. In the latter-day glory 'the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto Christ,' Is. 60. 5.

FORCIBLE, mighty, powerful, convincing, Job 6. 25.

FORD. A passage, or shallow part of a river, Gen. 32. 22; Josh. 2. 7; Isa. 16. 2.

FOREFATHERS.—Ancestors; Jer. xi. 10; 2 Tim. i. 3.

FOREHEAD.—Signifies courage, holy boldness; Ezek. iii. 8. Public profession of religion; Rev. vii. 3; xiii. 16; xiv. 1. May allude also to the inscription of 'Holiness of Jehovah,' written on the mitre of the high priest; Exod. xxviii. 36. "Set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh," &c.; Ezek. ix. 4. It was an ancient custom in the East to mark the servants on the forehead. The different worshippers in India are marked with the tiluk before they can enter a pagoda—a longitudinal line on the forehead, red, yellow, &c.

FOREIGNERS, Ex. 12. 45; Deut. 15. 3; Obad. 11; Eph. 2. 19.

FOREKNOWLEDGE.—The knowing of things before they come to pass. This is the prerogative of Deity. All the attempts of men to pry into the future are vain; but "known unto God are all his works from the beginning." Jesus Christ was delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God; Acts ii. 23. That counsel of God which defined the time, place, and circumstance, for the manifestation and crucifixion of his Son, was according to his foreknowledge; so that there was nothing casual in these things, God having determined that the salvation of a lost world should be brought about in this way; and neither the Jews nor Romans had any power here, but what was given them from above. 1 Pet. i. 2. "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father." God's foreknowledge of all believers to be his people was revealed in the covenant with Abraham. This the apostle mentions, to show the Jews that the believing Gentiles were no intruders into the church of God. He determined from the beginning to make them his people. See Rom. xi. 2, where God is said to have foreknown the whole Jewish nation; and 1 Pet. i. 20, where the sacrifice of Christ is said to be foreknown before the foundation of the world.

Acts 2. 23. counsel and f. of God, 1 Pet.

FOREORDAINED, that which has been purposed, or appointed to be effected in future ages, 1 Pet. 1. 20.

FORERUNNER.—One that goes before to perform a service for his successor. So Christ is called, Heb. vi. 20. This is beautifully illustrated by the words of Christ, "I go to prepare a place," &c., John xiv. 2, 3; and by the Apostle Paul; Heb. vi. 19, 20. The Athenians called the first ripe figs by the word translated forerunner. Christ is the first-fruits, the forerunner of them that sleep; 1 Cor. xv. 20, 23. By entering heaven as our Forerunner, he has opened the way of pardon to us, and the way of access to, and acceptance at the throne of grace; Heb. x. 17—23. He has entered heaven to take possession of it in our name, that at last he may bring us home to himself; John xvii. 24. There is also a beautiful allusion to a person and boat sent out with the anchor to the pierhead or within the harbour, for the purpose of fastening the ship, till she can enter more safely when the tide shall flow. Swinging at her cable's length, the ship rides out the gale; for her anchor is "sure and stedfast."

FORESEEING, Gal. 3. 8; Acts 2. 25,

FOREST.—A large plantation of trees, as the forest of cedars on Mount Lebanon, 2 Kings xix. 23.—The forest of oaks on the mountains of Bashan; Isa. xxiii. 9.—The forest of the king, &c. See Jer. v. 6; xlvi. 23; Ezek. xv. 6; Micah v. 8; Ps. civ. 20.

FORGIVENESS implies the commission of trespass or offence. The grand design of revelation is to assure mankind that there is forgiveness with God; and also to explain how that forgiveness can be exercised in perfect consistency with the demands of the divine law, and the inflexible nature of divine justice, so that God should appear to be just even in justifying the ungodly, or in forgiving men their trespasses; Romans iii. 24.

Forgiveness was announced to Adam in the promised Seed; doubtless to the patriarchs; to Moses and the prophets; Exod. xxxiv. 5—7. It was proclaimed by the Levitical sacrifices as types of the great Absolver, Christ Jesus. The sacred writers dwell upon this theme with rapture; Ps. ciii. 1—14;

cxlv. 7—9; Neh. ix. 17; Micah vii. 18; Ps. cxxx. 4, 7. But the glorious gospel of Christ more illustriously proclaims the forgiveness of sins; John iii. 16, 17; Acts xiii. 38, 39, cum multis. Forgiveness comes from the Saviour's atonement; Acts v. 31; 1 John ii. 12. It is intimately connected with justification, the privilege of every penitent believer who is forgiven and justified. "The terms justify and justification, when applied to a guilty person, do not mean that he is morally just, but just with respect to law and the lawgiver;—he is placed in the position of a person whom we may imagine not to have broken the law; as if he were innocent; for Jesus has fulfilled the law and endured for him the penalty due to his trespasses. He is free from punishment, and is re-instated in the favour of Almighty God." All this is the result of free unmerited grace; it flows only from the boundless love of God in giving his Son to die; for "In him we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins," Eph. i. 7.

The duty of mutual forgiveness is enjoined upon all by the most solemn sanctions; Matt. vi. 14, 15; xviii. 15—35; Luke xvii. 3, 4. Christ not only taught it, but he exemplified it in his life and in his death. Witness his dying words; "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do;" Luke xxiii. 34.

FORM.—The figure, shape, or likeness of a thing; Job iv. 16.—Outward splendour, pomp, and dignity; Isa. liii. 2; “He hath no form nor comeliness,” &c. The Jews expected Messiah to come in regal pomp and splendour; but his low estate thwarted their expectations.—A pattern or type; 2 Tim. i. 13.—External profession, without the inward power of religion; 2 Tim. iii. 5.—Christ was “in the form of God,” &c. In the essential image of the Father, enjoying the Divine essence, and possessing the same attributes and glory, he subsisted from all eternity; therefore, it was no usurpation on his part to account himself equal with the Father. Yet he emptied himself of that majesty and glory by hiding it in the veil of his flesh. “He made himself of no reputation; and he that was in the form of God took upon him the form of a servant; not of a glorified saint, or of some great monarch, &c. No; he “was made in the likeness of men;” Phil. ii. 6—8. If one of these forms of expression is not true, the other is not true. If he was not really God, he was not really man. The sublime antithesis must be void.

FORNICATION implies uncleanness of every kind. (1) Adultery is fornication; thus, ‘Whosoever putteth away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery,’ Matt. v. 32. (2) Incest is called ‘such fornication as is not named among the Gentiles,’ 1 Cor. v. 1. (3) Connection between unmarried persons; ‘To avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife,’ &c.; 1 Cor. vii. 2—4. Idolatry is often called fornication, 2 Chron. xxi. 11. Every unscriptural doctrine is spiritual fornication; ‘He hath judged the great whore, who did corrupt the earth with her fornication,’ Rev. xix. 2. See particularly Whoredom.

FOUNTAIN. The spring or source of waters. Springs of pure water were of great value in Palestine, which was "a dry and thirsty land." Hence the earnestness of the daughter of Caleb in asking him for springs of water; Judges i. 15. Fountains were numerous in Palestine, at Nazareth, &c. viz. Enrogel, Gihon, Siloam. They are to be found in cities, town, villages, &c. The most valuable fountains are those which never fail. Springs or fountains are called living, when they never cease, or intermit, but are always sending forth their waters. Such had been God's care and kindness towards the people of Israel, that he complains, "that they had forsaken him the Fountain of living waters." The blood of Christ, which washes believers from all uncleanness of sin, is called a fountain, Zech. xiii. 1. "In that day there shall be a fountain open to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and uncleanness." The legal washings were but shadows and types of this matchless healing and purging fountain, namely, the blood of Christ, which never failed to heal any that ever used it; 1 John i. 7; Heb. vii. 25.

FOWL. The generic name of all the feathered tribes. It is so called from the Saxon, fleon, to fly, corresponding to the Hebrew oph, from aphaph, to fly, comprehending every thing that flies: whence the Latin, avis, a bird. Figuratively, men; Ezek. xvii. 23; Isa. lx. 3; lxvi. 23; Matt. xiii. 4.

FOWLER. One that, by fire-arms, arrows, or nets, strives to catch fowls. Satan is a fowler; with great subtilty and deceit, he and his agents lay snares and temptations for the ruin of mankind; Ps. xci. 3; Prov. vi. 5. Such as oppress and seek the ruin of their neighbours, or endeavour to ensnare them into sin or danger, are called fowlers; Ps. cxxiv. 7; Jer. v. 26.

FOX. There is reason to think that the word shuol means a jackal, and not a fox; and that the fox is not mentioned in all the Scriptures; Ps. lxxiii. 10. Barbarous nations of the east ravage the country they conquer, leaving the habitations desolate, and the dead bodies unburied. These carcases the jackals devour. David alludes to this; Ps. lxxiii. 10, when he says his enemies "shall be a portion for foxes." The true fox does not prey on carrion; nor are our foxes fond of grapes, as jackals are known to be; Songs ii. 15. Samson might have caught jackals by scores, but the fox is scarcely ever found in Judea, and is not a gregarious animal. The country of jackals is Asia Minor and the neighbourhood. They choose hilly places, boldly approach travellers, and at night enter villages, always going in troops. The jackal is not so large as a wolf, but rather larger than a fox, and lives on small animals, grapes, vegetables, and carcases. The general resemblance of the fox and the jackal may have caused the sacred writers to use the term shuol, as comprehending similar animals. J. C. Scaliger and Olearius, as quoted by Bochart, expressly call the jackal a fox; and Mr. Sandy says, "the jackals are, in my opinion, no other than foxes." Kämpfer says, the jackal may not improperly be called, the "well-fox."

Bryant remarks that Samson's destructive scheme by the foxes was not uncommon; as both Greek and Roman authors refer to the custom of destroying corn by sending foxes and other animals into it with fire-brands or torches tied to their tails.

The Vulpinaria, or feast of foxes, amongst the Romans, was doubtless, derived from the story of Samson, as related in this book; the Romans being accustomed to fix burning brands to the tails of foxes in the feast of Ceres, and so put them to death in the Circus, as a memorial of their having once destroyed fields of corn in that manner. Sampson is supposed to have been the Hercules of the Grecian mythology.

FOX—Consummate hypocrisy and deceit; Ezek. xiii. 4; Luke xiii. 32.

FRAME, to make, Isa. 29. 16; to devise, Jer. 18. 11; to forge, Psa. 50. 19; 94. 20.—To join together, Eph. 2. 21. See also Judg. 12. 6; 103. 14; Jer. 7. 18; Ezek. 40. 2; Hos. 5. 4; Heb. 11. 3.

FRANKINCENSE. A gum, anciently much burnt in temples, and now used in medicine. It distils from incisions made in the tree during the heat of the summer, and when placed on live coals, sends up a dense fragrant smoke. Some frankincense is brought from the East Indies; but it is not equal to that of Arabia or Syria. The form of the frankincense tree, Pliny says, is like a pear-tree. Frankincense is still used in the Popish ceremonies, as well as by heathens; Ex. xxx. 7, 34; Lev. xvi. 12, 13; Luke i. 10. Figuratively, it expresses devotional fervour; Psa. 141. 2. It is a beautiful symbol of the Redeemer's intercession; Rev. viii. 3, 4.

FRIEND. One whom we love, esteem, and confide in, more than others. Thus Jonathan and David were mutually friends. Solomon in his book of Proverbs, gives the qualities of a true friend; Prov. xvii. 17. "A friend loveth at all times;" not only in prosperity, but also in adversity; chap. xviii. 24. "There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother;" he is more hearty in the performance of all friendly offices. He reproveth and rebuketh when he sees any thing amiss; Prov. xxvii. 6. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend;" his sharpest reproofs proceed from an upright, and truly loving and faithful soul. He is known by his good and faithful counsel, as well as by his seasonable rebukes; Prov. xxvii. 9. "Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart; so doth the sweetness of a man's friend by hearty counsel;" by such counsel as comes from his very heart and soul, and is the language of his most inward and serious thoughts. The company and conversation of a friend is refreshing and reviving to a person, who, when alone, is sad, and dull, and inactive; Prov. xxvii. 17. "Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."

The term also expresses an endearing relationship betwixt God and man, betwixt Christ and his disciples. Abraham is called "the friend of God;" James ii. 23; 2 Chron. xx. 7; Isa. xli. 8. Our Saviour calls his Apostles "friends," John xv. 15, because he loved them, and made known to them his will. Friend was the term of salutation, whether to friend or foe; Matt. xxii. 12; xxvi. 50.

FROG.—There are two species of frog; one of which lives in the water, and the other on the land. The former was made the plague of Egypt, Exod. viii. As the frog in Egypt was the emblem of Osiris, it was held sacred by the people; and this plague is one of the many instances in which Jehovah punishes men by means of the very things which they improperly regard. This is still more apparent when we consider that the Nile, in which they were produced, was supposed by the Egyptians to be peculiarly sacred, and deserving of religious veneration. Though the frog is not venomous, such legions of them penetrating every place, and filling their food and beds, rendered life intolerable. When it is said, Ps. lxxviii. 45, "He sent frogs and destroyed them," it probably means that the stench of them, when killed, infected the air, and created pestilence.

The Easterns had their ovens in the ground. A hole was dug and fire made in a vessel; and when sufficiently heated, the bread was baked therein. Thus frogs could easily get into the ovens.

FRONTLETS consisted of four pieces of parchment; on the first was written, Exod. xiii. 2—10; on the second, 13—21; on the third, Deut. vi. 4—9; and on the fourth, xi 19—21. These the Jews bound together, on their foreheads, and wore them in the time of the morning and evening prayers, from a literal and false interpretation of Ex. xiii. 16; Deut. vi. 8. FRUIT.—Whatever is produced by any cause. The fruits of the earth are grass, corn, trees, herbs; the fruit of vegetables is their berries, apples, grapes, &c.; the fruit of animals is their young ones. Children are called the fruit of the body, or womb, Deut. xxviii. 4; Ps. cxxvii. 3. Christ is the fruit of the earth; his human body sprung from it, Isa. iv. 2. The twelve manner of fruits which the tree of life bears, and yields every month, points to the unsearchable riches of Christ as the true Tree of life, whose fruit is infinitely sufficient to supply all the wants of his church, the true twelve tribes of his Israel; in him they find a sufficient, constant, and complete supply, Rev. xxii. 2; Song ii. 3; Prov. viii. 19. The fruits of the Spirit are enumerated Gal. v. 22, 24; Eph. v. 9; Rom. i. 13; Col. i. 6.

FRUIT.—"And the woman took of the fruit (of the tree), and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat;" Gen. iii. 6. A positive commandment, in itself insignificant, but of infinite importance, as the test of man's obedience, was proposed to our first parents as the trial of their virtue. This commandment they transgressed; and the test being trivial, increased rather than lessened their guilt of transgression.

Had the test been some great performance, or some tedious and painful task of self-denial, there had been some excuse for their failure; but when, in the midst of a beautiful garden, surrounded by every object pleasing to the eye, or grateful to the taste, the trifling act of abstinence from a particular fruit was commanded; to break it might seem to be done for the mere pleasure of breaking it. Foolishly do those talk who cavil at the Divine authority of the five books of Moses, on the ground that death and alienation from God should be made the penalty of "merely eating an apple." The sin of Adam and Eve did not consist in the mere deed of tasting the fruit of a tree. As a prohibition with its annexed penalty had been plainly set forth, the tasting the forbidden fruit became a complex act. It was a transgression of God's law with a high hand. It was questioning his wisdom in issuing such a law. It was an utter disbelief of his word, united with the affront of giving credit to a lying and rebellious spirit, rather than to Divine truth. It was an act of open rebellion, introducing confusion and disorder into the moral government of the Omnipotent: and it was all this without even the poor idea of an overwhelming and irresistible temptation.

FRUSTRATE. To disappoint, to render vain or abortive, to annul, or make void, Is. 44. 25; Gal. 2. 21.

FULFIL.—The performance of things which God has promised; Matt. xxvi. 54. Performance of Divine ordinances; Matt. iii. 15. To supply what is wanting; Phil. ii. 2; John xvii. 13; Matt. xxiii. 32; 1 Thess. ii. 16.

FULL, FULNESS.—(1) Desiring no more of a thing, Isa. i. 11; "I am full of the burnt offerings of rams." (2) Perfect, that which wants nothing, 2 John 8. (3) Such as are puffed up with a conceit of their own sufficiency and worth, so as to feel no need of Christ. "Woe unto you that are full." Luke vi. 25. To be "full of years," is to have lived to old age, Gen. xxv. 8. "The fulness of time is the time wherein the Messiah appeared, which was appointed by God, promised to the fathers, foretold by the prophets, expected by the Jews themselves, and earnestly longed for by all who looked for redemption; the fulness of this time is when that day was fully come. Gal. iv. 4. The "fulness of God," is such a measure of perfection as God hath appointed to every one of his people, through Christ, Eph. iii. 19. "That he might be filled with all the fulness of God," in sharing in the most ample manner in the unsearchable riches of Christ.

FULLER.—One who cleanses and dresses cloth, 2 Kings xviii. 17; Isa.
vii. 3; xxxvi. 2; Mal. iii. 2. The mode is not known. Christ's garments at the transfiguration appeared white, "so as no fuller on earth could white them;" Mark ix. 3. We read also of "fuller's soap;" Mal. iii. 2.

FURLONG.—With us the eighth part of a mile. The stadium was equal to 201½ yards. The Roman mile contained about eight stadia, and ten stadia are equivalent to the modern geographical mile; Luke xxiv. 13; John
vi. 19; xi. 18.

FURNACE.—A fireplace for melting gold, and other metals; Prov. xvii.
3; xxvii. 21. The word is frequently used figuratively for severe afflictions and trials; Ezek. xxii. 18, 20. A

G

GAAL, Gay'al, contempt, abomin- ation.—Son of Ebed; he fought against Abimelech, who defeated him, and he was compelled to retreat;
Judges ix. 26.

GAASH, Gay'ash, tempest over- throw.—A mountain of Ephraim, celebrated for Joshua's tomb, and for streams descending its sides; Josh.
xxiv. 30; 2 Sam. xxiii. 30.

GABA, Gay'-bay, a hill, a cup.—A city in the tribe of Benjamin; Josh.
xviii. 24.

GABBAI, Gab'-bay.—A chief of the tribe of Benjamin; Neh. xi. 8.

GABBATHA, Gab'-ba-thah, high, elevated.—The name of a place in Pilate's palace, from which he pronounced judgment on Christ; John xix. 13. It seems to have been an elevated terrace, gallery, or balcony, paved with stone and marble of various colours, similar to the tassellated or mosaic pavements of the Romans, and probably constructed by them,
 according to Suetonius.

GABRIEL, Gay'-bre-el, God is my strength, the hero of God.—One of the principal angels in heaven, sent to Daniel to explain to him certain visions; Dan. viii. 16; ix. 21. He appeared also to Zacharias to announce to him the birth of John the Baptist; Luke i. 19; and to Mary, to inform her that she should become the mother of the Messiah; Luke i. 26.

GAD, Gad, a troop, a fortune.—
 The son of Jacob, and Zilpah, Leah's servant. Jacob blessing him, said,
 "Gad, a troop shall overcome him;

but he shall overcome at the last. The tribe of Gad at their departure from Egypt, numbered 45,650 men. After the defeat of the kings Og and Sihon, Gad and Reuben desired to have their division in these countries and alleged their great number of cattle. Moses granted their request, on condition that they would accompany their brethren, and assist in the conquest of the land beyond Jordan. Gad had his inheritance between Reuben south and Manasseh north, with the mountains of Gilead east, and Jordan west; Gen. xlix. 19.

GADARA, Gad'-a-rah.—The capital of Perea, in Cælo-Syria, stood about four miles eastward of the Sea of Tiberias. Great numbers of swine were kept here, which was directly contrary to the Mosaic law. When Christ, in healing two possessed persons, suffered the devils to enter their herd of swine, and drown them, instead of being humbled by their punishment, they besought the Saviour to leave their country. About forty years after, the city was burnt by the Romans; Matthew (ch. viii. 28,) calls this the country of the Gergesenes, because Gergesa was the name of the country where Gadara stood, or was a city near to Gadara; and Christ healed the possessed men on the border between the two, or in a place common to both; Mark v. 1. It is now called Kadar, and sometimes Oom-Kius.

GADARENES, Gad-a-ree'ns, surrounded, walled.—The inhabitants of Gadara; Luke viii. 26.

GADDI, Gad'-dy, my troop, a kid. The son of Saul, of the tribe Manasseh. One of the spies; Num. xiii. 11.

GADDIEL, Gad'-de-el, the Lord is my army.—The Son of Sodi. One of the spies; Num. xiii. 10.

GADI, Gay'-dy.—The father of Menahem, who usurped the kingdom of Israel; 2 Kings xv. 14.—The name of a place, where Bani was born; 2 Sam. xxiii. 36.

GAHAM, Gay'-ham.—A son of Nahor, Abraham's brother, by his concubine Reumah; Gen. xxii. 24.

GAHAR, Gay'-har.—Ezra ii. 47.

GAINSAY, to contradict, Acts 10. 29.

Rom. 10. 21. g. people

Jude 11. g. of Core

GAIUS, Gay'-e-us, lord, earthy.—

The name of one or two of the most eminent Christians.—One converted by Paul at Corinth; 1 Cor. i. 14; Acts xix. 29; xx. 4. He was probably a Macedonian, but settled at Corinth, where he lodged the Apostle during his abode in that city; Rom. xvi. 23. To him, or to another of the same name, John addressed his third epistle.

GALAL, Gay'-lal.—A Levite; 1 Chron. ix. 15.

GALATIA, Gal-ay'-she-a, white, of the colour of milk.—A province of Asia Minor, bounded on the west by Phrygia, on the east by the river Halys, on the north by Paphlagonia, and on the south by Lycaonia. It took its name from the Galatæ, or Gauls, who settled there. Nicomedes, king of Bithynia, gave it to them as a reward for their having assisted him in his wars against his brother. Its chief city was Ancyro, now called Angora. About 175 years before Christ, it was reduced to a Roman province. The gospel was planted here by Paul, who wrote an epistle to those churches; Acts 16. DEIOTARUS, for whom Cicero interceded, in an oration still extant, was king of this country. About A. D. 266, it was overrun by the Goths; and afterwards became a province of Turkey. It is now called Natolia.

GALATIANS, Gal-ay'-she-ans.—The people of Galatia.

GALATIANS, Epistle to.—Galatia derived its name from a number of Gauls who had emigrated thither at a remote period. They were a valiant people but barbarous, and superstitious. Many of them were converted by the ministry of Paul. He found them idolators, but they received the gospel with great joy, and were willing to make every sacrifice to promote the happiness of the Apostle. False teachers soon reduced them from the simplicity of the gospel. To restore them, and to oppose the false doctrines of their teachers, Paul sent them this Epistle, probably the first that he addressed under the Spirit of inspiration, for the instruction of the church of God. It was written soon after the conversion of the Galatians; ch. i. 6, about A. D. 51, or 52; but Michaelis fixes the date three years earlier.

GALBANUM, Gal'-ba-num. — A gum, or sweet spice, used by the Jews in their sacred perfumes. It was produced from the Syrian and African Ferula Galbanifera; Ex. xxx. 34.

GALEED, Gal'-e-ed, the heap of witness.—A pillar of stones raised by Jacob as witness of the covenant between him and Laban; Gen. xxxi. 47.

GALILEE, Gal'-le-lee, wheel, heap. A large and fertile province north of Canaan; Matt. ii. 22; xxvi. 32; xxviii. 7; John vii. 52, &c. Called also 'Galilee of the Gentiles;' Matt. iv. 15; or, 'of the nations;' Isa. ix. 1, because it was chiefly possessed by the Gentiles; or surrounded by the Phœnicians, Syrians, and Arabians. The principal city in this region was Cæsarea Philippi, anciently called Paneas by the Phœnicians, from Mount Paneas, at whose base it was situated: it was enlarged and beautified by Philip the Tetrarch of Iturea and Trachonitis, who made it the seat of his government, and changed its name to Cæsarea, in honour of the emperor Tiberius: it was also called Cæsarea Philippi, to distinguish it from the other cities which bore the name of Cæsarea. The main road to Damascus, Tyre, and Sidon, lay through this city.

Lower Galilee, which lay between the Mediterranean Sea and the Lake of Gennesareth, was situated in a rich and fertile plain, and according to Josephus was very populous, containing upwards of two hundred cities and towns. This country was most honoured by our Saviour's presence. Here his miraculous conception took place; Luke i. 26—38. Hither Joseph and Mary returned with him out of Egypt, and here he resided until his baptism by John; Matt. ii. 22, 23; Luke ii. 39—51; Matt. iii. 13; Luke iii. 21. Hither he returned after his baptism and temptation; Luke iv. 14. And, after his entrance on his public ministry, though he often went into other provinces, yet so frequent were his visits in this country, that he was called a Galilean; Matt. xxvi. 69.

GALILÆANS, Gal'-le-le'-ans. — Inhabitants of Galilee. Also a sect of Jews in Judea, which sprung up in the time of Christ. They were named after their leader, Judas of Galilee, or a Gaulonite. The Galileans were opposed to the taxes levied by the Roman power, A. D. 12; Acts v. 37; Luke xiii. 2.

GALL.—A bitter herb or root; Matt. xxvii. 34; or any thing bitter, pernicious, or distressing; Deut. xxix. 18; Jer. viii. 14.—An unrenewed state; Acts viii. 23.

GALL, Job 6. 13, & 20. 14, 25.

Deut. 29. 18. root bears g. and worm-wood

32. 32. their grapes are grapes of g.

Ps. 69. 21. gave me g. for. Matt. 27. 34.

Jer. 8. 14. given us water of g. 9. 16.

Lam. 3. 19. remembering wormwood and g. 5.

Acts 8. 23. thou art in g. of bitterness

GALLANT, noble, fine, stately, spoken of a ship; Isa. xxxiii. 21. "Neither shall any gallant ship pass thereby."

GALLERIES, upper rooms; Songs vii. 5. The same word is rendered rafters; Songs i. 17. and watering-troughs; Gen. xxx. 38, 41.

GALLEY, a kind of ship rowed with oars. The enemies of the Jews are likened to galleys; Isa. xxxiii. 24.

GALLIM, Gal'-lim, heapers, rollers.—A city of Benjamin, about four miles north of Jerusalem; 1 Sam. xxv. 44; Isa. x. 30.

GALLIO, Gal'-le-o, one who lives on milk.—Proconsul of Achaia, A. D. 53. The brother of the famous Seneca the philosopher. He was at first named Marcus Annæus Novatus ; but being adopted by Lucius Junius Gallio, he took the name of his adopted father. The emperor Claudius made him proconsul of Achaia. To his tribunal the Jews dragged Paul ; Acts xviii. 12. He acted as a judge very mildly and properly, nobly refusing to countenance a persecution raised against the Apostle. "He cared for none of these things," that is, the matters in dispute did not come under his jurisdiction. The phrase has been wrongly understood and applied. He would not meddle with the controversies of the various sects. His name has therefore been abused. How common to say, "He conducted himself Gallio-like."

GAMALIEL, Ga-ma'-le-el, recompense of God.—The son of Pedahzur ; Num. i. 10 ; ii. 20.—A celebrated Pharisee and rabbi, or doctor of the Jewish law, under whose tuition the Apostle Paul had been trained. He was celebrated for extensive knowledge, and great zeal for the Jewish religion. This is evident from Paul's reference to his relation to Gamaliel as a proof that he had possessed the most favourable opportunity to know the religion of his country. This doctor was equally remarkable for prudence and zeal, and happily succeeded in restraining his intemperate brethren from crushing the kingdom of Christ on its first appearance ; Acts xxii. 3 ; v. 34—40.

GAMMADIMS, Gam'-ma-di-ins.—Soldiers in the towers of Tyrus, natives of Gamale a Phœnician city ; Ezek. xxvii. 11. Jerome renders the word warriors.

GAMUL, Gay'-mul, recompence.—1 Chron. xxiv. 17.

GAP. A breach or opening made in a hedge or wall. To "stand in the gap" is to try to arrest the progress of vice, and by fervent prayer prevent the infliction of Divine wrath ; Ezek. xxxiv. 4 ; xiii. 5.

GARDEN. We read of the garden of Ahab ; 1 Kings xxi. 2, and of the Persian kings at Susa ; Esther i. 5 ; vii. 7, 8 ; and the garden of Joseph in which Christ was interred ; John xviii. 1. The Easterns delighted in gardens. The garden of Paradise is called the garden of Jehovah ; Gen. xiii. 13 ; Isa. ii. 3, and the garden of the Elohim ; Ezek. xxviii. 10. Gardens are emblems of moral improvement, produced by the blessing of heaven. Gardens in a hot climate require abundance of water. They are generally planted by rivers, or supplied by rills from fountains or rivers ; Jer. xvii. 8. Those around Damascus are very beautiful on that account. Beautiful allusions to this are made ; Ps. i. 3 ; Prov. xxi. 1 ; Eccl. ii. 5, 6 ; Isa. i. 30 ; lviii. 11. A "well-watered garden," a "garden having no water," are symbolical of blessing and cursing.

GARDEN, Gen. 2. 15, 23, and 13. 10.
Songs 4. 12. a g. enclosed my sister
16. blow on my g. 5. 1, & 6. 2, 11.
Jer. 31. 12. soul as watered g. Is. 58. 11.

GAREB, Gay'-reb.—A brave officer of David, 2 Sam. xxiii. 38.—A hill near Jerusalem, Jer. xxxi. 39.

GARLANDS—A kind of crowns, placed on the head of animals to be sacrificed, Acts xiv. 13. They were made of Cyprus, of the pine-tree, and other leaves and flowers. The Jews also used them at the offering of the first fruits.

GARLICK, Num. xi. 5.—A well-known vegetable, with a bulbous root, of which the Jews were very fond. It was very common in Egypt ; and it was the food of the labourers employed in building the pyramids.

GARMENT.—That by which a person is clothed. Christ's garments were parted, i. e. divided among the soldiers at his crucifixion ; Matt. xxvii. 35.

In mourning, men generally wore sack-cloth or hair-cloth. Prophets, when their messages were terrible, and the times dark, oft wore a mourning dress of coarse stuff, or skin. 2 Kings i. 7, 8 ; Matt. iii. 4. False prophets, in order to deceive the people, clothed themselves after the same manner. Zech. xiii. 4. It was common to lay up stores of raiment (as the fashion of dress does not alter in the East, and loose robes are capable of fitting any body), especially by the rich, who either loaned or gave away many such at their great feasts. Sometimes thousands of garments were laid up. Hence the Saviour warns men of the folly of laying up treasures which the moth may consume; Matt. vi. 19; Luke xii. 33; Jam. v. 2.

What is said in Matt. ix. 16, "No man putteth a piece of new cloth into an old garment," &c., is explained by the parallel text, Luke v. 36, "No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old;" that is, no man cuts a new coat to mend an old one.

GARMENTS.—"Put on thy beautiful garments," Isa. lii. 1. In times of public distress, the Easterns appear in their meanest apparel, but when prosperity returns, they put on their beautiful garments. Hence we read of 'garments of praise,' Isa. lxi. 3; of 'garments of vengeance,' Isa. lix. 17; 'garments of salvation,' and 'robes of righteousness,' Isa. lxi. 10.

GARMENTS.—Symbolical of the souls of men, Rev. iii. 4.

GARMENTS smell of myrrh, aloes, cassia, &c.—The Easterns are very fond of perfuming their garments, especially on festive occasions, Ps. xlv. 8.

GARMENTS, Borders of, Num. xv. 37-40.—The law of Moses directed the Israelites to put a fringe or tassel to each of the corners of their upper garments that, when they saw them, "they might remember all the commandments of the Lord to do them." The Pharisees wore them of an unusual length, that they might be thought more holy than their neighbours, Matt. xxiii. 5. See Phylacteries.

GARMENT down to his foot, Rev. i. 13, denoting his dignity and majesty, as King of his church; it being usual for kings to wear long robes in token of majesty.

GARMENT spotted by the flesh. Referring to garments worn by those who had the plague; Lev. xv. 4, 10, 17. Of course it is figurative, expressing the infectious nature of sin.

GARMENTS. "Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments;"

Rev. xvi. 15. Alluding to what that Jewish officer, called the Man of the Mountain, that is, of the house of the Lord, used to do, when taking his round in the temple to examine the watch; if he met with any asleep, he had liberty to set fire to his garments. Perhaps, in this case, the person might be obliged to appear in the fragments of his burnt garments the next day, which would be a great disgrace; Num. xviii. 4, 5.

GARMENT, Josh. 7. 21; Ezra 9. 3.

Job 37. 17. how thy g. are warm

Ps. 22. 18. parted my g. among them

Is. 9. 5. battle with g. rolled in blood

59. 17. put on g. of vengeance

61. 3. g. of praise for spirit of heaviness

Joel 2. 13. rend hearts and not g.

Matt. 21. 8. spread their g. in way

Acts 9. 39. showing g. Dorcas made

Jam. 5. 2. your g. are moth-eaten

Rev. 3. 4. which have not defiled their g.

16. 15. watcheth and keepeth his g.

GARNER.—A storehouse for corn, a granary; Matt. iii. 12; Luke iii. 17.

GARNISH. To cover over, to beautify; 2 Chron. iii. 6; Matt. xii. 44.

GARRISON. A place where soldiers are posted for the defence of a town, &c.; 1 Sam. xiii. 23; Ezek. xxvi. 11; 2 Cor. xi. 32.

GATAM, Gay'-tam, their lowing, their touch.—The son of Eliphaz, the son of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 11.

EASTERN GATE.

GATE.—GATES.—At the gates of the ancient cities there was a spacious area, accommodated with seats for persons of rank and authority. Here the courts of justice were held, and all public business transacted. The inhabitants went out in the morning, to the labours of the field, and returned in the evening; so that the gate of the city was the place where all the people passed, and whatever transpired there, was witnessed by all ranks of the inhabitants. Keeping this in view, the force and beauty of the following passages will be apparent. See Gen. xxiii. 10—18; xxxiv. 20; Ruth iv. 1—12; Deut. xxi. 19; xxv. 7; Ps. cxxvii. 5; Job xxxi. 21; Prov. xxii. 22.

GATE, Beautiful; Acts iii. 2. This was the highest gate of the temple, being fifty cubits high, or ten cubits higher than the other gates, the cubit being the length of a man's arm from the elbow to the tip of the middle finger. Nine gates were completely covered with gold and silver, but this with Corinthian brass, which was of greater value. Its doors were forty cubits high. The ascent to it was by fifteen steps. The whole of the workmanship was exquisite, the addition was made to the temple by Herod the Great. From this gate being near Solomon's porch, verse 16, it is thought to have been that commonly called Susan.

GATE. "He that exalteth his gate seeketh destruction;" Prov. xvii. 19. The increase of wealth and greatness would tempt a man to have a high and splendid entrance, or gate, to his court or house; but this was attended with great danger; for, in the East they are obliged to have the doors of their courts and houses very low, not more than three feet high, to prevent the Arabs (who scarcely ever leave the backs of their horses,) from riding into the courts and houses, to plunder their goods. If, therefore, a proud person made a high gate, he exposed himself to destruction.

GATES.—Symbol of security, authority and power; Gen. xxii. 17; Ps. cxlvii. 13.

GATES of death—Great danger; Ps. ix. 13; Job xxxviii. 17.

GATES of the daughter of Zion.—The ordinances of divine worship; Ps. ix. 14.

GATES of HELL shall not prevail against it; Matt. xvi. 18. This language is figurative, and refers to decided opposition against the church. It implies, 1. The policy of hell,—gates being the seat of the council.—2. The censures and accusations of hell, and gates being the place of judicature.—The power of hell,—gates being the place of strength. The passage then intimates that neither the cunning, craftiness, nor fierce accusations; nor the power of his emissaries, shall prevail against the church. Hezekiah speaks of going to the gates of the grave; Isa. xxxviii. 10. Christ uses the same words, as he does, pulai adou (the gates of Hades) Hezekiah refers to his death. It is by death that the spirit enters into Hades, or the invisible world. Then Christ also means, that the gates of the unseen world that are ever opening to swallow up the members of his church, shall not prevail against it. "Instead of the fathers shall come up the children," and his church shall never want supporters and advocates. "He must increase." "He must reign till all enemies are put under his feet."

GAZA, Gay'-zah, strong, a goat.—A city of the Philistines; it became an important city of Canaan. It was situated between Raphia and Askalon, at the south-western angle of Judea towards Egypt, 40 miles south-west from Jerusalem: it was one of the five cities of the Philistines towards the southern extremity of Canaan, being a frontier defence against Egypt, and a place of great importance.

It was in Gaza where Samson pulled down the house of the god Dagon, destroying himself with several thousand of his enemies—After Joshua's death it was taken by the men of Judah, with Askalon and Ekron; about 300 years afterwards, Gaza, as well as the other two cities, were in the hands of the Philistines, who, when they returned the Ark, offered their golden emerods to the God of Israel as a trespass-offering. Gaza was sometime after taken and partly burnt by Shalmanezzer, king of Assyria—it suffered also from Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt—it fell into the hands of the Chaldeans, from whom it was wrested by the Persians: and in the year B. C. 331, Alexander the Great besieged it while held by a Persian garrison, and took it after a siege of three months: but the city was left standing; subsequently, however, Alexander Jannæus, reigning prince of the Jews, took it after a siege of a year, and destroyed it. Thus was Gaza made desolate agreeably to the prediction of the prophet; Judg. xvi. 1; xviii. 1; 1 Sam. vi. 17; Amos i. 6; Jer. xlvii. 1; Zeph. ii. 4.

GAZABAR, Gaz'-a-bar, treasure. A Persian, the father of Mithredath; Ezra i. 8.

GAZE, to look earnestly, Eccl. 19. 21; 3. 3; Heb. 10. 33.

GAZER, Gay'-zer, dividing, or sentence.—A city of the Philistines, in the tribe of Ephraim; 2 Sam. v. 25.

GAZEZ, Gay'-zez, a passing over. The name of a son and grandson of Caleb; 1 Chron. ii. 46.

GAZZAM, Gaz'-zam.—One who returned from the Babylonish captivity; Ezra ii. 48.

GEBA, Ge'-bah, a hill, a cup.—A city; 1 Chron. vi. 60.

GEBAL, Ge'-bal, bound, limit.—Probably a city in Arabia; Ps. lxxxiii. 7. It is situated to the north of Beyrout. It was famous for its ship-builders, and for the worship of Adonis. It is now called Jebilee, a mean town with ruins indicating its former greatness; Ezek. xxvii. 9; Josh. xiii. 5.

GEBER, Ge'-ber.—The son of Uri, and governor of the province of Gilead and Rusan; 1 Kings iv. 19.

GEBIM, Ge'-bim, grasshoppers.—A place; Isa. x. 31.

GEDALIAH, Ged-a-ly'-ah, greatness of the Lord.—The son of Ahikam, whom Nebuchadnezzar left in Palestine, after the destruction of Jerusalem, to govern the remainder of the people, and recall those who had fled; Jer. xl. 14.—Also the grandfather of the prophet Zephaniah; Zeph. i. 1. He was treacherously assassinated by Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, whom he had entertained at a banquet.—A Levite; 1 Chron. xxv. 3.—The son of Pashur; Jer. xxxviii. 1.

GEDER, Ge'-der.—A place in Judea; the king of it was killed by Joshua; Josh. xii. 13.

GEDERAH, Ge-de'-rah. A city, Josh. xv. 36.

GEDEROTH, Ged-e'-roth.—A city of Canaan; 2 Chron. xxviii. 18.

GEDEROTHAIM, Ged-e-roth-ay'-im.—A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 36.

GEDOR, Ge'-dor.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xv. 58.—The son of Jared; 1 Chron. iv. 18.

GEHAZI; Ge-hay'-zy, valley of sight.—The servant and constant attendant of Elisha; 2 Kings v. 20; viii. 4. He had the confidence of Elisha, but greatly abused it. He was characterized by great covetousness, and its influence upon him was his ruin. When his master had miraculously healed Naaman, the latter offered him a costly present, which he declined to accept. Gehazi coveted the gift, and by deliberate falsehood obtained a portion of it. As a punishment for his covetousness and falsehood, the disease which Naaman had, was inflicted upon him and his family.

Josh. xviii. 17. The same as GILGAL; Josh. xv. 7; Judges iii. 19.

GEMALLI, Ge-mal'-ly, wares, or a camel.—One of the tribes of Dan, who was a spy; Num. xiii. 12.

GEMARIAH, Gem-a-ry'-ah, accomplishment of the Lord.—The son of Hilkiyah, sent to Babylon, from king Zedekiah, to carry tribute money to Nebuchadnezzar, and a letter from Jeremiah to the captives in Babylon; Jer. xxix. 3.—The son of Saphan; Jer. xxxvi. 12.

GENDER to couple, Lev. 19. 19; to bring forth, Gal. 4. 24; to produce, as effect from cause, 2 Tim. 2. 23.

GENEALOGY comes from the Greek word Genealogia, which signifies a list of our ancestors, a description of the stock, lineage, or pedigree of any person or family. The common Hebrew expression for it is Sepher toledoth. The Latin, Liber generationis. The Hebrews were very careful in preserving their genealogies; and perhaps there never was any nation more circumspect in this point than that of the Jews. At this day we find genealogies in their sacred writings, carried on for above three thousand five hundred years; and in the Evangelists we have the genealogy of Jesus Christ deduced for four thousand years, from Adam to Joseph or Mary; Luke. iii. 23, &c. The Jews were very exact in their genealogies, partly from their own choice and interest, that they might preserve the distinctions of the several tribes and families, which was necessary both to make out their claims or titles to offices or inheritances, which might belong to them by death, or otherwise: and to govern themselves thereby in the matter of marriages, and some other things wherein the practice of some laws required the knowledge of these things.

Without these genealogies the priests could not exercise their sacred office; Ezra ii. 62. The Jews lost their genealogies, after the war with the Romans, and their final dispersion. This loss caused the endless disputes censured by the Apostle Paul; 1 Tim. i. 4; Titus iii. 9.

GENEALOGY of Christ.—In the genealogy of Christ we see the wisdom of God. For the prophets had foretold that he was not only to be a descendant of Abraham, but of the lineage of Jacob, and not of Esau; that he was to descend from Judah; and still more explicitly that he was to spring from the root of Jesse; Isa. xi. 1, through the loins of his son David; 2 Sam. vii. 11—16; Matt. xxii. 42—45; Rom. i. 3. Accordingly, the evangelists are particular in tracing the genealogy of Jesus through these various ramifications; Matt. 1; Luke 3. The genealogy given by Saint Matthew was principally designed for the Jews; and therefore it traces the pedigree of Jesus Christ, as the promised seed, downwards from Abraham to David, and from him through Solomon's line to Jacob the father of Joseph, who was the reputed or legal father of Christ; Matt. i. 1—16. That given by Luke was intended for the Gentiles, and traces the pedigree upwards from Heli, the father of Mary, to David, through the line of his son Nathan, and from Nathan to Abraham, concurring with the former, and from Abraham up to Adam, who was the immediate "son of God," born without father or mother.

GENEALOGIES. "So all Israel were reckoned by genealogies, and behold they were written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah, who were carried away to Babylon for their transgressions;" 1 Chron. ix. 1. Dr. Geddes translates this verse; "Thus were all the Israelites reckoned by genealogies, and lo! these were found written in the registers of the kings of Israel and Judah, when the Judahites were, on account of their transgressions, removed to Babylon," &c.

GENEALOGIES were a subject of dispute among the Jews, as from various circumstances it had become difficult to trace their origin or their different tribes. Herod, as Eusebius asserts, that he might hide the meanness of his descent and birth, burnt all the genealogical writings in the public archives.

GENERAL. The chief commander; 1 Chron. xxvii. 34. A great course of people; Heb. xii. 23.

GENERATION, signifies in Scripture, (1) Posterity, offspring; Gen. x. 1. (2) Line of descent. The "book of the generation of Jesus Christ" is a history of his lineage, life, and death; Matt. i. 1. (3) "This generation shall not pass away, till all these things be fulfilled," means, that the people living in the time of Christ should not be all dead when Jerusalem and the Jewish nation would be ruined by the Romans; Matt. xxiv. 34. The word here may be applied to the Jewish nation, which our Lord foretels should not pass away till his second coming. In fulfilment of this prophecy, we see them subsisting at this day, a distinct and separate generation. In Christ's time, the Jews were a faithless, perverse, and untoward generation; Mark ix. 19; Acts ii. 40. The saints are "a chosen generation," or, an elected race; 1 Pet. ii. 9, and 1, 2.

GENERATION, 'who shall declare his generation,' Isa. liii. 8.—This is hard to be understood. Some say his eternal generation is meant; others the mystery of his incarnation; others, the duration of his future existence; others, the wickedness of the age in which he should live; others, the numbers of the holy seed; —'Who can declare his posterity?' which is in connection with 'He shall see his seed, &c.' that is, he shall indeed be cut off, but his name, his race, shall not be extinct; and that race shall be so numerous as to defy computation.

GENESIS, Jen'-e-sis, generation.—

Genesis is a Greek word which signifies creation or production, and the first book in the Bible is so called because it narrates the creation of all things by the word of Almighty God, and the peopling of the earth. It is the oldest volume in the world, and contains the most important information. It was written by Moses, probably after the giving of the law. It comprises the history of the first 2369 years. It describes the origin of the world, its history before the flood, the fall of man, the deluge, the history of mankind after the flood, and an account of the patriarchs and other distinguished persons.

GENNESARET, or GENNESARETH, Ge-ness'-a-ret, or Ge-ness'-a-reth, the garden, or protection of the prince.—A small district of Galilee, extending about four miles along the north-western shore of the sea of Genesareth. It is probable that Gennesareth is the same as Cinneroth, the ancient name of a city and tract of country in this very situation; Matt. xiv. 34; Num. xxxiv. 11.

GENTILES, Jen'-tiles.—The Jews called those who had not received the law, by a word meaning the nations, in Latin, gentes, whence the word Gentiles. In the writings of the Apostle Paul, the Gentiles are generally denoted as Greeks; Rom. 1. 14—16; ii. 9; iii. &c. "Isles of the Gentiles," are supposed to have comprised all the regions on the Mediterranean, and the countries of Europe, &c., known to the Jews; Gen. x. 6.

GENTILES, Gen. 10. 5; Jer. 4. 7.

GENUBATH, Gen-yew'-bath, theft, garden.—The son of Hadad, the Edomite; 1 Kings xi. 20.

GERA, Ge'-ra, pilgrimage, dispute.

The father of Ehud; Judges iii. 15.—

The father of Shimei; 2 Sam. xvi. 5.

GE'-RAH, Ge'-rah.—A piece of silver or gold, the twenty-fourth part of a shekel; Exod. xxx. 13.

GERAR, Ge'-rar, a dispute.—A royal city of the Philistines. It was near Gaza, between Kadesh and Shur. To this place Abraham and Isaac went to escape famine, and both deceived the king with respect to their wives; Gen. xx. 1; xxvi. 1.

GERASA, Ger'-a-sah.—A city on the east side of the Dead Sea, either in Arabia, or in Celo-Syria.

GERGSENES, or GIRGASHITES, Ger-ge-see'ns, or Ger'-ga-shites, those who come from pilgrimage.—A people mentioned Matt. viii. 28. According to Wetstein, it ought to be read Gadarenes, as in Mark and Luke.—But Gergesenes may mean the inhabitants of the celebrated city of Gerasa or Gergesa, whose ruins, called Djerash, are seen 50 miles from the lake of Tiberias. This city was probably within the district of Gadara.

GERIZIM, Ger-i'-zim, cutters.—A mountain near Shechem, in the tribe of Ephraim, a province of Samaria, remarkable for its fertility, &c. the blessings and curses pronounced upon it. Here the Samaritans erected their temple in opposition to that of Jerusalem, because the Jews would not allow the Samaritans to help them to build their temple; 2 Kings xvii; Ezra iv. It was begun about B. C. 408 years. This temple was destroyed by Hyrcanus, a Jewish prince, 129 years before Christ; but the Samaritans have continued to esteem the spot sacred, even to this day, often going thither to worship God; John iv. 20. It is about one thousand feet high.

GERSHOM, Ger'-shom, a stranger there, a traveller of reputation.—The son of Moses and Zipporah; Ex. ii. 22.

GERSHON, Ger'-shon, his banishment.—A son of Levi, and a prince; Num. iii. 21—25. His name was given to one of the three branches of the Levitical tribes. The Gershonites, shortly after their departure out of Egypt mustered 7500 men. Their office while marching through the wilderness was to carry the vails, curtains, &c. of the tabernacle.

GESHAM, Ge'-sham, drawing near. A descendant from Hezron, the third son of Reuben; 1 Chron. ii. 47; Gen. xlv. 9.

GESHEM, Ge'-shem.—An Arabian, who opposed Nehemiah in the building of the temple; Neh. ii. 19.

GESHUR, Ge'-shur, the sight of the valley.—A city of Syria, subdued by Israel; 2 Sam. xv. 8; xiii. 37.

GESHURI, Gesh'-yew-ry, the sight of the valley.—A city of Syria; Deut. iii. 14.

GESHURITES, Gesh'-yew-rites.—The inhabitants of Geshur; Josh. xii. 5.

GETHER, Ge'-ther, the vale of trial, of searching.—The third son of Aram, the son of Shem; Gen. x. 23.

GETHSEMANE, Geth-sem'-a-ne, a very fat valley.—A small village near the mount of Olives, where was a garden in which Christ spent many of his nights in devotion; here he had his bitter agony, and was seized by his enemies, headed by the traitor Judas; Matt. xxvi. 36; Luke xxii. 39.

Mr. Fisk says, Gethsemane "is a place of loneliness and seclusion, overhung by the Mount of Olives on the one side, and the western heights of the valley of Jehoshaphat and the embattled walls of Jerusalem on the other. It is just such a spot as a soul desiring to be alone with God would choose, when the shades of evening were gathering over it."

The garden still contains eight or nine olive trees, probably offshoots from stems in the Garden above 1800 years ago; for the bole of the Olive will send forth shoots, it is well known, which will live for centuries, after the parent tree has been cut down. "The monks," says Dr. Olin, "have possession of Gethsemane, and they have planted several young Olive trees."

Gethsemane! the place where the Captain of our salvation agonized, the holy, the patient, and the merciful Jesus! There he said, foreseeing Calvary's dreadful conflict, "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death!" "On entering Gethsemane," says a recent traveller, "my soul heaved with intense emotion; thousands of times had I thought of Gethsemane, but now I was in the very garden where my Saviour loved, and sweat, and bled, even great drops of blood, falling to the ground! For me, for me, and for sinners vile, those drops were shed. Here, in this garden, (and wonderful! I am in it!) my Saviour prayed, and wept, and groaned, and yet he was submissive amid all the agony. Here, in this garden, "he fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt!" O Jesus, thou didst drink that bitter cup, and drained its wrathful mixture for me! Thou didst ascend the hill of Golgotha, and died. Thou didst finish transgression when thou wast "cut off;" thou didst make an end of sin, and brought in an everlasting righteousness. All praise to thee, thou great Mediator. Farewell now, tragic garden, I leave thee with indescribable emotions. I can never forgot thee, O Gethsemane. Precious have been my moments in thee. I leave thee with regret! "Arise, and let us go hence!"

GEÜEL, Ge-yew'-el, God's redemption.—One of the spies of the tribe of Gad; Num. xiii. 15.

GEZER, Ge'-zer, dividing, or a sentence.—A place which Joshua took in Canaan; Josh. xii. 12.

GHOST is from the Anglo-Saxon gast, an inmate, inhabitant, guest (a casual visitant,) and also a spirit; but it is now restricted among us to the latter meaning, always signifying the immortal spirit or soul of man, the guest of the body. Spirit, or soul; Gen. xxv. 8. To "give up the ghost" denotes dying or death.—The third person in the Trinity; Matt. xxviii. 19. See Holy Ghost.

GIAH, Gy'-ah.—A place in Canaan; 2 Sam. ii. 24.

GIANTS,—persons of extraordinary stature, before the flood; Gen. vi. 4;—seen in the land of Canaan by the spies; Num. xiii. 33;—the Emims and Anakims were such; Dent. ii. 10;—Og king of Bashan, of the remains of them; iii. 11; Goliath of Gath was, at the least, 9 feet 9 inches high; 1 Sam. xvii. 4;—Ishbibenob, killed by Abishai; 2 Sam. xxi. 16;—three of them slain in David's victory over the Philistines; 1 Chron. xx. 4.

GIBBAR, Gib'-bar, manly, strong. One who returned from the Babylonish captivity; Ezra ii. 20.

GIBBETHON, Gib'-be-thon, elevated.—A city of the tribe of Dan, given to the Levites; Josh. xxi. 23.

GIBEAH, Gib'-e-ah, a hill.—A city in the tribe of Benjamin, lying about six miles north of Jerusalem, the birth-place of king Saul; Judges xix; xx; xxi.

GIBEON, Gib'-e-on, hill, cup.—The capital of the Gibeonites, seated on a hill, about five miles north of Jerusalem; Josh. ix. 3, 17; 1 Kings iii. 40; 2 Sam. xxi. 1, &c. The inhabitants deceived Joshua by sending a deputation to him to make a treaty of peace, whose dress, &c., indicated that they had come from a very great distance, and consequently did not belong to any of the nations which God had commanded them to destroy, and whose country they were to occupy. The covenant was kept by the Hebrews, though thus falsely obtained; and instead of being destroyed, they were made to serve as hewers of wood and drawers of water; Josh. ix. and x.

GIBEONITES, Gib'-e-on-ites.—Inhabitants of Gibeon.

GIBLITES, Gib'-lites.—A people of Canaan; Josh. xiii. 5.

GIDDALTI, Gid-dal'-ty.—A musician; 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

GIDDEL, Gid'-del.—A returned captive; Ezra ii. 47.

GIDEON, Gid'-e-on, bruiser, or breaker.—The son of Joash, of the tribe of Manasseh, called Jerubbaal, the seventh judge of Israel; Judges vi; vii; viii. He was a man of great heroism, and greatly honoured by the Lord. To him he manifested his favour very remarkably in the miracles of the dew and fleece; Judges vi. 36—40. Mark his valour and disinterestedness. He delivered his people from the oppression of the Midianites; ch. vii. and afterwards refused the crown that was offered to him. His faith is recorded, Heb. xi. 32.

GIFT, 'a man's gift maketh room for him,' Prov. xviii. 16; xix. 6.—In the East presents are necessary to obtain favour.

GIFTS for men, Ps. lxxviii. 18; Eph. iv. 8.—In public triumphs it was customary for the conqueror to throw money among the crowds. The apostle applies this custom to the ascension of Christ, and to the distribution of the gifts of his Spirit amongst his people. This application to the Redeemer when he had conquered all his enemies, and returned triumphant to heaven, is not only proper, but the whole becomes magnificent and interesting. The ascent of the ark to mount Zion, and the grand procession in honour of a splendid victory represented the future triumph of Messiah—"Thou hast received gifts for men, 'IN MAN,' in human nature," (A. Clarke,) and now he blesses his people with all spiritual blessings and gifts in heavenly places.

GIFTS, 'best gifts,' 1 Cor. xii. 31.

—Those Christian excellencies enumerated in the following chapter, and comprehended under the word charity. Or such gifts as may be of the most advantage to the church.

GIFT, 1 Cor. 1. 7, & 7. 7.

Ex. 23. 8. take no g. for the g. blinds the wise, Deut. 16. 19; 2 Chr. 19. 7.

GIHON, Gy'-hon, valley of grace.

The name of one of the four rivers whose source was in Paradise; Gen. ii. 13.—Also the name of a fountain west of Jerusalem, where Solomon was anointed king; 1 Kings i. 33.

GILALAI, Gil'-a-lay, a wheel, or marble.—A Levite, who officiated at the dedication of the new walls of Jerusalem; Neh. xii. 36.

GILBOA, Gil'-bo-ah, revolution of inquiry.—A mountain memorable for the death of Saul and Jonathan; 1 Sam. xxxi. 1, &c. Eusebius says that this mountain was six miles from Bethshan, or Scythopolis. These hills are very fertile and pleasant; 2 Sam. i. 6, &c. 17—27; circumstances which appear to have heightened David's grief, and suggested that beautiful imprecation in his inimitable elegy on this disastrous event: "Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither let their be rain upon you, nor fields of offering: for there the shield of the mighty is vilely cast away," &c. 2 Sam. i. 21.—A ridge on the north of Bethshan.

GILEAD, Gil'-le-ad, heap of witness.—The son of Machir; Num. xxvi. 29, &c.—The name of Jeph-thah's father; Judges xi. 1, 2.—Mountains which ran from Lebanon southward, on the east of the holy land. They gave their name to the whole country which lies on the east of the Sea of Galilee, and includes the mountainous region called in the New Testament, Trachonitis; Jer. xxii. 6. From this country, the eldest son of Machir, grandson of Manasseh, probably received his name, as did the chief city of the Israelites in the prophetic times; Hosea vi. 8. A part of it retains the name Gjelead, and is extremely fertile, and beautiful, clothed with forests of trees, which produce a valuable gum, called the balm of Gilead; Gen. xxxi. 21; Jer. viii. 22.

The BALM OF GILEAD was noted for its healing powers, and was much used in medicine. It is a thick tenacious gum or milk, which coagulates quickly. It is specially used in inflammations. It is an article of commerce, and in the time of Alexander, it was estimated at twice its weight in silver. So highly did the ancients esteem the efficacy of this medicine that it was common to express the incurableness of a disease by saying that the Balm of Gilead could not heal it; See Jer. xli. 11.

GILGAL, Gil'-gal, wheel, revolution, heap.—A celebrated place west of Jordan, where the Israelites first encamped, after their passage over that river, and where they were circumcised. A considerable city was built there, renowned for many events recorded in the history of the Jews; Josh. v. 2—9; Judges iii. 19; 1 Sam. xi. 14, 15; xv. 33. It was a religious station; for a 'messenger of the Lord came up from Gilgal;' Judges ii. 1; 2 Kings ii. 1.—It was a station of justice; for Samuel in his circuit, went yearly to Gilgal; 1 Sam. vii. 16. The coronation of Saul was performed at Gilgal; 1 Sam. x. 8; 2 Sam. xix. 15, 40.—2 A place beside the plains of Moreh, approaching to Shechem; Deut. xi. 30; Josh. xii. 23.

GILOH, Gy'-loh, he that rejoices, overturns.—A city of Judah; Josh. xv. 51; 2 Sam. xv. 12.

GILONITE, Gy'-lon-ite.—An inhabitant of Giloh.

GIMZO, Gim'-zo, that bulrush.—A city of Judah, taken by the Philistines; 2 Chron. xxviii. 18.

GINATH, Gy'-nath.—Father of Tibni; 1 Kings xvi. 21.

GINNETHO, Gin'-ne-tho.—A Levite; Neh. xii. 4.

GIRD. "When thou wast young, thou girdest thyself, but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee," &c. John xxi. 18. An illusion to Peter's crucifixion, who suffered death at Rome, A. D. 65, in the reign of the Emperor Nero. Previous to crucifying, it was customary to put the necks of the victims into a yoke, and to stretch out their hands and fasten them to the end of it, and having thus led them through the city, they were taken to be crucified.

GIRDETH 'on his harness,' 1 Kings xx. 11.—More correctly translated, "Let not him that girdeth himself boast as he who unlooseth his girdle;" let him not boast before the end of the war.

GIRD with strength, Ps. 18. 32.
Ps. 30. 11. g. me with gladness
Luke 12. 35. loins g. me with gladness
Eph. 6. 14. having your loins g. with truth

GIRDLE.

—A sash or belt, much valued in the East, and sometimes made of costly materials.

Its use was to bind the flowing garment close when necessary; Matt. iii. 4.

—To fasten a girdle round the waist, indicated preparation for active exertion; 1 Pet. i. 13.—The girdles worn by the wealthy were of costly materials, and very richly ornamented. Such was that of the high-priest;

Ex. xxxix. 29.—Females made them; hence the character of a good wife; Prov. xxxi. 24.

Mr. Gadsby says, "I have one of silk, from Damascus, 15 feet long, and 4 feet wide, besides the fringes. They are gracefully folded, and then wrapped round the body with the fringes hanging down. The Easterns think much of their girdles, and take greater care of them than of any other part of their dress. They hold the inkhorn of the schoolmaster, tax-gatherer, &c. Girdles are used as pockets for money and jewels. When a person travels, he tightens his girdle, and tucks up his drawers, and tunic, so as to leave every limb at liberty.

The military belt was the the chief ornament of a soldier, and highly prized; it was also a rich present and a token of remembrance. See 2 Sam. xviii. 11.—Christ and angels, to denote their splendour and dignity, are represented as being 'girded with golden girdles,' Rev. i. 13; xv. 6. To gird a person became proverbial for endowing him with ability; 'It is God that girdeth me with strength; Ps. xviii. 32; Prov. xxxi. 17. To loose the girdle indicated the loss of strength or courage; Job xii. 21, where 'weakeneth the strength of the mighty,' should be translated, 'looseth the girdle of the strong.' In Dan. v. 6, also read, 'the girdle of his loins was loosed.' See Isa. v. 27; xi. 5; xxii. 21, which are strikingly illustrated by the import and use of the ancient girdle.

GIRDLE, Is. 11. 5; Rev. 1. 13, & 15. 6.

GIRGASHITE, Ger'-ga-shite, one who returns from pilgrimage.—The inhabitants of Girdashi in Palestine; Deut. vii. 1, beyond the sea of Tiberias.

GISPA, Gis'-pah.—A chief of the Nethinims; Neh. xi. 21.

GITTAIM, Git'-ta-im, a wine press. A city in Canaan, in the tribe of Benjamin; 2 Sam. iv. 3.

GITTITH.—Probably means a musical instrument, invented at Gath, and used on the festival of the vintage; Ps. viii. title l xxxi; lxxxiv.

GITTITE, Git'-tite, a wine press.—
An inhabitant of the city of Gath was so denominated.

GLASS, is not mentioned in the Old Testament, not being known in those times. According to Pliny and Tacitus, the Phœnicians were the inventors of glass. Mirrors were, in early times, made of plates of metal highly polished; Exod. xxxviii. 8.
The Ethiopians anciently preserved their dead bodies in large glasses.
The invention of burning glasses is commonly ascribed to Archimedes, of Sicily, who lived about two hundred years before Christ. The word of God is compared to a glass, because it represents to us our real character, as a glass does the face; James i. 23, 25.
This is one great internal evidence of the truth of revelation.

GLASS, 'beholding as in a glass,'
2 Cor. iii. 18; James i. 23. Mack-night paraphrases the passage;—"We all, with an unveiled face, brightly reflecting, as mirrors, the glory of the Lord Jesus, which shines on us, are, in the business of enlightening the world, transformed into the very image of Christ, the Sun of righteousness, by a succession of glory, coming on our face, as from the Lord of the covenant of the Spirit." Divesting the passage of the metaphor, the same writer observes, "We apostles, the ministers of the covenant of the Spirit, do not impart to the world a veiled or dark knowledge of that covenant, as Moses gave the Israelites an obscure knowledge of the letter, (the law,) but we all, having a complete knowledge of the covenant of the Spirit, (the gospel dispensation,) by inspiration from Christ, preach it everywhere in the plainest manner; so that, in diffusing the knowledge of God and religion through the world, we are the images or representatives of Christ, by the power of an abiding inspiration from him who is the Lord, or Author of the covenant of the Spirit." There is a special reference to the gospel and Divine ordinances.—Heaven is likened unto transparent glass, for its beauty and glory, and the clear perception of Divine truth; Rev. xxi. 18, 21.

GLASS darkly, 1 Cor. xiii. 12; that is, through an imperfect medium, in allusion to the thin plates of horn, transparent stone, talc, &c., used by the ancients for windows. Through such mediums they saw objects very dimly. Windows were often formed of the lapis specularis mentioned by Pliny, which was very pellucid, and admitted of being split into thin sheets, though some were much more obscure than others.

GLASS, we see through, 1 Cor. 13. 12.

2 Cor. 3. 18. beholding as in a g.

Jam. 1. 23. behold natural face in a g.

Rev. 4. 6. a sea of g. 15. 2.

21. 13. city was pure gold like g.

GLEAN. To gather ears of corn, or grapes, left by the reapers or gatherers for the use of the poor and needy; Ruth 2. 2; Lev. 19. 9, 10; 23. 22; Deut. 24. 19—22; Judg. 20. 45.

GLEDE. A ravenous bird, thought by Bochart to be the black vulture; Deut. xiv. 13; Isa. xxxiv. 15.

GLITTER, spoken of the sword, Deut. 32. 41. "If I whet my glittering sword." This similitude showeth God's judgments to be swift, powerful, terrible, as in Ezek. 21. 10, 28. "The sword, the sword is drawn; for slaughter it is furbished, to consume because of the glittering."

GLOOMINESS, a darkening of the air, by the intervention of clouds or locusts, Joel 2. 2. God's judgments are likened to gloominess, Zeph. 1. 15. "A day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness."

GLORIFY. To pay divine honour; to make glorious; to exalt to glory or dignity. Thus God glorifies his people by adorning them with gifts and graces in this world, and by bringing them to the full possession of glory and blessedness in heaven. We are said to glorify God, when we ascribe to him the glory of every excellency, whether of nature or of grace;

Rev. iv. 11; when we believe God's promises, and wait for their performance; Rom. iv. 20; when we publicly acknowledge true religion, or any special truth of God that is generally opposed; Luke xxiii. 47; when we suffer for God; 1 Pet. iv. 16; when we give thanks to God for benefits or deliverances; Luke xvii. 18, when we devote ourselves only to the service of God; Isa. lviii. 13; and when we love, praise, admire, and esteem Christ above all.

God the Father is glorified in Christ the Mediator, by his obedience unto death; whereby the work of man's redemption was consummated, and the justice, wisdom, mercy, and holiness of God made manifest.

God glorified Christ, by manifestly owning him to be his Son; by sustaining his human nature against the gates of hell, in his temptations and sufferings, by enabling him to triumph over his people's enemies in his resurrection, ascension, and exaltation to his Father's right hand; John xvii. 1.

GLORY. Worldly splendour and magnificence, wealth and honour. Behold "Solomon in all his glory," in all his wealth and splendour, &c. Matt. vi. 29; Ps. xlix. 16;—Isa. viii. 7.—Glory in Ps. xlix. 16, signifies the tongue; "My heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth;" Ps. cviii. 1—Glory is put for the ark; and the Divine manifestation; "The glory is departed from Israel;" 1 Sam. iv. 21. "To whom pertaineth the glory;" Rom. ix. 4.—Also the church; Isa. iv. 5.—Also grace; 2 Cor. iii. 18. Glory in its highest sense is appropriated to God, the Supreme in majesty and goodness, in wisdom and power, &c. His glory is manifested in all his works—in man who is "fearfully made, and who is called "the image and glory of God." "The heavens declare the glory of God," &c. The visible heavens with all their planets and suns, and all things in this lower orb afford matter and occasion to acknowledge and admire the glorious Being who made them all, and governs them all. In the wilderness, in the tabernacle, and in the temple, on the mountains of Sinai, Tabor, &c. the glory of God appeared; Ex. xxiv. 9, 10, 16, 17; xvi. 7, 10; xxxiii. 8—23.

The word glory is descriptive of the splendours, dignities, and happiness of heaven; Ps. lxxiii. 24; John xvii. 24. The miracles which Christ wrought, manifested his glory. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed," Isa. xl. 5; that is, his power shall be revealed in delivering his people, in the destruction of his foes, and in his universal empire.

To glory is to boast, to exult, &c. Thus Paul; "God forbid that I should glory," Gal. vi. 14. The glory of God in redemption is without a parallel. For the salvation of Man all his attributes have been and still are in lively and delightful exercise. "Here the whole Deity is known!" "The light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

GNAT,—a small winged tormenting insect, and by the Jewish law unclean. "Who strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel," Matt. xxiii. 24, alludes to the care to strain liquor lest it might retain an insect. The word at should be out. The Greek word deulizonites does not mean to make an effort to swallow, but to filter. The phrase is proverbial for exactness about little matters, while neglecting those of the greatest moment.

GOAD, a long staff, having a sharp iron point at the end of it; Judges iii. 31. "The words of the wise are as goads;" they stir up men to the practice of duty; Eccl. xii. 11.

GOAT, a genus of quadrupeds of the order pecora, in the Linnaean system of zoology, distinguished from the other genera of this order by their hollow, rough, and erect horns, which bend a little backwards. The common goat is nearly the size of the sheep; its fur is a pale dun, and the hair rigid and waved, but not curled as in sheep. This animal was reckoned clean among the Israelites, who both ate and offered it in sacrifice; Deut. xiv. 4. In Palestine and in other places they cut off its hair, as they do in the east, and make stuffs of it which serve for tents. Moses was instructed to make part of the veils belonging to the tabernacle of goat's hair; Exod. xxv. 4; and xxxv. 6. "The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats," Ps. civ. 18. The same force of what we call instinct prevails in terrestrial animals, and directs them to places of refuge, where they may be safe from their enemies. Thus the wild goats climb with ease to the tops of mountains, where they deposit their young.—SCAPE GOAT, the goat which was set at liberty, upon the day of solemn expiation, bearing the sins of the people; Lev. xvi. 8.

GOATH, Go'-ath. His touching or his roaring. An eminence near Jerusalem; Jeremiah xxxi. 39.

GOB, Gob, cistern, grasshopper, eminence.—A plain where two battles were fought between the Hebrews and Philistines; 2 Sam. xxi. 18, 19. Called also Gezer.

GOD is a pure Anglo-Saxon word; and among our ancestors signified not only the Divine Being, now commonly designated by the word, but also Good; as in their apprehension, it appears, God and Good were correlative terms; and when they thought or spoke of him, they were ever led, from the word itself, to consider him as THE GOOD BEING, the fountain of infinite Benevolence and Beneficence towards his creatures.

The Hebrews give to God generally the name of JEHOVAH, he who subsists of himself, and gives being and existence to others. It is a name infallible and mysterious, which denotes the eternity, immutability, and independency of God, and the infallible certainty of his word and promises. The import of his name is opened and predicted of Christ in Rev. i. 4, 8. The Hebrews had such a veneration for this holy name, that they never pronounced it, but instead of it, made use of that of Adonai, which signifies properly My Lords, in the plural number; and of Elohi, Elo, or Elohim. They likewise called him El, which signifies Strong; or Shaddai, whereby may be meant one who is self-sufficient, or according to another pronunciation, the Destroyer, the Powerful One; or Elion, the most High; or El-sabaoth, the God of Hosts; or Ja, God. God declared to Moses, that he was not known by the name Jehovah to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and yet God is called by the name Jehovah in Gen. xv. 7; xxvi. 24. This is not to be understood of the name, but of the thing signified by that name. For that denotes all his perfections, and among others, the constancy and immutability of his nature and will, and the infallible certainty of his word and promises. And though this was believed by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; yet God had not given any actual being to his promises for their deliverance, by the accomplishment of them; for they only saw the promises afar off. This expression may likewise be understood comparatively; they knew this but darkly and imperfectly, which was now to be made known more clearly and fully. God is taken, I. properly, and that either essentially for the whole Trinity; Isa. xl. 28; John iv. 24. Or, personally. (1) For the Father; Eph. i. 3. (2) The Son; John i. 1. (3) For the Holy Ghost; Acts v. 3, 4. II. Improperly, (1) For an idol, or false and imaginary God; Exod. xxii. 20; Judg. xi. 24. (2) For princes, magistrates, and judges; Exod. xxii. 28; Psalm lxxxii. 1, 6. (3) For the ark of God: thus when the ark came into the camp of the Israelites, the Philistines said, God is come into their camp: this name they gave to the ark, as they used to do to the images of their false gods; 1 Sam. iv. 7. The Lord tells Moses; Exod. vii. 1. "See I have made thee a God to Pharaoh." Thou shalt represent my person, and act like God, by requiring his obedience to thy commands, and by punishing his disobedience with such punishments as none but God, can inflict; to which end thou shalt have my omnipotent assistance. Satan is called the god of this world; 2 Cor. iv. 4. because he rules over the greatest part of the world, and they are his servants and slaves. St. Paul in Phil. iii. 19. speaks of some that make their belly their god; that is, who mind nothing but the satisfaction of their fleshly appetites. God forbid, is a strong form of denial, with a loathing of what is objected; Rom. iii. 31; ix. 14.

 To the Bishop of Rome has been given the blasphemous title of "Our Lord God the Pope;" and with unprecedented arrogance the mortal filling this office has at various periods absolved subjects from their allegiance to their lawful princes, fermented and raised rebellions, and deposed or murdered rightful princes and set up others in their stead. The pretended successors of the Apostle Peter have called emperors their vassals, and even caused some of them to hold the bridle till the self-styled Holy Father has mounted his horse, or to bear up his train after him, when his Holiness has been pleased to walk in a pompous procession. Nay, with what amazing insolence have Romish priests whipped kings and sovereign princes; and the pope has even set his foot upon an emperor's neck. He has claimed the sole right of nominating, investing, or confirming the princes and rulers of the earth. If this be not to "exalt himself above all that is called God," there can be no event to answer this or any other prophecy whatever.

GODS.—The appellation of idols, Deut. xxxii. 17; Judges x. 14. Also applied to great men, and especially to judges: Exod. xxii. 28; Ps. lxxxii. 1; John x. 34, 35; 1 Cor. viii. 5. Applied also to angels, God's messengers; Ps. xcvi. 7; Heb. i. 6.

GODLINESS signifies the whole of pure religion, 1 Tim. iv. 8. "But godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." Under the New Testament dispensation, godliness has no particular promise of health, or reputation, or wealth, or any other individual blessing of that description, though in its natural consequences it wears a most friendly aspect upon all; but it has the promise of comfort and happiness in general; and the declaration of Christ, that the converted man shall receive an hundred-fold, even in the midst of persecutions, if that should be his lot, might alone be sufficient to vindicate the apostle in this assertion, Mark x. 30. The blessedness of the life which is to come, is the sure consequence of vital godliness.

GODLY.—That which proceeds from or resembles God; thus godly sorrow is the sorrow which God only can produce, and worketh repentance unto salvation, 2 Cor. vii. 10. Godly sorrow is the beginning of wisdom, Heb. xii. 28; and a godly man is he who loves God from a sense of much forgiveness, Ps. xii. 1.

GOG and MAGOG, May'-gog.—Great Scythian powers in former ages, Ezek. xxxviii. 2, 3; xxxix. 1.—Infidel nations in the last days, Rev. xx. 8. Moses speaks of MAGOG, son of Japheth, Gen. x. 2. MAGOG signifies the country and GOG the prince of it. It is the general name of the northern nations of Europe and Asia, or the districts north of Caucasus or Mount Taurus, Rev. xx. 8.

GOLAN, Go'-lan, passage, revolution.—A city of refuge in the half tribe of Manasseh, given to the Levites, Deut. iv. 43.

GOLD.—The most heavy, dense, pure, ductile, and valuable of all metals; God's word is compared to it on account of its inestimable worth; Ps. xix. 10.—Tried saints are compared to it, Job xxiii. 10; 1 Pet. i. 7.—Sound doctrine and evangelical obedience are compared to it; 1 Cor. iii. 12; Christ in the riches of his gifts and graces; Rev. iii. 18; the purifying and beautifying operations of the Holy Spirit; Ps. xlv. 13; the streets of the new Jerusalem, Rev. xxi. 18, 21.

GOLGOTHA, Gol'-go-thah, a place of a skull.—So called from its resemblance to a skull. (Gr. Kranium) A small eminence, a little north-west of Jerusalem. There criminals were executed. There Jesus was crucified. Called also Mount Calvary.

GOLIATH, Go-ly'-ath, revolution.—A famous giant of Gath, whose height was nearly 12 feet, and the weight of his brazen coat of mail exceeded 170 lbs. troy; 1 Sam. xvii. 4, 5; 1 Chron. xx. 5—8; Deut. iii. 11; Goliath was slain by David.

GOMER, Go'-mer, finishing, consuming.—The eldest son of Japheth, by whom a great part of Asia Minor was first peopled, especially of Galatia, Phrygia, &c. Calmet is of opinion that the ancient Cimbric or Cimmerians sprang from Gomer, and others have traced the Welsh, who still call themselves Crmri, Cymro, or Comari, to this parent stock; and even the ancient Scots and Irish are said to have had the same original; Gen. x. 2.

GOMORRAH, Go-mor'-rah, a rebellious people.—One of the five cities consumed by fire in the days of Abraham; Gen. xix. 24, &c.

GOOD, GOODNESS.—In the highest sense, excellence, exclusively belonging to God; Matt. xix. 17.—The happiness which men desire as agreeable and pleasant to them; Ps. iv. 6.—Excellence, glory; Exod. xxxiii. 19.—Providential mercies; Ps. lxxv. 11.—Spiritual blessings; Ps. lxxv. 4.—Moral and Christian virtues and qualities; Ps. xxxiv. 14; Rom. xv.

14. The "goodness of the Lord" desired by ancient believers, was the coming of Jesus the promised Messiah; Ps. xxvii. 13.

The goodness of God is ever manifest in his works, in conducting his people in all their straits and difficulties; and especially in the gift of his Son to die in the place of sinners. It was this blessed intervention of the Saviour's sacrifice that turned the "curse into a blessing."

GOODNESS.—‘My goodness extendeth not to thee,’ Ps. xvi. 2. ‘No good I expect but from thee;’ Geddes and Boothroyd.—‘Thou hast no need of my good things;’ Septuagint version.—If applied to the Messiah, it may read, ‘What I am doing can add nothing to thy Divinity, but my bounty extends to the saints on earth;’ A. Clarke and others.

GOPHER-WOOD.—Supposed to be the cypress or pine. The wood used in building the ark. The Hebrew word means pitch; and Parkhurst says it may be a general name for trees abounding with resinous or inflammable juices.

GORGEOUS.—Gay, fine, shining, Luke xxiii. 11. “And mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe.”

GOSHEN, Go'-shen, rain, drawing near.—A very fertile canton of Egypt, on the eastern bank of the Nile, which Joseph procured for his father and brethren to dwell in, Gen. xlvii. 6. It was the first place reached en route from Palestine, Gen. xlvi. 28; and formed the most Eastern province of Lower Egypt, not far from the Arabian Gulf. Rameses was the capital.—Also, a district of the Holy Land, included in the lot of Judah; Josh. x. 41; xi. 16, &c.

GOSPEL, is the Anglo-Saxon GOD-SPEL, compounded of GOD, good, and SPEL, God's instruction, or good news, history, narrative, doctrine, mystery, or secret; and was applied by our ancestors to signify the revelation of that glorious system of truth, which had been in a great measure hidden or kept secret from the foundation of the world.—Among Saxon scholars, however, the word Gospel has been variously explained. Mr. Somner, who writes it godspell, explains it by Sermo Dei mysticus; Dei historia;—“The mystic word of God; the history of God.” But he supposes it may be compounded of GOD, good, and SPELL, a message; and very properly observes, that godspellian signifies, not only to preach or proclaim the gospel, but also to foretell or predict, to prophesy or divine; and, in this latter sense, the word spell was anciently used among us, and still signifies an incantation, or a charm; which implies a peculiar collocation and repetition of certain words, which were supposed to produce supernatural effects by means of spiritual influence or agency; which agency was always attracted and excited by such words, through some supposed correspondency between the words and the spiritual agency to be employed. It is possible that our ancestors gave this title to the preaching of Christ crucified, from observing the astonishing effects produced by it, in changing the hearts and lives of sinners. And very innocently might they denominate the pure powerful preaching of the death and resurrection of Christ, God's charm: that wonderful word, which, accompanied by the demonstration and power of the Holy Spirit, produced such miraculous effects among men. We have already seen that God, among our ancestors, not only signified the Supreme Being, but also good or goodness, which is his nature: Godspell, therefore, is not only God's history, doctrine, or plan of teaching; but also the good history, good doctrine, and good message or news; corresponding exactly to the Greek, euangelion, from eu, good, and angelia, a message or tidings.

GOSPEL.—The gospel is a revelation of the grace of God to fallen man through a Mediator. Or, it is a wise, a holy, and gracious constitution of God for the recovery of sinful man, by sending his own Son Jesus Christ in the flesh, to obey his law which man had broken, to make a proper atonement for sin by his death, and thus to procure the favour of God and eternal happiness for all that believe and repent, and receive the offered salvation; together with a promise of the Holy Spirit to produce faith and repentance in their hearts, to renew their sinful nature unto holiness, to form them on earth fit for this happiness, and to bring them to the full possession of it in heaven. Hence it is called the gospel of God, as it came originally from the Father, Rom. i. 1. It is called "the Gospel of the grace of God," Acts xx. 24, because it proceeds from, and manifests his favour, and is the means whereby his grace is bestowed. It is called "the gospel of Christ," Rom. i. 16. He is the immediate Author, and the subject matter of it. In the same passage it is said "to be the power of God unto salvation;" it is the means which, by the influence of the Spirit of God, it is made effectual to salvation. It is called "the gospel of salvation," Eph. i. 13. It brings the good news that salvation is to be had; it offers this salvation, it shows upon what terms it may be had, and the way how to attain it; it promises grace to fit for, and bring men to salvation. This gospel the Spirit of God preached to Abraham under the Old Testament, Gal. iii. 8. "The Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." The glad tidings of justification and salvation by faith in Christ were preached to Abraham, and were contained in that promise made to him, which is the sum of the covenant; "In thy seed shall all nations be blessed," Gen. xxii. 18. The word gospel, in the original, signifies good news, or glad tidings. And surely when a sinner, who is exposed to the wrath of God, is sensible of his guilt and danger, it must needs be glad tidings to him to hear of a way of salvation, and an all-sufficient Saviour. The Gospel also implies an historical narraton of what Christ did and spake, of his life, miracles and death, resurrection, and doctrine; as the gospel according to Matthew, Mark, &c. "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ," Mark i. 1. Sometimes it is taken for the preaching and publication of the gospel, and administration of affairs that concern it, Rom. i. 9, "Whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of his Son." It is put for the doctrine of free grace, Rom. xi. 28.

PALMA CHRISTI.

GOURD of Jonah.—A species of the Palma Christi, which the Egyptians call kiki. It resembles a lily, with large, smooth, and black spotted leaves. The people of the East plant gourds before their shops, for the sake of the shade, and to refresh themselves under them. As "the Lord God prepared the gourd," the plant must have been an extraordinary one, remarkably rapid in its growth, hard in its stem, vigorous in its branches, and for the extensive spread of its leaves, which afforded an excellent shade. It was remarkable also for a sudden withering, and a total uselessness to the impatient prophet.

Wild gourds produce branches and leaves, which creep along the surface of the earth, like the cucumber. It bears fruit resembling the orange, containing a light substance, exceedingly bitter; 2 Kings iv. 39—41.

GOVERNOR.—The superintendent of a province. After Judaea became a Roman province, procurators, or governors, were sent there from Rome. Pontius Pilate was the Roman governor at the time when Christ was crucified.

GOVERNMENT, Is. 9. 6, 7, & 22. 21; 1 Cor. 12. 28; 2 Pet. 2. 10.

GOZAN, Go'-zan, fleece, pasture.—A river of Media, 2 Kings xvii. 6; xviii. 11; xix. 12.—Also a province or kingdom; the River Gozan ran through the same.

GRACE of GOD.—His free favour manifested in the gift of his Son, and the blessings of salvation through his sacrifice on the cross; Rom. xi. 6. It implies (1.) The free and undeserved love and favour of God, the inexhaustible source of all the benefits which we receive from him, Rom. xi. 6. “And if by grace, then it is no more of works.” 2 Tim. i. 9. “Who hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, according to his own purpose and grace.” This free and unmerited love of God is the original mover of our salvation, and hath no cause above it to excite or draw it forth, but merely arises from his own will. It was this mercy or love of God that found out redemption for mankind. “God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son to die for us,” John iii. 16. And what could his love give more than the life of his Son?

(2.) Grace also embraces Christ's meritorious undertaking, whereby all true believers become righteous in the sight of God, Rom. v. 20. “Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound.”

(3.) Also the work of the Spirit, renewing the soul after the image of God, and continually guiding and strengthening the believer to obey his will, to resist and mortify sin, and to overcome it, Rom. vi. 14. “Ye are not under the law, but under grace.” 2 Cor. xii. 9. “My grace is sufficient for thee.”

(4.) Also that excellent and blessed state of reconciliation, friendship, and favour with God, which God graciously bestows upon his people, Rom. v. 2. “By whom also we have access by faith, into this grace wherein we stand.”

(5.) It implies the free favour and bounty of Christ. 2 Cor. viii. 9. “Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

(6.) Also the doctrine of the gospel, which proceeds from the grace of God, and wherein his grace is offered and bestowed upon all penitent believers, 1 Pet. v. 12. “This is the true grace of God wherein ye stand;” the true and only doctrine of the gospel.

(7.) For a liberal and charitable disposition, wrought in the heart by the grace of God, 2 Cor. viii. 7. “As ye abound in every thing, see that ye abound in this grace also.”

(8.) For spiritual instruction and edification, Eph. iv. 29. “That your communication may minister grace to the hearers;” that it may be a means of some spiritual advantage to them.

(9.) Grace is taken for the office of apostleship, which was given of grace, together with ability and other qualifications necessary for the faithful discharge of that office, Rom. xv. 15. “I have written the more boldly to you, because of the grace that is given me of God;” Eph. iii. 8. “To me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach,” &c.

(10.) For the free and undeserved love and favour of God, and a lively sense thereof in the soul; this the apostle wishes to be continued with and increased in the Romans, Rom. i. 7.

(11.) For the love and fear of God dwelling in the heart; or, for the assistance of divine grace, 2 Cor. i. 12. "By the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world."

(12.) For faith, patience, and other graces that enable to bear and support under sufferings, Phil. i. 7. "Ye all are partakers of my grace."

(13.) For eternal life, or final salvation, which God will graciously bestow upon his people, at the appearing of Christ, at the day of judgment, 1 Pet. i. 13. "The grace that is to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

(14.) For something acceptable, beautiful, and graceful, Prov. iv. 9. "She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace."

(15.) For favour or friendship with man. Joseph "found grace in the sight of Potiphar;" Gen. xxxix. 4.

GRAPES. There were very many fine vineyards, and most excellent grapes in Palestine. How large this fruit was in that country, we may judge by the bunch of grapes which was cut in the valley of Eschol, and was brought upon a staff between two men to the camp of Israel at Kadesh barnea; Num. xiii. 23, 24. Travellers relate, that there were some to be seen thers of a prodigious size. Strabo and Pliny affirm the same. Some affirm, that in the valley of Eschol there were bunches of grapes still to be found of ten and twelve pounds. Moses in the law commanded, that when the Israelites gathered their grapes, they should not be careful to pick up those which fell, nor be so exact as to leave none upon the vines. What fell, and was left behind, he ordered should be for the poor; Lev. xix. 10; Deut. xxiv. 20, 21. People who were passing that way were permitted to go into another man's vineyard, and eat what grapes they would; but they were not allowed to carry any away with them; Deut. xxiii. 24.

The prophet Isaiah v. 2—4. represents the sins of Judah as "wild grapes." God looked that his vineyard should bring forth grapes, good fruit, justice, righteousness, truth, and it brought forth wild grapes, sin, oppression, envy, covetousness, lasciviousness, drunkenness, pride, of which he speaks in the chapter. Such are called sour or wild grapes, because they wound conscience, are burdensome unto others, are as distasteful unto God as such grapes are to us, they grieve his Spirit, and exasperate him to lay waste the vine that bears such fruit.

GRASS grows in the East with a rapidity of which we can form no conception. Ground burnt up with heat, after a few showers, appears in a few days covered with grass, which as speedily perishes if rain ceases to fall. To this Scripture frequently alludes; Ps. lxxii. 16; Isa. xl. 6—8; 1 Pet. i. 24, 25.

GRASS 'upon the house-tops,' Ps. cxxix. 6; Isa. xxxvii. 27. The roofs in Judea are flat, and covered with plaster on the terrace, seed falling into which, will sometimes vegetate, but being small and weak, soon withers.

GRASS, 'of the field cast into the oven,' Matt. vi. 28—30. Shaw says that myrtle, rosemary and other plants are used in Barbary to heat their ovens, which circumstance illustrates the above passage.

GRASSHOPPER, an insect of the gryllus species, frequently found in fields and meadows. It sometimes infests particular districts in great swarms, and, like the locust, devours the fruits of the earth; Amos vii. 1, 2. See also Judges vi. 5; Jer. xlvi. 23. The Israelites were allowed to eat this insect; Lev. xi. 22.

Solomon, speaking of old age says, "The grasshopper shall be a burden;" Eccle. xii. 5. Some think that there is a reference to the eating of locusts, and the passage intimates that such luxuries would cease. Others suppose it means that the lightest pressure, as light as that of the grasshopper, will become burdensome. Others refer it to the chirping noise of the grasshopper, as disagreeable to the aged and infirm—the least noise disturbing and affecting the nerves.

GRAVE. A place for the dead; Gen. xxxvii. 35. That the Hebrews placed monuments over the graves of departed friends, appears from the case of Jacob; Gen. xxxv. 20. "Rachel was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehem; and Jacob set a pillar upon her grave." The Jewish sepulchres were generally caves, or rooms hewn out of rocks. And as the Jews did not make use of coffins, they placed their dead separately in niches or little cells cut into the sides of those caverns or rooms.—This form of Jewish sepulchres gives a solution of a very important difficulty in the history of Lazarus's resurrection; John xi. 44. It is said, that when Jesus called upon Lazarus to come forth, "he came out bound hand and foot." But Deists, talking of this miracle, commonly ask, how he could come out of a grave who was bound in that manner? The answer, however is obvious: The evangelist does not mean that Lazarus, walked out of the sepulchre, but that lying on his back, he raised himself into a sitting posture, then putting his legs over the edge of his niche or cell, slid down, and stood upright on the floor; all which he might easily do, notwithstanding his arms were close bound to his body, and his legs were tied strait together by means of the shroud and rollers with which he was swathed. Accordingly, when he had come forth, it is said, that Jesus ordered them to loose him, and let him go; a circumstance plainly importing, that the historian knew that Lazarus could not walk till he was unbound.—Macknight. The Jews used to go to the graves of their friends on various accounts, either to see whether they were dead or not; or from superstitious motives, frequenting the graves of the prophets and wise men to pray and weep. The Jews said of Mary, "She goeth to the grave to weep there," John xi. 31.

Places set apart for the dead are called cemeteries, which is a Greek term, signifying "a place of rest." Of these the Hebrews had two kinds, namely, public and private cemeteries. One of the former was placed without the walls of every city; and they were thus placed, because it was considered, that not only the touch of a dead body, (as the law speaks of, Num. xix. 11, and as other nations thought,) but that contact with a sepulchre communicated defilement. The distance at which they were placed from a Levitical city, according to Lightfoot, was two thousand cubits; and Buxtorf says, they were allowed to be placed round other cities, at any distance beyond fifty cubits.

Cemeteries were generally in solitary and unfrequented places. Thus the demoniac of Gadara wore no clothes, and dwelt not in any house, but had his dwelling among the tombs, delighting in those gloomy and melancholy recesses, as most friendly and congenial to the wretched state of his mind. Josephus also informs us, that these sepulchres were the haunts and lurking places of those numerous and desperate bands of robbers with which Judea was at that time infested. To the same effect travellers speak of cemeteries in the east at the present day. Thus Forbes, in his "Oriental Memoirs," says, "Near most of the Mohammedan cities in Asia are extensive cemeteries, none being allowed within the walls, containing a number of beautiful temples, sometimes supported by pillars and open on all sides, at others closed like a sepulchral chamber, with only one door; each has a marble tomb in the centre, under which is deposited the body of the deceased. These burying grounds frequently afford shelter to the weary traveller, when overtaken by the night, and at a loss for better accommodation: and their recesses are also a hiding-place for thieves and murderers, who sally out from thence to commit their nocturnal depredations."

GRAVEN, means carved, engraved, or sculptured; Ex. xx. 4; xxxii. 16; Lev. xxvi. 1.

GRAVEN 'thee on the palms of my hands,' Isa. xlix. 16. Alludes to the ancient custom of tracing out objects on the hands by puncturing them, and then rubbing them with the powder of hennah or cypress, which renders the marks perpetual. Thus pilgrims to Jerusalem have still their arms marked, by a similar process, with the ensigns of that city.

GRAVEN. "And he set a graven image of the grove that he had made in the house," &c. 2 Kings xxi. 7. It cannot mean the image of a grove which Manasseh placed in the house of the Lord, as an object of religious worship. The Hebrew word, asherah, though it sometimes means a grove, is more frequently used to signify an idol. Probably Astarte or Venus.

GRAY, Ps. 71. 18; Prov. 20. 29; Hos. 7. 9.

GREAT SEA. The Mediterranean Sea. It is sometimes denominated simply "the sea," 1 Kings xviii. 43; 1 Kings v. 9. At other times it is styled "the Great Sea," to distinguish it from several less collections of water, which the Hebrews dignified with the name of seas. Thus Moses tells the children of Israel, "for a western border, ye shall have the great sea for a border." Num. xxxiv. 6. The Lord also promised Joshua, "The great sea, towards the going down of the sun, shall be your border." Josh. i. 4. This promise was fulfilled, when "the kings in all the coasts of the great sea over against Lebanon" gathered together to fight with Joshua, and were successively vanquished by him. (ix. 1, 2.) The inheritance of the tribe of Judah was also bounded, on the west by the great sea. (xv. 12, 47; xxiii. 4) And when the prophet in vision, beheld the dead sea, or "the sea of the east country" healed by the waters which flowed from the sanctuary, it is mentioned as a proof of the change that had been produced, that it should abound with fishes, as the fish of the great sea, exceeding many." Ezek. xlvi. 10.

GREAVES, ancient armour used for the legs and feet, to defend them from the iron stakes placed in the way by the enemy, to gall and wound their opponents. Goliath had greaves of brass; 1 Sam. xvii. 6.

GREECE, Greece. In Hebrew, it was called Javan. Simon thinks that Javan imports soft, or tender. Javan was a son of Japheth; Gen. x. 2, 4, after whom that part of Greece called Ionia was named. Ionia is interpreted from the Hebrew, deceptive, insinuating; otherwise, making sorrowful; otherwise dirty, filthy; otherwise, the dove's country. Greece is rendered robust, or strong. Greece, may be considered as a country partly in Asia, and partly in Europe; Acts xx.

Greece, in its largest acceptation, as denoting the countries where the Greek language prevailed, included from the Scardian mountains north, to the Levant sea south, and from the Adriatic sea west, to Asia Minor east. Hence it is used by Daniel to denote Macedonia, as a part of Greece; whereas, we read in Acts xx. 2, that Paul, passing through Macedonia, came to Greece, that is, Græcia Propria. In this more restricted sense, Macedonia and the river Strymon formed the north boundary of Greece. The Scripture has but little reference to Greece, till the time of Alexander, whose conquests extended into Asia, where Greece had hitherto been of no importance. Yet that some intercourse was maintained with these countries from Jerusalem may be inferred from the desire of Baasha to shut up all passage between Jerusalem and Joppa, which was its port, by the building of Ramah; and the anxiety of Asa to counteract his scheme; 1 Kings xv. 2, 17. Greece was certainly intended by the prophet Daniel under the symbol of the single-horned goat: and it is probable that when Daniel called Greece Chittim, he spoke the language of the Hebrew nation, rather than that of the Persian court. After the establishment of the Grecian dynasties in Asia, Judea could not but be considerably affected by them, and the books of the Maccabees afford proofs of this. The Roman power superseding the Grecian establishment, left traces of the Greek language, customs, &c. to the days of the Herods, where the gospel history commences. By the activity of the Apostles, and especially by that of Paul, the gospel was propagated in those countries which used the Grecian dialects: moreover, as Greece, like other countries, had its peculiar manners, we are not able to estimate properly an epistle written to those who dwelt where they prevailed, without a competent acquaintance with the manners themselves, with the sentiments and reasonings of those who practised them, and with the arguments employed in their defence by those who adhered to them.

GRÆCIA, Gre'she-a.—The country of Greece, perhaps on the south-east of Europe, including Ionia and Asia Minor; Dan. viii. 21; x. 20.

GRÆCIANS, Gre'she-ans.—Greeks, the inhabitants of Greece; Joel iii. 6.—Sometimes this word means not Greeks, but Jews scattered abroad in Gentile nations and using the Greek language; Acts vi. 1; xix. 29; xi. 19—21. Greeks were so called by nation or birth; sometimes the name was used for Gentiles in general; Acts xx. 21; Rom. i. 16; ii. 9, 10; 1 Cor. i. 22—24.

GREEKS, Devout. "And of the devout Greeks a great multitude," &c. Acts xvii. By devout Greeks, are intended proselytes of the gate. They were those, who without obliging themselves to circumcision, or any other ceremony of the law, feared and worshipped the true God.

GRÆEK, 'a Syro-Phœnician by nation,' Mark vii. 26. The Jews called all persons Greeks who were not of their nation. Probably, however, this woman, while she resided in Phœnicia, was by descent a Greek.

GREEN TREE—dry tree; Luke xxiii. 31. A proverb frequently used by the Jews, who compared a good man to a green tree, and a bad man to a dead and dry one, (compare Ezek. xx. 47, with Ezek. xxi. 3, and see Ps. i. 3.) Benson. If they do these things to me who am innocent and blameless, what will they not do to this guilty nation whose sins have rendered them as fit for punishment as dry wood is for burning?

lency of the gospel, Acts 12. 24.

GROVE.—'Thou shalt not plant thee a grove,' &c.; Deut. xvi. 21.
The secrecy of the groves afforded opportunity to designing men to de-lude the ignorant and superstitious, by giving forth pretending oracles;
and not less to indulge, without fear of detection, the most hateful practices, under the guise of devotion.

Hence it became indispensable for the interest of true religion to interdict the use of groves; and against their use Moses gave many solemn admonitions;

muring; 1 Pet. iv. 9.—Grief; 2 Cor.
ix. 7.—Restlessness, dissatisfaction;
Ps. lix. 15.

GUARD.—It refers to soldiers attending upon a king, 1 Kings xiv. 27, 28. A watch, or safeguard, Neh. iv.
22; Ezek. xxxviii. 7. The captain of the guard, Acts xviii. 16. It was the state prisoners.

GUEST.—A person who is entertained; a visitor; Luke xix. 7; Matt.
xxii. 11.

GUEST-CHAMBER, Mark xiv.
14; Luke xxii. 11. In the East, respectable householders have a room which they call the stranger's room, which is specially set apart for the use of guests. To this custom Christ alludes.

GUILT, GUILTY.—The state of a person justly charged with crime; a state of liability to punishment. The whole human race is involved in such guilt; for all have sinned against the Almighty Governor of the world. See Rom. iii. 9. But Jesus Christ by his sovereign expiation is able to remove all guilt from the sinner. He "was delivered for our offences," &c.; Rom. iv. 25. As the "Lamb of God he taketh away the sin of the world;" John i. 29; Acts iii. 26.

GULF.—A large chasm, Luke xvi. 26. "Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed;" a vast unmeasurable void is interposed; so that they which would pass from hence to you;" if any should be so compassionate as to desire to help you, they "cannot; neither can they who are there come to us;" but we still continue at an unapproachable distance from each other.

GUNI, Gew'-ny, garden, or covering.—The son of Naphtali, head of the Gunites; Num. xxvi. 48.

GUR, Gur, the young of a beast, dwelling, fear.—A narrow pass near Jerusalem, 2 Kings ix. 27.

GUR-BAAL, Gur-bay'-al, the whelp of the governor.—A town probably in Arabia, 2 Chron. xxvi. 7.

GUSHED.—Spoken of waters, Ps. lxxviii. 20. "He opened the rock, and the waters gushed out." This passage is explained by Paul in 1 Cor. x. 1—4.

H

HAAHASHTARI, Hay-a-hash'-ta-ry, a runner.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 6.

HABAIAH, Ha-bay'-ah, the hiding of the Lord.—A priest of the tribe of Ezra, Ezra ii. 61.

HABAKKUK, Hab'-a-kuk, he that embraces.—The book bearing his name was written about 600 years before Christ, and foretold the destruction of the Chaldeans. He was of the tribe of Simeon, and a native of Bethzacar, Hab. i. 1, &c. He prophesied in the days of Manasseh, and as a poet, holds a high place among the Hebrew prophets. This book is remarkable for the grandeur of its imagery, and the sublimity of its style, especially the ode in the third chapter, which Bishop Lowth ranks among the most perfect specimens of that class of poetry. It is distinguished by the boldness of its flights, the sublimity and grasp of its perceptions, the splendour of its imagery, and the music of its rhythm.

HABAZINIAH, Hab-a-zin-ny'-ah.—One of the descendants of Rechab, father of Jonadab, Jer. xxxv. 3.

HABERGEON.—A piece of defensive armour, supposed to have been a corset, or coat of mail, Exod. xxviii. 32.

HABITABLE parts, Prov. 8. 31.

HABITATION.—"And thou shalt see an enemy in my habitation, in all the wealth which God shall give Israel;" 1 Sam. ii. 32. It ought to be read—"And thou shalt see the affliction of the tabernacle, for all the wealth which God would have given Israel;" 1 Sam. ii. 32. The former is almost unmeaning. See ch. iv. 4, 11, 22.

HABITATION, a dwelling-place, Ezek. 29. 14. It denotes Divine protection, 2 Chr. 6. 2. & 29. 6; Ps. 71. 3. Deut. 26. 15. look down from thy holy h. Ps. 68. 5; Jer. 25. 30. Ps. 26. 8. loved h. of thy house 71. 3. be thou my strong h. 74. 20. full of the h. of cruelty 89. 14. are h. of thy throne, 97. 2.

HABOR, Hay'-bor, a fellow or partaker.—A city of the Medes in Assyria, 2 Kings xvii. 6.

HACHALIAH, Hak-a-ly'-ah, who waits for the Lord.—The father of Nehemiah the governor, Neh. i. 1.

HACHILAH, Hak'-e-lah, my trust is in her.—A place in Palestine, 1 Sam. xxvi. 1.

HACHMONI, Hak'-mo-ny, a wise man.—The father of Jehiel, the tutor of David's sons, 1 Chron. xxvii. 32.

HACHMONITE, Hak'-mo-nite.—A descendant of Hachmoni, 1 Chron. xi. 11.

HADAD, Hay'-dad, joy, noise.—The son of Bedad, who succeeded Husham in the kingdom of Moab, Gen. xxxvi. 35.—Also son to the king of Edom, 1 Kings xi. 14–17.—Also the son of Balhanan, king of Edom, 1 Chron. i. 50.—And also a son of Ishmael, 1 Chr. i. 30.

HADADEZER, Hay-dad-e'-zer, joy of assistance.—A powerful king of Zobah, defeated by David; 2 Sam. viii. 3, &c. The people of Damascus having attempted to assist Hadadezer, David defeated them also. Seven years afterwards in confederation with three Syrian princes, he joined the Ammonites, on which the army of David, under the command of Joab and Abishai, again attacked and defeated them; 2 Sam. viii. and x; 1 Chron. xviii. and xix.

HADADRIMMON, Hay'-dad-rim'-mon, the invocation of Rimmon.—A god of the Syrians; Zech. xii. 11. Some suppose it to have been an uncertain spot in the valley of Megiddon; See 2 Chron. xxxv. 22, 24. There king Josiah was slain, and his army routed by Pharaoh-Necho.

HADAR, Hay'-dar.—See HADAD; Gen xxv. 15.

HADARESER, Hay'-dar-e'-zer, the beauty of assistance.—King of Zobah; 1 Chron. xviii. 9.

HADASHAH, Had'-a-shah.—A town of Judah; Josh. xv. 37.

HADASSAH, Ha-das'-sah, a myrtle, joy.—The same as ESTHER; Esther ii. 7.

HADATTAH, Ha-dat'-tah.—A town of Judah; Josh. xv. 25.

HADES. A Greek word, compounded of a privative, and eidain, to see, signifying the invisible world. The Hebrew sheol is translated into Greek, ades, denoting the world of the dead. In the New Testament it is rendered hell. Theologians have considered Hades the receptacle of departed souls; one part for the holy, called paradise; the other part for the wicked, the abyss, or gehenna, where they endure Divine punishment.

HADID, Hay'-did.—A city of Benjamin; Ezra ii. 33; Neh. xi. 34.

HADLAI, Had'-la-i.—A descendant of Ephraim; 2 Chron. xxviii. 12.

HADORAM, Ha-do'-ram, their beauty, power, praise.—A descendant of Shem; Gen. x. 27.—Also a son of Tou, king of Hamath; 1 Chron. xviii. 10.

HADRACH, Hay'-drak, joy of tenderness.—A country of Syria, of which Damascus was the bulwark; Zech. ix. 1.

HAGAB, Hay'-gab, a grasshopper. A Nethinim, Ezra ii. 46.

HAGABAH, Hag'-ga-bah.—See HAGAR.

HAGAR, Hay'-gar, a stranger fearing.—An Egyptian woman, and servant to Sarah the wife of Abraham; Gen. xvi. 1, &c. The history of this woman is better narrated in the book of Genesis, than any other writer can narrate it. Hagar and Ishmael figuratively represented the Jews expelled from the church of God, on account of their persecuting spirit; Gal. iv. 24–31.

HAGARENES, Ha-gar-ee'-ns.—The descendants of Hagar; Ps. lxxxiii. 6. They are also called Ishmaelites, and Saracens, and sometimes Arabians.

HAGGAI, Hag'-ga-i, solemn feast. The tenth of the minor prophets, pro-ably born in Babylon, A. M. 3457, from whence he returned with Zerubbabel; Ezra v. 1. He with Zachariah, greatly excited and encouraged their brethren to finish the building of the temple, assuring them that the Messiah should appear in the flesh, teach in the courts of the new temple, and render it more glorious than the first; Ezra v. 1, 2; Hag. i. and 2.

HAGGAI, the Book of the prophet comprises three distinct prophecies or discourses. (1) It contains a severe reproof of the people, especially of their governor and high-priest, for their delay in rebuilding the temple, which neglect was the cause of the unfruitful seasons, and other marks of the divine displeasure, with which they had been visited, chap. i. 1—11. The obedience of the governors and people to the prophet's message is then related, verses 12—15. (2) The prophet comforts the aged men, who when young had beheld the splendour of the first temple, and now wept for the diminished magnificence of the second temple, by foretelling that its glory should be greater than that of the first; chap. ii. 1—9. This prediction was accomplished by Jesus Christ honouring it with his presence and preaching. Haggai then predicts a fruitful harvest, as a reward for carrying on the building, verses 10—19. (3) The prophet foretells the setting up of the Messiah's kingdom under the name of Zerubbabel, ii. 20—2. 3.

The style of this prophet is, for the most part, plain and prosaic, and vehement when he reproves; it is, however, interspersed with passages of much sublimity and pathos when he treats of the advent of Messiah, whom he emphatically terms "the desire of all nations."

HAGGERI, Hag'-ge-ry.—The father of Mibbar; he was one of David's worthies; 1 Chron. xi. 31.

HAGGI, Hag'-gy, joy.—The second son of Gad; Gen. xlv. 16, and father of the Haggites; Num. xxvi. 15.

HAGGLAH, Hag'-gy'-ah, the Lord's feast.—The son of Shimei, one of the descendants of Merari; 1 Chr. vi. 30.

HAGGITH, Hag'-gith, rejoicing.—David's fifth wife, and the mother of Adonijah; 2 Sam. iii. 4.

HAIL.—Hail was among the plagues of Egypt; Ex. ix. 24. "So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail," &c. By means of hail God defeated the kings of Canaan; Josh. x. 11. HAIL, as a word of salutation, imports a wish of prosperity and comfort; Mark xv. 18; Luke i. 28. The incursions of violent enemies, and the calamities of war; Isa. xxviii. 2; xxxii. 19; Rev. viii. 7; xvi. 21.

HAIR. A Nazarite was not allowed to shave his head; Num. vi. 5. The Eastern females are remarkable for the length and the great number of the tresses of their hairs. Long hair was allowed by Paul to be an ornament, a graceful covering; 1 Cor. xi. 15. The young men in the East who have long hair are regarded as effeminate and infamous; 1 Cor. xi. 14.

The people of the east universally reclined, when taking their meals, resting on their side, with their heads towards the table, so that their feet were accessible to any one who came behind the couch. This easily accounts for what is said, Luke vii. 38. "And she stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head." Amos vi. 4.

HAIR, 'cut off thine hair:' this was a sign of distress and mourning; Ezra ix. 3; Isa. xv. 2; Jer. vii. 29; xli. 5.

HAIR, 'plucked off the hair,' Isa. l. 6, was one of the most disgraceful modes of punishment, probably because the preservation of the hair was enjoined on the Nazarite, the most sacred person in Israel; Numb. vi. 5.

HAIR, 'weighed the hair of his (Absalom's) head at 200 shekels.' Anciently hair was accounted a great ornament; the longer it was, the more esteemed. They anointed it with fragrant oils, and powdered it with dust of gold. Josephus says that such was the custom of the Jews, which will account for the great weight of Absalom's hair; 2 Sam. xiv. 26.

HAIRS.—“White or like pure wool,” are emblematical of dignified gravity, antiquity and wisdom, Dan. vii. 9; Rev. i. 14.

HAIRS.—“Gray hairs here and there upon him, yet he knoweth not,” &c.; Hosea vii. 9. This implied the decaying condition of the kingdom of the ten tribes; idolatry and iniquity, the ravages of the Syrians and Assyrians, were fast bringing them to ruin, yet they were insensible to it:—like a gray-headed sinner, whose heart Satan has hardened so as to forget his impending ruin.

HAIR.—“Not a hair of your head perish,” Luke xxi. 18. A proverb, signifying the minute inspection and care of God over the saints, who are his jewels.

HAIR, Job 4. 15; Songs 4. 1.
Ps. 40. 12. more than h. of my head,
69. 4.
Hos. 7. 9. gray h. are here and there
Matt. 5. 36. make one h. white or black 10. 30. h. of your head numbered,
Luke 12. 7.

1 Cor. 11. 14. if man have long h.
1 Tim. 2. 9. not with brodered h.
1 Pet. 3. 3. not of plaiting the h.

HAKKATAN, Hak'-ka-tan, little.—The father of Johanan, Ezra viii. 12.

HAKKOZ, Hak'-koz, a thorn.—A priest in the time of David, 1 Chron. xxiv. 10.

HAKUPHA, Hak'-kew'-fah, a commandment of the mouth.—A Nethinim, Ezra ii. 51.

HALAH, Hay'-lah.—A district of Media, on the river Gozan, to which the ten tribes were transported, 2 Kings xvii. 6.

HALAK, Hay'-lak.—A mountain in Palestine, Josh. xii. 7.

HALF.—One part in two. “Half one’s days” means a short time; Ps. lv. 23; Luke xix. 8.

HALHUL, Hal'-hul, praise.—A city in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 58.

HALLELUJAH, or Alleluiah, Hal-le-lew'-yah, praise ye the Lord.—A note of praise, Rev. xix. 1, 3; Psalm cxlix. 9.

HALING.—Dragging by compulsion, Acts viii. 3.

HALLOW.—To sanctify, set apart for holy use, Exod. xx. 11; xxviii. 38, &c.

HALOHESH, Hal-lo'-esh.—One who returned from the Babylonish captivity, Neh. iii. 12.

HALT, to be lame, Luke 14. 21.—Declension, infidelity, Jer. 20. 10; Mic. 4. 6.—Discouragement, Ps. 38. 17.
—To be undecided, 1 Kings 18. 21.

HAM, Ham, heat, brownness.—The country of the Zuzims, the situation of which is not known, Gen. ix. 22.—The youngest son of Noah; he was a bad character. He subjected himself to the curse of his father, by his indecent conduct towards him.

Dr. Adam Clarke, in his comment on Gen. ix. 22, quotes the following—“Ham,” says Dr. Hales, “signifies burnt or black, and this name was peculiarly significant of the regions allotted to his family. To the Cushites, or children of his elect son, Cush, were allotted the hot southern regions of Asia, along the coasts of the Persian Gulf, Susiana, Chusistan, Arabia, &c.; to the sons of Canaan, Palestine and Syria; to the sons of Misraim, Egypt and Lybia, in Africa.

“The Hamites in general, like the Canaanites of old, were a sea-faring race, and sooner arrived at civilization and the luxuries of life, than their simpler pastoral and agricultural brethren of the other two families. The first great empires of Assyria and Egypt were founded by them; and the republics of Sidon, Tyre, and Carthage were early distinguished for their commerce: but they sooner fell to decay; and Egypt, which was one of the first, became the last and basest of the kingdoms, Ezek. xxix. 15, and has been successively in subjection to the Shemites and Japhethites, as have also the settlements of the other branches of the Hamites.”

HAMAN, Hay'-man, noise, preparation.—The son of Hammedatha, an Amalekite, of the posterity of Agag, Esther iii. 1; ix. 24. In the book of Esther his history is graphically given, which see. One grand design of this history is, to show that he who lays a snare for the life of his neighbour, is most likely to fall into it himself: for, in the course of divine providence, men generally meet with those evils in life which they have been the means of inflicting on others; and this is exactly agreeable to the saying of our Lord, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you withal." Esther iii. v., vi., vii., ix.

HAMATH, Hay'-math, anger, heat.—A city of Syria, the capital of a province of the same name on the Orontes, Josh. xiii. 5; Judges iii. 3. The entering into Hamath, which is frequently spoken of in scripture, (Josh. xiii. 5; Judges iii. 3,) is the narrow pass leading from the land of Canaan to Syria, through the valley which lies between Libanus and Antilibanus. This entrance is set down as the northern boundary of the land of Canaan, in opposition to the southern limits, the Nile, or river of Egypt. Josephus, and St. Jerome after him, believe Hamath to be Epiphania; but Theodoret, and many other good geographers, maintain it to be Emesa in Syria. Josh. xix. 35, assigns Hamath to the tribe of Naphtali.

HAMEDATHA, Ham-med'-athah, he that troubles the law.—The father of Haman, Esther iii. 1.

HAMMELECH, Ham'-me-lek.—One of the court or officers of Jehoiakim. Jer. xxxvi. 26.

HAMMER.—Symbolical of power. So God's word is called, as by it he breaks the flinty hearts of sinners, and rivets the nails of conviction there, Jer. xxiii. 29. Babylon so compared, Jer. l. 23.

HAMMOLEKETH, Ham'-mo-leketh.—A woman of the tribe of Manasseh, 1 Chron. vii. 18.

HAMMON, Ham'-mon, people.—A city of Asher, Josh. xix. 23.

HAMMOTH-DOR, Ham'-moth-dor, indignation.—A city in the tribe of Naphtali, ceded to the Levites of Gershom's family, Josh. xxi. 32.

HAMONAH, Ham'-o-nah.—A city foretold by Ezekiel as the scene of burial for Gog and his people, Ezek. xxxix. 16.

HAMON-GOG, Hay'-mon-gog, the multitude of Gog.—A valley in Judea, Ezek. xxxix. 15.

HAMOR, Hay'-mor, an ass, clay, wine.—Prince of Shechem. He was seduced from the path of virtue by extreme love for the daughter of Jacob. He made ample atonement to her brothers; but two of them were guilty of treachery and cruelty; Gen. xxxiii. 19; xxxiv.

HAMUEL, Ha-mew'-el, godly.—A descendant of Simeon, 1 Chron. iv. 26.

HAMUL, Hay'-mul, godly, or merciful.—The son of Pharez, Gen. xlvi. 12.

HAMUTAL, Ha-mew'-tal, shadow of heat.—Daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah, wife of Joash, and mother to Jehoahaz and Zedekiah, kings of Judah, 2 Kings xxiii. 31.

HANAMEEL, Ha-nam'-e-el, grace of God.—The son of Shallum, a kinsman of Jeremiah, to whom he sold a field at Anathoth; Jer. xxxii. 7.

HANAN, Hay'-nan, full of grace.—A descendant of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 23.

HANANEEL, Ha-nan'-e-el, mercy of God.—The name of a tower of Jerusalem, Neh. iii. 1; Zech. xiv. 10.

HANANI, Han'-a-ny, grace to me.—The father of the prophet Jehu, 1 Kings xvi. 7.—A prophet in Asa's time, 2 Chron. xvi. 7.—Also, a Levite and musician in the temple service, 1 Chron. xxv. 4.—The name of a person of good report, who gave Nehemiah information respecting the desolate state of the Jews; Neh. i. 2, 3. Nehemiah, believing him trustworthy, made him ruler of Jerusalem. He was "a faithful man," a fearer of God, and devoted to the service of his people.

HANANIAH, Han-a-ny-ah, grace or gift of the Lord.—One of the three young men of the tribe of Judah, and of the royal family, whose name was changed to that of Shadrach, Dan. i. 7.—The son of Zerubbabel, 1 Chron. iii. 19.—Also, a false prophet of the city of Gibeon, Jer. xxviii. 1, &c.

HAND. By the hand, man is distinguished from every other animal. The forefoot of the chimpanzee, ape, &c. has some resemblance, but is very much inferior to the hand of man. The human hand displays the wise designs of the Creator. This may be seen by consulting Sir Charles Bell's Treatise on "The Human Hand, its Mechanism, and vital Endowments, as evincing Design."

Figuratively, the right hand denotes protection and favour, power and strength; Ex. xv. 6; Ps. xvii. 7; xviii. 35; xx. 6; lxxiii. 23; xlv. 3. Sir Charles Bell in his treatise shows that the right side has an advantage over the left, both in muscular power, and in vital and constitutional properties.—It denotes the vengeance of God; 1 Sam. v. 6, 7.—To pour water on any one's hand, denotes to serve; 2 Kings iii. 11.—To wash the hands denoted that the person was innocent of manslaughter, &c. Deut. xxi. 6, 7. Pilate washed his hands; Matt. xxvii. 24, to indicate his being innocent of what was required of him, when he condemned Christ, in whom he found nothing to deserve such a sentence. Probably it was a Roman custom also.—To kiss one's hand, is an act of adoration; Job xxxi. 27.—To fill one's hand, is to put in possession of the priesthood, because parts of the sacrifice were put in the new priest's hands; Ex. xxviii. 41; Judges xvii. 5, 12; 1 Kings xiii. 33.

To lean upon the hand of another, indicates superiority and familiarity; 2 Kings vii. 2, 17; v. 18.—To lift up one's hand was the form of taking an oath; Gen. xiv. 22.—Also, an attitude used in prayer for the people; Lev. xix. 22.—To lift up the hand against any one, is to rebel against him; 2 Sam. xx. 21.—To give one's hand, indicates peace, friendship, &c. 2 Kings x. 15.

Jesus Christ is often represented as sitting at the right hand of God; Ps. cx. 1, meaning the assumption of his former glory, the exercise of his mediatorial power, and the glory which will be given him by saved millions.

—The right hand commonly denotes the south, as the left does the north. For the Hebrews speak of the quarter of the world in respect of themselves, having their faces turned towards the east, their backs to the west, their right hands to the south, and their left to the North. Thus the Hebrew word Kedem, which signifies before, stands also for the east; Achor, which signifies behind, marks out the west. Jamin, the right hand, is the South; and Shemol, the left hand, is the north; 1 Sam. xxiii. 19.

The Accuser was commonly at the right hand of the accused; Ps. cix. 6; Zech. iii. 1.—To be at one's right hand, signifies to defend, protect, support; Ps. xvi. 8; cix. 31. Our Saviour, in Matt. vi. 3, to show with what privacy we should do good works, says, "That our left hand should not know what our right hand does." Above all things we should avoid vanity and ostentation in all the good we undertake to do, and should not think that thereby we merit any thing. To stretch, or spread out the hands, is sometimes a gesture that denotes mercy; Isa. lxxv. 2. "I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people;" I have invited them by my prophets, and used all means to allure them to myself. So in Prov. i. 24; "I have called, and ye have refused, I have stretched out my hand, and no man regardeth."

HAND, Laying on of the—Communication of blessings or authority; Gen. xlviii. 20; Num. xxvii. 18. Also, Laying hands on a person or animal, was a solemn act of consecration to serve God; Lev. xvi. 21; Num. xxvii. 18; Acts vi. 6.

HAND join in hand, Prov. xi. 21. In the East this has been, and still is a solemn mode of taking an oath, and making an engagement. "Though the wicked form confederacies to support their power, the day of retribution will come."—Boothroyd.

HAND, 'stretched forth the hand,' Acts xxvi. 1. Elsner says that this was anciently regarded as an excellent expression of earnestness in a public speaker. The eloquent Demosthenes often used the same gesture as Paul did. The ancient statues are so represented. The ancient attire favoured this. The loose and long robe was fastened with a hook or clasp on the right shoulder, thus leaving the arm at full liberty.

HAND, Giving the hand ; 2 Kings x. 15.—Giving the hand is considered as a pledge of friendship and fidelity, or a form of contract, among all nations. Mr. Bruce in his "Travels" relates that when he entreated the protection of a sheikh, the great people who were assembled came, "and after joining hands, repeated a short kind of prayer, by which they declared themselves and their children accursed, if ever they lifted their hands against me, in the teil (or field,) in the desert, or on the river; or, in case that I or mine should fly to them for refuge, if they did not protect me at the risk of their lives, their families, and their fortunes, and even to the death of the last male child among them." Another striking instance occurs in Ockley's "History of the Saracens." Tetha, just before he died, asked one of Ali's men if he belonged to the emperor of the faithful: and being informed that he did, "Give me, then," said he, "your hand, that I may put mine in it, and by this action renew the oath of fidelity which I have already made to Ali."

HAND BREADTH. The hand breadth or palm, was a measure of about four inches, or the breadth of the four fingers. By this the life of man is compared; Ps. xxxix. 5; 1 Kings vii. 26.

HANDLE. To expound; Jer. ii. 8. —To display wisdom; Prov. xvi. 20. —To write with a pen; Judges v. 14. —The term is applied to ministers; 2 Cor. iv. 2. See also Luke xxiv. 39; Col. ii. 21.

HANDKERCHIEFS, Aprons, brought from the body of Paul, which they had touched; Acts xix. 12; in themselves they had no efficacy; but were a mere sign of evidence to all concerned that Paul possessed miraculous power.

HANDMAID. One given with a daughter when married; Gen. xxix. 24. The practice is still common in the East, even by the poor; Ps. lxxxvi. 16; cxvi. 16; Prov. xii. 9; xxx. 23; Luke i. 38, 48.

HANES, Hay'-nes.—A city near the borders of Egypt; Isa. xxx. 4.

HANG. To hang a person was a penal punishment, and implied that the culprit was accursed of God; Deut. xxi. 23. Crucifixion is called "hanging;" Acts v. 30. A crucified person was considered infamous, and his death not only cruel, but degrading. But Jesus submitted to it, and became accursed in our stead. Hence we may account for the aversion of the Jews against Christianity, and perceive why the preaching of Christ crucified was to the Jews a stumbling-block; 1 Cor. i. 23.

HANNATHON, Han'-na-thon, the gift of grace.—A town in Palestine in the tribe Zebulun, Josh. xix. 14.

HANNIEL, Han'-ne-el, the grace of God.—The son of Ephod, of the tribe of Manasseh; one of the spies; Num. xxxiv. 23.

HANOCK, Hay'-nock, dedicated.—The son of Midian; Gen. xxv. 4.—Also, the eldest son of Reuben; Gen. xli. 9.

HANUN, Hay'-nun, gracious, merciful.—The son of Naash, king of the Ammonites, who insulted David's servants by cutting off their beards and their garments. When David heard of this, he declared war against the Ammonites, and ultimately conquered them, 2 Sam. x. 1, &c.—Also the son of Seleph, Neh. iii. 13.

HAPPY, HAPPINESS.—To have joy, comfort, peace. Or the durable possession of perfect good, unmixed with evil; or the enjoyment of pure pleasure unalloyed with pain—a state in which all our wishes are satisfied. Real happiness is spiritual, and consists in the enjoyment of the Divine favour, a good conscience, and an agreeable Christian conduct—the conformity of which to Christ's precepts and his example, yields great satisfaction.

HARA, Hay'-rah, mountainous.—A city or district of Assyria to which the ten tribes were removed by Tiglath-pilneser, 1 Chron. v. 26.

HARADAH, Har'-a-dah, the well of great fear.—A camp station of the Israelites in the wilderness, not far from the borders of Egypt, Num. xxxiii. 24.

HARAN, Hay'-ran, mountainous country.—The son of Caleb and Ephah his concubine, 1 Chron. ii. 46.—The eldest son of Terah, and brother to Abraham and Nahor, Gen. xi. 26. He was the father of Lot.—A place, called also Charran, Acts vii. 2. It stood near a small river of the same name, which flowed into the Euphrates through the north-western part of Mesopotamia. Near this town occurred the celebrated defeat by the Parthians of the Roman army under Crassus, who was slain with 20,000 of his men, B. C. 53. The place still retains its ancient name, and is peopled by a few Arabs.

HARBONA and HARBONAH, Har-bo'-nah, his destruction.—Servant of Ahasuerus, Esther i. 10; vii. 9.

HARD.—Difficult, sad, sorrowful, cruel, austere; Exod. i. 14; 2 Sam. iii. 39; Gen. xlii. 7, &c. Many are hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. Every feeling friendly to seriousness is destroyed; they scoff at every appearance of piety, and represent the scenes of a future world as vain dreams. "My people would not hearken to my voice, and Israel would have none of me; so I gave them up to their own hearts' lusts, and they wandered in their own counsels," Ps. lxxxix. 11, 12. "Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth." Rom. ix. 18, will become plain by a close examination of the context, beginning at ver. 18 of chap. viii., and reading to the end of the eleventh chapter; this portion of the epistle being most intimately connected. Disregarding this simple, and all but self-evident rule, some expositors have explained 1 Pet. ii. 8, as meaning that certain persons were absolutely appointed to destruction; a notion, not only contradicting the whole tenor of scripture, but also repugnant to every idea which we are there taught to entertain of the justice and mercy of God. It does not appear that God hardens men's hearts by any positive exertions of his power upon them, but by his not executing sentence against their evil works speedily, he allows them to go on in their wickedness, whereby they harden themselves. And when they have proceeded to a certain length, he withholds the warnings with which they have been before favoured, and even withdraws his Spirit from them. Compare Exod. ix. 12, with Exod. viii. 15, 32, and Gen. vi. 3. David, in the wilderness of Judea, expressed his earnest desires after the presence of God, and the pleasures of the sanctuary, saying, (Ps. lxxiii. 8,) "My soul followeth hard after thee;" that is, as a child goeth after the father; he does not let go the hand which hath so often preserved it from falling.

HARDEN.—"And I will harden Pharaoh's heart," Exod. vii. 3. Dr. Adam Clarke thus paraphrases the scripture:—"I will permit his stubbornness and obstinacy to remain, that I may have the greater opportunity to multiply my wonders in the land, that the Egyptians may know that I only am Jehovah, the self-existent God."

"And he hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he hearkened not unto them; as the Lord had said;" Exod. vii. 13. The original should have been translated, "And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened;" as it is in verse 22. God cannot secretly influence a man's will, or suggest any wicked stubborn resolution to his mind, and then punish him for it; for it would be unjust. But God is just, and can never err.

HARE.—The hare in Syria is distinguished into two species, differing much in size. The largest is the Turkinan hare, and chiefly haunts the plains; the other is the common hare of the desert. Both are abundant. In Lev. xi. 6, it is stated that the hare chews the cud. Bishop Colenso says he has a note from Professor Owen denying that the hare is a ruminant animal; therefore, says the Bishop, "Owen is right and Moses is wrong." This objection is as old as Aristotle, who remarked the curious circumstance that though that animal does not chew its cud, yet that the structure of its stomach is similar to that of the ruminating animals.

"Although there may have been no genuine rumination, strictly so called (as I myself believe), yet it is plain that in Hebrew it went by the name of rumination (Wiederkauen, literally 'chewing again'), inasmuch as a language is not always idiomatically in agreement with nature, and the Israelites were wont to call this peculiar (munching) habit of the hare 'rumination.' The aim of a lawgiver was clearly not to fall foul of the Israelites respecting an inconvenient expression or mistake in natural history, but he adopted the word 'rumination' in the widest scope in which the [Hebrew] language received it, and told them—Notwithstanding this species of rumination, you must not eat the hare, because he does not divide the hoof."—Michaelis.

"The stomach of rodents is single, and the motion of the mouth, excepting when they masticate some small portion of food reserved in the hollow of the cheek, is more that of the lips; when in a state of repose the animals are engaged in working the incisor teeth upon each other. This practice is a necessary condition of their existence, for the friction keeps them fit for nibbling, and prevents their growing beyond a proper length. As hares do not subsist on hard substances, like most genera of the order, but on tender shoots and grasses, they have more cause, and therefore a more constant craving, to abrade the teeth; and this they do in a manner which, combined with the slight trituration of the occasional contents of the cheeks, even modern writers, not zoologists, have mistaken for rumination.

"The act of 'chewing the cud' and 're-chewing' being considered identical by the Hebrews, the sacred lawgiver, not being occupied with the doctrines of science, no doubt used the expression in the sense in which it was then understood. It may be added that a similar opinion, and consequent rejection of the hare as food, pervaded many nations of antiquity who derived their origin or their doctrines from a Semitic source."—Dr. Kitto.

"Arnebeth," translated hare, very probably means some totally different animal from our English hare; and it must not be forgotten that the LXX translate the word by one which both Aristotle and Pliny seem to regard as describing an animal different from the hare. Dr. Colenso will find the above statements published, many years ago, by the learned Dr. Harris, in his "Natural History of the Bible." "It is very likely," says Dr. A. Clarke, "that different species of these animals may be included under the general terms, shaphan and arnebeth, for some travellers have observed that there are four or five sorts of these animals, which are used for food in the present day in those countries. Some think the mountain rat, marmot, squirrel, and hedgehog, may be intended under the word shaphan.

HAREPH, Hay'-ref.—A son of Caleb, and father of Beth-Gader; 1 Chron. ii. 51.

HARETH, Hay'-reth, liberty.—A forest in Judea, to which David fled from Saul, 1 Sam. xxii. 5.

HARHAIAH, Ha-ra-i'-ah.—A goldsmith, Neh. iii. 8.

HARHAS, Hay'-has.—A keeper of king Josiah's wardrobe, 2 Kings xxii. 14.

HARHUR, Har'-hur, the heat of liberty.—One whose sons were of the order of the Nethinims, Ezra ii. 51.

HARIM, Hay'-rim.—Persons belonging to the sacerdotal families, Ezra ii. 39.—A chief who returned from the captivity; Ezra ii. 32.

HARIPH, Hay'-rif.—A returned captive, Neh. vii. 24.

HARLOT, or PROSTITUTE, is the name of an abandoned woman, but it is used for a nation of idolaters, Isa. i. 21; Ezek. xvi. 15. The original also means an innkeeper, Josh. ii. 1; 1 Kings iii. 16. It was applied to the wicked conduct of the Israelites in departing from God; Isa. i. 21.—Also the most infamous sinners; Matt. xxi. 31. Rahab who received into her house, and concealed the spies, is called an harlot. But the term zonah should be translated tavern or innkeeper or hostess. These spies were undoubtedly the most confidential persons selected by Joshua for the purpose, and their errand involved the greatest consequences. How could they therefore go to lodge with a woman of ill-fame? No; they went to a tavern kept by her. A further proof is that Rahab was actually married to Salmon, a Jewish prince; Matt. i. 5. And is it probable that a prince of Judah would have married a prostitute? Deut. xxiii. 17, 18; Heb. xi. 31.

HARNEPHER, Har'-ne-fer.—A descendant of Asher, 1 Chron. vii. 36.

HARNESS.—Armour for a person or horse; 2 Chr. ix. 24; Jer. xlvi. 4. According to paintings found in Egyptian tombs, and the figures on ancient sculptures, the harness of the horses and chariots were much like ours. Hence we read of bridles and bits; Isa. xxxvii. 29; Jas. iii. 3. The word sometimes means armour; 1 Kings xx. 11.

HARNESS.—"And the children of Israel went up harnessed out of the land of Egypt;" Exod. xiii. 18. The children of Israel were not armed when they left Egypt. But when they had crossed the Red Sea, it is probable that many did arm themselves with the arms taken from the dead bodies of the Egyptians which were miraculously cast upon the shore. See Exod. xxx. 31. "Went up harnessed." The word harnessed simply refers to that orderly or well-arranged manner in which the Israelites commenced their journey from Egypt For to arrange, array, or set in order seems to be the meaning of the word, chamash. But for the observance of this order, thousands of men, women, and children, must have been trodden to death.

HAROD, Hay'-rod, fear, a well.—A well near which Gideon and his troops pitched, Judges vii. 1.—The birth-place of Elika and Shanmah, two of David's valiant men, 2 Sam. xxiii. 25.

HAROEH, Har'-o-eh.—Son of Shobal, 1 Chron. ii. 52.

HAROSHETH, Har'-o-sheth, agriculture.—A city supposed to be near Hazor, north of Canaan, called afterwards Upper Galilee, or Galilee of the Gentiles, Judges iv. 2. It was an asylum for persons of various nations, who had been expelled from their own country, or who were engaged in commerce.

HARP.—A musical instrument of nearly a triangular figure, held upright between the legs of the person that plays it. This instrument was in use before the flood, and is said to have been invented by Jubal, the son of Lamech, Gen. iv. 21. David excelled greatly in performing upon the harp, and by its music frequently dispossessed Saul of his melancholy, 1 Sam. xvi. 16, 23. It was a favourite instrument among the Hebrews, whose pitiable state during the captivity is beautifully described by "hanging their harps upon the willows," Psalm cxxxvii. 2. It seems to have formed a part of the instrumental music in the temple of Solomon, 1 Kings. x. 12; 2 Chron. ix. 11. "Praise the Lord with harp: sing unto him with psaltery, and an instrument of ten strings," Psalm xxxiii. 2.

HARSHA, Har'-shah, workmanship or a wood.—Head of a family that returned from captivity; Ezra ii. 52.

HART.—The stag, or male deer, allowed to be eaten by all; Deut. xii. 15; 1 Kings iv. 23; Ps. xlii. 1. Mr. Good observes that "the hind and roe, the hart and antelope, have ever been esteemed in the East for the voluptuous beauty of their eyes, the elegance of their form, and their graceful action. They therefore are representative of persons possessing any of these respective qualities.

In 2 Sam. i. 19, Saul is denominated 'the roe of Israel;' and in verse 18 of the ensuing chapter, we are told, that 'Asahel was as light of foot as a wild roe.' A phraseology perfectly synonymous with the epithet 'swift-footed,' which Homer has so frequently bestowed upon his hero Achilles. Thus again, Lam. i. 6, "Her princes are like harts which find no pasture; they are fled without strength before their pursuers." And further, in a passage more similar still to the present, [Song ii. 9,] is that, Hab. iii. 19, "The Lord Jehovah is my strength; he will make my feet like hinds' feet."

HARUM, Hay'-rum.—Son of Cuz, 1 Chron. iv. 8.

HARUMAPH, Ha-rew'-maf, destruction.—One who returned from the captivity, Neh. iii. 10.

HARUPHITE, Ha-rew'-fite.—One of David's brave officers, 1 Chr. xii. 5.

HARUZ, Hay'-ruz.—The grandfather of king Ammon, 2 Kings xxi. 19.

HARVEST implies not only the seasons for reaping corn, but also the produce itself. So it means, Gen. viii. 22. Harvest began in March, and ended about the middle of May, or beginning of June. The season was one of hard labour, but of great joy, so that the joy of harvest became proverbial. In the first fortnight of this season, the latter rains are frequent, but cease towards the end of April, when the sky is generally fair and serene. In the plain of Jericho the heat of the sun is excessive, though in other parts of Palestine the weather is most delightful; and on the sea-coast the heat is tempered by morning and evening breezes from the sea. As the harvest depends on the duration of the rainy season, the early or autumnal rains, and the latter or spring rains, are absolutely necessary to the support of vegetation, and were consequently objects greatly desired by the Israelites and Jews. These rains, however, were always chilly, (Ezra x. 9; Song ii. 11,) and often preceded by whirlwinds (2 Kings iii. 16, 17,) which raised such quantities of sand as to darken the sky, or, in the words of the sacred historian, to make 'the heavens black with clouds and wind;' 1 Kings xviii. 45.

Any time of gainful labour is called harvest; hence a "sleeper in harvest causeth shame" to himself and friends. Prov. x. 5. A people ripened by sin for destruction, are likened to a harvest ready for the sickle of God's vengeance, Isa. xviii. 5; Joel iii. 13; Rev. xiv. 15. A remarkable time of success of the gospel is called harvest, Matt. ix. 37, 38; John iv. 35. The day of judgment is likened to a harvest; when all things shall be ripe for the final gathering; Matt. xiii.

HASTE, 'I said in mine haste,' &c. "in my agitation;" Ps. xxxi. 22; cxvi. 11.

HASTE. 'He that believeth shall not make haste,' Isa. xxviii. 16. Shall not be thrown into any tumult of passion, hurry or terror, or agony and torture of despair, through the disappointment of his hope, &c. He shall not be ashamed—he shall not be confounded, as Peter and Paul express it;—he shall not have cause to flee in agitation and dismay, as if he saw indications of the foundation giving way, and danger were at hand. The idea is taken from a person alarmed, and fleeing to a place of safety.

Imagine a man on whose house the tempest beats; he sees the foundation is frail, and the building must fall; he rushes out with great impetuosity to reach a place of refuge.—But the foundation of the church shall never be shaken, and God's people will be safe amid all earthly storms, and the attacks of all spiritual foes; 1 Pet. ii. 6; Rom. ix. 33.

HATE, 'not his father and mother,' Luke xiv. 26. In the Hebrew idiom it has merely a figurative sense, equivalent to loving less one object than another, or there would be a violation of the fifth commandment. See Mal. i. 2, 3; Gen. xxix. 30, 31; Deut. xxi. 15—17.

HATHATH, Hay'-thath.—A descendant of Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 13.

HATIPHA, Hat-ty'-fah.—His children were of the order of the Nethinims; Ezra ii. 54.

HATITA, Hat-te'-tah.—His descendants were Nethinims; Ezra ii. 42.

HATTIL, Hat'-til.—One whose children were servants to Solomon; Ezra ii. 57.

HATTUSH, Hat'-tush.—A descendant of David; 1 Chron. iii. 22.

HAUGHTY. Proud, lofty; 2 Sam. 22.

23. "Thine eyes are upon the haughty," &c. The word describes the disposition; Prov. 16. 18.—the heart; Prov. 18. 12.—the daughters of Zion; Is. 3. 16.—the scorner; Prov. 21. 24.—the inhabitants of the earth; Is. 24. 4.—a righteous person; Ps. 131. 1. See also Zeph. 3. 11; haughtiness; Is. 2. 11, 17; 13, 11; 16. 6.

Hauran, Haw'-ran.—A district between Tiberias and Damascus; Ezek. xlvii. 16, 18. Some suppose it to be the same as Ituræa; Luke iii. 1.

HAVEN. A port where ships are sheltered from the sea; Gen. xlix. 13; Acts xxvii. 8.

HAVILAH, Hav'-e-lah, land of, painful bearing.—Havilah, son of Cush, according to Bochart, peopled the country where the Tigris and Euphrates unite and discharge themselves together into the Persian Gulf. This probably is the land of Havilah, which extended to Shur over against Egypt. The Ishmaelites inherited this territory; for it is said, "They dwelt from Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, in the way that leadeth towards Assyria; Gen. x. 7; xxv. 18; 1 Sam. xv. 7. Relative to the exact position of this country geographers are not however agreed.

HAVILAH. "And they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur, &c., and he died in the presence of all his brethren;" Gen. xxv. 18.—This translation is wrong, in introducing Ishmael into the description of the district occupied by his descendants, after the narration of his death, ver. 17; and stating that he died "in the presence of all his brethren." The original text is sufficiently intelligible. After having related the death of Ishmael, the writer points out the territory occupied by his descendants, and then he adds, "It (the lot or territory) fell (or was divided to him) in the presence of all his brethren." Compare Josh. xxii. 4. This corresponded exactly to the promise of God, ch. xvi. 12, "He shall dwell in the presence," &c. Hence the prediction was fulfilled.

HAVOTH-JAIR, Hav'-oth-jay'-ir, villages that enlighten.—Villages in the land of Gilead, which Jair, the son of Manasseh, conquered and took; they belonged to the half-tribe of Manasseh; Num. xxxii. 41.

HAWK, a well-known bird, of which there are nine other principal species, viz. falcons, goshawks, sparrow-hawks, &c. The hawk is a remarkably quick-sighted animal, very ravenous and courageous. It was declared unclean by the law; Lev. xi. 16; Deut. xiv. 15.

HAY and STUBBLE, erroneous doctrines. A Christian congregation is represented by St. Paul under the similitude of a building; its ministers are the architects, some of whom lay the foundation on which others build; some erect a superstructure of gold and silver; others of wood, hay and stubble. The sense concealed under the allegory is apparent: a Christian congregation is instructed by teachers, some of whom communicate the first principles, others impart further knowledge; some deliver good and useful things, such as at that time prevailed in the Corinthian church. "Wood, hay, stubble," 1 Cor. iii. 12.

HAZAEI, Haz'-a-el, seeing.—One of the officers of Benhadad, king of Syria, whom Elijah was commanded to anoint as king; 1 Kings xix. 15, 16. Hazael had been sent by Benhadad to inquire of Elisha whether he should recover? The prophet, foreseeing his cruelty, wept; Hazael inquired the cause; which, when he knew, he could not think it possible such barbarity should lurk in his heart. The Lord, said Elisha, hath revealed to me, that thou shalt be the king of Syria. Hazael returned to the king his master, and told him he would recover. The next day, he spread over the king's face, or person, a cloth dipped in water, which might, perhaps, have been recommended as a cure for the disorder. However, Benhadad immediately died, and Hazael usurped the throne. The whole circumstances lead us to think that Hazael suffocated his master, that he might ascend the throne; he was guilty of many other great cruelties; 2 Kings viii. 8—13.

HAZARHADDAR, Hay'-zar-ad'-dar.—A boundary of Canaan; Num. xxxiv. 4.

HAZAR-ENAN, Hay'-zar-e'-nan.—A boundary of Canaan; Num. xxxiv. 9.

HAZAR GADAH, Hay'-zar gad'-dah, imprisoned.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xv. 27.

HAZAR-HATTICON, Hay'-zar-hat'-te-kon.—A place in upper Egypt; Ezek. xlvi. 16.

HAZARMAVETH, Hay'-zar-may'-veth, court of death.—The third son of Joktan; Gen. x. 26.

HAZAR-SHUAL, Hay'-zur-shu'-al, wolf's house.—A city in the tribe of Simeon; Josh. xv. 23.

HAZUR-SUSAH, Hay'-zur-su-sah. A city in Palestine; Josh. xix. 5.

HAZUR-SUSIM, Hay'-zar-sew'-sim.—A city in Simeon; 1 Chron. iv. 31.

HAZELELPONI, Hay'-zel-el-po'-ny, shade.—A woman of the posterity of Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 3.

HAZERIM, Ha-ze'-rim.—The ancient habitation of the Hivites; Deut. ii. 23.

HAZEROTH, Ha-ze'roth, villages, court.—An encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness; Num. xi. 35.

HAZEON-TAMAR, Haz'-e-zon Tay'-mar.—The same as ENGEDI, (which see,) Gen. xiv. 7.

HAZIEL, Hay'-ze-el.—Son of Shimei; 1 Chron. xxiii. 9.

HAZO, Hay'-zo.—A son of Nahor; Gen. xxii. 22.

HAZOR, Hay'-zor, court, hay.—The name of a city in the tribe of Judah; Josh. xv. 23.—Also a city in the tribe of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 36. This was probably the capital of king Jabin, which Joshua took from him after the great battle in which he defeated him; Josh. xi. 1, 10—13. Joshua destroyed it, and it seems to have been rebuilt by Solomon; 1 Kings ix. 15. It was a place of great importance, as indicated by the remarkable prophecy; Jer. xlix. 28—33.

HEAD. The understanding or governing principle in man; Isa. i. 6; Dan. ii. 28. Chief of a people; Mic. iii. 1, 9, 11. The metropolis of a country; Isaiah vii. 8, 9.—It sometimes signifies the whole man; Prov. x. 6; Ezek. ix. 10.—Also, the life; Dan. i. 10.—The "head" of the serpent, means the power, policy, and works of Satan, which the Lord was delegated to destroy. The head deprived of hair, was a token of grief; Amos viii. 10.—The "head anointed" was expressive of joy; Eccles. ix. 8.—The shaking of the head, indicated contempt; Isa. xxxvii. 22.

Head means a person that hath rule and pre-eminence over others. Thus God is the head of Christ, as Mediator; from whom he derives all his dignity and authority; Christ is the only spiritual head of his church, both in respect of eminence and influence; he communicates life, motion, and strength to every believer. Also the husband is the head of his wife, because by God's ordinance he is to rule over her; Gen. iii. 16.—Also in regard of pre-eminence of sex; 1 Peter iii. 7, and excellency of knowledge; 1 Cor. xiv. 35. The apostle mentions this subordination of persons in 1 Cor. xi. 3.

HEAD is sick, and heart faint; Isa. i. 5. The idea is taken from the diseased or wounded condition of the human body; the head and heart, the two noblest parts of it, represent the state of the body politic.

HEART, the centre of animal life, is used metaphorically for all the affections, and the whole faculties, of man. The latter application is very common in Scripture; Deut. v. 29; Luke i. 17; Exod. xxxvi. 2; Hosea vii. 11; Matt. xiii. 15; Luke xxiv. 25. The Lord Jesus Christ, who demonstrated his Godhead on many occasions, by searching the heart, declares that from the heart of man proceeds every evil. Matt. xv. 18. As the great evil which corrupts and defiles the heart is unbelief, so the only purifier of the heart mentioned in the Scripture is faith; Acts xv. 9; "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness;" that is, sincere and saving faith engages the affections; Rom. x. 10. This is called the "righteousness of faith," Rom. iv. 13. Heart sometimes means the centre of a thing, or place; Ezek. xxvii. 4; Ps. xlvi. 2; Matt. xii. 40.—To want heart means to lack understanding.

HEARTH.—A place on which a fire is made; Isa. xxx. 14; Jer. xxxvi. 22. The word hearth means a kind of 'brazier,' or portable machine to keep fuel together for burning. The Easterns still use such machines, which are placed in the middle of the room, and supplied with wood, without a chimney. It was made of iron, and stood on three feet. The ancient Greeks and Romans had them, and the Greeks and Turks have them now.—Parkhurst. Figuratively, it signifies the effects of extreme grief on the body; "My bones are burnt as a hearth;" Ps. cii. 3: Dr. Boothroyd translates hearth in this passage, firebrand.

Sam. xi. 11; 2 Sam. iv. 5.—The penetrating influence of the sun; Ps. xix. 6.—The parched state of the body through affliction; Job xxx. 30.—Divine indignation; Deut. xxix. 24.—Fervour of spirit; Ezek. iii. 14.—Grievous distress; Isa. xxv. 4, 5.

HEATH.—A lowly shrub, growing in desert places; whence such barren spots are called in England heaths, whether that plant be found on them or not. It bears no fruit, is worthless as fodder, and is reckoned by Pliny among "the unhappy plants." Men who trust in man and not in God, are "like the heath in the desert," which vainly strikes its roots into a soil not capable of giving it vigour, Jer. xvii. 6. To this lonely unpleasant plant, persons are compared who fly their country or homes, and endure hardships in secluded places; Jer. xlvi. 6.

HEATHEN.—A term, which, like the word Gentile, was applied by the Jews to all who were not Hebrews. It is now confined to those who worship false gods; and includes all those who are not Jews, Mahomedans, or Christians. More than two-thirds of the human race belong to this class. The countries which are yet pagan are, all that part of Africa which lies between the tropic of Cancer and the Cape of Good Hope, the aborigines of North and South America, China, Birmah, Hindostan, Tartary, Japan; and many islands in the Indian and other oceans. They are called PAGANS, from the Greek word (paga) a fountain, or rural place; or from the Latin word paganus, a countryman, or rustic, because Christianity was first planted in cities, while the ignorant country people adhered longer to their old superstitions. It is a strong argument in favour of Christianity, that it seeks not concealment, to work on ignorance; but comes forth to the day and challenges learning and power. Its early conquests were in the chief cities of the earth, where education was most enjoyed; and in all ages, learning and science have been its handmaids.

made of late years for the enlightening of the heathen; and there is every reason to believe good has been done. From the aspect of Scripture prophecy, we are led to expect that the kingdoms of the heathen at large shall be brought to the light of the gospel, Matt. xxiv. 14; Isa. lx.; Ps. ii. 7, 8; xxii. 28, 29. It has been much disputed, whether it be possible that the heathen should be saved without the knowledge of the gospel: some have absolutely denied it, upon the authority of those texts which universally require faith in Christ; but to this it is answered, that those texts regard only such to whom the gospel comes, and are capable of understanding the contents of it. The truth, says Dr. Doddridge, seems to be this: that none of the heathens will be condemned for not believing the gospel, but they are liable to condemnation for the breach of God's natural law: nevertheless, if there be any of them in whom there is a prevailing love to the Divine Being, there seems reason to believe that, for the sake of Christ, though to them unknown, they may be accepted by God; and so much the rather, as the ancient Jews, and even the apostles, during the time of our Saviour's abode on earth, seem to have had but little notion of those doctrines, which those who deny the savability of the heathens are most apt to imagine," Rom. ii. 10—22; Acts x. 34, 35; Matt. viii. 11, 12. "If," as Mr. Newton observes, "we suppose a heathen brought to a sense of his misery; to a conviction that he cannot be happy without the favour of the great Lord of the world; to a feeling of guilt, and desire of mercy; and that, though he has no explicit knowledge of a Saviour, he directs the cry of his heart to the unknown Supreme, to have mercy upon him; who will prove that such views and desires can arise in the heart of a sinner, without the energy of that Spirit which Jesus is exalted to bestow? Who will take it upon him to say, that his blood has not sufficient efficacy to redeem to God a sinner who is thus disposed, though he have never heard of his name? Or who has a warrant to affirm, that the supposition I have made is in the nature of things impossible to be realized?"

HEATHEN, Lev. 25. 44, & 26. 45.

Ps. 2. 1. why do h. rage, Acts 4. 25.

25. 8. give thee the h. or Gentiles for thine inheritance

Matt. 18. 17. let him be as an h. man

Gal. 3. 8. justify the h. through faith

HEAVE-OFFERING.—This consisted of corn, fruit, and meat, and was a special present to the priests; it was offered to God, and then lifted towards heaven in token of being devoted to him, Exod. xxix. 27, 28; Num. xv. 19—21; xviii. 24—29.

HEAVEN, exalted, or heaved high.

The Jews reckoned three heavens:—(1.) The aerial heaven, where the birds fly, the winds blow, and the showers are formed. (2.) The heaven or firmament, wherein the stars are disposed. (3.) The heaven of heavens, or the third heaven, which is the place of God's residence, the dwelling of angels and the blessed. This is the true palace of God, entirely separated from the impurities and imperfections, the alterations and changes of the lower world; where he reigns in eternal peace. It is the temple of the divine Majesty, where his excellent glory is revealed in the most conspicuous manner. "It is the habitation of his holiness, the place where his honour dwells." It is the sacred manison of light and joy, and glory.

Heaven is to be considered as a place as well as a state; it is expressly so termed in Scripture, John xiv. 2, 3, and the existence of the body of Christ, and those of Enoch and Elijah, is a further proof of it. If it be not a place, where can those bodies be? and where will the bodies of the saints exist after the resurrection? Where this place is, however, cannot be determined. It is known to God only.

Heaven is a place of inexpressible felicity. The names given to it are proofs of this: it is called "paradise," Luke xxiii. 43. "Light," Rev. xxi.

23. "A building and mansion of God," 2 Cor. v. 1; John xiv. 2. "A city; Heb. xi. 10, 16. "A better country," Heb. xi. 16. "An inheritance," Acts xx. 32. "A kingdom," Matt. xxv. 34. "A Crown," 2 Tim. iv. 8. "Glory," Ps. lxxxiv. 11; 2 Cor. iv. 17. "Peace, rest, and joy of the Lord," Isa. lvii. 2; Heb. iv. 9; Matt. xxv. 21, 23. The felicity of heaven will consist in freedom from all evil, both of soul and body, Rev. vii. 17, in the enjoyment of God as the chief good; in the company of angels and saints; in perfect holiness, and extensive knowledge.

It has been disputed whether there are degrees of glory in heaven. The arguments against degrees are, that all the people of God are loved by him with the same love, all chosen together in Christ, equally interested in the same covenant of grace, and equally redeemed with the same price; to suppose the contrary, it is said, is to eclipse the glory of divine grace, and carries with it the legal idea of being rewarded for our works. On the other side it is observed, that if the above reasoning would prove any thing, it would prove too much, viz., that we should all be upon an equality in the present world as well as that which is to come; for we are now as much the objects of the same love, purchased by the same blood, &c., as we shall be hereafter. That rewards contain nothing inconsistent with the doctrine of grace, because those very works which it pleaseth God to honour are the effects of his own operation. That all rewards to a guilty creature have respect to the mediation of Christ. That God's graciously connecting blessings with the obedience of his people, serves to show not only his love to Christ and to them, but his regard to righteousness. That the Scriptures expressly declare for degrees, Dan. xii. 3; Matt. x. 41, 42; Matt. xix. 28, 29; Luke xix. 16, 19; Rom. ii. 6; 1 Cor. iii. 8; 1 Cor. xv. 41, 42; 2 Cor. v. 10; Gal. vi. 9.

HEAVEN frequently means the church of God, called the kingdom of heaven. It consists of two divisions, one in the highest heavens, one on earth. In this extensive sense, the heaven of prophecy is often to be understood, Rev. v. 6, xii. 1, signifying the visible church.

HEAVEN.—"Whose top may reach unto heaven," Gen. xi. 4. An unusual hyperbole to express great height. See also Deut. i. 28; ix. 1.

"HEAVENS shall pass away with a great noise,.....the earth also shall be burnt up;" 2 Pet. iii. 10. The Rev. Ingram Cobbin says on this passage:—"Put a drop of water on an anvil, pass over it a piece of iron red hot, strike the iron with a hammer on the part above the drop of water, and the report will be loud as a musket; when, then, the whole strength of those opposite agents is brought together into a state of conflict, the noise, the thunderings, the innumerable explosions (till every particle of water on the earth and in the atmosphere is, by the action of fire, reduced into its component gaseous parts) will be frequent, loud, confounding, and terrific. That the world will be burned, was, singularly enough, an opinion of many ancient philosophers.

HEAVENS.—(1) The powerful providence of God, Dan. iv. 26.—(2) Good, Matt. xxi. 25; Luke xv. 18.—(3) Political or ecclesiastical governments, Isa. xiii. 13; Hag. ii. 6, 21.

HEBER, He'-ber, the traveller or sojourner.—The son of Salah, and the grandson of Shem, born A. M. 1723; Luke iii. 35. From him some think that Abraham and his posterity derived the name of Hebrews. But others, with greater probability, have suggested that they were thus called, because they came from the other side of the Euphrates into Canaan. Heber signifying "one that passes," or "a passage," that is, of the Euphrates.—Also the Kenite of Jethro's family, husband to Jael, who killed Sisera, Judges iv. 17, &c. This Heber was a person of considerable consequence.—Also father of Socho; 1 Chron. iv. 18.—Also son of Shashak; 1 Chron. viii. 22, 25.

HEBREWS, He'-brews.—The name by which a Jew desired to be known, in the earliest and latest periods of his nation, 2 Cor. xi. 22. Abraham was known by it on his arrival in Canaan. It signifies that he was the proper heir of Shem, the father of all the children of Heber.

The Apostle Paul gloried that he was an Hebrew of the Hebrews:

which Macknight thus explains. The Jews who lived among the Greeks, and who spake their language, were called Hellenists, Acts vi. 1; ix. 29; xi. 20. Many of these were descended from parents, one of whom only was a Jew. Of this sort was Timothy, Acts xvi. 1. But those who were born in Judea, of parents directly descended from Abraham, and who, receiving their education in Judea, spake the language of their forefathers, and were thoroughly instructed in the laws and learning of the Jews, were reckoned more honourable than the Hellenists; and to mark the excellence of their lineage, education, and language, they were called Hebrews, a name the most ancient, and therefore the most honourable, of all the names borne by Abraham's descendants; for it was the name given to Abraham himself by the Canaanites, to signify that he had come from the other side of the Euphrates. An Hebrew, therefore, possessing the character and qualifications above described, was a more honourable person than an Israelite, inasmuch as this latter name denoted no more than a person's being a member of the commonwealth of Israel, which a Jew might be, though born and bred in a foreign country. Paul, indeed, was born at Tarsus, in Cilicia; yet being an Hebrew of the Hebrews, who received his education in Jerusalem, and spake the language there used, and who understood the Hebrew, in which the oracles of God were written, he was a Jew of the most honourable class.

HEBREWS, Epistle to.—The Hebrews were the believing Jews in Judea, who spoke a dialect of the Hebrew, and were so called to distinguish them from those who dwelt among the Greeks, speaking their language, and thence called Hellenists. They were at that time exposed to great sufferings on account of their profession of Christ. Paul addressed this Epistle to them to keep them from changing their faith in Christ, by proving the truth of the grand doctrines of Christianity, and showing that it was the completion and fulfilment of the Mosaic dispensation, the rites and ceremonies of which were but types of the New Testament dispensation. It was written in Italy about the year 63. This Epistle to the Hebrews is among the most important of the Scriptures. It exhibits in an extraordinary degree the writer's knowledge in the mystery of Christ, and unfolds some of the sublimest discoveries of infinite wisdom.

HEBRON, He'bron, society, friendship.—One of the most ancient and renowned cities in the world, situated on an eminence twenty miles southward from Jerusalem. Abraham, Isaac, and Sarah, were buried near this place, Gen. xxiii. 2. See also Josh. xiv. 13; x. 3, 23, 36. It was anciently called Kirjath-arba, the city of Arba; and Mamre; Gen. xxiii. 19; xxxv. 27. It was afterwards taken by Joshua, and given over to Caleb, who banished the Anakim from its territories! Afterwards it was made one of the Levitical cities, and a city of refuge. It was the royal residence of David for seven years and a half. After his removal to Jerusalem, it was chosen by Absalom as the place in which to raise the standard of rebellion.

Hebron is supposed to have been the place where Zacharias and Elizabeth resided; for it was a station for priests, and because it lay on that ridge of mountains which gave to that part of Judea the name of the hill country; Luke i. 5, 6, 39.—Also the son of Kohath, chief of the family of the Hebronites, Exod. vi. 18.

HEBRON.—In Josh. x. 23 and 37, the Israelitish general is charged by infidels with killing the same king of Hebron twice. The historians relate no such thing. Hebron was a place of considerable note, and its inhabitants finding that their king had fallen in battle, elected another in his place. The second king was he whom Joshua slew after he had taken the city and its dependencies, as related in ver. 37.

HEDGE, Places of residence; 1 Chr. 4. 23.—The protection of God, Job 1.

10; Prov. 15. 19; Is. 5. 5; Hos. 2. 6; Job 3. 23; Lam. 3. 7.

Ps. 119. 9. by taking h. thereto accord.

Eccl. 12. 9. preacher gave good h. and sought out

Jer. 18. 18. not give h. to any of his ways

HEEL; Hosea xii. 3. The humanity of Christ; "Thou shalt bruise his heel;" Gen. iii. 15, that is, persecute, and vex, trouble him by all means. Yet Jesus gained a glorious victory over his enemies, a victory which shall amply revenge on the serpent's head the calamities which he has introduced into this world.—Also, despiteful usage; Ps. xli. 9, referring to Judas; John xiii. 18. "Wherefore should I fear in the days of evil, when the iniquity of my heels, shall compass me about?" Ps. xlix. 5. Dr. Kennicott translates the passage, "Wherefore should I fear in the days of evil, though surrounded by the wickedness of my enemies?"

HEGAI, or HEGE, Heg'-a-i, He'-ge, meditation, word.—The keeper of king Ahasuerus's seraglio, and his chamberlain; Esther ii. 3, 8.

HEIFER. A young cow, offered in the sacrifices; Num. xix. 1—10. The heifer was to be red, the symbol of sin; it was to be free from blemish, having never borne the yoke, to be slain without the camp, before the people, its blood to be sprinkled seven times towards the entrance of the tabernacles, its body burnt, and the ashes mingled with water to be sprinkled on the people; Heb. ix. 13, 14. The red heifer was an eminent type of Jesus Christ, whose blood cleanses from all sin, and who suffered without the camp or gate; Heb. xiii. 12.

HEIR—properly denotes a person, who by right succeeds to an inheritance. In the East, heirs frequently received their portions during the life of their parents, and in royal families, those only born after their parents were raised to the throne. It is probable, therefore, that from this custom, the birth of royal heirs may have been dated from the time that their fathers ascended the throne, and not from their age.—Christ is called “the heir of all things;” Col. i. 18; Rev. i. 5; Heb. i. 2. The Father, by raising him from the dead, and exalting him to the throne of his glory in the heavens, is said to have constituted him “both Lord and Christ,” Acts ii. 36. “Lord of all,” ch. x. 36, which is equivalent to his being “heir of all things;” and it imports his supreme dominion as the Lord, Proprietor, and Disposer of all persons and things; all power and authority being given unto him both in heaven and on earth; Matt. xxviii. 18. Christ, considered in reference to his divine nature, was “before all things,” Col. i. 17, and “had glory with the Father before the world was made,” John xvii. 5. He in the beginning was with God, and was God, by whom all things were made; John i. 1. He is said also to have existed “in the form of God,” and to have “thought it no robbery to be equal with God,” Phil. ii. 6, but he emptied himself of the form or majesty of Deity; took upon him a mortal body; was made, for a little while, lower than the angels, for the sufferings of death; and to accomplish our salvation, humbled himself, even to the death of the cross; Phil. ii. 8; Heb. ii. 9, 10, 14. This is that obedience of the Saviour’s which was so acceptable in the sight of his heavenly Father; John x. 17, in which he is represented as delighting; Eph. v. 2, and as rewarding, by conferring upon his Son “dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him,” Dan. vii. 14; Heb. i. 2—4, having put all things under his feet; 1 Cor. xv. 27. He is also the dispenser of all spiritual blessings; for “it hath pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell,” Col. i. 19. And, not to enlarge farther he is “heir of the heavenly inheritance;” for it is in his right, and as joint heirs with him, that all his redeemed brethren obtain it; Luke xxii. 29; Col. iii. 24; Rom. viii. 17.

HELAH, He'-lah.—The wife of Ashur; 1 Chron. iv. 5.

HELAM, He'-lam, their army.—A place noted for a battle fought between David and the Syrians; 2 Sam. x. 17.

HELBAB, Hel'-bah.—A city in the tribe of Asher; Judges i. 31.

HELBON, Hel'-bon, milk, fatness. An ancient city of Syria, of great opulence and antiquity, and supposed to be the same with Aleppo, called by the Arabs, Alep, or Halab. It has been noted for its excellent wines; its buildings are of hewn stone, and its streets well paved with stone. It has suffered much from earthquakes. By one in 1822, its population was reduced one-half; Ezek. xxvii. 18.

HELDAI, Hel'-da-i, the world.—He furnished gold and silver, to make crowns for Joshua; Zech. vi. 10, 11. Also a captain appointed by David to do duty at the palace; 1 Chron. xxvii. 15.

HELEB, He'-leb.—The son of Baanah, one of the valiant officers of David’s army; 2 Sam. xxiii. 29.

HELED, He'-led.—One of David’s worthies; 1 Chron. xi. 30.

HELEK, He'-lek.—A descendant of Manasseh; Num. xxvi. 30.

HELEM, He'-lem, dreaming or healing.—A descendant of Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 35.

HELEPH, He'-lef, a passing over. A city in the tribe of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 33.

HELEZ, He'-lez.—One of David’s valiant men; 2 Sam. xxiii. 26.

HELLI, He'-ly, ascending, climbing up.—The father of Joseph, the Virgin Mary’s husband; Luke iii. 23.

HELIOPOLIS, He-le-op'-o-lis, the city of the sun.—It is called On in the Hebrew text; Gen. xli. 45.—A city of Egypt. It was situated on the Nile, half a day's journey from Babylon.

HELKATH, Hel'-kath, field.—A city in the tribe of Asher; Josh. xxi. 31.

HELKATH-HAZZURIM, the field of strong men.—Frontier town of Asher; 2 Sam. ii. 16.

HELL. In Hebrew Sheol, and in the Greek, Hades. These words also mean the grave, or the state of the dead. They generally mean the grand receptacle of departed souls—or the invisible world; Job xi. 8; Ps. xvi. 10; Acts ii. 27—31; Ps. cxxxix. 8; Isa. v. 14; xiv. 9; Amos ix. 2, 3; Rev. i. 18; xx. 14. The Jews believed in the existence of a place of torment after the day of judgment, called hell, and which they metaphorically styled Gehenna, from the fires which were kept constantly burning in the valley of Hinnom (Giahennem;) and "Tophet," from the tops or drums, which were there employed to drown the cries of the children who were sacrificed in the fires to Moloch. This place they considered as the emblem of hell, which they believed to be the residence of the devil and his angels, and the destined abode of the wicked.

God as a Sovereign has a just right to punish his wilfully rebellious subjects according to their deserts, even as earthly monarchs and governments erect their tribunals, and pass sentence of condemnation. Many are the representations of hell, as the place of penal infliction. It is called a "Place of torment;" Luke xvi. 28.—"everlasting fire;" Matt. xxv. 41, the fire of hell "where their worm dieth not," &c. Mark ix. 44,—the "blackness of darkness for ever." It is called the "bottomless pit;" Rev. xx. 3—6—a "prison;" 1 Pet. iii. 19.—the "second death;" Rev. xxi. 8.—the "wrath of God;" Rom. ii. 5. The punishment will consist in awful re-creation, mental agony, despair, hopelessness.

By "the gates of hell," Matt. xvi. 18, is meant the power and policy of the devil and his instruments. "The sorrows of hell, the pains of hell," that is, deadly or killing pains, such agonies and horrors as dying persons used to feel within themselves, or such sorrows as bring to the brink of the grave; Ps. xviii. 5; cxvi. 3.

HELMET. A cap made of metal, strong leather, &c. for protecting a soldier's head; 1 Sam. xvii. 5. Sometimes flaps were added to protect the neck, and cheeks, and visors to guard the face, and ornamented with embossed emblematical figures, &c. By the prophet Isaiah, salvation is represented by a helmet. Anticipating Christ the great Deliverer, he says, "He shall put on a helmet of salvation upon his head;" Isa. lix. 17. Paul speaking of Christ's second advent, thus exhorts the Thessalonians; "But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breast-plate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation;" 1 Thess. v. 8. On the crest, and other parts of the Grecian helmet were emblematical figures; and the Apostle probably refers to helmets which had on them an emblematical representation of Hope; indicating that the wearer should be safe. And again; "And take the helmet of salvation;"—Take the assurance of your deliverance from sin and guilt by Christ, and the sure hope of your everlasting happiness in heaven, which, like a helmet, will, in the day of battle, cover your head from all danger, and preserve your souls from sinking in the hour of conflict, and in the solemn article of death.

HELP-MEET. "I will make him an help-meet;" Gen. ii. 18. The words, "help meet for him" literally mean one like, or, as himself, standing opposite to or before him. This implies, that the woman was to be a perfect resemblance of the man, possessing neither inferiority nor superiority, but being in all things like and equal to himself. As man was made a social being, it was not proper he should be alone; for, to be alone, without a matrimonial companion, was not good. It was too solitary for man's social nature. Celibacy therefore is not good.

HEM, rather, fringe, Matt. ix. 20. The Jewish mantle, or upper garment, had four tufts or fringes, one at each corner, from which was suspended a tuft of threads or strings; Num. xv. 37, 38, and was worn by the Jews to distinguish them from other nations. To touch the fringe of any consecrated robe, was anciently an act of the most profound reverence.

HEMAM, He'-mam.—Descendant of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 22.

HEMAN, He'-man, trouble, tumult. The son of Joel; 1 Chr. vi. 33.—The son of Mahol, renowned for his wisdom; 1 Kings iv. 31.

HEMATH, He'-math.—The father of the house of Rechab; 1 Chron. ii. 55.—Also a place; Num. xiii. 21.

HEMDAN, Hem'-dan.—A descendant of Esau, and son of Dishon; Gen. xxxvi. 26.

HEMLOCK, a hurtful and dangerous herb; Hos. x. 4, and Amos vi. 12. "For ye have turned judgment into gall, and the fruit of righteousness into hemlock."

HEN, Hen, grace, quiet, rest.—The son of Zephaniah; Zech. vi. 14.

HEN, Mat. xxiii. 37; Luke xiii. 34. A well known fowl. Our Lord compares his saving and preserving mercy to a hen gathering and covering her brood with her wings in the time of danger. He knew that the Roman eagle was about to desolate Jerusalem, and in him they might have found mercy.

HENA, He'-nah, a troubling.—A country situated in Arabia Felix, which was conquered by the Assyrians; 2 Kings xviii. 34.

HENADAD, Hen'-a-dad.—A Levite who sealed the covenant; Neh. iii. 18.

HENOCK, He'-nok.—The son of Midian; 1 Chr. i. 3.

HEPHER, He'-ter, a digger.—The father of the Hopherites; Num. xxvi. 32, 33.—A city, Josh. xii. 17.

HEPHZI-BAH, Hef'-ze-bah, my pleasure.—The mother of Manasseh, king of Judah; 2 Kings xxi. 1. The church is so called; Isa. lxii. 4.

HERAM, He'-ram.—A city in the tribe of Naphtali.

HERB. A vegetable; Gen. i. 30; Ps. civ. 14.

HERD. A drove or flock; Gen. xlvii. 18; Matt. viii. 30. Herdsmen, he who had the care of cattle; Gen. xiii. 7, 8; Amos i. 1.

HERES, He'-rees.—A mountain in the tribe of Dan; Judges i. 35.

HERESH, He'-resh.—A Levite; 1 Chron. ix. 15.

HERESY, properly signifies fundamental error in religion; in the Scriptures it has a milder import, denoting a class, party, or sect, irrespective of the opinions they held, and is frequently thus rendered; Acts xxiv. 5, 14; xxvi. 5; 1 Cor. xi. 19; Gal. v. 20; 2 Pet. ii. 1; Tit. iii. 10. Subsequent to the Apostolic age, the term heresy gradually lost the simplicity of its original meaning, and was applied reproachfully to any opinion supposed to be contrary to what was considered the orthodox creed.

HERITAGE. A portion or possession; Ex. vi. 8; Ps. cxi. 6.—The church of Christ; Micah vii. 18; Ps. xciv. 5.—God, who is the saint's portion; Ps. xvi. 6; cxix. 57.—Children, Ps. cxxvii. 3.

HERMAS, Her'-mas, Mercury, gain.—A disciple of Christ residing in Rome; Rom. xvi. 14. He wrote a work in three books, towards the close of the first century, entitled the "Pastor," or "Shepherd," which was very highly esteemed by the early fathers. Mr. Horne observes, "It was originally written in Greek, though now extant only in a Latin version, and it contains numerous allusions to the New Testament." This work is supposed to have been written at Rome, or in the neighbourhood, about A. D. 92.

HERMES, Her'-mees, Mercury, gain.—A Christian brother at Rome, to whom Paul sent his salutation; Rom. xvi. 14.

HERMOGENES, Her-moj'-e-nees, or Her-mog'-e-nees, (g being always hard in the Greek,) begotten of Mercury.—An apostate from the faith of Christ on account of persecution; 2 Tim. i. 15.

HERMON, Her'-mon, dedicated, anathma, or destruction.—A celebrated mountain in the Holy Land, often spoken of in Scripture. It was a part of Anti-Libanus, in the northern boundary of the country beyond Jordan, and the territory which originally belonged to Og, king of Bashan. The highest summit of these mountains is in particular called Hermon. It rises 2000 feet above the level of the sea, and was also called Sirion and Shenir;

Josh. xii. 5; xiii. 5; Deut. iii. 8; iv. 48; Ps. lxxxix. 12; cxxxiii. 3. One of the hills composing this chain was sometimes called SION. This hill was of course lower than Hermon. Hence the sacred poet compares the union of Christian brethren to the dew of Hermon that descended upon the mountains of Zion (the same as Sion;) Ps. cxxxiii. 3. In this passage, the words in italic, added by the translators, materially alter the sense, and should not be read. Maunderell, when travelling on the mountain, says, "We were sufficiently instructed by experience what is meant by the dew of Hermon, our tents being as wet with it, as if it had rained all night."

HEROD, Her'-od, the glory of the skin.—Herod the Great, was the son of Antipater, the Idumean, born B. C. 71. At the age of twenty-five, his father made him governor of Galilee, and he greatly distinguished himself by the suppression of robbers. In the civil war between the party of Cæsar, and that of the republicans, he joined the party under Brutus and Cassius, and was made governor of Cælo-Syria. After their deaths, he declared for Marc Antony, and ingratiated himself into his favour, and was made tetrarch, and afterwards he became governor of Judea, and at last king of the Jews, B. C. 40.

Three years after he became a peaceable possessor of this kingdom, on the death of Antigonus, his rival. Herod married Mariamne, daughter of Alexander, son of Aristobulus; and put Hircanus to death. After the defeat of Antony at Actium, he by his submission to Augustus, kept possession of the kingdom; and being returned to Judea, put Mariamne to death, about 28 years B. C. This woman he most passionately loved; so much that he experienced the greatest grief soon after, and became frantic, often calling her, as if she were still living; he then destroyed all that had any authority among the people. In a time of pestilence he gave some proofs of humanity, by selling his plate, in order to relieve the poor. He repaired and beautified the temple 19 years B. C., but he obscured the glory of this building, by erecting a theatre and amphitheatre for exhibiting combats in honour of Augustus; who was so taken with this action, that he gave him the sovereignty of three new provinces, which prompted Herod to push his adulation to a degree of impiety, by erecting a temple to that prince. Some time after he put to death three of his own sons: on which occasion Augustus said, it were better to be Herod's hog than his son. A. M. 4000, four years before the vulgar æra, the Saviour of the world was born at Bethlehem, during the reign of Herod; Matt. ii. 1. When the tyrant was informed of this circumstance, he ordered all the males not exceeding two years old to be put to death, in the territory of Bethlehem. But the beloved of heaven escaped the snare of the fowler, and the designs of Herod were frustrated; Matt. ii. 3—14.

As the last days of Herod were marked by crimes of atrocious turpitude, so the circumstances attending his death were awful almost beyond expression. A report being one day spread that he was deceased, some young people testified their exultation by throwing down a golden eagle, which had by his order been placed over the great portal of the temple, contrary to the law and custom of the Jews. The supposed authors of this exploit, with forty of their disciples, were seized by Herod's order, and burnt alive! In the meantime his bodily complaints daily increased; a violent fever attacked him, accompanied by a strong hectic fever, which gradually consumed his vitals. His hunger became insatiable; and his bowels ulcerated, which racked him with excruciating pains. His legs swelled like a person that is dropsical—and to complete the loathsome picture, worms are said to have bred in his putrid flesh, and crawled out of his ulcerated bowels, while an insupportable itching pervaded his whole body, in which state he languished some days and then expired! Herod died at the age of seventy, in the thirty-seventh year of his being declared the king of the Jews by the Romans.

Herod 'will seek the young child to destroy him,' Matt. ii. 13. It is not surprising that a prince so violent, jealous and vindictive, and who had imbrued his paternal hands in the blood of his own family, should feel little remorse in the destruction of the children of others. It has often been the cruel policy of the East, to consolidate the foundations of their throne by the slaughter of all who had claim or power to dispute their authority. The history of Abyssinia tells of a tyrant destroying about 400 children. Sir Thomas Roe states, that a king of Pegu, in order to destroy a nephew of his own, whose claims interfered with his possession of the crown, and who was secreted by his partizans among a vast multitude of the children of the grandees, commanded the whole to be slaughtered, to the number of 4000,—a massacre much more terrible than that of Herod's, in which it is thought that not more than 50 infants fell a prey to the tyrant's jealousy.

HEROD, "arrayed in royal apparel."—Josephus says, that on the second day of the festival, Herod Agrippa put on a dress of rich and curious texture, and that when he appeared in the theatre, the beams of the rising sun were so splendidly reflected from the silver garment, that the spectators were struck with awe and admiration. He made an oration to them on the occasion, which perhaps by its eloquence and cant, intoxicated their minds, "and the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man!" The king did not reprove the blasphemy, and God struck him with grievous torments in his bowels. When too late he reproved his flatterers, and said: "Behold your god is now condemned to die." In five days he died, in the fifty-fourth year of his age.

HEROD ANTIPAS.—See Antipas.

HEROD AGRIPPA. He slew the Apostle James.—See Agrippa.

HEROD, called PHILIP. The son of Herod the Great, and Mariamne; she was the daughter of Simon the high-priest; Matt. xiv. 3; Mark vi. 17. Herod Antipas was his brother who seduced his wife.

HERODIANS, He-ro'-de-ans.—A sect among the Jews in the time of Christ; Matt. xxii. 16; Mark xii. 13; they were political partizans of Herod Antipas. They concurred in Herod's scheme of subjecting himself and his dominions to the Romans, and were therefore diametrically opposed to the Pharisees, who considered it unlawful to submit or to pay taxes to the Roman emperor. They were, however, united with the Pharisees as enemies of Christ.

HERODIAS, He-ro'-de-as. — The daughter of Aristobulus and Bernice, sister to king Agrippa, and granddaughter to Herod the Great. Her first husband was her own uncle, Herod-Philip, by whom she had Salome. She left her own husband, and lived in adulterous intercourse with Herod Antipas, a conduct which John the Baptist took every opportunity of censuring; Matt. xiv. 3; Mark vi. 17. Herod's passion blinded his mind to the wickedness of his conduct, and in his rage he first imprisoned John, and then, to gratify the malice of Herodias, he caused him to be beheaded.

HERODION, He-ro'-de-on, song of Juno.—Paul's kinsman; Rom. xvi. 11.

HERON, a tall bird, with a crest of long black feathers hanging from the hinder part of its head. The Hebrews were enjoined to abstain from eating it; Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18.

HESED, He'-sed.—An officer of Solomon; 1 Kings iv. 10.

HESHON, Hesh'-bon, invention, industry.—A celebrated city of the tribe of Reuben, beyond Jordan, twenty miles east of that river, according to Eusebius; Josh. xiii. 10, and probably made over to Gad; Josh. xxi. 39.

HESHMON, Hesh'-mon, hasty message.—A city in the tribe Judah; Josh. xv. 27.

HETH Heth, trembling, fear.—The son of Canaan, and father of the Hittites; Gen. x. 15.

HETHLON, Heth'-lon, fearful dwelling.—A city mentioned by Ezekiel, chap. xlvii. 15; xlviii. 1.

HEZEKI, Hez'-e-ky, strength.—A descendant of Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 17.

HEZEKIAH, Hez-e-ky'-ah, strong in the Lord.—He was one of the kings of Judah, the son of Ahaz and Abi; was born A. M. 3251. At the age of twenty-five, he succeeded his father in the government of the kingdom of Judah, and reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His age when he became king implies that his father was only twelve years old at the time of his birth. This is not improbable, considering how early man reaches puberty in the East. The Vatican, and the Septuagint make Hezekiah twenty-five years old when he assumed the sovereignty; 2 Chron. xxix. 1. On his accession to the throne, he abolished idolatry, and restored the worship of the true God. He cleansed and repaired the temple, which had been profaned. He summoned the people throughout the land to assemble at Jerusalem, to keep the passover together, and by that sacred ordinance renew their covenant with God; 2 Chron. xxx. 1, &c. Many accepted the invitation, and came with unfeigned humility to bow before the Lord. An immense congregation assembled; the Holy Spirit descended, a holy solemnity prevailed and continued among them for the space of fourteen days. When they separated, they were divinely wrought upon to break the images, destroy the altars, cut down the groves, &c. and established the worship of the true God.

Yet Hezekiah was afterwards severely tried. In the fourth year of his reign, Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, invaded the kingdom of Israel; he took Samaria, and carried the ten tribes into captivity. He refused to pay the tribute which the Assyrians had imposed on Ahaz; the consequence was the invasion of Sennacherib in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah's reign; See Isa. xxxi and xxxvi. Many of his princes, instead of seeking Divine direction, sought the aid of the Egyptians. This measure failed; and in a short time, the pious monarch, grieved to see his kingdom pillaged, implored peace of Sennacherib on any terms he would prescribe; and gave him three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold to withdraw. But the Assyrians, regardless alike of the sanction of their oaths and their treaties, continued the war, and prosecuted his conquests more vigorously than ever. Nothing was able to withstand his power; and of all the strong places of Judah, none remained uncaptured but Jerusalem, which was reduced to the very last extremity.

But the prophet Isaiah encouraged Hezekiah by promises of Divine interposition so as to secure victory; 2 Kings xix. 20—34. After Sennacherib had defeated the kings of Egypt and Ethiopia, he returned into Judea with immense spoil, and renewed the siege of Jerusalem. But God heard the prayers of his people, and commissioned his angel, who suddenly cut off, in one night, by incurable disease, 185,000 men.

Sennacherib returned to Nineveh, where two of his sons, weary of his tyranny and savage temper, slew him while he was worshipping in the temple of Nisroch, his god, and immediately fled into the mountains of Armenia; 2 Kings xix. 37. It was during the first year of this war that Hezekiah was seized with a dangerous illness—"he was sick unto death," owing, as the sacred historian strongly intimates, to his heart being improperly elevated on occasion of this miraculous deliverance, and not sufficiently acknowledging the hand of God in it; 2 Kings xx; Isaiah xxxviii. Isaiah was sent to bid him set his house in order, for he should die, and not live. Hezekiah had instant recourse to God by prayer and supplications for his recovery; and the prophet had scarcely proceeded out of the threshold, when the Lord commanded him to return to Hezekiah, and to say to him, Thus saith the Lord, "I have heard thy prayers, and I have seen thy tears: I have healed thee, and in three days thou shalt go up to the temple, and I will add fifteen years more to thy life: I will also protect thee from the assaults of the king of Assyria, and will defend Jerusalem from his insults." And to confirm to him the certainty of all these tokens of the divine regard, the shadow of the sun on the dial of Ahaz, at his request, went backward ten degrees. Hezekiah, after his recovery, composed an ode of thanksgiving to the God of all his mercies, which the prophet Isaiah has recorded in his writings; Isa. xxxviii. 10, 11.

How fickle is the heart of man! The king of Babylon having been informed of his sickness, and recovery, sent ambassadors to congratulate him on his recovery. Hezekiah was greatly elated by such courtesy, and, to testify his gratitude, he made a pompous display to them of all his treasures, his rich vessels, &c. Speedily Divine mercy chastised him for his folly, and restored him to a right mind; but declaring that hereafter all his treasures of which he had been so proud, should be removed to Babylon, and even his sons be made eunuchs to serve in the palace of the king of Babylon. Hezekiah bowed submissively to the will of God, and acknowledged the divine goodness towards him, in ordaining peace and truth to continue during the remainder of his reign. He accordingly passed the latter years of his life in tranquillity, and contributed greatly to the prosperity of his people and his kingdom. He died in the year of the world, 3306, leaving behind him a son, namely, Manasseh, who succeeded him in the throne; a son every way unworthy of such a father.

That Hezekiah was conquered by Sennacherib is proved in the most striking and convincing way. It is by an inscription which was found by Mr. Layard in the palace of Luxor. The inscription has been translated by Sir Henry Rawlinson. The Scripture is 2 Kings xviii. 13—16.

Now in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did Sennacherib king of Assyria come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them. And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold. And Hezekiah gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house. At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave it to the king of Assyria.

Now read the deciphered inscription from the slab at Luxor; it is written, let it be remembered, by a Heathen, 2500 years ago, which gives it rare value:—

"Because Hezekiah, king of Judah, did not submit to my yoke, forty of his strong fenced cities, and innumerable small towns which depended upon them, I took and plundered; but I left to Hezekiah, Jerusalem, his capital city, and some of the smaller towns around it. Because Hezekiah still refused to pay me homage I attacked him, and carried off the whole population which dwelt around Jerusalem, with thirty talents of gold, and eight hundred talents of silver—the accumulated wealth of the nobles of Hezekiah's court; and of their daughters and of the officers of his palace, men-slaves and women-slaves, I carried to Nineveh; and I accounted in the spoil my tribute which he refused to pay me."

Mark the astonishing coincidence. Dr. Cumming judiciously says, First of all, the historic facts as engraved on the monuments, are almost the translation into other words of the Scripture record in the Second Book of Kings. But you notice, in the Second Book of Kings, it reads—"thirty talents of gold and three hundred talents of silver," while it is also stated, that other silver was added. And, accordingly, we find the king, Sennacherib, giving the account of the sum total of the whole to be eight hundred talents of silver; that is, the three hundred talents paid, and the additional silver which Hezekiah says he paid him from the house of the Lord; an undesignated coincidence that most clearly proves the authenticity of the fact, and shows again the very stones crying out from Babylon, from Nineveh, and from Egypt.—Moses therefore is right, and his writings are truly historical.

HEZION, He'-ze-on.—A king of Syria; 1 Kings xv. 18.

HEZIR, He'-zir.—A priest; 1 Chron. xxiv. 15. Also one who sealed the covenant; Neh. x. 20.

HEZRAI, Hez'-ra-i.—A Carmelite; 2 Sam. xxiii. 35.

HEZRO, Hez'-ro, the division of song.—One of David's valiant men; 1 Chron. xi. 37.

HEZRON, Hez'-ron, dart of joy.—The third son of Reuben, father of the Hezronites; Gen. xlv. 9; Num. xxvi. 6.—The same as Esrom, son of Pharez; 1 Chr. ii. 5; Matt. i. 3.

HIDDAI, Hid'-da-i, praise, cry.—One of David's valiant men; 2 Sam. xxiii. 30.

HIDDEKEL, Hid'-de-ke'l, a sharp voice.—One of the rivers of Eden, supposed to be the Tigris, a noble river, rising in the mountains of Armenia, and issuing into the Persian Gulf. On it once stood the great cities Nineveh, Ctesiphon, and Seleucia; and at present the cities Bagdad, Mosul, Diarbekir; Gen. ii. 14; Dan. x. 4. This river parts Assyria from Mesopotamia, and meeting the Euphrates a little below Babylon, runs along with it in one common channel, until they separate again, and make the two streams of Pison and Gion, which empty themselves into the Persian Gulf.

HIDE. To conceal; 1 Sam. xx. 2; Gen. xviii. 17.—To excuse and extenuate sins; Ps. xxxii. 5; Prov. xxviii. 13.

—To pardon, absolve from sin; Ps. li. 9.—To protect and to preserve; Ps. xxvii. 5; lxxxiii. 3; Prov. xxii. 3.

HID TREASURES, Prov. ii. 4. In the East, treasures are frequently buried, to secure them from oppressors; and it is one business of sorcerers to profess to direct to the place of concealment. The people seek after them with the greatest diligence.

HIDDEN ONES, Ps. lxxxiii. 8. Has the same allusion as the above, and denotes God's care and protection of his people.

HIDE MY COMMANDMENTS, Prov. ii. 1. As a treasure is secured in the cabinet; or as the law was put within the ark.

HIDING-PLACE. "And a man shall be as a hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land;" Isa. xxxii. 2. In the East, the winds are sometimes dreadfully destructive; a covert then is valuable. Thirst too is often extremely distressing—a king once said, I will give my kingdom for one cupful of water. Rivers of water! what a luxury! The shadow of a great projecting rock is extremely refreshing in a hot country. It shelters from the rays of the sun, and has in itself a natural coolness, which it communicates to every thing about it.

So the Lord Jesus is a refuge from the storms of Divine wrath to come. He "saves his people from their sins." When they require refreshment, he opens to them rivers in the desert, and then with great joy they draw water out of the wells of salvation. When tired with the world and its vanities, they sit beneath the Rock of Ages, and find rest to their souls.

HIEL, Hy'-el, the life of God.—The person, a Bethelite, who rebuilt Jericho; 1 Kings xvi. 34, notwithstanding Joshua's curse, which was verified on himself; Josh. vi. 26.

HIERAPOLIS, Hy'-e-rap'-o-lis, the holy city.—It was a city situated in Phrygia, about two miles from the city of Colosse. It was celebrated for its hot springs. It was destroyed by an earthquake in the times of the Apostles. Its ruins indicate that it was one of the most glorious cities in the world; Col. iv. 13. Here are to be found innumerable sarcophagi, some with sculpture, others with inscriptions—sepulchres of other forms, surrounded with pillars—a colonnade of pillars, extending 150 paces, and leading to a triumphal triple arch with towers—another line of sepulchral buildings, leading to the remains of a very magnificent church, with those of two other churches, more distant. The noblest ruins of all are those of the theatre and gymnasium, some portions being perfect. There is a great quantity of beautiful sculpture.

HIGGAION, Hig'-gay'-e-on, meditation.—A musical instrument; Ps. lx. 16. Gesenius translates it instru- mental music; (that is, to join the singing, or to play alone.) Tholuck renders it meditation, pause, meaning, Let the singers meditate and reflect while the music stops.

HIGH. Applied to God; Ps. lxxviii. 35; Gen. xiv. 18; Eccl. v. 8; Isa. lvii. 15.—Applied to Christ; Acts ii. 33; Phil. ii. 9; Ps. xcix. 2; Isa. vi. 1.—Applied to the Christian profession; Phil. iii. 14.

HIGH PLACES. Natural or artificial eminences appropriated for idol worship; 1 Kings iii. 2, 4; xii. 31, 32; xiv. 23, &c. In the first ages God was worshipped in this manner, and altars were built there in honour of him. But the people becoming debased, they were appropriated to idols, and therefore such places were Divinely denounced and prohibited.—The groves were probably plantations on these high places, and surrounding the altars.

HIGH-PRIEST. He enjoyed peculiar dignities and influence. He alone could enter the Holy of Holies; the supreme administration of sacred things was confined to him; he was the final arbiter in all controversies, and afterwards presided over the Sanhedrim, and held the next rank to the reigning monarch. He retained his office for life, provided he acted according to Divine direction. At its first institution also, the high-priesthood was made hereditary in the family of Aaron; Num. iii. 10, who was the first person invested with this dignity; Lev. viii. 1; Heb. v. 4, 5. From Aaron it descended to Eleazar, his eldest son, from whom it passed in long succession to Eli; from him, on account of the wickedness of his sons the dignity subsequently devolved on the descendants of Ithamar the second son of Aaron; 1 Sam. ii. 35, 36. But in the reign of Solomon, it returned again into the family of Eleazar by Zadok; 1 Kings ii. 35, in which it remained till the Babylonian captivity. During this period the high-priest was elected by the other priests, or by an assembly partly consisting of priests.

The Lord Jesus is the great High-priest of the church. His priesthood is superior to that of Aaron and of his successors. Aaron, the type of Christ, was not actually an high-priest, nor could he take that office till he was expressly called to it of God, and consecrated according to his directions; Exod. xxviii. 1; ch. xxix; Lev. viii. The apostle says, "Even so Christ glorified not himself to be made an high-priest, but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec;" Heb. v. 4, 5, 6. Aaron was installed in the high priest's office, by the blood of the ram of consecration; Lev. viii. 22, 25. So Christ was consecrated to the office of high-priest through sufferings, and the blood of his own sacrifice; for God is said "to make the Captain of our salvation perfect, through sufferings," Heb. ii. 10. The whole gospel testifies that Christ suffered upon earth as the substitute of guilty men, bearing the punishment of their sins in his own body on the tree; Heb. ix. 28; 1 Pet. ii. 24; iii. 18, and that he suffered death on the cross, without the gate of Jerusalem, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood; Heb. xiii. 12. To this death God the Father is said to deliver him up, and not to spare him; Acts ii. 23; Rom. viii. 32. And as he voluntarily submitted to this, in obedience to his Father, for the redemption of sinners; John x. 18, so he is said to lay down his life, and to give himself for us; John x. 15; Tit. ii. 14. But this answers to the offering and killing of the victim under the law; a work which was not peculiar to the high-priest, nor even to the sons of Aaron, but was frequently done by others. See Lev. i. 3, 4, 5, 11; iii. 1, 2, 6, 7, 8, 12, 13. Nor did this complete the work of the atonement, though a necessary and essential part of it. In order to this, the priests, Aaron's sons, were to bring the blood of the animal already slain, and sprinkle it round about the altar, and offer the rest for a burnt-offering of a sweet savour unto the Lord; Lev. i. 5, 9. And on the great day of atonement, the high-priest alone was to carry the blood of the slain victim within the veil into the most holy place, and there sprinkle it on and before the mercy-seat, which is expressly said to make the atonement; Lev. xvi. 14—18. Now, we are told that that which answers to this peculiar service of the high-priest was Christ's rising from the dead, entering into heaven with his own blood, and presenting or offering it unto God in the heavenly sanctuary; Heb. ix. 11, 15, 23, 24.

HIGH-PRIEST.—'I wist not that he was high-priest,' Acts xxiii. 5. 'I did not consider him as high-priest, but an usurper, for he came to the office by bribery and corruption. "It appears that Ananias had been deprived of the office, and was succeeded by Jonathan. Subsequent to his death there was a vacancy for some time, which Ananias undertook to fill, though unauthorized. Though he had been, yet he was not then the high-priest.

HIGH THING.—'Every high thing that exalteth,' &c. This being a military figure, alludes to the high walls, turrets, &c., of a fortification, from which the besieged annoy their enemies. The proud boastings of infidels—their evil machinations are thus compared, indicating that the power of the gospel is destined ultimately to subjugate them; 2 Cor. x. 5.

HIGHWAYS.—'Go ye, therefore, into the highways,' Matt. xxii. 9. It is as common in the East for a rich man to give a feast to the poor, as it is in Europe for a nobleman to entertain men of his own degree. If he wishes to gain some temporal or spiritual blessing, he orders his head servant to prepare a feast for one or two hundred poor guests.

HILEN, Hy'-len.—A city of Judah, 1 Chr. vi. 58.

HILKIAH, Hil-ky'-ah, God is my portion.—The father of Jeremiah, Jer. i. 1.—The father of Eliakim, 2 Kings xxii. 4. See also 2 Kings xviii. 18, 26, 37.

HILLEL, Hil'-lel, praising, folly, Lucifer.—The father of Abdon, judge of Israel; Judges xii. 13.

HIN.—A liquid measure, containing one gallon and two pints, Exod. xxix. 40; xxx. 24.

HIND.—A female stag in the third year of its age; it is a beautiful creature, sure-footed and swift, Job xxxix. 1; Ps. xxix. 9.—By hind and roe, the Easterns express the gracefulness and beauty of women, Prov. v. 19; Song ii. 17; iii. 5; Hab. iii. 19; 2 Sam. xxii. 34.

HINNOM, Hin'-nom, there they are, their riches.—A valley on the south side of Jerusalem, where the idolatrous Jews burned their children alive to Moloch, Baal, and the sun. It is also called Tophet, from Toph, an instrument of great sound, which was beaten to drown the shrieks and cries of the victims; Josh. xv. 8; 2 Kings xxiii. 10; Neh. xi. 30. To expose it to execration, Josiah made it a receptacle for the refuse and filth of the city; and in it a fire was kept continually burning. Hence it became an emblem of hell, the place of eternal punishment; Isa. xxx. 33; Matt. v. 22; Mark ix. 44.

HIRAH, Hy'-rah, exaltation of life.—A Canaanite of the city of Adullam, Gen. xxxviii. 1.

HIRAM, Hy'-ram, exaltation of life, their whiteness.—King of Tyre, the son of Abibal, 2 Sam. v. 11. He was contemporary with David and Solomon, and distinguished himself by his magnificence, and the state of opulence and splendour to which he raised that city. When David was seated on the throne of Israel, and acknowledged by all the chosen tribes, Hiram sent ambassadors to him, and furnished him also with various artificers to build his palace, 2 Sam. v. 11, 12. He also supplied him with cedar from the forest of Lebanon, which lay contiguous to his dominions. And when Solomon had succeeded to the throne of his father David, Hiram sent ambassadors, to congratulate him on the event, 1 Kings v. 1—3, &c. Also when Solomon began to prepare for building the temple of the Lord, he contracted with Hiram for a supply of timber and stone, as well as labourers to hew them for the building, with all of which the king of Tyre furnished him, receiving in return from Solomon a quantity of corn and oil. These two princes cultivated a good understanding with each other during the whole of their lives. See 1 Kings ix. 10—13.

HIRAM was also the name of an eminent artificer, who made the two brazen columns, which were named Jachin and Boaz, and which were placed at the entrance of the porch of the temple. "He was a widow's son of the tribe of Naphtali, and his father was a man of Tyre," 1 Kings vii. 13—40.

HIRE, Deut. 24. 15; Is. 23. 18; Mic. 1. 7, & 3. 11; Luke 10. 7; Jam. 5. 4. Job 7. 1. an h. John 10. 12, 13.

HIRED.—"No man hath hired us," Matt. xx. 7. Morier, the traveller, says that he saw, in the east, labourers with spades, &c., in their hands, standing in the market-place, before sunrise, in order to be hired for the day, to work in the fields.

HIRELING.—A man employed to take care of sheep, to whom wages are paid. Indicates a false minister who seeks worldly gain more than the salvation of souls, John x. 12, 13.

HISS is explained by the method of calling back bees by the blast of a whistle; therefore the meaning is to call; Isa. v. 26; vii. 18. To hiss at any one is an expression of insult and contempt; Jer. xix. 8; Ezek. xxvii. 36.

HITHERTO Lord helped us, 1 Sam. 7. 12. Job 38. 11. h. shalt come but no John 16. 24. h. ye asked nothing in my 1 Cor. 3. 2. h. ye were not able to bear HITTITES, Hit'-tites, who are broken, or fear.—The descendants of Heth, one of the seven nations of Canaan, Gen. xv. 20; Deut. vii. 1—5.

HIVITES, Hy'-vites, wicked, bad, wickedness.—A people descended from Canaan, called the Avims; Gen. x. 17.

HIZKIJAH, Hiz-ky'-jah.—A captive, Neh. x. 17.

HOBAB, Ho'-bab, favoured and beloved.—The son of Jethro, and brother-in-law of Moses, Num. x. 29. There is a difficulty in ascertaining the relationship of Moses to Hobab. The word, which in Exod. iii. 1, and Num. x. 29, is rendered father-in-law, and in Gen. xix. 14, son-in-law. The meaning, therefore, is indeterminate, simply denoting relation by marriage. Besides what is related of Hobab in one place, is related of Jethro in another; Exod. xviii. 27. The probability is, that the father-in-law, Raguel, or Reuel, which means the same person, was dead, and that the person who visited Moses was his brother-in-law, called both Jethro and Hobab. He ultimately lived with Israel, Judg. iv. 11, though at first he did not comply with the invitation of Moses.

HOBAB, Ho'-bah, love, secrecy.—A place northward of Damascus, Gen. xiv. 15.

HOD, Hod.—A descendant of Asher, 1 Chron. vii. 37.

HODAIAH, Ho-da-i'-ah.—A descendant of king David, 1 Chr. iii. 24.

HODAVIAH, Hod-a-vy'-ah.—Of the tribe of Manasseh, 1 Chron. v. 24.—A Levite, Ezra ii. 40.

HODESH, Ho'-desh.—A female descendant of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 9.

HODEVAH, Ho-de'-vah.—A captain who returned from captivity, Neh. vii. 43.

HODIAH, Ho-dy'-ah.—A female descendant of Judah, 1 Chr. iv. 19.

HODIJAH, Ho-dy'-jah.—One who sealed the covenant, Neh. viii. 7.

HOPHNI, Hof'-ny, he that covers, my fist.—The son of Eli, the high-priest, 1 Sam. i. 3; ii. 22, 23.

HOGLEAH, Hog'-lah, his festival.—A daughter of Zelophehad, Num. xxvi. 33; Josh. xvii. 3.

HOHAM, Ho'-ham.—King of Hebron, Josh. x. 3.

HOLD.—A place of safety; 2 Sam. v. 7; 2 Sam. xxiii. 14; Nah. i. 7.—A prison; Acts iv. 3.—Sin, temptation, and wicked policy; 2 Cor. x. 4.—Divine direction and support; Ps. xvii. 5.

HOLINESS. Freedom from sin, conformity, and devotedness to God; Lev. xi. 44; xix. 2; Ps. iv. 3; Rom. vi. 19; xii. 1; xiii. 12; 2 Cor. vii. 1; Eph. i. 4; iv. 24; Phil. i. 27; Col. i. 10; 1 Thess. ii. 12; 1 Pet. i. 15; 2 Pet. iii. 11. Without it, none can see God; Heb. xii. 14. God is the only perfect standard of holiness, and to love him supremely, obey him and imitate him incessantly, constitute the holiness of intelligent beings. This his law requires; and this man refuses, which subjects him to the curse of the law, and destroys all fellowship with the Divine Lawgiver. To reconcile and reunite man to God was the design of the Redeemer's death. He suffered the curse in the room of transgressors, that he might bring them to God. All who believe in him are justified, purified, or made holy by the Spirit of God.

HOLON, Ho'-lon.—A city of refuge, situated in the mountains of Judah; Josh. xv. 51; xxi. 15.

HOLY,—often applied to God, to signify his infinite purity; Lev. xix. 2; xxi. 8;—frequently he is called "The Holy One of Israel," 2 Kings xix. 22; Ps. lxxi. 22; lxxviii. 41; Isa. i. 4. That God is infinitely holy is frequently stated in the Scriptures. Holiness is represented as his beauty, his grandeur, and more than forty times he is called the Holy One of Israel, or Jacob. Every thing relating to God is called holy, on account of its connection with him and conformity to him. The prophets call the Lord, The Holy One of Israel, as if the name of holy were synonymous with that of God. "They provoked the Holy One of Israel to anger," Isaiah i. 4. "They shall stay upon the Lord, the Holy One of Israel," Isaiah x. 20. And in Isaiah xxix. 19. "The poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel." The Messiah in like manner is called the Holy One; Ps. xvi. 10. "Thou wilt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." And in Luke iv. 34, "I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God." So in Luke i. 35.

"That holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Christ is called simply the "Holy One," Acts iii. 14. Holy is likewise the common epithet given to the third Person of the glorious Trinity, Holy Ghost.

Persons, places, and things are called holy, when separated to the Lord; Ex. xix. 6; Lev. xvi. 33; Num. xxxi. 6. Christians are especially called holy. The operations of the Holy Spirit upon them, and the name given them, saints, imply that they are holy, and they must follow after holiness; Acts ix. 13, 32, 41; Rom. i. 7. Holiness does not consist in knowledge, talents, nor outward ceremonies of religion, but hath its seat in the heart, and is the effect of a principle of grace implanted by the Holy Spirit; Eph. ii. 8, 10; John iii. 5; Rom. vi. 22. It is the essence of happiness, and the basis of true dignity; Prov. iii. 17; iv. 18. It will manifest itself by the propriety of our conversation, regularity of our temper, and uniformity of our lives. It is a principle progressive in its operation; Prov. iv. 18, and absolutely essential to the enjoyment of God here and hereafter; Heb. xii. 14.

HOLY DAY, the sabbath-day, or a sacred festival, as the Feast of Passover, Feast of Tabernacles, &c. Ex. xxxv. 2; Ps. xlii. 4; Isa. lviii. 13.

HOLY GHOST, more properly rendered and expressed Holy Spirit, Matt. xii. 32; Luke xii. 12. If rendered Holy Ghost, or Ghost in some passages, they would appear perfectly ridiculous: see many passages in Rom. viii. Dr. Clarke, and other Commentators prefer 'Holy Spirit.'

HOLY HANDS. "Lifting up holy hands;" 1 Tim. ii. 8. This alludes to a custom of the Jews, who, before they prayed, washed their hands, as an emblem of that purity of heart and life, which must ever be associated with prayer acceptable to God.—Lifting up of the hands is expressive of prayer, the stretched out resembling those of an expectant recipient.

HOLY PLACE,—that part of the tabernacle entered only by the high-priest, and that only once a year, on the great day of atonement; Ex. xxvi. 33; Heb. ix. 25.

HOLY SPIRIT. The third person in the Trinity. The Holy Spirit is a real and distinct person in the Godhead. (1) Personal powers of rational understanding and will are ascribed to him; 1 Cor. ii. 10, 11; xii. 11; Eph. iv. 3. —(2) He is joined with the other two divine persons, as the Object of worship and the Fountain of blessings; Matt. xxviii. 19; 2 Cor. xiii. 14; 1 John v. 7.—(3) He appeared under the emblem of a dove, and cloven tongues of fire; Matt. iii; Acts ii.—(4) Personal offices of an Intercessor belong to him; Rom. viii. 26.—(5) He is represented as performing a multitude of personal acts; as teaching, speaking, witnessing, &c. Mark xiii. 11; Acts xx. 23; Rom. viii. 15, 16; 1 Cor. vi. 19; Acts xv. 28; xvi. 6, 7, &c. &c. &c.

The Holy Spirit is a Divine Person, equal in power and glory with the Father and Son.—(1) Names proper only to the Most High God are ascribed to him; as Jehovah, Acts xxviii. 25, with Isaiah vi. 9, and Heb. iii. 7, 9. with Ex. xvii. 7; Jer. xxxi. 31, 34; Heb. x. 15, 16. God, Acts v. 3, 4. Lord, 2 Cor. iii. 17, 19. "The Lord, the Spirit."—(2) Attributes proper only to the Most High God are ascribed to him; as Omnipotence, 1 Cor. ii. 10, 11; Isa. xl. 13, 14. Omnipresence, Psalm cxxxix. 7; Eph. ii. 17, 18; Rom. viii. 26, 27. Omniscience, Luke i. 35. Eternity, Heb. ix. 14.—(3) Divine works are evidently ascribed to him; Genesis i. 2; Job xxvi. 13; Psalm xxxiii. 6; Psalm civ. 33.—(4) Worship, proper only to God, is required and ascribed to him; Isaiah vi. 3; Acts xxviii. 25; Rom. ix. 1; Rev. i. 4; 2 Cor. xiii. 14; Matt. xxviii. 19.

The agency of the Holy Spirit is extraordinary and ordinary. The former by immediate inspiration, making men prophets; the latter by his regenerating and sanctifying influences, making men saints.

This is more particularly displayed in (1) Conviction of sin, John xvi. 8, 9. (2) Conversion, 1 Cor. xii; Eph. i. 17, 18; 1 Cor. ii. 10, 12; John iii.

5, 6. (3) Sanctification, 2 Thes. ii. 13; 1 Cor. vi. 11; Rom. xv. 16. (4) Consolation, John xiv. 16, 26. (5) Direction, John xiv. 17; Rom. viii. 14; (6) Confirmation, Rom. viii. 16, 26; 1 John ii. 24; Eph. i. 13, 14.

HONEY was produced in great quantities in the land of Palestine, and was an article of exportation; Ezek. xxvii. 17. It was often called "a land flowing with milk and honey." Besides the bees raised in hives, multitudes were wild and laid up their stores in hollow trees and fissures of rocks. Matt. iii. 4; Deut. xxxii. 13. CAMPBELL, in his Travels in Africa, says, "the bees have a habit of plastering their honey on the surface of rocks in cliffs; which, for its protection, they cover with a layer of dark-coloured wax, not easily distinguished from the rock itself. By making an incision in this outer coat, and applying his mouth, a person would extract plenty." Deut. xxxii. 13. The ancients used honey, as we do sugar, and prized it highly; hence it is an image of pleasure; Ps. cxix. 103; Song iv. 11, &c.

Honey ran upon the ground in the forest in which Jonathan dipped the end of his staff, and ate of it; 1 Sam. xiv. 25, 26, 27. John the Baptist fed on wild honey; Matt. iii. 4.

A sweet syrup procured from ripe dates, seems to have borne this name. The word rendered "honey," in 2 Chr. xxxi. 5, properly signifies dates. Josephus mentions palm honey. Bochart, Celsius, and Geddes, consider the honey (mentioned Gen. xliii. 11) to be of this sort.

HONEY.—Symbolical of whatever gives exquisite pleasure, particularly divine truth and eloquence; Ps. xix. 10; lxxxix. 16; Songs iv. 11; Isa. vii. 15.

HOODS, Isa. iii. 23. A kind of head dress still in use among the Arabian females. It consists of a large handkerchief or shawl, which after covering the head falls some way down the back, the corners being so brought round as to cover the bosom, and sometimes the lower part of the face.

HOOF. Spoken of horses; Judg. v. 22.—Of a bullock; Ps. lxxix. 31.

By chewing the cud, and parting the hoof, the clean beast was discerned from the unclean; Deut. xiv. 6—8.

HOOFS, brass,—a metaphor, expressive of strength; taken from the manner of threshing corn, which was by the treading of oxen, whose hoofs were shod with iron or brass; Micah iv. 13.

HOOF, 'not a hoof be left behind,' Ex. x. 26. An Eastern Proverb, similar to a saying amongst the Arabians, first used about horses, and afterwards transferred to other things—present money even to a hoof, that is, they would not part with a horse, or any other commodity, till the buyer had laid down the price of it to a farthing.

HOOK 'into his nose,' Job xli. 2. Camels, buffaloes, are thus managed in the East. The people govern them by a bridle fastened to a ring running through the nostrils; 2 Kings xix. 28; Isa. xxxvii. 29; Ez. xxix. 4.

HOOK, Ex. 26. 32; Ezek. 29. 4, & 38. 4. Is. 2. 4 pruning h. 18. 5; Mic. 4. 3.

HOPE. The expectation of future good. It is the fruit of faith, and is inseparably connected with it; for "Faith is the substance of things hoped for;" Heb. xi. 1. The Christian's hope of happiness and glory in heaven is founded on the merits, the blood, the grace, the promises, the Spirit of Christ, and the unchangeable truth and Almighty power of God. Divine hope is distinguished from carnal presumption, by its inseparable effect, a cleansing efficacy by the aid of the Holy Spirit; 1 John iii. 3. The hope of a Christian is said to have for its basis the word of him who cannot lie;—"Whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope;" Rom. xv. 4. It is founded upon the oath of God. See Heb. vi. 16, 19.

Jesus Christ is said to be "our hope;" 1 Tim. i. 1. He dwells in the heart as "the hope of glory;" Col. i. 27; Heb. xii. 2. He is called "the hope of Israel;" Acts xxviii. 20. The Lord is called "the hope of his people;" Jer. xiv. 8.

Hope, which produces sacred joy, is, (1) a divine hope; it has for its object the enjoyment of God, and it draws supplies of strength from that Holy Spirit, which discovers to believers the greatness and stability of gospel promises; Eph. i. 17, 18. (2) It gives honour to the faithfulness and power of God. Abraham against all human probability, believing "in hope, staggered not at the promise; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God," Rom. iv, 18, 21. "This hope maketh not ashamed," Rom. v. 1, 5. (3) This hope fills the soul with holy joy; "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ," saith Peter, "who hath begotten us again to a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Wherein ye greatly rejoice;" 1 Pet. i. 3—6. And it was, on this account that the apostle Paul prayed, with so much ardour, for an increase of hope among believers; "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost," Rom. xv. 13. Supported by this sweet persuasion, "we," as the children of God, "wait for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." For, in this respect, "we are saved by hope," Rom. viii. 18—24.—(4) Hope purifies. "And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure." Whosoever is born of God, or regenerated by a true faith and lively hope, "doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God," 1 John iii. 2, 3, 9. "Who is he that overcometh the world," but the man who believes with that faith which affords him a lively representation of things hoped for? Compare 1 John v. 5, with Hebrews xi. 1. (5) This hope produces charity in the soul; Col. i. 3, 5. "We give thanks to God, praying always for you, since we heard of the love which ye have to all the saints; for the hope which is laid up for you in heaven."

HOPHNI, Hof'-ny, a little fist;
And PHINEHAS, bold countenance.—
The sons of Eli, the high-priest, whose wickedness caused the Lord to reject the house of Eli from serving him any more; 1 Sam. ii. Both were slain in a battle with the Philistines, and the ark of the covenant taken, at which news old Eli fell backwards and broke his neck; 1 Sam. iv. 10, 11.

HOR, Hor, who conceives, shows.—
A mountain in Arabia Petrea, on the borders of Edom, and subsequently included in the territories of Idumcea.
The mountain of Hor was visited by Burkhardt, from whose account it appears to form a conspicuous object in the chain of the Djebel Shera, or Mount Seir, rising abruptly from the valley of El Araba, or Desert of Zin, about fifty miles to the north of Ezion-geber, and ninety miles to the south-east of Jerusalem. Mount Hor received its name from the progenitor of the Horites who dwelt in the surrounding neighbourhood. The Israelites in their progress through the wilderness, encamped in the vicinity of Mount Hor, upon which Aaron died and was buried, in the fortieth year after the departure from Egypt.
A building is shown on Mount Hor, reputed to be the tomb of Aaron. It consists of a small white building, crowned by a cupola; within which is a descent of several steps into a chamber hewn out of the rock. (Gen. xiv.
6; xxxvi. 20; Deut. xxxii. 50; Num.
xx. 26; xxvii. 13.)

HORAM, Ho'-ram.—King of Gezar; Josh. x. 33.

HOREB, Ho'-reb, desert, dryness.
A mountain in Arabia Petrea, the summit of Mount Sinai being its western peak; Ex. iii. 1. Sinai lies east:

Horeb west: so that when the sun rises, the latter is covered with the shadow of Sinai. At Horeb God appeared to Moses in the burning bush; Ex. iii. 1, 2, 3. At the foot of this mountain Moses struck the rock, and drew water from it; Ex. xvii. 6. Elijah retired to this place to avoid the persecution of Jezebel; 1 Kings xix. 8. It is said frequently, that God gave the law at Horeb, though other places expressly named Sinai; because Horeb and Sinai in some sort form but one mountain.

HOREM, Ho'-rem. — A city of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 38.

HOR-HAGIDGAD, Hor'-ha-gid'-gad, hill of felicity. — The twenty-fifth encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness; Num. xxxiii. 32.

HORI, Ho'-ry. — The son of Lotan, a descendant of Seir; Gen. xxxvi. 22.

HORIMS, Ho'-rims. — An ancient people who dwelt in the mountains of Seir, beyond Jordan; Gen. xxxvi. 22.

HORMAH, Hor'-mah, devoted to God. — The name of a city which was called Zephath, before the Hebrews changed its name; Judges i. 17; Num. xxi. 3.

HORN. The chief defence and greatest strength of some cattle are in their horns. — The horn is a hollow silver ornament, which was worn in the front part of the head, as expressive of dignity, power, dominion, and happiness, and was the emblem of strength, Rev. v. 6. — Of dignity and power; 1 Sam. ii. 1, 10; Job xvi. 15; Ps. cxxxii. 17. — Powerful kingdoms are so styled in prophecy; Zech. i. 18, &c. It is thus that Daniel represents the power of the Persians, of the Greeks, of Syria, and of Egypt. He represents Darius and Alexander like a goat and a ram running violently at each other with their horns; Daniel viii. 3, 5, 6. Emblematic of Divine protection; Ps. xviii. 2; Amos iii. 14; Luke i. 69.

There is a peculiar use of the word "horn" in various parts of Scripture; — "Mine horn is exalted in the Lord;" 1 Sam. ii. 1. "God shall exalt the horn of his anointed," ver. 10. "He hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;" Luke i. 69. Probably there is an allusion to the hollow silver horns which were worn by females, warriors, and others as ornaments and indications of joy and triumph, when erect; but of sorrow, mourning, &c., when worn low. The part next the head was four or five inches in diameter, and rose obliquely from the head to a point. They are still used by the Druses of Mount Lebanon, the Abyssinians, &c.

HORNS, 'bind the sacrifice to the horns of the altar,' Psalm cxviii. 27; Also 1 Kings i. 50. There were four horns, one at each corner of the altars of burnt-offering and of incense.

The Jews, like the heathens, allowed the altar to be a place of refuge. The horns were probably useful to tie up the victim, and to keep the sacrifice from falling off. It may be mentioned, that the altars of Greece and Rome had horns, to which animals were fastened, and to which those who fled thither for protection used to cling. This latter circumstance illustrates the conduct of Joab, who "fled unto the tabernacle of the Lord, and caught hold of the horns of the altar," when he feared the wrath of king Solomon, 1 Kings ii. 28, 29.

HORNETS, a species of very large wasps, thought by some to be the Zimb or dog fly of Abyssinia. Dr. Clarke says "a few thousands of them were sufficient to put a large army to confusion and route," Ex.

xxiii. 28; Two kings seem to have been expelled by them; Josh. xxiv. 12. But some explain this metaphorically, and suppose that hornets signify the same as the terrors of the Almighty. Ancient authors, however, attest that whole tribes or nations have been driven out of a country by such insects.

HORONAIM, Hor-o-nay'-im, anger, raging.—A town of Moab, Isa. xv. 5.

HORONITE, Ho'-ron-ite.—An inhabitant of Horon, a city of Arabia, Neh. ii. 10.

HORRIBLE, dreadful, hateful, Ps. 11. 6; Jer. 5. 30, & 18. 13, & 23. 14; Hos. 6. 10; Jer. 2. 12; Ezek. 32. 10.

HORROR, Gen. 15. 12; Job. 18. 20; Ps. 55. 5, & 119. 53; Ezek. 7. 18.

HORSE.—One of the noblest and most useful animals of the creation. Its use in war was prohibited by Moses, and the kings of Israel were warned against keeping many horses, lest they should glory in their own strength, and forget God. Egypt was early famous for its horses, and they were one of its chief articles of commerce. Under the image of this animal the sun was worshipped; Ex. xv. 1; Deut. xvii. 16; Hos. xiv. 3; 1 Kings ii. 28, 29; 2 Kings xxiii. 11.

HORSE. “A whip for the horse, and a bridle for the ass;” Prov. xxvi. 3. According to our notions, we should rather say, a bridle for the horse and a whip for the ass: but it should be considered that the Eastern asses, particularly those of the Arabian breed, are much more beautiful, and better goers than ours, and so, no doubt, they were anciently in Palestine; and, being active and well broken, would need only a bridle to guide them: whereas their horses, being scarce, and often caught wild, and badly broken, would be less manageable, and frequently require the correction of the whip. That the ass, however, was driven by a rod, is apparent from Ecclesiasticus xxxiii. 24. “Fodder, a wand, and burdens are for the ass; and bread, correction, and work, for a servant.”

HORSE—Emblem of conquest, the work of its rider, Joel ii. 4; Hab. i. 8; Jer. iv. 13.

HORSE, White—Emblem of great conquest; Rev. vi. 2. Red,—of bloody war. Black,—of disease and pestilence. Pale,—of famine and misery; Rev. vi. 2—8; Zech. vi. 2.

HORSES. “And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn; the king's merchant received the linen yarn at a price, &c.” 1 Kings x. 28, 29. This passage has been difficult of interpretation. Mr. Charles Taylor discards the linen yarn, and restricts the passage to horses;—“And Solomon had horses, brought out of Egypt, even (literally, drawings out, prolongations,) strings, that is, of horses, and the king's mother received the strings, that is, of horses—in commutation, exchange, barter,” &c. 2 Chron. i. 16.

HORSE and rider thrown, Ex. 15. 21.

Ps. 32. 9. be not as h. or mule

33. 17. h. is a vain thing for safety

147. 10. Lord delights not in strength of h.

Prov. 21. 31. h. is prepared for day of battle

Ecc. 10. 7. I have seen servants on h.

Jer. 8. 6. as h. rusheth into battle

12. 5. how canst thou contend with h.

Hos. 14. 3. we will not ride on h.

Zech. 1. 8. h. red, white, black, 6. 2, 3, 6; Rev. 6. 2, 4, 5, 8, & 9. 17.

HORSE-HOOFS.—“Then were the horse-hoofs broken by means of the prancings, the prancings of the mighty ones”—better translated the prancings of their strong steeds. Anciently horses were not shod; nor are they at the present day, in some parts of the East.

HOSANNAH, Ho-zan'-nah, save, I beseech thee—A form of benediction, or an ascription of praise, Matt. xxi. 9, 15. Persons who applied to the king for help, or redress of grievances, used the word Hosannah, or Hoshiah na, save now, we beseech thee; redress our grievances, &c. It was a customary form of acclamation at the Feast of Tabernacles. The people carried palms, myrtles, &c., in their hands, and sung the 25th and 26th verses of Psalms cxviii., which commence with the word Hosannah.

HOSEA, Ho-zee'-a, a Saviour.—The son of Beeri, the first of the minor prophets. He is generally supposed to have been a native and inhabitant of the kingdom of Israel, and prophesied to the Jews from 790 to 724 years B. C. He prophesied sixty years. His prophecies relate to the ten tribes, who were then fallen from the true worship of God into idolatry and ruin.

HOSHAI AH, Ho-sha-i'-ah.—A person mentioned Neh. xii. 32.—Also the father of Jezaniah; Jer. xlii. 1.—The father of Azariah; Jer. xliii. 2.

HOSHEA, Ho-she'-a, a Saviour.—The last of the kings of Israel; he was the son of Elah, and conspired against Pekah, son of Remaliah, whom he assassinated, and usurped the crown; 2 Kings xv. 30; xvii. 1—6, &c.

HOSHEA.—"And Hoshea the son of Elah, made a conspiracy against Pekah.....and slew him, and reigned in his stead, in the twentieth year of Jotham.....;" 2 Kings xv. 30. The twentieth year of Jotham was certainly the fourth of Ahaz. But it is said, (chapter xvii. 1.) that in the twelfth year of Ahaz, Hoshea began to reign. How is this difficulty to be removed? The answer is, that the beginning of Hoshea's reign may be considered in a double respect. From the fourth of Ahaz to the twelfth, he reigned as sovereign; whereas, after the twelfth of Ahaz he was subject to the king of Assyria, and paid him tribute. See ch. xviii. 10, 11.

HOSPITALITY.—The practice of kindly entertaining strangers. It is explicitly commanded in Scripture, and enjoined by example.

The obligations to this duty arise from the fitness and reasonableness of it; it brings its own reward, Acts xx. 35. It is expressly commanded by God, Lev. xxv. 35, 38; Luke xvi. 19; xiv. 13, 14; Rom. xii. 13; Heb. xiii. 1, 2; 1 Pet. iv. 9. We have many striking examples of hospitality on divine record: Abraham, Gen. xviii. 1, 8. Lot, Gen. xix. 1, 3. Job xxxi. 17, 22. Shunamite, 2 Kings iv. 8, 10. The hospitable man mentioned in Judges xix. 16, 21. David, 2 Sam.

vi. 19. Obadiah, 1 Kings xviii. 4. Nehemiah, Neh. v. 17, 18. Martha, Luke x. 38. Mary, Matt. xxvi. 6, 13. The primitive Christians, Acts ii. 45, 46. Priscilla and Aquila, Acts xviii. 26. Lydia, Acts xvi. 15, &c., &c. Lastly, what should have a powerful effect on our minds, is the consideration of the Divine hospitality.

HOST.—One who lodges and entertains guests, Luke x. 35; Rom. xvi. 23.

HOSTAGES.—Persons given to another as a pledge for the performance of certain conditions, 2 Kings xiv. 14; 2 Chron. xxv. 24.

HOT. Spoken of an oven, Ezek. 24. 11; Hos. 7. 7. The heart, Deut. 19. 6. The displeasure of God, Deut. 9. 9; Ps. 6. 1, & 38. 1, & 39. 3; Prov. 6. 23; 1 Tim. 4. 2; Rev. 3. 15.

HOTHAM, Ho'-tham.—A descendant of Asher, 1 Chron. vii. 32.

HOTHAN, Ho'-than.—The father of two of David's worthies; 1 Chron. xi. 44.

HOTHIR, Ho'-thir.—A singer in the Jewish temple; 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

HOUGH.—To hamstring, or to disable an animal by severing the great tendon on the back of the hind leg; Josh. xi. 6—9. "And David houghed all the chariot horses;" 2 Sam. viii. 4. If he hamstrung them, it was unreasonable and inhuman. But the text does not mean it. The original may read thus:—"And David disjointed all the chariots, except a hundred chariots which he reserved for himself. This destruction of chariots was a matter of sound policy, and strict piety. God had censured those who trusted in chariots. Piety therefore actuated him to destroy them. He however kept one hundred; probably as a sort of baggage or forage waggons.

HOUR.—(1) The twenty-fourth part of a natural day, being the common method of measuring time. According to the New Testament, the Jews divided their day into twelve equal parts, after the manner of the Greeks and Romans, Matt. xx. 3, 5, 6; John xi. 9, which of course varied in length according to the different seasons. When the sun rose at the time we call six o'clock, their third hour agreed with our ninth, their sixth with our noon, and their ninth with our three o'clock. Their night was divided in the same manner. (2) Hour signifies any fixed season or opportunity; hence we read of the hour of temptation, the hour of judgment, of Christ's death or second coming, of the power of Satan and his agents against Christ, &c.; Rev. iii. 10; Luke xxii. 53.

HOUR, Dan. 3. 6, 15, & 4. 33.

10. I will keep thee from the h. of temptation

17. 12. power as kings one h. with

HOUSE.—It sometimes means, (1) Family, as in Matt. x. 12; xii. 25; John iv. 53.—(2) Church of God, Isa. ii. 2; 1 Tim. iii. 15; Heb. iii. 6.—(3) Human body, 2 Cor. v. 1.—(4) The grave, Job xxx. 23; iv. 19.

HOUSES.—The houses in Canaan and other Eastern countries are built in the form of a hollow square. The rooms open into the court in the centre, where some have fountains of water playing. The roof is flat; and when the sun is not hot, it is a place of agreeable retirement. Peter had his vision here; Acts x. 9. An awning is frequently extended over the open space in the centre, to exclude the sun. This was lifted away and the low battlement of tiles "broken up," by the friends of the man sick of the palsy, whom they had brought across the roofs of the neighbouring houses, so that they could lower him down before Christ. Mark ii. 3; Luke v. 19. When the destruction of Jerusalem came, the disciples of Jesus were to escape from the roofs, if they should be there, without going down into the house. This in our houses would be impossible; but there they could come down the stairs, and pass through the balconies which led round the inner court, and so out into the street, through the covered gateway. Mark xiii. 15.

Some houses in the East are chiefly built of mud, with a few bricks baked in the sun, which soon split and separate. It is impossible to enter one without seeing the prediction fulfilled, "He will smite the great houses with breaches, and the little houses with clefts," Amos vi. 11. In these clefts poisonous reptiles conceal themselves; "He went into the house and leaned his hand against the wall, and a serpent bit him;" Amos v. 19. Thieves frequently dig through the mud walls, or under the clay floors of houses, and entering unperceived, plunder them, while the inhabitants are asleep; "In the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the day-time; Job xxiv. 16.

HOUSE OF GOD. "How he went into the house of God, in the days of Abiathar the high-priest;" Mark ii. 26.—From 1 Sam. xxi. 2, we learn that Ahimelech, and not Abiathar, filled the office of high-priest. Dr. Owen states the difficulty arises, from a wrong translation of epi, in the days of. It should have been about, near upon, or a little before. Then it would read, "about, or a little before the time that Abiathar was made high-priest. By this construction, he remarks, the whole becomes conformable to the truth of the case, and stands clear of all objections. Abiathar, he adds, is mentioned as making, in the Scripture history, a more considerable figure than his father Ahimelech. Some commentators maintain that the father and son had two names, and that the father was also called Abiathar. For Abiathar is called the son of Ahimelech in 2 Sam. viii. 17, and in 1 Chron. xviii. 16, Abimelech, the son of Abiathar. That many Jews bore one or even two surnames, is certain.

HOUSEHOLD. A place to dwell in; Gen. xix. 3. The household, or persons dwelling in the house; Acts x. 2. Cornelius feared God "with all his house," with all his family. So in Hebrews xi. 7. "Noah prepared an ark to the saving of his house." The church of God is called his house; 1 Tim. iii. 15. "That thou mayest know how to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God;" a people in and among whom he dwelleth. And in Heb. iii. 6. "But Christ as a Son over his own house, whose house are we." Believers are set apart from profane uses, and dedicated to the service of God; among whom he manifests his gracious presence by his Spirit. The tabernacle is also called the house of God; Judges xviii. 31, as also the temple; 2 Chron. v. 14.

When the church of Christ is held up to our view, under the notion of a household, the first idea that strikes our attention is that of friendship. How sweet the harmony that prevails, or ought to prevail, in the family of which God is the Father, Christ the Elder Brother, the excellent of the earth the children, and angels the servants! The doors of this house which God hath built, and not man, are thrown open; every stranger that enters meets with a hearty welcome; yea, the servants are sent out into the highways and hedges to compel men to come in. Such is the benignity of the great Householder, and such the generosity displayed in the gracious invitations of the gospel; Luke xiv. 23.

HOUSE-TOPS.—These were flat, covered with broad stones, or a strong plastered terrace, and guarded by a low parapet wall; Deut. xxii. 8. The terrace is frequented as much as any part of the house. On this they walk, eat, sleep, and transact business; 1 Sam. ix. 25, and perform their devotions; Acts x. 9. Proclamation was generally made from the house-tops. The windows of the houses open into an inner court, and not into the street; therefore curiosity respecting any thing in the street is generally gratified by going up to the house-top, Matt. x. 27; Luke v. 19. xii. 3; xvii. 31.

HOUSE-TOP. "Let him that is on the house-top," &c. Matt. xxiv. 17. The houses in the East were flat-roofed, and had stairs on the outside, by which persons might ascend and descend without coming into the house. These flat-roofed houses formed continued terraces from one end of the city to the other, which terraces terminated at the gate. "He, therefore who is walking on the house-top, let him not come down to take anything out of his house;" but let him instantly pursue his course along the tops of the houses, and escape out of the city gate as fast as he can.

HOUSE-TOP. "They went upon the house-top, and let him down through the tiling," &c. Luke v. 19. Dr. Shaw says, "The Eastern houses are generally low, having a ground floor only, or one upper story. They are built round a paved court, into which the entrance from the street is through a gateway or passage-room to the court, sometimes at the entrance within the court. This court is now called in Arabic, el woost, or the middle of the house; literally answering to the Greek, to meson of Luke v. 19. It is customary to fix cords from the parapet walls (Deut. xxii. 8) of the flat roofs across this court, and upon them to expand a veil or covering, as a shelter from the heat. In this area probably our Saviour taught. The paralytic was brought on to the roof by making a way through the crowd to the stairs in the gateway, or by the terraces of the adjoining houses. They rolled back the veil, and let the sick man down the parapet of the roof into the area or court of the house before Jesus."

HUMBLE, HUMILITY.—To be humble, or to be clothed with humility is indispensable to the Christian character. Humility is accompanied with contentment, peace, and submission to the Divine will. The sense of the weakness of our understanding, which is the effect of humility, is a temper of soul that prepares it for faith; partly as it puts us on a serious consideration of those things which are revealed to us in the word; partly, as it stops all curious inquiries into those important things which are unsearchable; and principally as it graciously entitles to the promise; "God giveth grace to the humble," 1 Peter v. 5. This our Saviour makes a necessary qualification in all those who shall enter into his kingdom, Matt. xviii. 3. "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." And since pride arises out of ignorance, the gospel, to cause in us a lowly sense of our unworthiness, discovers the sinfulness, nakedness, and misery of the human nature, divested of its primitive righteousness. We have the example of our Saviour, in whom there is a union of all divine and human perfections, debasing himself to the form of a servant, to instruct us to be meek and lowly, Matt. xi. 29. "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly." Humility is put for an humble, dejected and low estate, Luke i. 48. "He hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden."

As creatures, our insignificance should make us humble; but as *sinner*s, we have reason to be still more so. If there be one flower in the garden, there may be a thousand noxious weeds; and if we possess any degree of goodness, yet there is enough in us to keep us humble. But if this be not sufficient, the Lord will find other means to lay us low. "Lest I should be exalted above measure," says Paul, "through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me." This was a singular kind of discipline, but such as the Lord saw necessary, and he rendered it effectual, 2 Cor. xii. 7.

xviii. 12: her guide; Prov. ii. 17: her head; Eph. v. 33. "The woman is the glory of the man;" 1 Cor. xi. 17.

Husband is applied in Scripture,
and in Homer, to persons betrothed; Matt. i. 16, 20. The husband had absolute authority over the wife, in all things not religious; Num. xxx.

6—8; and was solemnly pledged to love and treat her as a part of himself. Hence the title is figuratively given to the Lord, in his relation to his worshippers; Isa. liv. 5; Eph.

HUSKS 'that the swine did eat,' Luke xv. 16. The fruit of the carob-tree. The pods are long, somewhat sickle-shaped, and contain a sweetish pulp, and several brown seeds like beans. See Num. vi. 4; 2 Kings
iv. 44. It is still used for the feeding of swine; and is even eaten by the poorest sort of people, in Greece.

Spain, &c., for it grows in the common hedges, and is of little account. The circumstance denotes extreme misery to which this debauched youth was reduced.

HUZ, Huz.—The son of Nahor, Gen. xxii. 20, 21.

HUZZAB, Huz-zab, molten.—See Nahum ii. 7.

HYMENÆUS, Hy-men-e'-us, nuptial, marriage.—Paul's convert, who afterward apostatized; 2 Tim. ii. 17. He maintained that the resurrection is past. He is mentioned in connection with Philetus, and afterwards in connection with Alexander; 1 Tim. i. 20. Both were apostates.

HYMN.—A religious ode or song. Hilary is said to have been the first composer of metrical hymns to be sung in public worship. The book of Psalms contained the "hymns and spiritual songs" commonly sung by the Jews and early Christians. The Psalms are called in general hymns, by PHILO the Jew; and JOSEPHUS calls them "Songs and Hymns." Matt. xxvi. 30; Eph. v. 19; Col. iii. 16.

HYMN.—"Sung a hymn," Mark xiv. 26; that is, they finished the Hallel, which consisted of six ecclesiastical psalms, beginning with the 113th, and concluding with the 118th, in use at the passover.

HYPERBOLE, Hi-per'-bo-le.—A rhetorical figure which represents things much greater, or less, than they really are;—great and beautiful ones, 2 Sam. i. 23; Jer. iv. 13; Lam. iv. 19; Amos ii. 9; Hab. i. 8.

HYPOCRITE.—(1) One who dissembles, or feigns to be what he is not; Matt. 23. 13. Such persons may be detected by their neglect of the duties they enjoin on others; by their zeal for trifles, and omission of great duties; by their love of titles and precedence; and by their severe censures of others for sins which they commit themselves. (2) One who is deceived, and relies on a false hope. Job xx. 5, and xxvii. 8. Such persons find excuses for obvious neglects; they study an external rather than inward purity; they pray in affliction with great fervour, but are apt to neglect that duty in prosperity; and though keen and active in business, are dull and destitute of zeal in spiritual affairs.

HYPOCRITES.—"And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are, for they love to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men;" Matt. vi. 5. Hypocrites signify men wearing faces not their own, as the stage-players did; seeming to be what they really were not.—The practice of praying in the streets may yet be traced in different nations. "Such Turks," says Mr. Hill, "as at the common hour of prayer are on the road, or unable to attend the mosques, are still obliged to execute that duty, nor are they known to fail, however employed, but pray immediately where they chance to be." When the mosque bell rings, the Turk spreads his handkerchief on the ground, seats himself cross-legged upon it, and says his prayers, though in the open market, which having ended he leaps briskly up, and proceeds immediately on his business.

HYPOCRISY, Is. 32. 6; Matt. 23. 28; Mark 12. 15; Luke 12. 1; 1 Tim. 4. 2; Jam 3. 17; 1 Pet. 2. 1.

HYSSOP.—An herb, which grows in the East, not only in gardens, but also wild. It rises to the height of two feet, growing in bunches, and putting out many stalks from a single root. On this account it is extremely well adapted to be used as a sprinkler, as it commonly was in Jewish purifications. It has a pleasant smell, but is very bitter and pungent. When it is said that Solomon described plants

“from the cedar to the hyssop that springeth out of the wall,” (1 Kings iv. 33,) the smallest of plants seems to be intended. HASSELQUIST supposes the plant here mentioned to be a species of moss, which grows on stone walls, and is very common on the walls of Jerusalem. Professor SIBTHORPE, who also visited that part of Asia, thinks it more probably a little plant still called Hyssopo, frequently growing on the rocks of Palestine. But ISAAC BEN OMRAN, an Arabian author, says, that hyssop grows in abundance on the mountains about Jerusalem. The wall therefore may mean cliffs, or the passage may be rendered “around the walls.”

The soldiers who gave our Saviour vinegar or sour wine with a sponge, appear to have added the juice of hyssop, John xix. 29; or gall, as it is called, Matt. xxvii. 34.

IBRI, Ib'-ry.—A descendant of Levi, 1 Chron. xxiv. 27.

IBZAN, Ib'-zan.—A descendant of Judah, and the tenth judge of Israel, Judges xii. 10.

ICHABOD, Ik'-a-bod, the glory is departed, or where is the glory?—The son of Phinehas, and grandson of Eli, the high-priest. Hophni and Phinehas waged war with the Philistines, and, to secure the victory, had taken the ark of the covenant with them. The ark was taken, and the sons slain. The intelligence was fatal to the mother; the pains of travail came on; they were the pains of death. Her friends tried to cheer and rally her, saying, “Fear not; for thou hast born a son.” Her only reply was, “ICHABOD,”—the glory is departed from Israel. 1 Sam. iv. 19—21.

ICONIUM, I-co'-ne-um.—At present Cogni, or Konieh, or Konee, formerly the capital of Lycaonia, in Asia Minor, Acts xiii. 51. It now contains 80,000 inhabitants. It was said by Strabo to be well built, and situated in the richest part of the province. The visit of Paul to this place, which was greatly blessed in the conversion of multitudes, happened A. D. 45 or 46; Acts xiv. 1—8. The church thus planted, may be traced through eight succeeding centuries; but is lost sight of during the ravages of the Turks and Saracens. At present, it is a place of some consequence, and strongly fortified by walls four miles in extent. The population is estimated at seventy or eighty thousand. Though much of the town within the walls lies waste, no Jew or Christian is allowed by the Turks to live there; but such reside in the suburbs.

IDALAH, Id'-a-lah.—A city of Zebulun; Josh. xix. 15.

IDBASH, Id'-bash.—Descendant of Judah, 1 Chr. iv. 3.

IDDO, Id-do, his hand, power, witness.—The son of Levi, 1 Chr. vi. 21.

—The father of Ahinnadab, 1 Kings iv. 14.—A prophet of Judah, who seems to have been the historian of his day, and whose records and genealogies are mentioned in Scripture; 2 Chron. ix. 29; xii. 15. Josephus is of opinion that he was the prophet sent to Jeroboam at Bethel, and slain by a lion on his return; 1 Kings xiii. 2 Chron. xiii. 22.—The grandfather of Zechariah, Zech. i. 1.—A descendant of Manasseh, 1 Chron. xxvii. 21.—The chief of the Nethinims, in captivity in the mountains of Casiphia, Ezra viii. 17.

IDLENESS, Prov. 31. 27; Ecc. 10. 18; Ezek. 16. 49.

IDLE word, Matt. xii. 36. The Greek means false, wicked, slanderous, injurious word, such as false testimony against a neighbour, swearing, perjury, or false oaths.

IDOL, signifies a representation, or image of any sort, created either by art or fancy. Any object receiving human worship, in contradiction to the true God, is an idol; 1 Cor. viii. 1; 1 John v. 21. As it is the first principle of true religion, that there is one only living and true God, so Jehovah claims divine worship as due only to himself; and prohibited the worship of idols, as a crime of the first magnitude; Ex. xx. 4. The most fervent remonstrances against paying homage to idols are found in the prophets; and some such passages in Isaiah are considered to surpass in energy, argument, and elegance, anything that has been written on the subject; Isaiah xli. 12–20, and xli. 1, 2. &c.

The following idols are mentioned in Scripture:

Adram-melech, Isa. xxxvii. 38.—Anamelech, 2 Kings xvii. 31.—Ashtaroth, Judges ii. 13.—Baal, Numb xxii. 41. (in the plural Baalim, 1 Sam. vii. 4.)—Baal-berith, Jud. viii. 33.—Baal-peor, Num. xxv. 3; Deut. iv. 3.—Beelzebub, 2 Kings i. 2.—Bel, Isa. xli. 1; Jer. i. 2.—Castor and Pollux, Acts xxviii. 11.—Dagon, Judges xvi. 23.—Diana, Acts xix. 24.—Jupiter, Acts xiv. 12.—Mercury, Acts xiv. 12.—Moloch, Lev. xviii. 21.—Nebo, Isa. xv. 46.—Nergal, 2 Kings xvii. 30.—Nisroch, 2 Kings xix. 37.—Remphan, Acts vii. 43.—Rimmon, 2 Kings v. 18.—Sheshach, Jer. li. 41.—Succoth-benoth, 2 Kings xvii. 30.—Tammuz, Ezek. viii. 14.—Tartak, 2 Kings xvii. 31.—Beside which were the Teraphim, and the Golden Calves.

The Jews seem never to have had idols peculiar to themselves, but to have usually adopted those of other nations.

IDOLATRY, is either internal or external. Internal is an inordinate love of the creatures, riches, honours, and the pleasures of this life; Eph. v. 5; Col. iii. 5; Phil. iii. 19. Externally, it is paying homage to outward objects, either natural or artificial,—and this is the more common sense of the term.

Soon after the flood, men fell into idolatry. A large portion of our race have ever practised this sin,—which is dreadfully indicative of the corruption and degradation of human nature. Not only have the heavenly bodies, and many eminent benefactors of mankind, been worshipped, but animals, plants, reptiles, and figures made by human hands. To these were paid not only reverence and devotion, but the most horrid rites. The grossest indecencies, the murder of children, suicide, torture, drunkenness, and every abomination, have been considered proper acts of worship. In some countries, idolatry still retains these shocking characteristics.

The veneration which Roman Catholics pay to the Virgin Mary, Angels, and Saints; and also to crosses, images, relics, and the host (or bread) of the Lord's supper, is idolatry. This they of course deny, and consider the worship paid to God as supreme, and that which is paid to saints, &c., as subordinate.

When we consider in how many ways we may practise inward idolatry;

Phil. iii. 19; Col. iii. 5, we should carefully watch and pray against this dreadful sin. It is to be feared that great multitudes have their hearts set on some earthly object, who little think themselves idolaters.

IDUMÆA, Id-u-me'-a, red, earthy. (See Edom)—The Greek name for the land of Edom, which lay to the south of Judea, and extended from the Dead Sea to the Elanitic Gulf of the Red Sea, where were the ports Elath and Ezion-Geber. It first derived its name from Mount Scir, whose inhabitants were called Horites. But the Idumææ of the New Testament applies only to a small part adjoining Judea on the south, and including even a portion of that country, which was taken possession of by the Edomites, or Idumæans, while the land lay unoccupied, during the Babylonish captivity; Mark iii. 8.

IDUMÆA. "My sword shall be bathed in heaven, (or rush intoxicated from heaven:) behold he shall come down upon Idumæa, even upon the people of my curse, to judgment;" Isa. xxxiv. 5, &c. The land of Idumæa lay before me in barrenness and desolation; no trees grow in the valley, and no verdure on the mountain-tops; all was bare, dreary and desolate. Amid all the terrible denunciations against the land of Idumæa, her cities and the inhabitants thereof, this proud city among the rocks, doubtless for its extraordinary sins, was always marked as a subject of extraordinary vengeance. See Jer. xlix. 16. I would that the sceptic could stand as I did, among the ruins of this city, (Petra, once called Edom the capital of Idumæa,) among the rocks, and then open the Bible, and read the words of the inspired penman, written when this desolate place was one of the greatest cities in the world. I see the scoffer arrested, his cheek pale, his lip quivering, and his heart quaking with fear, as the ruined city cries out to him in a voice loud and powerful, as that of one risen from the dead; though he would not believe Moses and the prophets, he believes the handwriting of God himself, in the desolation and eternal ruin which he sees around him.—Stephen's Travels.

IJON, I'-jou, look, eye.—A city of Palestine, 1 Kings xv. 20.

IKKESH, Ik'-kesh.—An officer, 2 Sam. xxiii. 26.

ILAI, I'-lay.—One of David's worthies, 1 Chr. xi. 29.

ILLUMINATION, that is, the understanding enlightened, and the soul saved from sin, by the efficacious influence of gospel truth; Heb. x. 32.

ILLYRICUM, Il-lir'-e-kum, joy, rejoicing.—A province lying north-west of Macedon, along the eastern coast of the Adriatic Gulf; Rom. xv. 19. It is about 480 miles in length, and 120 in breadth. It has Austria and part of Hungary on the north, Servia on the east, and the Adriatic Sea and part of Macedonia on the south. Here the gospel was preached and a Christian church planted by Paul, which can be traced through eight centuries; and to this day not a few nominal Christians reside here; Rom. xv. 19. It is now called Sclavonia, or Albania.

IMAGE. A similitude, likeness, copy, or resemblance. The soul of man was made in the image of God; Gen. i. 26, 27. The mind is still endowed with wonderful powers; it was more so when first created. The soul was formed after the perfections of God the Creator. God is holy, just, wise, good, and perfect; so was the soul which he made. It was created after the image of God, and that image consisted in righteousness, true holiness, and knowledge; Eph. iv. 24; Col. iii. 10.

IMAGE of stone, or sculptured stones. An allusion no doubt to the hieroglyphic stones of the Egyptians, which being written by the priests were deified by the multitude, Lev. xxvi. 1.

IMAGE of gold, silver, brass, and iron.—The four universal monarchies, Assyrian, Persian, Macedonian, and Roman, Dan. ii. 31—45.

IMAGE of gold, 'Nebuchadnezzar made,' &c. Most probably not in human form, as the proportions clearly prove. It might have been a pillar with the god Bel fixed on the top.—A. Clarke.

IMAGE. "Express image of his person;" Heb. i. 3. The Son of God was the brightness of his Father's glory, "and the express image of his person," The character or impression of his substance. It is supposed, that these words expound the former; image expounding brightness, and person, or substance, glory. It is a metaphor taken from sealing; the die or seal leaving the full impression of its every part on the wax to which it is applied. The original terms rendered image in Col. i. 15; Heb. i. 3, are peculiarly expressive, denoting exact likeness, substantial form; and in this highest sense, Christ alone is the image of God, for in him "dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily;" Col. ii. 9; so that He who hath seen him, hath seen the Father; John xiv. 9. The perfections of Deity are manifested in him.

IMAGINATION, in scripture, is a term used to express the primary purposes and inclinations of the soul, as in Gen. vi. 5, or the corrupt reasonings of the mind; 2 Cor. x. 5. Sometimes it is put for stubbornness; Jer. iii. 17, and sometimes for projected mischief; Psalm xxxviii. 12.

IMLAH, Im'-lah, plenitude, repletion, circumcision. — The father of Micaiah, the prophet; 1 Kings xxii. 8.

IMMANUEL, Im-man'u-el, God with us.—A name given to our Lord Jesus Christ, Isaiah vii. 14. See Emmanuel.

IMMEDIATELY, Mark 4. 15; Acts 12. 23.

IMMER, Immer.—Head of a family of priests, 1 Chron. ix. 12; Ezra ii. 37.

IMMORTAL, IMMORTALITY. — Denote that which is not subject to death or dissolution. Thus God is immortal, and he alone hath immortality, or is essentially immortal; 1 Tim. i. 17, and vi. 16. The state of eternal blessedness, which Paul calls "the inheritance of the saints in light," is also denominated "immortality," because being free from sin and the curse, it will also be exempt from sickness, sorrow, pain, and corruption, Rev. xxi. 4; 1 Pet. i. 4. In the glorious morning of the resurrection, the bodies of the saints shall be raised in incorruption, and then this mortal shall put on immortality; 1 Cor. xv. 53. And this exalted state of immortality we are invited and encouraged to seek for; Rom. ii. 7, since it is a blessing clearly discovered, or brought fully to light by the gospel; 2 Tim. i. 10.

There are three principal proofs of the immortality of the soul: the first is, from its nature; and particularly from its immateriality: the second, is from its passions and sentiments, particularly from its love of existence, its horror of annihilation, and its hopes of immortality, with the secret satisfaction it has in doing right, and its uneasiness in doing wrong: thirdly, from the nature of the Supreme Being, whose justice, goodness, wisdom, and veracity, are all concerned in this point. But there is one more argument of great weight, which is not generally taken much notice of, and that is, an argument drawn from the perpetual progress of the soul to its perfections. How can it be supposed that that which is capable of such improvements, should fall into nothing, almost as soon as it is created? A brute, in a few years, arrives at a point he can never pass; and having received all the endowments he is capable of, were he to live ten thousand more, he would be the same thing that he is at present; if it were so with a human soul, all her faculties full blown, and incapable of further enlargement, it might then drop into a state of annihilation; but the soul can never, in this world, take in its full measure of knowledge and enjoyments; it has capacities which can never be fully gratified, and talents which can never be properly exerted. This world is, therefore, only to the soul a nursery for the next, and afterwards it will be transplanted into a more friendly climate, where it will be able completely to exert its noble powers, and flourish to all eternity.

IMMORTAL, invisible, 1 Tim. i. 17.

Rom. 2. 7. seek for it.

1 Cor. 15. 53. mortal put on it.

1 Tim. 6. 16. who only hath it.

2 Tim. 1. 10. brought life and it to light through the gospel.

IMMUTABILITY, unchangeableness, ascribed to God, Psalm cii. 27.—Immutability “is a perfection,” says Dr. Blair, “which perhaps, more than any other, distinguishes the divine nature from the human, gives complete energy to all its attributes, and entitles it to the highest adoration.” God is immutable in his essence, James i. 17. In his attributes, Psalm cii. 27. In his promises, Mal. iii. 6; 2 Tim. ii. 12. And in his threatenings, Matt. xxv. 41; Heb. vi. 17, 18: to Jesus Christ; Heb. xiii. 8.

IMNAH, Im'nah. — A son of Asher, 1 Chron. vii. 30.

IMPART, signifies, (1) A work of charity, Luke iii. 11. (2) A duty by office, Rom. i. 11; 1 Thess. ii. 8.

IMPENITENT, not inclined to repent of sin, Rom. ii. 5.

IMPERIOUS, naughty, proud, disdainful, Ezek. xvi. 30.

IMPLACABLE, scarcely to be reconciled, Rom. i. 31.

IMPLEAD, to charge with crimes before a judge, Acts xix. 38.

IMPORUNITY, or earnestness in prayer, the prevalence thereof; Gen. xxxii. 26; Luke xi. 8; xviii. 1.

IMPOSE. To enjoin as a duty; Ezra vii. 24; Heb. ix. 10.

IMPOSSIBLE, — ‘for those who were once enlightened, &c.’ Heb. vi. 4. “Impossible by ordinary means; yet nothing of this kind is, in its own nature, impossible with God,” Boothroyd. ‘Impossible,’ sometimes means no more than that it is extremely difficult.

IMPOSSIBLE, Matt. 17. 20, & 19. 26.

IMPOTENT ‘folk,’ John v. 3. Meaning those that were feeble, rather than those afflicted with acute disease; Acts iv. 9; xiv. 3.

IMPOVERISH, to make, or cause to be made poor; Jer. v. 17.

IMPRECATIONS, or prayers for curses, ought to be rendered in the future tense as predictions, See Psalm cix. 8; cxi. 9, and several others.

IMPUDENT, Prov. 7:13; Ezek. 2. 4, & 3. 7.

IMPUTE,—to charge, to reckon, or place to account. Crime is justly imputed to the transgressor, and debt to the debtor; but both may be imputed to one to whom they do not belong, that he may be subjected to suffer for the crime and to pay the debt; and on his account the transgressors may be then justly pardoned, and the debtor honourably discharged; Isa. liii. 6; 1 Pet. ii. 24; Rom. iv. 6, 11; 2 Cor. v. 19.

IMRI, Im'ry.—A descendant of Judah; 1 Chron. ix. 4.

INCENSE.—A compound of aromatics produced from trees, chiefly in Arabia, having, when burnt, a most fragrant smell. The Jewish priest burnt it every morning and evening; Ex. xxx. 7, 8. The incense offered in the temple was made of stacte, onycha, and galbanum; Ex. xxx. 34, with frankincense beaten small. It was not lawful to use it in any place but the temple; Luke i. 9. None but the priests were allowed to burn it, nor was any one, under pain of death, to make any incense like it. This incense was burnt twice a-day on the golden altar. Where so many victims were daily slaughtered and burnt to ashes, some such perfume was quite necessary. It seemed also beautifully emblematic of prayer; Ps. cxli. 2; Rev. viii. 3, 4.

IN Christ, Acts 24. 24; Rom. 12. 5, & 16. 7, 9, 10; 1 Cor. 32. 30, & 1. 1, & 15. 18, 22; 2 Cor. 1. 21, & 2. 14, & 3. 14, & 5. 17, 19, & 12. 2; Gal. 1. 22; Eph. 1. 1, 3, 10, 12, 20, & 2. 6, 10, 13; Phil. 1. 1, 13, & 2. 1, 6, & 3. 14; Col. 1. 2, 4.

INFANT. "There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days:

for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed;" Isa. lxx.

20. Some understand this passage literally, denoting that hereafter life shall be as long as that before the flood—that a man a hundred years old shall be considered as only a child. Others think it means that knowledge shall be so increased, that the child shall know as much as the man advanced in years does now.

Or that all Christians shall be men in INHERIT signifies to possess by right of inheritance or succession; Deut. xxi. 16. To subdue by grace, and gain to the church of Christ; Ps. lxxxii. 8; Isa. liv. 3. To come into, Luke xviii. 18; 1 Cor. vi. 9. To be led away with, Jer. xvi. 19.

INHERITANCE signifies an estate, whether come by succession or donation, Num. xxvi. 54; Prov. xiii. 22. As to Jewish inheritances, land might be mortgaged, but could not be alienated. It was secured by heritage and lineal succession. The eldest son had a double portion. Females had no territorial possession; and if a man left no sons, his daughters inherited; but they were not to marry out of that family of the tribe to which the deceased parent belonged, otherwise the possession was forfeited. If a man was childless, his land passed to distant relatives; Num. xxvii. 8—11. In the East the patrimony was often divided and given during the lifetime of the father. See the case of the Prodigal son; Luke xv. 12.

INKHORN 'by his side,' Ezek.
 ix. 2. The Easterns generally so carried them; and to this day the secretaries or writers in Turkey do so.

INN, 'there was no room for them in the Inn,' Luke ii. 7. Anciently inns were resting or baiting-places;
Gen. xliii. 27. The word means unloosening or untying; that is of beasts.
 Travellers generally rested by wells, and near good pasture ground, or they depended upon hospitality; Gen.
 xliii. 21; Ex. iv. 24; Luke ii. 7.
 At the present day these inns are called Khans, or caravansaries; they are often nothing more than bare or roofless walls, erected at the side of a fountain as a resting place for cattle; and even the best and largest, are constructed only with the view of affording shade from the sun, and protection from the dews and plunderers of the night. Beyond this, no accommodation do they afford, for man or beast,—not an article of food or clothing can be procured—not a vestige of furniture to be seen there, nor any flooring, save the bare ground.
 The principal feature is a large and open square court, along the sides of which is a range of sheds for cattle, and behind these, separated only by a thin partition, are the lodgings, or rather cells for the reception of their masters, almost always situated on the ground floor. Carne relates, that on the night that he arrived at Jerusalem, the Khan was filled with people, who were ranged as thick as they could well be crammed on the floor.
 It was the feast of Easter, and although the house was the largest and most handsome of the kind, accommodating 800 pilgrims, the rich had secured their quarters in the best apartments, while multitudes of the poor were lodged in the out-houses, the stables, and the shed, in the court.—
 It was in such an open, and perhaps roofless stable, amid a promiscuous crowd, busied with their own affairs, that Joseph and Mary, relieved the fatigues of their journey. And it was in a cave or earthen trough, from which perhaps they had to remove their own beast of burden, that Mary deposited her child; as if that couch had been designed by Heaven to be the first scene of Christ's humiliation, — the first sensible intimation that divinity, had descended to identify himself with the earth.

“Cold on his cradle the dew-drops were shining,
Low lay his head with the beasts of the stall,
While angels adored him in slumbers reclining, Maker, and Monarch, and Saviour of all!”

INSCRIPTION “to the unknown God,” Acts xvii. 23.—The streets of Athens were so encumbered with statues, that it was said to be easier, in that city, to find a god than a man.

INSPIRATION.—A divine inspiration is the imparting such a degree of divine assistance, influence, or guidance, as enabled the authors of the Scriptures to communicate religious knowledge to others, without error or mistake, whether the subject of such communications were things then immediately revealed to those who declared them, or things with which they were before acquainted. That the Scriptures were actually written by inspiration, may be inferred, (1.) from the reasonableness of the thing. They relate principally to matters, concerning which the communication of information to men is worthy of God; and the more important the information communicated, the more it is calculated to impress mankind, to preserve them from moral error, to stimulate to holiness, to guide to happiness; the more reasonable is it to expect that God should make the communication free from every admixture of risk of error. (2.) From its necessity. The subjects of Scripture render inspiration necessary: for some past facts recorded in the Bible could not possibly have been known, if God had not revealed them. Many things are there recorded as future, that is, are predicted, which, notwithstanding, came to pass, and which, therefore, were foretold under divine inspiration. Others again are far above human capacity, and could never have been discovered by men; these, therefore, must have been delivered by divine inspiration. The authoritative language of Scripture, too, argues the necessity of inspiration. They do not leave us the alternative of receiving or rejecting: they do not present us with their own thoughts, but exclaim, “Thus saith the Lord,” and on that ground demand our assent; 2 Tim. iii. 16; 2 Pet. i. 21.

ISAAC, I'-zak, laughter.—The son of Abraham and Sarah, born A. M. 2107; Gen. xviii. 10, 11; xxi. 6—8. His mother, though ninety years old, suckled him herself. He was but young when he received some bad usage from Ishmael. When Isaac was about twenty-five years of age, his father was ordered to offer him for a burnt offering. Isaac himself carried the wood for burning his body. When the knife was about to be plunged into his throat, the execution was divinely stopped, and a ram provided in his stead. When he was about forty, his father, by means of Eliezer, provided him with Rebekah the Syrian to wife. Isaac met her in the field, as she came, and lodged her in his mother's tent, who was now dead. Her two children were Esau and Jacob; of whom the first was the darling of his father, and the last of his mother; Gen. xxi., xxii., xxiii., xxiv., xxvi. He had great contention with the Philistines respecting various springs or wells of water. Weary of strife, he retired eastward of Beersheba, where God again renewed his promise and covenant with him: and Abimelech, dreading the increase of his wealth, came to make an alliance with him. When he was about the hundredth year of his age, he and Rebekah were mightily grieved with the conduct of Esau, in his marriage of two Cauaanitish women; Gen. xxvi.

When he was about one hundred and thirty-seven years of age, his sight failed him exceedingly. Supposing his death to be at hand, he desired his darling Esau to bring him some savoury venison, that he might eat and give him the tenderest blessing before his decease. Rebekah overhearing, caused Jacob to go to the fold, and bring her some flesh, of which she made savoury meat for Isaac. This she caused Jacob, whom she had dressed as like Esau as she could, to carry to his father, and pretend that he was Esau. He complied with her sinful directions how to obtain the promised blessing. His father suspected and felt him; but he constantly asserted that he was Esau. Isaac thereon blessed Jacob with a fruitful land, and dominion over all his brethren. Jacob had scarcely gone off, when Esau came with his venison, and demanded his father's blessing. Finding that Jacob had imposed on him, Isaac trembled to think how the providence of God was to work: strongly inclined to recall the blessing of Jacob, but he could not. At Esau's bitter entreaties, he blessed him in an inferior degree. Finding that Jacob's life was in danger from Esau, whom he had tricked out of his blessing, Isaac and Rebekah agreed to send him to Mesopotamia, and charged him to beware of espousing a Canaanitess. About forty-three years after, and ten years before Jacob went down into Egypt, Isaac died, and was honourably interred, by Jacob and Esau, in the cave of Machpelah. Here, too, Rebekah was buried; Gen. xxvii., xxviii., xxxv. 27—29.

ISAAC.—"Take Isaac and offer him for a burnt offering," Gen. xxii. 2. This, by infidels, has been represented as a command to commit murder in its most horrid form—and inconsistent with the holiness of God,

But this command may be vindicated by resolving it into the Divine sovereignty over the lives of his creatures. For the Supreme Lord and Giver of life has a right to take it away, and to command it to be taken away whenever and in whatsoever manner he pleases. To offer a human victim, without his express warrant, would be to commit murder; but to do so by his command, would be an act of obedience. As the Almighty has a right to command, so his perfections lead us to infer, that he will command nothing but what is worthy of himself. The design of God, however, was to prove Abraham, in order that his faith, love, and obedience might be manifest, and not in fact that he should offer up Isaac.

ISAIAH, I-zay'-ah, or I-zy'-ah, the salvation of the Lord.—He is said to have been of the royal seed; his father being understood to be that Amos who was son of Joash, and brother of Amaziah, kings of Judah. He prophesied during four reigns—in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, ver. 1. It is also supposed that his ministry extended to the reign of Manasseh, by whom it is believed that he was put to a violent death by "sawing asunder." This, however, is mere conjecture. Isaiah prophesied for about sixty years. The name of Isaiah, as Vitringa has remarked, is descriptive of his character, signifying "the salvation of Jehovah;" and no one of the prophets has foretold with such particularity the advent and death of HIM who was given for "salvation to the ends of the earth." His style is lofty and elegant: his metaphors and illustrations are noble, and suitable to the dignity of the subjects of which he treats. Collectively viewed, his poetry forms the greatest tablet both of awfully solemn, and of joyfully beautiful conceptions, ever exhibited in poetic prediction. He is far from surpassing all the Hebrew poets in individual passages; but in his fulness, force, majesty, and propriety, he comprehends more excellencies of the poetical character than any one of them. Bishop Lowth has selected the 34th and 35th chapters, as a specimen of this prophet's style, and has ably illustrated the various beauties which distinguish the simple, regular, and perfect poem contained in these chapters. But the fourteenth chapter of his prophecies affords the grandest specimen of his poetic powers, presenting one of the sublimest odes in the Bible, marked by the boldest personifications to be found in the whole range of poetry. The clear and subsequently fulfilled predictions of Isaiah place his inspiration and authority beyond all doubt. He foretold the captivities of Israel and Judah (xxxix. 6, 7, comp. 2 Kings xxiv. 13, and Dan. i. 2), and described the ruin and desolation of Babylon, Tyre, and other nations; xiii. 19—27; xiv. 22—24; xlvii. 7—15. He called Cyrus by his name, and described his conquest and conduct towards the Jews above two hundred years before his birth, chapter xlv. 28; xlv. 1—5. But his prophecies concerning the Messiah seem almost to anticipate the gospel history. Hence he has obtained the designation of "the evangelical prophet." The divine character of Christ (vii. 14; vi.; ix. 6; xxxv. 4; xl. 5, 9, 10; xlii. 6—8; lxi. 1; lxii. 11; lxiii. 1—4); his miracles (xxxv. 5, 6, &c.); his peculiar qualities and virtues (xi. 2, 3; xl. 11; xliii. 1—3; his rejection (vi. 9—12; xlix. 7; liii. 3); and sufferings for our sins (l. 6; liii. 4—11); his death, burial, (liii. 8, 9), and victory over the grave (xxv. 8; liii. 10, 12); and, lastly, his final glory (xlix. 7, 22, 23; lii. 13—15; liii. 4, 5), and the establishment, increase (ii. 2—4; ix. 7; xlii. 4; xlvi. 13), and perfection (ix. 2, 7; xi. 4—10; xvi. 5; xxix. 18—24; xxxii. 1; xl. 4, 5; xlix. 9—13; li. 3—6; lii. 6—10; lv. 1—3; lix. 16—21; lx.; lxi. 1—5; lxxv. 25) of his kingdom, are each specially pointed out, and portrayed with the most striking and discriminating characters. It is impossible to reflect on these, and on the whole chain of his illustrious prophecies, and not be sensible that they present the most incontestible evidence in support of Christianity.

According to the chronology of Usher, Isaiah began to prophesy A. M. 3244, B. C. 760; and his last predictions were delivered A. M. 3306, B. C. 698, a period of sixty-two years.

According to Vitringa, this book is twofold in its matter—1. Prophetical. 2. Historical. The former he divides into five parts:—Five prophetic discourses directed to the Jews and Ephraimites (ch. i.—xii.); eight prophetic discourses declaring the fate of Babylonians, Philistines, Moabites, Syrians, Egyptians, Tyrians, and others, (ch. xiii.—xxiv.); three discourses denouncing judgments on the disobedient Jews, and consoling the true followers of God (ch. xxv.—xxxv.); four discourses referring to the Messiah and the deliverance of the Jews from Babylon (ch. xl.—xlvi.); five discourses, pointing out the passion, crucifixion, and glory of the Messiah, ch. xlix. to the end.

The historical part begins with ch. xxxvi. and ends with ch. xxxix., and relates some of the transactions of the prophet's own time. Other analyses have been made by various writers, but the above is sufficient to answer every purpose.

ISCAH, Is'-kah, he that anoints, or covers.—A daughter of Haran, Gen. xi. 29.

ISCARIOT, Is-kar'-e-ot, a hireling.—The name of the disciple who betrayed Christ, Matt. x. 4.

ISHBAH, Ish'-bah, empty.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 17.

ISHBAK, Ish'-bak, empty, forsaken, abandoned.—A son of Abraham by Keturah, Gen. xxv. 2.

ISHBI-BENOB, Ish'-by-be'-nob, he that sits in the prophecy.—A descendant of the giants who attempted to kill David; 2 Sam. xxi. 16.

ISHBOSHETH, Ish'-bo-sheth, man of shame.—A son of king Saul, and acknowledged his successor by part of the tribes of Israel, A. M. 2949, while David reigned at Hebron over Judah. See 2 Sam. ii. 8, 9. His former name was Eshbaal. He was influenced by Abner, his kinsman, and the general of Saul's army, to go to Mahanaim and assume the government, while David reigned in Hebron. A battle afterwards took place between the army of David, under Joab, and the army of Ishbosheth, under Abner. The latter was utterly defeated. Eventually he was assassinated at noonday by two of his officers. See 2 Sam. iii. 6—39, and chapter iv.

ISHI, I'-shy.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. ii. 31. It also signifies, my husband; Hosea ii. 16.

ISHIAH, I-shy'-ah.—The grandson of Uzzi, 1 Chron. vii. 3.

ISHIJAH, I-shy'-jah.—One of the captives, Ezra x. 31.

ISHMA, Ish'-mah, who hears.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 3.

ISHMAEL, Ish'-ma-el, God who hears.—The son of Abraham by Hagar, born A. M. 2094; Gen. xvi. 15. He was the first man in the world whose name was given him before he was born; Gen. xvi. 11. Abraham regarded him with great interest and tenderness:—"O that Ishmael might live before thee!" Gen. xvii. 18. And God said..... "I will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation;" ver. 19, 20. In the wilderness of Paran, he was a skilful hunter, and with his bow and arrow, supported himself and mother. Ishmael married an Egyptian female. His family increased, and his posterity became so great, that they were very soon called a trading nation; Gen. xxxvii. 25.

The prediction that Ishmael would be "a wild man, whose hand should be against every man, and every man's hand against him," was very remarkable. The Arabs are his posterity. Loosed from all political restraint—dwelling where no other human beings could live—no fixed habitations—they are not afraid—when they make depredations on cities and towns, they retire into the desert with such precipitancy, that all pursuit is eluded—they may be said to have no lands—and yet they pitch their tents where they please—and they seize on every kind of property that comes in their way. It is further said, “his hand shall be against every man, and every man’s hand against him.” Many potentates among the Abyssinians, Persians, Egyptians, and Turks, have endeavoured to subjugate these wild Arabs; but though they have had temporary triumphs, they have never ultimately succeeded. Sesostrius, Cyrus, Pompey, and Trajan, all endeavoured to conquer Arabia, but in vain. From the beginning to the present day, they have maintained their independency; and God preserves them as a lasting monument of his providential care, and an incontestable argument of the truth of divine revelation. Had the Pentateuch no other argument to evince its divine origin, the account of Ishmael and the prophecy concerning his descendants, collated with their history and manner of life, during a period of nearly four thousand years, would be sufficient. Indeed the argument is so absolutely demonstrative, that the man who would attempt its refutation, in the sight of reason and common sense, would stand convicted of the most ridiculous presumption, and excessive folly. The country which these free descendants of Ishmael may be properly said to possess, stretches from Aleppo to the Arabian sea; and from Egypt to the Persian gulf. A tract of land not less than 1800 miles in length, by 900 miles in breadth. See Dr. A. Clarke on Gen. xvi. 12; also Bishop Newton’s Second Dissertation on the Prophecies. For Ishmael’s death, see Gen. xxv. 17, 18. — Also Ishmael, another person, the son of Nethaniah, of the royal family of Judah; 2 Kings xxv. 25. He was a murderer; Jer. xli. 2.

ISHMAELITES, Ish'-ma-el-ites. The descendants of Ishmael, who dwelt in Arabia, Gen. xxxvii. 25; Judges viii. 24.

ISHMAIAH, Ish'-ma-i'-ah.—The son of Obadiah, 1 Chron. xxvii. 19.

ISHOD, I'-shod.—A descendant of Manasseh, 1 Chr. vii. 18.

ISHPAN, Ish'-pan.—A descendant of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 22.

ISH-TOB, Ish'-tob.—A country situated at the northern extremity of the mountains of Gilead, towards Mount Libanus, 2 Sam. x. 6.

ISHUAH, Ish'-u-ah.—Asher’s second son, Gen. xlvi. 17.

ISHUAI, Ish'-u-ay.—A son of Asher, 1 Chron. vii. 30.

ISLANDS, — properly a spot of earth surrounded with sea, as Cyprus, Crete.—The name given by the Hebrews to any place separated by the sea from their country, or even a place on the sea-coast, as Asia Minor and Europe, which they named the “isles of the Gentiles,” Gen. x. 5; Isa. xlii. 4, 10; xlix. 1.

ISMACHIAH, Is-ma-ky'-ah.—A priest or Levite in the time of Hezekiah, 2 Chron. xxxi. 13.

ISMAIAH, Is-ma-i'-ah.—A friend of David, 1 Chr. xii. 4.

ISPAH, Is'-pah.—Descendant of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 16.

ISRAEL, Is'-ra-el, a prince who prevails with God.—The name of approbation which the Angel gave to Jacob at Mahanaim, after having wrestled with him all night; Gen. xxxii. 1, 2, 28—30; Hosea xii. 4.

ISRAEL. “And Israel beheld Joseph’s sons;” Gen. xlviii. 8.—This has been supposed to contradict ver. 10; “Now the eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see,” (so distinctly as before.) The meaning is not that the patriarch could not see at all, but only that he could not see plainly and distinctly the objects which were before him. This is evident from ver. 11, where he says to Joseph, “I had not thought to see thy face; and, lo, God hath showed me also thy seed.”

ISRAELITES, Is'-ra-el-ites.—The descendants or posterity of Jacob, Exod. ix. 7. Under Rehoboam, successor to Solomon, a fatal schism took place between the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and the rest of the nation; 1 Kings xii. The land was then divided into Judah, of which Jerusalem continued the metropolis; and Israel, of which Samaria was the royal residence. This division occasioned many dreadful civil wars and wholly separated the ten tribes from the true religion. At length, after having existed about 250 years, Israel was entirely destroyed; 1 Kings xviii 6, &c. and the whole country was then called Judah, or Judæa. About 130 years after the overthrow of the ten tribes, Judah was laid waste by Nebuchadnezzar, and the people carried captive to Babylon, where they continued 70 years; 2 Kings xxv. 9; Jer. xxxix. 2, and xxiv. 11, 12. Under Darius and Cyrus many of the Jews returned; and the temple was rebuilt a little more than 500 years before the birth of Christ. In course of time it became a part of the Roman empire, and was governed by kings appointed from thence.

ISRAELITES, 'multiplied as the stars of heaven for multitude,' Deut. i. 10, has been ridiculed, because to the apprehension of the objector the number of the stars is infinite. The number of stars visible to the naked eye must be considered in answering this objection, for God bade Abraham look towards heaven, Gen. xv. 5, not with a telescope, but with his naked eyes. Not more than 4000 stars can be seen by the naked eye in both the northern and southern hemispheres, but at that time the Israelites, independently of women and children, were more than 600,000. But suppose there may be 75 millions of stars visible by the aid of telescopes, yet still the divine word remains literally true. The generations from Abraham to Christ were 42, Matt. i. 17. At the second census the Hebrew fighting men amounted to 600,000, and the Israelites, never ceasing to be a distinct people, have so multiplied that, if the aggregate number of them who ever lived, could be ascertained, it would be found far to exceed the number of all the fixed stars.

ISSACHAR, Is'-sa-kar, price, reward.—The fifth son of Jacob and Leah; Gen. xxx. 14—18. Born A. M. 2257. He had four sons, Tola, Phuvah, Job, and Shimron. Jacob, when dying, thus blessed him:—

Issachar is a strong ass
Couching between two burdens,
And he saw the resting-place, that it was good;
And the land, that it was pleasant;
And became a servant unto tribute.
Gen. xlix. 14, 15.

The tribe dwelt in one of the best parts of Canaan, along the beautiful and fertile valley of Jezreel, the border of which extended as far as the Jordan; Josh. xix. 18, 22. According to the prophecy the tribe of Issachar were a laborious people, addicted to rural employments, naturally averse to war, and therefore frequently subjected to strangers, especially in the time of the Judges. Yet in the song of Deborah, Issachar is praised for the powerful assistance which they then afforded; Judges v. 15. And in 1 Chron. vii. 1—5, they are expressly said to have been "valiant men of might in all their families, and in all their generations;" that is, through every period of their history. When Tola, of this tribe, judged Israel, the land had rest twenty-three years; Judges x. 1. The general character of the tribe seems to be, that they were laborious, hardy and valiant; patient in labour, and invincible in war; bearing both these burdens with firmness and constancy whenever it was found necessary.

ISSUE signifies a passage, way, or outlet, Psalm lxviii. 20. Children or posterity, Gen. xlviii. 6. A flux or running, Lev. xii. 7. Seed, Ezek. xxiii. 20. To spring or proceed from, 2 Kings xx. 18. To flow, Ezek. xlvii. 8. To come forth hastily and violently, Josh. viii. 22. The image is applied to death and the human heart; Ps. lxxviii. 20; Prov. iv. 23.

ISUI, Is'-u-i.—The third son of Asher, Gen. xlvi. 17.

ITALY, It'-a-le.—A Latin word derived from vitulus, or vitula, a calf, or from a king called Italus. A celebrated country in the south of Europe; Acts xviii. 2. It is about six hundred miles in length; but of very unequal width: the kingdom of Naples forms the foot. Italy is bounded on the north and north-west by the Alps, which divide it from Germany; on the west it is separated from France by the river Var; it has the Mediterranean sea on the south, and the gulf of Venice on the east. Such is the fertility of the land, and so salubrious the climate, that Italy has been not inaptly denominated "the garden of Europe." It was during his abode in Rome, the capital of Italy, that Paul wrote his Epistle to the HEBREWS.

ITCH, a malignant disease of the skin in the east, Deut. xxviii. 27.

ITCHING ears, 2 Tim. 4. 3, 8.

ITHAI, Ith'-a-i.—A Benjamite, 1 Chron. xi. 31.

ITHAMAR, Ith'-a-mar, isle of palm-trees.—The fourth and youngest son of Aaron, Ex. vi. 23.

ITHIEL, Ith'-e-el, God with me, sign.—The son of Jesaiah, Neh. xi. 7.

ITHMAH, Ith'-mah.—An officer of David, 1 Chron. xi. 46.

ITHNAN, Ith'-nan.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xv. 23.

ITHRAN, Ith'-ran.—A descendant of Asher, Gen. xxxvi. 26.

ITHEREAM, Ith'-re-am, excellence of the people.—The son of David, 1 Chron. iii. 3; 2 Sam. iii. 5.

ITTAH-KAZIN, It'-tah-kay'-zin. A city of Palestine, Josh. xix. 13.

ITTAI, It'-ta-i.—The son of Ribbui, surnamed the Gittite, a native of Gibeah; 2 Sam. xv. 19.

ITURÆA, I-tu-re'-a, which is guarded, a country of mountains.—A province of Syria, beyond Jordan, east of Batanea, and south of Trachonitis, Luke iii. 1. Hauran was one of its cities, whence the province was called Hauranitis by the ancients. Philip was its tetrarch in the days of Christ. The modern name is Jedur. Supposed to owe its name to Jetur, the son of Ishmael; Gen. xxv. 15.

IVAH, I'-vah, iniquity.—A country conquered by the Assyrians, and a city of that name; 2 Kings xviii. 34.

IVORY, is the tusks of elephants, resembling horns; Ezek. xxvii. 6, 15. Some tusks are from 90 to 125 pounds weight; and one found in the isle of Sumatra in the East Indies is said to have weighed 330 pounds. The ivory of Ceylon is the best, and does not become yellow with age. In Russia, and other parts of Europe, a kind of ivory is found buried in the ground; and at Petersburg is a tusk of 180 pounds weight. But whether these be real teeth of elephants, dropped there long ago, or the remains of some huge animal whose race is now extinct, we cannot determine. Ivory was anciently very plentiful in Canaan; wardrobes were cased with it to prevent the damage of moths; Ps. xlv. 8. Solomon had a throne of it; 1 Kings x. 18, 22; Amos iii. 15; vi. 4; Rev. xviii. 12. We learn from Homer, Horace, and Virgil, that in ancient times, the palaces of kings were often cased with ivory.

IZHAR, Iz'-har.—The son of Kohath, Ex. vi. 18.

IZRAHIAH, Iz'-ra-hy'-ah.—A descendant of Issachar, 1 Chron. vii. 3.

IZRI, Iz'-ry.—A singer in the temple, 1 Chron. xxv. 11.

J

JAAKAN, Jay'-a-kan, tribulation. One whose descendants lived in Beeroth, in the wilderness, Deut. x. 16.

JAAKOBAB, Ja-ak'-o-bah. — A prince of the tribe of Simeon, 1 Chr. iv. 36.

JAALA, Ja-ay'-lah, hidden.—A Nethinim, Neh. vii. 58.

JAALAH, Ja-ay'-lah.—A person mentioned Ezra ii. 56.

JAALAM, Ja-ay'-lam, hidden, young man.—A descendant of Esau, Gen. xxxvi. 5.

JAANAI, Ja-ay'-nay.—A descendant of Gad, 1 Chron. v. 12.

JAARE-OREGIM, Ja-ar-e-or'-e-gim.—A Bethlehemite, 2 Sam. xxi. 19.

JAASSAU, Ja'-as-sau.—One of the captives, Ezra x. 37.

JAASIEL, Ja'-ay-se-el.—A descendant of Manasseh, 1 Chr. xxvii. 21.

JAAZAH, Ja-ay'-zah.—A city of the Levites.

JAAZANIAH, Ja-az-a-ny'-ah, at-tion, balances, the arms.—The son of Shaphan, 2 Kings xxv. 23.

JAAZER, Ja-ay'-zer.—A city of the Amoritcs, Num. xxi. 32.

JAAZIAH, Jay-a-zy'-ah.—A descendant of Levi, 1 Chr. xxiv. 26.

JAAZIEL, Ja-ay'-ze-el.—A porter of the temple, 1 Chr. xv. 18.

JABAL, Jay'-bal, gliding away.—A son of Lamech, Gen. iv. 20. Father of those who dwelt under tents, and of shepherds; Gen. iv. 20. The tents were probably made of the skins of animals.

JABBOK, Jab'-bok, evacuation.—A rivulet on the other side of Jordan; rising in a mountain of Gilead. It falls into the Jordan, near the sea of Tiberias. Near this brook, Jacob wrestled with the angel; Gen. xxxii. 22. Mr. Buckingham describes the bed of this river as being in a ravine, the cliffs on each side having a height of 500 feet; while the breadth from cliff to cliff is not more than 300 feet, in the bottom of which flows the Jabbok. The banks of this stream are thickly wooded with oleander and plane trees, wild olives, and wild almonds, with many flowers, the names of which are unknown in Europe; with tall and waving reeds, at least fifteen feet in height. On the eastern side, where Mr. Buckingham's party forded it, is a piece of wall, solidly built upon the inclined slope, constructed in a uniform manner, and built of small stones, which the Arabs call "Shugl beni Israel," or the work of the sons of Israel, but possess no knowledge as to its origin or use: here the river is 30 feet wide, deeper than the Jordan, and nearly as rapid. It runs in a rocky bed, its waters are clear, and have an agreeable taste.

JABESH, Jay'-besh, draught, confusion.—The name of a city in the half-tribe of Manasseh, beyond Jordan, about six miles from Pella; Jud. xxi. 8; 1 Sam. xi. 1. It is called Jabesh-Gilead from its being situated at the base of the mountains of that name. In the time of Jerome, it had been reduced to the size of a village. It was sacked by the Israelites because the people refused to join in the war against the tribe of Benjamin. The Ammonites afterwards besieged it, under king Nahash, who would only spare the inhabitants on the condition that they would have their right eyes put out. The Ammonites were timely defeated by Saul; Judges xxi. 8; 1 Sam. xxxi. 11—13.

JABEZ, Jay'-bez, sorrow, trouble.—The name of a city, 1 Chron. ii. 55.—Also, the name of a person of whom highly honourable mention is made, 1 Chron. iv. 9. He was "more honourable than his brethren"—a devout and holy man—a praying man—his beautiful prayer, and the Divine answer are recorded; 1 Chron. iv. 10.

JABIN, Jay'-bin, he who understands, or builds.—The king of Hazor, in the northern parts of Canaan.—He attempted by a formidable alliance to oppose the march of Joshua, by whom he was defeated in the battle of Meron, &c.; Josh. xi. 1—14.—The name of another king of Hazor, who oppressed the Israelites for twenty years; Judges iv. 2.—He had 900 chariots of iron, and Sisera, the general of his forces, commanded a very powerful army. But they were defeated by Deborah and Barak at the foot of Mount Tabor.

JABNEEL, Jab'-ne-el, building or understanding of God.—A town in the frontiers of Naphtali, Josh. xix. 33.—A town in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 11.

JABNEH, Jab'-neh. — A city of the tribe of Dan, on the sea-shore, near Joppa, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6. Yebna, a village about 12 miles from Joppa, probably occupies its site.

JACHAN, Jay'-kan, that strengthens.—A descendant of Gad, 1 Chron. v. 13.

JACHIN, Jay'-kin, that strengthens.—The fourth son of Simeon, Gen. xlvi. 10.—The head of a family of priests; 1 Chron. xxiv. 17.—The name of the right hand pillar in the temple; 1 Kings vii. 21.

JACINTH,—a gem of a violet and purple colour, resembling the amethyst, Rev. ix. 17; xxi. 20.

JACOB, Jay'-kob, he that supplants the heel.—The son of Isaac and Rebekah, born A. M. 2167. Gen. xxv. 26. He was the younger brother of Esau. Previous to their birth, Rebekah, their mother, was informed that her two sons would become the heads of two great nations, but that the elder should serve the younger. As Jacob and Esau rose to manhood their peculiar dispositions and characters were developed by their pursuits. Jacob was mild, gentle, and retiring; he was fond of home, and adopted a shepherd's life. Jacob manifested much selfishness and cunning, when he asked from his brother Esau, who returned from the field very hungry, his birthright for a mess of pottage. Regardless of its value, and in haste to satisfy the craving of a moment, Esau parted with that which Providence seems to have bestowed upon him in vain; Gen. xxv. 29.

The account of his deceiving his father, and supplanting Esau of his father's blessing, are narrated in Gen. xxvii. It was a scene of imposition and fraud. Providence had ordained him to the blessing which he so ardently coveted; but Providence neither appoints, nor approves of, crooked and indirect paths to the ends which it has proposed. His taking advantage of his father's blindness seems more detestable, than his attempt to carry a favourite point by taking advantage of his brother's hunger and impetuosity. The latter was but the skill and address of an open adversary; the former was the cunning and deceit of a crafty and undutiful child.

It is said that when Isaac discovered the fraud, "he trembled exceedingly." Then why did he not reverse his procedure by transferring the blessing to Esau? Instead of this, he confirmed it on Jacob. Doubtless his wishes were controlled by that Divine Power which he vainly tried to counteract,—and he spake as the Spirit gave him utterance;—"Yea, and he shall be blessed:"—"And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt have dominion, that thou shalt break thy brother's yoke from off thy neck;" Gen. xxvii. 40. This was fulfilled in the days of Jehoram, king of Judah, when "the Edomites revolted from under the dominion of Judah, and made themselves a king;" 2 Chr. xxi. 8—10.

The principal object of Rebekah and Jacob was to obtain the spiritual part of the blessing, and not the temporal. The conduct of Jacob to his brother proves this; Gen. xxxiii. 3—15. Esau possessed himself of his father's property during Jacob's long exile. Still it is undeniable that Jacob and his mother did evil that good might come. But for this they were severely punished. It excited at first the deadly enmity of Esau against Jacob; Gen. xxvii. 36, 41. He would undoubtedly have assassinated him, had not God operated upon his mind, and turned the lion to a lamb;" for "he ran to meet Jacob, and fell on his neck, and wept;" Gen. xxxiii. 4. Rebekah also suffered in the long absence of Jacob, whom she sent away for "a few days," as she thought, "until his brother's fury should turn away;" Gen. xxvii. 42—44. But she saw his face no more; for she died during his exile of twenty years, though Isaac survived; Gen. xxxv. 27.

In fleeing from Esau, Jacob went to Haran, where he had a vision of a ladder, reaching to heaven; Gen. xxviii. 11, &c. The top of the ladder reaches unto heaven, but the Lord on high is above it; it stands upon the earth, but the eye of Jehovah is at its foundation, and his almighty arm giveth it stability. The cherubim and the seraphim are not above his control and authority; a poor benighted pilgrim is not beneath his notice. However great the distance may be between heaven and earth; however inaccessible that bright abode may be to flesh and blood, to celestial spirits it is but a few steps of a ladder; before an omnipresent God, intervening space is swallowed up and lost. Then Jacob awoke, a sacred awe pervaded his mind, and he exclaimed, "How awful is this place! This is none other than the house of God; and this is the gate of heaven!" Assured of the Divine favour and protection, Jacob took the stone on which he had rested his head, and set it up as a pillar, and poured oil upon it, thus consecrating it as a monument of his gratitude, and of God's mercy towards him; he also bound himself by the most solemn engagements to avouch "the Lord to be his God," to worship him in every place; and, upon his return to Canaan, to devote the tenth part of his substance to his service; Gen. xxviii. 16—22.

This journey to the country where Laban lived was 600 miles, which he travelled alone. Arriving in the neighbourhood, he conversed with the shepherd's of Haran, who informed him of Laban, and that his daughter would soon come to the watering-place with her father's flock; see Gen. xxix. The conduct of Laban to Jacob was avaricious and cruel; but it was retributive. He who by subtlety and falsehood, stole away the blessing intended for his brother, is punished for his deceit, by finding a Leah where he expected a Rachel. He who could practise upon a father's blindness, is, in his turn practised upon by a father, employing the cover of the night to accomplish his purpose.

With great difficulty he got away from Laban, and returned to his own country. The device which he used is recorded; Gen. xxx. 37. Jacob became rich; yet his difficulties were not removed. He had many domestic trials; as, the death of Rachel, his favourite wife—the rape of his daughter Dinah—the perfidy and cruelty of her brothers, Simeon and Levi, to the Shechemites—the misconduct of Reuben—and the supposed death of Joseph, whom he most tenderly loved—these were sufficient to have brought down his grey hairs with sorrow to the grave. But God mercifully supported him. His interview with Esau—his wrestling with the angel, are recorded, Gen. xxxii.

The love of Jacob to Joseph—the hatred of his brethren—the sale of him to the Ishmaelites—his sojourn in Egypt, &c., are simply, yet graphically narrated, Gen. chap. xxxvii; xxxix.—xlvii. The history is affecting, and very instructive.

Jacob lived seventeen years in Egypt, A. M. 2298, to 2315. Falling sick, Joseph, with his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, visited him. Calling the two sons to his bed-side, he embraced and blessed them. Joseph placed them on each side of him, Ephraim on the left and Manasseh on the right hand of Jacob. But Jacob, directed by the spirit of prophecy, laid his right hand on Ephraim's head, and the left on Manasseh's, and thus crossed his hands to bless them. Joseph, thinking he was mistaken, would have changed the disposition of his hands; but Jacob answered, I know what I do, my son. Thus he gave Ephraim the preference to Manasseh. Afterwards, Jacob foretold to Joseph, that God would bring his posterity back into the land of Canaan, as was promised to their fathers; and he added, I have given thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

Some time after this, Jacob called all his sons together to give them his last prophetic blessing. He requested his sons to bury him in the cave over against Mamre, where Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah were interred. And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and he was gathered unto his people. And Joseph fell upon his father's face, and wept over him. And Joseph commanded the physicians to embalm his father—they did so—and the Egyptians mourned for him three-score and ten days. Then Joseph and his brethren, with the elders of the land of Egypt, carried him, by permission of Pharaoh, to the burying-place of his fathers, near Hebron.

JACOB. The son of Matthan, the father of Joseph, the reputed father of Christ; Matt. i. 15.

JACOB. "All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, . . . besides Jacob's sons' wives—were threescore and six; and the sons of Joseph, &c. were two souls; all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten;" Gen. xlvi. 26, 27. —There is an apparent discrepancy between the statement of Moses in this passage, and that of Stephen in Acts vii. 14, the one stating the number to be threescore and ten, and the other threescore and fifteen. Dr. Hales says,—"Moses states that all the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which issued from his loins (except his son's wives,) were 66 souls, as follows:—

Jacob's children, 11 sons, and one daughter	12
Reuben's sons	4
Simeon's sons	6
Levi's sons	3
Judah's 3 sons and 2 grandsons	6
Issachar's sons	4
Zebulun's sons	3
Gad's sons	7
Asher's 4 sons, and 1 daughter, and 2 grandsons	7
Dan's son	1
Naphthali's sons	4
Benjamin's sons	10

66

If to these 66 persons, we add Jacob, Joseph, and his two sons, born in Egypt, the amount is 70, the number stated in ver. 7. In this statement the wives of Jacob's sons, who formed part of the household, are omitted, but they amounted to 9; for Judah's and Simeon's wives were dead; Gen. xxxviii. 12; xlvi. 19, and Joseph's wife was already in Egypt. These 9 wives added to 66, give 75 souls, critically corresponding with the statement in the New Testament, that Joseph sent for his father Jacob, and all his kindred, amounting to 75 souls. The expression, all his kindred, including the wives which were Joseph's kindred not only by affinity, but also by consanguinity, being probably of the families of Esau, Ishmael, or Keturah.

JACOB'S WELL. A fountain of water about a mile and a half from Sychar, (now called Napolose.) on the road to Jerusalem. At this well Jesus Christ conversed with the woman of Samaria; John iv. 6, &c. Here she and some of the Samaritans embraced the Saviour by believing on him. "The well of Samaria," says Mr. Buckingham, "stands at the commencement of the round vale, which is thought to have been the parcel of ground bought by Jacob for a hundred pieces of money, which, like the valley west of Nablous, or Napolose, is rich and fertile." Travellers, in general, agree, from its situation, that it is the real Jacob's Well, but whether he dug it, or only drank at this well for a season, we cannot tell—perhaps both. It is now covered by an old stone vault, into which spectators are let down through a strait hole, and by removing a broad flat stone, the well is discovered, 3 yards in diameter, and 35 in depth, having five feet depth in water.

JACOB. "Jacob was a plain man dwelling in tents;" Gen. xxv. 27. At the present day the richest sheikh amongst these nomade, or wandering tribes, dwells in a tent, and he is expected to pitch it nearest to the way whence travellers are most likely to come, that he may show to them hospitality. The Arabs dwell in tents to this day.

JADA, Jay'-dah, knowing.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. ii. 32.

JADDUA, Jad-dew'-ah.—A high priest of the Jews in the time of Alexander the Great.—Also a returned captive, Neh. x. 21.

JAEEL, Jay'-el, he that ascends, a kid.—The wife of Heber, the Kenite; she slew Sisera, the Canaanitish general, Judges iv. 17.

JAEEL. "She put her hand to the nail, and her right hand to the workman's hammer, and with the hammer she smote SISERA; she smote off his head, when she had pierced through his temples;" Judges v. 26.—It ought to be translated, "She smote his head, then she struck through and pierced his temples;" for it does not appear that she smote off his head.—She is much eulogised in the triumphal ode of Deborah;—"Blessed above woman shall Jael, the wife of Heber, be." Sisera was a tyrant, and the instrument of oppression, and probably a Divine impulse came upon Jael to take away his life, that Israel might be free from a captivity which had lasted twenty years. Such a deliverance performed by a female would tend still more to humble the vanquished.

JAGUR, Jay'-gur.—A city of Judah, Josh. xv. 21.

JAH, Jah.—One of the names of God, synonymous with Jehovah, found in the composition of many Hebrew words. It signifies self-existence, and eternal duration. Also, my Lord, praise the Lord, the Lord is my king, the everlasting God.

JAHALELEL, Jay-hal'-e-lel.—A descendant of Levi.

JAHATH, Jay'-hath.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 2.—Also a Surveyor, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 12.

JHAZ, Jay'-haz, dispute, quarrel.—A city of the Reubenites beyond Jordan, near where Sihon was defeated by Moses, Num. xxi. 23.

JHAZA, Ja-hay'-zah.—See JHAZ, Josh. xiii. 18.

JHAZIAH, Ja-ha-zy'-ah.—Son of Tikvah, Ezra x. 15.

JHAZIEL, Ja-hay'-ze-el.—One who deserted Saul's party to join David, 1 Chron. xii. 4.

JHDAL, Jah'-da-i.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chr. ii. 47.

JADIEL, Jah'-de-el.—One of the posterity of Manasseh, 1 Chr. v. 24.

JHDO, Jah'-do.—A Gaddite, 1 Chr. v. 14.

JHLEEL, Jah'-le-el.—The third son of Zebulun, head of the family of Jahleelites; Gen. xlvi. 14.

JHMAI, Jah'-ma-i.—The son of Tola, 1 Chron. vii. 2.

JHZAH, Jah'-zah.—A city of Palestine, 1 Chron. vi. 78.

JHZEEL, Jah'-ze-el.—A descendant of Naphtali, Gen. xlvi. 24.

JHZERAH, Jah'-ze-rah.—A Levite, 1 Chron. ix. 12.

JAIR, Jay'-er, my light, enlightener.—Son of Segub, of the tribe of Manasseh by his mother, and of Judah on his father's side. He settled in Argob bordering on Gilead, where we find 23 villages, called Havoth-Jair, meaning "Jair's villages;" Num. xxxii. 41; Deut. iii. 14.—Also, one of the judges of Israel, a native of Gilead, and perhaps a descendant from the former. See Judges x. 3–5.—Also the son of Shimei, father of Mordecai; Esther ii. 5.

JAIRUS, Ja-i'-rus, diffuser of light.—Chief of the synagogue at Capernaum; Mark v. 22. His daughter was miraculously healed by Christ; Matt. ix. 18; Luke vii. 41.

JAKAN, Jay'-kan.—A descendant of Abraham, 1 Chron. i. 42.

JAKEH, Jay'-keh.—Father of Agar, Prov. xxx. 1.

JAKIM, Jay'-kim.—A descendant of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 19.—Also a priest, 1 Chron. xxiv. 12.

JALON, Jay'-lon.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 17.

JAMBRES, Jam'-brees, the sea with poverty.—A magician in Egypt, who withstood Moses, 2 Tim. iii. 8. It is thought that Jannes and Jambres were Pharaoh's chief magicians, whose names have been handed down by tradition. Their names are preserved in Jonathan's Chaldee Paraphrase on Exod. ix. 11. Numenius, the Pythagorean philosopher, says, they were inferior to none in magical skill, and for that reason chosen by common consent to oppose Mucus, for so heathen writers called Moses.

JAMES, James.—The same in signification as Jacob. He was one of the twelve disciples of Christ, surnamed the Greater or Elder, to distinguish him from James the Younger: was brother to John the Evangelist, and son of Zebedee and Salome, Matt. iv. 21. His mother Salome was one of the women who attended the Saviour on his travels during his public ministry, and ministered unto him; Matt. xxvii. 56. We find James on several occasions mentioned with distinction among the apostles. He was one of the three disciples who were present when Jesus restored the daughter of Jairus to life; Mark v. 37. He was also one of the witnesses of his Lord's transfiguration on the holy mount; Matt. xvii. 2; and when in the garden of Gethsemane, during the awful scene of his sufferings, the Saviour retired for the purpose of prayer, James was one of the three whom he took with him apart from the rest, to witness his agony; Matt. xxvi. 37. After Christ's resurrection, he for a while resumed his occupation of fishing, John xxi. 2, 3. But it is probable that, subsequent to the day of Pentecost, he became conspicuous among the twelve apostles. As he was put to death by Herod Agrippa, A. D. 44, (Acts xii.,) it is evident that he was not the author of the epistle which bears the name of James, because it contains passages which refer to a later period, i. e. chap. v. 1—8, which intimates the then immediately approaching destruction of Jerusalem, and the subversion of the Jewish polity.

JAMES the Just, called the brother [kinsman] of our Lord, Gal. i. 19. He was the son of Alphæus or Cleopas and Mary, sister to Mary the mother of Jesus; consequently cousin to Jesus Christ, according to the flesh, 1 Cor. xv. 7. He was honoured by the Lord Jesus with a separate interview soon after his resurrection; 1 Cor. xv. 7. He was an apostle of the circumcision; Acts i. 13; and after the death of Stephen he was appointed president or superintendent of the church at Jerusalem. For his eminent piety, he was surnamed "the Just." Yet his valuable life was terminated by martyrdom, according to the historian Hegisippus, who lived at the close of the second century. On his account, the Scribes and Pharisees created a tumult among the Jews, and demanded of James an explicit and public declaration of his sentiments concerning the character of Christ. The Apostle, standing on an eminence or battlement of the temple, whence he could be heard by the assembled multitude, avowed his faith, and maintained his opinion, that Jesus was the Messiah. The Jews were exasperated, and precipitated him from the battlement where he was standing; and, as he was not killed by the fall, they began to cast stones at him. The holy apostle, kneeling down, prayed to God to forgive his murderers, one of whom at length struck him with a long pole, which terminated his life. According to Hegesippus, this event took place about the time of the Passover, A. D. 62. At this time the procurator Festus is supposed to have been dead, and his successor Albinus had not arrived; so that the province was left without a governor. Such a season left the Jews at liberty to gratify their licentious and turbulent passions; and, from their known character and sentiments about this time, they were very likely to embrace the opportunity. We may therefore date the apostle's death about the time assigned by Hegesippus, i. e., A. D. 62.

He is generally esteemed the writer of the Epistle of James, addressed to Christians in general. The design of the Apostle was (1) To prevent the Jewish Christians from falling into the vices which abounded among the Jews. (2) To set them right as to the doctrine of justification by faith; and (3) To prevent their being impatient under their present persecutions or dark prospects; and to support and comfort them, by assuring them that the coming of the Lord was at hand.

The epistle of James is one of the most pathetic and instructive in the New Testament. Its style possesses all that beautiful and elegant simplicity which so eminently characterises the sacred writings. Having been written with the design of refuting particular errors which had been introduced among the Jewish Christians, it is not so replete with the peculiar doctrines of Christianity, as the epistles of Paul, or indeed as the other apostolical epistles; but it contains an admirable summary of those practical duties which are incumbent on all believers, and which it enforces in a manner equally elegant and affectionate.

JAMIN, Jay'-min.—A son of Simeon, Gen. xlv. 10; and father of the Jaminites, Num. xxvi. 12.

JANGLING.—Vain or contagious talking about trifles, or of what people do not understand; 1 Tim. i. 6.

JANNA, Jan'-nah, who speaks, who answers.—The father of Melchi; Luke iii. 24.

JANNES, Jan'-nes, who speaks, who answers, affliction.—An Egyptian magician, who withstood Moses, 2 Tim. iii. 8. See Jambres.

JANOA, Ja-no'-ah.—A city in the tribe of Ephraim, 2 Kings xv. 29.

JANUM, Jay'-num.—A city in Judah, Josh. xv. 53.

JAPHETH, Jay'-feth, persuasion, graceful.—The eldest son of Noah, born in the five hundredth year of that patriarch, Gen. v. 32; x. 21. Bishop Patrick takes him to be the same person with Japetus, whom the Greeks own to have been their father. According to the Mosaic account, he had seven sons, namely, Gomer, Magog, Madar, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras, Gen. x. 2. Noah's blessing, which he pronounced upon his eldest son, is expressed, in these words: "God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant," Gen. ix. 27. And how wonderfully did Providence enlarge the boundaries of Japheth! His posterity diverged eastward and westward throughout the whole extent of Asia, north of the great range of Taurus, as far as the eastern ocean; whence, as some think, they crossed over to America by Behring's straits, from Kantschatka; and in the opposite direction throughout Europe, to the Mediterranean sea and the Atlantic ocean; from thence also they might have crossed over to America by Newfoundland, where traces of early settlements remain in parts now desert. Thus did they gradually enlarge themselves till they literally encompassed the earth, within the precincts of the northern temperate zone; to which their roving hunter's life contributed not a little. Their progress northwards was checked by the much greater extent of the Black Sea in ancient times, and the increasing rigour of the climates; but their hardy race, and enterprising warlike genius, made them frequently encroach southwards on the settlements of Shem, whose pastoral and agricultural occupations rendered them more inactive, peaceable, and unwarlike; and so they dwelt in the tents of Shem, when the Scythians invaded Media, and subdued western Asia southwards, as far as Egypt, in the days of Cyaxares; and the Greeks, and afterwards the Romans, overran and subdued the Assyrians, Medes, and Persians in the east; and the Syrians and Jews dwelt in the south; as foretold by the Syrian prophet Balaam, Num. xxiv. 24, and by Moses, Deut. xxviii. 68, and by Daniel, Dan. xi. 30. In these passages Chittim denotes the southern coasts of Europe, bounding the Mediterranean, called the isles of the Gentiles or nations; see Gen. x. 5; Jer. ii. 10. And in after times, the Tartars, in the east, have repeatedly invaded and subdued the Hindoos and Chinese; while the warlike and enterprising genius of the greatest of the isles of the Gentiles, GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND, have spread their colonies, their arms, their language, their arts, and in some measure their religion, from the rising to the setting sun.

JAPHIA, Ja-fy'-ah, which enlightens, groans.—A city of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 12.

JAPHLET, Jaf'-let.—A descendant of Asher, 1 Chron. vii. 32.

JAPHLETI, Jaf'-le-ty.—A town of Palestine, Josh. xvi. 3.

JAPHO, Jay'-fo.—A city of Dan, Josh. xix. 46. The same as JOPPA, Acts ix. 36.

JAR, Jar.—One of the Hebrew months, answering to our April. It consisted of twenty-nine days, Num. ix. 10, 11.

JARAH, Jay'-rah.—A descendant of king Saul, 1 Chron. ix. 42.

JAREB, Jay'-reb, the king that should revenge.—A king of Assyria, Hosea v. 13.

JARED, Jay'-red, descending, ruling.—The father of Enoch, Gen. v. 15.

JARESI AH, Jar-e-sy'-ah.—A descendant of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 27.

JARAH, Jar'-hah.—An Egyptian, 1 Chron. ii. 34.

JARIB, Jay'-rib.—A person mentioned Ezra viii. 16.

JARMUTH, Jar'-muth.—A city of Judah, Josh. x. 5.

JAROA H, Ja-ro'-ah.—Descendant of Gad, 1 Chron. v. 14.

JASHEN, Jay'-shen.—One of David's worthies, 2 Sam. xxiii. 32.

JASHER, Jay'-sher, righteous.—The author of a book extant in the time of Joshua and Samuel, and to which they referred; Josh. x. 13; 2 Sam. i. 18. The book of Jasher was probably a public register, in which memorable events were written by a scribe of this name. That it was the practice of the Jews to keep such a register appears from various passages; 1 Kings xi. 41; 2 Chron. xii. 15, and xx. 34, &c. These archives were laid up in the Temple; and Josephus sometimes refers to them for the truth of his narrative.

JASHOBEAM, Ja-sho'-be-am.—The Hachmonite, a valiant captain over thirty men in David's army; he lifted up his spear against 300 men, whom he slew at one rencontre; 1 Chron. xi. 11.—Also a descendant of Korah; 1 Chron. xii. 6.

JASHUB, Jash'-ub.—One of the chiefs of the tribe of Issachar, Num. xxvi. 24.

JASHUBI-LEHEM, Jash'-u-by-le'-hem.—A place mentioned 1 Chr. iv. 22, uncertain where.

JASIEL, Jay'-se-el.—David's warrior, 1 Chron. xi. 47.

JASON, Jay'-son, healer.—A kinsman of Paul, residing at Thessalonica. His life was endangered for his love of the gospel; Rom. xvi. 21; Acts xvii. 7.

JASPER. A precious stone of various colours, white, red, brown, and bluish green. It is somewhat like the finer marble, or the half transparent gems. It strikes fire with steel, but makes no effervescence in aquafortis. It is found in the Indies, in Persia, Syria, Armenia, Bohemia, &c.; Ex. xxviii. 20; Rev. iv. 3; xxi. 11, 18, 19.

JATHNIEL, Jath'-ne-el.—A porter of the temple, 1 Chron. xxvi. 2.

JATTIR, Jat'-tir.—A city of Palestine, Josh. xv. 48.

JAVAN, Jay'-van, deceiver, clay.—The fourth son of Japheth, Gen. x. 2. Supposed to be the father of the Ionians or Greeks.

JAVELIN. A spear, or half pike, or kind of dart, Num. xxv. 7; 1 Sam. xviii. 10, 11.

JAW, 'God clave a hollow place that was in the jaw,' Jud. xv. 19. In Lehi, the ground or rock that bore the name of jaw-bone, where was a hollow place which God clave, whence a fountain flowed which saved Samson from perishing. So says Josephus, A. Clark, and a host of others. Boothroyd reads, 'therefore he called the name of that well En-hakkore.' It is absurd to think of the water proceeding from the jaw-bone of the ass, when we are informed that the place of his exploit was on that account, denominated Lehi, or the jaw-bone; See Samson.

JAZER, Jay'-zer, assistance.—A city in Gad, at the foot of Mount Gilead; Josh. xxi. 39; Num. xxxii. 1; Isa. xvi. 8. The sea of Jazer, referred to, Jer. xlvi. 32, was probably a lake near the city of Jazer.

JAZIEL, Jaz'-e-el.—A porter in the temple.

JAZIZ, Jay'-ziz.—David's chief shepherd, 1 Chr. xxvii. 31.

JEALOUSY signifies, (1) Suspicion between married persons of their fidelity one to another, Num. v. 14. (2) An earnest desire and concern for the welfare of others, 2 Cor. xi. 2. (3) The hot displeasure and indignation of God, Ps. lxxix. 5; 1 Cor. x. 22.

JEALOUS God I am, Ex. 20. 5, & 34. 14; Deut. 5. 9, & 6. 15; Josh. 24. 19. 1 Kings 19. 20. I have been very J. for the Lord, 14.

Ezek. 39. 26. be J. for my holy name
Joel 2. 18. will Lord be J. for land Nah. 1. 2. God is J. and the Lord revengeeth

Zech. 1. 14. I am j. for Jerusalem, 8. 2.

2 Cor. 11. 2. j. over you with a godly j.

Deut. 29. 20. j. shall smoke

32. 16. provoked him to j. with strange gods, 21; 1 Kings 14. 22; Ps. 78. 58.

Ps. 79. 6. shall j. burn like fire

Prov. 6. 34. j. is the rage of man

Songs 8. 6. j. is cruel as grave

Rom. 10. 19. provoke them to j. 11. 11.

1 Cor. 10. 22. do we provoke the Lord to j.

JEARIM, Je'-a-rim. — A mountain, Josh. xv. 10.

JEATERAI, Je-at'e-ray. — A Levite, 1 Chron. vi. 21.

JEBERECHIAH, Jeb-er-e-ky'-ah. Father of Zechariah, the priest, Isa. viii. 2.

JEBUS, Je'-bus, treads under foot, contemns. — A son of Canaan; Gen. x. 16; and the progenitor of the Jebusites, they dwelt near Mount Moriah, where they early built a city, which they called Jebus after their parent; but which has since been better known as the celebrated Jerusalem, 1 Chron. xi. 4. This is supposed to be the Salem of which Melchizedek was king; as the Psalmist expressly calls it Salem; Gen. xiv. 18; Ps. lxxvi. 2. The Jebusites were a courageous people, and long withstood the attempts of the Israelites to subdue them. For though Jerusalem was, soon after the death of Joshua, captured and sacked by the children of Judah; Jud. i. 8; yet it was soon recovered by the Jebusites, who were not finally subdued till David, by the prowess of Joab, took from them their strong hold of Zion, which they deemed impregnable; 2 Sam. v. 6—12; 1 Chr. xi. 4—8.

JEBUSITES, Jeb'-u-sites, — Inhabitants of Jebus, Gen. x. 16; Josh. xv. 63; 2 Sam. v. 8.

JEBUSITES. "And the king and his men went to Jerusalem against the Jebusites.... which spake unto David, saying, Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither; — thinking David cannot come in hither." — 2 Sam. v. 6. This passage has puzzled nearly every commentator. It simply means that the Jebusites were so confident of the strength of their fortress that they manned it with lame and blind men, contemptuously deeming them sufficient to defeat all the attempts of David to take it. As if they had said; Our fortress is so impregnable in itself, that a few lame and blind men will easily keep thee off. Such language would be cutting to a warrior. Yet David took the fort. — The word gutter in ver. 8, means subterraneous passage.

JECAMIAH, Jek-a-my-ah, resurrection. — The son of Jechoniah, of the royal family of Judah, 1 Chr. iii. 18.

JECHOLIAH, Jek-o-ly'-ah, perfection of the Lord. — The wife of Amaziah, king of Judah, 2 Kings xv. 2.

JECONIAH, Jek-o-ny'-ah, preparation or steadfastness of the Lord. The son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, who succeeded his father, A. M. 3406, 1 Chron. iii. 16.

JEDIAH, Je-da'-i-ah. — A priest who returned from captivity, Ezra ii. 36. — Another priest, Neh. iii. 10. Also a descendant of Levi, 1 Chron. xxiv. 7.

JEDIAEL, Je-dy'-a-el, the joy of the Lord. — One of David's worthies, who joined him in the day of trial, 1 Chron. xi. 45.

JEDIDAH, Je-dy'-dah, well beloved, amiable. — The mother of king Josiah, 2 Kings xxii. 1.

JEDIDIAH, Jed-e-dy'-ah, beloved of the Lord. — A son of king David, 2 Sam. xii. 25.

JEDUTHUN, Jed'-u-thun, who gives praise. — A Levite of Merari's family, one of the four masters of music in the temple, 1 Chron. xvi. 38—42; Ps. xxix. title. It is thought that he set some of the Psalms to music.

JEEZER, Je-e'-zar. — A son of Gilead, Num. xxvi. 30.

JEGAR-SAHADUTHA, Je'-gar-sa-ha-dew'-thah, the heap of witness. — The place where Jacob and Laban covenanted, Gen. xxxi. 47.

JEHALELEEL, Je-hal-le'-leel. — A descendant of Merari, 1 Chr. iv. 16.

JEHALELEL, Je-hay'-le-lel. — A porter, 2 Chron. xxix. 12.

JEHAZIEL, Je-hay'-zi-el. — One of the twenty-four families of priests, 1 Chron. xii. 4.

JEHDEIAH, Jeh-dy'-ah.—A Meronothite, keeper of the asses in king David's time, 1 Chron. xxiv. 20.

JEHEZEKEL, Je-hez'-e-kel.—An order of priests, 1 Chron. xxiv. 16.

JEHIAH, Je-hy'-ah.—A door-keeper for the ark, 1 Chron. xv. 24.

JEHIEL, Je-hy'-el.—A returned captive, Ezra x. 26.

JEHIEL, Je-hy'-el.—One of David's worthies; 1 Chron. ix. 35.

JEHIELI, Je-hy'-e-li.—A Levite, 1 Chron. xxvi. 22.

JEHIZKIAH, Je-hiz'-ky'-ah.—A descendant of Ephraim, 2 Chron. xxviii. 12.

JEHOADAH, Je-ho'-a-dah.—Son of Ahaz, 1 Chr. viii. 36.

JEHOADDAN, Je-ho-ad'-dan.—Mother of Amaziah, 2 Kings xiv. 2.

JEHOAHAZ, Je-ho'-a-haz, the prize of the Lord.—The son of Jehu, king of Israel; he succeeded his father, A. M. 3146, 2 Kings x. 35. His reign was calamitous to his subjects; for God gave them up into the hands of Hazael, king of Syria, and his son Benhadad, who grievously oppressed them. Jehoahaz, overwhelmed by the misfortunes that had come upon his country, prostrated himself before the Lord, who, moved with compassion, heard his cry, and in the person of his son Joash raised up a deliverer, who rescued his country, and re-established the affairs of his kingdom. The army of Jehoahaz was so much reduced, that he could muster only "fifty horsemen, ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen," 2 Kings xiii. 7.

JEHOAHAZ, the son of Josiah king of Judah, is the same person that is sometimes called Shallum. See Jer. xxii. 30-32, with 1 Chron. iii. 15. Josiah dying of his wounds, at Megiddo, Jehoahaz succeeded him, 2 Kings xxiii. 10, 11. He was then twenty-three years of age, but he reigned only three months, A. M. 3395. Necho, king of Egypt, provoked that the people of Judah had placed this prince on the throne without his participation, sent for him to Riblah in Syria, divested him of his kingdom, loaded him with chains, and sent him into Egypt, where he died, Jer. xxii. 12. Jehoiakim, or Eliakim, his brother, was made king in his room; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 1-4.

JEHOASH, Je-ho'-ash, the offering of the Lord.—Son of Ahaziah, king of Judah, 2 Kings xi. 21. The same as JOASH.

JEHOHANAN, Je-ho'-ha-nan.—A porter of the temple, 1 Chron. xxvi. 3.

JEHOIACHIN, Je-hoy'-a-kin, preparation or strength of the Lord.—Called also CONIAH, Jer. xxii. 24; and JECHONIAH, 1 Chron. iii. 16. He was the son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah. He reigned only three months, 2 Kings xxiv. 8. He was born about the time of the first Babylonish captivity, A. M. 3398. He was the last king of Judah who could be viewed as the entire sovereign of that kingdom. After three months, he and all his principal subjects were carried captive to Babylon, and Zedekiah placed over the kingdom, as the tributary of Nebuchadnezzar. At a later period, he obtained honour in his captivity, being exalted to eat at the sovereign's table; 2 Kings xxiv. 9-17; xxv. 27-30; Jer. lii. 31-34.

In 2 Kings xxiv. 8, it is said that he was eighteen years of age when he began to reign; and in 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9, that he was only eight; yet in both places it is said that he reigned but three months. But the two passages may be reconciled by admitting that his father associated him with himself, for the first ten years, namely, from the time when he was eight until he was eighteen; and that he only reigned three months alone.

JEHOIADA, Je-hoy'-a-dah, knowledge of the Lord.—A faithful high-priest and the successor of Azariah; Jehoiada, with his wife Jehosheba, preserved Joash, the son of Joram, from the murderous intentions of Athaliah, concealing him in the temple until he was seven years old, when they procured him to be acknowledged king of Judah, having first caused that cruel woman to be put to death, 2 Kings xi. After her death, Jehoiada ordered the altar of Baal to be destroyed, and his statue broken in pieces; and in a short period the whole face of the kingdom became, under his management, entirely changed in matters both civil and religious. Jehoiada died at the advanced age of an hundred and thirty years, and was buried in the sepulchre of the kings of Judah, leaving his son Zechariah to succeed him in the office of high-priest, 2 Chron. xxii. xxiii. xxiv. 1—16.

JEHOIAKIM, Je-hoy'-a-kim, the resurrection of the Lord.—The son of Josiah, who received his name and throne from Necho king of Egypt, when he captured Jerusalem, and carried its sovereign into Egypt, A. M. 3394. His proper name was Eliakim, 2 Kings xxiii. 34. He reigned 11 years in Jerusalem, and was a wicked king. The character of his reign is stated in the following Scriptures; 2 Kings xxiv. 4; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 8; Jer. xxii. xxvi.; xxxvi. His death is predicted Jer. xxii. 18, 19.

JEHOIAKIM.—“In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim,” &c. Jer. xxvii. 1:—It ought to be Zedekiah, and not Jehoiakim. So read the Syriac and Arabic versions. This is the opinion of Houbigant, Louth, Blayney, Dahler, Dr. A. Clarke, and others. It is evident also from ver. 3, 12. The prophecy was delivered about the fourth year of Zedekiah.

JEHOIARIB, Je-hoy'-a-rib.—Chief of one of the priestly families, 1 Chron. xxiv. 7. The Maccabees descended from this illustrious family.

JEHONADAB, Je-hon'-a-dab, who acts in good earnest.—A father of the Rechabites, 2 Kings x. 15.

JEHONATHAN, Je-hon'-a-than, given of God.—A Levite in the reign of Jehoshaphat, 2 Chron. xvii. 8.

JEHORAM, Je-ho'-ram, exaltation, rejected of God.—The son and successor of Jehoshaphat, 1 Kings xxii. 50.—He reigned conjointly with his father four years. At his father's death, A. M. 3119, he reigned alone. His wife Athaliah enticed him into idolatry and many crimes, which embittered his reign. One of his first acts was to slay his six brothers, and some of the chief men of his kingdom; 2 Chron. xxi. 4. The Lord punished him for his wickedness. The Edomites revolted, and shook off the yoke of Judah, and also Libnah, one of the cities of Judah. The Philistines and Arabians ravaged his territories, plundered his palace, and carried away his wives and children. In his person, he was grievously afflicted with dysentery for two years, when he died, and was buried unlamented, in Jerusalem, but not in the sepulchres of the kings; 2 Chron. xxi. 8—20.

JEHOSHABEATH, Je-ho-shab'-e-ath.—The sister of Ahaziah, and wife of Jehoiada, the high-priest, 2 Chron. xxii. 11, 12.

JEHOSHAPHAT, Je-hosh'-a-fat, God judges.—King of Judah, the son of Asa.—He ascended the throne A. M. 3090, at the age of thirty-five, and reigned twenty-five years, 1 Kings xv. 24; 2 Chron. xvii. 1, 2, &c. He was a good king. For twenty-five years the nation enjoyed his wise and virtuous government, and religion spread and prospered. He sent priests and Levites, with principal officers of his court to publish and explain the law from city to city. Recompensed with the presence and blessing of his God, he was protected by Divine Providence; and to this cause may be ascribed his affluence, his honour, and power. “The Lord established the kingdom in his hand. But he was not perfect. He erred, and displeased God by marrying his son Jehoram to Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab; he also joined his forces with those of Ahab in battle against Syria; 2 Chr. xviii. He acted contrary to the declarations of the Lord's prophet, and had a very narrow escape from death; 2 Chron. xviii. 31.

He was Divinely reprov'd for this sinful compliance; 2 Chron. xix. 1, &c. Jehoshaphat endeavoured to repair the mischief, which his familiarity with Ahab had produced. “He brought back the people to the Lord God of their fathers.” He established good order in his dominions, both as to religious and civil affairs, by appointing efficient judges, by regulating the discipline of the priests and Levites, and by enjoining them to perform their duty with fidelity and punctuality. He signally conquered the Moabites, Ammonites, and other powers who declared war against him, by calling to his aid Divine power; 2 Chron. xx. &c. He died after a reign of twenty-five years, and was buried in the royal sepulchre; and was succeeded by his son Jehoram.

JEHOSHAPHAT, son of Ahilud, secretary to king David, and afterwards to Solomon; 1 Kings iv. 3.

JEHOSHAPHAT, son of Paruah, Solomon's intendant in the tribe of Issachar; 1 Kings iv. 17.

JEHOSHAPHAT, 'Valley of.' A narrow glen west of Jerusalem, between the Mount of Olives and Mount Moriah, Joel iii. 2. The brook Kidron flows through it. The traveller is here shown the well of Nehemiah, where the prophet is said to have restored the fire of the altar after the Babylonish captivity. Here are a great number of grave stones, with inscriptions in Hebrew characters, and among the rest, two interesting antiquities, reputed to be the tomb of Zacharias, and also the pillar of Absalom, see 2 Sam. xviii. 18. Independently of the celebrity of this village as the scene of other important and interesting events, the prophet Joel has chosen it for the place of a pleading between God and the enemies of his people, Joel iii. 1, 2. By many among the Jews and Mahometans, especially, this passage is applied to the general resurrection. Hence the former consider it as the highest honour to obtain a place for their bones to be deposited in the valley of Jehoshaphat, and the latter have left a stone jutting out of the wall of the city, for the accommodation of their prophet, who, they say, is to sit on it here, and call the whole world from below to judgment. Chateaubriand, after summoning up all the images of desolation which the place presents, but without once thinking of the contemptible size of this theatre for so grand a display, says, "One might say that the trumpet of judgment had already sounded, and that the dead were about to rise in the valley of Jehoshaphat."

JEHOSHEBA, Je-hosh'e-bah. — Wife of Jehoiada, the high-priest, 2 Kings xi. 2.

JEOSHUAH, Je'-hosh'-u-ah, the saviour. — The father of Hoshea, one of the spies, Num. xiii. 16.

JEHOVAH, Je-ho'-vah, self-existing. — One of the most expressive names by which the Deity has revealed himself to man. It signifies, HE who necessarily exists, the Eternal, Self-Existent, Almighty, and Independent; the Origin of all being and all things, sin excepted; Exod. vi. 3. The name is also given to Christ; Isa. xl. 3; Jer. xxiii. 6; xxxiii. 15, 16; John viii. 58. It is a proof of his Godhead; Matt. iii. 3; Isa. vi; John xii. 41.

The Jews had so great a veneration for this name, that they ceased to pronounce it, substituting some other name of God, as, Elohim, or Adonai. In course of time, its pronunciation was forgotten. "He who can pronounce it," say they, "is sure to be heard of God."

JEHOVAH-JIREH, Je-ho'-vah-ji'-reh, the Lord will see, or provide. The place where Abraham offered his son, Gen. xxii. 14.

JEHOVAH-NISSI, Je-ho'-vah-nis'-sy, the Lord my banner. — An altar built by Moses, Exod. xvii. 15.

JEHOVAH-SHALOM, Je-ho'-vah-shay'-lom, the Lord send peace. — An altar built by Gideon, Judges vi. 24.

JEHOVAH-SHAMMAH, Je-ho'-vah-sham'-mah, the Lord is there. — Ezek. xlvi. 35.

JEHOVAH-TSIDKENU, Je-ho'-vah-zid'-ke-new, the Lord our righteousness; Jer. xxiii. 6.

JEHOZABAD, Je-hoz'-a-bad. — An assassin; 2 Kings xii. 21.

JEHU, Je'-hew, he that is or exists. The son of Nimshi, captain of the troops of Joram, the king of Israel; was appointed by God to reign over Israel, and to avenge the sins committed by the house of Ahab, 1 Kings xix. 16; 2 Kings ix. 1—10. He was instrumental in executing judgment on the house of Ahab. At Naboth, he charged Joram with his gross iniquities, and shot him dead in his chariot; 2 Kings ix. 11—26. Jehu then commanded his body to be cast into the field of Naboth the Jezreelite, thus fulfilling the prediction of the prophet Elijah, 2 Kings ix. 11, 26. Jehu now proceeded to Jezreel, and as he entered the city, Jezebel, who was at her window, said to him, "Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?" Jehu commanded her servants to throw her out of the window, which they did, and she was trampled to death under the horses' feet, and devoured by dogs; 2 Kings ix. 36. He then slew all Ahab's relations and friends, the great men of his court, and the priests who were at Jezreel; 2 Kings x. 1—11.

At Samaria, he slew all that remained of Ahab's family, and all the prophets of Baal; the image of Baal was broken to pieces and burnt, and the temple was destroyed; 2 Kings x. 12—28. Yet though Jehu had been the instrument in the hand of God, for taking vengeance on the house of Ahab, the scripture accuses him of following the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin in worshipping the golden calves, verses 29, 31. But in all he was actuated more by ambition and animosity, than the fear of God, or a regard to the purity of his worship. And thus it is that God, in the course of his providence, makes use of tyrants and wicked men, as his instruments to execute his righteous judgments in the earth. Thus the Babylonians were employed to chastise the Jews, yet the Lord charges them with cruelty in regard to them; Isa. x. 5—12. They exceeded the bounds of justice and humanity in oppressing and destroying them; Isa. xlvii. 1—6, and Zech. i. 15. After a reign of 28 years over Israel, Jehu died, and was succeeded by his son Jehoahaz.

JEHU Je'-hu. He that is, or who exists.—Son of Hanani, a prophet sent to Baasha, king of Israel, to prophesy against that prince; 1 Kings xvi. 7.

JEHU. Dr. Hincks, not long ago, found on the Nimroud obelisk the name, "Jehu, the son of Omri," a Scripture name; it proves that Israel and Assyria must have had some connexion, because it is an Israelitish name, perhaps of a celebrated Jew, and was inscribed by the chisel upon an Assyrian rock. This monument proves the actual captivity of the ten tribes, and therefore the truth of Scripture history.

JEHUBBAH, Je-hub'-bah. — A descendant of Asher; 1 Chr. vii. 34.

JEHUCAL, Je'-hu-kal, mighty.—Son of Shelemiah; Jer. xxxvii. 3.

JEHUD, Je'-hud, praising.—A city in Palestine, in Dan; Josh. xix. 45.

JEHUDI, Je-hew'-dy, praise.—A grandson of Shelemiah; Jer. xxxvi. 21.

JEHUDIJAH, Je-hew-dy'-jah, praise of the Lord.—The mother of Jered; 1 Chron. iv. 18.

JEHUSH, Je'-hush. — A descendant of king Saul; 1 Chron. viii. 39.

JEIEL, Je-i'-el. — A valiant man; 1 Chron. v. 7.

JEKABZEEL, Je-kab'-ze-el. — A village; Neh. xi. 25.

JEKAMEAM, Jek-a-me'-am. — A Levite; 1 Chron. xxiii. 19.

JEKAMIAH, Je-ka-my'-ah. — Son of Shallum; 1 Chron. ii. 41.

JEMIMAH, Je-my'-mah, hands one as the day.—A daughter of Job; Job xlii. 14.

JEMUEL, Jem-yew'-el. — Son of Simeon; Gen. xlv. 10.

JEPHTHAH, Jei'-thah, he that opens. — Judge of Israel, and successor to Jair. He was a native of Mizpeh, the son of a harlot and one Gilead. On account of his illegitimacy, he was banished from his father's house, and settled beyond Jordan in the land of Job, where he became the head of a marauding party living by plunder.

A war having broken out between the Ammonites and the children of Israel, the latter requested his aid as a skilful commander. He at first reproached them with their injustice in banishing him from his father's house; but at length he complied with their request; Judges xi. 1—11. On the eve of the battle, he made a vow that whatever should come forth from his house first to meet him on returning from battle, he would devote to God. This turned out to be his daughter, an only child who hailed his return with music and dancing.

JEPHTHAH 'vowed a vow,' Judges xi. 30.—The original, when properly translated, reads thus, "And it shall be, that whosoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be Jehovah's, and I will offer to him a burnt offering." This vow contains two parts; I. That person whosoever met him on his return, should be Jehovah's, and be dedicated for ever to his service, as Hannah devoted Samuel before he was born; 1 Sam. i. 11. II. That Jephthah himself would offer a burnt offering to Jehovah. Human sacrifices were prohibited by the law; Deut. xii. 30, 31; and the priests would not offer them. Such a vow would have been impious, and could not have been performed.—It is said she went to bewail her virginity, not her sacrifice, and the women went four times in every year to mourn or talk WITH (not for) the daughter of Jephthah, to lament her seclusion from the world, and the hardship of her situation as cut off from every domestic enjoyment. Observe further, it is not said that he actually sacrificed her, but that "he did with her according to his vow." The historian subjoins, "she knew no man;" if she were sacrificed, this remark is frivolous; but if devoted to perpetual virginity, this idea agrees with the visits of the Israelitish women. Therefore, it may be safely concluded that Jephthah's daughter was not sacrificed, but consecrated to a state of celibacy. It is the opinion of some, that she was devoted to serve in the temple, as the law sanctioned this. The devoted ones were called Nethinims. The first of these were the Gibeonites; Josh. ix. 21, 23. Jephthah's sacrifice in this was great, for she became dead in law, and his inheritance would descend to the next in kin.

JEPHUNNEH, Je-fun'-neh, he that beholds.—Caleb's father, Num. xiii. 6.

JERAH, Je'-rah, the moon, to scent or smell.—A descendant of Shem, Gen. x. 26.

JERAMHEEL, Je-ram'-me-el, love of God.—One sent to apprehend Jeremiah the prophet, Jer. xxxvi. 26.—See also 1 Chr. ii. ix; xxiv. 29.

JERED, Je'-red.—The son of Ezra, 1 Chr. i. 2.

JERAMAI, Jer'-e-may.—A captive, Ezra x. 33.

JEREMIAH, Jer-c-my'-ah, exaltation of the Lord.—The son of Hilkiah, of the race of the priests, a native of Anathoth, in the tribe of Benjamin; Jer. i. 1. He was set apart for the office from his birth. He began to prophesy in the reign of Josiah, A. M. 3375. Jeremiah was very young when called to the prophetic office. He sustained the office forty-two years. He met with great difficulties and opposition from his countrymen of all ranks, which greatly depressed his mind, and caused him to speak in the most plaintive language. He was a man of unblemished piety and conscientious integrity; he loved his country and its people, that to promote their good he was willing to make any sacrifice; to forego a state of ease and plenty which the favour of the king of Babylon would have secured him. After the destruction of Jerusalem, having followed the remnant of the Jews into Egypt, whither they had retired, against his advice, after the murder of Gedaliah, the Chaldean governor, he there continued warmly to denounce their idolatry. Tradition says, that, in consequence of his fidelity, he was stoned to death at Tahphaues. He lived in the time of Daniel, Ezekiel, Habakkuk, and Zephaniah.

JEREMIAH, BOOK OF.—Jeremiah predicts the judgments that were to come upon the people for their idolatries and sins, and the deliverance which would be wrought for them, if they should repent; and also the future glory of the church. The following is the judicious arrangement of Dr. Blayney:—

1. The prophecies delivered in the reign of Josiah, containing chapters i. to xii. inclusive.

2. The prophecies delivered in the reign of Jehoiakim, comprising chapters xiii. to xx., xxii., xxiii., xxxv., xxxvi., xlv., to xlvi.; and from the 1st to the 33rd verse of chap. xlix.

3. The prophecies delivered in the reign of Zedekiah, including chapters xxi., xxiv., xxvii.—xxxiv., xxxvii.—xxxix., xl.; verses 34th to 39th; and chap. l. and li.

4. The prophecies delivered under the government of Gedaliah, from the taking of Jerusalem to the retreat of the people into Egypt, and the prophecies delivered to the Jews in that country; comprehending chapters xl. to xlv., inclusive.

This arrangement throws great light upon the prophecies, and has been adopted by most subsequent writers.

The style of Jeremiah is beautiful and tender to a high degree; especially when he has occasion to excite the softer passions of grief and pity; which is not seldom the case in the first parts of his poetry. It is also, on many occasions, very elegant and sublime, especially towards the end (ch. xlv. 6), where he approaches even the majesty of Isaiah. The historical narratives which are occasionally introduced, are written in a plain prosaic style.

The writings of Jeremiah contain two or three striking predictions of the Messiah. On chap. xxiii. 5, 6, Dr. Hales has cited a remarkable passage from the ancient Rabbinical book of Ikkarin, which well expresses the reason of the appellation given to the Redeemer: "The Scripture calls the name of the MESSIAH, JAOH, our RIGHTEOUSNESS, to intimate that he will be a MEDIATORIAL GOD, by whose hand we shall obtain justification from

THE NAME: wherefore, it calls him by the name of THE NAME, (that is, the ineffable JAOH, here put for GOD HIMSELF!)" The miraculous conception is clearly predicted in ch. xxxi. 22; and the spirituality and surpassing glory of the gospel dispensation is as clearly marked out in ver. 31—36 of the same chapter.

JEREMIAH, LAMENTATIONS OF.—The book consists of plaintive effusions composed upon the plan of funereal dirges, all upon the same subject, viz., on beholding the city and temple of Jerusalem lying in ruins. The Lamentations consist of five chapters, each having twenty-two stanzas or verses, beginning with the several letters of the Hebrew alphabet in their proper order: the third chapter having sixty-six verses, has three verses together commencing with the several letters in order.

JEREMY.—"Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet," &c.; Matt. xxvii. 9.—It was not spoken by Jeremiah, but by Zechariah, ch. xi. 13. Many of the ancient MSS. read Zechariah; as the later Syriac, and some copies of the Arabic. Some say that the original reading was dia toi prophetou, by the prophet (his name not mentioned). Matthew often omits the name of the prophet in his quotations. See ch. i. 22; ii. 5, 15; xiii. 35; xxi. 4. Bengel approves of the omission.

Besides, it was an ancient custom among the Jews to divide the Old Testament into three parts. The first beginning with the Law, was called The Law; the second beginning with the Psalms was called The Psalms; the third beginning with Jeremiah was called Jeremiah, and the other prophets being included in that division that began with Jeremiah, all quotations from it would go under the name of this prophet.

JEREMOTH, Jer'-e-moth, eminences.—A descendant of Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 14.

JERICHO, Jer'-re-ko, his moon, sweet smell.—A city in the tribe of Benjamin, about seven leagues from Jerusalem, and two from the Jordan ; Josh. ii. 1. It was the first city taken from the Canaanites, by Joshua, who razed it to the ground. After its restoration it was ennobled by the schools of the prophets established there. It was the residence of the priests ; about 12,000 dwelling there. Moses called it "The city of palm-trees." Josephus calls it the most fruitful country of Judea. Besides the Palm-tree, it bears the Balsam-tree, which produces the Balm of Gilead. Jericho had a royal palace, in which died Herod the Great. It was honoured by a visit from Christ, who there healed two blind men. Jericho is now a mere mud-built village. Its present name is Erika, or Rika.

In the time of Christ, Jericho was next in importance to Jerusalem. Eusebius, the church historian, says, that this second city was destroyed by the Romans, during the siege of Jerusalem ; and that a third city was built on a new site, but the ruins of both the former cities were then shown. Mr. Buckingham, the traveller, states, that "the whole of this road, from Jerusalem to the Jordan, is held to be the most dangerous about Palestine," and that it is peculiarly favourable for robbers, so that he and his companions were strongly guarded in passing through it. In such a spot how great was the misery of the wounded traveller, and how kind the compassion of the good Samaritan, who could venture to stay to relieve him ! Hence the special propriety of our Lord's making this the scene of his parable. Moreover the thousands of priests at Jericho in the days of Christ ; and hence, also, the propriety of the priest and Levite passing on this road ; Josh. vi ; Judges iii. 13 ; 1 Kings xvi. 34 ; Luke x. 30—35.

JERICO. A captive ; Ezra ii. 34.

JERIEL, Je'-re-el.—A son of Tola ; 1 Chron. vii. 2.

JERIJAH, Je-ry'-jah.—An Hebronite ; 1 Chron. xxvi. 31.

JERIMOTH, and JEREMOTH, Jer'-e-moth, eminences.—A Benjamite ;

1 Chron. vii. 7.—A son of Becher ; 1 Chron. vii. 8.—A son of Beriah ; 1 Chron. viii. 14.—A son of Merari ; 1 Chron. xxiii. 23.—A son of Mushi ; 1 Chron. xxiv. 30.—A Levite ; 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

JERIOTH, Je'-re-oth. — Caleb's wife ; 1 Chron. ii. 18.

JEROBOAM, Jer-o-bo'-am, contender, increasing the people.—The son of Nebat and a widow called Zeruan ; 1 Kings xi. 26. He was born at Zareda, in the tribe of Ephraim ; appointed king of the ten tribes when they revolted from Rehoboam. He is said to have made Israel to sin : being the author of the idolatry as well as the schism of the ten tribes. On account of his consummate wickedness, the prophets of God announced to him the utter destruction of his race ; and as signs of this, his most beloved son died, and his own hand was suddenly paralysed, and miraculously healed ; and, finally, the king was expressed by name who was to expose his whole system to universal contempt ; 1 Kings xi. 26—40 ; xii ; xiii ; xiv. 1—20.

JEROBOAM II.—Son and Successor of Joash, king of Israel. Began to reign A. M. 3179, and reigned 40 years ; 2 Kings xiii. 13. He followed the former Jeroboam in his idolatrous worship. The Lord, however, by him, according to the predictions of the prophet Jonah, restored the kingdom of the ten tribes to its greatest splendour. All the countries on the east of Jordan he reduced. It appears from the writings of Hosea and Amos, that idleness, effeminacy, pride, oppression, injustice, idolatry, and luxury, mightily prevailed in his reign. Nor was it long after his death, before the Lord, according to the predictions of Amos, cut of his family with the sword.

JERUBBAAL, Je-rub'-ba-al, or Jer-ub-bay'-al, let Baal defend his cause.—The name of Gideon ; Judges vi. 32.

JERUBBESHETH, Je-rub'-be-sheth, let the idol of confusion defend itself.—See 2 Sam. xi. 21.

JERUEL, Jer'-u-el, a vision.—A wilderness westward of the Dead Sea; 2 Chron. xx. 16.

JERUSALEM, Je-rew'-sa-lem, the vision or possession of peace.—The metropolis of the kingdom of Judah; and the seat of the government during the reigns of David, Solomon and their successors. The city of Jerusalem was situated on the confines of the territories belonging to the tribes of Benjamin and Judah, (and thus sometimes formed part of the one, and sometimes of the other,) about twenty five miles to the west of the Jordan, and forty-two miles to the east of the Mediterranean, and a hundred and two miles to the south of Damascus, and a hundred and fifty to the north of the Elanitic Gulf of the Red Sea. It was built on four hills, Sion, Acra, Moriah, and Bezetha. The whole foundation of the city was a high rock, and in the course of time became the metropolis of the Jewish nation, and the common property of the children of Israel. Its most ancient name was Salem, or Peace; the import of Jerusalem is, the vision or inheritance of peace; it was also called Jebus, from one of the sons of Canaan; Ariel, or the Lion of God; Josh. xviii. 28; Isa. xxix. 1. Some suppose that Jeru is derived from Jerush, signifying possession; others from Jarah; signifying foundation. The name may signify the foundation of peace. It became the metropolis of the Jebusites, who in honour of its founder, called it Jebus. Then Jebus-Salem might in time be changed into Jerusalem. After its capture by Joshua; Josh. x. it was jointly inhabited both by Jews and Jebusites; Josh. xv. 63. for about five hundred years, until the time of David; who having expelled the Jebusites, made it his residence; 2 Sam. v. 6—9, and erected a noble palace there, together with several other magnificent buildings; whence it is sometimes styled the city of David; 1 Chron. xi. 5. By the prophet Isaiah; ch. xxix. 1. Jerusalem is termed Ariel or the lion of God; but the reason of this name, and its meaning, as applied to Jerusalem, is very obscure and doubtful. It may possibly signify the strength of the place, by which the inhabitants were enabled to resist and overcome their enemies. Being situated on the confines of the two tribes of Benjamin and of Judah, Jerusalem sometimes formed a part of the one, and sometimes of the other: but after Jehovah had appointed it to be the place of his habitation and temple, it was considered as the metropolis of the Jewish nation, and the common property of the children of Israel. On this account it was, that the houses were not let, and all strangers of the Jewish nation had the liberty of lodging there gratis, by right of hospitality. To this custom our Lord probably alludes in Matt. xxvi. 18, and the parallel passages. The name of the whole mountain, on the several hills and hollows of which the city stood, was called Moriah, or Vision; because it was high land, and could be seen afar off, especially from the south; Gen. xxii. 2—4, but afterwards that name was appropriated to the most elevated part on which the temple was erected, and where Jehovah appeared to David; 2 Chron. iii. 1; 2 Sam. xxiv. 16, 17.

Jerusalem was distinguished for its three strong and apparently impregnable walls; the first of which was begun by David and completed by Solomon, which surrounded the old or upper city—the second of which, commenced by Agrippa and finished by the Jews, surrounded the whole of the then modern part of the city; this wall was of amazing strength and thickness, being upwards of forty feet in height, surrounded by battlements with ninety towers of great strength and beauty, raised at equal distances upon them. On the battlements of the middle wall, in like manner, there were forty of these turrets, and on the old or inner wall, sixty: these towers were all of great height, producing the most imposing effect, and affording fine views of the surrounding scenery; one of which, in particular, afforded a complete prospect of the utmost limits of the Hebrew possessions, embracing Arabia on the east, and the Mediterranean on the west. It was distinguished for three towers erected by Herod, which were extremely splendid and magnificent—for the king's palace, which stood within the innermost wall, itself enclosed within another wall equalling in height those surrounding the city, and ornamented with beautiful towers, gates, and porticos, of the most exquisite workmanship and expensive materials; but above all for the Temple, which rose in the pride of beauty, itself resembling another city.

The first Temple, erected by Solomon, retained its pristine splendour only about thirty-four years, when Shishak, king of Egypt, carried off all its treasures; and after undergoing subsequent profanation and pillage, it was finally plundered and burnt by the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar. After the captivity, however, the Temple emerged from its ruins, being rebuilt by Zerubbabel, but with vastly inferior and diminished glory, as appears from the tears of the aged men who had beheld the former structure in all its grandeur; 2 Kings xxv. 13, 15; Ezra iii. 12.

Compared with the first temple, the second was deficient in five remarkable things:—these were the Ark and Mercy-Seat—the Shechinah, or manifestation of the Divine presence in the Holy of holies—the sacred fire on the Altar which was first kindled from Heaven—the Urim and Thummim, and the spirit of prophecy. Though inferior in these great and important points, still, however, it surpassed the first in glory, being honoured by the frequent presence of our divine Saviour, according to the prediction of the prophet; Haggai ii. 9.

The height of the walls, especially on the south side, was stupendous; in the lowest places equalling three hundred cubits or four hundred and fifty feet, and in some places even greater. The Temple itself, strictly so called, (which comprised the portico, the Sanctuary, and the Holy of holies,) formed only a small part of the sacred edifice on Mount Moriah, being surrounded by spacious courts, making a square of half a mile in circumference.

The chief parts of the Temple were its three courts, one of which was termed the court of the Gentiles, which again encompassed the Holy-house and the other courts; the court of the Israelites, divided into two, one for the women, and the other for the men; and the court of the priests, which was separated from the second by a low wall, one cubit in height—the Portico, in which were suspended the splendid votive offerings made by the piety of various individuals; these votive offerings were, it should seem, visible at a distance; for, when Jesus Christ was sitting on the Mount of Olives, and his disciples called his attention to the Temple, they pointed out to Him the gifts with which it was adorned—the Sanctuary, in which was placed the golden candlestick, the altar of incense, and the table of shew bread, which consisted of twelve loaves, according to the number of the twelve tribes of Israel—and, the Holy of holies twenty cubits square, and into which none but the High-priest was admitted, and that only once a year, on the great day of atonement; Luke xxi. 5; Exod. xxx. 10; Lev. xvi. 2, 15, 34; Heb. ix. 2–7.

To persons approaching from a distance, the temple appeared like a mountain covered with snow, so exquisite was the whiteness of its polished marble; and when the sun shone, the gazer could scarcely look upon the brightness of its splendour, on account of the dazzling light reflected from the numerous plates of gold with which it was overlaid. The whole building was surrounded and ornamented with pillars of the richest architecture, each formed of one entire stone, and many of them entwined throughout with wreathing vines and clusters of grapes, wrought in virgin gold. The roof and other parts were of cedar wood, beautifully engraved—some of the gates were more than sixty feet in height, richly wrought and ornamented on every side with plates of gold and silver; one of which supposed to be the gate Beautiful, was entirely formed of Corinthian brass, and far exceeded all the others in the splendour of its decorations.

It was completely destroyed by the Romans under Titus. A. D. 70; the latter ineffectually endeavoured to save the Temple, which became involved in the same ruins with the rest of the city; and after it had been reduced to ashes, the foundations of this sacred edifice were afterwards ploughed over by Terentius Rufus. Subsequently, during the reign of Constantine the Great, the Jews made various efforts to rebuild the Temple, which, however, were always frustrated. Nor did better success attend the attempt made by Julian the Apostate—an earthquake, a whirlwind, a fiery eruption compelled the workmen to abandon the design.

The Jews were a wicked and rebellious people. They transgressed the precepts of heaven, killed the prophets, rejected and murdered Jesus the true Messiah, and the wrath of God came upon them to the uttermost. On the 20th of April A. D. 70, Titus, the Roman general commenced the siege of Jerusalem, and in 15 days broke through the external wall, (that is, the third wall, which had been erected during the reign of Claudius,) and, in less than three months, nearly 116,000 Jews in the city had perished. Still the survivors in the interior of the city held out, believing that God would yet appear for them, though the Christians, had fled to the mountains, in obedience to the warning of their Lord; Luke xxi. 20, 21. So vigorously did Titus press the siege, that, according to Josephus, who was an eye-witness, numbers of Jews perished through famine, and the most horrid barbarities were practised. Then it was that Maria, a woman of distinction, put her own child to death and roasted it, to satisfy the cravings of her hunger, boldly offering the insurgents one half after she had devoured the other. The news of this soon reached Titus, and he "called the gods to witness that he was guiltless of such cruelties;" and he at once determined to destroy the city. On the 10th of August, the porches were burnt down, and Titus and his army entered the inner courts of the temple. Still that Roman general wished to spare the temple; but it was too late. A soldier threw a flaming brand through the golden doors which led to the chambers on the north of the holy of holies, and as if directed by a higher hand, in an instant the whole was in flames. Titus now declared that the time of mercy had gone by, and the Jews were condemned to indiscriminate massacre. It was not, however, until the 8th of September that the Romans completed the entire conquest of Jerusalem. Josephus says that 1,100,000 Jews died during the siege, besides 12,000 who subsequently perished from hunger, and 97,000 who were taken prisoners.

Next to the Temple in point of splendour and importance was the superb palace of Herod, which afterwards became the residence of Roman procurators, who generally claimed the royal palaces in those provinces which were subject to kings. These dwellings throughout the provinces were called Prætoria: Herod's palace was therefore Pilate's prætorium; and in some part of this edifice was the armoury or barracks of the Roman soldiers that garrisoned Jerusalem, whither Jesus was conducted and mocked by them. In the front, also, of this palace was the tribunal where Pilate sat in a judicial capacity to hear and determine weighty causes, which was a raised pavement of mosaic work, termed in Hebrew Gabbatha; Matt. xxvii. 27; Mark xv. 16; John xviii. 28; xix. 13.

The circumference of Jerusalem, previous to its siege and destruction by the Romans, was thirty-three furlongs; and the wall of circumvallation, constructed by order of Titus, was thirty-nine furlongs: while that of the modern city does not exceed three miles.

On a steep rock adjoining the north-west corner of the temple stood the tower of Antonia, on the site of a citadel that had been erected by Antiochus Epiphanes in order to annoy the Jews; and which, after being destroyed by them, was rebuilt by the Maccabean prince John Hyrcanus, B. C. 135. Herod the Great repaired it with great splendour, uniting in its interior all the conveniences of a magnificent palace, with ample accommodations for soldiers. This citadel overlooked the two outer courts of the temple, and communicated with its cloisters by means of secret passages, through which the military could descend and quell any tumult that might arise during the great festivals. This was the guard to which Pilate alluded; Matt. xxvii. 65. The tower of Antonia was thus named by Herod, in honour of his friend Mark Anthony: and this citadel is the castle into which St. Paul was conducted; Acts xxi. 34, 35, and of which mention is made in Acts xxii. 24. As the temple was a fortress that guarded the whole city of Jerusalem, so the tower of Antonia was a fortress that entirely commanded the temple.

The city with Solomon's magnificent temple, was burnt to ashes, and robbed of its treasures, by the Chaldeans, B. C. 588. It was rebuilt by Nehemiah, and Divine worship restored by Ezra, B. C. 454—439, and taken again by Alexander the Great, B. C. 333. Antiochus, king of Syria, also besieged it, and took and plundered the temple, and established idolatry, B. C. 170; but it was recovered by Judas Maccabeus, B. C. 165. An alliance was at last formed with the Romans, by whom it was made a Roman province, B. C. 63. It suffered further evils, and became the capital of a tributary kingdom under Herod the Great, an Idumean by immediate descent, B. C. 40. The Jews rebelled against the Roman authority, and Titus, son of Vespasian, the Roman emperor, besieged, took, and reduced Jerusalem to rubbish, A. D. 70, in accordance with the prophecies of Jesus Christ. Since then it has been the scene of many conflicts by the Persians, Turks, Crusaders, &c.

Jerusalem is, to a truly religious spectator, one of the most melancholy objects on the globe. Once the most beautiful city in the East, it is now little better than a miserable village. History testifies that three millions sometimes assembled here, from all quarters of the world; now, its largest population may be fifteen thousand. Joliffe strikingly exhibits the general aspect of the city. "Were a person carried blindfold from England, and placed in the centre of Jerusalem, or on any hills which overlook the city, nothing, perhaps, would exceed his astonishment on the sudden removal of the bandage. From the centre of the neighbouring elevations, he would see a wild, rugged, mountainous desert—no herds depasturing on the summit, no forests clothing the acclivities, no water flowing through the valleys; but one rude scene of melancholy waste, in the midst of which the ancient glory of Judea bows her head in widowed desolation. On entering the town, the magic of the name, and all his early associations, would suffer a still greater violence, and expose him to still stronger disappointment. No 'streets of palaces and walks of state,' no high-raised arches of triumph, no fountains to cool the air, or porticoes to exclude the sun, no single vestige to announce its former military greatness or commercial opulence: but in the place of these, he would find himself encompassed on every side by walls of rude masonry, the dull uniformity of which is only broken by the occasional protrusion of a small grated window."

It is a remarkable fact, that nothing tended more to cause the destruction of Jerusalem, and thus to accomplish prophecy, than the conduct of the citizens who treated the testimony of Christ and the prophets with contempt. Believing that their city was holy, and consequently under the protection of Jehovah, they thought not of their own wickedness, nor of the power of Rome. They cherished the spirit of insurrection, and provoked, by every mode of insult, the indignation of the Romans, insomuch that Titus was unable to restrain the revenge and fury of his soldiers. Hence, though exceedingly desirous to save the temple, it was wholly consumed. How interesting it appeared in the eyes of the most enlightened Romans, may be imagined from the circumstance, that among the relics of Roman paintings, representations of some furniture of the temple of Jerusalem are still to be seen. Loudly does the state of this city proclaim that the glory of man is a scene passing away, but the word of God abideth for ever; Matt. xxiv.

Its present population is computed at 20,000, one fourth of which are Jews; but there has been no regular census for many ages. The Greek Christians are estimated by Messrs. Fisk and King at 2,000 and the Roman Catholics at 1,500. There are also Armenian, Coptic, Syrian, and Abyssinian Christians residing here. Christian missionaries from the United States have of late years made known, on this sacred spot, the glorious grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.

JERUSALEM 'shall be trodden down of the Gentiles,' Luke xxi. 24. The land was sold—the Jews not suffered to inhabit it, or to come near it—the scene of the successive conquests of the Romans, Saracens, and Turks.

JERUSALEM is symbolical of the church of God on earth, (Ps. cxxii. 6; Isa. lxxv. 18; lxxvi. 10.)—Also of the Church triumphant in heaven, Heb. xii. 22; Rev. iii. 12; xxii; Gal. iv. 21—26.

JERUSALEM for the church, Is. 24. 23, & 62. 1, & 66. 10, 13; Jer. 3. 17; Joel 2. 32, & 3. 16, 17; Zech. 8. 22; Gal. 4. 25, 26; Rev. 3. 12, & 21. 2.

JERUSHA, Je-rew'-shah, possessor of the inheritance.—The mother of Jotham, 2 Kings xv. 33.

JESAIAH, Je-sa'-i-ah.—See 1 Chr. iii. 21.

JESHAIAH, Jesh-a-i'-ah.—Son of Jeduthun, 1 Chr. xxv. 15.

JESHANAH, Jesh'-a-nah.—A city in the tribe of Ephraim, 2 Chron. xiii. 19.

JESHARELAH, Jesh-ar'-e-lah.—A Levite, 1 Chron. xxv. 14.

JESHEBEAH, Jesh'-eb'-e-ah.—A porter, 1 Chron. xxiv. 13.

JESHER, Je'-sher.—A son of Caleb, 1 Chron. ii. 18.

JESHIMON, Jesh'-e-mon, solitude.—A city in the wilderness of Maon, of the tribe of Simeon; 1 Sam. xxiii. 24.

JESIISHAI, Je'-shish'-a-i.—A Gadite, 1 Chron. v. 14.

JESHOHAIAH, Jesh-ho-ha-i'-ah.—A descendant of Simeon, 1 Chron. iv. 36.

JESHUAH, Jesh'-u-ah, a saviour.—A high-priest of the Jews, 1 Chron. xxiv. 11.

JESHURUN, Jesh'-u-run, upright.—A name given to the people of Israel, Deut. xxxii. 15; xxxiii. 5, 26; Isa. xlv. 2. It is a poetical expression, denoting affection. Also entirely righteous, and refers to the covenant relation in which the Israelites stood to God. While they adhered to the covenant, they were righteous in his sight.

JESIMIEL, Je-sim'-e-el.—A descendant of Simeon, 1 Chron. iv. 36.

JESSE, Jes'-se, to be, my present.—The son of Obed, and father of David. He had also six other sons, namely, Eliab, Abinadab, Shimmah, Nethanael, Raddai, and Ozen; Ruth iv. 17, 22; 1 Chron. ii. 13—15. He had also two daughters, whose names were Zeruiah and Abigail, verse 16. Thus he was the root of David, and one of the ancestors of the Messiah; Isa. xi. 1, 10; and the glorified Saviour has twice deigned to apply the name, "the root of David," to himself; Rev. v. 5; and chap. xxii. 16.

JESSE.—"Behold, I have seen a son of Jesse, the Bethlehemite, that is cunning in playing, and a mighty valiant man, and a man of war," &c.;

1 Sam. xvi. 18. Here David is described as a mighty valiant man, a man of war, &c.; yet in the following chapter (ver. 33, 39,) he is spoken of as a youth unused to arms, and unable to bear them. In chap. xvi. 19, &c., we read that Saul sent messengers to Jesse, saying, "Send David thy son;" and yet, pursuant to this order, David played on the harp before the king. Saul loved him greatly, and he became his armour-bearer, &c.; and Saul sent again to Jesse, "Let David, I pray thee, stand before me, for he hath found favour in my sight; ver. 21, 22. Yet in verse 55, next chapter, Saul is made to inquire of Abner, whose son was the conqueror of Goliath. He speaks of him as an entire stranger.

These are very great discrepancies, and can only be removed by a different arrangement of the chapters. Bishops Warburton, Hall, and Horsley, suppose that the encounter with Goliath took place before David played the harp before Saul. David was quite a youth when he engaged Goliath; 1 Sam. xvii. 33—42.—when introduced to Saul as a musician he was of full age; ch. xvi. 18.—his combat with Goliath was his first appearance in public life; ch. xvii. 56.—when introduced as a musician, he was a man of established character; ch. xvi. 18.—This combat with Goliath was his first military exploit; ch. xvii. 38, 39;—he was a man of war when introduced as a musician; ch. xvi. 18.—he was unknown to Saul and Abner when he fought with Goliath; he had not therefore been armour-bearer, nor resident at the court.

It is evident then that the last ten verses of the preceding chapter are misplaced. The true place for these ten verses (xvi. 14—23) is between the ninth and tenth verse of ch. xviii. Let these ten verses be removed to that place, and ch. xvii. be connected immediately with the 13th verse of ch. xvi., and the whole discrepancy will be removed.

JESTING, Eph. v. 4.—The original implies, expressing obscene double meanings.

JESUI, Jes'-u-i, who is equal, flat country.—A son of Asher, Num. xxvi. 44.

JESUS, Je'-sus, a Saviour, who saveth his people from their sins.—The Son of God, the Saviour of the world. This name is compounded of Yah, Jah, a name of God, and Houshaia (Hosea) the Saviour, and so it imports Jehovah the Saviour. In this sense the ancients understood it. So Eusebius of the third century says, "The name of Jesus means the salvation of God. For ISOVA among the Hebrews is salvation, and among them the son of Nun is called Joshua. And IASOUE is the salvation of Jah, i. e. salvation of God. The life and conduct, the miracles and teaching, the sufferings, death, &c., of Jesus, are narrated in the four Gospels of the Evangelists, and expatiated upon by the writers of the Epistles. There the Christian may gaze upon his Lord and Master, and meditate with spiritual profit; and the more he reads and contemplates, the more will he know and admire, and love. The happiest of mankind are those who sit at the feet of the Redeemer frequently.

Observe, Jesus was Divine; but he became incarnate. He allied himself to humanity, and in our nature he offered himself to God as a sacrifice without blemish and spot—an offering of a sweet-smelling savour, which God the Father graciously accepted that the sinner might be saved. This was his great work. It was infinite love that prompted it.

The Divinity of Christ appears from the titles of Deity being applied to him; Rom. ix. 5; Rev. i. 11; from the unqualified ascription to him of the attributes of Deity, as Eternity; Rev. xxii. 13; Omniscience; Rev. ii. 23; Omnipotence; Phil. iii. 21; Omnipresence; Matt. xviii. 20. He is declared to be the Creator, John i. 1, 2; the Preserver, Col. i. 16, 17;—to have the power of forgiving sins, Matt. ix. 2—6; Col. iii. 13, &c.;—to have power to raise the dead, 1 John v. 20; to be the Judge of quick and dead, 2 Cor. v. 10;

Rom. xiv. 10. He was often worshipped, and did not forbid it; and such worship is declared proper, Phil. ii. 10, 11; Heb. i. 6. See also Exod. xi. 7; Num. xxi. 5, 6; Ps. lxxviii. 56; John xx. 28; Luke xxiv. 51; Mark iv. 39; Col. ii. 10, &c.

JESUS the Saviour of men, Matt. 1. 21, & 2. 1, & 8. 29, & 14. 1, & 27. 37; 1 Cor. 12. 3; 2 Cor. 4. 5; Eph. 4. 21; Heb. 2. 9, & 12. 2; Rev. 22. 16.

JETHER, Je'-ther, excels, searches.—The son of Gideon, Judg. viii. 20.—The husband of Abigail, 1 Chr. ii. 17.

JETHETH, Je'-theth.—A descendant of Esau, Gen. xxxvi. 40.

JETHLAH, Jeth'-lah.—A city, Josh. xix. 42.

JETHRO, Je'-thro, excellence or posterity.—Priest or prince of Midian, the father-in-law of Moses, probably the same as Raguel, Exod. xviii. 12. It has been difficult to ascertain how he was related to Moses. The Hebrew word, Exod. iii. 1, translated father-in-law, and in Gen. xix. 14, son-in-law, simply denote relationship by marriage. It is probable that as forty years had elapsed since the first connection of Moses with this family, his father-in-law, Exod. ii. 18, Reuel, or Raguel, was dead, and that the person who visited Moses at the foot of Sinai, was his brother-in-law, called Hobab in Num. x. 29, and also Jethro.

JETUR, Je'-tur, he that keeps, succession, mountainous.—A son of Ishmael; Gen. xxv. 15.

JEUEL, Je'-u-el.—A son of Zerah, 1 Chr. ix. 6.

JEUSH, Je'-ush, devoured, gnawed by the moth.—A son of Esau, Gen. xxxvi. 5.

JEUZ, Je'-uz.—A Benjaminite, 1 Chron. viii. 10.

JEWELS.—Articles made of gold, silver, precious stones, &c. The Jews had great skill in their manufacture. Jewels have always been highly valued in the East especially. The term is used figuratively in describing the preciousness of the saints to Almighty God; Mal. iii. 16.

JEWEL.—"As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout," &c., "so is a fair woman without discretion," Prov. xi. 22. Eastern women wear nose jewels. Indiscretion in a woman is as unseemly as these ornaments in a swine. She is decorated, but still debased. Our translators have improperly substituted forehead and face for nose in Ezek. xvi. 12; Gen. xxiv. 47, which see.

JEWRY, Jew'-ry.—The land of Canaan, Dan. v. 13.

JEWS, Jews.—A name given to the Israelites, and derived from the patriarch Judah, who by his father's prophetic benediction was constituted the superior of his brethren, and from whose line of descent the sceptre of royalty was not to depart, till Shiloh or Messiah should be born.

The Jews have now no country of their own, but are found in most parts of the earth, though everywhere a degraded people, and oppressed either by custom or law. It is computed that their number now amounts to three or four millions. About one million are in the Turkish empire. In Europe they are numerous, especially in Poland, where there are 500,000, viz., Galicia, 90,000—Prussian Poland, 110,000—Russian Poland, 300,000.

As to the rest of Europe, there are in Hungary 76,000; in Germany, chiefly at Frankfort on the Main, Prague, Furth, and Berlin, 200,000; in Holland 20,000; in England 14,000; in France 50,000.

They are also numerous in the Barbary States, and the Levant. In the United States there are not more than two or three thousand. Most Jews are traders and brokers; few, if any, choose to cultivate the soil. The ancient distinction of tribes seems to be now wholly lost.

The Jew still walks the earth, and bears the stamp of his race upon his forehead. He is still the same being as when he first wandered forth from the hills of Judea. The Jew is a miracle among the nations. A wanderer in all lands, he has been a witness of the great events of history for eighteen hundred years. He saw classic Greece when crowned with intellectual triumphs. He lingered among that broken but beautiful architecture that rises like a tombstone over the graves of her departed splendour.

The Jew saw Rome, the "mighty heart" of nations, sending its own ceaseless life's throbs through all the arteries of its vast empire. He, too, has seen that heart cold and still in death. These have perished, yet the Jew lives on—the same silent, mysterious, indestructible being. The shadow of the Crescent rests on Palestine, the signet of a conqueror's faith—still the Jew and his religion survive. He wanders a captive in the streets of his own once queenly Jerusalem, to meditate sad and gloomily on the relics of ancient power. Above him shines the clear sky, fair as when it looked down on the towers of Zion, but now, alas, beholds only a desolate city and an unhappy land. The world is his home. Trampled on and exiled, his name a badge of infamy, he still lives, full of ancestral pride. The literature of the ancient Hebrews triumphs over all creeds, and schools, and sects. Mankind worship in the sacred songs of David, and bow to the divine teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, who also was a son of Abraham. Such is the Jew. His ancient dreams of empire are gone. How seldom do we realize, as we see him in our city streets, that he is the creature of such a strange, peculiar destiny. Neither age, nor country, nor climate have changed him. Such is the Jew, a strange and solitary being, and such the drama of his long and mournful history.

JEZANIAH, Jez-a-ny'-ah.—A person mentioned Jer. xlii. 1, probably the same as Azariah; Jer. xliii. 2.

JEZEBEL, Jez'-e-bel, isle or woe of the habitation or dunghill.—The daughter of Ethbaal, king of the Zidonians, and wife to Ahab, king of Israel; 1 Kings xvi. 31. She had great influence over her husband, and by that influence became a curse to the nation. She was an idolator, and supported a vast number of the priests of Baal, Astarte, and other deities. She tried to prevent the worship of the true God, and shamefully persecuted his prophets. Ahab fell into the same awful idolatry, and supported 450 priests. The character of Jezebel was most infamous, as will be seen by reading her history. Elijah fled from her presence; for her resentment was unbounded, on account of his faithful reproofs, and his victory over her priests. When her son Joram was slain, she knew that her power was gone, and tried to make the best of it. Hence as Jehu passed the palace (see JEHU) she exhibited herself, not in mourning for her son, but she had "tired her head, and painted her eyes." The eunuchs, at the command of Jehu, threw her down; and nothing was found of her, but the palms of her hands, and the soles of her feet; the dogs had eaten the rest; 1 Kings xvi. 31; xviii. 4, 13, 19; xxi. 5—25; 2 Kings ix. 7, 22, 30—37.

JEZEBEL stands foremost among the Scripture representatives of the grand apostacy, the false church, "the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth." On this account, Christ reproved the church at Thyatira for suffering that woman Jezebel to teach and to seduce the servants of God; Rev. ii. 20. The corrupt church is personified under the name and character of a wicked idolator, who married an Israelitish prince; and tried, by her influence, to draw his subjects aside from serving the true God. She was a type of the Popish Church.

JEZER, Je'-zer.—The son of Naphthali; Gen. xlvi. 24.

JEZIEL, Je'-ze-el.—David's ally; 1 Chron. xii. 3.

JEZLIAH, Jez'-ly'-ah.—A Benjamite; 1 Chron. viii. 18.

JEZOAR, Jez'-o-ar.—Descendant of Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 7.

JEZRAIAH, Jez'-ra-hy'-ah, the Lord arises, or in the east.—A singer in the temple; Neh. xii. 42.

JEZREEL, Jez'-re-el, seed of God. A city of Palestine. It was a royal city of the kings of Israel, who occasionally resided in it. It was situated in the beautiful plain of the same name, since called Esdraelon; it was the scene of many battles, and watered by the river Kishon. This plain formed part of the lot of Issachar, and was one of the most fertile districts of Canaan; Josh. xv. 56.

The name of another city in the tribe of Manasseh; Josh. xix. 18.—

A son of Etam; 1 Chron. iv. 3.—Also, a son of the prophet Hosea i. 4.

JEZREEL. “I will hear the heavens.....and they shall hear Jezreel;” Hosea ii. 21, 22.

“And it shall come to pass in that day,
I will hear, saith Jehovah,
I will hear the heavens;
And they shall hear the earth;
And the earth shall hear the corn,
And the choice wine and the oil;
And they shall hear Jezreel.”

The meaning seems to be that all nature shall hear and minister to the people whom God shall plant in their own land; or, to adopt the words of the learned Bishop Horsley, in his version of the prophecies of Hosea, It shall be in that day I will perform my part, saith Jehovah—I will perform my part upon the heavens; and they shall perform their part upon the earth; and the earth shall perform her part upon the corn, and the wine, and the oil; and they shall perform their part for the Jezreel, namely, the seed of God. We have here the action of God himself upon the powers of nature; then the subordinate action of the parts of nature upon one another; and last of all, the subservience of the elements, and their physical productions, to the benefit of man, and especially by the blessing of Providence, for the benefit of the people of God. The great numbers of the natural Israel converted by the preaching of the apostles, were the first seed of the universal church. And there is reason to believe, that the restoration of the converted Jews will be the occasion and means of a prodigious influx of new converts from the Gentiles in the latter ages; Rom. xi. 12, 15.

JEZREEL, Plain of.—Called also the Plain of Esdraelon, and the Great Plain; it is of vast extent, reaching from Mount Carmel and the Mediterranean to the place where the Jordan issues from the sea of Tiberias. In this place, Barak, descending with his ten thousand men from Mount Tabor, vanquished Sisera and his hosts; Jud. iv. and v. In this plain, Josiah, king of Judah, fought in disguise against Necho king of Egypt, and fell by the arrows of his antagonist; 2 Kings xxiii. 29.

This plain has been a chosen place for encampment in every contest carried on in that country from the days of Nabuchadonosor, king of the Assyrians, in the history of whose war with Arphaxad, it is called the great Plain of Esdraelon; Judith i. 8. For Jews, Gentiles, Saracens, Crusaders, Anti-christian Frenchmen, Egyptians, Persians, Druses, Turks, and Arabs, warriors out of every nation under heaven, have pitched their tents in the Plain of Esdraelon, and have seen the various banners of their nations wet with the dews of Tabor and Hermon.

This Plain is enclosed on all sides by the mountains. Very few trees or houses are to be seen in it, yet the whole appears to be highly cultivated; regularly ploughed for seed throughout. From one side of this extensive plain, the round eminence of Mount Tabor rises abrupt, near the foot of which, towards the south, are the springs of Ain-el-Sherrar, which form the brook Kishon of antiquity.

JEZREELITE, Jez'-re-el-ite.—An inhabitant of Jezreel; 1 Kings xxi. 1.

JIBSAM, Jib'-sam. — A son of Tola; 1 Chron. vii. 2.

JIDLAPH, Jid'-laf, he that distils, joins hands.—A son of Nahor; Gen. xxii. 22.

JIMNAH, Jim'-nah.—A son of Asher; Gen. xlvi. 17.

JIPHTAH, Jif'-tah.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xv. 43.

JIPHTAH-EL, Jif'-thah-el.—A valley in Palestine; Josh. xix. 14.

JOAB, Jo'-ab, paternity, or fatherliness.—The son of Zeruiah, David's sister, and brother to Abishai and Asahel; 1 Chron. ii. 16. He was one of the most valiant of men, and the greatest general in David's time, but very cruel and despotic. When Absalom rebelled, he proved faithful to David, and with an army less numerous than that of Absalom's, he conquered him, and routed his troops. It was the wish of David that Absalom's life should be spared; but Joab slew him; 2 Sam. xviii. 14. This act greatly affected and grieved the king. Joab also very freely censured the monarch for grieving for Absalom. David displaced him, and gave the command of the army to Amasa, whom Joab slew as soon as he found opportunity. He tried to promote the elevation of Adonijah to the throne instead of Solomon the legal heir, and in opposition to the wishes of David. Such conduct cost him his life; 1 Kings ii. 5—34. See next paragraph.

JOAB, 'thou knowest what Joab did to me,' &c. read 1 Kings ii. 5—8. David's conduct is not to be imputed to personal resentment, but his regard for justice. Joab for two most atrocious murders according to the law of God, should die, and it would have been a flagrant breach of that law, and an insult to justice not to have taken his life. David was culpable in delaying it so long. The exigency of the times produced the policy of delaying the punishment.

JOAH, Jo'-ah, who was a brother, brother of the Lord.—A Levite; 2 Kings xviii. 18.—Also the secretary to King Josiah; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 8.

JOAHAZ, Jo'-ah-haz.—The recorder to King Josiah; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 8.

JOANNA, Jo-an'-nah, grace or gift of the Lord.—The wife of Chuza. Herod's steward; who after being cured by Christ, followed him, and ministered to the wants of him and his disciples; Luke viii. 3.—Also the son of Rhesa; Luke iii. 27.

JOASH, Jo'-ash, who despairs, burns, or is on fire.—The son of Ahaziah, king of Judah. Jehoshebah, the wife of Jehoiada the high-priest, his aunt, preserved him from the murderous designs of Athaliah, his grandmother, when he was but a year old, and kept him hid six years in a chamber belonging to the temple. When he was seven years of age, Jehoiada entered into a solemn covenant with Azariah the son of Jehoram, Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, Azariah, the son of Obed, Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, to set up young Joash for their sovereign, and dethrone the wicked Athaliah. After preparing matters in the kingdom, and bringing the Levites, and such others as they could trust, to Jerusalem, they crowned him in the court of the temple with great solemnity.

After the death of his preserver, he worshipped idols, and put to death the prophet Zechariah, who was son of the guide of his youth. Thus he provoked Jehovah to forsake Judah, on whom the Syrians soon inflicted the severest sufferings, which roused the indignation of his people; and his servants cruelly killed him when he lay sick; Kings xi. xii.

JOASH, king of Israel, the son and successor of Jehoahaz, was raised to the throne in his father's life time, A. M. 3163, and reigned sixteen years, of which two were in conjunction with his father; 2 Kings xiii. He was a wicked prince, and followed the practices of Jeroboam the son of Nebat; yet he recovered from Benhadad, king of Syria, all the cities which Hazael had taken from his father Jehoahaz, and other places usurped by the Syrian monarchs. He favoured the prophet Elisha, and in his illness, visited him; 2 Kings xii. 9—25; xiv. 8—16.

JOASH. The father of Gideon; Judges vi. 11.—A son or servant of Ahab; 1 Kings xx. 26.—A son of Shela; 1 Chron. iv. 22.

JOB, Jobe. Sorrowful, crying out, or abiding enmity. Was a man of great probity, virtue, and religion, and justly celebrated for his patience. He is said to have dwelt in the land of Uz, or Ausitis, upon the confines of Idumea and Arabia, and is supposed to have been called Jobab. Job was probably descended from Uz, the eldest son of Nahor, Abraham's brother, from whom the country derived its name. Elihu, in reckoning up the modes of divine revelation, takes no notice of the delivery of the Mosaic law; nor does the book of Job in any part seem to allude to the Jewish history. We infer hence that Job was prior to Moses, or at least contemporary with him; and this inference is supported by the great age to which he lived. Both he and his friends worshipped the God of heaven in spirit and truth; and their religious knowledge was in general such as might have been derived from the early patriarchs. Job possessed great riches in cattle and servants, which at that time constituted the chief wealth even of princes in Arabia and Edom. He had seven sons and three daughters, and was in great repute among all the eastern people.

The Almighty tried his faith and patience severely. He was enabled to be resigned to his calamities, to overcome the reluctance of nature, and at length to say, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." Afterwards the Lord turned the captivity of Job, and light shone again in his dwelling. He was again blessed with health and friends, with a beautiful family and abundance of riches. After this lived Job an hundred and forty years: how long he had lived before his afflictions we cannot tell. So Job died, being old and full of days. He had seen life in all its varieties: he had risen higher than all the men of the east, and sunk lower in affliction, poverty, and distress, perhaps than any other human being that had existed before, or has lived since. He knew the worst and the best of human life: and in himself the history of providence was exemplified and illustrated, and many of its mysteries unfolded.

JOB, Book of.—This is one of the most extraordinary books of the Holy Scriptures, and has engaged the attention of the learned in all ages. Considerable diversity of opinion has obtained among biblical writers on its chronology, character, hero, and its author. Some have denied the actual existence of the venerable patriarch, and considered the book as a fictitious narration, intended to instruct through the medium of parable. That such a notion should have been entertained by men who credit the writings of Ezekiel or James, is something to excite surprise. Both these inspired writers speak of him as a real, and not a fictitious personage. See Ezek. xiv. 14; James v. 11.

This book must be very ancient. There is no mention of the departure from Egypt, &c. or the passage of the Red Sea, or the destruction of Sodom &c. These events transpired very near his own country, yet he never alludes to them. He must therefore have lived previously. He alludes to ancient forms of idolatry; the worship of the host of heaven; to the most ancient mode of writing with an iron pen and lead in the rock. The length of his life also accorded with that of the patriarchs. Dr. Hales refers to astronomical calculations which have been made to prove the time of his existence. Cesil Cimah, (marg.,) to which he refers, are supposed to be Taurus and Scorpio, Job ix. 9, the cardinal constellations of spring and autumn in his time, the principal stars of which are Aldebaran, the bull's eye, and Antares, the scorpion's heart. Knowing the present longitude of these stars, and calculating from the precession of the equinoxes, astronomers in France and in Britain have attempted to fix the time of Job; the British astronomers at about one hundred and eighty-four years before Abraham. But this is a very uncertain kind of argument. Dr. Hales fixes the time of Job about two thousand three hundred years before Christ.

Dr. Good divides the book into six parts, as under:—1. History of Job's character and trials; ch. i—iii.—2. First series of conversations or controversy.—Eliphaz's address; ch. iv. v; Job's answer; ch. vi. vii; Bildad's address; ch. viii; Job's answer; ch. ix. x; Zophar's address; ch. xi; Job's answer; ch. xii.—xiv.—3. Second series of controversy.—Eliphaz's address; ch. xv; Job's answer; ch. xvi. xvii; Bildad's address; ch. xviii; Job's answer; ch. xix; Zophar's address; ch. xx; Job's answer; ch. xxi.—4. Third series of controversy.—Eliphaz's address; ch. xxii; Job's answer; ch. xxiii. xxiv; Bildad's address; ch. xxv; Job's answer; ch. xxvi—xxxi.—5. Elihu's four speeches to Job; ch. xxxii—xxxvii.—6. Jehovah's first and second address to Job; ch. xxxviii—xli.—7. Humiliation of Job, and his final prosperity; ch. xlii.

JOB, his wife's request for him to curse God; Job ii. 9. Curse should be rendered bless. It is thought to be a strong irony; 'What! bless God for destroying thee?'—'Bless on, and die.' Parkhurst renders it thus; 'Dost thou yet retain thine integrity, blessing the Aleim (God) and dying, or even unto death?' In ch. i. 5, read 'nor blessed God,' and verse 11, 'will he then indeed bless thee to thy face?'

JOB, 'smote with sore boils, &c.' Job ii. 7, 8. Probably the black leprosy of the Arabs, termed elephantiasis by the Greeks, from its rendering the skin like that of the elephant, scabious, dark coloured, and furrowed all over with tubercles. It is accompanied with intolerable itching. He scraped, rasped himself with a potsherd, as he sat among the ashes, which might have been used medicinally, as ashes were beneficial in the drying of ulcers.

JOBAB, Jo'-bab.—The son of Joktan; Gen. x. 29, and a king of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 33, 34.

JOCHEBED, Jok'-e-bed, honourable glory of the Lord.—The wife of Amram, and the mother of Miriam, Moses, and Aaron; Ex. vi. 20.

JOED, Jo'-ed.—A returned captive Neh. xi. 7.

JOEL, Jo'-el, that wills, or whose God is Jehovah.—The son of Pethuel, the second of the twelve minor prophets. Nothing scarcely is known of his history. Some suppose that he delivered his predictions during the reign of Uzziah; consequently was contemporary with Isaiah, Amos and Hosea. The style of Joel is highly poetical: it is elegant, perspicuous, and copious; and at the same time nervous, animated, and sublime. In the two first chapters of this book, says Mr. Hartwell Horne, he displays the full force of the prophetic poetry; and his descriptions of the plague of locusts, of the deep national repentance, and of the happy state of the Christian church, in the last times of the gospel, are wrought up with admirable force and beauty; Joel ii. 28—32, compare with Acts ii. 1—21, and Acts x. 44.

JOEL, the prophet Samuel's eldest son. Samuel being grown old, made his two sons, Joel and Abiah, judges over Israel; 1 Sam. viii. They did not follow their father's example, but received presents, and were unjust in their judgments; which caused the elders of Israel to desire a king of Samuel. Several other persons of this name are mentioned in Scripture, but no particulars of their lives are recorded. See Ezra x. 43; 1 Chron. iv. 35; ch. vi. 36.

JOELAH, Jo-e'-lah. — David's friend; 1 Chron. xii. 7.

JOEZER, Jo-e'-zer, he that aids.—One of David's officers; 1 Chron. xii. 6.

JOGBEHAH, Jog'-be-hah. — A city; Num. xxxii. 35.

JOGLI, Jog'-ly.—A descendant of Dan; Num. xxxiv. 22.

JOHA, Jo'-hah.—A Benjaminite; 1 Chron. viii. 16.

JOHANAN, Jo-hay'-nan, who enlivens or gives life—See 2 Kings xxv. 23; Jer. xl. 15, 16.—The son of Josiah; 1 Chron. iii. 15.—A high-priest of the Jews; 1 Chr. vi. 9, 10

—The son of Elioenai ; 1 Chron. iii. 24.

JOHN, Jon, the grace or gift of God—The Baptist, the forerunner of Christ, the son of Zacharias and Elisabeth ; Luke i. 7, 13, 14. He was born about six months before our Saviour. His birth was proclaimed by the angel Gabriel : Luke i. 5—15. Of the early part of the Baptist's life, we have but little information. It is only observed, "that he grew and waxed strong in the spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel," ver. 80. The prophetic descriptions of him are various and striking. Isaiah speaking of him, says, "the voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a high-way for our God ;" Isaiah xl. 3 ; Mal. iv. 5 ; Matt. xi. 14. The appearance of the Baptist, when he first came out into the world, excited general attention. His clothing was "of camel's hair, bound round him with a leathern girdle, and his food consisted of locusts and wild honey ;" Matt. iii. 4. The message which he declared was authoritative : "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." And such was the effect produced, that "there went out unto him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins ;" Matt. iii. 1—6.

The circumstances of his death are recorded by the evangelists. Herod Antipas, having married his brother Philip's wife, Philip still living, caused great scandal. John the Baptist, having had an interview with this monarch, showed him the unlawfulness of his conduct. That cruel woman whom he had married, unable to plead her cause with any show of honesty, employed cruelty in her defence, and the faithful preacher's life was sacrificed ; Mark vi. 14 &c.

JOHN, the EVANGELIST and APOSTLE, a native of Bethsaida, in Galilee, and son of Zebedee and Salome ; by profession a fisherman,

Matt. iv. 21. John and his brother James were, doubtless, well acquainted with the Scriptures of the Old Testament, having read them and heard them explained in the synagogues ; and in common with other Jews, they entertained the expectation of the Messiah, and that his kingdom would be a temporal one. John has not recorded his call to the apostleship ; but we learn from the other three evangelists that it took place when he and James were fishing upon the sea of Galilee ; Mark i. 19, 20 ; Luke v. 1—10 ; and Mark, when he mentions James and John, says that our Lord surnamed them Boanerges, that is, the sons of thunder, chap. iii. 17, as prophetic of the zeal and resolution with which they would hereafter bear testimony to the great truths of the gospel. John was taken into the holy mount, where the greatest honours were conferred on his divine Master, while the greater part of his brethren had not that privilege. At the last supper, he sat next to him, reclining upon his breast, and was the only one who presumed to ask him who it was that should betray him ; John xiii. 23 ; Matt. xvii. 1, 2 ; Mark ix. 2. That he was treated by Christ with greater familiarity than the other apostles, is evident from Peter desiring him to ask Christ who should betray him, when he himself feared to propose the question. He seems to have been the only apostle present at the crucifixion ; and to him, Jesus, just as he was expiring upon the cross, gave the strongest proof of his confidence and regard, by consigning to him the care of his mother. As John had been witness to the death of the Saviour, by seeing the blood and water issue from his side, which a soldier had pierced, so he was one of the first who were made acquainted with his resurrection. He was one of those to whom Jesus appeared at the sea of Galilee ; and he was afterwards, with the other ten apostles, a witness of his ascension into heaven. John continued to preach the gospel for some time at Jerusalem: he was imprisoned by the Sanhedrim, first with Peter only, and afterwards with the other apostles. Some time after this second release, John and Peter were sent by the other apostles to the Samaritans, whom Philip the deacon had converted by the gospel, that "through them they might receive the Holy Spirit."

With this journey the Scripture history of John ends, except that he informs us in the Revelation, that he was banished to Patmos, an island in the Ægean sea; John xix. 25, 26; Acts viii. 14, 15; Rev. i. 9. On his liberation from exile, he returned to Ephesus, where he wrote his gospel and epistles, and died in the hundredth year of his age, about the year of Christ 100, and in the third year of the reign of the emperor Trajan.

JOHN'S GOSPEL.—It is evident that John had seen the three former Gospels before he wrote his own, for he carefully omits those transactions and discourses which had been recorded in them; or if he is obliged to notice them for the purposes of connection, &c., it is done in the most cursory manner. His conduct in this case is a sure proof, that he had not only seen, but approved the foregoing Gospels as faithful and true histories, and that he partly composed his own as supplemental to them all. In it we find more of doctrine, and less of historical detail, than in any of the other Gospels, as it was his design to refute some heresies which had arisen in the Christian church.

John's gospel contains many assurances, that Jesus is not only a prophet and messenger of God, but also that he is the Messiah, the Son of God; and it asserts his pre-existence and Deity in the clearest and most distinct terms. His narrative is characterized by singular perspicuity, and by the most unaffected simplicity and benevolence.

JOHN'S FIRST EPISTLE.—It is most probable that John, the beloved disciple of our Lord, wrote this Epistle in Judea, about the year A. D. 69. Its principal design was to preserve

Christians in the true faith of Christ, and to caution them from following, and giving ear to the erroneous opinions, which designing men were then trying to propagate in the church. It breathes throughout a spirit of love and gentleness, well worthy of that Apostle whose dying words were, "Love one another."

JOHN'S SECOND EPISTLE.—This Epistle was addressed to some lady of much eminence in the Christian Church, to warn her and all Christians against certain false teachers, who asserted that Christ was not a real man, but only in appearance, and that he did not suffer what he actually appeared to do. It was written A. D. 69.

JOHN'S THIRD EPISTLE.—John addressed this Epistle to an hospitable Christian, whose name was Caius, or Gaius, whom he commends for his good deeds. He also complains of Diotrophes who prated against the Apostles with malicious words, and expelled persons from the Church, according to his pleasure. This and the former Epistle are supposed to have been written from Ephesus.

JOIADA, Joy'-a-dah.—A Jewish high-priest; Neh. xii. 11.

JOIAKIM, Joy'-a-kim, establishing of the Lord.—The son of Jeshua; Neh. xii. 10.

JOIARIB, Joy'-a-rib.—One of the captives, the son of Zechariah; Ezra viii. 16; Neh. xi. 5.

JOIN, Ezr. 1. 10; Ezra 9. 14.

JOKDEAM, Jok'-de-am.—A city ; Josh. xv. 56.

JOKIM, Jo'-kim.—The son of Shelah ; 1 Chron. iv. 22.

JOKNEAM, Jok'-ne-am.—A city ; Josh. xii. 22.

JOKSHAN, Jok'-shan, hard, scandalous.—The second son of Abraham by Keturah ; Gen. xxv. 2.

JOKTAN, Jok'-tan, small, disgust.—The eldest son of Eber, a descendant of Shem, and supposed to be the progenitor of many Arabian tribes ; Gen. x. 25, 26.

JOKTHEEL, Jok'-the-el.—The name given by Amaziah to Selah, when he defeated the Edomites in the valley of Salt ; 2 Kings xiv. 7. — Also a city in the tribe of Judah ; Josh. xv. 38.

JONA, or JONAS ; Jo'-nah, Jo'-nas, a dove, he that oppresses.—The name of Peter's father ; Matt. xvi. 17.

JONADAB, Jon'-a-dab, earnest, liberal.—The son of Shimeah, a relative of David ; 2 Sam. xiii. 3.

JONAH, Jo'-nah, a dove, he that oppresses.—The son of Amatai, and the fifth of the minor prophets. He was a Galilean, and a native of Gath-hepher ; 2 Kings xiv. 25. His prophecy is the oldest in the sacred book, B. C. 823. His impartiality in recording his own sins is worthy of notice, for this conduct is peculiar to the sacred writers.

From his history the Greeks seem to have derived the story of Hercules, having lived three days without injury in the belly of a dog, sent against him by Neptune. The fable of Arion and the Dolphin has probably the same origin.

JONAH being in the belly of a whale, (Jonah i. 17 ; Matt. xii. 40,) is said to be impossible, as the throat of a whale is capable of admitting only a man's arm, and these fish are never found in the Mediterranean sea.—The original word for whale signifies any large fish. Bochart thinks that the shark is here intended. That fish, without any miracle, can easily swallow a man without the least hurt. Men have been found entire in their stomachs. Of course it was a miracle for God to preserve Jonah alive so long in the belly of the fish. Mr. Charles Taylor supposes it to have been a floating preserver, by which Jonah was saved from drowning. DAG primarily means a fish, and also a fish-boat, and figuratively, a preserver, so that the passage may be rendered, "The Lord prepared a large DAG [preserver] to receive Jonah, and Jonah was in the inner part [the belly or hold] of this DAGAH, three days and nights, and then was cast up on the shore." This allusion is adverted to by Christ, (Matt. xii. 40,) "As Jonah was in [te koilia tou ketou] the hollow cavity of the KETOS three days and nights, so shall the Son of Man be in the heart of the earth." Great ships were called ketos.

Some have considered the Book of Jonah a myth, and some an allegory. The design of most of these explanations is to get rid of the miracle ; and rather than acknowledge it, some suppose that Jonah was taken up by a ship with a figure-head of a fish ; others that he was shipwrecked, and took refuge in a stranded whale ; others, that the fish's mouth was large enough to accommodate Jonah betwixt the cheek and the teeth. Thus we see that the sceptical mind labours to get rid of the miracle ! But does it not require a stronger faith to receive any of the foolish hypotheses before stated ? The preservation of Jonah was a miracle. Admit this, and the difficulty vanishes. The design of Jehovah in this miraculous interference would have a beneficial influence on the prophet and on the inhabitants of Nineveh. There is no evidence to prove that the Book of Jonah is an allegory. Christ alludes to it as a literal occurrence ; Matt. xii. 40. See also Matt. xvi. 4 ; Luke xi. 32.

JONAN, Jo'-nan, a dove.—The son of Eliakim ; Luke iii. 30.

JONAS.—"For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly ; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth;" Matt. xii. 40. The parts only of the first and last days were reckoned. The Greeks commonly speak of three days ago when they mean that a day only intervened.

The same quantity of time, three days and three nights, which in reality was only one whole day, a part of two others, and two whole nights, is called three days and three nights in Esther iv. 16:—"Go, neither eat nor drink, three days, night or day, and so I will go in unto the king." And in chapter v. 1, it follows "On the third day, Esther stood in the inner court of the king's house."

JONATHAN, Jon'-a-than, given of God.—The son of Gershom, and grandson of Moses, a Levite in the house of Micah, at Laish; Judges xviii. 30—Also the son of Saul, and the sincere and steady friend of David, and one of the most lovely characters delineated in the Scriptures; 1 Chron. xi. 34; 1 Chron. xx. 7; Ezra x. 15; Neh. xii. 11; Jer. xxxvii. 15. The love of David and Jonathan is beautifully narrated in holy Scripture. How kindly and tenderly did he act towards David in exile, and when his life was sought by Saul, his father; 1 Sam. xviii. 1-4; xix. 2. There was a covenant of perpetual friendship between them. Some years after, Jonathan was slain with his father at Gilboah. David tenderly bewailed his death, and showed the most affectionate kindness to Mephibosheth his son; 1 Sam. xix. and xx.; 2 Sam. i. and ix. In Jonathan were discovered—intrepidity in danger, and friendship endearing and steadfast, and fidelity to every vow. Unlike his father, his excellence shines untarnished to the last; nor is there a single trait in his character to mingle shame with our sorrow.

JOPPA, Jop'-pah, beauty, comeliness.—A sea-port town in Palestine, formerly the only port to Jerusalem. It was probably built by Japhet, and was first called in Hebrew Japho, and in Greek Joppa. The modern name is Jaffa. It is inhabited by about 3,000 Turks, Arabs, and a few others. In the days of Solomon, it was a noted sea-port, where the wood brought from Lebanon was unloaded; 2 Chr. ii. 16. It was probably so in the days of Jeroboam the Second, when Jonah sailed from it to Tarshish.

Joppa, or Jaffa, is situated on a sandy promontory jutting out from the Eastern coast of the Mediterranean, about thirty-five miles from Jerusalem.

Of Jaffa, a recent traveller says, "There is more orientalism, more glow than at Jerusalem. The banana and the palm wave among the orange groves. As we crossed the beautiful plain, sprightly larks were sweetly carolling overhead. People were carrying the harvest home upon their camels. The camels had bells, very musical in the distance. What abundance of corn! Huge extensive plains—one field of corn as far as the eye can reach. In one place there must have been the population of several villages at work together, and many visitors, some of them white-sheeted women, seated and looking on. Large herds of cattle were coming into the stubble, after the cutting was done; and a lively scene it was,—camels, cows, asses, dogs, children, reapers, gleaners, and visitors, and an uncouth-looking horseman, ragged, sunburnt, armed with a long spear. This was the tax-gatherer, one of the irregular horse soldiers of the Sultan, ready to claim his share as soon as it should be threshed. There was tobacco-picking in some parts. Then we approached the fruit gardens of Jaffa. Water machines busy, and refreshing to behold; little earthen jars tied on a wooden wheel, bringing up the water. Oh the wonders of watered sand! In the trenches we saw it to be pure unmitigated sand, in which grow forests of oranges, figs, pomegranates, almonds, lemons, and numerous young palms coming up, and vines creeping wild over hedges of prickly pear, or up large trees, then hanging down again."

Jaffa has little of modern improvements, although it is the sea-gate to Jerusalem. It is without docks, or quays, and is unlighted; it has no shops, markets, or streets. From Jaffa Jonah sailed to Tarshish, instead of going to Nineveh. Here Peter restored Dorcas to life, and received the messages of Cornelius, when he lodged with one Simon, a tanner, on the roof of whose house he had the vision, which so enlarged his heart that he could afterwards find room, and even love in it for the poor despised Gentiles.

Jaffa has been the scene of much slaughter and murder by the Saracens, Crusaders, Turks, and French. Pompey, Alexander, Saladin, Napoleon—terrible names! all visited this city. In 1799, Napoleon I. besieged Jaffa; the garrison offered to surrender on condition that they should be spared. Eugene and Crosier, two of Napoleon's staff officers, agreed to the terms. They did so, and the 4000 soldiers were led to the head quarters of the French army. Napoleon sternly ordered them to sit down, and to have their hands tied behind their backs. A council of war was held, and though they had been promised life, yet the tyrant Napoleon, cruel and monstrous, signed the death-warrant of the whole 4000. Bound and helpless, they were led to the sea-shore, and formed into squares for execution. They sent a messenger to remind Napoleon of the terms of surrender; but the hero who had just visited the hospital, and ordered the poisoning of 400 sick persons, could now order 4000 to be murdered. For five hours French soldiers fired volley after volley into the dense mass, till all were dead!

JORAI, Jo'-ra-i.—A descendant of Gad, 1 Chron. v. 13.

JORAM, Jo'-ram, to cast, elevated.

—The son of Toi, king of Hamath, in Syria; 2 Sam. viii. 10.—The son and successor of Ahab, king of Israel; 2 Kings viii. 16. Though he renounced the worship of Baal, he was a wicked king; 2 Kings iii. 3. After the Lord had miraculously terrified the Syrians, and made them run out of the Hebrew kingdom, Joram, it seems, took Ramoth-gilead out of their hands, at least he laid siege to it; but being wounded, he went home to Jezreel, to be healed of his wounds: nor was he long there, when Jehu came and murdered him, and cast his dead body into the field or vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, whose murder God had threatened to avenge on the family of Ahab; and which Jehu destroyed at the same time he killed Joram his master, i. e., A. M. 3120; 2 Kings iii., v., vi., &c.; 2 Chron. xxii.

JORAM.—“In the fifth year of Joram;” 2 Kings viii. 16. This verse ought to be read thus;—“In the fifth year of Joram, son of Ahab, king of Israel (omitting, and of Jehoshaphat king of Judah), reigned Jehoram son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah.” The three Hebrew words, vayehoshaphat melech yehudah, meaning, “and of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah,” greatly disturb the chronology in this place. Jehoshaphat reigned twenty-five years, and Jehoram his son reigned only eight; 1 Kings xxii. 42; 2 Kings viii. 17; 2 Chron. xx. 31; xxxi. 5. So that he could not have reigned during his father's life without being king twenty years and eight years! These words are wanting in three of Kennicott's and De Rossi's MSS, in some of the Septuagint, Peshito, Syriac, the Arabic, in many copies of the Vulgate, &c., &c.

It is supposed that Jehoshaphat associated his son with him in the kingdom; and that the fifth year in this place only regards Joram king of Israel, and not Jehoshaphat king of Judah.

JORDAN, Jor'-dan, the river of judgment, that rejects judgment.—The chief river of Palestine, which has its head spring in mount Lebanon, 12 miles north of Cesarea Philippi. After running about 12 miles it receives the river Banias, which proceeds from the lake Phiala. About 15 miles further south, it forms the waters of Merom, or lake of Semechion, which is about 4 miles broad and nearly 8 long. After running about 28 miles further south, it forms the lake, or sea of Genesareth, 13 miles long and 6 broad. Then it runs southward through a long valley, till it loses itself in the Dead Sea. Its whole course is about 160 miles. Volney and others say that it overflows its banks in March and April, in consequence of the melting of the snow of Lebanon and Hermon. Before it enters the Dead Sea, its ordinary breadth is about 35 yards. The ordinary depth is about twelve feet; but this was greatly increased at certain seasons. The current is very rapid. It has an outer bank, about a furlong distant from the other: such it seems was its width when swollen. The banks of a great part of it are covered with thickets, in which lions were wont to lodge. When driven thence, by the overflowing of the river, they wandered about, and were dangerous to such as dwelt near; Jer. xlix. 19. Almost all other streams in Palestine but this, become dry in the midst of summer. Its waters are remarked for being peculiarly sweet and wholesome. There were fordable places during the dry season; Judges iii. 28; and several ferries; 2 Sam. xix. 18. The deep stream of the Jordan was divided under Joshua, and by Elijah and Elisha. In it John baptized multitudes, and also our Saviour; Josh. iii.; 2 Kings ii.; Matt. iii.; Mark i.

JORDAN.—"Beyond Jordan," means in the Pentateuch, the country west of that river; but when used by the residents of Canaan, it denotes the country lying east.

JORDAN.—"Region round about Jordan," &c., (Matt. iii. 5), comprised the level country on each side of that river, from the lake of Gennesareth to the Dead Sea, including the plain of Jericho.

JORIM, Jo'-rim, he that exalts the Lord.—The son of Matthat; Luke iii. 29.

JORKOAM, Jor'-ko-am.—A descendant of Judah, 1 Chron. ii. 44.

JOSABAD, Jos'-a-bad.—A captive, 1 Chron. xii. 4.

JOSAPHAT, Jos'-a-fat.—Christ's ancestor, Matt. ii. 8.

JOSE, Jo'-se, raised.—The son of Eliezer, Luke iii. 29.

JOSEDECH, Jos'-e-dech.—A high-priest, Hag. i. 1.

JOSEPH, Jo'-sef, increase, addition.—The son of Jacob and Rachel, and brother to Benjamin; Gen. xxx. 22—24. He was born in Mesopotamia, A. M. 2259. See his history in the latter part of the book of Genesis, which is one of the most beautiful and attractive that ever was written. It is far better to read and study the Scripture history of Joseph than any treatise whatever on the patriarch.

JOSEPH.—"And he wept aloud," &c. Read Gen. xlv. 2, 3. This is exactly the genius of the people of Asia. Their sentiments of joy or grief, are properly transports, which are ungovernable, excessive, and sometimes outrageous. When any one returns from a long journey, or dies, his family burst into cries so loud that they may be heard twenty doors off, and which are often renewed and continued many days, according to the vigour of the passions.—Chardin.

JOSEPH, the husband of Mary, and reputed father of Jesus, was the son of Jacob, and grandson of Matthan; Matt. i. 15, 16. He resided at Nazareth, where he followed the occupation of a carpenter; Matt. xiii. 55. He is said to have been "a just man," Matt. i. 19, or one who looked for the coming of the Messiah. By mutual consent Joseph and Mary resolved to live asunder for some time after their marriage, having imposed upon themselves the observation of a vow. But while they continued in this resolution, Joseph observed Mary, his espoused wife, to be in a state of pregnancy; and being ignorant of the cause, he conceived it to be his duty to put her away in a private manner. While revolving this project in his mind, however, an angel appeared to him by night, and made him acquainted with the mysterious conception of his virgin wife; and at the same time exhorting him not to be afraid of taking her to him, since that which was conceived of her was of the Holy Spirit.

Joseph therefore took her to his own house, and kept her there as his wife. About six months after, he and his wife were registered at Bethlehem, where Christ was born, whom, to avoid Herod's cruelty, he carried to Egypt; and returning thence, settled at Nazareth, where he lived till his death, which is supposed to have happened before our Saviour's entering on his public ministry; Matt. i. 18—25; Luke i. 26—38, 56.

JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA, a Jewish senator, and privately a disciple of Christ; Luke xxiii. 50; John xix. 38. It may be easily supposed, that this person did not assent to the sentence pronounced on Jesus by the Sanhedrim, since, after our Saviour's death, he went boldly and begged the body of our Lord, and buried him in an honourable manner, in a new tomb which he had caused to be made for his own family; Matt. xxvii. 60.

JOSEPH, called Barsabas. See Barsabas.

JOSES, Jo'-sees, raised, who pardons, Saviour.—The son of Mary Cleophas, brother to James the Less; Matt. xiii. 55; xxvii. 56; Mark xv. 40. He was the son of Mary, sister to the Virgin, and of Cleophas, Joseph's brother.

JOSHUA, Jo'-shah.—See 1 Chron. iv. 34.

JOSHAVIAH, Josh-a-vy'-ah.—One of David's worthies, 1 Chron. xi. 46.

JOSHBKASHAH, Josh-bek'-a-shah.—A singer in the temple, 1 Chr. xxv. 4.

JOSHUA, Josh'-u-ah, the Lord, the Saviour.—The son of Nun, of the tribe of Ephraim, and born A. M. 2460. He devoted himself to the service of Moses, and in scripture is frequently called his servant; Exod. xxiv. 13. Seven years of his government he was engaged in the conquest of Canaan, and during the remainder he enjoyed it in peaceful possession. He was the writer of the first of the historical books of the Old Testament, as they are called, which include all the succeeding books as far as Esther.

Though the writings of Moses (called the Pentateuch, because in five books) are in a large degree historical, yet because they contain the law which God gave on Sinai, they are together called the Law; John i. 17. The Pagan fable of Phaeton driving the chariot of the sun for one day is thought to have been founded upon the standing still of that luminary at the word of Joshua. His expulsion of the Canaanites is abundantly corroborated by profane history. Among the many evidences from hence, we may mention the pillar which Procopius saw in the time of Justinian, near to where Tangier in Africa now stands, on which were inscriptions to this effect, — "WE ARE FUGITIVES FROM THE FACE OF JOSHUA, THE ROBBER, THE SON OF NUN."

When Joshua died, he assembled the heads of the tribes, and the leading men of the nation. He reminded them of the Divine goodness to the nation, and his miraculous interpositions on its behalf, from the time of Abraham; he reminded them of their national advantages and the excellence of God's service; and he called upon them to choose whom they would serve, saying, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord." Never did Joshua appear to the eyes of the pious Israelites in a more venerable point of light than upon this occasion. His attitude, voice, countenance, and manner of address, we may be sure, all strongly marked his ardent zeal for the glory of God, and the tender feelings of his heart for their real good. Nor was the effect inconsiderable: the people answered and said, "God forbid that we should forsake the Lord, to serve other gods. We will serve the Lord, for he is our God;" Josh. xxiv. 15—18. Joshua succeeded Moses in the government of Israel about the year of the world 2553, and died at Timnath-serah in the one hundred and tenth year of his age, A. M. 2578.

JOSHUA, Book of.—The book of Joshua comprises the history of about 20 years, and forms a continuation and completion of the Pentateuch. It describes the conquest of Canaan; its partition among the tribes; and the death and burial of Joshua. The latter passages were written by Phinehas, or by some subsequent prophet; Joshua xxiv. 29—33.

JOSHUA. ‘Sun, stand thou still, &c., and thou moon, &c. Josh. x. 12, &c. Critics remark, that the words rendered sun and moon are not those which generally denote those bodies, but rather the solar and lunar light; and the meaning seems to be, that the Lord miraculously preserved the reflected light of the sun and moon for the discomfiture of his enemies, that all might know that he was the Supreme God. That the day was really prolonged in this miraculous manner, is evident from the circumstances of the narrative. The army marched all night from Gilgal, came early in the morning to Gibeon, where Joshua put the enemy to flight, and pursued them from the ascent of Beth-horon to Azekah, where the storm of great hailstones fell; after this he commanded the sun and moon to stand still. If we remember that this miracle was the work of an Omnipotent Being, we have a cause sufficient for the event. “The prophet Habbakuk,” says a late excellent writer, “according to his lofty manner, celebrates this event, and points out, in very poetical diction, the design of so surprising a miracle:—‘The sun and moon stood still in their habitation: in thy light, (the long continued and miraculous light,) thy arrows, edged with destruction, walked on their awful errand; in the clear shining of the day, protracted for this very purpose, thy glittering spear, launched by the people, but guided by thy hand, sprung to its prey;’” Hab. iii. 11. Dr. Clarke, in an able critique, contends for the literal import of the original words, which he renders, “Sun! upon Gibeon be dumb, and thou moon on the valley of Ajalon.” This language he deems strictly philosophical, implying that Joshua was inspired to pray that the influence of the sun, which he assumes is the sole instrumental cause of the motion of the earth and the planetary system, might be restrained: the necessary consequence of which was, the continuance of the light or day.—“In the midst,” or, in the division “of the heavens,” means upon the horizon. The battle was apparently fought when the moon was about full, and appeared on the eastern horizon at the time that the sun was about setting in the west. In the place where Joshua stood, he had Gibeon to the west, and Ajalon to the east.—“About a whole day,” rather when the day was complete.’ The object of this miracle was of the most important nature. The sun and the moon, the two principal gods of the idolatrous heathen nations were commanded implicitly to obey Joshua the servant of the true God, and thereby to contribute to the more effectual conquest of their own worshippers. Let objectors know that the machine of the universe is in the hand of God; he can stop the motion of any part or of the whole, with less trouble than a man can stop a watch. It is absurd, then, to believe in the existence of the Almighty God, yet deny the possibility of the exertion of his power in other ways than those which are known to man’s limited experience.

Bishop Colenso represents the thing as impossible, as it would “stop the earth’s diurnal rotation on its axisso that every human being and animal would have been dashed to pieces in a moment, and a mighty deluge have overwhelmed the earth”—the thing, says he, is “improbable, incredible, and absurd.” In answer to these childish objections, we ask, Cannot the Almighty safely and effectually govern his own works? Surely he is infinitely wiser than the conductor of a ship, or of a Railway train! They do not stop them suddenly, but gradually, and therefore safely. If a railway train, or suppose a Railway Engine alone, was proceeding at the rate of 100 miles an hour, would it be safe to stop it instantaneously? A prudent and cautious

Engineer knows how to act—he would by turning off the steam, and by the use of breaks, arrest its course gradually to insure safety. So the Almighty acted with infinite wisdom in working this miracle, and had respect to the welfare of his creatures by gradual operation, and not so by suddenly arresting the diurnal rotation of the earth.

When it is said the sun and moon stood still, it is the popular phrase, used by all astronomers to indicate that the earth was arrested on its axis, and in its orbit also; instead of revolving on its axis, it rested; instead of marching in its orbit, it became stationary.

JOSHUA. The name of the high-priest of the Jews after their return from Babylon; Zech. vi. 11. He cooperated with Zerubbabel in rebuilding the temple; Ezra v. 1, 2; Hag. i. 1; ii. 2—4. Zechariah saw him as standing before the Lord in filthy garments, and Satan at his right hand to accuse and resist him; an angel rebuked the devil, and arrayed Joshua in clean robes; Zech. iii. 1—4.

JOSIAH, Jo-sy'-ah, fire of the Lord.—The son of Amon, king of Judah; 2 Kings xxii. 1. He began to reign when eight years of age, A. M. 3363; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 1. When he was little more than a child, his heart was truly affected with Divine things. "While he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father." At an early age, he called upon his people to unite with him in the true worship of God. In the twelfth year of his reign he began to rid the nation of idols and idolatrous worship. The altars, the images, the groves, and the vessels made use of in their Pagan rites, were utterly destroyed: the priests also, who had supported these corruptions, were put down with marks of infamy. It is obvious, that he had to conflict with very formidable difficulties: but the fervour of his zeal carried him through them all. He was not satisfied with issuing his orders, or sending his officers to effect this change; but he went personally in procession through the kingdom, to see his commands executed. Whilst he burned the bones of the idolatrous priests upon Jeroboam's altar at Bethel, he fulfilled the divine prediction, in which he himself was described by name, and by which that particular office had been assigned him, three hundred and fifty years before; and it should seem, that he was ignorant of the prophecy, till he had literally accomplished it; 1 Kings xiii. 2; 2 Kings xxiii. 15—20.

During the repairs of the temple, Hilkiah the high-priest found a complete copy of the law of Moses. Josiah read it, and was filled with grief to find how they and their fathers had departed from the will of God. He humbled himself, and received assurances of the Divine favour.

No sooner did Josiah perceive the importance of the book of God, than he desired to acquaint his subjects with it. He summoned all the elders of the nation, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and went with them to the temple; nor was he ashamed to appear as a preacher before them; 2 Kings xxiii. 1, 2, 3. He then read in their ears those awful denunciations of the divine law, which had made so strong an impression on his own heart. There also he bound himself by an express covenant to serve the Lord with a steadfast and unreserved obedience, and required the whole congregation to enter into the engagement. The prince and the people had bound themselves to God by the most express promises in the temple. But Josiah was desirous that their vows should be ratified in a still more solemn manner, by a public celebration of the passover; 2 Chron. xxxv. The piety and zeal of Josiah never appeared more eminent than on that occasion.

He was accessory to his own death by going to oppose Pharaoh-Necho, in his expedition against Carchemish, a city by the Euphrates. There might be political reasons, which would justify him as a statesman; but probably, he acted without due deliberation and consulted not the Lord, or his prophets. However this might be, Josiah received a mortal wound in the engagement, and died as they conveyed him from Megiddo to Jerusalem. Doubtless, he was removed out of mercy to himself, that he might not behold the approaching desolation of his country; but in judgment to the people, who, notwithstanding the piety of their prince, were making ready for destruction. They acknowledged his worth, when he was taken away from them; and while they felt their loss, they mourned for him throughout all the nation, with expressions of deepest sorrow; 2 Chron. xxxv. 25.

JOT.—The smallest Hebrew letter, Jod, or yod; Matt. v. 18. Some suppose it refers to a point, or one of those little strokes in the tops of letters, which the Jews call crowns or spikes. —The passage means that not the least precept or requirement can be dispensed with.

JOTBAH, Jot'-bah.—A city; 2 Kings xxi. 19.

JOTBATHAH, Jot'-ba-thah.—An encampment of the Hebrews in the wilderness; Num. xxxiii. 34.

JOTHAM, Jo'-tham, perfection of the Lord.—Gideon's youngest son, who escaped the massacre of his brethren; Judges ix. 5. Also,

The son and successor of Uzziah, who having been smitten with leprosy, the government was committed to Jotham. He governed some years before his father's death; and after it, he reigned sixteen years alone; 2 Kings xv. 32, 33. His reign was prosperous, and he ruled in the fear of the Lord; for "he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord," &c. He effected many public improvements, repaired the gate of the temple, and built and rebuilt various towns, castles, &c. He died greatly lamented, and was buried in the sepulchre of the kings; 2 Kings xv. 32—38; 2 Chr. xxvii. 1, &c. Isaiah lived during his reign; Isa. i. 1.

JOURNEY.—A passage from place to place; Gen. xxix. 1; Exod. xiii. 20; Num. x. 29; Rom. i. 10.

JOURNEY.—A Day's journey is from sixteen to twenty miles. But according to Mr. Harmer, the eastern journeys are often performed in the night, on account of the great heat of the day. This is the time in which the caravans chiefly travel: the circumstance therefore of the arrival of a friend at midnight is very probable. See Luke xi. 5, 6.

JOURNEY.—A Sabbath day's journey was generally reckoned by the Jews to be two thousand cubits; which was the distance between the ark and the camp, when they marched; Josh. iii. 4. And probably the same proportion was observed when they rested. This is usually computed at about eight furlongs, or a mile; Acts i. 12.

JOY.—An agreeable emotion of the soul, arising from the hope or possession of some good; 1 Chron. xii. 40. Religious joy is the delight and satisfaction of the soul in its union with God in Christ, as the greatest and highest good. This joy is the fruit of the Spirit—because the Spirit produced conviction of sin, led to a knowledge of Christ—to repentance and faith—to pardon of all sin, freedom from condemnation by the law—holy fellowship with God and his people—security under the care of Almighty God—and to the hope of a glorious resurrection to eternal life; Gal. v. 22.

Joy refers also to the agreeable emotions of Christ in prospect of the termination of his sufferings—his exaltation to the right hand of God—his ultimate triumph over every foe; and the salvation and glory of his people through him and with him; Heb. xii. 2. It refers to the happiness of heaven; Matt. xxv. 21, 23; Luke xv. 7, 10.

JOY 'upon their heads,' Isa. xxxv. 10. May refer to a custom of wearing a wreath, or chaplet of flowers in time of festivity, as is often done now, and as was commonly done among the ancients in triumphant processions; see also Isa. 51. 11.

JOYFUL SOUND, 'Blessed is the people that know, &c.; Ps. lxxxix. 15. Alluding to the sound made over the sacrifices on the solemn feast-day, Ps. lxxxix. 3; or to the sound of the bells of the high-priest, when he went into the holy place, Ex. xxviii. 35; or more probably to the sound of the jubilee trumpet; Lev. xxv. 9.

JOZACHAR, Joz'-a-kar.—One who slew king Joash, 2 Kings xii. 21.

JOZADAK, Joz'-a-dak.—One of the captives; Ezra iii. 2.

JUBAL, Jew'-bal, he produces a trumpet.—Son of Lamech, inventor of musical instruments, such as the kinnor, which we call the harp, and the ugab, which we render organ; the former word referring to stringed, and the latter to wind instruments, Gen. iv. 21.

JUBILEE, Jew'-be-lee, sounding or flowing.—The fiftieth year among the Jews, which immediately followed the seven weeks of years, or seven times seven years, mentioned Lev. xxv. 10. It began on the tenth day of the seventh month, on the day of solemn atonement; Lev. xxiii. 27, and was proclaimed through all the nation, by the sound of trumpets. This 'joyful sound,' cancelled all debts, hushed all litigations, released all prisoners, liberated all slaves, and recovered all estates that had been sold, and restored them to their owners, Lev. xxv. 8, &c. To this happy year the scriptures frequently allude; it represents the glory and peace of Messiah's kingdom. 'In that day, shall the great trumpet be blown, and they shall come who are ready to perish; Isa. xxvii. 13. 'The ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs,' &c.; Isa. xxxv. 10; li. 14. 'Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound,' &c.; Ps. lxxxix. 15.

JUCAL, Jew'-kal.—The son of Shelemiah; Jer. xxxviii. 1.

JUDAH, Jew'-dah, the praise of the Lord.—The son of Jacob and Leah, who was born in Mesopotamia, A. M. 2255; Gen. xxix. 35. He was chief of the most powerful and highly honoured tribes of Israel. Judah had a vigorous mind, ardent passions, and strong natural eloquence. He was greatly attached to his father and his brethren; and to promote and secure their welfare, he was willing to submit to slavery, and even to death. The prophetic blessing of his father Jacob is very remarkable; Gen. xlix. 8—12. It describes the martial character of his tribe; and so the people proved themselves to be; Josh. xiv. 11; xv. 1; Judg. i. 1, 2; Ps. xviii. 40.

In the different stages of its strength, this tribe is compared to a lion's whelp, to a full grown lion, and to a nursing lioness, the fiercest of all. Hence a lion was the standard of Judah; compare Num. ii. 3; Ezek. i. 10. The city of David, where he reposed himself after his conquests, secure in the terror of his name, 1 Chron. xiv. 17, was called Ariel, the lion of God; Isa. xxix. 1. And our Lord himself, his most illustrious descendant, the lion of the tribe of Judah; Rev. v. 5.

"The sceptre of dominion," as it is understood, Esth. viii. 4; Isa. xiv. 5, &c. or its civil government, was not to cease or depart from Judah, until the birth or coming of Shiloh, signifying the apostle, as Christ is styled; Heb. iii. 1, nor was the native law-giver, or expounder of the law, teacher or scribe, intimating their ecclesiastical polity, to cease, until Shiloh should have a congregation of peoples, or religious followers, attached to him. And how accurately was this fulfilled in both these respects!

(1) Shortly before the birth of Christ, a decree was issued by Augustus Cæsar, that all the land of Judea and Galilee should be enrolled, or a registry of persons taken, in which Christ was included; Luke ii. 1—7, whence Julian the apostate unwittingly objected to his title of Christ or king, that "he was born a subject of Cæsar!" About eleven years after, Judea was made a Roman province, attached to Syria, on the deposal and banishment of Archelaus, the son of Herod the Great, for mal-administration, and an assessment of properties or taxing was carried into effect by Cyrenius, then governor of Syria, the same, who before, as the emperor's procurator, had made the enrolment; Luke ii. 2; Acts v. 37, and thenceforth Judea was governed by a Roman deputy; and the judicial power of life and death taken away from the Jews; John xviii. 31.

(2) Their ecclesiastical polity ceased with the destruction of their city and temple by the Romans, A. D. 70. At which time the gospel had been preached through the known world by the apostles, "h. witnesses in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth;" Matt. xxiv. 14; Acts ii. 8; Rom. x. 18, and a vast congregation of Christians then formed, both among Jews and Gentiles. Our Lord's triumphant entry into Jerusalem, before his crucifixion, "riding on an ass;" which, by his direction, his disciples brought to him for this purpose; see Matt. xxi. 2—5, which compare with Zech. ix. 9. In ancient times, to ride upon white asses, or ass colts, was the privilege of persons of high rank; Judg. v. 10; x. 4; Num. xxii. 22. And as the children of Israel were symbolized by the vine, Ps. lxxx. 8; Hos. x. 1, and the men of Judah by a choice vine, Isa. v. 1—7, adopted by Jeremiah, ii. 21, and by our Lord, Matt. xxi. 31, who styled himself the true vine, John xv. 1, so the union of both these images signified our Lord's assumption, as the promised Shiloh, of the dignity of the king of the Jews; not in a temporal, but in a spiritual sense, as he declared to Pilate, John xviii. 36, as a prelude to his second coming in glory, "to restore again the kingdom to Israel, Matt. xviii 64; Acts i. 6.

The vengeance to be inflicted on all the enemies of his church, is expressed by the symbolical imagery of "washing his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes;" see Isa. lxii. 11; lxiii. 1—6; Rev. xiv. 20, and xix. 11—15. The strength and wholesomeness of Shiloh's doctrine are next represented by having his eyes red with wine, and teeth white with milk. And thus the evangelical prophet, in similar strains, invites the world to embrace the gospel, Isa. lv. 1.

JUDAH. "Therefore she called his name Judah; and left bearing;" Gen. xxix. 35. This verse appears to contradict ver. 17—21 of next ch. which states that Leah had several other children. The original is taamed meldeth, she stood still from bearing (as in our margin), that is, for a certain period.

JUDAH, 'the land of Judah.' That district of Canaan belonging to the tribe of Judah, the capital of which was Jerusalem; Deut. xxxiv. 2; Ruth i. 7; 1 Sam. xxii. 5.

JUDAH; Gen. xlvi. 12. As to Judah's being "forty-two years old at the time of going into Egypt, we cannot find how Dr. Colenso gets his data. Joseph, when called before Pharaoh, was "thirty years old." The seven years of plenty, and two years of the famine, had passed away; Gen. xlv. 6, before Joseph discovered himself to his brethren; at that time he must therefore have been 39 years of age. In another year his father came down to Egypt; he then would be 40 years of age. And yet, as Dr. Colenso states, "Judah was forty-two," although there were born unto Jacob six sons and one daughter at different years, between Judah and Joseph; therefore Judah would have been at least 52 years of age on going into Egypt.

JUDAS, Jew'-das, the praise of the Lord.—One of the twelve disciples chosen by Jesus to the apostolic office. As to the birth and education of Judas little can be traced out. He is called the Son of Simon, but whether Simon the leper, or Simon the Canaanite, or some other person of that name, the learned have not been able to ascertain. Why he was called Iscariot is also uncertain: some refer this name to the office he sustained of purser in our Lord's family; others deriving it from the place of his birth, read Judas Ish-carioth, that is, Judas a man of Carioth, a small town beyond Jordan. The catalogue of the twelve apostles, given by three evangelists, concludes with the name of "Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him;" Matt. x. 4; Mark iii. 19; Luke vi. 16.

Judas is mentioned as invested with the same office and power as the other disciples; Luke ix. 1-6. —As the betrayer of Christ; John vi. 70, 71.—And particularly John xii. 4; Matt. 26, and Mark 14.

The character and conduct of Judas Iscariot furnish a strong argument for the truth of the gospel. How came it to pass that he first betrayed his Master, then was so stung with remorse, as to put an end to his own life by hanging himself? How came he thus to own himself guilty of the vilest sin, if he knew he had done an act of justice to the world, by freeing it from an impostor? For, if Jesus was not really what he professed to be, he deserved all and much more than Judas was the means of bringing upon him. Now, if there had been any base plot, any bad design, or any kind of imposture in the case, it must have been known to Judas, who had lived so long with Christ, and had even been entrusted with the bag, therefore not treated with any reserve, and who was acquainted with our Saviour's most private life; and if he had known any blemish in his character or conduct, he ought to have told it, and would have told it:—duty to God, to his own character, and to the world, obliged him to it; but his silence in this respect bears the most decisive testimony to Christ's innocence; therefore Judas's death and general conduct prove Christ's divine authority.

JUDAS. A Jew of Damascus, with whom Paul lodged; Acts ix. 11.—Judas, surnamed Barsabas, a Christian teacher who accompanied Paul and Barnabas to Antioch; Acts xv. 22, 27, 32. Probably he was one of the seventy.—Also Judas, surnamed the Galilean; Luke xiii. 2; Acts v. 37.

JUDE. One of the twelve apostles, and brother of James the Less. He is also called Judas; Matt. xiii. 55; John xiv. 22; Acts i. 13. Also Lebbaeus and Thaddæus; Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18. Nothing certain is known of his apostolic labours, except the Epistle which we possess. Tradition says that he preached the gospel in Arabia, Syria, Mesopotamia, &c.

JUDE, Epistle of.—This Epistle was written about A. D. 65, or 66. In it he exhorts the Christian converts to be steadfast in the faith of the gospel, to avoid and oppose certain persons who had crept in the church unawares, turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. Some frivolous or unknown reasons prevented its early reception into the canon of Scripture; but it is found in all the ancient catalogues of the writings of the New Testament; and Macknight justly remarks, that the holy principles and practices which it teaches, are such as could proceed from no impostor.

JUDEA, Ju-de'-a, confessing, or praise.—A province of Asia, anciently called the land of Canaan, or Palestine, and afterwards the land of Promise, the land of Israel, and then Judea. The name became applied to all the southern part of the country; Samaria to the middle, and Galilee to the north; this distinction was common in the time of Christ. Medals of Judea are still extant, representing the daughter of Sion, as a woman sitting upon a heap of warlike weapons, under a palm tree, in a mournful attitude. In a similar posture the prophet had portrayed Judea, Isa. iii. 26. This posture symbolised the wretchedness of the Jews in captivity; compare Isa. xlvii. 1. See Canaan.

JUDGE. To hear and determine controversies; Ex. xviii. 13; 1 Cor. vi. 2.—Rightly to understand and discern; 1 Cor. ii. 15.—To censure; 1 Cor. iv. 3.—To proceed against; Acts xxiv. 6.—To esteem or reckon; Acts xvi. 15.—To rule and govern; Ps. lxxvii. 4; Heb. x. 30.—To punish; Ezek. vii. 3, 8; Heb. xiii. 4.—It is applied to God; Gen. xviii. 25; Heb. xii. 23.—To Christ; Acts x. 42.

JUDGE. "Do ye not know that saints shall judge the world?" 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3. Generally this Scripture has been thought to imply that God's real people shall be, on the day of judgment, assessors with Christ in the judgment. This opinion is contrary to all Scripture. The saints themselves are to be judged by Christ; but the Scriptures never state that they shall judge with him. "Judging the world" is an act for which no fallible being can be competent. The act requires omniscience and omnipresence to comprehend and witness all that has been thought, said, and done by every creature; also infinite justice and entire freedom from all partiality, as well as an inherent right to fix the eternal destinies of undying souls. These attributes are possessed by God alone. They are his glory. "His glory will he not give to another." "For the Father judgeth no man; but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:" John v. 22.

From these premises we infer that 1 Cor. vi. 2. cannot refer to the final judgment. The words should be read in the present tense, and not in the future—thus:—"Do ye not know that the saints (now) judge the world, and if in you the world is judged, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?"

Chrysostom, and other ancient divines, adopt an interpretation of the passage which harmonizes with the principles of sound criticism, and with the leading truths of the gospel. They understand the use of the verb crino, "to judge," means here, as in other places of the New Testament, "to condemn." See Luke xix. 22, and so in John xvi. 11. And this latter passage applying, as it does, to the dispensation of the Spirit, which was just about to commence, leads to the correct meaning of 1 Cor. vi. 2, namely, "the saints, by the moral influence of their faith and holy life, 'judge,' that is, condemn the world. Christians now, by their testimony to the efficacy of the atonement, and to the transforming power of the Holy Spirit, condemn the world for its unbelief. Thus our Lord speaks of "the men of Nineveh," and the queen of the south rising in judgment and condemning that generation; Matt. xii. 41, 42. Not that these persons would take part in the final judgment, but that the repentance and faith displayed by them, under comparatively disadvantageous circumstances, condemned those who maintained obduracy and unbelief amidst the warnings and instructions of Him who was the Fountain of all mercy and wisdom.

The moral influence of christianity in apostolic times presented the accomplishment of our Lord's prediction, "Verily, I say unto you, That ye which have followed me in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel;" Matt. xix. 28. The church is his throne. He rules in the hearts of his people. His regenerated disciples, by their faith, condemn the tribes of Israel for their rejection of the Messiah, for whom types, ceremonies, and prophecies encouraged them to look.

It is evident that 1 Cor. vi. 2, refers to the present moral influence which the spiritually and consistent deportment of Christians exert on the minds of unbelieving men. Let Christians be careful to exhibit the influence of the gospel in their lives and conversation, that the ungodly "may see their good works, and glorify their Father who is in heaven."

"Judge angels;" 1 Cor. vi. 3. The apostle does not say here, as he said before, the saints shall judge the angels, but we shall judge them. By angels all confess that demons are intended; but certainly all saints, that is, all who profess Christianity, shall not judge angels. Nor is the judging of angels to be understood of the last day; but the apostle speaks of the ministers of the gospel, himself and others, who, by the preaching of the gospel, through the power of Christ, should despoil the devils of their oracles, and their idols, deprive them of their worship, and expel them from their seats, and strip them of their dominion. Thus would God subdue the whole world under the Christian power, so that Christian magistrates should judge men, and gospel ministers judge devils.

JUDGES. 1. Officers of law and justice. The Jews had three courts; (1.) a court of three or seven petty judges, who decided small cases; (2.) a court of 23, whose power in some cases extended to life and death; (3.) the great Sanhedrim, which determined all the highest cases and was the last appeal. It consisted of 70 judges, of which the high priest was president. Each court had cognizance of both civil and ecclesiastical cases.

2. Extraordinary men, raised up by Jehovah, to deliver Israel from oppression, before they had a king. When the nation sinned it was punished by anarchy, invasion, or conquest; but when it had been duly humbled, a deliverer was found.

The Apostle Paul says, that the period during which Israel was governed by judges was 'about 450 years;' Acts xiii. 20.

JUDGES, Book of.—The Book of Judges was probably written by Samuel, and it forms an important part in the history of Israel ; and independent of the ample proof of its authenticity found in its style, and its being quoted by both Old and New Testament writers, the transactions it records are confirmed by traditions current among the heathen. Thus we find the memorial of Gideon's transactions preserved by Sanchoniatho. The Vulpinaria, or feast of the foxes, celebrated by the Romans in the month of April (the time of the Jewish harvest), in which they let loose foxes, to whose tails were fastened burning torches, was derived from the story of Samson, which was conveyed to Italy by the Phenicians. In the history of Samson and Delilah, we find the original of Nisus and his daughters, who cut off those fatal hairs upon which victory depended. Dr. A. Clarke has fully shown that Samson is the original and essential Hercules of Pagan mythology.

JUDGMENT, LAST, the sentence that will be passed on our actions at the last day.

I. The proofs of a general judgment are these : (1) The justice of God requires it ; for it is evident that this attribute is not clearly displayed in the dispensation of things in the present state, 2 Thess. i. 6, 7 ; Luke xvii 26. (2) The accusations of natural conscience are testimonies in favour of this belief ; Rom. ii. 15 ; Dan. v. 5, 6 ; Acts xxiv. 25. (3) It may be concluded from the relation men stand in to God, as creatures to a Creator. He has a right to give them a law, and to make them accountable for the breach of it ; Rom. xiv. 12. (4) The resurrection of Christ is a certain proof of it. See Acts xvii. 31 ; Rom. xiv. 9. (5) The scriptures, in many places prove it beyond all doubt ; Jude 14, 15 ; 2 Cor. v. 10 ; Matt. xxv ;

Rom. xiv. 10, 11; 2 Thess. i. 7, 10; 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17.

II. As to the Judge: the Bible declares that God will judge the world by Jesus Christ; Acts xvii. 31. The triune God will be the Judge, as to original authority, power, and right of judgment; but according to the economy settled between the three divine persons, the work is assigned to the Son; Rom. xiv. 9, 10, who will appear in his human nature; John v. 27; Acts xvii. 31, with great power and glory; 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17; visible to every eye; Rev. i. 7; penetrating every heart; 1 Cor. iv. 5; Rom. ii. 16; with full authority over all; Matt. xxviii. 18; and acting with strict justice; 2 Tim. iv. 8. As for the concern of others in the judgment; angels will be no otherwise concerned than as attendants, gathering the elect, raising the dead, &c., but not as advising or judging. Saints are said to judge the world; not as co-judges with Christ, but as approvers of his sentence, and as their holy lives and conversations will rise up in judgment against their wicked neighbours.

III. As to the persons that will be judged: these will be men and devils. The righteous probably will be tried first, as represented in Matt. xxv. They will be raised first, though perhaps not a thousand years before the rest, as some suppose; since the resurrection of all the bodies of the saints is spoken of as in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, in order to their meeting the Lord in the air, and being with him, not on earth, but for ever in heaven; 1 Cor. xv. 52; 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17.

As to the wicked, they shall be judged, and all their thoughts, words, and deeds, be brought into judgment; Eccl. xii. 14. The fallen angels, also, are said to be reserved unto the judgment of the great day; Jude 6. They shall receive their final sentence, and be shut up in the prison of hell; Rev. xx. 11; Matt. viii. 29.

IV. As to the rule of judgment: we are informed the books will be opened; Rev. xx. 12. (1) The book of divine omniscience; Mal. iii. 5; or remembrance; Mal. iii. 16. (2) The book of conscience; Rom. i. 19. (3) The book of Providence; Rom. ii. 14 15. (4) The book of the scriptures, law, and gospel; John xii. 48; Rom. ii. 12, 16. (5) The book of life; Luke x. 20; Rev. iii. 5; xx. 12, 15.

V. As to the Time of judgment: the soul will be either happy or miserable immediately after death, but the general judgment will not be till after the resurrection; Heb ix. 27. There is a day appointed; Acts xvii. 31; but it is unknown to men.

JUDGMENT, 'taken away my judgment;' Job xxxiv. 5. 'Neglected my right.'

JUDGMENT, 'the judgment,' Matt. v. 21, 22. The name of an inferior Jewish court, which was established in every city, and consisted of 23 members, who punished criminals by strangling or beheading.

JUDGMENT HALL.—The place of the administration of justice at Jerusalem, under the Roman governor; John xviii. 28; xix. 9.

JUDGMENT SEAT.—The tribunal, or place of pronouncing sentence; Matt. xxvii. 19; John xix. 13; Acts xviii. 12, 16, 17; xxv. 10, 17; Rom. xiv. 10; 2 Cor. v. 10; Jam. ii. 6.

JULIUS, Jew'-le-us, downy.—The centurion to whom Paul was committed, to be conveyed to Rome; Acts xxvii. 1, &c. He was deeply impressed with Paul's character, and suffered him to land at Sidon, to visit his friends See Acts 28.

JUNIA, Jew-ne-a, from Juno or Juventus, youth.—A Christian female, mentioned with Andronicus; Rom. xvi. 7. They were Paul's relations, and of much note among the Apostles.

JUNIPER TREE. Mention is made of the juniper tree in three places in the English version of the Bible; viz. 1 Kings xix. 4, 5; Job xxx. 4. But it is apprehended the translation is not proper; the word in the original being Rethem, which in the Syriac version is rendered turpentine tree; and the Chaldaic paraphrase and Schultens render it broom. Calmet thinks it signifies any wild shrub. David observes, Ps. cxx. 4, of the calumniating cruelty of his enemies, that it was like "arrows of the mighty with coals of juniper," as our translation renders it. Juniper abounds with a piercing oil, and makes a smart fire; and Pliny and others affirm that its coals raked up, will keep glowing a long time.

JUPITER, Ju'-pe-ter, the father that helpeth.—The principal deity of the ancient heathens. Perhaps the name is derived from Ja, or Jehovah, and pater, father. There were many Jupiters. Three were principally famous,—the son of Æther, the son of Cælus, but chiefly the son of Saturn. Historians discover that he was son to a king of Crete, who lived about the time of Moses, and was one of the most wicked wretches that ever breathed. The heathens, however, whose theology was derived from the fictions of their poets, believed that he had the government of heaven and earth; and that under him Neptune ruled the sea, and Pluto was king of hell. The noble demeanour of Barnabas, and his miracles, made the citizens of Lystra imagine that Jupiter had visited them; Acts xiv. 11.

JUPITER, 'the priest of Jupiter which was before their city;' Dr. Boothroyd reads, 'priest of Jupiter, whose temple was before their city.'

JUSHAB-HESED, Jew-shab'-hesed.—A descendant of David, 1 Chr. iii. 20.

JUST signifies one who is upright and sincere in his actions and dealings with others; Luke xxiii. 50. The great Creator, who is essentially just and righteous, and the fountain of justice in all his creatures; Deut. xxxii. 4. One who is faithful, keeping his word and promise; 1 John i. 9. One who in his life and death answered the perfect justice of the law of God; 1 Pet. iii. 18. One who is righteous; Rom. i. 17. One who thinks himself righteous, and is not; Luke xviii. 9. One that is good-natured, mild, and indulgent; Matt. i. 19. One of a charitable, liberal disposition; Prov. xxi. 26.

JUSTICE of GOD is that perfection whereby he is infinitely righteous and just, both in himself and in all his proceedings with his creatures;
Rev. xvi. 5; Ps. cxlv. 7; xvii. 1, 2.
 That God will not let sin go unpunished is evident, (1) From his word; Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7; Num. xiv.
 18. (2) From the nature of God;
Isa. i. 13, 14; Ps. v. 5, 6; Heb. xii.
 29. (3) From sin being punished in Christ, who died the just for the unjust, 1 Pet. iii. 18. (4) From the various natural evils which men bear in the present state.

JUSTIFICATION, JUSTIFY.—

The terms are forensic, pronouncing the party acquitted from all judicial charges. Hence justification is a gracious act of God whereby he accepts, and deals with those who believe in Christ as if they were just and righteous;—they are pardoned and accepted, Job xiii. 18; Isa. xlv.
 25; Acts xiii. 39; Rom. iii. 24.

The way in which penitent sinners receive justifying grace is said expressly to be “through faith in the blood of Christ,” Rom. iii. 25. God is “the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus,” verse 26. It is also said that faith or believing is counted unto them for righteousness, Rom. iv. 4, 3, 5, 9, that “with the heart man believeth unto righteousness,” chap. x. 10, that we are “justified by faith,” chap. v. 1, and that “by him all that believe are justified,” Acts xiii. 39. All these varied expressions are of the same import, and clearly show that sinners actually receive and enjoy the blessings of justification, by faith, or in believing the testimony that God has given of his Son; 1 John v. 9, 11.

 Thus a man is justified by faith, without the deeds of the law; Gal. ii. 16.

KEEP UNDER 'my body, &c.' See 1 Cor. ix. 27. 'But I bruise my body (as boxers do in the combat) and lead it captive, lest, perhaps, having proclaimed it to others, I myself should be one not approved.' The original of 'subjection,' refers to the leading of an enemy away captive from the battle field, denoting an absolute victory.

"KEEPERS of the House shall tremble;" Ecc. xii. 3. The hands, when become paralytic, or affected through the feebleness of old age.

KEEPERS, 'as keepers of the field,' &c. Jer. iv. 17. Arabian plantations, being open, have guards placed at certain distances around them. Hence the allusion.

KEHELATHAH, Ke-hel'-a-tah. An encampment in the wilderness; Num. xxxiii. 22.

KEILAH, Ky'-lah, she that divides. A town in the tribe of Judah, 18 miles south-west of Jerusalem; Josh. xv. 44.

KELITA, Kel'-e-tah.—The name of a Levite; Ezra x. 23.

KEMUEL, Kem-yew'-el.—God has raised him.—A son of Nahor, and father of Aram; Gen. xxii. 21.—Also the son of Shiphthan; Num. xxxiv. 24.

KENAN, Ke'-nan 1 Chr. i. 2. Same as Cainan; Gen. v. 9.

KENATH, Ke'-nath.—A town of Manasseh; Num. 32. 42.

KENAZ, Ke'-naz, this nest, lamentation.—The fourth son of Eliphaz, son of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 15.—He was one of the dukes of Edom.—The father of Othniel and Caleb; Josh. xv. 17; Judges i. 13.

KENITES, Ken'-ites, possession, lamentation.—Supposed to be the race of Jethro. They inhabited a district west of the Dead Sea, on the south of the Hittites. Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, who is called a Kenite; Jud. i. 16, was also a priest of Midian, and dwelt in this part of the country; Ex. xviii. 1; Num. xxiv. 21.

KENIZZITES, Ken'-niz-zites.—An ancient people of Canaan; Gen. xv. 19.

KEPT 'by the power of God,' 1 Pet. i. 5. The original word signifies, 'kept as in an impregnable garrison, secure from harm.'

KERCHIEFS.—Women's veils, or head dresses of the false prophetesses; Ezek. xiii. 18.

KEREN-HAPPUCH, Ker-en-hap'-puk, the horn, or child of beauty. One of Job's daughters; Job xlii. 14.

KERIOTH, Ke'-re-oth, cities, callings.—A city of Palestine, a boundary of the tribe of Judah; Jos. xv. 25.

KEROS, Ke'-ros, crooked.—A captive; Ezra ii. 44.

KETURAH, Ke-tew'-rah, incense

burner, odoriferous.—Abraham's second wife; Gen. xxv. 1.

KEY, 'Ye have taken away the key of knowledge;' Luke xi. 52. The expounders of the law, by their false interpretations of the Old Testament, had taken away the true key of understanding it.

KEY, shoulder.—The key is symbolical of power and authority; Rev. i. 18; iii. 7; Isa. xxii. 22. In shape it resembles an ordinary sickle, and the crooked part suspended on the shoulder, or round the neck; it was carried on the shoulders of the keepers of the temples or gates of ancient cities. See Matt. xvi. 19; Luke xi. 52; Rev. ix. 1.

KEYS 'of the kingdom of heaven.' Matt. xvi. 19. These were given to Peter, who had the authority, power and honour of first opening the door of the Gospel to the Jews and Gentiles. It implied no supremacy; for the power of binding and loosing applied equally to all the apostles; Acts ii. 14—36; ch. x. See Bind.

KEZIA, Ke-zy'-ah, superficies, angle, pleasant as Cassia.—The name of Job's second daughter; Job xlii. 14.

KEZIZ, Ke'-ziz, end, extremity.—A valley in the tribe of Benjamin; Josh. xviii. 21.

KIBROTH-HATTAAVAH, Kib'-roth-hat-tay'-a-vah, the graves of lust.—An encampment in the wilderness where the Israelites loathed the manna; Num. xi. 34, 35.

KIBZAIM, Kib'-za-im, congregation.—A city in the tribe of Ephraim; Josh. xxi. 22.

KICK, Deut. 32. 15; 1 Sam. 2. 29; Acts 9. 5, & 26. 14.

KICK 'against the pricks.' A proverbial expression, taken from goaded beasts, which pained themselves the more by kicking; Acts ix. 5; xxvi. 14.

KICKED, 'Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked,' Deut. xxxii. 15. Alluding to a high fed, ungovernable animal.

KID, the young of the goat, esteemed a great luxury in the East. Gen. 27. 9; 33. 17; Judg. 6. 19. They were occasionally offered in sacrifice ;

Num. 7. 1 ; Is. 11. 6 ; Luke 15. 29.
Songs 1. 8. feed thy k. beside the shepherd's tents

KIDRON, Ky'-dron, obscurity, obscure.—A brook, running through the valley of Jehoshaphat on the east side of Jerusalem, between the city and the Mount of Olives. It is dry eight or nine months in the year ; but when swollen by the rains, the current is deep and rapid. It received the common sewers, and emptied itself into the Dead Sea.

KILL. "Thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after," &c. ; Deut. xii. 15, read also ver. 20, 21.—These verses apparently contradict Lev. xvii. 1—7, where the Israelites are forbidden to slaughter any clean animal, which they were permitted to eat, without bringing it to the tabernacle, and presenting it as an offering unto the Lord.
 The discrepancy results from a supposition that the laws were unchangeable. The law in Leviticus might be observable in the wilderness, where the Israelites kept closely together, and ate but little animal food ; but in Palestine it would have been an intolerable grievance ; for many of them lived several days' journey from the sanctuary, at which only offerings could be made ; Moses shows that it was a law designed only for the wilderness, by the phrase without or within the camp ; and in his last given law, just before they entered Palestine, he declares it repealed as soon as they should there abide ; permitting them to kill and eat oxen, sheep, and goats, in any part of the country, provided they did not regard them as sacrifices, and abstained from eating the blood.

KINGDOM signifies one or more countries subject to a king; Deut. iii. 4, sovereignty or universal dominion; 1 Chron. xxix. 11; Psalms xxii. 28; ciii. 19, heaven; Matt. xxvi. 29; 2 Tim. iv. 18, a right to be king; 1 Samuel xx. 31, government or supreme administration; 1 Samuel xviii. 8. There is the kingdom of God; of his power; Psalms cxlv. 12, 13; Daniel

iv. 3, or of his grace; Matt. iv. 23; vi. 10, 33, of his glory; Luke xxii. 16; 1 Cor. vi. 9, of Christ; Matt. xvi. 28; Col. i. 13.

The kingdom of God, or the kingdom of heaven, refers to the gospel dispensation, under which the church of Christ exists, and enjoys the highest immunities and privileges; Matt. iii. 2; xi. 12; xvi. 17—19. Such expressions also refer to the future state of the blessed; Matt. vii. 21; viii. 11. Daniel predicted that the Messiah's kingdom was to be established during the existence of the Roman empire, the last of the four great monarchies; Dan. ii. 44; vii. 13, 14. As it was "set up by the God of heaven," it was called "the kingdom of God," and "the kingdom of heaven." John the Baptist announced its immediate coming, and so did Christ and his disciples; but it did not fully come till Jesus rose from the dead, and sat down on the right hand of God; Acts ii. 32—36. Then was he inaugurated, enthroned, and proclaimed King of the church, visible and invisible. He sways his sceptre over every creature; he has all power both in heaven and on earth, and he wears the crown of universal empire.

This kingdom is not of a worldly origin, or nature, nor has it this world for its end or object. It can neither be promoted or defended by worldly power, influence, or carnal weapons, but by bearing witness unto the truth, or by the preaching of the gospel, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Its real subjects are only those who are of the truth, and hear Christ's voice; for none can enter it but such as are born from above; John iii. 3—5; nor can any be visible subjects of it, but such as appear to be regenerated, by a credible profession of faith and obedience. Its privileges and immunities are not of this world, but such as are spiritual and heavenly, they are all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; Eph. i. 3; John xviii. 36, 37. The place of eternal happiness and glory, Matt. v. 10; of priests, Exod.

xix. 6; 1 Peter ii. 9; of men, Dan. v. 21.

KINGDOM.—'Delivered up the kingdom,' 1 Cor. xv. 24; the mediatorial kingdom. An allusion to the case of Roman viceroys, or governors of provinces, who, when administration was ended, delivered up their government into the hands of the emperors.—Comprehensive Bible.

KINGDOM.—'To receive for himself a kingdom;' Luke xix. 12. The Jewish kings were then appointed by the Roman emperors, to whom Judea was subject; about this time Archelaus, a son of Herod the Great, actually went to Rome to obtain a confirmation of the title his father had left him. Hence, the allusion.—

KINGDOMS.—'Showeth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;' but the world is round; therefore all the kingdoms of the world cannot be seen from the highest mountains. It means all the kingdoms surrounding Judea, which were frequently called the world; Matt. iv. 8.

KINGS, BOOKS OF THE.—The writer of the First Book is unknown, but Ezra is supposed to have compiled this and the next book from the ancient documents and writings of the prophets. It contains the history of one hundred and twenty-six years, and in it are recorded David's charge to Solomon, the building and dedication of the temple, and the division of the twelve tribes into two kingdoms, that of Judah under Rehoboam, and Israel under Jeroboam.

The Second Book contains the history of three hundred and eight years from the rebellion of Moab to the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. The history of Judah and Israel is carried on together down to the time when the ten tribes were carried captives to Assyria. But the tribe of Judah was not carried away till one hundred and sixty years afterwards.

The two books of Kings, particularly the second, abound with impressive and lively narrations; and the strict impartiality with which the author has related events and circumstances dishonourable to his nation, affords a convincing evidence of his fidelity and integrity. They delineate the long-suffering of God towards his people, and his severe judgments for their abuse of mercy; they mark most clearly the veracity of God, both in his promises and in his threatenings, and show the vanity of trusting an arm of flesh, and the instability of human kingdoms, from which piety and justice are too often banished.

KIR, Ker, a wall, black, coldness.—A place in Media in Asia, near the river Cyrus, now called Kur, between the Black and Caspian seas; 2 Kings xvi. 9.

KIR-HARASETH, Ker-har'-a-seth, the city of the sun.—A royal city of the Moabites, 2 Kings iii. 25.

KIR-HARESH, Ker-hay'-resh.—A town, the same as Rabbath-Moab; Isa. xvi. 11.

KIRIOTH, Kir'-e-oth, a city.—A city, which became the object of the Divine anger under the armies of king Nebuchadnezzar; Jer. xlvi. 24; Amos ii. 2.

KIRJATH, Kir'-jath, city, vocation.—A town near Gibcon, in the tribe of Benjamin; Josh. xviii. 28.

KIRJATHAIM, Ker'-jath-ay'-im, the two cities.—A town beyond Jordan, Josh. xiii. 19.—Also, the name of a city in the tribe of Naphtali, 1 Chron. vi. 76.

KIRJATH-ARBA, Kir'-jath-ar'-bah, the city of four.—A place built by Arba, the ancient name of Hebron; Judges i. 10.

KIRJATH-ARIM, Kir'-jath-ay'-rim, the city of cities.—A city in the tribe of Benjamin, Ezra ii. 25.

KIRJATH-BAAL, Ker'-jath-bay'-al, the city of Baal.—The same as Kirjath-jearim. A city of Judah, on the confines of Benjamin, where the ark long lodged, in the house of Abinadab; Josh. xv. 9; 1 Chron. xiii. 6.

KIRJATH-HUZOTH, Ker'-jath-hu'-zoth, a city of streets.—A place in the land of Moab, Num. xxii. 32.

KIRJATH-JEARIM, Ker'-jath-je'-a-rim, the city of woods.—See Kirjath-Baal.

KIRJATH-SANNAH, Ker'-jath-san'-nah, the city of the bush, of enmity.—A city of Palestine, Josh. xv. 49.

KIRJATH SEPHER, Ker'-jath-se'-fer, the city of letters, of the book.—A city sometimes called Debir, in the tribe of Judah, given to Caleb; Josh. xv. 16, 17.

KISH, Kish, hard, difficult, straw.—The son of Abiel, and father of Saul; 1 Sam. ix. 1, &c.

KISHI, Kish'-i.—The son of Abdi, 1 Chron. vi. 44.

KISHION, Kish'-e-on.—A place in Palestine, in the tribe of Issachar; Josh. xix. 20.

KISHON, Kison; Ky'-shon, Ky'-son.—A brook which issues from Mount Carmel, and flows eastward into the Mediterranean, by the port of Accho; Judges iv. 7; v. 21; 1 Kings xviii. 40; Ps. lxxxiii. 9.

KISS, a natural symbol of affection and reverence, of very ancient date; Gen. xxix. 13; and prevalent in all ages; 2 Sam. xx. 9; Acts xx. 37. Xenophon speaks of it as a custom of the Persians. Idolators kissed their idols; or if the object was distant, as the moon, threw kisses to them by kissing the hand; which explains Job xxxi. 27. It was common, as a token of profound respect, to put the hand to the mouth and keep it there; which explains Judg. xviii. 19; Job xxi. 5; and xxix. 9; and xl. 4; and Is. xxxix, 9, &c.

Early Christians conformed to custom, and kissed each other at the close of public worship; Rom. xvi. 16; 1 Cor. xvi. 20; 2 Cor. xiii. 12.

KISS, 'holy kiss;' 1 Thess. v. 26. This was generally given by men apart, and women apart, before receiving the Lord's supper, to testify peace and brotherly affection. It was borrowed from the practice of the synagogue, but being ill-reported by the calumnious heathen, it was early laid aside.

KISSED, 'fell on his neck and kissed him;' Luke xv. 20. Refers to an Eastern custom of kissing the shoulder, the hand, head, cheek, and beard, expressive of regard, &c. See Gen. xxxiii. 4; xlvi. 29. So Judas did; Matt. xxvi. 49. Homer describes the same ceremony in the meeting between Ulysses and Telemachus.

KISS the son lest he be angry, Ps. 2. 12.

KITE. A species of falcon, unclean, as declared by the law of Moses; Lev. xi. 14; Deut. xiv. 13. The Hebrew name is made to signify wild beasts of the islands, in Isa. xiii. 22, and Bochart thinks that the Jackal is intended.

KITHLISH, Kith'-lish.—A town of Judah; Josh. xv. 40.

KITRON, Kit'-ron, making sweet.—A city assigned to Zebulun, which they could not conquer; Judg. i. 30.

KITTIM, Kit'-tim. they that bruise.—The son of Javan, and great grandson of Noah; Gen. x. 4. See CHITTIM.

KNEW YOU, 'I never knew you;' Matt. vii. 23. I never approved of your character. To know sometimes means to appropriate; as Ezek. xix. 7; Ps. i. 6; Amos iii. 10; Rom. vii. 14; Rev. ii. 17; and so here;—"I never knew," that is, approved of, and appropriated you as my disciples. It will be awful at the last day to see preachers and workers of miracles, real or pretended, under Christ, rejected and thrust down to perdition. What is ecclesiastical office without piety!

KNIFE. When the scripture saith, "Put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite," it means that the person described should eat, drink, and converse under a check; Prov. xxiii. 2.

KNOCK, signifies to beat, hit, or strike upon; Acts xii. 13, 16; to pray with fervency, constancy, and importunity; Matt. vii. 8; Luke xi. 10. Christ's calling and inviting us by his word, providence, and Spirit, to admit him into our hearts, and receive him by faith and love; Songs v. 2; Rev. iii. 20. "I stand at the door and knock!"

KNOPS, artificial globes resembling fruit; Ex. xxv. 31; 1 Kings vi. 18.

KNOW signifies to understand or perceive; Ruth iii. 11; to approve of, love, and delight in; Ps. i. 6; to cherish and take care of; John x. 27; to have the experience of; Gen. iii. 5; xxii. 12; to possess or have in one's power; Ps. l. 11; lawfully to use the marriage bed; Gen. iv. 1, 17; to consider and ponder seriously; Ps. xc. 11; to believe upon undoubted testimony; John iv. 2; xi. 24; to have a bare speculative knowledge; Luke xii. 47; to commit the sin against nature; Gen. xix. 5; Judg. xix. 22; to be fully persuaded; Judg. vi. 37; xviii. 5; to have a vain and groundless assurance; Judg. xvii. 13; to discern and find out; Matt. vii. 16; to teach and excite men to know thoroughly and practically; Prov. i. 2.

KNOWLEDGE signifies the essential and infinite understanding of God, whereby he knows all things perfectly; 1 Sam. ii. 3; a right understanding and notion of spiritual things; 2 Cor. vi. 6; that knowledge of God's will, and of the way of salvation, which is in Christ in its highest perfection, and which he reveals to his people, and imprints on their hearts by his Spirit, so as to produce faith, love, and obedience; Isa. liii. 11. Christian prudence and holy experience in the ways of God; 2 Cor. viii. 7; 2 Pet. i. 5, 6; that imperfect knowledge of divine things which we have in this world! 1 Cor. xiii. 8. Also natural knowledge which men have by the light of nature; Rom. i. 21, 28; Jude 10; artificial, for devising curious pieces of workmanship; Ex. xxxv. 31; legal, or that knowledge of our guilt and danger which we are taught by the law; Rom. iii. 20; vii. 7; evangelical or the knowledge of Christ, and of salvation through him; 2 Cor. ii. 14. This knowledge may be considered as experimental; 2 Tim. i. 12; affectionate; 1 John iii. 19; influential; Ps. ix. 10; Matt. v. 16; humiliating; Job xlii. 5, 6; satisfying; Ps. xxxvi. 7; Prov. iii. 17; and superior to all other knowledge; Phil. iii. 8.

KOA, Ko'-ah, hope, a line.—The name of a province of the Babylonish empire; or a title of honour among the Babylonians; Ezek. xxiii. 23.

KOHATH, Ko'-hath, congregation, obedience.—The second son of Levi; Gen. xlvi. 11; Ex. vi. 18.

KOHATHITES, Ko'-hath-ites.—The posterity of Kohath; Num. iv. 18.

KOLAIAH, Ko-la-i'-ah, voice of the Lord.—One who returned from the Babylonish captivity; Neh. xi. 7.

KORAH, Ko'-rah, bald, frozen.—The son of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 14, 16.

—The son of Izhur, and grandson of Levi, head of the Korites, a celebrated family among the Levites; Ex. vi. 21; Num. xvi. 1, &c. Korah being dissatisfied with the rank he held as a Levite, and envying the authority of Moses and Aaron, formed a party against them; wherein he engaged Dathan, Abiram, and On, with two hundred and fifty of the principal Levites. For which impiety, the Lord caused the earth to open and swallow them up alive; Num. xvi. The sons of Korah were mercifully spared, and continued to officiate in the tabernacle of the Lord. They were appointed by David to guard the doors of the temple, and sing the praises of God; 1 Chron. ix. 19. There are several psalms ascribed to them; such as Ps. xlii.; xliv.; xlix.; lxxxiv.; lxxxv.; lxxxvii.; and others.

KORAH. "Now Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, and Dathan, and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and Or, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men;" Num. xvi. 1.—There is a strange omission in the verse. The verb "took" has no objective, and our translators have supplied "men." I think, however, that Dr. A. Clarke renders the verse correctly:—"Now Korah, son of Izhar, son of Kohath, son of Levi, HE TOOK even Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and On, son of Peleth, SON OF Reuben, and they rose up," &c. The Septuagint and Samaritan read, ben Reuben, son of Reuben, instead of beni Reuben, sons of Reuben.

KORE, Ko'-re. — A grandson of Korah; 1 Chron. ix. 19.

KOZ, Koz.—A returned captive; Ezra ii. 61.

KUSHALAH, Kush-ay'-yah. — Or Kishi, a Levite, and a singer before the ark; 1 Chron. vi. 44; xv. 17.

L

LAADAH, Lay'-a-dah, to praise, or assemble.—A descendant of Judah, son of Shelah; 1 Chron. iv. 21.

LAADAN, Lay'-a-dan.—The son of Gershon; 1 Chron. xxiii. 7, 8.

LABAN, Lay'-ban, white, shining, gentle.—The son of Bethuel, grandson of Nahor, brother of Rebekah, and father of Rachel and Leah; Gen. xxviii. 2, &c. He was avaricious and superstitious, and regarded religion only in proportion as it seemed to promote his temporal interests; Gen. xxix—xxx. His conduct to Jacob, was covetous and most cruel.

LABOUR signifies diligent care and pains; Proverbs xiv. 23; Ecc. i. 3, the increase and fruit of labour; Exod. xxiii. 16; Ecc. ii. 10, the pangs of child-birth; Gen. xxxv. 16, 17; the work done or performed by labour; Ecc. ii. 11, all evils both of sin and misery, particularly those of persecution; Rev. xiv. 13, to endeavour earnestly; Isaiah xxii. 4; Heb. iv. 11, to journey or travel; Josh. vii. 3, to perform Christian offices; Rom. xvi. 6, diligently to discharge pastoral duties; 1 Tim. v. 17, the infirmities of old age; Ps. xc. 10. "Yet is their strength labour and sorrow."

LABOUR NOT, John vi. 27. While you are not indolent, do not manifest undue anxiety.

LABOURERS.—Gospel ministers; Matt. ix. 37, 38; 1 Cor. iii. 9.—Labourers together with God; that is, united in heart and effort.

LABOUR, Gen. 31. 42, & 35. 16.

LACHISH, Lay'-kish, she walks.—A city of Judah, lying south of Jerusalem, and towards the border of the tribe of Simeon. Lachish was besieged by Sennacherib but he did not succeed in taking it. From this city he sent Rabshakeh against Jerusalem; 2 Kings xviii. 17; xix. 8, and 2 Chron. xxxii. 9.

LACK, Hos. 4. 6; Matt. 19. 20; 2 Cor. 11. 9; 1 Thess. 3. 10; Jam. 1. 5.

LAD.—Probably derived from the Hebrew yeled, or walad, a child, son, offspring, and from yalad, to beget.

LADDER. Jacob's vision of the ladder might be designed, (1) To point out the providence of God: in his present circumstances, it was needful that Jacob should have a clear and distinct view of this subject. (2) To point out the intercourse between heaven and earth, and the connection of both worlds by means of the angelic ministry. (3) It was probably a type of Christ, in whom both worlds meet, and in whom the divine and human nature are conjoined; the ladder was set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven. Jesus Christ is the grand connecting medium between God and man. By him, God comes down to man; through him, man ascends to God. It appears that our Lord applies the vision in this way himself, (1) in that remarkable speech to Nicodemus, "Hereafter ye shall see the heaven opened, and the angels of God ascending and descending on the Son of Man; and (2) in his speech to Thomas, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me. See Gen. xxviii. 12; John i. 51, and ch. xiv. 6.

LADDE. To lay on a burden; Neh. iv. 17; xiii. 15.—To oppress; 1 Kings xii. 11.—To impose traditions, &c. above what the law requires; Luke xi. 46.—To be burdened with guilt; Isa. i. 4; Matt. xi. 28. The accumulation of wealth by oppression, extortion &c. Hab. ii. 6. Sinful women; 2 Tim. iii. 6.

LADY.—A female of distinction; Esth. i. 18; 2 John i. 5;—figuratively, a powerful city, as Babylon; Isa. xlvii. 5, 7. The word was at first in Saxon leaf-dian, from hlaef, laff, or laf, which signifies a loaf of bread, and dian, to serve. It was afterwards corrupted to laf-dy and at length to lady. Thus the original import of the term is one who distributes bread; the true lady is one who feeds the poor, and relieves their various wants, when unable to do it themselves.

LAEL, Lay'-el, to God.—A Levite; Num. iii. 24.

LAHAD, Lay'-had.—A son of Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 2.

LAHAI-ROI, La-hay'-roy, the well of him that liveth and seeth me.—A well near to which the patriarch Isaac dwelt; Gen. xvi. 14.

LAHMAM or LAHMAS, Lah'-mam, Lah'-mas, the bread of them.—A town of Judah; Josh. xv. 40.

LAHMI, Lah'-mi, my bread, my war.—The brother of Goliath the giant; 1 Chron. xx. 5.

LAISH, Lay'-ish, a lion.—A city near Jordan; Judges xviii. 29.—The father of Phaltiel; 1 Sam. xxv. 44.

LAKE. A confluence of waters, as Gennesaret, Tiberias, &c. Luke v. 1. Figuratively, hell, or the bottomless pit; Rev. xix. 20; xx. 10.

LAKUM, Lay'-kum.—A city of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 33.

LAMB. The young of the sheep under a year old, directed to be offered in sacrifice; Gen. xxi. 28; Ex. xxii. 30; xii. 3, 5. A lamb was offered daily, in the morning and evening, in the tabernacle, and afterwards in the temple. The paschal lamb, which was the type of Christ was also offered with peculiar solemnity once a year. For its inoffensive and gentle nature, its innocency, and appointment for sacrifice, it became a striking type of Jesus Christ.

The word lamb is also descriptive of true Christians, who are to be humble, meek, and tractable; Isa. xi. 6; John xxi. 15. Jeremiah significantly uses the figure in reference to himself; Jer. xi. 19. The vision of "a lamb as it had been slain," Rev. v. 6, signifies that the great object of interest to glorified saints is Christ crucified for them—the wondrous source of everlasting joy.

LAMB, 'as a lamb to the slaughter,' Isa. liii. 7. Philo-Judaus, a philosopher and Jew, says that this figurative language was founded upon the practice of eastern shepherds; "Woolly rams laden with thick fleeces, in the spring season, being ordered by their shepherd, stand without moving, and silently stooping a little, put themselves into his hand, to have their wool shorn; being accustomed as cities are, to pay their yearly tribute to man, their king by nature."

LAMB, 'Behold the Lamb of God,' John i. 29, 30. Alluding to the Lambs offered for the atonement of sin; Ex. xii. 3; Num. xxviii. 3—10, &c. "Behold the Lamb of God;" see and acknowledge the true Passover, which God himself hath provided, not for the deliverance of a single nation, but to take away the sin of the world.

LAMECH, Lay'-mek, poor, made low.—A descendant of Cain, the son of Methusael, and father of Jabal, Jubal, and Tubal-Cain, and Naamath; Gen. iv. 18—22. He is notorious as the first polygamist. The speech of Lamech to his wives is thought to be the oldest piece of poetry in the world, ver. 23, 24. The following, says Dr. Adam Clarke, is, as nearly as possible, a literal translation:—

And Lamech said unto his wives,
Adah and Zillah, hear ye my voice;
Wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech:
Have I slain a man, that I should be wounded?

Or a young man, that I should be bruised?
If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold,
Also Lamech seventy and seven.

Lamech exclaimed, "I have slain a man to my wounding," &c. Gen. iv. 23, 24. "I have slain a man for wounding me, and a young man for having bruised me; if Cain shall be avenged seven fold, also Lamech seventy and seven:" that is, if God provided for the safety of Cain, much more for mine; who, though I have slain a man, yet never slew my own brother, and upon no provocation as he did.

LAMECH. The son of Methuselah, and father of Noah. He lived 777 years. He died about five years before the flood; Genesis v. 28, 29.

LAMENT. To mourn, bewail, &c.; Jer. xxxi. 15; 2 Chron. xxxv. 25; judgments that would cause lamentation; Ezek. ii. 10. Anciently great lamentations were made for departed friends. See Gen. i. 7—13. They express their grief by tearing the hair, rending their clothes, piercing cries, &c. Persons also were hired to conduct the mourning ceremonies; Jer. ix. 17, 18; xvi. 6, 7; Matt. ix. 23.

LAMENTATIONS, Book of. — See Jeremiah.

LAMPS. Eastern lamps were of various kinds. Oil chiefly, pitch, naphtha, and wax, were used to maintain the flame common in every house in the East; the poorest burn them all night. In the temple they burned till morning. Lamps in wedding processions were rather torches. The torches were often dipped in oil, and gave a strong light; Matt. xxv. 1; such lamps were carried on high poles to light caravans over the desert while travelling by night. Hence the allusion; Ps. cxix. 105.—Lamp denotes—1. A successor; 1 Kings xv. 4; Ps. cxxxii. 17.—2. Profession of religion; Matt. xxv. 3, 4.—3. Divine illumination and comfort; 2 Sam. xxii. 29.—4. A Christian church, not candlestick, Greek lamps; Rev. i. 12—20.

LAMP, Gen. 15. 17; Ex. 27. 20; 1 Kings 16. 4; Matt. 25. 1, 3, 4, 7, 8.

2 Sam. 22. 29. thou art my l. O Lord, and the Lord

Job 12. 5. as l. despised in the thoughts of him at ease

13. 9. l. of wicked be put out

Is. 62. 1. salvation as a l. that burneth

Ex. 25. 37. seven l. 37. 23; Num. 8. 2; Zech. 4. 2; Rev. 4. 5.

LAND. The whole earth, as distinguished from sea, Matt. 23. 15.—One particular country, Matt. 9. 26.—Arable ground, Gen. 26. 12.—The inhabitants of a country, Is. 37. 11.—A certain possession; 2 Sam. 19. 29; Acts 4. 37. See also Eccl. 10. 16, 17; Is. 5. 30; Prov. 2. 23; 23. 10.

LAND.—"Doubtless ye shall not come into the land save Caleb and Joshua the son of Nun;" Num. xiv. 30. From Josh. xiv. 1; xxii. 13, &c., it appears that Eleazar and others, who were present when these words were spoken, entered Canaan. Hence infidels say the two books are contradictory. Answer.—The best writers often speak of things by way of restriction and limitation, and yet leave them to be understood with some latitude, afterwards to be expressed and explained. So here we read that only Caleb and Joshua should enter Canaan, this being spoken of the chief leaders. Many passages imply that a more comprehensive meaning was not excluded. The tribe of Levi were not forbidden to enter; for they did not murmur. It is fully evident that the prohibition applied only to murmurers; therefore, Eleazar and Phinehas, being priests, are excepted; and so in reference to the persons who went into Canaan as spies; for they were not murmurers.

LANDMARK, Dent. xix. 14; Job xxiv. 2.—Formerly there were no fences to divide the land. Landmarks were generally of stone, or wood, as posts, &c. It was easy to remove a landmark and put it in a different place. But their removal often caused bloodshed, and resembled the destroying or the forging of a modern title deed.

LANGUAGE.—Various words which are used for the purpose of expressing thought. The faculty of speech, and the words of the first language were Divinely created and given. Man could not have invented a language. He is represented as immediately conversing with his Maker. He instinctively understood Divine language, and gave to the various animals names expressive of their habits and nature.

What the primitive language was, has indeed been much the subject of dispute; but the proper names and their significations given in the Scriptures seem incontestable proofs that the Hebrew language was the original

—the language in which God spake to man, and in which he gave the revelation of his will to Moses and the prophets. It was used, as Ainsworth remarks, till Phaleg the son of Heber was born, and the tower of Babel was building, an hundred years after the flood; Gen. x. 25; xi. 9. After this it was used among the Hebrews or Jews, called, therefore, the Jew's language, (Isa. xxxvi. 11,) till they were carried captive into Babylon, where the holy tongue ceased from being commonly used, and the mixed Hebrew or Chaldean came in its place.

LANGUAGE, Gen. 11. 1; Neh. 13. 24; Ps. 81. 5; Is. 19. 18; Zeph. 3. 9.
LANGUAGE, Ps. 41. 3; Is. 24. 4.

LAODICEA, Lay-o-de-see'-a, just people.—A city of Phrygia, in Asia Minor, forty-two miles south of Ephesus. It was anciently called Jupiter's city, and then Rhoads; but Seleucus, or perhaps Antiochus, the Syro-Grecian king, rebuilt it, and called it Laodicea, after his wife. It was destroyed by an earthquake, in the tenth year of Nero, but soon rose from its ruins. A Christian church was early planted in this place. It is now utterly desolate and uninhabited; Rev. iii. 14. Extensive ruins, haunted by wolves and jackals, are yet to be seen. The natives call the place Ladiky. An adjacent village is called Eskihissar, where a few Christians were found in 1820.

LAP.—'I shook my lap,' Neh. v. 13. A significant sign with the ancients; and still used among the Easterns as expressive of a curse.

LAPIDOTH, Lap'-pe-doth, enlightened, lamps.—The husband of Deborah, the prophetess; Judges iv. 4.

LAPPED.—'Men that lapped,' Judges vii. 6, 7. Mr. Campbell saw the Hottentots dexterously throw the water from their hands into their mouths, frequently without spilling a drop.

LAPWING.—The bird so called in our translation, is the hoopoe, a very beautiful bird, but having very disgusting habits. The LXX. render it epopah, and the Vulgate, upupa, names which are expressive of its loud note; Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18.

LARGE PLACE; that is, at liberty; Ps. xviii. 19; xxxi. 8; cxviii. 5.

LARGE, Ev. 3. 8. into a good and l. laud
2 Sara. 22. 20. he brought me into a l. place, Ps. 18. 19.

LASCIVIOUSNESS. It signifies all kinds of lusts; Mark 7. 22; 2 Cor. 12. 21;

Gal. 5. 19; Eph. 4. 19; 1 Pet. 4. 3.
Jude 4. turn grace of God into l.

LASEA, Lay-see'-a.—A city near the Fair Havens, in the island of Crete; Acts xxvii. 8.

LASHA, Lay'-shah, to call, to anoint.—An ancient city on the southern borders of Canaan; Gen. x. 19.

LASHARON, La-shay'-ron.—A city, Josh. xii. 18.

LAST DAYS.—Times of the Messiah, Isa. ii. 2, &c.

LAST end like his, Num. 23. 10.

*Lea*n 1. 9. remembered not l. end

Luke 11. 26. l. state worse than the first

1 Pet. 1. 5. l. time, 20; 1 John 2. 18.

LAST shall be first, and the first last; Matt. xx. 16. The Gentiles who had long been without God, were admitted to the privileges of the new covenant; and the Jews, so long a favoured people, were deprived of them, because they rejected the true Messiah.

LAST TIME.—"Whereby we know that it is the last time;" 1 John ii. 18. The last time means the last stage of the world. There shall be no new state of things before the final judgment, as there was between Judaism and Christianity. The Papacy is here described as antichrist. But antichrist may also include any heresy that is opposed to the simple nature of the gospel of Christ.

LATCHET.—The string that fastens the shoe on the foot; Isa. v. 27; Mark 1. 7; Luke 3. 16.

LATIN TONGUE was the language of the ancient Romans, Luke xxiii. 38; John xix. 20.

LATER day, Job 19. 25. l. end, Prov. 19. 20. l. house; Hag. 2. 9. l. time; 1 Tim. 4. 1; 2 Tim. 3. 1.

LATTICE.—A window made in the form of net-work, with small cross bars of wood or iron; Judg. v. 28; 2 Kings i. 2; Songs ii. 9.

LAUD, to praise, or extol; Rom. xv. 11.

LAUGH.—To rejoice greatly; Gen. xvii. 17; xxi. 6.—To distrust, or doubt; Gen. xviii. 12.—Sinful mirth; Luke vi. 21.

LAUGH, Gen. 17. 17, & 18. 12, 15.

LAVER, a vessel for washing. The laver which stood in the enclosure of the tabernacle, was made of the fine brazen mirrors which the Hebrew women gave for the service of the tabernacle. Solomon had one made of vast size, supported by twelve brazen oxen, which was called the molten sea; 1 Kings vii. 22—26. It was nearly fifty feet in circumference, and eight feet deep. It held water for the priests to wash their hands and feet with, having taps by which the water ran into basins. He also made ten of inferior size, placed near the entrance of the temple, for the washing of the offerings; 2 Chron. iv. 6.

LAVER of BRASS.—“And he made the laver of brass.....of the looking-glasses of the women,” &c. Looking-glasses; this word is very improperly introduced into the translation of this passage. The original means MIRROR, and mirrors, as stated in the preceding article, were of brass, or polished metal of some kind.

LAW sometimes denotes the whole revealed will of God, contained in his word; Ps. i. 2; xix. 7; xl. 8, &c.—Doctrines, instruction, &c., Prov. xiii. 14.—The Mosaic economy; John i. 17; Acts xiii. 39; xviii. 13.—Ceremonial observances; Luke ii. 27; Acts xv. 5, 24; Heb. ix. 22; x. 1.—Judicial or civil law; John vii. 51; xviii. 31; Acts xix. 38; 1 Cor. vi. 1, 6, &c.—Also the moral law, or the Decalogue; Ex. xx. 3—17; Matt. v. 17; Rom. vii. 7, 12, 14. By the law, &c.

“By the law is the knowledge of sin,” and without it, sin could not be fully known. “When the commandment came,” says Paul, “sin revived and I died.” He was alive without the law once; and had he continued ignorant of it, his self-righteous hope would not have been slain. But now he saw how sinful he was, and became dead to all his former professions and hopes: he lives now by the faith of the Son of God, and not by the labour of his own hands. There are three things which the law does when applied by the Holy Spirit and with power. (1) It makes a discovery of sin; of those sins which were unlamented before, and unnoticed; the sins of the heart, as well as of the life; the sins of our nature, as well as actual transgressions. (2) It also aggravates sin, representing it in all its malignity and dangerous tendency. Sin, by the commandment, becomes exceeding sinful: it no longer appears as a small matter, but as odious and detestable. (3) It pronounces sentence upon the sinner, the sentence of eternal death; so that he is self-judged and self-condemned. His mouth is stopped, and he is become guilty before God: he has nothing to say in his own behalf, and sees that unless infinite mercy should rescue him out of his present condition, he must inevitably perish. The law lays hold of the sinner, like the creditor upon the debtor, and says, Pay me that thou owest! This is one use to which it is subservient, and those who thus use it may be said to use it lawfully 1 Tim. i. 8.

LAW ‘of the Medes and Persians’ Dan vi. 8. Chardin says, that in Persia, when the king has condemned a person, it is no longer lawful to mention his name, or to intercede in his favour. Though the king were drunk or beside himself, yet the decree must be executed; otherwise he would contradict himself, and the law admits of no contradiction.

LAZARUS, Laz'-a-rus, the help of God.—The brother of Martha and Mary, who dwelt at Bethlehem, and who was raised from the dead by our Lord. It is most graphically related by the evangelist. By it, the Saviour proved himself the conqueror of death. That miracle declared most conclusively his Divinity, and therefore many believed on him; John xi.

LAZARUS is also a name assumed in one of our Lord's parables to denote a poor afflicted person, in respect to worldly circumstances, the counterpart of the rich man who fared sumptuously every day; Luke xvi.

LEAD a metal; it was very early known; Ex. xv. 10, and was used, among other purposes, to write upon. From Jer. vi. 29, and Ezek. xxii. 17, 22, we perceive it was then used in refining metals. It was used by the Romans to sheath their vessels, being fastened with bronze nails.

LEAD, 'the lead is consumed,' or spent; Jer. vi. 29, 30. Pliny says that lead was anciently used in refining silver, and separating it from other metals, or alloy. God had in vain used various ways to try and purify his people. Hence they are called reprobated, rejected silver, as being without value.

It has been aptly observed;—"In imposing Leah upon Jacob instead of Rachel, Divine Providence punished Jacob for the sin of imposing himself instead of Esau upon Isaac. The peculiar nature of the marriage ceremonial in the East, made deception very easy." See Gen. xxix. 23-26.

None of the antichristian party could join in this pure gospel-worship; they could not learn to ascribe power, riches, wisdom, honour, glory, and blessing to Jesus Christ alone; but gave Christ's honour and glory to angels and saints.

LEAVEN.—A piece of dough, or other substance in a state of fermentation, or, chemically, in a state of putrefaction. It is incorporated with bread before kneading to make it light; Exod. xiii. 7; xxxiv. 25;—figuratively, whatever produces a change in the mass with which it mixes; as the gospel does among men for the better; Matt. xiii. 33;—erroneous doctrines, and notorious sinners for the worse; Matt. xvi. 6, 12; 1 Cor. v. 6, 7, 8.

LEBANAH, Leb'-a-nah. — One whose children were Nethinims; Ezra ii. 45.

LEBANON, Leb'-a-non, white, incense. — Called by the Latins and Greek Libanus. An extensive chain of mountains on the north of Caanan, dividing Syria from Palestine. The western part of this mountain is sometimes called Libanus; the opposite, Anti-Libanus; Josh. xi. 17.

The length of these hills is about 150 miles, and their height about 2 miles. Numerous inferior ridges branch off in various directions, and assume different names, though they belong to the same chain, as Hermon and Gilead. The summits of many of these hills are level plains, well watered, fertile, and populous. The plains and valleys of Lebanon produce excellent wine, superior to any in the East. The prophet describing the happiness of a returning backslider, says, "They shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine; the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon." Hosea xiv. 7. See also Song iv. 11, 15. The highest parts of Lebanon are covered with snow through the greatest part of the year. The water which trickles down the hills from the frozen snow is very cool and refreshing. Hence Jeremiah complaining of the folly of the Jews in forsaking Jehovah, and cleaving to idols, exclaims, "Will a man leave the snow of Lebanon, which cometh from the rock of the field, or shall the cold flowing waters, that come from another place be forsaken?" The original word rendered snow may mean the droppings from melting snow; the rock of the field may refer to the congealed heaps of snow; and that the term which in our version is translated another place, may imply condensed masses of ice. It may be read:—"Will any one relinquish the rills from the hard frozen snow of Lebanon, or the cold waters which stream from the condensed ice?" Jer. xviii. 14. —Its forests and caves, so numerous, afforded a shelter for wild beasts, especially lions and bears, as well as for robbers. Hence travelling there was often very dangerous, which caused the prophet to speak of "the violence of Lebanon." Hab. ii. 17.

"After travelling for six hours in pleasant valleys," says D'Arvilleux, "and over mountains covered with different species of trees, we entered a small plain, on a fertile hill, wholly covered with walnut trees, and olives, in the middle of which is the village of Eden. It is truly an epitome of the terrestrial paradise of which it bears the name." These mountains are celebrated for their stately cedars, which are now not very numerous: "These noble trees," says Maundrell, "grow amongst the snow, near the highest part of the mountain, and are remarkable, as well for their own age and largeness, as for those frequent allusions made to them in the word of God. Here are some of them very old, and of a prodigious bulk; and others younger of a smaller size. Of the former I could only reckon up sixteen; the latter are very numerous. I measured one of the largest, and found it twelve yards six inches in girth, and yet sound; and twenty-seven yards in the spreading of its boughs. At about five or six yards from the ground, it is divided into five limbs, each of which are equal to a great tree." Mr. Fisk says, "I have seen noble cedars in Europe, the growth of centuries; but compared with those of Lebanon, they are but saplings." These cedars were the resort of eagles; Ezek. xvii. 3, as the lofty summits of the mountains were the haunts of lions and other beasts of prey, which used to descend and surprise the unwary traveller.

"Perhaps," says one writer, "no spot on the globe can present a spectacle so beautiful as that which is unfolded from the apex of Mount Lebanon. A boundless horizon, glowing and radiant, is spread out before the view, and the eye exultates almost without interruption from the waters of the Mediterranean to the confines of the Persian Gulf. On such a scene, the spectator loses for a while all sense of individual weakness. His faculties feel an enlarged vitality, and he dwells with a rapturous delight on the splendours by which he is encompassed, till their united glories torture the imagination, and the senses ache with gazing."

The Psalmist declares that "the voice of the Lord breaketh the cedars; yea, the Lord breaketh the cedars of Lebanon;" Psa. xxix. 5. A more sublime spectacle cannot be imagined than the thunder rolling among these enormous masses, and the lightning playing among the cedars, withering their foliage, crushing the branches that had withstood the storm for centuries, and hurling the roots and trunks into the distant vale.

"Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof for a burnt-offering;" Isa. xl. 16. Isaiah compares the mountain to one vast altar, and its countless trees are the pile of wood, and the cattle upon its thousand hills the sacrifice; yet if a volcanic eruption were to burst forth from one of its summits, and in torrents of liquid fire to enkindle the whole, even this mighty holocaust would be insufficient to expiate one single crime.

The Arabian poet says, 'Samnin (or Lebanon) bears winter on his head, spring upon his shoulders, and autumn in his bosom, while summer lies sleeping at his feet.'

LEBAOTH, Leb'-a-oth.—A town of Judah; Josh. xv. 32.

LEBBÆUS, Leb-be'-us, strong-hearted.—Same as Judas, and Thaddeus. He was brother of James the Less, son of Mary sister to the Virgin Mary, and to Cleophas, brother to Joseph; Matt. x. 3.

LEBONAH, Le-bo'-nah.—A place four leagues from Shechem, and two from Bethel; Judges xxi. 19.

LECAH, Le'-kah.—The son of Er; 1 Chron. iv. 21.

LEEKS, in botany, agree both in character and medicinal virtues with onions; Num. xi. 5.

LEES. Dr. A. Clarke observes, that the word used, Isaiah xxv. 5, to express the lees, in the original signifies the preservers; because they preserve the strength and flavour of the wine. See Jer. xlvi. 11.

"Moab hath been at ease from his youth,
And he hath settled upon his lees;
Nor hath he been drawn off from vessel to vessel,
Neither hath he gone into captivity;
Wherefore his taste remaineth in him,
And his flavour is not changed."

That is, he has not been stirred or removed, as Israel has been; but has lived long at ease, as wine settled on its lees—he retains still his state, his strength, his wealth; and also his pride, his presumption, and his impurity. See Psa. lv. 19; Zeph. i. 12; Jer. xlvi. 26, 29.

LEFT, Acts 14. 17; Rom. 9. 29; Heb. 4. 1; Jude 6; Rev. 2. 4.

LEFT-HANDED, Judges iii. 15; xx. 16. The Septuagint renders the word 'both-handed,' using either hand at pleasure.

LEGION.—In the time of Romulus, a Roman Legion or battalion contained 3000 infantry, and 300 cavalry. About the time of Christ, it contained 6200 foot soldiers, and 300 horse; Mark v. 9; Luke viii. 30; Matt. xxvi. 53.

LEGS BROKEN, John xix. 32. Lactantius says, this was commonly done, by the Romans, to those who were crucified.

LEGS, Ps. 147. 10; Prov. 26. 7; Ez. 12. 9. Figuratively, it indicates strength; Songs 5. 15.

LEHABIM, Le'-ha-bim, flames, the points of a sword.—The third son of Mizraim; Gen. x. 13.

LEHI, Le'-hy, jaw-bone.—A place where Samson slew a thousand Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass. It was in the tribe of Dan; Jud. xv. 19.

LEMUEL, Lem'-u-el, God with them.—Supposed to be king Solomon; Prov. xxxi. 1.

LEND, Ec. 22. 25; Deut. 23. 19. 20.

LENTILES. A sort of pulse, like pease, much esteemed by the ancients, Gen. xxv. 32; 2 Sam. xvii. 28. Dr. Shaw says that in Egypt beans, lentiles, and garvanceos, are the chief of the pulse kind, and when stewed with oil and garlic, are the principal food of persons of all ranks. Lentiles make a pottage of a chocolate colour; this was the "red pottage" for which Esau exchanged his birthright; Gen. xxv. 34.

LEOPARD.—A beast of prey, rather smaller than the tiger; it is beautifully spotted; but equally fierce and destructive. Figuratively, it denotes, 1. A subtle rapacious enemy; Dan. vii. 6.—2. A person of similar disposition; Isa. xi. 6.—3. Antichristian power; Rev. xiii. 2.

LEOPARD. Songs 4. 8; Jer. 5. 6, & 13. 23; Hos. 13. 7; Hab. 1. 8.

LEPER, Simon the leper; Matt. xxvi. 6. So called from his having been a leper; it was unlawful to eat with persons who had the leprosy.

LEPER 'in whom the plague is, his clothes shall be rent, and his head bare, and he shall put a covering on his upper lips, and shall cry, Unclean, unclean.' See Lev. xiii. 45. Maundrell saw several persons so infected with this incurable disease. The whole surface of the body was covered with scurf, and the joints deformed as with the gout, their legs looked like those of old battered horses, all indicating the utmost corruption of the human body on this side the grave. The rent clothes indicated grief; the bare head was the omission of the turban; the covering on the lip was after the manner of binding the dead, and the cry was to warn persons from touching the leper, whereby they would become ceremonially defiled, the partial disease being contagious, though the total was not.

LEPROSY. The nature of this awful disease is stated in the preceding article. It is seldom found in cold countries, nor is it now common anywhere.

LEPROSY. "If the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean. . . . But where raw flesh appeareth in him, he shall be unclean;" Lev. xiii. 13, 14.—Why should the partial leper be pronounced unclean, and the person wholly infected with the disease, clean? It was owing to the partial being contagious, the total not. The former was the disease acute; the latter chronic. In the chronic, a person was covered over with a white enamelled scurf; in the acute, there was a quick raw flesh in the risings. The one, therefore, was deemed unclean, or contagious, the other not; for contact with the quick raw flesh would be more likely to infect than the touch of the hard dry scurf. This is very obvious.

LEPROSY 'in a house;' Lev. xiv. 34. Probably a nitrous or vitriolic exudation from the stones bursting through the plaster, like that which we call salt-petre walls.

LESHEM, Le'-shem. — Formerly LAISH; Josh. xix. 47.

LESS, Ezra 9. 13; Job 11. 6; Is. 40. 17; Heb. 7. 7; Eph. 3. 8; Gen. 32. 10.

LET, is expressive, (1) Of command; 1 Kings xviii. 40. (2) Of entreaty; Psa. lxxix. 6. (3) Of permission; Josh. xxiv. 28. (4) Of intrusting, or assigning by lease; Song viii. 11. (5) To hinder or keep back; Isa. xliii. 13; 2 Thess. ii. 7.

LETTERS. They were in the form of rolls, the same as books. Niebuhr says, "The Arabs roll up their letters, then flatten them to the breadth of an inch, and paste up the ends of them instead of sealing them. The Persians adopt a similar method. D'Arvieux says that eminent persons write on large sheets of paper, with a broad margin; they are elegantly rolled up, and put in cases of silk, satin, or of silk interwoven with threads of silver and gold. The ribbon, or gold and silver lace, with which the bag is tied, is often knotted and impressed with a seal.

We read, in various passages of Scripture, of sealing letters with a seal, or signet, which was set in a ring; see Gen. xli. 42; Esth. iii. 10—12; viii. 2, 8, 10; Jer. xxii. 24; Dan. vi. 17. This custom is still retained in the east. "In Egypt," says Dr. Potter, "they make the impression of their name with their seal, generally of cornelion, which they wear on their finger, and which is blacked when they have occasion to seal with it."

"Sent Letters by Post;" Esther viii. 10.—Cyrus, the Persian monarch, established an effective system of sending "letters by post." He erected many stables at determined distances throughout his dominions, each with a suitable establishment of horses, and men to take care of them. There was a postmaster at each of these stages, who received the packets as they arrived, and immediately despatched them with fresh horses and couriers. The posts travelled night and day without intermission; and hence it was proverbially said that they flew swifter than cranes. The expedition thus used by Cyrus, to receive intelligence from, and forward edicts to the remotest parts of his empire, astonished the ancient world.

LETTER, Rom. 7. 6; 2 Cor. 3. 6.

LETTEST, Luke 2. 29; 2 Thess. 2. 7.

LETUSHIM, Le-tew'-shim.—The second son of Dedan, the son of Abraham and Keturah; Gen. xxv. 3.

LEUMMIM, Le-um'mim.—A great grandson of the patriarch Abraham; Gen. xxv. 3.

LEVI, Le'-vy, held, associated.—The third son of Jacob and Leah; born A. M. 2254, Gen. xxix. 34. The tribe descending from him was chosen by God for the temple service. Jacob, in his dying hour, thus spake of him in connection with Simeon:—

“Simeon and Levi are brethren:
They accomplished their wicked purposes.
Into their secret counsel, my soul did not come:
In their confederacy mine honour was not united.

For in their anger they slew a man,
And in their self-will they murdered a prince.
Cursed was their anger, for it was fierce!
And their wrath, for it was inflexible!
I will divide them out in Jacob,
And I will disperse them in Israel.”—Gen. xlix. 5—7.

Jacob here exculpates himself from all participation in the guilt of his sons, in the murder of the Shechemites. He most solemnly declares that he knew nothing of the confederacy by which it was executed: nor of the secret council in which it was plotted; and he foretels what would befall Levi;—the tribe should have no inheritance allotted them, but be dispersed among all tribes. This proved no curse to them eventually, because they had the tenth of all the increase of the land assigned them: for the curse was taken off on account of their opposition to the worship of the golden calf; Ex. xxxii. 26, 29. Moses pronounced a benediction on the tribe of Levi, not long before his death; Deut. xxxiii. 8, 9.

LEVIATHAN, Le-vy'-a-than, from two Hebrew words, which signify joined and dragon.—A monstrous animal supposed to be the Crocodile. See Job xli; Psa. lxxiv. 14; civ. 26; Isa. xxvii. 1. The crocodile more fully answers the description given by these passages than other now known. The crocodile is of vast strength and voracity, growing often to the length of 30 feet. It swims very swiftly; attacks the largest animals with the greatest daring. It has a very large mouth, and distends its jaws equally, filled with large sharp teeth. It has a coat of mail so scaly and callous as to resist the force of a musket ball in every part, except under the belly. It is shaped like the lizard, and lays its eggs in the sand to be hatched by the sun. By the kind providence of God, the Ichneumon is fond of these eggs, and discovers and destroys great quantities of them. Were it not for this they would dreadfully increase.

Dr. A. Clarke, says, “I think even the crocodile over-rated by this description. No beast, terrestrial or aquatic, deserves the high character here given; though that character only considers him as unconquerably strong, ferociously cruel, and wonderfully made. Perhaps Leviathan was some extinct Mammoth of the waters, as Behemoth was of the land.”

LEVITES.—The descendants of Levi; they were appointed to assist the priests in their services; to see that the temple was kept clean, to prepare oil, wine, &c. for God's house; to take care of the sacred revenues. David formed them into three divisions; the first assisted the priests in offering sacrifices; the second formed the choir; and the third preserved and kept clean the temple; Num. viii. 6, 26, &c.

LEVITICUS. The name of this book is derived from the Greek word

Levitikon, in the Septuagint, probably because it more particularly relates to the Levitical priesthood. This book treats of the judicial and civil laws of the Jews, also the rites and ceremonies of the Jewish religion. The manner in which their minute particulars are so often repeated, indicates that they were expressive of something beyond the mere letter, and were typical of Gospel appointments. The book of Leviticus and the Epistle to the Hebrews should be read together, as they mutually illustrate each other. The history recorded by the book of Leviticus comprises but the transactions of a month.

LEVY. A tribute of men for king's service; 1 Kings v. 13.—A tribute unto the Lord; Num. xxxi. 28.

LIBERAL. Free, generous, open-hearted; one who writes on all his possessions, "For myself and mankind;" and lives only to get and to do good, Prov. 11. 25; Is. 32. 6. 8; 2 Cor. 9. 13.

LIBERALITY, 1 Cor. 16. 3; 2 Cor. 8. 2 Jam. 1. 5. gives to all l.

LIBERTINES, mentioned in Acts vi. 9, were such Jews as were free citizens or burgesses of Rome. In the times of the apostles they had a synagogue in Jerusalem peculiar to themselves, and it seems very probable that Saul of Tarsus belonged to it. Compare Acts vi. 9, with ch. vii. 58, and viii. 1.

LIBERTY denotes a state of freedom, in contradistinction to slavery or restraint. Spiritual liberty consists in freedom from the curse of the moral law; from the servitude of the ritual; from the love, power, and guilt of sin; from the dominion of Satan; from the corruptions of the world; from the fear of death, and the wrath to come; Rom. vi. 14; viii. 1; Gal. iii. 13; John viii. 36; Rom. viii. 21; Gal. v. 1. No external pressure can take away that spiritual liberty which the true believer enjoys. He is no longer straitened by fear, but set at large by love. The truth makes him free, and he walks in the liberty of the children of God; a liberty which they only obtain who obey his precepts: these are rescued from the bondage, both of tyrannical desires and slavish fears; Psa. cxix. 45. On the subject of spiritual freedom the poet writes most sweetly.—

"But there is yet a liberty, unsung
By poets, and by senators unprais'd, Which monarchs cannot grant, nor all the pow'rs

Of earth and hell confed'rate take away;
A liberty, which persecution, fraud, Oppression, prisons, have no power to bind:—

'Tis liberty of heart deriv'd from heaven, Fought with his blood, who gave it to mankind,

And seal'd with the same token."—Cowper

The proclaiming of liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound, is a manifest allusion to the proclaiming of the year of jubilee by the sound of the trumpet. This was a year of general release, of debts and obligations,—of bond-men and women,—of lands and possessions, which had been sold from the families and tribes to which they belonged. Our Saviour applies this institution as typical of Christian liberty. Compare Lev. xxv. 9, with Isa. lxi. 1, and Luke iv. 18, 19.

LIBYA, Lib'-e-a, the heart of the sea.—A province in Africa, westward of Egypt, supposed to have been peopled by Lehabim, the son of Mizraim; Acts ii. 10.

LIBYANS, Lib'-e-ans.—The people of Libya.

LICE.—Well known insects, which seem intended by Divine Providence as the scourge of indolence. Dr. A. Clarke states, in his notes on Exod. viii. 16, that the common louse is so prolific, that in the course of six weeks the parent female may see 5000 of its own descendants! At the word of Moses the dust of the land of Egypt was transformed into this noisome, nauseous insect; which must have been a very dreadful plague to the Egyptians; Ps. cv. 31.

Lice would be a great torment, and very offensive to the Egyptians, who affected great external purity, and practised various ablutions lest they should harbour any vermin, &c.

LICK up 'the dust of thy feet,' denotes humility, submission, &c., in the Easterns who stoop till their faces touch the ground, and thus 'lick up the dust of the feet' of those to whom they pay this fulsome regard; Isa. xlix. 23.

LIE, LYING.—An abuse of speech, which the Scriptures condemn; Exod. xxiii. 7; Prov. xii. 22; xiii. 5; xix. 22; Acts v. 4; Eph. iv. 25; Jas. v. 12. Our Lord in his sermon on the mount, has given most important injunctions to his disciples on this subject. He would have them so plain, sincere, and free from guile, that their word should be equivalent to the most solemn oath; and that in all their assertions they should content themselves with a simple affirmation, It is, or It is not. "Let your communication be yea, yea; or nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil;" Matt. v. 37. See Eph. iv. 25; Col. iii. 9. It is an alarming consideration, that among those who shall be excluded from the kingdom of heaven are, "Whosoever loveth and maketh a lie;" Rev. xxii. 15. It appears from the records of past ages, and from the history of our own times, that this vice prevails more in some countries than in others. We have the testimony of Paul, that the inhabitants of Crete were remarkably addicted to lying, Titus i. 12. False doctrine is called a lie, 1 John ii. 21, and so is an image, or idolatrous representation of God, Rom. i. 25.

LIE.—"Is there not a lie in my right hand?" Isa. xlv. 20. The apostle Paul calls an idol a lie, Rom. i. 25. Idolaters had idols in their houses, and they could carry their graven images in their hands, as well as have them in their houses. Some read it, 'Is there not a lie at my right hand?' i. e., handy, or near to me at all times.

LIGHT. That pure brightness which is every where diffused (as some say) by the rays of the sun, and is the medium of vision. Others think that light is a fluid diffused, through all nature, and that the luminous and burning body causes waves and undulations in this fluid, by which the light is propagated similar to the conveyance of sound through the air. This opinion is very general. Fuller says, "A flood of light was produced on the first day of creation; and on the fourth it was collected and formed into distinct bodies."

"And God said, Let there be light," &c. Gen. i. 3. Many have asked, "How could light be produced on the first day, and the sun, the fountain of it, not created till the fourth day? Ans. The original word, aur, signifies not only light, but fire; Isa. xxxi. 9; Ezek. v. 2. It is used for the Sun; Job xxxi. 26; and for the electric fluid, or lightning; Job xxxvii. 3. And it is worthy of remark, that it is used in Isa. xliv. 16, for the heat derived, esh, the fire. "He burneth part thereof in the fire, (bemo esh), yea, he warmeth himself, and saith, Aha!.....I have seen the fire, (rae-thee aur) which a modern philosopher, understanding the language, would not scruple to translate,—“I have received caloric, or an additional portion of the matter of heat.” Therefore as God has diffused the matter of caloric or latent heat, through every part of nature, without which there could be neither vegetation nor animal life, that it is caloric or latent light (which is probably the same as latent heat,) which is principally intended by the original word.

"No truth in philosophy," observes Dr. Turner, "seems now to be more clearly ascertained, than that light has a distinct existence separate and independent of the sun." Light appears to have been formed before the formation of all things, to have been an active agent to produce them, and is most probably a component part of all.

"And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of heaven," Gen. i. 14. The original word translated lights is essentially different from that translated light in ver. 3. It denotes an instrument of light (Ex. xxv. 6; xxvii. 20; xxxv. 8,) and here denotes luminaries, or orbs, which either form or reflect the light to us.

LIGHT or LAMP.—1. Joy, peace, and prosperity; Esth. viii. 16; Job xxxviii. 15; xviii. 5, 6; xxix. 3; Ps. xviii. 28; xcvii. 11; Prov. xiii. 9.—2. LIGHTNING. The electric fluid, or flashes of fire, attended with explosions called thunder; Ps lxxvii 18; cxxxv. 7; Jer. li. 16. It is a great manifestation of Divine mercy, that lightning is accompanied with rain, to soften its rage, and prevent greater damage; Job xxxviii. 25.

By the force of gospel truth the kingdom of Satan, like lightning, fell from heaven; Luke x. 18. The swiftness of angels in performing the commands of God is likened to "a flash of lightning," Ezek. i. 14. The glorious coming of the Son of Man will be "as the lightning that cometh out of the east, and shineth even to the west;" Matt. xxiv. 27. Grievous and terrible judgments are frequently represented under the figure of lightning. See 2 Sam. xxiii. 15; Psa. xviii. 14; cxliv. 6; Zech. ix. 14; Rev. iv. 5; xi. 19; xvi. 18.

LIGHTNINGS, 'he maketh lightnings for the rain,' Psa. cxxxv. 7. Dr. Russel says that seldom a night passes at Aleppo, without much lightning in the north-west; but not attended with thunder; and when it appears in the west, or south-western points, it is a sure sign of the approaching rain which is often followed by thunder.

LILY.—A beautiful and fragrant flower, common in the fields of Canaan, viz. the white lily, crown imperial, or royal lily of the Greeks. Pliny reckons the lily the next plant in excellency to the rose. In the East, it is the emblem of purity and moral excellency. So the Persian poet, Sadi, compares an amiable youth to "the white lily in a bed of narcissuses," because he surpassed all the young shepherds in goodness. Christ contrasted the glory of Solomon with that species of lily whose golden flowers in autumn afford one of the most brilliant and gorgeous objects in nature; Matt. vi. 28, 29; Songs ii. 1, 2, 16, & iv. 5, & ii. 2; v. 13, & vii. 2; Hos. xiv. 5; Matt. vi. 28.

Consider the lilies of the field, and trust in God. Why should any of God's children fear, while they use the means of honest industry? Behold the lilies; see how they grow, and are clothed in grandeur; "they toil not, neither do they spin. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, will he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?" Consider the lilies of the field, and be humble. Some are very proud of dress, and lavish great sums upon the outward adorning of the body. What zeal to be finer in dress than others! But be adorned as they may, are they any better, or any wiser, or any happier for it?

LINE.—"Their LINE is gone out through all the earth;" Psa. xix. 3. "The heavens," with their stellary orbs are visible to the inhabitants of this world. They utter no sounds, but they teach the reflecting observer, by declaring the wisdom, power, and goodness of the Creator;—

For ever singing, as they shine.
 The hand that made us is Divine!

 —This passage alludes to lands appointed by the measuring line or chain.

LINEN. Cloth made of flax. The priest's garments were made of linen; Ex. xxviii 42. The mingling of linen and woollen in garments; Lev. xix. 19, might be prohibited to check pride and vanity. The best linen was anciently made in Egypt, as their country afforded the finest flax; but it is said, the most of their linen was coarse; and Solomon, it seems, bought linen-yarn in Egypt, and established a factory for weaving it in Judea; Prov. vii. 16; 1 Kings x. 28. It seems that linen was anciently used for writing on, and the letters formed with a pencil. Fine white linen is made the emblem of purity, innocence, and dignity; Rev. xv. 6; xix. 8.

LINGER, Gen. 19. 16; 2 Pet. 2. 3.

LINTEL.—The upper part of a door frame; Ex. xii. 22; 1 Kings vi. 31; Amos ix. 1; Zeph. ii. 14.

LINUS, Ly'-nus, nets.—A person mentioned by Paul; 2 Tim. iv. 21.

LION, the noblest of animals. It is found only in torrid climates, and is much less numerous now than formerly. It lives 60 or 80 years, but is not prolific. The allusions to its strength, courage, voraciousness, generosity, &c., in Scripture, are very numerous. Its rage is tremendous; Job iv. 11; Prov. xxx. 30; Amos iii. 8. Lions were sent by Jehovah to chastise the profaners of his chosen heritage; 2 Kings xvii. 25, 26. The people humbled themselves, and adopted the Jewish laws and worship, at first in addition to the heathen institutions, but afterwards exclusively. These were the Samaritans.

LION. "Thou shalt tread upon the lion and the adder," Ps. xci. 13. The original word has been rendered asp, or serpent. The most interpreters so rendered it. It was so in the Septuagint, Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic versions. The same word by the Septuagint in Job iv. 10; xxxviii. 39, is rendered a dragon. "Lion" in the passage seems improper, as men do not, in walking, tread upon lions, as they do upon serpents.

LION 'of the tribe of Judah.'—A lion being the ensign of the tribe of Judah, the phrase is applied to Christ, who sprang from that tribe, and is symbolical of his dignity and great strength; Rev. v. 5.

LION.—"There is a lion in the way," Prov. xxii. 13. The indolent thus magnify their difficulties, as an excuse for their slothfulness. When dark, the Easterns shut themselves up in their houses, for fear of the wild beasts.

LIVING signifies one who is alive or enjoys life, 1 Kings iii. 22; never dry, but always springing and running; Song iv. 15. Christ risen from the dead, Luke xxiv. 5; the godly departed this life. Matt. xxii. 32;

spiritual, Rom. xii. 1; that which procureth and bringeth to life spiritual and eternal, Heb. x. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 4; continuing, Titus iii. 3; a person's wealth, goods, or estate, Luke xv. 12.

LIVING STONE, 1 Peter ii. 4.—

Figuratively like plants, connected with, and nourished by their roots, stones still in the quarry are said to be living. The epithet means the firmness of that thing signified by the name of a stone, for nothing is firmer than stones growing in a quarry, as cleaving fast to a rock by their roots. As a living stone, Christ is the foundation, and believers, spiritually alive, are built upon him.

LIVING WATERS signify running waters, Zech. xiv. 8.

LIVING.—'All her living,' Mark xii. 44. Two mites, which the widow cast into the treasury, were reckoned a sufficiency for a poor man, as food for a day.

LIVING CREATURES, (Nephesch Chayah.)—A general term to express all creatures endued with animal life, in any of its infinitely varied gradations, from the half-reasoning elephant down to the stupid pottle, or still lower, to the polype, which seems equally to share the vegetable and animal life.

LIZARD occurs in Lev. xi. 30, and is no doubt the animal now called by that name.

LOCUST.—The locust belongs to a genus of insects known among naturalists by the name of GRILLI. The common great brown locust is about three inches in length; has two antennæ about an inch long.

and two pairs of wings. The head and horns are brown; the mouth and insides of the larger legs bluish; the upper side of the body and upper wings brown, the former spotted with black, and the latter with dusky spots. The back is defended by a shield of a greenish hue; the under wings are of a light brown hue, tinged with green, and nearly transparent. Their form and appearance are like the grasshopper so well known in this country.

Locusts are often mentioned in the Old Testament. They became one of the plagues of Egypt, and their visitation was threatened to the Israelites, as a mark of Divine displeasure. Their numbers and destructive powers very aptly fit them for this purpose. When they take the field they always follow a leader, whose motion they invariably observe. They often migrate from their native country, probably in quest of a greater supply of food. On these occasions they appear in such large flocks as to darken the air, forming many compact bodies, or swarms, of several hundred yards square. These flights are very frequent in Barbary, and generally happen at the latter end of March or beginning of April, after the wind has blown from the south for some days. The month following, the young brood also make their appearance, generally following the track of the old ones. In whatever country they settle, they devour all the vegetables, grain, and in fine all the produce of the earth, eating the very bark off the trees; thus destroying at once the hopes of the husbandman, and all the labours of agriculture; for, though their voracity is great, yet they contaminate more than they devour.

The prophet Joel has a most sublime description of these ravaging creatures:

(Joel i. 2, &c.)

Hear this, ye old men;
Give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land.
Hath such an event happened in your days,
Or even in the days of your fathers?
Tell ye your children of it;
And let your children tell their children;
And their children tell another generation.

What the GAZAM leave, the ARBEH devour;
What the ARBEH leave, the JALEK devour;
What the JALEK leave, the CHASIL devour.
Before them a fire consumeth,
And behind a flame burneth;
The land is as the garden of Eden before them.

Behind them a wilderness of desolation;
Yea, and nothing shall escape them.

They consume like a general conflagration. "Whosoever they feed (says Ludolphus,) their leavings seem as it were parched with fire." Though the land before their coming shall appear beautiful for its verdure and fruitfulness as the garden of Eden; yet after the ravages they have made on it, it shall look like a desolate and uncultivated wilderness. Neither herbage, nor shoots, nor leaves escape them.

In Rev. ix. 7, the locusts are compared to horses prepared for the battle, furious and impatient for the war.

Like the sound of chariots, on the tops of the mountains shall they leap;
Like the sound of a flame of fire which devoureth all stubble.
They shall be like a strong people set in battie array.

The noise of their coming shall be heard at a distance, like the sound of chariots passing over the mountains. When they fall on the ground, and leap from place to place, and devour the fruits, the sound of them will resemble the crackling of the stubble when consuming by the flames; or the din and clamour of an army ready prepared to engage in battle.

John has also described them; Rev. ix. 9. The sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots, of many horses running to battle; so that they may be heard at six miles distance; and that when they are eating, the sound is like that of a flame driven by the wind.

They shall run like mighty men;
Like warriors shall they climb the wall;
And they shall march every one in his way;
Nor shall they turn aside from their paths;
Neither shall one thrust another.
They shall march each in his road.

Many writers mention the order of locusts in their flight and march, and their proceeding directly forward, whatever obstacles were interposed.

Their outward coat is so hard and smooth that they are not wounded though they alight upon the edge of the sword. So Rev. ix. 9, "They had breast-plates, as it were breast-plates of iron."

They shall run to and fro in the city ;
They shall run upon the wall ;
They shall climb up into the houses ;
They shall enter in at the windows like a thief.

LOCUSTS, 'his meat was locusts, &c. Matt. iii. 4. Moses mentions them as lawful and wholesome food. Pliny says they were eaten by the Parthians and Ethiopians, and they are still eaten in the east both by rich and poor, in Egypt, Arabia, and Palestine. Shaw saw them eaten by the Moors in Barbary. Campbell says that the wild bushmen in Africa kill millions of them in the season, and lay them up for food. In Mecca, they are also eaten. In taste they are said to be like red herrings. They are esteemed a great delicacy. Some have supposed that John the Baptist lived upon the sweet pulpy pods of the locust-tree ; but this is doubtful.

LOCUSTS symbolically represent great and terrible armies, and teachers who corrupt the gospel ; Rev. ix. 3.

LOINS 'be girded,' Luke xii. 35. Alluding to the Eastern upper garment, called hyke, which is sometimes six yards long, and five or six feet wide. It serves for dress by day, and to sleep in at night ; Deut. xxiv. 13. Such a garment was loose, and troublesome to the wearer ; he was obliged to tuck it up, and fold it round him. This made a girdle necessary which explains this and other passages.

LOOKING-GLASSES. — In the East, they were made of polished metal; Ex. xxxviii. 8. They were made of a mixture of metal. Some specimens of Egyptian mirrors are to be seen in the British Museum. See xxxviii. 18. The women gave them to make a brazen laver; and therefore they must have been made of brass.

LOOKING unto JESUS; Heb. ii. 2, alludes to Judges in the Grecian games, who at the end of the race, stood ready to present the reward to the conqueror.

LOOSED 'the pains of death,' Acts ii. 24. In Ps. xviii. 5, the Septuagint translators have rendered the Hebrew word, cord, band, or pang. The sense of the word is bands or cords.

LORD.—The word is Saxon, and signifies a ruler or governor. It is applied to God, the Supreme Sovereign and Ruler over all; Gen. ii. 4; Deut. vi. 4.—It is a title given to Jesus Christ; Ps. cx. 1; Col. iii. 24; 1 Tim. vi. 15. He is styled "King of kings, and Lord of lords;" 1 Tim. vi. 15; Rev. xvii. 14; xix. 16. Also the Prince of the kings of the earth; Rev. i. 5.—It is applied to the Holy Spirit; 2 Thess. iii. 5;—To princes and noblemen; Gen. xlii. 10, 30; Dan. iv. 36.—To the deputy of a province; Acts xxv. 26.—To the tyrannical; Isa. xxvi. 13; 1 Pet. v. 3.

LORD, LORD, means 'most excellent Lord,' comparisons in Hebrew being frequently made by doubling the word; Matt. vii. 21.

LORD'S DAY.—The day on which the Son of God arose from the dead, and on which his disciples assembled together to commemorate his death and resurrection, and for public worship; Acts ii. 32, 33; xx. 7; 1 Cor. xi. 18—20; xvi. 2. From the times of the apostles downwards, the first day of the week was solemnly observed in all the churches of Christ, whereby they owned its substitution in the room of the seventh day, applying the duties and services of a sabbath unto it. And that this was owned from the authority of the Lord is declared by John in the Revelation, who calls it the Lord's day; Rev. i. 10. See Sabbath.

LORD'S SUPPER.—The ordinance which Christ instituted to commemorate his sufferings and death, to be observed by his people to the end of time. For its institution, see Matt. xxvi. 26—29; Mark xiv. 22—25; Luke xxii. 19—21; Acts ii. 46; 1 Cor. xi. 23—27. The Romau Catholics profane this ordinance by their mass, so contrary to the simple institution of Jesus Christ. Their ignorance and superstition are visible in the dogma of transubstantiation, which represents the bread and wine as the real body and blood of Christ. The expression, "Take, eat; this is my body," &c., means, "This is the symbol of my body," &c. It represents my body torn and bruised in sacrifice, &c. There are many symbols of a similar character;—"Judah is a lion's whelp." Are we to suppose that one of Jacob's sons was turned into a wild beast? Christ calls himself a "Door," a "Vine," &c. Was he literally a door, a number of boards fastened together with glue and nails?

LO-RUHAMA, Lo-rew-ha'-mah, not obtaining mercy.—The metaphorical daughter of Hosea; Hosea i. 8.

LOSE, Eccl. 3. 6; Matt. 10. 39, 42, & 16. 26; 2 John 8; Prov. 22. 8.

Luke 15. 32. thy brother was I. and is found

John 18. 9. gavest me I have I. none
2 Cor. 4. 3. gospel hid to them that are I.

LOSS 'for Christ,' Phil. iii. 7.—The word rendered 'loss,' denotes that loss sustained in a storm at sea, when goods, on which the mariners set a value, are thrown overboard, for the sake of saving the ship and people. The word is so used in Acts xxvii. 21.

LOT, Lot, wrapt up, myrrh, resin.—The son of Haran, and nephew of Abraham. He accompanied his uncle from Ur to Haran, and thence to Canaan; Gen. xiii. 8, 9. The number of their flocks, and strife of their herdsmen obliged them to separate. On Abraham's offer, Lot took his choice even the fertile country about Sodom, a well-watered plain. Of his captivities, and persecutions by the Sodomites; the destruction of Sodom, and of his wife, are graphically narrated in the book of Genesis.

"But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt;" Gen. xix. 26. It is probable that she was struck with lightning and enveloped in the bituminous and sulphuric matter which abounded in that country, and which, not being exposed afterwards to the action of the fire, resisted the air and wet, and was thus rendered permanent.—Some suppose that the expression, "pillar of salt," is to be understood metaphorically. Salt is frequently used in Scripture as an emblem of incorruption, durability, &c. Hence a covenant of salt; Num. xviii. 19, is a perpetual covenant, or one that is never to be broken. Therefore a pillar of salt may signify no more in this case than an everlasting monument against criminal curiosity, unbelief, and disobedience.

LOT.—Any thing cast or drawn in order to determine a point in debate. It is a solemn appeal to God, for an immediate interposal of his directive power for determining an affair; and, on that account, ought to be used in nothing but what is important, and cannot otherwise be "peacefully determined; and it is to be used with reverence and prayer; Prov. xvi. 33; xviii. 18; Acts i. 24—26; 1 Sam. xiv. 41.

LOTAN, Lo'-tan.—A duke of the Horites, a descendant of Esau, and son of Seir; Gen. xxxvi. 20.

LOVE.—A natural passion of the human mind, given for the most important purposes. In Scripture the term has a more extensive meaning. It denotes the pity and compassion of God to his creatures. This love he has manifested in creation, in providence, and in grace. It is manifest especially in the scheme of redemption. In that God pitied the guilty sinner, and sent his Son from the most excellent glory to tabernacle on earth, to suffer reviling, and physical torture, as the sinner's substitute; John iii. 16. By the dispensation of grace, with all its privileges, promises, and immunities, it is strikingly seen; "God is love." See Rom. v. 6—8.

If a king on his throne were to smile upon us graciously, we should be delighted; but when we think of the King of kings giving his Son to die for us, nothing can be imagined in any degree comparable to such love as this; and when we consider that we were then enemies to his divine majesty, and had deserved eternal death, from his justice, well may it be said, that God not only declares, but commends his love; he makes it appear wonderful and illustrious to us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. This is the most matchless instance of love mortal ears ever heard. or the thoughts of any heart can conceive. This is the strongest fire we can possibly stand by to have our frozen hearts warmed and inflamed. O come hither, then, and frequently behold the wonderful beneficence of God to us! Let us think properly of the love of God, and surely we shall become captives, willing captives of such almighty triumphant love!

There are four marks by which we may discover whether we love God or not: Do we delight to think of God? do we delight to talk of God? do we care to please God? do we love our neighbour? If we can truly answer these inquiries in the affirmative, then we possess this invaluable principle, then all duties become pleasant, all troubles comparatively light, and all mercies have a delightful relish. This love is like oil to the wheels of obedience; and causes us to run in the way of God's commandments.

Love never faileth. When tongues and prophecies cease, love shall shine and sing in the kingdom of heaven. Faith will accompany us to the gates of Paradise, and there bid us farewell; but white-robed Charity will enter the gates, and never leave us. Knowledge may fade away; but love shall flourish in immortal bloom. Contemplate the glory and harmony of heaven. Without love there is no harmony, no beauty, no unity, no happiness! Music has a powerful charm to heaven-born souls; but if the harp of love be removed, the charm is gone.

Every true Christian loves God. This is the grand test of true conversion; 1 John iv. 16—19. Real love to God must have the most favourable influence on moral conduct, for no obedience is so acceptable as that which arises from affection; it is the alert, cordial, sincere obedience of a dutiful child to a tender parent; it anticipates his will, and is desirous to please him in all things. And what is love to God, but the love of purity and rectitude? Real love not only admires, but labours to imitate the object of its affection; hence the apostle says,

Brotherly love is essential to the nature and welfare of the church of Christ. It is a sympathy actuated by a sense of communion in the same hopes, the same fears, the same aversions, and in the benevolence of the same parent, &c. “Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another;” 1 John iv. 11.

LOVE of CHRIST constraineth us, 2 Cor. v. 14. It bears us away, says Dr. Doddridge, like a strong and resistless torrent. The idea of constraint is, however, preferred by most Commentators, and is strongly justified by its use among general writers. Dr. Gill gives it this import, which it will well bear. It "constraineth us; holds and keeps us in our station and duty, as soldiers are held and kept together under a banner, or ensign displayed;" to which the church refers, when she says, "his banner over me was love;" Songs ii. 4.

LOWLINESS, Eph. 4. 2; Phil. 2. 3.

LUBIM, Lew'-bim.—The name of Libya in Africa, probably peopled by Lebahim; Nahum iii. 9.

LUCAS, Lew'-kas, luminous.—A fellow-labourer with Paul; Philem. 24. The same as Luke.

LUCIFER, Lew'-se-fer, a star, or bright light.—Metaphorically the proud king of Babylon; or for Satan, often called Lucifer in the writings of the fathers; Isa. xiv. 12.

LUCIUS, Lew'-she-us, luminous.—A prophet in the church at Antioch; Acts xiii. 1.—And Paul's kinsman; Rom. xvii. 21. Probably the same.

LUCRE signifies unlawful gain; 1 Sam. viii. 3. The sons of Samuel walked not in the ways of their father, "but turned aside after lucre." The ministers of God must not be given to "filthy lucre;" 1 Tim. iii. 3. 8; Tit. i. 7; 1 Pet. v. 2.

LUD, Lud, nativity or generation.—The fourth son of Shem, thought to have peopled Lydia; Gen. x. 22.

LUDIM, Lew'-dim.—The son of Mizraim; Gen. x. 13.

LUHITH, Lew'-hith.—A place in the Moabite country, between Ar and Zoar; Isa. xv. 5; Jer. xlviii. 5.

LUKE, Luke, luminous.—One of the Evangelists, a native of Antioch, and a physician. He was Paul's companion and assistant; 2 Tim. iv. 11;

Philemon 24. This name is a contraction of Lucanus.

It has been inferred that he was a Gentile, on the authority of Paul's expressions in Col. iv. 10—14. In his youth, probably he had embraced Judaism, from which he was converted to Christianity. He wrote the gospel which is called by his name, and the Acts of the Apostles. The latter book informs us that he was with Paul at Troas; Acts xvi. 10, 11; at Jerusalem, &c., and that he sailed in the same ship when he was sent a prisoner to Rome. It is uncertain how and where he died. Some suppose that he died a natural death at an advanced age; others think that he was martyred in Pelasgia in his eightieth year.

LUKE, the gospel of.—Luke, "the beloved physician," (Col. iv. 14.) was the writer of this gospel, bearing his name; and he was also the writer of the Acts of the Apostles. This Gospel was written for the use of the Gentile Christians, and dedicated to Theophilus, a nobleman converted to the faith of Christ. It is supposed to have been written about A. D. 63, a little after Paul's release from his imprisonment at Rome. His writings afford ample evidence that he had enjoyed a liberal education. Grotius states that he is eminently distinguished for his fine classic Greek; and that he abounds with expressions of classical purity. The peculiar sweetness of his style, the smoothness of his periods, the beautiful and clear arrangement of his words, must delight every reader possessed of an elegant taste in polite literature.

LUKEWARMNESS, as applied to the affections, implies indifference, or the want of ardour. In respect to religion, nothing can be more culpable than this spirit. If there be a God possessed of unspeakable rectitude in his own nature, and unbounded goodness towards his creatures, what can be more inconsistent and unbecoming than to be frigid and indifferent in our devotions to him? The Atheist disbelieves the existence of a God, and therefore cannot worship him at all; the lukewarm owns the existence, sovereignty, and goodness of the Supreme Being, but denies him that fervour of affection, that devotedness of heart, and activity of service, which the excellency of his nature demands, and the authority of his word requires. Such a character, therefore, is represented as absolutely loathsome to God, and obnoxious to his wrath; Rev. iii. 15, 16. The general signs of a lukewarm spirit are such as these: neglect of private prayer; a preference of worldly to religious company; a lax attendance to public ordinances; omission or careless perusal of God's word; a backwardness to promote the cause of God in the world, and a rashness of spirit in censuring those who are desirous to be useful.

LUKEP, Is. 33. 21; Rom. 9. 21, & 11. 16; 1 Cor. 5. 6, 7; Gal. 5. 9.

LUNATIC, a person afflicted with falling sickness, or madness, or deep melancholy; or it may denote a person possessed by the devil; Matt. iv. 24, and xvii. 15. See Demoniacs.

LUZ, Luz, separation, departure.—The ancient name of Bethel; Gen.

xxviii. 19.—A city of Arabia Petraea, built by a man of Bethel; Judg. i. 23.

LYBIA, Lib'-e-a.—See LIBYA.

LYCAONIA, Ly-ka-o'-ne-a. she-wolf.—A province of Asia Minor, where Paul and Barnabas planted churches; Acts xiv. 6. A remarkable lake exists in this province called Tatta, and by the moderns Tuzla, which yields salt. Its chief cities were Iconium, Derbe, and Lystra. The name of the province is now Karamania.

LYCIA, Lish'-e-a.—A province of Asia Minor. At the port of Myra, in Lycia, Paul embarked, when he sailed for Rome; Acts xxvii. 5.

LYDDA, Lid'-da, nativity.—A town about 14 miles from Joppa, and 32 westward from Jerusalem; Acts ix. 32, 35. It was eminent for its schools of learned Jews. It was burnt by Cestius while its males were gone to Jerusalem to the Feast of Tabernacles.

LYDIA, Lid'-e-a.—A woman of Thyatira, a seller of purple, who dwelt in the city of Philippi, in Macedonia. During the preaching of the Apostle Paul, the Lord graciously opened her heart, and she and her household gave themselves to the Lord, and were baptized; Acts xvi. 14, 40.

LYDIA. A province of Asia Minor, originally peopled by the sons of Lud; Isa. lxvi. 19.

LYSANIAS, Ly-say'-ne-as, that drives away sorrow.—Tetrarch of Abilene, which country he possessed when John the Baptist began his mission; Luke iii. 1.

LYSIAS, Lish'-e-as.—The chief captain of the Roman band at Jerusalem; Acts xxi. 31, &c.

LYSTRA, Lis'-tra, that dissolves or disperses.—A city of Lycaonia, Timothy's birth-place. Here the apostle healed a cripple, and they were taken for gods; Acts xiv. 6—18.

M

MAACAH, May'-a-kah, to squeeze.—See BETH-MAACAH. A small province of Syria, on the road to Damascus; 2 Sam. x. 8.

MAACHAH, May'-a-kah, squeez- ing.—The son of Nahor, Gen. xxii. 24.—Daughter of Talmi, king of Geshur, wife of David, and mother of Absalom; 2 Sam. iii. 3.—Daughter of Abishalom, 1 Kings xv. 2.—Wife of Abijam, and mother of Asa; 1 Kings xv. 10.—Concubine of Caleb, 1 Chron. ii. 48.—Father of Achish, king of Gath; 1 Kings ii. 39.—Father of Shephatiah, 1 Chr. xxvii. 16.

MAACATHI, Ma-ak'-a-ty, broken.—A place in Syria, in the half-tribe of Manasseh; Deut. iii. 14.

MAACHATHITES, Ma-ak'-a-thites.—The people of Maachathi, Josh. xiii. 13.

MAADAI, Ma-ad'-a-i, pleasant.—Son of Bani, who returned from captivity; Ezra x. 34.

MAADIAH, Ma-a-dy'-ah, pleasantness.—A priest, Neh. xii. 5.

MAAI, Ma-ay'-i, a belly, or heaving up.—The name of a priest, Neh. xii. 36.

MAALEH-ACRABBIM, Ma-al'-eh-a'-rab'-bin, the going up to Acrabbim.—One of the borders of the tribe of Judah, in Palestine; Josh. xv. 3.

MAARATH, May'-a-rath, a den.—A city, Josh. xv. 59.

MAASEIAH, Ma-a-sy'-ah, the work of the Lord.—The son of Ahaz, assassinated by Zichri; 2 Chr. xxviii. 7.—The son of Adaiah, 1 Chron. xv. 18.

MAASIAI, Ma-a-sy'-a-i, the work of the Lord.—One of the priests, 1 Chron. ix. 12.

MAATH, May'-ath, wiping away.—Joseph's ancestor, Luke iii. 26.

MAAZ, May'-az, wood.—The grandson of Jerahmeel, of the tribe of Judah; 1 Chron. ii. 27.

MACEDONIA, Mas-se-do'-ne-a, adoration, prostration.—A large province of Greece, peopled by the descendants of Javan, and formerly called Emathia. It was bounded by the mountains of Hæmus on the north, the Aegean sea on the east, Achaia on the south, and the Adriatic sea on the west. Its metropolis was Thessalonica. One of its mountains was the famous Olympus. Several other countries, however, had mountains so called and esteemed sacred. It was a famous monarchy under Philip and Alexander the Great, who conquered Greece, Persia, and a part of Judea. About A. M. 3856, it became a part of the great Roman Empire, and continued so for 1600 years, when the Ottoman Turks conquered it. Paul planted the gospel here, and the Christians contributed very generously to their suffering brethren at Jerusalem. Christianity has never been wholly eradicated from Macedonia, though the Turks have been cruel persecutors. Acts xvi. 9; xviii. 5; Rom. xv. 26; 2 Cor. vii. 5.

MACHBANAI, Mak'-ba-na-i.—One of the valiant men in David's army, 1 Chron. xii. 13.

MADMANAH, Mad-man'-ah.—A city belonging to Simeon, Josh. xv. 31. It was first given to Judah.

MADON, May'-don.—A city in Canaan, Josh. xi. 1.

MAGBISH, Mag'-bish.—One hundred and fifty-six of his children returned from the captivity, Ezra ii. 30.

MAGDALA, Mag'-da-la, tower, greatness.—A town on the east of the sea of Tiberias, Matt. xv. 39.

MAGDALENE, Mag-da-le'-ne.—See MARY MAGDELENE.

MAGDIEL, Mag'-de-el.—A prince of the Idumeans. Successor of Mibzar, Gen. xxxvi. 43.

MAGI, MAGIANS, Ma'-jy, Ma'-je-ans, rendered wise men, Matt. ii. 1—12, signifies ancient sages eminent for their knowledge of astronomy, natural philosophy, and theology. They probably came from Arabia, a country east of Judea; Judges vi. 3; Job i. 3. The inhabitants were distinguished for wisdom, especially the descendants of Teman; 1 Kings iv. 30; Jer. xlix. 7. This country was also famous for gold, frankincense, and myrrh. These men were descendants of Ishmael, and of course were taught by tradition to expect the star of Jacob to rule the world. It is probable that a luminous body, formed solely to guide them to Bethlehem, appeared to perform the diurnal revolution of the heavens from east to west. Surely they were inspired to know whom this star respected, and they submitted, under Divine direction, to its guidance; compare verse 12. Their presents aided Joseph and Mary in their journey to Egypt. The greatness of the present proved the Magi's faith in the Saviour's royal descent; it was, according to Eastern custom, what a prince alone could expect.

MAGICIANS.—Learned men of the East, as described above. Dan. ii. 2; iv. 7, 9, &c.

MAGICIANS.—Miracles supposed to have been wrought by Egyptian Magicians; Exod. vii. 8, &c. In reply to the infidel objection, that Moses describes the works of the Magicians in the very same language as he does his own, and that therefore they were equally as miraculous; observe, nothing is more common than to speak of professed jugglers as doing what they pretend and appear to do, and that this language never misleads when applied to mere imposers on the sight.—Moses does not say the Magicians did that thing, (as in Exod. ix. 5, 6,) or according to what he did, so did they, (as in Exod. vii. 9, 10, 22,) but uses a word expressive of mere general similitude. That a perfect imitation could not be designed by this word, is evident from its being applied to cases in which such an imitation was absolutely impracticable; for, when Aaron had converted all the water of Egypt into blood, (or so as to resemble blood) we are told the Magicians did so, that is, something in like sort. They could not cover the land of Egypt with frogs; it had already been done; they could only appear to bring them over some small space cleared for the purpose. The word imports only their attempting some imitation of Moses, for it is used when they failed in their attempt; "They did SO to bring forth lice, but they COULD NOT." The original word translated enchantments in Exod. vii. 11, imports deception and concealment, and ought to be rendered secret sleights or jugglings. These are expressly referred to the Magicians, and not to the devil; Exod. viii. 18.

With regard to the first attempts of the Magicians, the turning rods into serpents.—It was not extraordinary to succeed in it, because such men were famous for the art of dazzling and deceiving the sight; and that serpents being first charmed and made tractable and harmless, (which history, ancient and modern, states to have been frequently done,) have had a thousand different tricks played with them to the astonishment of the spectators. Huetius says the Chinese jugglers undertake to turn rods into serpents; though they only dexterously substituted the latter in the room of the former, the very trick performed by the Egyptian Magicians. A most important difference is stated between the miracle of Aaron, and the impostures of the Magicians; for it says, "that Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh and before his servants, and it became a serpent;" but with regard to the Magicians, it uses very different language, "they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents." It is stated that they did this by their enchantments or covered arts. To show that the serpent of Aaron was not the result of dexterous management, but a miraculous production, God caused his rod to swallow up theirs, which the Magicians of course could not do.

There is no difficulty in accounting for the partial success of the Magicians in turning the running and standing waters into blood. For it was during the continuance of this judgment, when no water could be procured but by digging round about the river, that the Magicians attempted by some proper preparations to change the colour of the small quantity that was brought them, intending to convince Pharaoh that they could as easily have turned a larger quantity into blood. In such a way imposture often did take place. It is related by Valerius Maximus, that the wine poured into the cup of Xerxes was three times changed into blood. Such trifling feats could not disparage the miracle of Moses; its vast extent raised it above the suspicion of fraud, and stamped upon every heart, not steeled against all conviction, the strongest impression of its divinity. Read Exod. vii. 19—21.

With regard to the frogs, before they were removed, the Magicians undertook to bring into some place cleared for the purpose, a fresh supply, which they might easily do, when there was such plenty every where at hand. Here the narrow compass of the work exposed it to the suspicion of being effected by human art. The Magicians could not remove them. This was accomplished by Moses, at the request of Pharaoh.

Moses, through Divine power, also turned all the dust of the land into lice. The Magicians tried to do so by their enchantments, but they could not. Read Exod. viii. 18, 19. With all their skill in magic, and with all their dexterity in deceiving the spectators, they could not even succeed so far as they had done in former instances, by producing a specious counterfeit of this work of Moses. They were therefore compelled to exclaim, "This is the finger of God." They allowed that it surpassed the science they possessed, and argued the special interposition of some deity.

Their strenuous but unsuccessful opposition to Moses, strengthened his cause by manifesting the divinity of his miracles. In Egypt the art of magic was held in the highest esteem, and carried to its utmost perfection. Pharaoh undoubtedly employed the most able possessors of it, who, from a regard to their own reputation and interest, would try every possible method to invalidate the miracles of Moses. But their utmost efforts were baffled; and the vanity and futility of the claims of magic were detected and exposed, agreeably to Paul's censure upon certain persons, whose opposition to genuine Christianity was the sole effect of their corrupt minds, without the least colour of reason, he compares them to Jannes and Jambres, who withstood Moses; and did it, he must mean, with as little pretence. He adds, their folly was manifest unto all men, and thus he taxes the conduct of the Magicians with the most glaring absurdity. Jannes and Jambres, (2 Tim. iii. 8, 9,) mentioned by Paul, from the Chaldean Paraphrase on Exod. vii. 11, are supposed to have been the two chiefs of Pharaoh's Magicians.

MAGNIFY. To declare the greatness and glory of a person; Luke i. 46. The Lord is well pleased to magnify his law, and honour it, by the obedience of Christ to all its precepts, and by his enduring the penalty due to the transgressions of the law; Isa. xlii. 21.

MAKKEDAH, Mak-ke'-dah, adoration, prostration.—A city belonging to the tribe of Judah; Jos. xv. 41.

MAKTESH, Mak'-tesh.—A place near Jerusalem; Zeph. i. 11.

MALACHI, Mal'-a-ky, messenger, or angel of the Lord.—The last of the minor prophets, before the commencement of Christianity. He lived after the rebuilding of the temple and city of Jerusalem by Nehemiah, and was contemporary with Plato the philosopher; Cimon the Athenian, and Darius Nothus, king of Persia. With him the prophetic office seems to have ceased for nearly 400 years, that is, till the Lord Jesus came. Jerome and others suppose that the word Malachi (Angel, or Messenger) was merely a general name, expressive of office, and that it was given to Ezra, whom they suppose to be the author of this book.

Malachi was raised up to reprove the sins of the people and to reform the Jewish church. He foretold the ministry of John the Baptist, and the speedy coming of the Messiah. His writings are not without taste and elegance, though written at a time when Hebrew Literature had lost much of its former purity and vigour. He exercised his ministry about 120 years after the return from the Babylonish captivity, and 420 from the birth of Christ.

MALCHAM, Mal'-kam, their king.—A descendant of the patriarch Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 9.

MALCHIEL, Mal'-ke-el.—The son of Beriah, and chief of the Malchielites; Num. xxvi. 45.

MALCHIJAH or MALCHIAH, Mal-ky'-jah or Mal-ky'-ah, the messenger of the Lord.—The chief of the fifth family of the twenty-four sacerdotal families; 1 Chron. xxiv. 9.—A Levite; 1 Chron. vi. 40.—The father of Pashur; 1 Chron. ix. 12.—A Jew; Neh. iii. 11.—The son of Rehab; Neh. iii. 14.—The son of a goldsmith, very liberal at the rebuilding of Jerusalem; Neh. iii. 31.—The keeper of the prisons at Jerusalem; Jer. xxxviii. 6.

MALCHIRAM, Mal-ky'-ram.—The son of king Jehoniah; 1 Chron. iii. 18.

MALCHOM, Mal'-kom.—The same as MILCOM.

MALCHUS, Mal'-kus, king, or kingdom.—A servant of the high priest Caiaphas, whose right ear Peter cut off, but was healed by Christ; John xviii. 10.

MALE or female, Gen. 1. 27; Num. 5. 8; Mal. 1. 14; Matt. 19. 4; Gal. 3. 28.

MALE nor FEMALE; Gal. iii. 28. Females were not admitted to all the heathen rites; and the privileges of Jewish females were also limited.

MALEFACTOR.—A criminal, a vile person; Luke xxiii. 32.

MALICE. A fixed determination to revenge or injure another. It is a most hateful disposition in the sight of God, and forbidden in his holy word, Col. 3. 8; 1 Pet. 2. 1; and it is inimical to the spirit of Christianity, Matt. 5. 44. Malicious informers were odious in the judgment of the Mosaic law, Lev. 19. 16-18.

MALLOTHI, Mal'-lo-thy.—One of the singers in the temple of Jerusalem; 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

MALLOWS.—A useful medicinal plant, one species of which grows to about the size of Indian corn. What plant is meant in Job xxx. 4, where alone the word occurs, is not certain. It is evidently food for poor people, and may therefore be the halimus, a saltish plant, growing wild on poor land, which is eaten in Syria and elsewhere, as we do greens.

MALLUCH, Mal'-luk.—The name of two Levites; 1 Chr. vi. 44; Ezra x. 29.

MAMMON, Mam'-mon, riches.—Probably the name of a Syrain god; Matt. vi. 24.—Some say the Heathen god of plenty; Luke xvi. 13.

MAMMON 'of unrighteousness,' Luke xvi. 9. Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that is of the unrighteous deceitful mammon wealth, by doing good with it especially to the household of faith; that when your heart and flesh fail, 'they,' the saints, whom you have helped, 'may receive you into everlasting habitations.'

MAMRE, Mam-re, rebellious, better, changing.—An Amorite, brother of Aner and Eshcol, and friend of Abraham; Gen. xiv. 13.—The same as Hebron; Gen. xxiii. 19; xxxv. 27.—A plain near Mamre, about 2 miles south of the town; Gen. xiii. 18.

MAN. In reference to this world, man is the chief creature of God, the head and lord of the animal creation; Gen. i. 26. The word man sometimes signifies the whole human race which, though of one blood, yet are divided into various nations and tribes, and distinguished by colour, physiognomy, stature, language and habits.

Man was formed of the dust of the ground, as the name Adam implies;

he was "fearfully and wonderfully made" in his bodily powers, in his intellectual endowments, and in the immortality of his soul.

Hence we read "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul;" Gen. ii. 7. This statement proves that man is a compound being, having a body and soul distinctly and separately created; the body out of the dust of the earth, the soul immediately breathed from God himself. The soul and the body therefore are not the same thing! The body derives its origin from the earth, or as the Hebrew word implies, the dust; therefore, because it is earthy, it is perishable. Of the soul it is said, "God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life;" meaning the breath of lives, that is, animal and intellectual. This Divine breath, or vitality, expanded and inspired the lungs, &c., and set them all in play, and the inspiration of God gave reflection, judgment, and understanding.

What a wonderful compound is man! "And man became a living soul!" God is said to breathe the breath of life into all animals; and we sometimes read of the soul of every living thing; but they are never said to be living souls as men are. God hath stamped rationality and immortality upon men's souls, so as to render them capable of a separate state of being, even when their bodies are dead. Hence the soul of a beast, when it dies, is said, "to go downward;" but the soul of a man upward;" Eccles. iii. 21.

But these views are opposed by those who maintain that the universe, the earth, and man upon the earth, have existed from all eternity, and collectively, in the state in which they now are. But facts invincibly oppose such an opinion. How many ages man has existed on the earth is still under discussion. Yet that inquiry does not affect in any way the doctrine of creation itself. It is a certain and recognized fact that man has not always existed on the earth, and that the earth has for long periods undergone different changes incompatible with man's existence. Man therefore had a beginning—man has come upon the earth. How has he come there? Here the opponents of the Bible account are divided. Some maintain the theory of spontaneous generation; others the transformation of species.

According to one party, matter possesses under certain circumstances, and by the simple development of its own proper power, the faculty of creating animated beings. According to others, the different species of animated beings which still exist, or have existed at various epochs, and in the different conditions of the earth, are derived from a small number of primitive types, which have possessed, through the lapse of millions and thousands of millions of ages, the power of developing and perfecting themselves, so as to gain admission, through transformation, into higher species. Hence they conclude, with more or less hesitation, that the human race is the result of a transformation, or a series of transformations.

The attempt to establish the theory of spontaneous production dates from a remote period. Science has ever baffled it; the more its observations have been exact and profound, the more have they refuted the hypothesis of the innate creative power of matter. This result has been again recently established by the attentive examination by men of eminent scientific attainments. But were it even otherwise,—could the advocates of the theory of spontaneous production, refer to experiments hitherto irrefutable, these would furnish no better explanation of the first appearance of man upon earth, we should still say;—Such a mode of generation cannot nor ever could, produce any but infant beings, in the first hour and in the first state of incipient life.

It has never been asserted, nor will any person (probably) ever affirm, that by spontaneous generation, man—that is to say, man and woman, the human couple—can have issued, or that they have issued at any former period, from matter of full form and stature, in possession of all their powers and faculties. Yet it is only upon this supposition, that man, appearing for the first time upon earth, could have lived there to perpetuate his species, and to found the human race. Let any one picture to himself the first-man, born in a state of the earliest infancy, alive but inert, devoid of intelligence, powerless, incapable of satisfying his own wants, even for a moment, trembling, sobbing, with no mother to listen to or feed him! And yet we have in this a picture of the first-man, as presented by the system of spontaneous generation. It is manifestly not thus that the human race first appeared upon earth.

The system of the transformation of species is no less refuted by science than by the instincts of common sense. It rests upon no tangible fact, on no principle of scientific observation or historic tradition. All the facts ascertained, all the monuments collected in different ages and different places, respecting the existence of living species, disprove the hypothesis of their having undergone any transformation, any notable and permanent change. We meet with them a thousand, two thousand, three thousand years ago, the same as they are at the present day.

In the same species the races may vary and undergo mutual changes,—yet the species do not change; and all attempts to transform them artificially, by crossings with allied species, have only resulted in modifications, which, after two or three generations, have been struck with barrenness, as if to attest the impotence of man to effect, by the progressive transformation of existing species, a creation of new species.

Man is not an ape transformed and perfected by some dim imperceptible fermentation of the elements of nature and by the operation of ages: this assumed explanation of the origin of the human species is a mere vague hypothesis, the fruit of an imagination ill comprehending the spectacle that nature presents, and therefore easily seduced to form ingenious conjectures: these their authors sow in the stream of events unknown and of time infinite, and trust to them for the realization of their dreams. The principle of the fundamental diversity and the permanence of species—firmly upheld by M. Cuvier, M. Flourens, M. Coste, M. Quatrefages, and many English Naturalists, and Philosophers, and by all exact observers of facts—remain dominant in science as in reality.

Man was created “in the image, and after the likeness of God.” He was a holy and happy being, surrounded with the beauties and delights of creation; he had the favour of God, and constant fellowship with him. But man fell, and his state of happiness was reversed. The Hebrew word for man is Enosh; that is, wretched, to denote his condition as an apostate from God. He is a totally fallen and estranged being.

Though fallen and morally depraved, man has not lost his natural powers. He is yet capable of the most exalted degrees of knowledge in natural things. He has numbered the stars of heaven; he has demonstrated the planetary revolutions, and the laws by which they are governed; he has accounted for every apparent anomaly in the various affections of the heavenly bodies; he has measured their distances, determined their solid contents, and weighed the sun!

His researches into the three kingdoms of nature, the animal, vegetable, and mineral, are, for their variety, correctness, and importance, of the highest consideration. The laws of matter, of organized and unorganized beings, and those chemical principles by which all the operations of nature are conducted, have been investigated by him with the utmost success.

Man has accounted for the formation of snow and ice; and demonstrated the laws by which the tempest and tornado are governed; he has taken the thunder from the clouds; and he plays with the lightnings of heaven!

He has invented those grand subsidiaries of life, the lever, the screw, the wedge, the inclined plane, and the pulley; and by these means multiplied his power beyond conception; he has invented the telescope, and by this instrument has brought the hosts of heaven almost into contact with the earth. By his engines he has acquired a sort of omnipotency over inert matter; and produced effects, which, to the uninstructed mind, present all the appearance of supernatural agency. By his mental energy he has sprung up into illimitable space; he has seen and described those worlds which an infinite skill has planned, and an infinite benevolence sustains. He has proceeded to all describable and assignable limits, and has conceived the most astonishing relations and affections of space, place, and vacuity; and yet, at all these limits, he has felt himself unlimited: and still can imagine the possibility of worlds and beings, natural and intellectual, in endless variety, beyond the whole.

After having made the boldest excursions to the heavens, he has dared even to the heaven of heavens; and demonstrated the being and attributes of God, not only by proofs drawn from His works, but by arguments a priori, from which all created nature is necessarily excluded! These are among the boldest efforts of the human mind.

If such is fallen man, what was he before the fall? Man was made for his Creator, and nothing less than God can satisfy his boundless desires. In infinite mercy, God has provided for his necessities. He has sent his Son to become man's Mediator; by Christ's sacrifice offered on the cross, to bring man near to God; Eph. ii. 1-14.

Man is put for (1.) The body, 2 Cor. iv. 16. (2.) The sins and corruptions of human nature, Eph. iv. 22. (3.) Strong, valiant, 1 Cor. xvi. 13. (4.) Magistrate, Gen. ix. 6. (5.) Frail, weak, Ps. ix. 20. (6.) The church, Eph. ii. 15. (7.) An angel, Acts

i. 10. (8.) The Lord Jesus, Gen. xxxii. 24. (9.) God the Father, Exod. xv. 3; Luke xv. 11. "To make of twain one new man," Eph. ii. 15. To unite Jews and Gentiles, who formerly were at variance, into one church or body, joining together in a new way of gospel-worship. "The gospel is not after man," Gal. i. 11. It is no human invention or fiction, neither doth it depend upon human authority, but is immediately revealed by God.

The "natural man," 1 Cor. ii. 14, means one that is unrenewed, and has no principle of grace in the heart. "The inward man," Rom. vii. 22, is the regenerate part within, or the principle of grace in the heart. "The man of God," 2 Tim. iii. 17, is one that is guided by the Spirit of God, and in a special manner devoted to his service.

MAN of SIN, like 'son of perdition,' (2 Thess. ii. 3,) is a Hebraism for an individual, or a succession of individuals, exceedingly wicked. Paul appropriates the phrases to Antichrist. Commentators, in general, think that the phraseology refers to the odious usurpation of the Roman pontiffs, and the abominable corruptions of the Romish church, through which multitudes have gone to perdition. Instead of worshipping God in simplicity, and in spirit and truth, there have been introduced external pomp and many foolish ceremonies, which strike upon the senses, and engage the attention, without mending the heart. Instead of worshipping God through Jesus Christ, the only Mediator between God and man, men have substituted the doctrine of demons, that is, the spirits of men departed out of this life, who, as they pretend, intercede with God for us; and some invoke the Virgin Mary more frequently than God himself. They have not only succeeded Heathen Rome in the seat of empire, but have also apostatised into their imagery and idolatry, though they have indeed disguised it with new names and different pretensions. In many countries they have taken from the common people the liberty of reading the Scriptures in their mother tongue, that they might with the more ease propagate their own delusions. For, having in a forcible and violent manner restrained the liberty of private judgment, they have with less difficulty substituted, instead of the most excellent doctrine of the Gospel, their own articles of faith, and the forged traditions and lying legends of their church, and, not content barely to propagate ignorance, they have dared to commend it, and call it "The Mother of Devotion."

MANAEN, Man'-a-en, a comforter.

—A teacher in the church at Antioch, who had been brought up with Herod the Tetrarch. Herod was his foster-brother; Acts xiii. 1.

MANAHATH, Man'-a-hath.—One of the descendants of the patriarch Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 23.

MANASSEH, Ma-nas-seh, forgetfulness, he that is forgotten.—The eldest son of Joseph, and grandson of the patriarch Jacob; Gen. xli. 51, born A. M. 2292. He received the blessing of his grandfather, Jacob, when on his death-bed. But he intimated that his posterity would be inferior in number and greatness to that of Ephraim his brother; Gen. xlviii. 17—20.—When the tribe left Egypt, they were 30,200, men fit for war, above twenty years old. On entering Canaan, they numbered 52,700. One half of the tribe possessed the country of Bashan, from the river Jabbok to Mount Libanus; Num. i. 34, 35, &c.; the other half of the country which lay between the tribe of Ephraim to the south, and the tribe of Issachar to the north, having the river Jordan to the east, and the Mediterranean to the west; Josh. xvi. and xvii.

MANASSEH.—The king of Judah, son and successor of Hezekiah. At twelve years of age he began to reign, and reigned fifty-five years; 2 Kings xx. 21; xxi. 1, 2, &c. He was notoriously wicked, an idolator, addicted to magic, and every other species of superstition; he made his own son to pass through the fire in honour of Moloch. He was very cruel, shedding torrents of innocent blood, and to such an extent that the streets of Jerusalem were deluged with blood. At length the judgments of heaven overtook him. The Assyrian army invaded his country, took him prisoner, put him in irons, and carried him to Babylon; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11. This adversity deeply humbled him, and made him penitent, and brought him to the footstool of Divine Mercy, to sue for forgiveness. He was delivered from his captivity, and brought back to Jerusalem; where he endeavoured with all his power to redress the injuries he had inflicted on his people. He restored the worship of the true God, broke down the altars that had been set up to the Heathen deities, and destroyed idolatry. Manasseh died at Jerusalem at the age of 67, and was buried in the royal garden, not in the sepulchre of David; 2 Kings xxi. 1—18; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 1—4. He was “a brand plucked from the burning.”

MANDRAKE, a species of melon or berry; cultivated in the East, for the sake of its fragrance. Though commentators have puzzled themselves with questions on this subject, it seems plain that the word is properly rendered mandrake, and means a plant so called in the East, to this day. The original word, which only occurs twice, is so rendered by the LXX. and both the Targums. It grows like lettuce, has purple flowers, and bears a fruit resembling a small red apple. The smell and taste are pleasant; but it stupifies or intoxicates, if eaten to excess.

MANDRAKES, Gen. 30. 14; Songs 7. 13.

MANGER. In the East they have no manger, but a stable. So the word means in Luke ii. 12.

MANNA, means literally, “What is this?” It should not have been translated “Manna,” for they knew not what it was till Moses answered the question, “What is this?” Ex. xvi. 15. There is a manna which exudes from trees and plants in the east; it is white as snow, of the size of coriander seed, and of a sweetish taste, but this cannot be the manna spoken of Ex. xvi. 14, 15; for 1. It rained from heaven : 2. It fell on six days, not on the sabbath ; it fell in double quantities on the sixth day, that there might be enough on the seventh. It remained fresh all the seventh day, but at any other time bred worms, if kept over night. 3. The people had never seen it before. 4. It continued for 40 years,—till they entered Canaan. 5. An omer of it was preserved as an extraordinary substance : 6. The supply must have been vast beyond natural means. What a quantity was required to sustain almost three millions of men, women, and children!! It is reckoned that the Hebrew camp wanted not less than 94,466 bushels of this food every day ; and that in the whole of the 40 years, they must have consumed one thousand three hundred and seventy millions, two hundred and three thousand, six hundred bushels. A most extraordinary miracle, worthy of God, and most beneficial to man. David calls it angel's food. It was the type or symbol of Christ and his sacrifice ; John vi. 32, 35.

MANOAH, Ma-no'-ah, rest, a present.—The father of Samson, of the tribe of Dan ; Judges xiii. 2.

MANSION, 'Many mansions,' John xiv. 2. To the vast number of apartments, into which the temple was disposed, Christ refers, and by this very striking and magnificent simile he represents those numerous seats and mansions of heavenly bliss which his Father's house contains. It adds to the excellency of these mansions that they are permanent, or ever-abiding. The original word, monai, from which is derived monai, mansions, means, to remain, to continue ; monai therefore means abiding places ; everlasting habitations ; 2 Cor. iv. 17, 18 ; v. 1.

MANTLES, Isa. iii. 22. These are used in private by the ladies of western Asia and Egypt. They are worn over the gown, and are made of cloth, silk, or velvet.

MAON, May'-on, house, tribe.—A city of the tribe of Judah ; Josh. xv. 55 ; 1 Sam. xxiii. 24, 25.

MARA, May'-rah, bitter. — The name given to Naomi by herself ; Ruth i. 20.

MARAH, May'-rah, bitterness.—When the Israelites arrived at the desert of Etham, they found the water so bitter, that neither they nor their cattle could drink of it ; Exod. xv. 23. On this account they called that encampment Marah. The best heathen writers agree that there were lakes of bitter water in the parts where the Israelites then were.—Strabo, Pliny.

MARANATHA, Mar-a-nath'-a, the Lord cometh.—A very solemn form of threatening or cursing among the Jews ; 1 Cor. xvi. 22. See ANATHEMA.

MARBLE.—A very hard stone ; 1 Chron. xxix. 2. "Marble stones in abundance." Josephus says that the temple was built of large blocks of white marble, beautifully polished, so as to produce a most splendid appearance. The spouse, in her fine description of the bridegroom, says, "his legs are as pillars of marble," Song v. 15, that is, exquisitely turned and well-shaped.

MARK, Mark, polite, shining.—He was the son of Mary, a pious woman of Jerusalem, the sister of Barnabas; Acts xii. 12. His Hebrew name was John, and some think that he adopted the surname of Mark when he left Judea to preach the Gospel in foreign countries,—a practice not unusual among the Jews, who frequently assumed a name more familiar to the nations which they visited than that by which they had been distinguished in their own country. From Peter's styling him "his son," 1 Pet. v. 13, this evangelist is supposed to have been converted by the ministry of Peter: And on his deliverance from prison A. D. 44, recorded in Acts xii. 12, Mark went from Jerusalem with Paul and Barnabas, and soon after accompanied them to other countries, Acts xiii. 5, but, declining to attend them through their whole progress, he returned to Jerusalem, and kept up an intercourse with Peter and the other apostles.

When Paul and Barnabas settled at Antioch, on the termination of their journey, we find Mark with them, and disposed to accompany them in their future journeys. At this time he went with Barnabas to Cyprus, Acts xv. 37—39, and subsequently accompanied Timothy to Rome; 2 Tim. iv. 11, during his confinement in that city, whence Mark sent his salutations to Philemon, (verse 24,) and to the church at Colosse, (Col. iv. 10.) From Rome it is probable he went into Asia, where he found Peter, with whom he returned to that city, in which he is supposed to have written and published his gospel.

MARK, THE GOSPEL OF.—He wrote it about the year A. D. 65, for the use of the Christians at Rome, at that time the centre of the civilized world, and the place where men of all nations might be found; he, therefore, adapted his gospel to every description of persons, that it might be the more generally received and understood. Mark was the companion of Peter, and very likely he received most of his information from that Apostle.

Irenæus, after stating that Matthew published his gospel while Peter and Paul were preaching at Rome, adds, "After their departure, Mark also, the disciple and interpreter of Peter, delivered to us in writing, the things which had been preached by Peter."

MARK.—"I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling;" &c.; Phil. iii. 14. These metaphors are taken from runners in a race, who pursue it with eagerness, and press forward with all might and main to get up to the mark in order to receive the prize.—The mark was generally a pole set up in the ground, and sometimes surmounted by the leafy crown, which was to be the prize of the victor.—The high calling is an allusion to the judges of the race being placed on an elevated seat, whence they summoned and observed the combatants, and distributed rewards to the conquerors.

MARK 'upon their foreheads,' Ezek. ix. 4.—In regard to the tituk, or mark, it was a custom of very ancient date, in Asia, to mark their servants in the foreheads. See Rev. vii. 3. Mark in their right hand, or forehead; Rev. xiii. 16; xiv. 9; xx. 4. It was also customary to mark the right hand with some hieroglyphic character, or with the name expressed in vulgar letters, or disguised in numerical letters, according to fancy. Idolators had their idols marked upon their foreheads, arms, &c. These are called sectarian marks, even at this day, among the Hindoos, and others, in India.—The passage denotes that God, in all his procedure, will make a distinction between the righteous and the wicked.

MARK upon Cain, Gen. iv. 15; or rather gave him a token that he should not be slain. Some say a despairing countenance, strikingly indicating to others that God had punished him, and they need not.

vi. 17.—The scars received from stripes and chains, alluding to an Egyptian custom, according to which any man's servant, who fled to the temple of Hercules, and had the sacred brands or marks of that deity impressed upon him, was supposed to be under his immediate care, and privileged from all harsh treatment. So Paul claims exemption from reflections on his character, or disputes about the necessity of circumcision; for he valued far more the scars he bore than these marks enforced by Judaizing teachers.

MARKET.—"Disputed he in the market," Acts xvii. 17. In Arabia, people meet in such places for conversation.

MARKETS.—The forum, or market-place, was usually a public market on one side only, the other sides of the area being occupied by temples, theatres, courts of justice, and other public buildings. Here the philosophers met and taught; here laws were promulgated; and here devotions as well as amusements occupied the populace. These places, in ancient times, were usually at the gate of the city, and were used for judicial trials, as places of business, and to accommodate those who were assembled merely to pass away time.

MARRIAGE.—A civil contract, by which a man and woman are joined together, which was instituted by God for the prevention of impurity, the propagation of mankind, and that the parties so contracting might be mutual helps and comforts to one another; Gen. ii. 18, 22, 23; John ii. 1; 1 Cor. vii. 2; Heb. xiii. 4. From the first institution of marriage it is evident that God gave but one woman to one man. The first who violated this primitive law was Lamech, who took unto him two wives; Gen. iv. 19. Afterwards we read that Abraham had concubines, Gen. xxv. 6. And his practice was followed by the other patriarchs, which at last grew to a most scandalous excess in Solomon's and Rehoboam's days.

Anciently the Hebrews wore crowns on their marriage day; and it seems, the bridegroom's was put on by his mother; Song iii. 11. The ceremonies of marriage continued three days for a widow, and seven for a virgin; Gen. xxix. 27; Judges xiv. 17, 18. During this time, the young men and young women attended the bridegroom and bride in different apartments, and the former puzzled one another with riddles; Song v. 1; Ps. xlv. 9, 14, 15; Judges xiv. A friend of the bridegroom's governed the feast, that no drunkenness or disorder might be committed; John ii. 9; iii. 29. At the end of the feast, the parties were, with lighted lamps, conducted to the bridegroom's house. The bridegroom leaving his apartment, called forth the bride and her attendants, who, it seems, were generally about ten; Matt. xxv. 1—10. The modern Jews retain most of these ceremonies: only since the ruin of their city and temple, the bridegrooms wear no crowns on the marriage-day. They generally marry widows on Thursday, and virgins on Friday. On the evening before, the bride is led to the bath by her companions, making a sound with musical instruments, as they go along. Being washed she returns, and her friends sing the marriage-song at the door of her father's house. On the marriage day, the bridegroom, and especially the bride, dress as fine as possible. A number of young men attend the bridegroom, and young women the bride. They are ordinarily married in the open air, on the bank of a river, or in a court, garden, &c. The parties are placed under a canopy. The nearest friend of the bridegroom, taking a cup full of wine, and having blessed it, and thanked God for the creation and marriage of the sexes, causes the parties to taste the wine. Next, the bridegroom, by putting a golden ring on the hand of the bride, takes her to be his wife. The contract of marriage is then read, and the bridegroom delivers it into the hands of the bride's relations. Wine is brought in a brittle vessel, and being six times blessed, the married couple drink thereof, and the rest of it, in token of joy, is cast on the ground; and the bridegroom, in memory of the ruin of their city and temple, with force dashes the vessel to the ground. When, at the end of the marriage-feast, they come into the bride-groom's house; and after a long blessing sung over in Hebrew, they take supper; after which the men and women, at least sometimes, dance a little; but the men and the women in different apartments. After another rehearsal of another long blessing or prayer, they all retire to rest.

MARRIAGE 'of the Lamb,' Rev. xix. 7. It refers to the marriage-covenant which exists between Christ and his Church, even the covenant of grace, wherein God graciously promises to be the God of his people, and to forgive and sanctify them through the merits of Jesus Christ, and the influences of his Spirit, and so make them a willing people to himself; Isa. liv. 5; Jer. iii. 14; Hosea ii. 19, 20. The union between husband and wife is so near, that thereby is represented the mystical union, the sacred and spiritual marriage of Christ with his Church; Eph. v. 30, 31, 32. Christians are forbidden to marry unbelievers; 2 Cor. vi. 14; 1 Cor. vii. 39.

MARRIAGE OF THE KING'S SON; Matt. xxii. 2.—In this parable, by the King, we must understand God; by the Son, our Lord Jesus Christ; by the marriage-feast, the benefits and blessings of the Christian religion, and God's care in promulgating that religion. The guests first invited were the Jews; on whose refusal, the king sent his servants, the apostles, into the highways, to call as many as would, i. e., to invite all mankind to embrace it. The parable also represents the reception Christianity should meet with, expressed by men's making light of it, and offering excuses. The man without a wedding garment means an hypocrite in the church, or one who has a name to live, but is dead. The time of the king's coming is the day of judgment.

MARRY.—"Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats," &c.; 1 Tim. iv. 3. The Enchratites, Marcionites, and Manicheans, very early introduced the doctrine of celibacy into the church, and in process of time the monks embraced it, and represented it as the highest pitch of sanctity. In the eleventh century the celibacy of the clergy was fully decreed by Pope Gregory the Seventh, and this has been the law and practice of the Popish church ever since. And "it is," says Bishop Newton, "as much the law and constitution of all monks to abstain from meats as from marriage. Some never eat any flesh, others only of certain kinds, and on certain days. Frequent fasts are the rule—the boast of their order, and their carnal humility is their spiritual pride. So lived the monks of the ancient church; so live, with less strictness, perhaps, but with greater ostentation, the monks and friars of the church of Rome."

MAROTH, Mar'-roth.—A place in Judea, Micah i. 12.

MARSENA, Mar'-se-na.—One of the seven principal officers of Ahasuerus, Esth. i. 14.

MARS' HILL, Mars'-hill.—See AREOPAGUS.

MARTHA, Mar'-tha, who becomes bitter.—The sister of Lazarus and Mary. They lived in the village of Bethany, a short distance from Jerusalem; John xi. 1. Probably she was the elder sister, and had the domestic management. This is evident from Luke x. 38; "A certain woman, named Martha, received Jesus into her house." Though much occupied with domestic affairs, it is evident that Martha believed in the Lord Jesus as the promised Messiah, and looked for salvation through him. "Jesus loved Martha," as well as Lazarus and Mary; John xi. 5. We have a confession of her faith; verse 25—27.

Her love to the Saviour made her anxious to display her hospitality to the utmost of her ability; and though the gentle reproof which she received when she complained of her sister's indifference to these matters, seems to imply that she was carrying a Christian virtue too far, and intimated a danger of her forgetting that it was her duty to let the things pertaining to the kingdom of God occupy the first place in her regards, yet there is reason to conclude that Martha was a lukewarm professor of the Christian religion.

MARTYR. In the ordinary sense, a witness. Sometimes it refers to judicial witnesses. It is now applied to one who seals the truth of the gospel by his death on the scaffold, or at the stake, &c., Acts 22. 20; Rev. 2. 13; 17. 6.

MARY, May'-re, exalted, bitterness, or mistress of the sea.—Six females of this name are mentioned in Scripture. —1. The mother of Jesus; Matt. i.

16; Luke i. 27; ii. 5. She was the daughter of Joachim and Anna, of the tribe of Judah. The Scriptures relate nothing of her parents, not even their names, unless Heli, mentioned Luke iii. 23, be the same with Joachim. Mary was of the royal race of David, and so was Joseph her husband; Luke i. 27. She was related to the family of Aaron, and Elizabeth, the wife of Zacharias, was her cousin; Luke i. 36. The next time we hear of Mary is when she and her husband sought Jesus three days, and at last found him sitting among the doctors; Luke ii. 41, &c. We find her at the marriage of Cana—at Jerusalem, at the last Passover, and at Calvary, near the Redeemer's cross.

2. MARY, sister of Lazarus and Martha.—She was a very pious woman. As a family, they were much attached to Jesus, who frequently visited them; John xi. 1—5. Christ gave her a high testimony when he said, "Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her;" Luke x. 42. She delighted to be "sitting at the feet of Jesus, and hearing his words." Once when he visited the house of the family at Bethany, Martha served, but Mary "anointed his feet with ointment of spikenard very costly, and wiped his feet with her hair," &c.; John xii. 1—8. It was an Eastern custom to embalm kings and great men at their funerals with ointment and sweet spices. "Let her alone," said Christ; "against the day of my burying hath she kept this."

3. MARY, the wife of Cleophas, who is obviously distinguished from Mary the mother of Jesus, and also from Mary Magdalene; John xix. 25. "Now there stood by the cross of Jesus, his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene." John gives her the name of Mary of Cleophas, while the other evangelists call her "Mary the mother of James." Compare Matt. xxvii. 56; Mark xv. 40, 41; Luke xxiv. 10; and John xix. 25.

4. MARY, mother of John Mark, a disciple of the apostles. She had a house in Jerusalem, whither it is thought the apostles retired, after the ascension of our Lord, and where they received the Holy Ghost. After the imprisonment of Peter, the faithful assembled in this house, (Acts xii. 12,) and were praying there when Peter, delivered by an angel, knocked at the door of the house.

5. MARY MAGDALENE, the woman out of whom Jesus cast seven devils, (Luke viii. 2,) was one of those who ministered to our Lord. Sometimes she has been confounded with the sister of Martha and Lazarus, and at other times with the woman mentioned in the vii. chap. of Luke, verse 37, who is called "a sinner." This woman, however, lived in the city of Nain; the sister of Martha and Lazarus was of Bethany; but Mary Magdalene was probably so called, because she was born at Magdala, a little town in the tribe of Manasseh.

Behold her at the sepulchre the first day of the week, very early in the morning, with sweet spices to anoint him; Mark xvi. 1. Thus we see her faith in and attachment to the Lord Jesus throughout. John xx. 1—18. "Woman, why weepest thou? Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. Sir, if thou hast borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away!"

6. MARY.—A very pious female who dwelt at Rome, and who treated the Apostles very hospitably; Rom. xvi. 6.

MASCHIL, Mas'-kil, He that instructs.—The title of several Psalms, meaning an instructive song.

MASH, Mash.—The fourth son of Aram; Gen. x. 23.

MASHAL, May'-shal.—A city of Asher, ceded to the Levites of Gershon's family; 1 Chron. vi. 74.

MASREKAH, Mas'-re-kah, whistling, hissing.—A duke of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 36.—A town; 1 Chron. i. 47.

MASSA, Mas'-sah, temptation.—A son of Ishmael; Gen. xxv. 14.—An encampment; Ex. xvii. 7.

MASTER. A title given to Christ, the chief Lawgiver and Teacher, who alone is to be followed in matters of faith and worship; Matt. xxiii. 8, 10. —To preachers of the word; Eccl. xii. 11. —To such as teach disciples or scholars; Luke vi. 40.—To those who have rules over servants; Eph. vi. 5.—To those who ambitiously affect vain applause, or precedence and superiority above others; Matt. xxiii. 10; Jam. iii. 1.

MASTERS, 'teachers'; Jam. iii. 1.

MASTERS OF ASSEMBLIES, 'as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies'; Eccl. xii. 11. Assemblies were for the purpose of pronouncing discourses of an eloquent and philosophical nature. Such assemblies have been common in those countries since the days of Solomon.—The Romans numbered their years by the clavi, or nails which were fixed in the temple doors. The prætor, consul, or dictator, drove one annually into the walls of Jupiter's temple upon the Ides of March.

MATRI, May'-try, rain, prison.—A person of the tribe of Benjamin, chief of the family of Kish; 1 Sam. x. 21.

MATTAN, Mat'-tan, the reins, the death of them.—A priest of Baal, killed before the altar of the false god, by order of Jehoiada, A. M. 3126; 2 Kings xi. 18.—Father of Shephatiah; Jer. xxxviii. 1.

MATTANAH, Mat'-tan-ah.—An encampment of the Israelites in the desert; Num. xxi. 18, 19.

MATTANIAH, Mat-ta-ny'-ah.—The chief of the ninth family of the Levites; 1 Chron. xxv. 16.—Zedekiah, king of Judah, was so called.

MATTATAH, or MATTATHAH, Mat'-ta-thah.—Son of Nathan, an ancestor of Jesus Christ; Luke iii. 31.—A returned captive; Ezra x. 33.

MATHAT, Mat'-that, gift, he that gives.—Son of Levi, and father of Heli; Luke iii. 24.

MATTHEW, Math'-yew, given, a reward.—An apostle and evangelist, son of Alphaeus, by birth a Galilean, by religion a Jew, and by profession a publican; Mark ii. 14; Luke v. 27. His Hebrew name was Levi; but he always calls himself Matthew. Before his conversion he was a publican, or taxgatherer, under the Romans, and collected the customs of all goods exported or imported at Capernaum, a maritime town on the sea of Galilee, and received the tribute paid by all passengers who went by water. While employed 'at the receipt of custom,' Jesus called him into his service, and conferred upon him the office of an apostle. He continued with the Saviour, a spectator of his private and public conduct, a subject of his teaching, a hearer of his discourses, a witness of his miracles and resurrection. After the Saviour's ascension, Matthew continued at Jerusalem with the other apostles, and with them, on the day of Pentecost, was endued with the gift of the Holy Spirit. How long he remained in Judea after that event, we have no authentic account. When the apostles went abroad to preach the gospel to the Gentiles, some say, that Thomas took Parthia for his lot; Bartholomew—India; and Matthew—Ethiopia. John and Matthew enjoyed the best opportunity for writing a regular and connected narrative of the life of Christ.

MATTHEW, Gospel of.—The precise time when he wrote the gospel is not known, but it is generally thought that the Hebrew original appeared about A. D. 37, and the Greek, A. D. 61. About A. D. 184, there was found in the East Indies a Greek copy. In the year A. D. 488, another Greek copy was found at Cyprus written on wood, and esteemed very ancient.

As Matthew wrote for the confirmation of the Hebrew Christians, he was Divinely directed to show how Christ descended from Abraham by David, and that he was born at Bethlehem, as predicted by the prophet Micah.

There is not a truth, or doctrine, in the whole oracles of God which he has not taught. The outlines of the whole spiritual system are here correctly laid down; and even the Apostle Paul has added nothing. He has amplified and illustrated the truths contained in this gospel; so that, under direct inspiration of the Holy Spirit, neither he or any of the Apostles have brought to light any one truth, the prototype of which has not been found in the words or acts of our blessed Lord, as related by Matthew in his Gospel. This is the grand text book of Christianity. The other gospels are collateral evidences of its truth, and the Apostolical Epistles are comments on the text.

MATTHIAS, Mat-thy'-as, the gift of the Lord.—An apostle of Jesus Christ. He was chosen after the death of Christ to supply the place of Judas, probably one of the seventy disciples; Acts i. 25, 26.

MATTITHIAH, Mat-te-thy'-ah, the gift of the Lord.—A person of the race of Korah, head of the fourteenth family of the Levites; 1 Chr. xxv. 21.

MAZZAROTH, Maz-zay'-roth. — The Chaldee name for the twelve signs of the Zodiac; Job xxxviii. 32.

MEASURE, or MEASURES.—

The word is applied to the duration of human life; Ps. xxxix. 5.—The idea of capacious comprehension is intimated in Isa. xl. 12.—The word measure simply means the method by which the dimensions of any thing is ascertained, adjusted, or proportioned; Prov. xx. 10; Micah vi. 10. Some of these measures are derived from certain members of the human body; as probably the practice of counting by tens took its rise from the number of the human fingers and toes.—Of the longitudinal measures, there is the digit; Jer. lii. 21, about an inch; a palm or hand's breadth; Exod. xxv. 25, about 3½ inches; a span; Ezek. xliii. 13, about 10½ inches; a cubit (the standard measure,) 21 inches; a fathom; Acts xxvii. 28, nearly 7 feet and 4 inches; a rule or cane; Ezek. xl. 5, about 10½ feet; a line; Ps. xvi. 6, about 145 feet.

CAPACITY.—The measures of capacity were more uniform in their contents than ours; for their ephah, or bushel, and their bath, for liquids, were equally large. Those for liquids may be estimated by our wine measure; particularly the log; Lev. xiv. 10, about 2 gills; the cab; 2 Kings vi. 25, nearly 1½ quart; the hin; Ex. xxx. containing 1½ gallon; measure, 2½ gallons; the bath; 2 Chron. iv. 5, holding 7½ gallons; and the chomer; Ezek. xlv. 14, so much as 75 gallons and 5 pints. Those for dry goods may be compared with our corn measure; as the choenix; Rev. vi. 6, about 1½ pint; the cab, 2½ pints; the omer; Exod. xvi. 36, about 3 quarts; the ephah, 1 bushel; and chomer, 1 quart.

WEIGHTS.—By our jewellers' weight may all these be appreciated; as a gerah, 12 grains; a shekel, 10 penny-weights; a minah; Ezek. xlv. 12, about 2½ pounds; and a talent; Ex. xxxviii. 25, 26, so much as 125 lbs.

With regard to the various kinds or species of MONEY noticed in the inspired books, they were regulated by weighing; nor is this peculiar to ancient times and Eastern people, for it is still practised, and in the Western world.—The materials, of which this ancient money consisted, were either silver, gold, or copper, or native brass:

Of the Silver money there were, the Gerah; Ex. xxx. 12; about 1¼d.; the penny or denarion, worth 7½d.; the drachm; Luke xv. 8, about the same value; the shekel, half of a crown; the mina; Ezek. xlv. 12, value 6 pounds; and the talent; Ex. xxxviii. 25, 26, worth £343. Of the Gold money there are worthy of notice—the shekel, estimated at about 30 of our shillings; the daric; Ezra viii. 27, whose value was 25s.; and the talent, about £5000. Very few coins of Brass appear in the Bible; as the mite; Mark xii. 42, usually valued at 3 farthings; and the kodrantes or farthing; Mark xii. 42, about 1¼d.

MEASURE.—Rather more than a peck; 2 Kings vii. 1.

MECHERATH, Mek'-e-rath. — The birth-place of Hopher, one of David's valiant men; 1 Chron. xi. 36.

MEDAD, Me'-dad, he that measures.—An elder of Israel, and a prophet in the camp; Num. xi. 26. He and Eldad were chosen to assist Moses.

MEDAN, Me'-dan, judgment, habit, covering.—The third son of Abraham and Keturah; Gen. xxv. 2.

MEDEBA, Med'-e-bah.—A city of the Reubenites, not far from Heshbon; Josh. xiii. 16.

MEDES, Meeds.—The people of Media; 2 Kings xvii. 6.

MEDIA, Me'-de-a, measure, covering, abundance.—It is bounded on the north by the Caspian sea, on the south by Susiana, on the west by Armenia and Assyria Proper, and on the east by Persia. It occupies the greater part of the central plateau of Persia. It is very elevated, and has extensive saline deserts, but contains some fine valleys. It is generally thought that it was peopled by the descendants of Madai, son of Japheth; Gen. x. 2. Its principal cities were Ecbatan, Rages, Apamea, &c.

The Medes were subdued by Pul, or Tiglath Pileser, king of Assyria; and Shahmaneser carried his Jewish and Syrian captives into this country. As the Medes were great warriors, part of them assisted Sennacherib in his invasion of Judea; Isa. xxii. 6. After his army was destroyed at Jerusalem, the Medes shook off the Assyrian yoke. Arbaces commenced the work. About the twentieth year of Hezekiah (A. M. 3298,) Dejoces or Arphaxad obtained the throne. After building Ecbatan he invaded Assyria, but Esar-Haddon gave him a terrible defeat in the plains of Ragau. His son Phraortes, supposed to be Arphaxad, succeeded him A. M. 3348. He subdued the nations of Upper Asia, and invaded Assyria, but was slain at the siege of Nineveh. Cyaxares his son, succeeded him A. M. 3370. He conquered Persia; and to avenge his father's death, and the ruins of Ecbatan, his capital, he invaded Assyria and laid siege to Nineveh. From this he was called away by an eruption of the Tartars into his territories; but having expelled them, he joined his forces with those of Nebuchadnezzar, and besieged Nineveh, which they took and razed about A. M. 3403. His son Astyages, the Ahasuerus of Daniel, reigned thirty-five years, and was succeeded by Cyaxares or Darius, A. M. 3444. This prince assisted by Cyrus, his son-in-law and nephew, conquered Babylon and the whole empire of Chaldea. The new empire was divided into 120 provinces, over which were placed as many governors, the chief of whom was the prophet Daniel; Dan. vi. Cyrus, through his wife, became heir to Media, and united it with that of Persia, B. C. 538, after which all the kings of Babylon assumed the title of kings of the Medes and Persians. Ancient Universal History.

MEDIATOR, one who interposes to reconcile two parties at variance; Gal. iii. 19, 20; 1 Tim. ii. 5; Heb. viii. 6; ix. 15; xii. 24.

Moses was often a mediator between Jehovah and the Jews; Deut. v. 5. The Lord Jesus is now the "one Mediator between God and man;" 1 Tim. ii. 5. He alone, by his satisfaction to God, and intercession with him, and by his powerful and gracious influence on sinful men, brings both together, into a new covenant state of agreement; Heb. viii. 6. & xii. 24. Worship paid to angels, saints, images, bones, relics, and the blessed Virgin, is a false worship, opposed to our "One Mediator," and hardly distinguished from idolatry. The properties of Christ as Mediator are these: (1) He is the only Mediator; 1 Tim. ii. 4. Praying, therefore, to saints and angels is an error of the church of Rome, and has no countenance from the scriptures. (2) Christ is a Mediator of men only, not of angels: good angels need not any; and as for evil angels, none is provided nor admitted. (3) He is the Mediator both for Jews and Gentiles; Eph. ii. 18; 1 John ii. 2. Moses was a typical Mediator; Deut. v. 5; Gal. iii. 19.

MEEKNESS.—That quiet temper of mind which is not soon provoked to anger, but suffers injuries without desire of revenge, and submits to the will of God; Col. iii. 12; an humble frame of spirit, ready to receive and entertain the truths of God's word; James i. 21. It is a grace of unspeakable value; 1 Pet. iii. 4; Ps. xxxvii. 11, and shone conspicuously in the life of Christ; 2 Cor. x. 1; Matt. xi. 29. It is enjoined on Christians, with great frequency, to excel in this grace; Eph. iv. 2; 1 Tim. vi. 11; Titus iii. 2, &c.

MEGIDDO, Me-gid'-do, that declares.—A city of the tribe of Manasseh, famous for the battle fought there between king Pharaoh-Necho and king Josiah, in which the latter was defeated and mortally wounded; Jos. xvii. 11; 2 Kings xxiii. 29, 30. Near Megiddo was the town of Hadad-Rimmon, (afterwards called Maximianopolis,) therefore the lamentation for the death of Josiah is called "the mourning of Hadad-Rimmon, in the valley of Megiddo;" Zech. xii. 11. The greatness of that mourning for good Josiah was such as to cause this expression to become a proverbial one for any great sorrowing; and it is so used by the prophet.

MEHIR, Me'-hir. — The son of Chelub, of the tribe of Judah; 1 Chr. iv. 11.

MEHOLATHITE, Me-hol'-ath-ite. — The meaning of the term is uncertain; 1 Sam. xviii. 19.

MEHUJAEI, Me-hew'-ja-el, who proclaims God.—The son of Irad, the father of Methusael; Gen. iv. 18.

MEHUMAN, Me-hew'-man. — A chief of the eunuchs or officers of king Ahasuerus; Esther i. 10.

MEHUNIM, Me-hew'-nim. — One whose children were of the order of the Nethunims; Ezra ii. 50.

MEKONAH, Mek'-o-nah. — A city of Judah; Neh. xi. 28.

MELATIAH, Mel-a-ty'-ah. — One who returned from the Babylonish captivity; Neh. iii. 7.

MELCHI, Mel'-ky, king.—Son of Janna, and father of Levi, in Christ's genealogy; Luke iii. 24. — The son of Addi, and father of Neri, in Christ's genealogy; Luke iii. 28.

MELCHI-SHUA, Mel-ke-shu'-ah, my king is a Saviour.—The third son of Saul; who, with his father was killed in the battle of Gilboa; 1 Sam. xxxi. 2.

MELCHIZEDEK, Mel-kiz'-ze-dek, king of righteousness.—King of Salem, and priest of the most high-God, to whom Abraham gave tithes; Gen. xiv. 18; Ps. cx. 4; Heb. vii. 1, 2.

He is called "king of Salem." By Salem Jerusalem is meant. That it had this name anciently is evident from Ps. lxxvi. 1, 2; cx. 4; Heb. vii. 1—10. In his person, name, office, residence, government, he was an eminent type of Christ.

MELCHIZEDEK, 'Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life,' Heb. vii. 3. That is, whose father and mother are not inscribed among the sacerdotal genealogies; he being without priestly descent, that is, not enrolled among the priests; for it was necessary that the Jewish priests should be of the family of Aaron; and there are several laws concerning the descent and qualities of their mothers which must have been observed and recorded, in order to make out their legitimacy, and their consequent right to serve at the altar. Herein Christ and Melchizedek, remarkably agree; for with respect to his human nature, our Lord had no father, nor any mother with regard to his divine; the priesthood of Christ depended on no Aaronic descent, for it is evident he sprang from Judah, whereof Moses spake nothing of the priesthood.

MELEA, Me-le'-a. — Son of Menan, and father of Eliakim, the ancestor of Christ; Luke iii. 31.

MELECH, Me'-lek, king.—Second son of Micah, and grandson of Jonathan; 1 Chron. viii. 35.

MELICU, Me'-le-ku. — The same person as Mulluch, the priest; Neh. xii. 14.

MELITA, Mel'-e-ta, or Me-ly'-ta, affording honey.—An island in the Mediterranean Sea, now called Malta, between Africa and Sicily. It is about twenty miles long, and twelve broad. It seems to have derived its name from its being Melet, or a place of refuge to the ancient Tyrians in their voyages to Carthage and Spain. About A. D. 63, Paul and his companions were shipwrecked on this island, and kindly entertained by the natives. It was seized by the Goths and Vandals in the fifth century, then by the Normans in the eleventh, and afterwards taken by Louis IX. of France. About A. D. 1530, it was given by Charles V. to the Military Knights, who had been driven by the Turks from Rhodes. They were dispossessed and dispersed by the French under Bonaparte, in 1798. It was afterwards taken from the French by England, under whose government it now remains. The number of inhabitants is about 50,000, mostly Catholics, ignorant and degraded. It has lately become a centre of Missionary and Bible operations for the countries bordering on the Mediterranean. By the contributions of Christians, printing presses are established here, and kept employed in producing tracts, &c., in the Arabic, Greek, Turkish, and other languages, which, as it is a place of great commerce, are easily distributed.

MELODY made by voice, Isa. li. 3; and musical instruments, Amos v. 23, must be with the heart, and to the Lord; Eph. v. 19; Col. iii. 16.

MELON.—A rich, luscious fruit, highly esteemed in Egypt during the hot months. The juice is very cooling and agreeable in that sultry climate; it is justly pronounced "one of the most delicious refreshments that nature affords in the season of violent heat." It is cultivated on the banks of the Nile, in the rich clayey earth which subsides during the inundation. The fruit serves the poor for drink, and is very refreshing. This explains the regret expressed by the Israelites for the loss of this fruit, whose pleasant juice had so often quenched their thirst, and relieved their weariness in their servitude; and which would have been very grateful in a scorching desert; Num. xi. 5.

MELT signifies to make hard bodies liquid or fluid, Ezek. xxii. 22; to waste and be diminished, 1 Sam. xiv. 16; to faint and be discouraged, Josh. ii. 11; 2 Sam. xvii. 10.

MELZAR, Mel'-zar, a steward.—One who was appointed to guard the prophet Daniel, Dan. i. 11.

MEMBER signifies any part of the natural body, 1 Cor. xii. 12, 26; all the faculties of the soul together with the parts of the body, Rom. vi. 13, 19; every sensual and sinful affection, Col. iii. 5; Christian believers in the church, which is Christ's mystical body; Eph. iv. 25; v. 30.

MEMORIAL.—'Shall be spoken of for a memorial of her,' Mark xiv. 9. This refers to the woman who poured the contents of an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard on the head of Jesus. This ointment was very precious, being rare, and brought from the distant country of India. Perhaps these words alluded to the remoteness of the country from whence this unguent was brought; as much as to say, "This came from a distant country, to be sure, but the gospel shall spread to a much greater distance, yea, all over the world; so that in India itself, from whence this unguent came, shall the memorial of its application to my sacred person be mentioned with honour."

MEMPHIS, Mem'-fis, by the mouth.—A celebrated city of Egypt, situated on the west side of the river Nile, about twenty miles south of Cairo, and on the south-west of which stand the renowned pyramids: many of the Jews who fled hither from the Assyrians, were buried about it; Hosea ix. 6.

MENAN, Me'-nan.—Son of Mattatha, and father of Melea; Luke iii. 31.

MENE, Me'-ne.—A Chaldean word, signifying he has numbered or counted. See Dan. v. 25. It was the first word of the ominous writing on the wall of Belshazzar's banqueting-room, and produced so much consternation in himself, and in his guests. The word Mene is repeated, implying the certainty of the approaching judgment. The three words are awfully impressive:—Mene, he is numbered; Tekel, he is weighed; Upharsin, they are dividing. Probably the characters of the writing were Divinely formed, and only Daniel, under Divine direction could understand them.

MEONOTHAI, Me-on'-o-tha-i.—A son of Othniel, father of Ophrah, of the tribe of Judah; 1 Chr. iv. 13, 14.

MEPHAATH, Mef'-ay-ath.—A city of Reuben, ceded to the Levites of the family of Merari; Josh. xiii. 18.

MEPHIBOSHETH, Me-fib'-bo-sheth, reproach from my mouth.—1. The son of Saul and his concubine Rizpah, 2 Sam. xxi. 8, 9.—Also the son of Jonathan, 2 Sam. iv. 4, &c.; ix. 1, &c. He was very young when his father was killed in the battle of Gilboa; and the news of that event so dreadfully alarmed his nurse, that she let the child fall, which caused him to be lame throughout life; 2 Sam. iv. 4. When David found himself in peaceable possession of the kingdom, he inquired for what remained of the house of Saul, that he might show kindness to them out of respect to the memory of Jonathan his friend. And being told that there was a son of Jonathan's named Mephibosheth, in the house of Machir at Lodebar, he gave orders that he should be brought to Jerusalem, that he might always eat at the king's table. He also settled upon him whatever had formerly belonged to Saul, for the maintenance of his son Micah; 1 Chron. viii. 34.

MERAB, Mer'-rab, he that fights.—The eldest daughter of king Saul, 1 Sam. xiv. 49; xviii. 17—19.

MERAIAM, Mer-a-i'-ah.—A Jewish priest in Zerubbabel's time, Neh. xii. 12.

MERAIOTH, Me-ray'-oth.—The son of Ahitub, high-priest of the Jews; 1 Chron. ix. 11.

MERARI, Mer'-a-ry, or Me-ray'-ry, bitter, to provoke.—The third son of Levi, Exod. vi. 19.

MERATHAIM, Mer-a-thay'-im.—Part of the Babylonish empire, Jer. l. 21.

MERCHANT.—Jesus Christ is a pearl of great price, a jewel of inestimable value, which will make those that have it rich, truly rich, rich towards God. A true Christian is a spiritual merchant, that seeks and finds this precious treasure, whereby he is made happy here, and for ever.

MERCHANT. Those of Midtan and Arabia were the most ancient, Gen. 37. 23. Chaldea was a land of traffic, Rev. 18. 11; Hos. 12. 7; Matt. 13. 45.

Is. 23. 18. m. holiness, Matt. 22. 5; John 2. 16; 2 Pet. 2. 3.

MERCURIUS, Mer-kew'-re-us.—From a Latin word signifying to buy or sell, because Mercury presided over merchandise. His Greek name is Hermes, orator or interpreter. He was a false god, the son of Jupiter and Maia. He is said to be a messenger of the gods, and of Jupiter in particular. He was also regarded as the god of eloquence; Acts xiv. 12.

MERCY is derived from the Latin miseriordia, which is composed of two words; miserans, pitying, and cor, the heart; or miseria cordis, pain of the heart. Mercy supposes two things: 1. a distressed object; and 2. a disposition of the heart, through which it is affected at the sight of such an object. This virtue, therefore, is no other than a lively emotion of the heart, which is excited by the discovery of any creature's misery; and such an emotion as manifests outwardly by effects suited to its nature. A merciful man enters into the miseries of his neighbour, feels for, mourns with, and, if possible, relieves them.

MERCY.—The sympathizing, pitying goodness of God manifested to the wretched and needy; Ps. c. 5; cxxx. 7. It is manifested to the afflicted, the poor, the penitent, and the sufferer by giving him relief. It is seen especially in the gift of Christ, and in his great and eternal salvation which he effected for guilty man.

That pity and compassion which one man shows towards another that is in trouble. Mercy prompts us to relieve and comfort the distressed, by doing what we can to remove or alleviate their burdens. Our Lord recommended this act of mercy in the parable of the man who fell among thieves, and was relieved by the poor Samaritan: and in the conclusion he adds, 'Go and do thou likewise;' Luke x. 30—37. To be just without being cruel, and merciful without being weak, should be our constant aim, under all the circumstances of guilt, indigence, and misery, which present themselves to our view. See Matt. v. 44, 48; Luke vi. 27, 36; Psalm xxxvii. 26.

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see:
The mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me!"—POPE.

This is according to Christ Jesus: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven; give, and it shall be given unto you. "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy," Matt. v. 7.

"The quality of mercy is not strained:
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice blessed;
It blesseth him who gives, and him who takes.
How would you be,
If he who is the top of judgment should
But judge you as you are? Oh! think on that,
And mercy then will breathe within your lips.
Like man new made."—SHAKESPEARE.

MERCY—sacrifice.—‘I will have mercy, and not sacrifice,’ a Hebrew expression, signifying, ‘rather than sacrifice;’ Hosea vi. 6; Matt. xii. 7.

MERCY-SEAT, or PROPITIATORY.
—The covering or lid of the ark of the covenant, or holy chest, which contained the tables of the law, and over which the cherubim were placed, and the Shekinah resided; and from which God mercifully spake to his people; Exod. xxv. 17, 20, 22; xxvi.

34; xxxvii. 6; Lev. xvi. 13; 1 Chr.
xxviii. 11.

MERED, Me'-red.—A son of Ezra, 1 Chron. iv. 17.

MEREMOTH, Mer'-e-moth.—A priest, Ezra viii. 33.

MERES, Me'-rees.—A prince of the court of Ahasuerus, Esth. i. 14.

MERIBAH, Mer'-re-bah, dispute, quarrel.—The Israelites so called Rephidim, Exod. xvii. 7.

MERIBAH-KADESH, Mer'-re-bah-kay'-desh, the strife of holiness.—
A place in the wilderness, where the Israelites encamped and murmured;
Deut. xxxii. 51.

MERIB-BAAL, Me-rib'-ba-al, re- bellion, he that resists Bual.—The son of Jonathan, and father of Micah; 1 Chron. viii. 34; ix. 40. The same as MEPHIBOSHETH, 2 Sam. iv. 4.

MERODACH, Mer'-o-dak, bitter, contrition, the little lord.—A Babylonian idol, supposed to represent one of the ancient kings; Jer. l. 2.

MERODACH-BALADAN, Mer'- ro-dak-bal'-la-dan, who creates contri- tion, the son of death, of thy vapour.—A king of Babylon, who congratulated Hezekiah with presents on his recovery;
Isa. xxxix.

MEROM, Me'-rom, eminence, eleva- tions.—Supposed to be the Samachon, or the upper lake of Jordan, near which Jabin and other kings met, to fight Joshua; Josh. xi. 5.

MERONOTHITE, Me-ron'-o-thite.—A person mentioned 1 Chron.
xxvii. 30.

MEROZ, Me'-roz, secret, leanness.— A place in the neighbourhood of the brook Kishon, whose inhabitants, refusing to come to the assistance of their brethren, when they fought against Sisera, were subjected to a curse; Judges v. 23.

MERRY heart, Prov. 15. 13, & 17. 22;

Ecd. 9. 7; Is. 24. 7.

Luke 12. 19. be m. 15. 23, 24, 29, 32.

Jan. 5. 13. is any m. let him sing psalms

ME-SHECH, or MESECK, Me'- shek, Me'-sek, drawn by force.—The sixth son of Japheth; Gen. x. 2.

MESECH. 'Woe is me that I sojourn in Mesech;' Ps. cxx. 5. David driven out from the presence of Saul, utters his lamentation in his banishment. Mesech was the son of Japheth, and the Moschi, who inhabited Armenia, and parts adjacent, (now by the Russians) descended from him. Kedar was the son of Abraham, and the Kedarinians now dwell in the south of Arabia Deserta. David was never so far from his own country, but his complaint intimated that he dwelt among rude and barbarous people like them; as when describing bad neighbours we say, we dwell among Turks and Heathens.

MESHA, Me'-sha.—A mountain; Gen. x. 30.—A king of the Moabites; 2 Kings iii. 4.—The eldest son of Hezon, son of Caleb; 1 Chr. ii. 42.

MESHACH, Me'-shak, that draws with force.—The Chaldean name given to Mishael; Dan. i. 7. One of the three Hebrews cast into the fiery furnace; Dan. iii. 12.

MESHECH, Ezek. xxvii. 13. See Tubal.

MESHELEMIAS, Mesh-el-e-my'-ah, peace, perfection, retribution of the Lord.—Father of Zechariah, a Levite, and porter of the temple; 1 Chron. ix. 21.

MESHEZABEEL, Mesh-ez'-a-beel. A Levite who sealed the covenant with Nehemiah; Neh. x. 21.

MESHILLEMOTH, Mesh'il'-le-moth.—One of the posterity of the patriarch Ephraim; Neh. xi. 13.

MESHOBAB, Me-sho'-bab. — A prince of the tribe of Simeon; 1 Chr. iv. 34.

MESHULLAM, Me-shul'-lam.—The name of several men of whom we know nothing but their names.

MESHULLEMETH, Me-shul'-le-meth.—The wife of Manasseh, king of Judah, daughter of Haruz, of the city of Jotbah; 2 Kings xxi. 19.

MESOPOTAMIA, Mes-o-po-tay'-me-a, between two rivers.—A large province lying between the Euphrates and the Tigris. The Hebrews called it Padan-aram; Gen. xxviii. 2. It is much celebrated in Scripture as being the first dwelling of men, both before and after the deluge; Deut. xxiii. 4. Babylon was in the ancient Mesopotamia, until by vast labour and industry the Tigris and Euphrates were united into one channel. The plains of Shinar were in the same country. The scriptures frequently give the name of Mesopotamia; Deut. xxiii. 4, &c., and sometimes that of Syria; Hos. xii. 12. After the death of Joshua, Cushan-Rishathaim, king of Mesopotamia, held the Hebrews in subjection for some time; Judges iii. 8.

MESSENGER. One employed to carry messages from one to another; Gen. xxxii. 3. An ambassador; 2 Kings xvi. 7. Christ, called the Messenger of the covenant; Mal. iii. 1, condescending to declare the will of the Father to, and by his death procuring salvation for us, and applying it by his Spirit, who works by faith and repentance in the hearts of those who receive the gospel message. The name is given to prophets or teachers, appointed by God to declare his will; Mal. ii. 7.—To spies, who privily inquire into the affairs and states of others; Josh. vi. 17.—To any dreadful judgment inflicted on the wicked; Prov. xvii. 11.

MESSENGERS of DEATH. Eastern despots were accustomed to dispatch messengers to execute instant death on the subjects of their displeasure; Prov. xvi. 14; Esth. vii. 9, 10.

MESSIAH, Mes-sy'-ah, anointed.—The Hebrew name given principally by way of eminence to Jesus, answering to Christ in Greek, both signifying Anointed. Though kings, and priests, and sometimes prophets were anointed to their offices, and received the name of "Anointed," yet this name belongs chiefly to Jesus Christ; for "Him specially hath God the Father sealed," to be the Saviour of sinners.

MESSIAH, Dan. 9. 25. 26; John 1. 41, & 4. 25.

MESSIAS, Mes-sy'-as.—The Greek form of MESSIAH; John iv. 25.

METERUS, Me-te'-rus.—One who returned from the Babylonish captivity.

METHEG-AMAH, Me'-theg-am' mah, bridle of bondage.—The city of Gath, in Philistia; 2 Sam. viii. 1.

METHUSAEL, Me-thew'-sa-el, who demands his death.—A descendant of Cain; Gen. iv. 18.

METHUSELAH, Me-thew'-se-lah, he has sent his death.—The son of Enoch, and father of Lamech; Gen. v. 21. The oldest man of whom we read. He was born A. M. 687, and died A. M. 1656, at the age of 969.

MEUNIM, Me-yew'-nim.—A person whose children were of the order of the Nethinims; Neh. vii. 52.

MEZAHAB, Mez'-a-hab.—The mother of Matred; Gen. xxxvi. 39.

MIAMIN, My'-a-min.—He returned from the Babylonish captivity; Ezra x. 25.

MIBHAR, Mib'-har.—One of king David's military warriors; 1 Chron. xi. 38.

MIBSAM, Mib'-sam.—The son of Ishmael; Gen. xxv. 13.

MIB'ZAR, Mib'-sar.—He was successor to Teman, in the principality of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 42.

MICAH, My'-kah, poor, humble, stricken.—The sixth of the minor prophets. He was a native of Marasha, a village in the south of Judah, near Eleutheropolis. He prophesied in the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah; hence he terms his predictions, "a vision concerning Jerusalem and Samaria," the two capitals. The Assyrian and Babylonian captivities were both drawing near, and the prophets Isaiah, Joel, Hosea, Amos, and Micah, were raised up to foretell these calamitous events, and exhort the people to repentance. The book written by Micah is one of the most important prophecies in the Old Testament. Previous predictions had limited the "seed of the woman" to the line of Shem, the descendants of Abraham, the tribe of Judah, and the house of David. Micah sheds further light, by designating the very place of his birth; ch. v. 2, with other important circumstances of his kingdom and glory. Micah's style possesses great energy, copiousness, pathos, and sublimity, combined with singular beauty and elegance. Some of his predictions will bear a comparison with those of Isaiah.

Also the son of Merib-baal; 1 Chr. viii. 34, 35.—Also, a man of the tribe of Ephraim, who caused much calamity to Israel; Judges xvii. 8.

MICAHIAH, My-kay'-i-ah, or My'-kay'-e-ah, who is like to God?—The son of Imlah, of the tribe of Ephraim, and a faithful prophet of the Lord; 1 Kings xxii. 13. He was the prophet who disguised himself, and threatened Ahab for allowing Benhadad, king of Assyria, to escape when he had him in his power; 1 Kings xx. He foretold Ahab's ruin; for which Ahab put him in prison, and fed him with the bread and water of affliction; 2 Chr. xviii. 26; see ver. 33, 34.

MICAHIAH... "Shall we go against Ramoth-Gilead to battle..... And he answered him, Go and prosper; for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king;" 1 Kings xxii. 15. The inspection of this passage will refute the assertion of infidels that the prophet told "a lie in the name of the Lord." That the prophet spoke ironically is very evident. The words are precisely those of the false prophets, ver. 6, and were doubtless designed by Micahiah to reprove the king for his impiety and infidelity. The design of the prophet was perceived by Ahab, for he afterwards adjured him to "speak nothing but the truth;" ver. 16; that is, to discover to him what really would be the result of the expedition, upon which the prophet assumed another tone, and related to him his vision.

MICHA, My'-kah, poor, humble.—One who sealed the covenant with Nehemiah; Neh. x. 11.

MICHAEL, My'-ka-el, who is like to God?—The arch-angel who presided over the Jewish nation; Dan. x. 13; Rev. xii. 7; Jude 9.—The father of Sethur; Num. xiii. 13.—One of David's valiant men; 1 Chr. xii. 20.—The son of king Jehoshaphat; 2 Chr. xxi. 2.

MICAH, My'-kah, poor, humble. A son of Uzziel, and father of Shamir; 1 Chron. xxiv. 24.

MICHAIAH, My-kay'-yah.—The son of Gemariah; Jer. xxxvi. 11.

MICHAL, My'-kal, who has all? who is perfect? all water.—Daughter of Saul, and wife of David; 2 Sam. iii. 13.

MICHMAS, Mik'-mas, he that strikes, the poor taken away.—A returned captive; Ezra ii. 27.

MICHMASH, Mik'-mash, he that strikes.—A city in Palestine, in the tribe of Ephraim; 1 Sam. xiii. 5.

MICMETHAH, Mik'-me-thah. A city of the half-tribe of Manasseh, on this side Jordan; Josh. xvi. 6.

MICHRI, Mik'-ry.—A Benjaminite; 1 Chron. ix. 8.

MICHTAM, Mik'-tam, a golden song.—The title of the fifty-sixth Psalm, denoting its preciousness.

MIDDIN, Mid'-din.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xv. 61.

MIDIAN, Mid'-de-an, judgment, habit, covering.—The fourth son of Abraham and Keturah; Gen. xxv. 2. The Midianites; Num. xxv. 6, 15, descended from this person. The land of Midian was situated near the Eastern branch of the Red Sea, in Arabia, it further passed to the south of the land of Edom, into the peninsula of Mount Sinai. The Midianites joined with Moab in seducing Israel, for which their kingdom was nearly destroyed. They gradually grew to strength again, and 200 years afterwards proved a scourge to the Israelites. Having oppressed Israel seven years in the days of Gideon, the Lord delivered them into the hands of a few Hebrews, by whom they were nearly exterminated, and the remainder are supposed to have become incorporated with the Moabites or Ammonites; Ex. iii. 1; Judges vi.—viii.

MIDNIGHT. At midnight the Lord smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt; Ex. xii. 29. At solemn midnight the sleeping virgins were roused by the cry—"Behold, the bridegroom cometh," &c. Matt. xxv. 1—8. "The day of the Lord shall come as a thief in the night." "At midnight," said David, "I will rise to give thanks unto thee." Ps. cxix.

62. Paul and Silas, impoverished, imprisoned, and their feet made fast in the stocks, "sang praises at midnight;" Acts xvi. 25.

MIDNIGHT.—"Shall go to him at midnight," Luke xi. 5. Journeys in the East are often performed in the night, on account of the heat of the day.

MIDST, Ps. 22. 14, & 46. 5, & 110. 2; Prov. 4. 21; Is. 4. 4, & 41. 18; Ezek. 43. 7, 9, & 46. 10; Joel 2. 27; Zeph. 3. 5, 12, 15, 17; Phil. 2. 15; Rev. 1. 13, & 5. 6.

Rev. 7. 17. Lamb in m. of throne

MIGDAL-EL, Mig'-dal-el.—A city in the tribe of Naphtali, Josh. xix. 35

MIGDAL-GAD, Mag'-dal-gad, the tower of Gad.—A city of the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 37.

MIGDOL, Mig'-dol, a tower, greatness.—A place or tower on the west coast of the Red Sea, where the Israelites encamped when they came out of Egypt; Exod. xiv. 2.

MIGRON, Mig'-ron, fear, a barn, from the throat.—A village near Gibeon, 1 Sam. xiv. 2.

MIJAMIN, Mid'-ja-min.—A priest, 1 Chron. xxiv. 9.

MIKLOTH, Mik'-loth.—The son of Jehiel or Abi-Gibeon, 1 Chron. viii. 32; ix. 37.—A captain of David's army, 1 Chron. xxvii. 4.

MIKNEIAH, Mik'-ny-ah.—A Levite, who was a porter in the temple at Jerusalem, 1 Chron. xv. 21.

MILALAI, Mil-a-lay'.—A priest, Neh. xii. 36.

MILCAH, Mil'-kah, queen.—1. The daughter of Haran, sister of Lot, wife of Nahor; Gen. xi. 29; xxii. 20.—Also a daughter of Zelophehad; Num. xxxvi. 11.

MILCH CAMELS are extremely valuable in the East, their milk being highly esteemed by the Arabs.

MILCOM, Mil'-kom, their king.—The god of the Ammonites, the same as Moloch; 1 Kings xi. 5.

MILDEW.—A destructive dew, which spots and corrodes plants, &c.; Deut. xxviii. 22; 1 Kings viii. 37; Amos iv. 9; Hag. ii. 17.

MILE.—The Roman mile was a thousand paces, a pace being five feet, it was about one hundred and forty-two yards less than our statute mile. The Greek stadium, or furlong, had the same relation to the Roman mile that our furlong has to our mile.

MILETUS, My-le'-tus, red, scarlet.—A sea-port of Asia Minor, and a city of Ionia, where St. Paul delivered to the elders of the church at Ephesus that affecting discourse which is recorded in Acts xx. 17—35. In this city were born Thales, one of the seven wise men, Anaximander his disciple, Timotheus the celebrated musician, and Anaximenes the philosopher. There was another Miletus in Crete, where St. Paul left Trophimus sick; 2 Tim. iv. 20.

MILE.—"And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain;" Matt. v. 41. The Persian messengers had the royal authority for pressing horses, ships, and men, to help them in the enterprise on which they were sent. Resistance to such compulsion might be punished with death.—Christ recommends compliance with the requests of unreasonable men rather than quarrel with them, and oppose force to force; for what can a man do against the servants of a king? It means also, Let thy charity not be stinted, but, if possible, exceed the requests of a worthy applicant.

MILK.—"Poured me out as milk," Job x. 10. The Hindoos pour milk on their heads after performing funeral obsequies. In allusion to this, if a father rejects a profligate son, he says, 'I have poured milk on my head, I have done with him.'

MILK and HONEY express abundance, and a country full of them was regarded as highly prosperous. Figuratively, they signify divine truths the most plain, easy to be comprehended by minds enfeebled by prejudice, and calculated to purify and console the soul; Isa. lx. 16; Joel iii. 18; 1 Cor. iii. 2; Heb. v. 12; 1 Pet. ii. 2.

MILK, Gen. 18. 8, & 49. 12.

Job 10. 10. hast thou not poured me out as m.

Songs 4. 11. honey and m, under thy tongue

5. 1. drunk wine with my m.

Is. 55. 1. buy wine & m. without money

Joel 3. 18. the hills flow with m.

Heb. 5. 12. become such as have need of m.

1 Pet. 2. 2. desire sincere m. o.

MILL.—"Two women shall be grinding at the mill," Matt. xxiv. 41. Mill stones were two feet in diameter, and half a foot in thickness. The upper side of the lower mill-stone was concave, and the lower surface of the upper one was convex. In the operation of grinding the lower was fixed, and the upper made to move round upon it, with considerable velocity by means of a handle. The hole for receiving the corn was in the upper mill-stone, which was moved by women, who sat opposite to each other, each one throwing it half round to her fellow labourer.

MILLENIUM.—The thousand years, during which Christ shall reign gloriously in his church; Rev. xx. 1—8.

MILLET.—A small grain, inferior to wheat. It is much like rye in appearance. Its name is derived from the Latin mille, a thousand, on account of its vast production. It is made into bread with oil or butter. It is the common food of the poor in Arabia Felix; Ezek. iv. 9.

MILLO, Mil'-lo, fulness, repletion.—A deep valley between Jerusalem and the city of David, built upon Mount Zion; 1 Kings ix. 15.—Probably a citizen of Shechem; Judges ix. 6.

MILL-STONES.—The absence of the sounding of these, and the joyful song of the grinders, indicated desolation; Judges xvi. 21; Isa. xlvii. 2; Jer. xxv. 10; Rev. xviii. 22.

MILLSTONE 'to pledge,' Deut. xxiv. 6.—The taking of either mill-stone was humanely forbidden. Meal being ground every day, the family would have been left to starve.

MINCING.—Walking with proud and affected gait; Isa. iii. 16.

MIND.—The faculty of distinct perception between good and evil, truth and falsehood; 2 Cor. iii. 14.—The renewed part of man; Rom. vii. 25.—The heart; Gen. xxvi. 35.—Memory; Ps. xxxi. 12.—End or design; Prov. xxi. 27.—The will; 1 Pet. v. 2.

MINIAMIN, Me-ny'-a-min. — A Levite; 2 Chron. xxxi. 15.

MINISTER strictly denotes one who serves or waits upon another. Thus Joshua is called the minister of Moses; Exod. xxiv. 13, and John Mark, the minister of Paul and Barnabas; Acts xiii. 5. But the term is applied variously by the sacred writers, such as to magistrates; Rom. xiii. 6,—to pastors and teachers; 1 Cor. iii. 5, and iv. 1,—to angels; Ps. civ. 4; Heb. i. 14—and to the Son of God, who came into this world, "not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and give his life a ransom for many;" Matt. xx. 28.

MINISTER, Josh. 1. 1; Luke 4. 20.
Matt. 20. 26. let him be your m.

MINNI, Min'-ny, disposed, reckoned.—A people who occupied Minitas, a district of Armenia; Jer. li. 27.

MINNITH, Min'-nith, counted prepared.—A city beyond Jordan, situated four miles from Heshbon. It was famous for its wheat, which it exported to Tyre; Judges xi. 33; Ezek. xxvii. 17.

MINSTREL. A professed musician or singer. Elisha had one to soothe his troubled mind; 2 Kings iii. 15, and so had Saul; 1 Sam. xvi. 23. Some were employed at funerals, to superintend the rites of interment. These sung and played funeral odes and mournful songs, uttered doleful shrieks, and ejaculations, and excited the sympathy of spectators by exhibiting the most vehement expressions of grief. The practice was very ancient, as we learn from Jer. ix. 17, 18. We discover the practice also in the time of our Saviour; for these were the persons who laughed him to scorn when about to raise the daughter of the ruler; Matt. ix. 23, 24

MINT.—"Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint, and anise, and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone;" Matt. xxiii. 23; Luke xi. 42. The law did not require the Jews to give tithe of these herbs: it only required it of those things comprehended under the name of income or revenue. But the Pharisees were anxious to distinguish themselves by a more scrupulous observance of the law than others, and give tithe of mint, anise, and cummin. Christ censured them because they omitted the weightier matters of the law.

MIPKAD, Mif'-kad.—The name of a gate of the city of Jerusalem; Neh. iii. 31.

MIRACLE. An effect contrary to the established constitution, and course of things; or a sensible deviation from the known laws of nature. God who made nature has power to control nature, and to change, suspend, or divert his laws, for a season, according to his will. The divinity of our Saviour was proved by the miracles he performed. They were such as could be wrought only by the power of God, and had for their object, to confirm a doctrine becoming the glorious attributes of God; and the accomplishment of prophecies concerning the Messiah, whose coming it was foretold should be with miraculous healing benefits; John iii. 2, ix. 16. The form of true religion being now established in the world, miracles have ceased, as being no longer necessary. The existence and prevalence of Christianity, amid the opposition of men's inclinations and endeavours; with the frequent fulfilment of prophecies now taking place, are sufficient authentications of it. Modern popish miracles are a sad evidence of the chicanery and the corruption of Romanism. The Church of Rome has abounded in pretences to miracles, and in the most fraudulent cheats. It has been stated that churches have been taken up in one place, and carried through the air into distant countries; that images have nodded, smiled, frowned or spoken on certain occasions; and that the blood of some saint has been annually liquefied, on a certain day of the year; that the first convert St. Gaul made in Germany was a bear; that St. Anthony of Padua preached to a vast assembly of fishes, whom he had miraculously called together, and who devoutly heard him preach the Word of the Lord; and that St. Francis preached with great success to birds and beasts, which he thought our Lord commanded in Mark xvi. 15. These absurdities are still propagated; and a British peer lately tried to make the credulous believe that two girls whom he saw in Italy are impressed with the wounds of the Saviour, which wounds bleed every Friday, and that for an incredible space of time they have lived on nothing but the holy sacrament!

MIRACLE, Mark 6. 52, & 9. 39; Luke 23. 8; John 2. 11, & 6. 26, & 10. 41, & 11. 47; Acts 2. 22, & 4. 16, & 6. 8, & 19. 11; 1 Cor. 12. 10, 23, 29; Gal. 3. 5; Heb. 2. 4.

MIRIAM, Mir'-e-am, exalted, bitterness of the sea, mistress of the sea.—The sister of Moses and Aaron. She was about ten or twelve years older than Moses; born A. M. 2424. Hence she was old enough to watch the ark of bulrushes in which Moses was exposed on the banks of the Nile; Ex. ii. 4, 5. After the passage of the Red Sea, she led on the choirs of females; Ex. xv. 21. She is called a prophetess; Ex. xv. 20. Her death is recorded; Num. xx. 1.

MIRMAH, Mir'-mah.—A Benjamite; 1 Chron. viii. 10.

MIRTH. That which is vain, Ecc. 7. 4; Prov. 14. 13; Ecc. 2. 2, & 7. 4; Is. 24. 8, 11; Jer. 7. 34, & 16. 9, & 25. 10; Hos. 2. 11; Ezek. 21. 10.

MIST.—In Gen. ii. 4–6, we read “God had not caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man to till the ground. But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.” God created every thing perfect in its nature, so that every vegetable production appeared at once in full growth; and this was necessary that man, when he came into being, might find every thing ready for his use.

As to the vegetable creation, mark the difference of its first production, and ordinary propagation. Plants are now produced by rain upon the earth and by manure; but the first plants were made before there was any rain, or any human hand to till the ground. After this, a mist or vapour arose, which engendered rain, and watered the earth. “There went up a mist from the earth;” Gen. ii. 6. It means that the watery vapours, ascending from the earth, and becoming condensed in the colder regions of the atmosphere, fell back upon the earth in the form of dews and rain. These gave moisture and nourishment to all plants, &c.

MISGAB, Mis'-gab, the high fort or rock.—Probably a city of the Moabites, Jer. xlviii. 1.

MISHAEL, Mish'-a-el, who is asked for. God takes away.—One of the three companions of Daniel; Dan. i. 7.

MISHAL, My'-shal.—A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Asher; see Josh. xxi. 30.

MISHAM, My'-sham.—A Benjaminite, 1 Chron. viii. 12.

MISHEAL, My'-she-al.—A city of Asher. Eusebius says near Mount Carmel; Josh. xix. 26.

MISHMA, Mish'-mah.—The fifth son of Ishmael, Gen. xxv. 14.

MISHMANNAH, Mish-man'-nah.—A person who resorted to David at Ziklag, 1 Chron. xii. 10.

MISHRAITES, Mish'-ra-ites.—A family mentioned 1 Chron. ii. 53.

MISPERETH, Mis'-pe-reth.—One who returned from the Babylonish captivity, Neh. vii. 7.

MISREPHOTH-MAIM, Mis'-re-foth-may'-im, the burnings of the waters.—A city mentioned Josh. xi. 8; supposed to be the Sarepta.

MISTRESS.—An imperial city; Nah. iii. 4.—The governess of a house; Gen. xvi. 9; 1 Kings xvii. 17; Ps. cxxxiii. 2.

MITE.—The smallest Jewish coin, in value about three-fourths of an English farthing; Mark xii. 42; Luke xxi. 2.

MITHCAH, Mith'-kah.—An encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness, Num. xxxiii. 28, 29.

MITHREDATH, Mith'-re-dath.—A Persian officer who signed the letter to Artaxerxes, to hinder the Jews from building the walls of Jerusalem; Ezra iv. 7.

MITRE.—The mitre of Aaron seems to have been a roll of fine cotton, resembling a turban. It was furnished in front with a plate of pure gold, on which was inscribed these words, "HOLINESS TO THE LORD;" Exod. xxviii. 36; that is, consecrated to his service. According to Jewish tradition, this inscription also was engraved in symbolic characters, which characters they say could only be read by the high priest.

MITYLENE, Mit-e-lee'-ne, purity, press.—The capital of the island of Lesbos, in the Grecian Archipelago. It was a large and beautiful city. Paul touched at this island on his way to Jerusalem; Acts xx. 14. The whole island is now under the Turkish power. The chief town is called Castra. Population, 25,000.

MIZAR, My'-zar, little.—A hill; Ps. xlii. 6.

MIZPAH, Miz'-pah, a sentinel, speculation.—A city in the tribe of Judah, afterwards given to the Benjaminites; Josh. xv. 38; xviii. 26.

MIZPAR, Miz'-par.—One who returned from the Babylonish captivity; Ezra ii. 2.

MIZPEH, Miz'-peh.—There was also a third place of the name of Mizpah, but it appears rather to have been a tract of country at the foot of Mount Hermon, and consequently towards the head of the river Jordan; Josh. xi. 3.

MIZRAIM, Miz'-ra-im, tribulations.—Son of Ham, and father of Ludim, Anamim, Lehabim, Naphtulim, Pathrusim, and Caslubim; Gen. x. 6, 13. He was the progenitor of the Egyptians; hence the country of Egypt is frequently called by this name.

MIZZAH, Miz'-zah.—The son of Reuel, Gen. xxxvi. 13.

MNASON, Nay'-son, a diligent seeker, betrother, an exhorter.—A Jew by birth, and an aged disciple of Christ. Paul lodged at his house in Jerusalem; Acts xxi. 16.

MOAB, Mo'-ab, of a father.—The son of Lot, Gen. xix. 37. He was the father of the Moabites, who dwelt eastward of the Dead Sea. The capital city was called Ar, Areopolis, or Ariel, of Moab; sometimes Rabbath Moab; that is, the capital of Moab, or Ker-haresh; that is, a city with brick walls. This country was at first possessed by a race of giants, called Emims; Deut. ii. 11. The Moabites conquered it, and afterwards the Amorites took it, in part, from the Moabites. There was always a great antipathy between the Moabites and the Israelites, which caused great wars between them. Balaam seduced the Hebrews to idolatry and uncleanness, by means of the daughters of Moab; Num. xxv. 1, 2; and Balak, king of this people, did what he could to prevail with Balaam to curse the people of the Lord; Num. xxii. 2. God ordained that the Moabites should not enter into the congregation of his people, even to the tenth generation, (Deut. xxiii. 3,) because they had the inhumanity to refuse the Israelites a passage through their country, nor would supply them with bread and water in their extreme necessity.

MOAB 'shall be destroyed from being a people,' &c.; Jer. xlviii. 42. Moab has long ceased to be a nation. All the plains are now covered with the sites of towns. There have lately been counted fifty ruined sites within its boundaries, many of them extensive. In general they are a broken down and undistinguishable mass of ruins, and many of them have not been closely inspected.

MOAB.—'Ye that dwell in Moab, leave the cities, and dwell in the rocks,' &c. See Jer. xlviii. 28. Volney illustrates this prediction when he says, "that the wretched peasants live in perpetual dread of losing the fruit of their labours; and no sooner have they gathered in their harvest, than they secrete it in private places, and retire among the rocks which border on the Dead Sea." Seetzen relates that there are many families living in caverns; and he actually designates them "the inhabitants of the rocks." While the cities are desolate, without any to dwell in, the rocks are tenanted.

MOCK.—To deceive; Num. xxii. 29.—To treat with scorn; 2 Chron. xxx. 10.—To show a malicious disposition; Neh. iv. 1. See Prov. xiv. 9.

MOCK when fear cometh, Prov. 1. 26.

 MODERATION be known unto all, Phil.
 4. 5.
 MODEST apparel, 1 Tim. 2. 9.

MOLADAH, Mol'-a-dah, birth, generation.—A city of the tribe of Simeon; Josh. xv. 26.

MOLE.—A quadruped, having feet formed like hands, and calculated for digging; it has no external ears, and lives under ground. The mole was declared unclean by the law of Moses, Lev. xi. 30. Bochart is of opinion, that this is the chameleon. The prophet speaks of a day when "a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, to the moles and to the bats," Isa. ii. 20. Men shall carry their idols with them into the dark caverns, old ruins, or desolate places; and give them up to the filthy animals that frequent such places.

MOLECH, or MOLOCH, Mo'-lek, or Mo'-lok, king.—The idol of the Ammonites. Some think that the children were only made to leap over the fire to Moloch, or to pass between two fires, to symbolize their consecration to the service of that idol. That they were actually burnt as a sacrifice, seems, however, most in accordance with the testimony of Scripture, and of profane history. The Rabbins assure us, that the idol Moloch was made of brass, sitting on a throne of the same metal, adorned with a royal crown, having the head of a calf, and his arms extended as if to embrace any one; so that when they offered children to him, they heated the statue from within, by a great fire; and when it was burning hot, put the miserable victim within its arms, where it was soon consumed by the violence of the heat; and, that the cries of the children might not be heard, they made a great noise with drums, and other instruments, about the idol; Lev. xviii. 21; xx. 2—5.

MOLID, Mo'-lid.—A descendant of Caleb, 1 Chron. ii. 29.

MOMENT.—A second or instant of time, Num. xvi. 21, 45; Ps. lxxiii. 19. "How are they brought to desolation as in a moment!" The sudden alteration which death makes in the state of a wicked person cannot but affect all around him, though they behold but one part of it. How much more would they be astonished and terrified, if the curtain between the two worlds were undrawn, and the other half of the change disclosed to the view! See Job xxi. 13.

MONEY.—The price of things, or the common measure or standard of all other things, devised for carrying on commerce, which was originally carried on by barter. The Persians began to use coined money about the time of Darius Hystaspes. The Greeks had no coin before the days of Alexander; nor the Egyptians before the Ptolemies; nor the Hebrews till the government of Judas Maccabeus; to whom Antiochus Sidetes, king of Syria, granted the privilege of coining his own money in Judea. The coin commonly called "a piece of money," was probably a shekel, or the Greek stater, which was of the value of two shillings; Matt. xvii. 27. A pound was about equal to sixty shekels. A penny was one fourth of a stater or shekel, equal to sixpence of our money. A farthing was the fortieth part of a penny; or about the sixth of our penny; Matt. v. 26. A mite was half a farthing; Mark xii. 42. It is thought that there was also a farthing equal to one tenth of a Roman penny. Instead of giving uncertain tables of coins, the best practicable explanation of such as are mentioned in the Bible is given under each word as it occurs.

MONEY, Gen. 23. 9, & 31. 15.

MONEY CHANGERS.—Persons

who at a certain rate of profit, exchanged foreign coins, especially Roman, for those coins current among the Jews; Matt. xxi. 12. The yearly tribute to the sanctuary was a Jewish half shekel, to obtain which exchange would often be wanted.

MONTH.—A space of time, which, if measured by the moon (whence its name,) is called lunar; and if by the sun, is it called solar. See YEAK. When we speak of Jewish months as corresponding to ours, some allowance must be made; for theirs were lunar, and ours are solar, which are not exactly alike. The Hebrew months commonly answer to two of our months, and take part of both. In the following table the months are numbered as they stood both in the civil and sacred years:—

Civil. Sacred.

12	6 Elul		August

MONUMENTS, 'lodge in the monuments,' Isa. lxx. 4. Probably tombs or idol temples, by sleeping in which, idolators expected dreams, or visions from their gods.

MOON is a secondary planet, which attends on the earth to give light by night; Gen. i. 16; Deut. xxxiii. 14; Jeremiah xxxi. 35. To which are compared the church of God, because of her splendour and brightness, which she derives from Christ the Sun of righteousness, as the moon does her light from the sun; and withal to intimate that the church, like the moon, may have her eclipses, and be in darkness for a time; Songs vi. 10. The Mosaic dispensation; Rev. xii. 1. "The moon under her feet."

MOON. "And the precious things put forth by the moon;" Deut. xxxiii. 14. The last words may refer to those vegetables which require about a lunar month to bring them to perfection. It was a prevailing opinion that the moon produced dew, favourable to vegetation.

MOON 'confounded and sun ashamed,' denote the abolition of the ecclesiastical and civil polity of the Jews; Isa. xxiv. 23.

MOON.—The Jewish ecclesiastical state; Joel ii. 31; Rev. xii. 1.

"MOON by NIGHT;" Ps. cxxi. 6. The light of the moon is so powerful in the East as to impair the sight, if the face be exposed to it at night.—Carne. "He who has slept in the moon-light is heavy when he awakes, as if deprived of his senses, and as it were, oppressed by the weight of the damps which is spread over his whole body."

MOON, 'it shall be established for ever as the moon;' Ps. lxxxix. 37. Meaning, as long as time shall last, shall Messiah's kingdom continue among men. In the East it is customary to reckon time by the moon. A man is so many moons old; so many moons since any event happened.

MORASTHITE, Mo'-ras-thite.—The name of Micah the prophet, because he was from Morasthi, a place south of Judea; Jer. xxvi. 18.

MORDECAI, Mor'-de-kay, bitter bruising; Syriac, pure myrrh.—The son of Jair, of the family of Saul, and a chief of the tribe of Benjamin. He was carried away captive by Nebuchadnezzar, A. M. 3416.—See the book of Esther.

MOREH, Mo'-reh.—A place west of Jordan; Gen. xii. 6.

MORESHETH-GATH, Mor'-esh-eth-gath'.—Probably the king of Assyria, to whom the Philistine cities gave presents; Micah i. 14.

MORIAH, Mo-ry'-ah, bitterness or fear of the Lord.—A mountain within the walls of Jerusalem on which Abraham, intended to offer his son, and on which the temple of Solomon was afterwards built; 2 Chron. iii. 1.

MORNING, in old English, more-wenning, is derived from more, and wen, or won, to dwell; i. e. a continuance of time to live or dwell in your present habitation. Every man wishes to live longer; and, therefore, wishes for to-morrow; and when to-morrow comes, then to-morrow, and so on.

The first part of the day, or the time of the sun's rising; Mark xvi. 2; Luke xxiv. 1, the one part of a natural day; Gen. i. 5. The evening and the morning make the day, according to Moses, because the ancient Hebrews began their day in the evening. The general resurrection, when the dead shall be raised; Psal. xlix. 14. Death being called the night; John ix. 4, and compared to sleep; John xi. 11, that day is fitly compared to the morning, when men wake out of sleep, and enter upon that everlasting day.—Early or seasonably; Psal. v. 3. "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning."

MORNING, Wings of; Psalm cxxxix. 9, denote a rapid flight; there being no motion we know of so rapid as the diffusion of the beams of the sun at the breaking of the day.

MORTIFY. The mortification of sin in believers is a duty enjoined in the sacred scriptures; Rom. viii. 13; Col. iii. 5. It consists in breaking the league with sin; declaration of open hostility against it; and strong resistance of it; Eph. vi. 10, &c. Gal. v. 24. The means to be used in this work are prayer, and looking to Jesus by faith, for the assistance of the Holy Spirit.

MOSERA, Mo-se'-ra, eruption, discipline. — An encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness; Deut. x. 6.

MOSEROTH, Mo-se'-roth. — The same as MOSERA; Num. xxxiii. 30.

MOSES, Mo'-zez, drawn out of the water. — The son of Amrain and Jochebed, who were of the tribe of Levi. He was the law-giver of Israel, and the author of the Pentateuch, meaning the five books of Moses. He was born A. M. 2433. Aaron was his brother, and Miriam was his sister, who was about ten or twelve years of age when Moses was born. To escape the cruel decree of the king of Egypt; Ex. i. 16, Moses was concealed for three months; Heb. xi. 23; Acts vii. 20. When the child could no longer be concealed in the house. "its mother took an ark of bulrushes, and put the child in it, and laid it in the flags by the river's brink;" Ex. ii. 3. There the Providence of God watched over it, and preserved it. Miriam was appointed to watch over it. By a singular Providence too, the child was found, taken up and adopted by the daughter of Pharaoh, and nursed by his own mother, whom she had hired at the suggestion of Miriam, the child's sister. What a wonderfully blessed change!

The troubled mind of the mother was set at rest; her tears were wiped away, and her fears and agonies succeeded by confidence and joy. As he rose to manhood, his mother was careful to fix in his mind the principles of true religion, while his illustrious patroness caused him to be trained "in all the wisdom of the Egyptians;" Acts vii. 22, a privilege which Moses did not fail to improve. Being informed by his mother of the promised redemption of Israel, his heart was inspired by the hope of it, and that led him to despise the attractions and wealth of Pharaoh's court, to prefer affliction with the people of God to the enjoyment of sinful pleasures for a season; Heb. xi. 23—26.

When forty years of age Moses, being Divinely moved, visited his brethren, and seeing one of them smitten probably by one of the taskmasters, he avenged him, and slew the Egyptian; Acts vii. 23—25. Pharaoh having been informed of this act, he sought for Moses to put him to death. But Moses fled into the land of Midian, and there he married Zipporah, the daughter of Jethro; Ex. ii. 11, &c.

The appearance of God to Moses in the burning bush, to prepare and commission him to deliver Israel from the bondage of Egypt, is recorded in Exodus chap. iii. Then follows an account of his deliverance of the message to Pharaoh, the performance of the various miracles wrought to induce that monarch "to let Israel go" — their departure, and passage through the Red Sea — and their journeyings through the desert, &c. It was here that Moses became a lawgiver indeed. The people through him, entered into intimate intercourse with God,—the law was given from Sinai, and the people became bound by that covenant to holy obedience.

The law was delivered amid solemn grandeur. On the morning of the third day Sinai exhibited the most tremendous appearances. The presence of Jehovah was ushered in by a fearful agitation of the elements. The holy mountain shook to its very foundation, and also emitted immense volumes of flame and smoke; the air was rent by the violent claps of thunder, sheets of vivid fire glared through the atmosphere, and the confusion was rendered still more terrifying by the loud roaring of the celestial trumpet. The Israelites trembled at beholding this awful scene, and Moses himself did exceedingly fear and quake; Heb. xii. 21. The ten commandments were delivered with all this grandeur, from the summit of a mountain, in the presence of all the people, and with the sound of a trumpet, to denote the immutability and universality of the law of God.

The books of Exodus and Numbers give a graphic account of the Israelites—their murmuring—their idolatry—their punishment in consequence—the miracles wrought on their behalf, and the conduct of them by Moses nearly to the borders of the promised land. Though Moses was prohibited from entering Canaan, he had the satisfaction to see a preparation made for it by defeating the Amorites, Moabites, and Midianites, who came out against them. Soon after he received the Divine command to “get up into Mount Nebo, and die.” Joshua was appointed his successor, and consecrated to the office “before all the congregation.” Before his departure, he pronounced, in the hearing of the assembled tribes, that sublime ode or song which is recorded in Deut. xxxiii.

When Moses had taken his solemn and affecting leave of all the people, he ascended the mountain, and from Pisgah beheld the fertile plains of Canaan. Though at the age of one hundred and twenty years, his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated. “Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor: but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day,” Deut. xxxiv. 5, 6.

The character of Moses is fully delineated in the various events of his life. Intrepidity and modesty, zeal and benevolence, wisdom and piety, appear to be his leading features; and the close of his career is a bright display of the exalted purity of his mind, in passing over his own family, and selecting an assistant and successor from another tribe.

MOTE—Beam; Matt. vii. 4, &c. Mote means a little splinter of wood, or a small seed; Beam, something much larger, dokon, the thorn. The mote is the emblem of little faults—and the beam of great faults. It is as absurd for a bad man to reprove others, as it would be for one that is almost blind himself to perform operations on other men’s eyes. It often happens, that the faults which we consider as of the first enormity in others, are, to our own iniquities, as a splinter is, when compared to a large beam. On one side, self-love blinds us to ourselves; and on the other, envy and malice give us piercing eyes in respect of others. When we shall have as much zeal to correct ourselves, as we have inclination to reprove and correct others, we shall know our own defects better than now we know those of our neighbour.

MOTH.—“Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust do corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal;” Matt. vi. 19. Moths, ants, and other insects, are very destructive to garments, paper, books, &c., in hot countries. Hence a traveller says, “I had put my effects into a chest, and opening it afterwards, I discovered an innumerable multitude of termites, or ants. They had perforated my linen in a thousand places, and gnawed my books, my girdle, my amice, and my shoes."—And so even silver and gold, will in time corrode and corrupt and destroy their possessors, if they love them supremely.

MOTE, Job 4. 19, & 27. 13; Ps. 39. 11; Is. 50. 9, & 51. 8; Hos. 5. 12; Math. 6. 20; Luke 12. 33.

MOTHER is applied metaphorically to a variety of objects, such as the earth; queens, as protectors; to a prophetess; to metropolitan cities; and to the church of God; and to antichrist; 2 Sam. xx. 19; Judges v. 7; Isa. l. 1; Gal. iv. 26; Rev. xvii. 5.

MOTHER 'of thousands of millions,' Gen. xxiv. 60.—It was so with regard to Rebekah, for from her sprung both the Edomites and the Israelites.

MOTHER, Gen. 3. 20, & 21. 21; Judg. 5. 7; 2 Sam. 20. 19; 1 Kings 3. 27; Gal. 4. 26.

MOZIONS, Rom. 7. 5.

MOUNT.—To ascend or go up; Job xx. 6; Psaln cvii. 26; Isa. ix. 13; xl. 31.

MOUNTAINS.—Elevated portions of the earth, as Mount Seir, Horeb, Sinai, Tabor, Lebanon, &c., &c.

MOUNTAINS.—"Flee to the mountains;" Math. xxiv. 16; Luke xxi. 20—22. The mountains of Judea have many caves, a safe retreat from enemies. Many of the noble Jews departed out of the city, and vast numbers fled to the mountains: and ancient writers tell us, that at this juncture, all who believed in Christ left Jerusalem, and removed to places beyond Jerusalem; and so escaped the general ravages of their country, that not one of them is stated to have perished in that devoted city.

MOUNTAINS 'are round about Jerusalem,' Ps. cxxv. 2. Jerusalem is seated on a rocky mountain, every way to be ascended, except a little on the north, with steep ascents, and deep valleys naturally fortified. It appears as if placed in the midst of an amphitheatre, being for the most part environed with other mountains.

MOUNTAINS of ISRAEL.—They were situated in the centre of the Holy Land, opposite to the mountains of Judah. The soil of both is fertile, excepting those ridges of the mountains of Israel which look towards the Jordan, which are rugged and difficult of ascent, also with the exception of the chain extending from the mount of Olives to the plain of Jericho. This road is extremely dangerous. The bold projecting crags of rocks, the dark shadows, the dreadful cliffs above, and the desolation which reigns around, present a terrific picture. With what propriety did our Saviour choose this spot as the scene of that delightful tale of compassion recorded by St. Luke! (x. 30—34.) One must be amid these gloomy solitudes, surrounded by an armed band, and feel the impatience of the traveller who rushes on to catch a new view at every pass and turn; one must be alarmed at the stamp of the horses' hoofs resounding through the caverned rocks, and at the savage shouts of the armed footmen, like the echoing thunder produced by the discharge of their pieces in the valleys; one must witness all this upon the spot, before the full force and beauty of the good Samaritan can be perceived. Here pillage, wounds, and death, would be accompanied with double terror, from the frightful aspect of every thing around. Here, the unfeeling act of passing by a fellow-creature in distress, as the Priest and Levite are said to have done, strikes one with horror, as an act almost more than inhuman. And here too the compassion of the good Samaritan, is doubly virtuous, from the purity of motive which must have led to it, in a spot where no eyes were fixed on him to draw forth the performance of any duty, and from the bravery which was necessary to admit of a man's exposing himself, by such delay, to the risk of a similar fate to that from which he was endeavouring to rescue his fellow-creature.

MOUNTAIN.—Figuratively, 1. A kingdom, state, republic, or city; Isa. ii. 12—14; Zech. iv. 7.—2. The kingdom of Christ's church; Isa. ii. 2; xi. 9; Dan. ii. 35.

MOUNTAINS of prey, Ps. lxxvi. 4.—Metaphorically, great princes, mighty conquerors.

MOURN.—“To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion;” that is, to impart gladness to the mourners in Zion. “To give them beauty for ashes;” that is, a beautiful crown instead of ashes. In times of mourning the Jews put on sackcloth, made of horse hair, and spread dust and ashes on their heads; on the contrary, splendid garments and perfumed oil poured on their heads, were the signs of joy; Isa. lxi. 3.

MOURN. Neh. 8. 9; Job 5. 11.

Is. 61. 2. to comfort all that m.

Matt. 5. 4. blessed they that m.

Sam. 4. 9. afflicted, m. and weep

Is. 22. 12. in that day the Lord called to m.

61. 3. to give oil of joy for m.

Jer. 9. 17. call for the m. women

31. 13. turn their m. into joy

Joel 2. 12. turn to me with m.

Jam. 4. 9. laughter be turned into m.

MOURNING.—Godly sorrow for sin; Matt. v. 4.—Also sorrow under afflictions, grievous lamentation; Gen. xxiii. 2; Matt. xxiv. 30. When the Jews mourned their relatives and friends rent their garments, and put on sackcloth and ashes; Gen. xxxvii. 34. Sometimes they sprinkled dust on their heads, wearing mourning apparel; 2 Sam. xiv. 2; and covering the face and head; 2 Sam. xix. 4. Also, fasting is implied.

MOURNING WOMEN.—Bands of male and female musicians were hired to sing funeral dirges, and formed the principal part of the procession to the grave. They were very cunning and skilful in feigning sorrow. Their dishevelled hair, smiting on their naked bosoms, lamenting the loss, and recalling the virtues of the deceased, moved the tender affections and tears of the survivors; Isa. xv. 3; xxii. 1; Jer. ix. 17; Matt. ix. 23; which see.

MOUSE.—In Eastern countries the field-mouse sometimes ravages whole fields, and even districts, which was one of the plagues endured by the Philistines for detaining the ark of God, and the reason why five golden mice were sent back with it; 1 Sam. vi. 4, 5. In the 12th century, Palestine was for four successive years so overrun with mice as to cause a famine. Some eminent authors consider that our common mouse is not mentioned in the Scriptures, and that the word so rendered in 1 Sam. vi. 5. Isa. lxvi. 17, means the Serboa, or mountain rat of Arabia, Palestine, &c.

MOUTH signifies the part of the body so called, which is the instrument of speech, Ps. cxv. 5, cxxxv. 17; speech or words uttered by the mouth, Job xix. 16; Ps. lxxiii. 9; Isa. xlix. 2; just desires and necessities, Ps. ciii. 5; the palate, Job xii. 11; the throat, Ps. cxlix. 6; a door, Dan. iii. 26; freedom and boldness of speech, Luke xxi. 15; boasting, Judges ix. 38; reproaches and calumnies, Job v. 15; a testimony, Deut. xvii. 6. “If my mouth hath kissed my hand,” Job xxxi. 27. This was a mark or token of worship and adoration, 1 Kings xix. 18; Hosea xiii. 2; and when the idols were out of the reach of the idolaters, that they could not kiss them, they used to kiss their hands, and as it were to throw kisses at them. Job insinuates that he had used no such idolatrous practice. “To ask counsel at the mouth of the Lord,” Josh. ix. 14, is to consult him. “They set their mouth against the heavens,” Ps. lxxiii. 9. They speak arrogantly, insolently, and without the fear of God; they bid defiance both to God and man, blaspheming God's name, deriding his providence, reviling his servants, &c. “Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.” Matt. xii. 34. Men's language manifests the sentiments of the heart; and frequently its wickedness. "Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man," Matt. xv. 11. It is neither meat nor drink that makes a man unclean in the sight of God.—"By the mouth of two or three witnesses shall he that is worthy of death be put to death," Deut. xvii. 6. That is, their speech or testimony. See Deut. xix. 15; Matt. xviii. 16.

MOZA, Mo'-za.—The son of Zimri, of king Saul's family. Also the son of Caleb; 1 Chron. ii. 46.

MOZAH, Mo'-zah. — A city of Palestine; Josh. xviii. 26.

MUFFLERS.—Women's veils; Is. iii. 19. These are still worn by Egyptian ladies, and cover the whole face, the eyes excepted.

MULBERRY-TREES. They grew in Canaan. The leaves of which are food for silk-worms. Said to be a tree used in medicine. By the "going in the tops of the mulberry-trees," probably only a rustling among the leaves is intended; 2 Sam. v. 24. When thou shalt hear the sound of the angels coming to thy assistance, then go out to battle; 1 Chron. xiv. 14, 15.

MULE. — An animal of mixed breed, between a horse and an ass. We know of the existence of mules so long ago as the time of Homer; and though the Jews were forbidden to have any mixed race of animals, yet they were employed in the Holy Land long before the time of David. It is remarkably sure-footed, patient, hardy, obstinate, swift, and strong; and lives to twice the age of a horse. Use is made of them in South America, France, Spain, and especially in mountainous regions, as the Alps, Pyrenees, &c.; Lev. xix. 19; 2 Sam. xiii. 29; xviii. 9; 1 Kings i. 33.

MULTIPY. To increase in number; Heb. vi. 14; Gen. xxii. 17, 18. —Spiritual increase; Ps. cvii. 38; Acts xii. 24.

MUNITION.—A fort or fortification; Isa. xxix. 7; xxxiii. 16; Nahum ii. 1.—A secure place.—The word is chiefly used for materials of war

MUPPIM, Mup'-pim.—A son of Benjamin; Gen. xlv. 21.

MURDER.—The act of wilfully killing a person from malice or forethought. Heart murder is the secret wishing or designing the death of any man; the scripture saith, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer," 1 John iii. 15. We have instances of this kind of murder in Ahab; 1 Kings xxii. 9. Jezebel. The Jews; Mark xi. 18. David; 1 Sam. xxv. 21, 22. Murder is contrary to the authority of God, the sovereign Disposer of life; Deut. xxxii. 39, to the goodness of God, who gives it; Job x. 12. to the law of nature; Acts xvi. 28, to the love a man owes to himself, his neighbour, and society at large. But life may be taken away, as in lawful war; 1 Chron. v. 22, by the hands of the civil magistrate for capital crimes; Deut. xvii. 8, 10, and in self-defence. According to the divine law, murder is to be punished with death; Deut. xix. 11, 12; 1 Kings ii. 28, 29. God often gives up murderers to the terrors of a guilty conscience; Gen. iv. 13, 15. Such are followed with many instances of divine vengeance; 2 Sam. xxi. 9, 10, their lives are often shortened; Psa. lv. 23, and judgments for their sin are oftentimes transmitted to posterity; Gen. xlix. 7; 2 Sam. xxi. 1. For the expiation of an uncertain murder, see Deut. xxi. 1—9. To stimulate the Israelites to vigilance in the discovery and punishment of murder Jehovah taught them that the land wherein he desired to dwell among them would become polluted by the shedding of innocent blood, and could only become cleansed by the atonement of the blood of the murderer; Numb. xxxv. 33, 34.

MURDER, Rom. 1. 29; Matt. 15. 19; Gal. 5. 21; Rev. 9. 21.

Job 24. 14. m. rising with light

1 Pet. 4. 16. none suffer as a m.

1 John 3. 15. who hateth his brother is m. no m. hath eternal life abiding in him

MURDERERS. "Leddest out into the wilderness, four thousand men that were murderers;" Acts xxi. 38. Not actually murderers, but banditti; the name is sicarii, originally Latin, derived from sica, a short sword, or sabre, or crooked knife, which could be easily concealed under the garment.

MURMUR, to complain discontentedly, Deut. 1. 27; Ps. 106. 25; Jude 16; Ex. 16. 7; Phil. 2. 14.

MUSE, Ps. 39. 3, & 143. 5.

MUSHI, Mew'-shy, he that touches.—The son of Merari, chief of the family of the Levites, named Mushites; Num. iii. 20.

MUSIC is of very ancient date, if it be not coeval with the human race. Jubal, who lived before the deluge, was the father or master of all those who played upon the harp and organ; Gen. iv. 21. But vocal music must have existed long before the use of instruments. Melody is a natural mode of giving utterance to the grateful emotions of the mind, a faculty conferred upon man by his beneficent Creator for that noble purpose. Hence the Psalmist calls upon his tongue, the glory of the frame, to awake up, and celebrate his praise; and calls in the aid of the psaltery and harp when he would "sing and give praise;" Psa. lvii. 7—9. Music, both vocal and instrumental, was much cultivated among the Hebrews. What a magnificent concert filled the shores of the Red Sea after Israel had passed over: See Exod. xv. 1—20. The words were adapted to the occasion; the music to the words; the performers to the music. There we behold Moses leading the bolder, rougher notes of manly voices. Here, Miriam the prophetess, his sister, in sweet accord, blending the softer harmony of female strains with the notes of the tumbrel, in praise of their great Deliverer. Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, had the direction of the music of the tabernacle under David, and of the temple under Solomon. Asaph had four sons, Jeduthun had six, and Heman fourteen. These twenty-four Levites, sons of the three great masters of the music of the temple, were at the head of twenty-four bands of musicians, which were very numerous, and served in the temple by turns. They were arranged in order about the altar of burnt-sacrifices. Those of the family of Kohath were in the middle, those of Merari at the left, and those of Gershon's family on the right hand. As the whole business of their lives was to learn and practise music, it must be supposed that they understood it perfectly well, whether it were vocal or instrumental. See Pea. lxxxvii. 7; Ezra iii. 9—11; 1 Chron. xv. 16—24; 2 Chron. vii. 6; xxix. 26.

MUSIC. "And all the daughters of music shall be brought low;" Ec. xii. 4. The voice, that wonderful instrument, almost endless in the strength and variety of its tones, becomes feeble and unmusical, and merriment and pleasure are no more! Also the ear shall lose its quickness in listening to the charms of musical sounds, or the once entrancing voice of song.

MUSTARD. "The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in the field: which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown it is the greatest among herbs, and it becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come, and lodge in the branches thereof;" Matt. xiii. 31, 32; Mark iv. 31; Luke xiii. 19; xvii. 6. Mustard is a plant, the seed of which is very small, but which in hot climates becomes a tree, and acquires a great size, so as to be truly the "greatest among herbs." Mention is made in the Talmud of enormous mustard plants, into one of which the owner climbed, as into a fig-tree; and another was so large as to cover a tent.

Mr. Frost mentions another species of Mustard, which grows abundantly in Palestine; has the smallest seed of any tree, and obtains as great an altitude as any other tree in that country. Linnaeus mentions a species whose branches were real wood. In the southern parts of America there are mustard-trees higher than a man on horseback, and the birds build on them. Hamilton, in 1840, saw in Upper Egypt a mustard-tree higher than he could reach, and its stem as thick as his arm.

MUTUAL.—The conjoint action of faith; Rom. i. 12.

MUZZLE, 'thou shalt not muzzle the ox,' &c. The Jews employed oxen in threshing the corn, which drew a wooden instrument after them. They were not muzzled, so that they might renew their strength by eating. At the present day the Easterns never muzzle the ox so employed, although he is muzzled for other labour; Deut. xxv. 4; 1 Cor. ix. 9; 1 Tim. 5. 18.

MYRA, My'-ra, Greek, "I flow, pour out, weep."—A city of Lycia; Acts xxvii. 5.

MYRRH.—A medical gum from the myrrh-tree. Its taste is bitter and acrid, with a peculiar aromatic flavour, but very nauseous; its smell, though strong, is not disagreeable: it is to be chosen in clear pieces, light, friable, and of a bitter taste. The magi who came from the east to worship our Saviour, Matt. ii. 11, made him a present of myrrh. In the gospel of Mark xv. 23, mention is made of wine mingled with myrrh, which was offered to Jesus Christ at his passion, to deaden, as it is thought, the acuteness of his pain; and among the Hebrews, they were accustomed to give those that were executed some such stupefying draught.

MYRTLE.—A well known beautiful plant, mentioned Neh. viii. 15; Isa. lv. 13; Zech. i. 8. The blossoms are perfectly white and intensely fragrant. In this uncongenial climate, its size is very diminutive, but in the Levant, it grows eight or ten feet high.

Savary says of the forest of Plantanea, "Myrtles, intermixed with laurel roses, grow in the valleys to the height of ten feet. Their snow-white flowers, bordered with a purple edging, appear to peculiar advantage under the verdant foliage. Each myrtle is loaded with them, and they emit perfumes more exquisite than those of the rose itself. They enchant every one, and the soul is filled with the softest sensations."

The church is compared to the myrtle. "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off; Isa. lv. 13. In Isa. xli. 19, it is said, "I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah-tree, and the myrtle." That is, I will adorn the dreary and barren waste with trees famed for their stature, and the grandeur of their appearance, the beauty of their form, and the fragrance of their odour.

MYSIA, Mish'-e-a, criminal, abominable.—A province in Asia Minor, south of Bythnia, where Paul preached; Acts xvi. 7, 8. Cicero, in his Orations, calls the people a despicable race.

MYSTERY.—A secret; something which, at present, we do not fully understand. Thus the doctrine of the Trinity, the incarnation, the union which exists between Christ and his people, &c., are mysteries. Many things which were mysteries anciently, are now made known by Christ and his apostles; and many things in the Bible which are mysteries to the irreligious, or to feeble Christians, are not so to the good and studious. Paul speaking of the antichristian spirit, says, "the mystery of iniquity doth already work." The spirit of antichrist has begun to operate, but the operation is latent and unperceived. In this sense also the same apostle applies the words, "mystery," and "mystery of Christ," in a peculiar manner to the calling of the Gentiles; Eph. iii. 3—9. Compare also Rom. xvi. 25, 26; Eph. iii. 9; vi. 19; Col. i. 26, 27.

NAAM, Nay'-am.—Son of Caleb, 1 Chron. iv. 15.

NAAMAH, Nay'-a-mah.—Daughter of Lamech, Gen. iv. 22.—An Ammonitess, wife of Solomon, and mother of Rehoboam, 1 Kings xiv. 21.—A city, Job ii. 11.

NAAMAN, Nay'-a-man, beautiful, agreeable, pleasant.—A son of Benjamin; Gen. xlv. 21.—Also, a son of Bela; 1 Chron. viii. 4.

NAAMAN.—A favourite general in the army of Benhadad, king of Syria; 2 Kings v. 1, 2. He was afflicted with leprosy, for which he could obtain no relief from the healing art. Through the instrumentality of a female domestic, he was directed to apply for relief to Elisha, the prophet. By him he was healed. The history of his important cure is recorded, 2 Kings v. 1—14.

NAARAI, Nay'-ar-a-i.—One of David's valiant men; 1 Chr. xi. 37.

NAARAN, Nay'-a-ran.—A city of Ephraim; 1 Chron. vii. 28.

NAARATH, Nay'-a-rath, a maid, watching.—A city of the tribe of Ephraim, five miles from Jericho; Josh. xvi. 7.

NAASHON, Na-ash'-on, that foretells, serpent.—Aaron's brother-in-law, Exod. vi. 23.

NAASSON, Na-as'-son.—The same as Naashon; Matt. i. 4.

NABAL, Nay'-bal, fool, stupid.—A rich churlish man of the tribe of Judah, and the race of Caleb; 1 Sam. xxv. 3. Though he was rich in flocks and herds, he refused hospitality to David. The resentment of the latter was prevented by Abigail, Nabal's wife. After Nabal's death, which appeared to be a judgment from heaven, David took Abigail to wife.

NABOTH, Nay'-both, fruits, words.—An Israelite, of the city of Jezreel, who had a fine vineyard near Ahab's palace. The king coveted this vineyard, and requested Naboth to sell it him, or exchange it for another. Naboth would not consent, and he did right, for it was degrading to a Hebrew to alienate the property of his ancestors; Lev. xxv. 23, 24. The refusal made Ahab sick; and then the case was managed by Jezebel, the wife of Ahab. She had Naboth falsely accused, and stoned to death. See 1 Kings xxi.

NACHON, Nay'-kon, ready.—A man mentioned 2 Sam. vi. 6.

NACHOR, Nay'-kor, hoarse, angry.—A person mentioned Luke iii. 34.

NADAB, Nay'-dab, free, princely.—The son of Aaron, and brother to Abihu. He was slain for offering strange fire; Lev. x. 1.—Also, the son of Jeroboam, who succeeded his father A. M. 3050; 1 Kings xv. 25. He reigned only two years, and was assassinated by Baasha.

NAGGE, Nag'-gee, brightness.—An ancestor of Joseph, husband of Mary, the mother of Jesus; Luke iii. 25.

NAHALIEL, Na-hay'-le-el.—An encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness; Num. xxi. 19.

NAHALLAL, Na-hal'-lal.—A city of the tribe of Zebulun; Josh. xix. 15.

NAHAM, Nay'-ham.—A descendant of Judah; 1 Chron. iv. 19.

NAHAMANI, Na-ham'-a-ny.—A returned captive; Neh. vii. 7.

NAHARI, Na-har'-i, my nostrils, hoarse, hot.—A native of Beeroth; a person of great heroism; 2 Sam. xxiii. 37.

NAHASH, Nay'-ash, serpent, brass, foretelling.—A barbarous king of the Ammonites, who attacked Jabesh-gilead, a month after the election of Saul to be king of Israel; 1 Sam. xi. 2.—King of the Ammonites, and a friend of David, probably the son of the former; 2 Sam. x. 2. See also 2 Sam. xvii. 25, 27.

NAHATH, Nay'-hath.—The son of Reuel, and grandson to Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 13.

NAHI, Nah'-by.—Son of Vophsi, a spy; Num. xiii. 14.

NAHOR, Nay'-hor, hoarse, hot, angry.—The son of Serug; was born A. M. 1849, and died at the age of one hundred and forty-eight; Gen. xi. 22—24.—Also, the son of Terah, and brother of Abraham; Gen. xi. 26.

NAHSHON, Nah'-shon, that foretells, serpent.—Aaron's brother-in-law, Exod. vi. 23.—The son of Aminadab, head of the tribe of Judah; Num. vii. 12, 17.

NAHUM, Nay'-hum, comforter, penitent.—The seventh of the twelve lesser prophets, a native of Elkosh, a little village of Galilee. He uttered his predictions 713 years before Christ, in the time of Hezekiah. He gives a sublime description of the majesty of God, and the blessedness of those who trust in him. He foretells the fall of Nineveh, on account of its people relapsing into their former wickedness, after the mission of Jonah. The book of Nahum will be best understood by being read as a continuation, or supplement to the book of Jonah.

NAIL 'in a sure place,' Isa. xxii. 23.—The Easterns fix nails in the brick-work as they are building. They are large nails with square heads, the ends being bent, so as to make them cramp-irons. To "give us a nail in his holy place," means a constant and sure abode; Ezra ix. 8. The dignity and propriety of the metaphor appears from Zech. x. 4. "From him shall be the corner stone, from him the nail, from him the battle vow, from him every ruler together." This refers to Judah; from his tribe all strength, counsel, and excellency came. See 1 Chr. v. 2. The Targum says, "The King Messiah is here intended;" Heb. vii. 14; Eph. ii. 20; Isa. xxii. 23.

NAILING 'it to his cross,' Col. ii. 14.—Laws, bonds, &c., were cancelled, a nail being driven through the table on which they were written, and it was hung up to public view.

NAIL, Judg. 4. 21, & 5. 26.

Ezra 9. 8. give a n. in holy place
Ecc. 12. 11. n. fastened by the master of assemblies

Is. 22. 23. as a n. in a sure place
Zech. 10. 4. out of him came n.

NAIN, Nay'-in, beauty, pleasantness.—A city of Galilee, two miles south of Mount Tabor, where Jesus Christ restored the widow's son to life; Luke vii. 11.

NAIOTH, Nay'-i-oth, or Nay'-e-oth, beauties.—A village near Rama, where David fled to avoid Saul; 1 Sam. xix. 23.

NAKED often signifies in Scripture to be without the upper garment, that is, not completely dressed; 1 Sam. xix. 24; 2 Sam. vi. 20; 2 Chr. xxviii. 15; Isa. xx. 2; Mark xiv. 52; John xxi. 7.

NAKED denotes shame, degradation, and spiritual destitution; Rev. iii. 17. Having no interest in the finished work of Christ—the robe of righteousness.

NAKEDNESS.—"Seen her nakedness," Lam. i. 8. This alludes to the barbarous custom of ancient conquerors who cruelly stripped their captives naked, and forced them to travel in that condition. Even the most delicate females were subject to this treatment.

NAKED and OPENED, Heb. iv. 13.—A graceful allusion to the custom in sacrificing, of flaying the victim, and cutting it open, whereby all the vitals and inwards are exposed to full view.

NAKED, Gen. 2. 25, & 3. 7, 11.

Ec. 32. 25. the people were n.

16. 15. keep garments lest he walk n.

NAME.—The word by which any person or thing is distinguished or made known. Among the Jews names were deliberately and thoughtfully given. A child was named according to the place, the character, and circumstances of the family to which it belonged.

NAME, 'I know thee by name,' Exod. xxxiii. 12, 17; expresses distinguishing friendship and familiarity. The kings of the east know little of their subjects; and when they invite them to their presence, it is esteemed a great mark of favour.

NAME CHANGED.—A common practice in the east on being promoted; corresponding, in some respects, with modern promotions in the ranks of nobility; Gen. xvii. 5; xxxii. 28; xli. 45; Dan. i. 6, 7.

NAME WRITTEN 'that no man knew,' Rev. xix. 12. The JHVH, Jehovah, which the Jews never attempted to pronounce.

NAMES.—The persons called by them. See Acts i. 15; Rev. iii. 4.

NAMES 'written,' or enrolled; these allude to the Olympic racers, whose names were entered in a book. See Phil. iv. 3; also to the enrolment of citizens; Luke x. 20; Rev. xiii. 8; xvii. 8.

NAOMI, Nay'-o-my my beautiful, or agreeable one.—The wife of Elimelech. A famine in Canaan caused them to retire to the land of Moab. There their two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, married Orpah and Ruth. About ten years after, Elimelech and his sons died without leaving any children. The return of Naomi to her country, and her subsequent history, are beautifully narrated in the book of Ruth.

NAPHISH, Nay'-fish, the soul, he that refreshes himself.—A son of Ishmael; Gen. xxv. 15.

NAPHTALI, Naf'-ta-ly, comparison, my wrestling.—The sixth son of Jacob, by Billah; Gen. xxx. 8. He had four sons; Gen. xlvi. 24. Bochart translates the blessing which Jacob pronounced upon this tribe as follows:—

Naphtali is a spreading oak Producing beautiful branches.—Gen. 49. 1.

This tribe was very prolific in children. From his four sons; Gen. xlvi. 24, in the course of 215 years, there sprang 53,400 effective men. But probably the words refer to the fertility of their soil, and to the care and blessing of the Lord, to which Moses refers; Deut. xxxiii. 23. This tribe occupied that district in the northern part of Canaan, between Mount Lebanon to the north, and the sea of Cimmereth to the south, and Asher to the west, and the river Jordan to the east.

NAPHTUHIM, Naf'-tu-him. —The fourth son of Mizraim, the son of Ham, the patriarch; Gen. x. 13.

NAPKIN, 'his face was bound about with a napkin,' John xi 44. If the Jews buried as the Egyptians, the whole face was not covered with the napkin, but it only was wound round the forehead, and under the chin, so that on his returning to life, he might easily see his way out of the sepulchre.

NARCISSUS, Nar-sis'-sus, surprise.—A Christian at Rome greeted by Paul; Rom. xvi. 11. It is doubted whether this person was converted, as the apostle does not salute him, but his household; or, as the margin reads, his friends.

NARROW, close, limited, contrary to wide; Num. xxii. 26. Spoken of the way of life; Matt. vii. 14. "Narrow is the way;" nothing renders this way either narrow or difficult to any person, but sin. Let all the world leave their sins, and all the world may walk a-breast in this way.

NARROW, 1 Kings 6. 4; Prov. 23. 27; Is. 28. 20, & 49. 19; Matt. 7. 14.

NATHAN, Nay'-than, giver, gift.—The son of David and Bathsheba, the father of Mattatha; Luke iii. 31; 1 Chron. iii. 5. Also a prophet of the Lord in the time of king David, and who had a great share in the confidence of this prince; 2 Sam. vii. 3, &c. See also 2 Sam. xxiii. 36; Ezra viii. 16. We find him first mentioned when David purposed to build the temple; 2 Sam. vii. 2. He was afterwards the faithful reprove of David for his awful sin in the case of Uriah; 2 Sam. xii. 1—14. His parable is one of the finest specimens of the pathetic style in the Old Testament. The time and manner of Nathan's death are unknown.—Also, an officer in David's army; 1 Chron. xi. 38.—And a returned captive; Ezra viii. 16.

NATHANAEL, Na-than'-a-el, the gift of God.—One of the disciples of Christ; John i. 45, 46. He is supposed to have been Bartholomew, one of Christ's disciples. See also Num. i. 8; vii. 18; 1 Chron. ii. 14; xv. 24; xxiv. 6; 2 Chron. xvii. 7; xxxv. 9; Ezra x. 22.

NATION signifies all the inhabitants of a particular country; Deut. iv. 34. A country or kingdom; Ex. xxxiv. 10; Rev. vii. 9. Countrymen, natives of the same stock; Acts xxvi. 4. The father, head, and original of a nation or people; Gen. xxv. 23. The heathen or Gentiles; Isa. lv. 5.

NATION, 'I will make him a great nation,' Gen. xxi. 18. Alluding to Ishmael. The Arabians are his immediate descendants, and to this day exactly fulfil the prophecy. They are numerous, powerful, and distinct from the nations around them. In them we see the race of the wild man, whose hand should be against every man. They are wild, fierce, savage, ranging in the deserts, and not easily tamed to society. They are continually at war with the rest of the world; but have never been subdued. They are in these, and other respects a standing miracle—one of those mysterious facts which establish the truth of prophecy.

NATIONS, 'before him shall be gathered all nations;' Matt. xxv. 32. Suppose the earth, on an average, has always been as populous as it is now, and that it contains 8 hundred millions of inhabitants, and if we reckon 32 years for a generation, at the end of which period the whole human race is renewed; it will follow that 146 billions 800 millions of human beings have existed since the creation, reckoning 5870 years from Adam to the present time. Had mankind never died, there would have been nearly 184 times the present number of the earth's inhabitants now in existence. If we suppose that before the close of time, as many human beings will be brought into existence, as have already existed in past time, there will be found at the general Resurrection about 293 billions of mankind.

COUNTING A BILLION.—What is a billion? The reply is very simple: a million times a million. This is quickly written, and quicker still pronounced. But no man is able to count it. You count 160 or 170 a minute; but let us even suppose that you go as far as 200 then an hour will produce 12,000; a day 288,000, and a year, or 365 days, 105,120,000. Let us suppose now, that Adam at the beginning of his existence had begun to count, had continued to do so, and was counting still—he would not even now, according to the usually supposed age of our globe, have counted near enough. For to count a billion, he would require 9,512 years, 34 days, 5 hours, 20 minutes, according to the above rule. Now supposing we were to allow the poor counter twelve hours daily for rest, eating, and sleeping—he would need 19,024 years, 69 days, 10 hours, 40 minutes.

“Before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them from one another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats.” In Attica the number of sheep and goats is computed at 160,000, and in the flocks they are intermixed. They shear the goats at the same time with the sheep in April or May. When the flocks are very large, they do not mix the goats and sheep together. Hence Virgil says:—“Thyrsis and Corydon drove their flocks together; Thyrsis his sheep; and Corydon his goats, their udders distended with milk.”

Jam. 1. 21. all superfluity of n.

NAUM, Nay'-um.—See NAHUM; Luke iii. 25.

NAVEL, should rather be read 'waist,' Song vii. 2.

NAVEL, part of the belly. “Behemoth has his strength in his loins, and his force in the navel of his belly.” This refers to his great agility, notwithstanding his bulk; by his astonishing power he was able to take vast springs, and make amazing bounds; Job xl. 16. The influence of pure religion is as “health to the navel, and marrow to the bones;” Prov. iii. 8.

NAVY, a fleet of ships; 1 Kings ix. 26, 27. “King Solomon made a navy of ships in Ezion-geber, which is beside Eloth, on the shore of the Red Sea,—and Hiram sent in the navy his servants, shipmen that had knowledge of the sea, with the servants of Solomon.” This navy of ships traded to Ophir, according to some, to the East Indies. But it is the opinion of others, that Solomon's fleets, after passing the straits of Babelmandel, held their course along the south-east coast of Africa, as far as the kingdom of Sofala, a country celebrated for its rich mines of gold and silver, and abounding in all the other articles which composed the cargoes of the Jewish ships. Solomon had been before Hiram's partner in his ships, which made him a rich return of 120 talents of gold, ver. 14, that encouraged him to build a navy of his own.

NAZARENE, Naz'-a-reen, kept, flower.—An inhabitant of Nazareth; Matt. ii. 23.

NAZARETH, Naz'-a-reth, separated, sanctified.—A small city in the tribe of Zebulun, in Lower Galilee, 70 miles north of Jerusalem, now called Nasseria. It stands on the side of a barren rocky eminence, or hill facing the south-east. It was noted for wickedness; Mark i. 9; John i. 46. Here our Saviour laboured during the 30 years of his private life; but contempt of his ministry, and the attempt to murder him, caused him partially to forsake the place, and to work but few miracles among them; Luke iv. 16—29. It has continued to this day to be a place of some note; and it now contains, according to the account of Mr. Fisk, about 500 houses, and its population from two to four thousand. Among the population are Greeks, Catholics, Greek-Catholics, and Maronites. Mr. Fisk was hospitably entertained in one of their convents.

From the Bible Class Reader, we select a few particulars respecting Nazareth.—It seems as if 15 mountains met to form an enclosure for this delightful spot; they rise round it like fortresses to guard it from intrusion. It is a rich and beautiful field in the midst of barren mountains, abounding in gardens planted with vines, fig-trees, hedges of prickly pear, and it has dense rich grass for pasture.

Nazareth is about six miles northwest from Mount Tabor, and about seventy miles north of Jerusalem. It is now called Nasseria, and is a small well-built place containing nearly three thousand inhabitants. The houses are built of stone, and are generally two stories high. The place abounds with fig-trees, olive-trees, and vines, and the crops of corn are scarcely equalled in all Palestine.

The natives of Galilee were deemed the vilest of the inhabitants of Palestine, and the citizens of Nazareth were the most worthless of all. A stigma of reproach was therefore indelibly fixed on every Nazarene. The inevitable consequence of Joseph's choosing it for his residence, was the accomplishment in Jesus, from his youth, of the prophecy that Messiah should be accounted a despised and contemptible man. Thus we read; "And he (Joseph) came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, 'He shall be called a Nazarene;'" Matt. ii. 23. The reproach of Nazareth was not unmerited; for the inhabitants were very wicked; Matt. xiii. 58; Luke iv. 28, 29. Hence Nathanael said unto Philip, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" John i. 46.

There is a precipice about two miles from the city, which the monks pretend is the place to which the people carried Christ in order to throw him down; Luke iv. 29. But this is a foolish invention, and contrary to history, which says the place was "the brow of the hill whereon their city was built."

The principal curiosity in Nazareth is the convent of the Latin friars, a very commodious building. Within the convent is the church of the annunciation, in which the spot is shown where the angel stood when he announced to the virgin the tidings of the Messiah. Behind the altar is a cavern divided into small grottoes, where the virgin is said to have lived; her kitchen, parlour, and bed-room are shown; also a narrow hole in the rock, in which the child Jesus once hid himself from his persecutors. But such pretension appears absurd and foolish to every intelligent mind. The church of the annunciation is allowed to be the finest in Syria. But alas! much of the worship in these pretended sacred places savours too much of mummery and superstition.

Should the world, grown wiser in its reverence for the germs of sacred things, yet Christian still, ever want "authentic holy places," instead of the mean and apocryphal sanctuaries consecrated by rude ages, it will build its temple on this height of Nazareth. There, on the spot where Christianity arose, and in the focus of the Founder's agency, should the great church be raised in which all Christians might pray. There, too, on the soil where Joseph the carpenter sleeps and thousands of forgotten Nazarenes who never looked beyond the horizon of their valley, would be a better station than any in the world beside for the philosopher to contemplate the course of human affairs, to find solace for their contingency, to gain assurance of the divine end which the world pursues through countless falterings, and in spite of the universal vanity.

M. Renan, in his Life of Jesus, says—"At Nazareth the cold of the winter is keen, and the climate very healthy. The houses differ little from those cubes of stone, without pretensions to elegance which cover the richest parts of Lebanon, and which, amid vines and fig trees, are still very agreeable. The neighbourhood is delightful, and no spot in the world was ever so made for dreams of absolute good. Nazareth is a delicious retreat, —the only place perhaps in Palestine where one feels a little relief of soul from the oppressive burden of an unparalleled desolation. The people are kind and cheerful; and the gardens are fresh and green. Antoninus Martyr, at the end of the sixth century, draws an enchanting picture of the fertility of the neighbourhood, comparing it to Paradise; and there are valleys on the western side which fully bear out his description. The fountain, which once collected round it the life and brightness of the little town, is destroyed; its cracked channels yield now nothing but turbid water. But the beauty of the women who gather there in the evening, — a beauty noticed as early as the sixth century, and regarded as a gift of the Virgin Mary,—is strikingly preserved; it is the Syrian type with all its languishing grace. Mary doubtless was there almost every day, and took her place, pitcher on shoulder, in the line with her forgotten companions. Antoninus Martyr observes that the Jewish women, elsewhere disdainful to Christians, are here full of graciousness. And, to the present day, religious animosities have less life at Nazareth than elsewhere.

Dr. Wilson says,—“The sphere of observation is here as much enlarged, as below it is contracted. To the north-west of us, overlooking a part of the country considerably wooded, we had the bay of Akka and Haifa, with the clear blue expanse of the Mediterranean Sea, spreading itself in the distance beyond. South of this, and striking to the south-east, we had the whole ridge of Carmel before us, which, though stripped of much of the glory of its olden forests, still presents striking memorials of that excellency for which it was so distinguished. To the south, and south-west of us somewhat circular in its form, is seen, bounded by the picturesque mountains of Samaria, the great plain, the battle-field of the country both in ancient and modern times, and probably the real or typical site of the battle of Armageddon.”

“To the east and south-east, we had the little Hermon, which, though bald on its crown, has considerable vegetation on its shoulders; also Mount Tabor, standing apart in its own nobility, and like nature's own pyramid, not commemorative of death, but instinct with life, and clothed, with verdure to its summits.” “Also the deep valley of the Jordan, and the sea of Tiberias, with the equable hills and mountains of Bashan and Golan. To the north we had the hills and mountains forming the continuance of the Lebanon, and to the north-east those forming the termination of the Anti-Lebanon." "Also with Jabel-esh-sheik, the true Hermon, the chief of all the mountains of the land, moistened with the copious dews which descend from his hoary locks. Many villages, including a considerable number mentioned in Scripture, were distinctly visible."

NAZARITE, a separated one.—Such persons were set apart to serve the Lord more strictly than others. Some devoted themselves perpetually, some only for a limited time; Num. vi. 1—21; Judges xiii. 5, 7; xvi. 17; Amos ii. 11. The Nazarite consecrated to the service of God by his parents, continued all his life, without letting his hair grow, or drinking any wine. He was not to touch any dead body. All the days of his separation he was holy, and he was to be incessantly employed in religious acts. Samson and John the Baptist were perpetual Nazarites, and as such consecrated by their parents. Maimonides says, that he who would partake in Nazariteship of another, went to the Temple, and said to the priest, "In such a time, such a one will finish his Nazariteship; I intend to defray the charge attending the shaving off his hair, either in part, or in the whole." When St. Paul came to Jerusalem (Acts xxi. 23, 24), James, with other brethren, advised, that to quiet the minds of the converted Jews, he should unite with four persons, who had vows of Nazariteship, and contribute to their charges and ceremonies, by which the people would perceive that he did not disregard the law, as they had.

NEAH, Ne'-ah.—A city of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 13.

NEAPOLIS, Ne-ap'-po-lis, new city.—A sea-port of Macedonia, on the borders of Thrace, near the Ægean Sea. Its modern name is Neapoli; Acts xvi. 11.

NEAR, nigh, at hand, Gen. 19. 29; Psa. 22. 11. The name of God is said to be n. 119. 151, & 148. 14; Is. 55. 6, & 57. 19; Jer. 12. 2.

NEARIAH, Ne-a-ry'-ah.—A son of Ishi, 1 Chron. iv. 42.

NEBAI, Neb'-a-i.—A Hebrew of rank; Neh. x. 19.

NEBAIOTH, Ne-bay'-oth, or Ne-bay'-yoth, prophecies, fruits.—The eldest son of Ishmael, Gen. xxv. 13. —The term is used to denote the country of Arabia, in which the descendants of Ishmael settled. Their territory includes northern Arabia, from the Euphrates to the Elanitic gulf of the Red Sea. Its capital was Petra. "The rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee;" Isa. lx. 7. This is a beautiful figure of speech to denote the gathering of the Gentiles, as free-will offerings, to the Messiah.

NEBAJOTH, Ne-bay'-joth.—The same as NEBAIOTH; Gen. xxv. 13.

NEBALLAT, Ne-bal'-lat.—A city, Neh. xi. 34.

NEBAT, Ne'-bat, beholder.—The father of Jeroboam, the first king of the ten tribes, who revolted from the house of David; 1 Kings xi. 26.

NEBO, Ne'-bo, that speaks, prophecies, fructifies.—A city in the tribe of Reuben, Num. xxxii. 38.—The name of a city of Judah, Ezra ii. 29.—The name of an idol of the Babylonians, Isa. xlvi. 1. It was thought by some to be the same as Dagon; Isa. xlvi. 1.

NEBO.—The western point of the hills called Abarim was very lofty, and obtained the appellation of Nebo, or the High. The most elevated summit of Nebo was denominated Pisgah, and commanded a prospect of great extent of country on both sides of the Jordan. To this eminence Moses ascended before his death, and viewed the promised land, which he was not permitted to enter; Deut. xxxii. 49, and xxxiv. 1.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR, Neb-ew-kad-nez'-zar, tears and groans of judgment: surnamed the Great, Nebuchadrezzar, or Nabopolassar, the most famed king of Babylon. His father, Nabopolassar, having raised an immense army to quell a revolt of the Syrians, Phœnicians, &c., he was appointed to its command, and with it not only subdued those provinces, but overran Cauaan. Moab, Ammon, Assyria, Egypt, &c., and made them tributary. He carried to Babylon, among many other princes of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; whom he called Belteshazzar, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. These, and other young captives, he caused to be trained up in all the learning of the Chaldeans, that they might serve in the court; 2 Kings xxiv.; Dan. i. He twice afterward invaded and chastised Judea; 2 Chr. xxxvi.; Ezek. xxv., xxxv. About A. M. 3399, his father died, and he became king of Babylon. In the second year of his reign, he had a surprising dream, but entirely forgot it. All the diviners being applied to in vain, Daniel declared to him both the dream and the interpretation. He was so astonished, and yet so convinced of the truth, that he fell on his face before Daniel, and acknowledged his God to be the God of gods and Lord of lords. He made Daniel chief of the wise men, and governor of the province of Babylon; and made Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, subordinate governors in the same place; Dan. ii.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S MALADY, Dan. iv. 25, 26, 31—33. All circumstances of it, as related by Daniel, perfectly agree with hypochondriacal madness. By some of the ancients such persons were called (lukanthropoi,) wolf-men; and (kunanthropoi,) dog-men; because they went abroad in the night, imitating wolves or dogs.

NEBUSHASBAN, Neb-ew-shas'-ban.—A general of Nebuchadnezzar's army, Jer. xxxix. 13.

NEBUZARADAN, Neb-ew-zar'-adan, fruits or prophecies of judgment, winnower.—A general of Nebuchadnezzar's army, and a chief officer of his household; 2 Kings xxv.; Jer. xxxix.

NECESSITY, or NECESSARY, is what cannot but be. Moral necessity is that, the condition of which are placed in moral things; thus a conscientious man cannot be guilty of any thing that is contrary to the law of God, Heb. ix. 16, in consequence of his being conscientious. Necessity signifies constraint; 2 Cor. ix. 7; poverty, Rom. xii. 13. "Distributing to the necessity of saints." Relieve your poorer brethren, according to the power which God has given you.

NECESSARY, Job 23. 12; Acts 13. 46, & 15. 28; Tit. 3. 14; Heb. 9. 23.

NECESSITY, Rom. 12. 13; Acts 20. 34; 1 Cor. 9. 16; 2 Cor. 6. 4, & 9. 7, & 12. 10; Phil. 14; Heb. 9. 16.

NECHO, Ne'-ko, lame, beaten.—A king of Egypt, who carried his arms as far as the Euphrates, and conquered Carchemish; 2 Chr. xxxv. 20.

NECK.—'Joseph fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck,' Gen. xlv. 14. The Arabs mutually kiss the hand, head, or shoulder of each other. Hence the expressions, falling on the neck and kissing a person, allude to this Eastern way of kissing the shoulder in an embrace; Gen. xxxiii. 4; xlv. 29; Luke xv. 20; Acts xx. 37, &c.

NECKS.—"Put your feet upon the necks of these kings," Josh. x. 24; Ps. xviii. 40. Treading on the neck of a vanquished enemy was a very common practice. It was practised upon great captives especially, and must have been very mortifying to their minds. The emperor Valerianus, having been treacherously taken prisoner by Sapor, king of Persia, was treated by him as the basest and most abject slave; for the Persian monarch commanded the unhappy monarch to bow himself down, and offer him his back, on which he set his foot, in order to mount his chariot, or his horse, whenever he had occasion.—When Dioxippus had thrown Horratus violently on the ground he put his foot on his neck, and drew out his sword, and raising his club, would have killed the champion had he not been prevented by the king.

NEGINOTH, Ne'-gi-noth, to strike the chord.—A stringed musical instrument. The Title of Psalm iv; vi; liv; lxxvi.

NEGLECT signifies to disregard; Matt. xviii. 17. "If he neglect to hear them." If he slight private admonition, and will neither be ashamed of his faults, nor amend them, then "tell it to the church;" and "if he neglect to hear the church, let him be to thee as an heathen man, and a publican." Let him be secluded from special ordinances, degraded from the dignity of a church-member; but still in a position of being restored, and received again, when a proper conduct is manifested.

NEGLECT to hear, Matt. 18. 17.

NEHELAMITE, Ne-hel'-a-mite, dreamer, vale, brook.—One who pretended to inspire dreams; Jer. xxix. 24.

NEHEMIAH, Ne-he-my'-ah, consolation, rest, conduct of the Lord.—He was the son of Hachaliah, born at Babylon during the captivity. He was, perhaps, of the royal family of David. His being cup-bearer in the Persian court, and his succeeding Zerubbabel in the government of the Jews, tend to confirm this opinion. Furnished with royal letters of authority, he went to Jerusalem and spent twelve years in labouring for its restoration. He afterward returned again to the Holy City, and probably died there. He wrote the book of the Old Testament which bears his name. Nehemiah was not a prophet but an historian, and his narrative begins about twelve years after that of Ezra closes. In his days flourished MALACHI the prophet, and HERODOTUS and THUCYDIDES, the two most ancient profane historians whose works are extant.

NEHEMIAH, Book of.—There can be no question that Nehemiah wrote this book. It is written in his name, and, differing from all the preceding books, it is written in the first person. The register in ch. xii. has been added by some subsequent author; probably by the authority of the great synagogue. The history presents us with a faithful narrative of the commencement, progress, and completion of the noble and patriotic undertaking of Nehemiah, of restoring Jerusalem from the ruin in which it lay to a state of dignity, and his subsequent return to Shushan; comprising the commission of Nehemiah, and his arrival at Jerusalem ch. i. ii. 12; the building and dedication of the city; ch. ii. 13; vii. 4; xii. 27—44; a register of the persons who first returned from Babylon, and an account of the oblations at the temple; ch. vii. 5—73; the reading of the law and celebration of the feast of Tabernacles; ch. viii; a solemn fast and the renewal of the covenant; ch. ix. x; names and families of those who dwelt in Jerusalem, — of the priests, Levites, and singers; ch. xi. xii. 26; occurrences at Jerusalem during Nehemiah's absence; ch. xiii; his return to Jerusalem, and the second reformation effected by him; ch. xiii. 7—31.

The administration of Nehemiah lasted about 36 years. The Old Testament history closes with this book.

NEHILOTH.—A wind instrument, or a sort of flute; Psalms 5, title.

NEHUM, Ne'-hum, a comforter, penitent leader of them.—One who returned from captivity; Neh. vii. 7.

NEHUSHTA, Ne-bush'-tah, snake, soothsayer.—The daughter of Elnathan; 2 Kings xxiv. 8.

NEHUSHTAN, Ne-bush'-tan, which is of brass or copper, a broken trifle.—The name given by Hezekiah to the serpent of brass made by Moses; 2 Kings xviii. 4.

NEIEL, Ne'-i-el, commotion, moving of God.—A city in the tribe of Asher; Josh. xix. 27.

NEIGH,—To make a noise like a horse. An enticement to unchastity is so called; Jer. v. 8, & viii. 16, & xiii. 27.

NEIGHBOUR.—The word is derived from the Anglo-Saxon nae, or naer, near; and buer, to dwell. Any person whom you know, who dwells hard by, or one who passes near you, is your neighbour. Also every man to whom we have an opportunity of doing good; Matt. xxii. 39.—One who pities and relieves another in distress; Luke x. 36.—One who needs help; Prov. iii. 28. Our Saviour reproved the Pharisees for using the word in a restricted sense, and informed them that all men were their neighbours; and also that their charity should be exercised even to their enemies; Matt. v. 43, 44; Luke x. 29—37.

NEIGHBOUR, Ex. 3. 22, & 11. 2.

NEKEB, Ne'-keb, a pipe.—A city in the tribe of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 33.

NEKODA, Ne-ko'-da, painted, inconstant.—One whose children were of the order of Nethinims; Ezra ii. 48.

NEMUEL, Nem-yew'-el, the sleeping of God.—The son of Eliah; Num. xxvi. 9.—Also the son of Simeon, and father of the Nemuelites; Num. xxvi. 12.

NEPHEG, Ne'-feg, weak, slack.—The son of David; 2 Sam. v. 15.

NEPHEW is the son of a brother, or sister, but sometimes signifies grand-children; Judg. xii. 14; Job xviii. 19; Isa. xiv. 22; 1 Tim. v. 4.

NEPISH, Ne'-fish, a soul.—A country of Canaan, against which Leubin warred; 1 Chron. v. 19.

NEPISHESIM, Ne-fish'-e-sim, diminished, torn in pieces.—His children were Nethinims; Neh. vii. 52.

NEPHTHALIM, Nef'-tha-lim, comparison.—Same as NAPHTALI.—A town of Palestine, near Thisbe; Matt. iv. 13.

NEPHTOAH, Nef'-to-ah, open to, or an opening.—The name of a fountain in the tribe of Benjamin; Josh. xv. 9.

NEPHUSIM, Ne-few'-sim, diminished, torn in pieces.—One whose children were Nethinims; Ezra ii. 50.

NER, Ner, lamp, brightness, land newly tilled.—The son of Abiel, and father of Abner, the general of Saul's armies; 1 Sam. xiv. 50. 51.

NEREUS, Ne'-re-us, lamp, brightness.—One whom Paul saluted; Rom. xvi. 15.

NERGAL, Ner'-gal, searching out, a footman.—A god of the Cuthites, The name is supposed to signify the revolving light, and the idol was adored, like Mercury under the form of a cock; 2 Kings xvii. 30.

NEGAL-SHAREZER, Ner'-gal-sha-re'-zer, overseer of the treasury.—A general of Nebuchadnezzar's army; Jer. xxxix. 3.

NERIAH, Ne-ry'-ah, light or lamp of the Lord.—The father of the prophet Baruch; Jer. xxxii. 12.

NERO, Ne'-ro, 2 Tim., at the end. The emperor Nero, though, properly speaking, not named in scripture, is indicated by his title of emperor, and by his surname Caesar. To him St. Paul appealed, after his imprisonment by Felix, and his examination by Festus. The apostle arrived at Rome A. D. 61, where he continued two years, preaching the gospel with freedom, till he became famous in the emperor's court, in which were many Christians. See Phil. iv. 22. We have no particular information how he cleared himself from the accusations of the Jews, whether by answering before Nero, or whether his enemies dropped their prosecutions; however, it appears that he was liberated in the year 63. Nero was the most cruel and savage of men, and a bitter persecutor of the Christian church. The burning of Rome, of which some think he himself was the author, he attributed to the Christians, who were seized, tortured, and committed to the flames. Of his household some were converted to the Lord; Phil. iv. 22.

NEST, Job 29. 18; Ps. 84. 3; Prov. 27. 8; Is. 10. 14; Hab. 2. 9; Matt. 8. 20.

NET. Allusions are frequent to the snare of the fowler, who artfully spreads his nets to catch the birds, Job 18. 8, & 19. 6; Ps. 9. 15, & 25. 15, & 31. 4, & 55. 7, 8, & 57. 6, & 66. 11; Is. 51. 20; Hab. 1. 15, 16; Matt. 13. 47; Ps. 141. 10; Eccl. 7. 26.

NET SPREAD.—"Surely in vain is the net spread," &c.; Prov. i. 17. Birds are wiser than men, they will not knowingly run into a snare.

NETHANEEL, Ne-than'-e-el, the gift of God.—Son of Zuar, head of the tribe of Issachar, Num. i. 8; vii. 18, 19.—The fourth son of Jesse, and brother of David, 1 Chron. ii. 14.—Son of Obadedom, and of the race of the priests, 1 Chron. xv. 24; xxvi. 4.—A doctor of the law, 2 Chron. xvii. 7.—Father of Shemaiah, a Levite, 1 Chron. xxiv. 6.—A Levite in the time of Josiah, 2 Chron. xxxv. 9.—A returned captive, Ezra x. 22.

NETHANIAH, Neth-a-ny'-ah, the gift of the Lord.—The father of Ishmael, 2 Kings xxv. 23.—A Levite, head of the fifth band of musicians, 1 Chron. xxv. 2, 12.

NETHINIMS, Neth'-i-nims, given, offered, devoted.—Probably the same with the Gibeonites, and were consecrated to the service of the tabernacle and temple, to perform the meanest and most laborious services therein, in supplying wood and water, &c.; Josh. ix. 27; Ezra viii. 20.

NETOPHAH, Ne-to'-fah, dropping down from the heart.—A city and district between Bethlehem and Anathoth, Ezra ii. 22; Neh. vii. 26.

NETOPHATHI, Ne-tof'-a-thy.—A country in Judea, Neh. xii. 28.

NEW, sometimes in Scripture language means, 'famous,' 'excellent.' See Ps. xcvi. 1; Rev. v. 9; xiv. 3.—Also that which is fresh, or of late date; Josh. ix. 13;—that which was never used or worn before; 1 Kings xi. 29;—that which is unusual; Num. xvi. 30;—one who is regenerated; a man turned from Satan to God; from wickedness to holiness;—"a new creature in Christ Jesus;" 2 Cor. v. 17; Gal. vi. 15.

NEW JERUSALEM.—A term expressive of the glorious state of the church during the millennium; Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2.

NEW MOON, 1 Sam. xx. 5.—"Tomorrow is the new moon;" the first day of the month, which was solemnly observed with burnt-offerings, and peace offerings. See Num. x. 10; xxviii. 11, &c.

NEW NAME, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it, (Rev. ii. 17,) refers to that new spirit which is put into the heart of those united to Christ by a new and living faith, and which the world knoweth not.

NEW TESTAMENT, or new covenant, for so the original ought to have been rendered. It refers to the new covenant of redemption and grace revealed in the gospel to the world, in contradistinction to the old covenant made only with Israel; 2 Cor. iii. 6; Heb. ix. 15, 16.

NEZIAH, Ne-zy'-ah, a conqueror, everlasting.—One whose children were Nethinims, Ezra ii. 54.

NEZIB, Ne'-zib, standing, a standing place, a plant.—A city of Judah, in the valley; Josh. xv. 43.

NIBHAZ, Nib'-haz, that fructifies, to prophesy.—A god of the Avites, corresponding, according to the meaning of the word, to the Anubis, (the barker,) of Egypt, whose image was a dog; 2 Kings xvii. 31.

NICANOR, Ny-kay'-nor, a conqueror, victorious.—One of the first seven deacons appointed at Jerusalem, soon after the descent of the Holy Spirit. He was a good man, and filled with the Holy Spirit; Acts vi. 5.

NICODEMUS, Nik-o-de'-mus, innocent blood: in Greek, the victory of the people.—A disciple of Christ, a Jew by nation, and a Pharisee, and ruler among the Jews; John iii. 1, &c. Like the rest of the Jews, he was ignorant of the character of the Messiah, and the design of his coming. To obtain information, he visited Christ "by night," and was at length convinced of his Divine commission; "No man can do the miracles that thou doest, except God be with him;" verse 3. The Saviour enforced upon him the necessity of the new birth; and there is reason to conclude that Nicodemus ultimately became a decided believer and disciple of Christ. His love to the Redeemer caused him to defend him against the priests and Pharisees; John vii. 45—53. He took a very conspicuous part in the burial of Christ's body; John xix. 38—40.

NICOLAITANES, Nik-o-lay'-e-tans.—Followers of one Nicholas. An early sect of heretics, who denied the real human nature of Christ, and the vicarious nature of his sufferings. They were very profligate and impure, and taught a community of wives; imputed their wickedness to God as the cause; they justified the worshipping of idols, licentiousness, &c.; Rev. ii. 6. It is thought that they are alluded to in 2 Pet. ii, and Jude 7—19.

NICOLAS, Nik'-o-las, conqueror of the people.—He was first a proselyte of Antioch; afterwards he embraced Christianity, and was one of the most zealous and holy among the first Christians. Some suppose he afterwards fell into errors, and originated the sect of the Nicolaitanes; this is, however, very uncertain. It must have been another person of the same name, Acts vi. 5.

NICOPOLIS, Ny-kop'-o-lis, the city of victory.—A city of Epirus, on the gulf of Ambracia; Tit. iii. 12. There is another Nicopolis in Thrace, near Macedonia.

NIGER, Ny'-jer, black, dark.—The surname of Simeon, one of the teachers in the church of Antioch; Acts xiii. 1.

NILE.—A celebrated river of Egypt, which flows from south to north about 1500 miles, and falls by several streams into the Mediterranean sea;—it is called Sihor; Josh. xiii. 3; Jer. ii. 18;—and the river of Egypt; Gen. xv. 18. It annually overflows its banks, and its inundation continues for 100 days, and covers the whole country. By this the soil acquires a new fertility, and when the waters retire, vegetation is most rapid, and the country begins to look most beautiful. The increase of the Nile begins early in June, but is not much perceived till the summer solstice, when the waters become troubled, and of a reddish tincture. It continues increasing till near the end of August. Travellers, ancient and modern, describe with rapture the prospect which Egypt presents at that season of the year. Ascending a mountain, or one of the largest pyramids in Grand Cairo, you behold the river overflowing the country around, the towns and villages appearing above, like islands in the midst of the ocean: the whole interspersed with gardens and groves, whose tops only are visible. Mountains and woods terminate, at the utmost distance the eye can discover this singular and fanciful scene.

NIMRAH, Nim'-rah, a leopard, rebellion, bitterness.—A city of Gad, or Reuben, situated to the east of the Dead Sea, Num. xxxii. 3.

NIMRIM, Nim'-rim, a leopard, rebellion. See NIMRAH: Jer. xlviii. 34; Isa. xv. 6.

NIMROD, Nim'-rod, rebellious, an apostate.—The sixth son of Cush, a mighty hunter, and founder of the Babylonian empire, including the cities Babel, Erech, Acad, and Calneh, in the land of Shinar. Some read, "He was mighty in prey, and in sin, before God." Hence it is probable that Nimrod, having acquired power, he used it in tyranny and oppression. It is thought that he projected the building of the tower of Babel; 1 Chron. i. 10. It is very likely he so gradually extended his power that at length he became king of the people—the first king of whom we read in history; and afterward he began to wage war to extend his conquests, and to enlarge his acquisitions by violence and the shedding of blood.

Thus, in a daring manner casting off the fear of God, and acting in defiance of his prohibition of shedding human blood, Nimrod rendered himself notorious, and his name became a proverb. When he had erected a kingdom at Babel, "he went forth out of that land to Asshur, and builded Nineveh;" Gen. x. 11. So the words may be translated; it appears to be the true meaning of them; for the descendants of Ham are spoken of; not those of Shem, who had a son, called Asshur. The words may be rendered, He went out into Assyria, and builded Nineveh.

Thus did this mighty hunter extend his dominions in every possible way. The city of Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, is supposed to have had its name from Ninus, the son of Nimrod; but probably Ninus and Nimrod are one person.

NIMSHI, Nim'-shy, rescued from danger.—The father of Jehu, king of Israel; 1 Kings xix. 16.

NINEVE, Nin'-eve, agreeable dwelling.—See NINEVEH.

NINEVEH, Nin'-e-veh, agreeable dwelling.—The capital of Assyria, founded by Asshur, the son of Shem, or, as others read the text, by Nimrod, son of Cush; Gen. x. 11. This city was situate upon the banks of the Tigris, and was one of the most ancient, famous, and potent cities in the world. In the days of the prophet Jonah, it is said to have been a great city, an exceeding great city, of three days' journey; Jonah i. 2; iii. 3, perhaps in circuit; for sixteen miles is about an ordinary day's journey for a caravan. The Jews at present, however, understand it in length, which seems to agree with the prophet's entering into the city a day's journey; Jonah iii. 4. According to some, it was of an oblong form, 150 stadia long, and ninety broad, and consequently 480 in circuit, or forty-eight miles, reckoning ten stadia to an English mile. And its walls were 100 feet high, and so broad that three chariots could drive on them a-breast; and on the walls were 1500 towers, each 200 feet high. We are not, however, to imagine that all this vast enclosure was built upon: it contained grand parks, fields, and detached houses. The population of Nineveh at that time was very great. It contained "more than six score thousand persons that could not discern between their right hand and their left, besides much cattle;" chap. iv. 11. The threatened "overthrow of Nineveh within three days," by the general repentance and humiliation of the inhabitants were suspended for near 200 years; and then the prophecy was literally fulfilled, in the third year of the siege of the city, by the combined Medes and Babylonians; the king, Sardanapalus, being encouraged to hold out, in consequence of an ancient prophecy; Nahum. i. 8; ii. 6. that Nineveh should never be taken by assault, till the river became its enemy; when a mighty inundation of the river, swollen by continual rains, came up against a part of the city, and threw down twenty stadia of the wall in length; upon which the king, conceiving that the oracle was accomplished, burnt himself, his concubines, eunuchs, and treasures, and the enemy entering by the breach, sacked and razed the city, about B. C. 606. It is now called Mosul, and is only famous for being the residence of the Patriarch of the Nestorians, of which sect are most of the Christians in those parts. Mosul is on the west side of the Tigris, and was anciently only an appendage to the city, which itself stood on the east side, where ruins of vast extent have been visited by modern travellers.

The fall of Nineveh was sudden, and the overthrow complete. So Nahum had predicted. It was overthrown in the midst of its grandeur and might; for scorched beams, half-burnt articles, and marble slabs burnt into lime by the action of fire, indicate that a tremendous conflagration attended the destruction of this proud and ancient city. And where there were once gorgeous temples and palaces, step-like terraces, crowned with trees, shrubs and flowers, spacious parks, pleasant orchards, and well-tilled fields, fountains and streams, roads and viaducts, courtly processions and troops of mailed warriors, &c., &c., there silence and solitude reign. Twelve hundred years ago it was reckoned an old city of ruins. It was to the ancient world, a city, as if it had never been. Most of it had sunk below the earth's surface. "I will make thy grave," said Jehovah, "for thou art vile;" and at length it became a huge unshapen mound. Rank vegetation fed upon its ruins. It became a scene of desolation,—“a place for beasts to lie down in.” Probably some of the materials forming the walls, which were 30 feet thick, were used for building purposes, on account of the difficulty of obtaining building materials in the East. History informs us that Seleucia was built with the ruins of Babylon, and Mosul from those of Nineveh.

Mr. Layard says, "From the summit of an artificial eminence, we looked down on a broad plain separated from us by the river. A line of lofty mounds bounded it to the east, and one of a pyramidal form rose high above the rest. Beyond it could be fairly heard the waters of the Zab. We passed the night in the jungle on the banks of the river, and wandered during the day undisturbed by the tribes of the desert. The scene around is worthy of the ruin the traveller is contemplating; desolation meets desolation; a feeling of awe succeeds to wonder, for there is nothing to relieve the mind, to lead to hope, or to tell of what is gone by."

"So fell great Nineveh!—and yet her power Lingered awhile through many a varying hour,
Till other conquerors, proud to seal her doom,
Swept her to ruin's all-engulfing tomb.
Long ages passed, and turf o'ergrew the walls,
And silence reigned in Ninus' buried halls;
New races rose and died till e'en the name
And city's sight a shadowy dream became.
The Arab spread his tent, but did not know
Bright palaces of kings might shine below,
And Moslem tribes their little hamlets reared
On piles where nought but barren stones appeared."

Modern research has identified the site of Nineveh, and exhumed many of its wonders. This has been effected by M. Botta, a Frenchman, and Mr. Layard, now a member of the English government. Its palaces, their chambers and sculptures, have been brought to light; many of the strange figured inscriptions have been deciphered; gods, conquerors, kings, scenes of wars, national customs, &c. have been found on slabs and walls. Many of these sculptures, &c. have been safely deposited in the British Museum; and others, we have engravings of in Mr. Layard's elaborate work, entitled, "Monuments of Nineveh." This work shows that Nineveh is not a myth, as infidelity has asserted, but powerfully contributive to the truth of the Bible.

The records of Nineveh have been remarkably preserved. The royal throne, statues, shields, seals, swords, crowns, bowls, in ivory, metal, wood, mother-of pearl, and glass, have been found in the excavations. A great portion of cuneiform writing on obelisks and marble slabs has been deciphered, and this has indisputably confirmed the truth of Scripture history and prophecy. We find a veritable history parallel to that of ancient Israel, and see the actual account of events recorded in the Kings and Chronicles. We find mention made of Jehu, Menahem, and Hazael, and some towns of Judea and Syria. We also discover Sennacherib's own account of his invasion of Palestine, and the amount of tribute which king Hezekiah was forced to pay him; 2 Kings xviii. 14. And, more wonderful, there has been found a picture of the taking of Lachish by Sennacherib; 2 Kings xviii. 14—17, &c. And doubtless among the generals introducing the captives to the king is to be seen the portrait of the railing Rabshakeh, dug out of the wreck of nigh 3000 years.

Mr. Layard says, "The passage in Ezekiel describing the interior of the Assyrian palaces, so completely corresponds with and illustrates the monuments of Nimroud, and Khor-sabad, that it deserves particular notice. The prophet, in typifying the corruptions which had crept into the religious system of the Jews, and the idolatrous practices borrowed from the nations with which they had been brought into contact, thus illustrates the influence of the Assyrians. "She saw men pourtrayed, the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermilion," &c.; Ezek. xxiii. 14, 15. Mr. Layard thus translates the passage:—"She saw men of sculptured or painted workmanship upon the wall, likenesses of the Chaldæans, pictured or sculptured in shashar, girded with girdles on their loins, with coloured flowing head-dresses upon their heads, with the aspect of princes all of them, the likeness of the sons of Babel-Chaldea the land of their nativity." The prophet, when he prophesied, was a captive on the banks of the river Chebar, which was near Nineveh. He evidently refers to a period preceding the destruction of the city, a catastrophe which he probably witnessed, as his prophecies date B. C. 593. It is observed that the "vermilion," or bright red colour, characterizes all their decorations. It was then a favorite colour.

NINEVITES, Nin'-e-vites.—The inhabitants of Nineveh, Luke xi. 30.

NINTH HOUR.—The Jews had stated hours for prayer, viz., the third hour, answering to our nine o'clock a.m.; the sixth, twelve at noon; the ninth, three p.m.

NISAN, Ny'-san, banner, a miracle.—The Persian name of the first month of the sacred year of the Jews, answering to our March, but the seventh month of the civil year; Neb. ii. 1.

NISROCH, Nis'-rok, flight, standard, proof.—A god of the Assyrians, 2 Kings xix. 37; Isa. xxxvii. 38.

NITRE, in our version was evidently a different substance from that so named with us. Jerome identifies it with the natron of Egypt; observing that the word comes from Nitria, the name of the province of Egypt where that production was most abundantly afforded. It was used in the place of soap, and was probably an alkaline substance, resembling soda, found in Egypt and Syria, or the same as the Smyrna "soap earth." It is a powerful cleanser. Shaw observes, that vinegar acts upon it, producing a strong effervescence. Solomon evidently means this substance when he compares the effect of unseasonable mirth upon a man in affliction to the action of vinegar on nitre; Prov. xxv. 20; Jer. ii. 22.

NO, or NO-AMMON, No, No-am'mon, a stirring up.—The dwelling of Ammon, or Ham. A city of Egypt, probably Diospolis, in the Delta. Borchart supposes it was the same city named Diospolis, or Thebes, seated near the lakes, called Seas in Hebrew. If so, it was the capital of Upper Egypt, celebrated for its hundred gates, from each of which it could send forth 20,000 men. It was spoiled by Sennacherib; but afterwards rebuilt, and said to have been fifty-two miles in circuit, when captured by Cambyses, who found in it immense treasure. Jer. xlvi. 25. The ancient structures still remain in a state of wonderful preservation, extending for seven or eight miles along the banks of the river. The ground is covered with magnificent portals, tall obelisks, decorated with most beautiful sculpture, towering columns, and endless avenues of colossal statues. The eastern is distinguished by the temples of Karnac and Luxor, the western by the palace of Memnon.

Herodotus calls it "The City of One Hundred Gates," and the ruins of its temples declare it to have been a place of incomparable grandeur. Nahum calls it "populous No," ch. iii. 8. The prophecies concerning it are dreadful. "I will punish the multitude of No," Jer. xlvi. 25. "I will execute judgments in No," "I will cut off the multitude of No," "No shall be rent asunder," Ezek. xxx. 14-16. And has it not been "rent asunder?"

Mr. Gadsby, a recent traveller, when there, said, "Frightful are the desolations with which we are surrounded. No pen can describe them. I was tolerably well versed in accounts of these ruins ere I went to see them, but on the spot I found myself a mere child. All my reading, all engravings, amounted to almost nothing. How ever light-hearted a man may be, he must become serious on scrambling over these ruins, unless he be proof against all impression."

"On approaching the mountains," says Mr. Jowett, "we find them pierced with many hundred minor excavations, from which mummies, with their curious coffins and ornaments, have been withdrawn. These are now inhabited by families. Further in the recesses of the mountains, are the more magnificent tombs of the kings, each consisting of many chambers, adorned with hieroglyphics." These represent the different actions of life, such as agricultural operations, religious ceremonies, feasts, and funeral processions, these last being generally predominant. They cannot be better described than in the words of the prophets; "All the kings of the nations, even all of them, lie in glory, even every one in his own house;" Isa. xiv. 18. "Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door. And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations, that they do here. So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about;" Ezek. viii. 8-10.

The temple of Karnac is yet without a parallel. It has twelve main entrances, each composed of several propyla and colossal gateways; one of the propyla is entirely of granite, covered with hieroglyphics, and many of the propyla have colossal statues. The avenues of sphinxes that lead in several directions to the propyla, one of which was continued the whole way across the plain to the temple at Luxor, nearly two miles distant, correspond to the magnificence of the principal structure, which consists of a prodigious hall or portico, the roof of which is supported by 134 columns, some 26, others 34 feet in circumference: four beautiful obelisks mark the entrance to the shrine, which consists of three apartments, built entirely of granite. The dimensions of this great edifice are about 1200 feet in length and 420 in width—the principal fane, grand and imposing as it is, sinks into nothing when compared with the extent and number of the buildings which surround it—the prodigious gateways of polished granite, covered with sculpture and adorned with colossal statues—the subordinate temples equalling the largest piles—and the numerous avenues by which it is approached, miles in length, and guarded by rows of sphinxes of vast size, cut out of single blocks of syenite; these occupy a mile in diameter.

The ruins of Luxor are situated about a mile and a quarter higher up. They are in a superior style of architecture, and in a better state of preservation than those at Karnac. The entrance is thought to surpass every thing else that Egypt presents—the temple is about 800 feet in length, the entrance to which is by a magnificent gateway 200 feet in front, and 57 feet high above the surrounding level, and before which stand two obelisks about 80 feet in height, and ten feet on each side of the base, considered the finest in the world. Between these and the gateway are two colossal statues, the lower parts of which are buried in the sand, measure from the chest to the top nearly 22 feet. But the objects which most attract attention are the sculptures which cover the east wing of the northern front. They contain on a great scale, a representation of a victory gained by one of the ancient kings of Egypt over their enemies. The number of human figures introduced amounts to 1500, 500 on foot and 1000 in chariots.

Near the Remesum, or Memnonium, as it is sometimes called, lies a shattered statue, the most prodigious, in all probability, that the world ever saw. Its size is gigantic, and its proportions are so equal and exact, and every part so well finished, as to excite the wonder of every beholder, however great a traveller he may have been. The toes are 3 ft. long, and the feet 5 ft. across the instep. The arm, from the top of the shoulder to the elbow only, is between 12 ft. and 13 ft., and the width of the breast is above 24 ft. Some say it is 26 ft., but I could not make it so much, on measuring it." It is estimated that it would weigh, when complete, upwards of 887 tons! This statue is of Rameses II., and was sculptured nearly 3,200 years ago.

Herodotus, the Greek historian, who was in Egypt about 2,300 years ago, writing on the spot, says, "I shall enlarge on what concerns Egypt, because it contains more wonders than any other country, and because there is no region beside where one sees so many works which are admirable and beyond expression."

NOADIAH, No-a-dy'-ah, witness of the Lord.—The name of a Levite, Ezra viii. 33.

NOAH, No'-ah, repose, rest, comfort.—The son of Lamech, born A. M. 1056. Amidst the general corruption of the human race, he alone was found righteous; Gen. vi. 9. He was born 600 years before the deluge, and during that period of rapidly increasing vice, he was distinct and prominent for his piety. He "found grace in the eyes of the Lord," and therefore Almighty God commanded him to make an ark or floating vessel for the preservation of himself and family, animals, &c., during the continuance of the threatened deluge. See Gen. chapters vi., vii., and viii. That the wicked might have no excuse, long warning was given them, even 120 years. Noah is called a preacher of righteousness; 2 Pet. ii. 5. He frequently warned the people of impending wrath, and called them to repentance, and to the experience of divine mercy, doubtless through the promised Saviour, the "Lord our Righteousness." "By faith, Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, prepared an ark to the saving of his house, by which he condemned the world," &c. By building the ark Noah condemned the world—the world were acquainted with that transaction, which being a public and notorious testimony of his faith, will at the last day rise up in the judgment against their infidelity, leaving them without excuse.

His faith was made manifest by the opposition it had to encounter and overcome; by his patience, labour, and perseverance in constructing the ark. What persecution, scoffing, &c., he would receive from the wicked during the building of the ark! They would think him bereft of his senses, and call him a fool and a madman. But he had faith in the Divine declarations, and in faith constructed the ark, and in faith at last he entered it.

In A. M. 1655, and in the six hundredth year of his age, Noah, his family, and the collected animals, entered the ark, and the great flood came upon the earth. In that happy day when Adam, the first formed father of the world, reigned king in Eden, all the creatures were subject to him, and lived at unity among themselves. The enmity afterwards introduced by sin subsided, in the case before us, for a season; the sovereignty over the creatures originally vested in Adam, the father of the world, was put into the hands of Noah, the restorer of it, and the halycon days of Eden came over again in the ark.

At last the waters of the deluge began to abate, and eventually the ark rested on the mountain of Ararat. After a detention of a year and ten days in the ark, Noah, at the command of God, went forth; Gen. viii. 16. He then offered a burnt-sacrifice, which the Lord was pleased graciously to accept. Noah lived after the deluge three hundred and fifty years; his whole life was nine hundred and fifty years. He died in the year of the world 2006; and left three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

NOAH. A daughter of Zelophehad; Num. xxvi. 33.

NOAH'S ARK.—For the dimensions and capabilities of it, see Ark.

"NO MAN STOOD WITH ME;" 2 Tim. iv. 16. It was agreeable to the custom of the Romans that when any person was judicially tried for any crime, his friends attended on him in court, to countenance and assist him. The apostle alludes to this.

NOB, Nob, prophecy, discourse.—A small city of the priests of the tribe of Benjamin or Ephraim. David, when fleeing from Saul, went to Nob, and obtained from Ahimelech, the high-priest, a portion of the shewbread to satisfy his hunger, and the sword of Goliath. Saul, in consequence, slew the priests and destroyed the city; 1 Sam. xxi. & xxii.

NOBAH, No'-bah, that barks or yelps.—A city beyond Jordan. It took its name from an Israelite of the same name, who made a conquest of it; Num. xxxii. 42.

NOBLE. A person honourable by birth or merit; Neh. vi. 17; Acts xxiv. 3.—Persons of a more tractable disposition, or more excellent, commendable, and candid temper than others. "These were more noble," &c. Acts xvii. 11. They heard the gospel attentively—they received it readily—they searched the scriptures daily, whether these things were so.

NOBLE, Esth. 6. 9; Jer. 2. 21; Luke 19. 12; Acts 17. 11; Ex. 24. 10; Num. 21. 18.

NOBLEMAN, 'a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom;' Luke xix. 12. The parable is most likely founded on a fact, which occurred about the same time when it was spoken. Judea was then subject to the Romans, but governed by Jews, who held their power under them: Archelaus, a son of Herod the Great, went to Rome to obtain a confirmation of the title, which his father had left him, and succeeded in getting it.

NOD, Nod, vagabond, fugitive.—The country to which Cain withdrew after he had slain his brother. Its situation is not known; Gen. iv. 16.

NOD. "And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the land of Nod..... And Cain knew his wife," &c. Gen. iv. 16, 17.—How could Cain have a wife, and go into another land, and build a city, when, apparently there were no people in the world beside himself and his father and mother?

Ans. Abel was slain A. M. 128, or 130. Suppose Adam and Eve had no other sons than Cain and Abel, A. M. 128, yet as they had daughters married to these sons, their descendants would be considerable. If they were married A. M. 19, they might easily have had eight children, some males and some females, in the 25th year. In the 50th year, there might have proceeded from them, in a direct line, 64 persons. In the 74th year, there would be 572. In the 98th year, 4096. In the 122nd year, they would amount to 32,768. If to these we add the other children descended from Cain and Abel, their children and their children's children, we should have, in the aforesaid 128 years 421,164 men, capable of generation, without reckoning the women, either old or young, or such as were under the age of 17.—Dr. Dodd.

Dr. Adam Clarke thinks Dr. Dodd's calculation scarcely correct, as he thinks that the antediluvian patriarchs began to have children before they were 65 years of age. Supposing, therefore, that at the age of 130 years, Adam had 130 children and grandchildren, which is quite possible, and each of these a child at 65 years of age, and one in each successive year, the whole, in the 130th year of the world, would amount to 1,219 persons; a number sufficient to found several villages, as extensive and complete as Cain's city.

NOGAH, No'-gah, brightness, or clearness.—The name of one of David's sons; 1 Chron. iii. 7.

NOHAH, No'-hah, resting, a guide.—The fourth son of the patriarch Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 2.

NOISOME, Ps. 91. 3; Rev. 16. 2.

NOPH, Noff, honeycomb, a sieve, that drops.—A celebrated city of Egypt, the residence of the ancient kings of Egypt: the same as Memphis. It is said to have been founded by Menes, the first of Egyptian kings, about 1300 years before Solomon.

The site of this city has been long disputed by the learned, notwithstanding that it continued a noble city till it fell into the hands of the Arabians, A. D. 641. Some imagine that it stood on the west bank of the Nile, opposite grand Cairo; others place it about 15 miles further south, at the entrance of the Plain of the Mummies, at the north of which rise the Pyramids.

It is said to have been adorned with a number of remarkable temples and palaces of astonishing grandeur and magnitude. "At the beginning of the Christian era, it equalled Alexandria in population and extent. Edresi, in the twelfth century, describes its remains as extant in his day, and of a magnificence of which no language could convey any idea. Its ruins then extended nine miles in every direction; but the destruction has since been so great, that, although Pococke and Bruce fixed upon Matrakhenny as the site, a village which lies a few miles above the pyramids, it was not accurately ascertained until the French expedition to Egypt, when the discoveries of numerous heaps of rubbish, of blocks of granite covered with hieroglyphics and sculpture, and of colossal fragments scattered over a space three leagues in circumference, seem to have decided the point, and this is all that remains of the once lofty city."

On account of the wickedness of its princes and people, and especially their treachery to Israel, this city was doomed to utter destruction by the prophets; Isa. xix. 13; Jer. ii. 16; xlv. 1, 12, 30.

NOPHAE, No'-fah, fearful, binding.—A city of the Moabites; it afterwards belonged to the Amorites, and finally to the Israelites; Num. xxi. 30.

NOSE, 'I will put my hook in thy nose.' Oxen and camels were restrained by a bridle so fixed; hence the allusion; 2 Kings xix. 28; Isa. xxxvii. 29.

NOSE JEWELS; Isa. iii. 21. Golden rings hung from the nose, are still common in the east.

NOSE, Prov. 30. 33; Is. 65. 5.

Is. 2. 22. breath in n. Lam. 4. 20.

NOT.—In Scripture, the positive and negative are often used together, after the Hebrew idiom, to give greater force to the language, 'I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away,' Isa. xli. 9, also Jer. vii. 24; xxix. 11; Lam. iii. 2, &c.

NOT, 'and not.' This negative after an affirmative, sometimes means 'rather than,' a Hebrew mode of expression. See Prov. viii. 10; Joel ii. 13.

NOVICE.—"Not a novice," 1 Tim. iii. 6. Not a young plant, only recently converted; it is not probable that one who is not long and deeply experienced in the ways of God, can guide others in the way of life. Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil. It has been said;

"From such apostles, O ye mitred heads, Preserve the church! and lay not careless hands
On skulls that cannot teach, and will not learn."

NUMBER.—The singular number is sometimes put for the plural in the Scriptures: this takes place when the holy writers speak of a multitude collectively, or of an entire species. See Exod. xv. 1, 21; xxiii. 28; Isa. i. 3; Jer. viii. 7; Joel i. 4; Rev. xxi. 21. Very frequently a certain or definite number is put for an uncertain and indefinite number: thus we find double for much or sufficient, in Isa. xl. 2; lxi. 7; Jer. xvi. 18; Zech. ix. 12; Rev. xviii. 6; twice for several times, Ps. lxii. 11; five for a few, 1 Cor. xiv. 19, in which verse ten thousand are put for many, ten for many; Gen. xxxi. 7, and 1 Sam. i. 8. But most frequently we have seven for an indefinite number. See Gen. iv. 15; Lev. xxvi. 18, 21, 28; Ruth iv. 15; 1 Sam. ii. 5; Ps. xii. 6; cxix. 164; Prov. xxiv. 16; xxvi. 25; Isa. iv. 1; Jer. xv. 9; Ezek. xxxix. 9, 12; Zech. iii. 9; Matt. xii. 45. One hundred for many, indefinitely, in Ecc. vi. 3; viii. 12; Prov. xvii. 10; Matt. xix. 29; Luke viii. 8. A thousand for a great many, Exod. xx. 6; xxxiv. 7; Deut. i. 11; 1 Sam. xviii. 7; Ps. cxix. 72. Ten thousand for an immense number, 1 Sam. xviii. 7; Ps. iii. 6; and ten thousand thousand for a countless host, Dan. vii. 10; Rev. v. 11, &c.

NUMBER TWO.—A few; 1 Kings xvii. 12; Isa. vii. 21.

NUMBER THREE, or THRD.—Excellency, Isa. xix. 24; Zech. xiii. 9.

NUMBER FOUR.—Universality, Isa. xi. 12; Ezek. vii. 2.

NUMBER SEVEN.—Perfection, Rev. i. 4, and throughout the book.

NUMBER TEN.—Many, Dan. i. 20; Amos vi. 9; Zech. viii. 23.

NUMBER.—"His number is six hundred, threescore, and six." The letters in the Greek word Lateinos, a title given to the pope, form the numerals of 666; Rev. xiii. 1—18.

NUMBERS.—One of the inspired books of Moses. So called because it contains the account of the numbering and marshalling of the Israelites. It embraces, in its history of their journeyings and encampments in the wilderness, the space of thirty-nine years. The whole of the book may be considered as a diary, and as the most ancient book of travels ever published. The route taken by the Israelites under the direction of their inspired leader has been traced out by modern travellers, and many places here mentioned still bear the same name, and correspond exactly in their geographical situation.

NUMBER.—"And again the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah;" 2 Sam. xxiv. 1. This verse should be translated, "Again the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, BECAUSE one had moved David;" &c.; or, by supplying from 1 Chron. xxi. 1, an adversary, (Satan) had moved David. This translation fairly represents the meaning of the original, and avoids the difficulty in the present translation.

NUMBER.—"And Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king; and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword; and the men of Judah were five thousand men;" 2 Sam. xxiv. 9.—From 1 Chron. xxvii. it appears that there were twelve divisions of generals, who commanded monthly, who kept guard near the king's person, each having a body of troops of 24,000 men, which, jointly, formed a grand army of 288,000; and as a separate body of 12,000 men attended on the twelve princes of the twelve tribes, mentioned in the same chapter, the whole will be 300,000, the difference between the two accounts, of 800,000, and of 1,100,000, in 1 Chron. xxi. 5.

As to the men of Israel, the writer of Samuel takes no notice of the 300,000, because they were in the actual service of the king, as a standing army, and therefore there was no need to number them; but Chronicles joins them to the rest, saying "all those of ISRAEL were 1,100,000; whereas the author of Samuel, who reckons only the 800,000, does not say, "all those of Israel," but barely, "and Israel were," &c. Exclusive of the troops before mentioned, there was an army of observation on the frontiers of the Philistines' country, numbering 30,000 men; 2 Sam. vi. 1, which, it appears, were included in the number of 500,000 of the people of Judah, by the writer of Samuel. But the author of Chronicles who mentions only 470,000, gives the number of that tribe exclusive of those 30,000 men, because they were not all of the tribe of Judah; and therefore does not say "all those of Judah," as he had said "all those of Israel," but only Jehudah, and those of Judah. Thus both statements may be reconciled, by comparing Scripture with Scripture.

O

OAK. —The Oak mentioned in the Bible is generally supposed to have been the terebinth or turpentine tree. This is as large as a small oak, and it abounds in Syria, Palestine, &c. The Oak, undoubtedly grew in Palestine, as appears from the testimony of ancient historians, and modern travellers. Abraham pitched his tent, and Joshua set up the tabernacle under an oak; Josh. xxiv. 26. It was common among the Hebrews to sit under the oaks; 1 Kings xiii. 14, and to bury under them; Gen. xxxv. 8; 1 Chron. x. 12. Its durability caused the idolator to select it as the substance of his god; Isa. xlv. 14. The British Druids held it sacred.

OAKS 'of Bashan,' symbolically the princes and nobles of Israel and Judah; Isa. ii. 13.

OAKS, 'shall be ashamed of the oaks which ye have desired;' Isa. i. 29. Under Oaks, &c. idolatry used to be practised, as it was by the Druids in England. For the false gods worshipped in the groves, and in their gardens, when idolatry was publicly discountenanced, the degenerate children of Judah and Jerusalem should be ashamed.

OATH. —A solemn affirmation, accompanied by an appeal to Jehovah. An oath should never be taken but in matters of importance, nor sworn by the name of any but the true God; nor irreverently, without godly fear and awe of the Most High; Josh. xxiii. 7; James v. 12; Deut. vi. 13; Matt. v. 34, 35; Jer. v. 7. The multiplication of oaths, therefore, in commerce and common affairs, is a great sin. The irreverent and hurried manner in which they are frequently administered has a great tendency to increase perjury.

The lawfulness of solemnly taking our oath to truth is certified by Scripture example; Matt. xxvi. 63, 64; Rom. i. 9; 2 Cor. xi. 11, and 31, Psa. xv. 4; Heb. vi. 13, 17; and by intimation that this method may be resorted to for the settlement of strife; Heb. vi. 16. It was a proverbial saying, respecting a man's character among the Jews, as a man of strict probity and good faith, "His yes is yes, and his no is no;" that is, "you may depend on his word; as he declares, so it is, and as he promises, so he will do."

OBADIAH, Ob-a-dy'-ah, servant of the Lord.—A valiant man of David's army who joined him in the wilderness; 1 Chron. xii. 9.—One of whom king Jehoshaphat sent as an itinerant teacher; 2 Chron. xvii. 7.—One who signed the covenant; Neh. x. 5.

OBADIAH.—A prophet of the Lord, of whom nothing is privately known, except that he was honoured with a vision of the final destinies of the Edomites. He is thought to have lived about the time that Jerusalem was sacked by Nebuchadnezzar. From the similarity of the sentiments and language of this prophecy with those of Jeremiah on the same subject, it is conjectured that these prophets were contemporaries. He is supposed to have delivered his prophecy about 587 years before Christ. His book contains only one chapter, which is divided into two parts—one referring to Edom, the other to the future prosperity of Zion. His writings have much beauty, and unfold a very interesting scene of prophecy.

OBED, O'-bed, a servant.—The son of Boaz and Ruth, father of Jesse, and grandfather of David; Ruth iv. 17.—Also, the son of Ephlal; 1 Chr. ii. 37.

OBED-EDOM, O'-bed-e'-dom, the servant of Edom.—Son of Jeduthun, a Levite; 1 Chron. xvi. 38.—Father of Shemiah and others, 1 Chron. xvi. 5. The Lord blessed him for the ark resting under his roof, 2 Sam. vi. 10, 11. This blessing was special. The ark was the symbol of the Divine presence, and to enjoy that is great blessedness indeed. He was blessed in his person, in his family, in his estate, and in his soul, and the latter is better than all.

OBSCURITY.—By obscurity or darkness adversity and calamity are symbolized, as happiness and prosperity are by light; Isa. lviii. 10. When the Jews were delivered from their calamitous state in Babylon, they observed a feast which they called the feast of lights; to celebrate their deliverance from bondage, and of having the service of the temple re-established; light broke upon them beyond all hope, as the rays of the sun dart through the clouds.—Obscurity also signifies spiritual ignorance and blindness, from which God delivers his people, when he bestows upon them the clear and saving knowledge of the truth; Isa. xxix. 18.

ODIOUS, OFFENSIVE; 1 Chron. xix. 6.—Spoken of a very bad tempered woman; Prov. xxx. 23.

ODOUR.—A fragrant or sweet smell; Lev. xxvi. 31; John xii. 3. The sweet-smelling odour refers to the burnt-offerings and their exhalation.

tions, and as such odours are grateful to man, God represents himself as pleased with them when offered by a sincere worshipper; Eph. v. 2; Phil. iv. 18; Rev. v. 8; Prov. xxvii. 9; John xii. 3.

OFFENCE.—The original word, Matt. xi. 6, means a snare, a trap; anything that a man finds in his way, that may occasion him to stumble or fall. Thus Moses forbids “to put a stumbling-block (or an offence) before the blind,” Lev. xix. 14, i. e., neither wood, stone, &c., that may make him stumble or fall. It was prophesied, “that Christ Jesus should be for a stone of stumbling and rock of offence to both the houses of Israel,” Isa. viii. 14. His humiliation, poverty, birth, death and cross, were rocks against which the Jews struck, and upon which they have fallen and are broken; because they could not be convinced that such humble qualifications could belong to the Messiah they expected. And the apostle Paul exhorts the Corinthians, “to give none offence to Jews or Gentiles,” 1 Cor. x. 32, i. e., not to hinder them in their way to heaven, or induce them to act with a doubting conscience, by an unreasonable use of Christian liberty.

OFFERING.—The worship of God in the tabernacle and temple service comprised offerings and sacrifices. These were typical of the sacrifice of the Son of God, the foundation of the church, and of all its worship. Hence he is called “the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world;” John i. 29. The Levitical offerings and sacrifices were Divine ordinances, through which the people might profess their faith in the first promise; Gen. iii. 15.

The victim chosen was to be clean, and without blemish; Lev. xxii. 22, compare Rom. xii. 1; 1 Pet. i. 19. The victim was led to the altar, and the person or persons offering it placed his hand forcibly upon its head, praying for Divine acceptance. Thus the person acknowledged the sacrifice to be his own; that he loaded it with his iniquities, and offered it as an atonement for his sins; and that for his trespass of God's law he deserved death; and he entreated God to accept the life of the innocent animal in the place of his own. Thus the Levitical victims were types of him on whom Jehovah "laid the iniquities of us all;" Isa. liii. 6; 1 Pet. ii. 24.

The animal was then immolated by cutting the windpipe through at one stroke; it was opened; its bowels taken out, and the back bone cleft. To this opening of the victim, the Apostle beautifully alludes, when describing the powerful effects of preaching the gospel; Heb. iv. 12, 13.

OFFICE.—A calling, station, trust, or charge; Gen. xli. 13; 1 Chron. vi. 32; Rom. xi. 13; 1 Tim. iii. 1. "Let another take his office;" Psa. cix. 8. Peter applies this verse to Judas.

OFFICERS.—These were always in court ready to execute its sentence as soon as it was delivered. To this summary method of doing justice our Lord alludes; Rev. xxii. 12. "I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man as his work shall be."—To do justice in a summary manner. To these officers there is an allusion; Luke xii. 58.

OFFICES of CHRIST are generally considered as threefold. (1) A prophet to enlighten and instruct; John vi. 14; iii. 2. (2) A priest to make atonement for his people; Isa. liii; Heb. vii. (3) A king to reign in, and rule over them; Zech. ix. 9; Psalms ii. 6.

OFFSCOURING. (1) The most base, the refuse and dross; Lam. iii. 45. (2) The world's estimate of the holy apostles—as mean, vile, and worthless; 1 Cor. iv. 13.

OFFSPRING signifies that which is sprung of or produced by another, as children, plants, and fruits; Job xxxi. 8; Isa. xlvi. 19. "I am the root and offspring of David;" Rev. xxii. 16. I am David's Lord, and yet his Son: his root, as I am God, and gave a being to his family, and to all the families of the earth; and yet, as to my human nature, I am his son, a branch out of the root of Jesse.

OG, Og, a cake, baked in the ashes.—A giant of the race of the Rephaim, and king of Bashan; Deut. iii. 11; Num. xxi. 33. The bedstead of Og king of Bashan, one of this tribe, was sixteen feet long, and upwards of seven feet broad; and Goliath's height was nearly twelve feet, and the weight of his brazen coat or mail exceeded 170lbs troy; Deut. ii. 11; 1 Sam. xvii. 4, 5. If we may judge of his size from the length of his bed, he was certainly of gigantic stature; and Moses has expressly called him a giant. He was defeated by the Israelites, and his territory was given to the tribe of Manasseh; Josh. xiii. 30.

OHAD, O'-had, praising.—The son of Simcon, who went to Egypt with his grandfather; Gen. xli. 10.

OHEL, O'-hel, tent, tabernacle, brightness.—Son of Zerubbabel, and descendant of Josiah; 1 Chr. iii. 20.

OIL, or OINTMENT, is now extracted from olives, fish, from flaxseed, and many other substances. Oil obtained from olives, such as we call sweet oil, was abundant in the Holy Land; Deut. xxxii. 13. Bread dipped in oil was reckoned a delicate repast. An infusion of some flowers made it very fragrant for anointing; Matt. xxvi. 7; Psa. xcii. 10. The Hebrews used olive oil in their meat-offerings, in their sacred lamps, &c. but the oil so precious and sacred, was compounded with cinnamon, calamus, cassia, and myrrh, which was used in the anointing of the priests, the tabernacle and furniture.

OIL OF JOY; Isa. lxi. 3. At feasts it was customary to pour oil on the heads of the guests. Compare Ps. xxiii. 5; civ. 15.

OIL 'to make his face to shine,' Ps. civ. 15. Oil smoothes the skin, and is both pleasant and healthy in hot countries.

OIL and WINE, 'pouring in oil and wine,' Luke x. 33, 34. In the East being generally ignorant of making decoctions, potions, and of the proper doses of things; they usually employ external medicines; Prov. iii. 8. Oil is the principal part of their useful remedies. In India, says Tavernier, they have a certain preparation of oil and melted grease, which they commonly use for the healing of wounds. Wine, cleansing, and somewhat astringent, and oil, mollifying and healing, are proper for a fresh wound, and were the only means the Samaritan had at hand.

OIL. "The wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps;" Matt. xxv. 4. In many parts of the East, especially in India, instead of torches, used at marriage processions, they carried a pot of oil in one hand and a lamp supplied with oil in the other. Sometimes, they used flambeaux, made of pieces of linen, pressed into a hard ball, and saturated with oil. They also carried a bottle of oil, which they poured upon the ball to replenish the light when needed.

OLD AGE; Eccles. xii. 1 — 7, which read. In spite of precaution and medicine, "the evil days will come, and the years draw nigh, when he shall say, I have no pleasure in them." Pains and sorrows will succeed each other, as "the clouds return after the rain," blackening the face of heaven, and darkening the sources of light and joy. The hands, those once active and vigorous "keepers of the house," grown paralytic, shall "tremble;" and "the strong men," those firm and able columns which supported it, shall "bow themselves," and sink under the weight. The external "grinders" of the food, the teeth, "shall cease, because they are few," and the work of mastication shall be imperfectly performed. Dim suffusion shall veil the organs of sight, "they that look out of the windows shall be darkened." "The doors," or valves, "shall be shut in the streets," or alleys of the body, when the digestive powers are weakened, and "the sound of the" internal "grinding is low." Sleep, if it light upon the eyelids of age, will quickly remove again, and "he will rise up" at the time when the first "voice of the bird" proclaims the approach of the morning. "All the daughters of music shall be brought low;" he will hear no more the voice of singing men, and singing women. Timidity and distrust will predominate, and he will be alarmed at every thing; "he shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way." As the early "almond tree," when it flourishes in full blossom, his hoary head shall be conspicuous in the congregation, the sure prognostic, not of spring, alas! but of winter: he who, like "the grasshopper," in the season of youth, was so sprightly in his motions, now scarcely able to crawl upon the earth, "shall be a burden" to himself, and the organs of sense being vitiated and impaired, "desire" and appetite "shall fail." The spinal marrow, that "silver cord," with the infinite ramifications of the nerves, thence derived, will be relaxed, and lose its tone; "and the golden bowl," the receptacle of the brain, from which it proceeds, "shall be broken." The vessel, by which, as a "pitcher," the blood is carried back to the heart for a fresh supply, "shall be broken at the fountain, and the wheel," or instrument of circulation, which throws it forth again, to the extremities of the body, "shall be broken at the cistern." When this highly finished piece of mechanism shall be thus disjoined and dissolved, "then shall the dust," of which it was framed, "return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it."

OLD MAN.—'Put off the old man with his deeds,' Col. iii. 9, 10. The apostle here alludes to the persons of the drama, who change their dress according to the characters in which they respectively appear, laying aside one habit and assuming another.

OLIVE TREE.—Tournefort mentions eighteen kinds of olives; but in the Scriptures we read only of the cultivated and wild olive; the former being smaller and poorer than the latter. Canaan abounded with olives. Almost every proprietor, even kings, or subjects, had their olive-yards. It delights to grow, not on mountains, like the oak, but on the lower grounds or little hills; and hence its leaf, carried to Noah by the dove, showed that the flood had subsided. On account of this interesting incident, the olive-tree became the emblem of peace. It has been thus venerated in all ages in Europe and Asia. Its beautiful white flowers appear in June, and are succeeded by a fruit which affords the well known oil, which is abundant and delicious. Its abundance was one of the tokens of a rich country; Job xxix. 6; Deut. vi. 11; xxviii. 40; xxxiii. 24. The oil was considered good for wounds, bruises, &c. The fruit, which is about the size of a small plum, is very wholesome and nourishing. The fruit of the olive was formerly beaten off the trees by the owner, with long sticks; and the Israelites were commanded not to go over the trees the second time, but to leave some fruit for the poor gleaners; Deut. xxiv. 20. These gleanings were always left on the trees until fully ripe, and then, by merely shaking the trees, the fruit would fall. This fact fully explains Isa. xvii. 6 and xxiv. 13. The prophets frequently adopt it for a figure, especially of the righteous individually and collectively. The cherubim covering the ark of the temple, were made of olive-trees; and there may be an allusion to this in the two olive-trees before the Lord, as beheld in vision by Zechariah, ch. iv.

11—14; Ps. lii. 8; Rom. xi. 16—25; Rev. xi. 4.

Captain Cook found that its green branches, carried in the hands, or stuck in the ground, were the emblems of peace universally employed and understood by the numerous and untutored inhabitants of the South Sea islands. The origin of a custom religiously observed by nations dwelling on opposite sides of the globe who never had the smallest intercourse with one another, must be sought for near the beginning of time, when the inhabitants of our earth, forming but one family, attached the most pleasing recollections to the bringing of an olive-branch; Gen. viii. 11. A reference to God's sign of mercy to Noah may be traced also in the derivation of the Greek word ELAIOS, mercy, from ELAIA, an olive.

OLIVE, WILD.—A Gentile, Rom. xi. 17.

OLIVE, CULTIVATED.—The Church of Christ, Rom. xi. 24.

OLIVET, or MOUNT of OLIVES.

—This mountain stands on the east of Jerusalem, and only parted from it by the brook Kidron and the valley of Jehoshaphat. It commanded a noble prospect of the temple, Matt. xxiv. 2, 3; Luke xix. 37—41, as it does to this day of the whole city, over whose streets and walls the eye roves as if in the survey of a model. The mount of Olives, which is frequently noticed in the evangelical history, stretches from north to south, and is about a mile in length. On the descent of this mountain our Saviour stood when he beheld the city and wept over it; on this mountain it was that he delivered his prediction concerning the downfall of Jerusalem; Luke xix. 41—44; and according to some, the army of Titus encamped upon the very spot where its destruction had been foretold.

The view from the Mount of Olives, north and south, is very delightful. An extensive prospect is obtained towards the east, embracing the plain of Jericho, watered by the Jordan, and the Dead Sea, enclosed by mountains of considerable grandeur. An earthquake partly overturned mount Olivet in the days of Uzziah, and from the scene of this convulsion the prophet perhaps borrows his imagery, Zech. xiv. 5, which seems to represent the insuperable obstructions to the escape of the inhabitants of Jerusalem during the siege by the Romans.

Covered with its olives and other trees, Olivet was peculiarly adapted for retirement; and to it our Lord frequently resorted for prayer. Judas fixed on this spot for his treacherous act in delivering Jesus Christ into the hands of his enemies. He well knew the place of the Saviour's devotions, and where he had often discoursed to him and the other disciples. It comprises the districts named Gethsemane, the place of oil-presses; Bethany, the house of dates; and Bethphage, the house of green-figs. In the ancient Jewish work, Midras Tellin, is a remarkable sentence, which corroborates the Evangelist's narrative, or has been borrowed from them and the prophet Zechariah; "The Divine Majesty stood three years and a half on Mount Olivet, saying, Seek ye the Lord, while he he may be found; call upon him while he is near." Every part of this spot has great interest in the eyes of the Christian traveller. He is directed by the citizens of Jerusalem to the place whence Christ ascended into heaven; near which stands a mosque, commanding a fine view of Jerusalem, Mount Sion, and the Dead Sea. They superstitiously show a stone, on which is the impression of Christ's left foot, when he left the earth; the impression of the right foot having been carried away by the Turks.

OLYMPAS, O-lim'-pas, heavenly.—A person eminent for his piety, Rom. xvi. 15.

OLYMPIC GAMES were celebrated by the ancient Greeks in honour of Jupiter Olympius, every fifth year, for five successive days, in the plains of Elis, near the city of Olympia and mount Olympus, in the Morea of Greece. They were attended by immense multitudes of all ranks, and consisted in feats of valour and agility; such as the foot and the chariot race, wrestling, boxing, leaping, and throwing the quoit; and the victor in any of them had awarded him, by the judges, a chaplet of wild olive. Similar to them were the Isthmian Games, celebrated in the isthmus of Corinth; and those instituted by Herod in some parts of Judea. Though none of these are directly mentioned in Scripture, yet there are several obvious and beautiful allusions to them; 1 Cor. ix. 24—27; Phil. iii. 12—14; 1 Tim. vi. 12; 2 Tim. ii. 5; iv. 7, 8; Heb. xii. 1—3.

OMAR, O'-mar, he that speaks, bitter.—The son of Eliphaz, and grandson of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 11.

OMEGA, O-me'-ga.—The last letter of the Greek alphabet. It is used as a title of Christ, and in connection with Alpha, indicates his perfection and eternity. See Rev. i. 8, 11; xxi. 6; xxii. 13.

OMER.—See Homer.

OMRI, Om'-ry, a sheaf of corn, rebellion, bitter.—King of Israel, and successor to Zimri, 1 Kings xvi. 9, 10, &c., A. M. 3075. He was a wicked king, more so than any of his predecessors. He disgraced the throne twelve years, during which time he built Samaria; 1 Kings xvi. 15—28.—2. The son of Michael, 1 Chron. xxvii. 18.

OMRI.—"In the thirty and first year of Asa, king of Judah, began Omri to reign over Israel, twelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah;" 1 Kings xvi. 23. There is a mistake in the year, thirty and first; for in verse 10, 15, it is said that Zimri slew his master, and began to reign in the twenty-seventh year of Asa; and as Zimri reigned only seven days, and Omri immediately succeeded him, this could not be in the thirty-first year of Asa. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi thus reconciles the two places:—"The division of the kingdom between Tibni and Omri began in the twenty-seventh year of Asa: this division lasted five years, during which Omri had but a share of the kingdom.

Tibni dying, Omri came into possession of the entire kingdom, which he held seven years: this was in the thirty-first year of Asa. Seven years he reigned alone; five years he reigned over part of Israel; twelve years in the whole. The two dates, the twenty-seventh and thirty-first of Asa, answering, the first to the beginning of the division, the second to the sole reign of Omri.

ON, On, pain, force, iniquity.—A city of Egypt, called Heliopolis by the Septuagint version; Gen. xli. 45, and by Herodotus, who says that the inhabitants were "the wisest of the Egyptians." The father-in-law of Joseph was the High Priest of On. This was the city of Moses, according to Berosus, and accounts for his being "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians;" Acts vii. 22. Heliopolis was the Greek translation of Beth-shemesh, "the house or city of the sun," and is called "Beth-shemesh in the land of Egypt;" Jer. xliii. 13, to distinguish it from a place of the same name in Canaan; Joshua xix. 38.

On was one of the most ancient cities of the world of which scarcely any distinct vestige can now be traced. It was visited by Strabo, whose description proves it to have been nearly as desolate then as now. Most of the ruins of this once famous city, described by that geographer, are buried in the accumulation of the soil; still, however, they occupy a mile and a half in circumference, and consist of shattered obelisks, statues, and the other remains which characterise the cities of Egypt. Several of the prophets predicted the destruction of On with its temples and inhabitants, which was fulfilled first by Nebuchadnezzar, and afterwards by Cambyses, king of Persia; Gen. xli. 45; Acts vii. 22; Jer. xliii. 13; Ezek. xxx. 17.

ONAM, O'-nam, sorrow, strength, their iniquity.—The son of Shobal; Gen. xxxvi. 23.

ONAN, O'-nan, pain, strength iniquity.—A son of Judah; Gen. xxxviii. 4, 8, &c.

ONESIMUS, O-nes'-se-mus, profitable useful.—A Phrygian by nation, and slave to Philemon, who deserted his master, and wronged him by depriving him of his services, and was converted at Rome; Phile. 10.

ONESIPHORUS, On-e-sif'-fo-rus, highly commended by Paul, for his benevolence towards him while he was a prisoner at Rome; 2 Tim. i.

 16, 17.

ONESIPHORUS, 'He was not ashamed of my chain,' 2 Tim. i. 16, 17. The Roman prisoner was coupled with a soldier, who every where attended and guarded him. Paul was so confined during the two years that he was a prisoner at large, and lived at Rome in his own hired house; Acts xxviii. 16. The circumstance of his publicly wearing this chain, and being thus coupled to a soldier, was very disgraceful and dishonourable, and the ignominy of it would naturally occasion the desertion of former friends. Hence the apostle immortal-izes the name of Onesiphorus, and fervently intercedes with God to bless his family, and to remember him in the day of future recompense, as a rare instance of distinguished fidelity to him when all had turned away and forsaken him.

ONIONS.—A bulbous herb, highly esteemed in Egypt, being sweet and soft, and still served up with deserts; Numb. xi. 5. The Hebrews longed for onions, &c. Their onions, garlic, &c. exquisitely flavoured, says Dr. A.
 Clarke, differed as much from vegetables of the same species in these northern climes, as a bad turnip does from a good apple. Of onions, a late traveller says, "Onions are abundant in Egypt, and are sold 25lbs. for 2½d.

 They are delicious and mild, and the best in the world. They are not coated with hard skins like those in England; but every part is soft and easy of digestion.

 fish, or purpura, found in the Red cious stone resembling in colour the human nail, from the Greek onyx;

 open is, in the east, a studied insult.
 All letters are written on rolls, rolled up and sealed at the ends; Neh. vi. 6.

OPENED the BOOK; Neh. viii.

OPHEL, O'-fel, tower, obscurity.—A wall and tower in Jerusalem, near the temple; 2 Chron. xxvii. 3.

OPHIR, or OPHER, O'-fer, ashes, a making fruitful.—The son of Joktan, Gen. x. 29. Moses does not inform us who were the descendants of Ophir, nor what province they peopled; but it is probable that the country of Ophir, wherever situated, was that which was peopled by the posterity of Ophir, the son of Joktan.

OPHIR, a country whither Solomon sent a fleet, aided by the subjects of Hiram, king of Tyre. Not fewer than sixteen countries have been assigned by various critics, as to the site of Ophir; but the most probable is that of M. Huet, who is of opinion that it was an eastern coast of Africa, by the Arabians termed Zanguebar; that the name of Ophir was given to Sofala on the same coast; that Solomon's fleet went out from the Red Sea, and from the port of Ezion-geber entered the Mediterranean by a canal of communication; and doubling Cape Guardafui, coasted along Africa to Sofala. The opinion of Huet is adopted by Mr. Bruce. It is certain that its gold was renowned even in the time of Job; ch. xxii. 24; xxviii. 16; and that from the time of David to the time of Jehoshaphat, the Hebrews traded with it, and that Uzziah revived this trade when he made himself master of Elath, a noted port of the Red Sea. In Solomon's time, the Hebrew fleet took up three years in their voyage to Ophir, and brought home gold, apes, peacocks, spices, ivory, ebony, and almug-trees; 1 Kings ix. 28; x. 11; xxii. 48; 2 Chron. ix. 10.

ORACLE.—'Holy oracle,' the most holy place, where the ark was kept, and from whence God spake to his people; 1 Kings viii. 6; Psalm xxviii. 2. The Scriptures are the oracles of God, which Christians ought to consult at all times; especially in matters of difficulty, and in the great affairs relating to their souls and another life; Heb. v. 12; Acts vii. 38.

God sometimes spoke to the prophets and others, by a voice, as a man speaks to his friend. Thus he did to Moses, Samuel, Christ, and to the High-priest in the holy of holies. Sometimes he communicated his will by dreams, visions, and the Urim and Thummim, which was accompanied with the ephod, or the pectoral worn by the high-priest, and which God had endued with the gift of foretelling things to come; Num. xii. 6; Joel ii. 28.

Among the ancients the sacred tent existed, which contained a throne, a seat, or oracle, to which the worshippers resorted to obtain counsel, or to inquire into the future. Oracular thrones were in former ages almost universally prevalent, which were consulted by multitudes who were the dupes of the priesthood. According to Homer, oracles existed before the Trojan war, and Ovid represents Deucalion as consulting oracles. But the deception was detected as knowledge spread. Their responses were regarded as delusions by Demosthenes, and were despised by Cicero.

ORACLES of God, Acts 7. 38; Rom. 2. 2; Heb. 5. 12; 1 Pet. 4. 11.

ORATION.—"And made an oration;" Acts xii. 21. A set speech to them, probably delivered to the Tyrian and Sidonian commissioners about the peace.

ORATOR.—One skilful of speech, Isa. iii. 3; Acts xxiv. 1. See Tertullus.

ORCHARDS.—"I made me orchards;" Ecl. ii. 5. How well Solomon was qualified to form gardens, orchards, vineyards, &c., may be at once conceived when we recollect his knowledge of natural history; and that he wrote treatises on vegetables, and their properties, from the cedar to the hyssop.

ORDAIN.—To command or enjoin; 1 Cor. ix. 14.—To appoint or design to a certain end or use; Rom. vii. 10.—To choose or set apart for an office; Mark iii. 14.—To fore-ordain; Acts x. 42; xiii. 48.—To found; 1 Chron. ix. 21; Ps. viii. 2.—To give; Jer. i. 5.—To order; Rom. xiii. 1.—To prepare; Isa. xxx. 33; Eph. ii. 10.

Col. 2. 14. hand-writing of o. was against

20. why are ye subject to o.

Heb. 9. 1. o. of divine service, 10.

OREB, O'-reb, a raven, mixture, the evening.—A prince of Median, slain on the rock Oreb; Jud. vii. 25.

OREN, O'-ren, a coffer, rejoicing.—The son of Jerahmeel, of the posterity of Judah; 1 Chron. ii. 25.

ORGAN.—The ancient organ is supposed to have been very different from ours; rather some kind of wind instrument; Gen. iv. 21; Psa. cl. 4. Dr. A. Clarke says it probably means the Syrinx, composed of several unequal pipes, close at the bottom, which, when blown into at the tops, give a very shrill and lively sound; Ps. cl. 4.

ORION, O'-ry'-on. — A brilliant southern constellation in the heavens of about eighty stars; Job ix. 9.

ORNAMENT 'of grace unto thy head,' Prov. i. 9. The turbans of Easterns, are distinguished among the wealthy by the form and costly materials of which they are made.

ORNAMENT of the LEGS.—The plain anklet without the tinkling ornaments; Isa. iii. 20.

ORNAMENTS, Er. 33. 5; Prov. 1. 9, & 25. 12; Is. 49. 18, & 61. 10; Jer. 2. 32; Ezek. 16. 7, 11; 1 Pet. 3. 4.

ORNAN, Or'-nan, rejoices, their bow or ark.—1 Chr. 22 15.

ORPAH, Or'-pah, a neck, skull, nakedness of the mouth.—A Moabitish female; Ruth i. 4.

ORPHAN.—"We are orphans and fatherless; Lam. v. 3, that is, without king or ruler; Hosea iii. 4. "I will not leave you comfortless," or orphans, or fatherless; John xiv. 18.

OSEE, O'-see.—See HOSHEA; Rom. ix. 25.

OSHEA, O'-she-a.—See JOSHUA; Num. xiii. 8.

OSPRAY.—Thought to be the black eagle. Bruce described this bird under the name Nissa Tokoor; Lev. xi. 13; Deut. xiv. 12.

OSSIFRAGE.—Thought to mean the vulture; Lev. xi. 13; Deut. xiv. 12.

OSTRICH.—The largest of all fowls, and apparently the connecting link between birds and quadrupeds. It is often seven or eight feet in height, and generally weighs from sixty to eighty pounds. Its eggs, of which it lays thirty or forty in a season, are as large as a child's head, and are left in the sand to be hatched by the sun; Job xxxix. 14, 16. Ostriches are found in the desert of Arabia, where they live chiefly on vegetables, and lead a social inoffensive life. In swiftness they far exceed the horse; Job xxxix. 18, and though taken by men on horseback, it is by stratagem. The Arabs often ride upon them. The Ostrich is so timid, that on any alarm it will fly and leave its eggs, or even its young ones; which explains Lam. iv. 3. It is there foretold, that the distress of the Jews should be so great, that parents would suffer their children to perish, being engrossed with anxiety to preserve themselves. It is said, Job xxxix. 16, 17, "She is hardened against her young ones, as though they were not hers," and that she is "deprived of understanding;" and such is remarkably the fact.

OTHNI, Oth'-ny, my time, my hour.—Son of Shemaiah, a valiant man in David's army; 1 Chron. xxvi. 7.

OTHNIEL, Oth'-ne-el, the hour of God.—Son of Kenaz, of the tribe of Judah, and first judge of Israel. He was a very valiant man; Josh. xv. 17; Judges i. 13.

OUCHES.—Sockets for fastening the precious stones in the high priest's ephod; Exod. xxviii. 11, 13, 14; xxxix. 6, 13.

UGHT to do, signifies needful, Luke 24.

26.—Reasonable, Luke 13. 16.

—Matter and manner, Rom. 8.

26; 1 Cor. 8. 2.—A duty Luke 18,

1; Act 5. 29; 20. 35; Eph. 5. 28;

Matt. 23. 23; Jam. 3. 10.

2 Cor. 4. 16, & 10. 7; 1 Pet. 3. 3.

OUTWARDLY, Matt. 23. 28; Rom. 2. 28.

OUTER DARKNESS, Matt. viii. 12.—Nuptial banquets were usually made in the night, and celebrated with many torches, and various lights. Hence the beautiful allusion to the lustre of those illuminated rooms, as opposed to that darkness which surrounded those who by night were turned out. It is used to designate the miserable state of those who will be excluded from the kingdom of heaven.

OUTER, Ezek. 46. 21, & 47. 2; Matt. 8. 12, & 22. 13. & 25. 30.

OVEN.—A place for baking food. Some were dug in the ground. Others were similar to American ovens. Some were like a pitcher; the fire being put inside, and the dough spread thin over the outside, which was baked in a few minutes. Fuel being scarce, as it is in all eastern countries, dried cowdung, stubble, stalks of flowers, and grass, were used. Matt. vi. 30.

OVEN, Ps. 21. 9; Hos. 7. 4; Mal. 4. 1.

OVERCHARGE, to burden, 2 Cor. 2. 5. To make heavy, Luke 21. 34.

OVERCOME signifies to repay an enemy with acts of kindness, Rom. xii. 21. "Overcome evil with good;" however frequently an enemy may grieve and injure thee, endeavour to repay him with kindness; thy goodwill, in the end, may overcome his evil.—The Redeemer's victory, John xvi. 33. "I have overcome the world;" I am just now going by my death to put it and its god to the rout—my apparent weakness shall be my victory; my ignominy shall be my glory; and the victory which the world, the devil, and my adversaries in general shall appear to gain over me, shall be their lasting defeat, and my eternal triumph.—The conquest of the saints; 1 John v. 4, 5; Rev. ii. 7, 11, 17; iii. 5, 12, 21; xxi. 7.

OVERCOME, Gen. 49. 19; Num. 13. 30.

21. to him that o. I will grant to sit with me in my throne

21. 7. he that o. shall inherit all things

OVERFLOW.—Spoken of the Red Sea; Deut. xi. 4;—of Jordan; Josh. iii. 15;—of Noah's flood; 2 Pet. iii. 6. See also Ps. lxxviii. 20; Isa.

xxviii 17; xliiii. 2; Ps. lxxix. 2; Joel ii. 24.

OVERMUCH, more than is needful, Ecc. 7. 16; 2 Cor. 2. 7.

OVERPAST, Ps. 57. 1; Is. 26. 20; Jer. 5. 23.

OVERSEER. One who holds office in civil life, Gen. 39. 4.—Or in the church, Neh. 12. 42.—"Over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, Acts 20. 28; or inspectors, or bishops 77. 3, & 124. 4, & 142. 3. & 143. 4.

7. 16.

OWE.—The apostle charges the Romans to "owe no man any thing," Rom. xiii. 8; pay all your just and lawful debts, and owe no man any thing but mutual love, because that debt can never be fully discharged. Love will prevent you from doing any thing by which a brother may sustain any kind of injury; he who injures another knowingly is not under the influence of Christian love.

OWL.—A bird of night, of the the rapacious kind, very various in size and colour, and found chiefly in desert solitudes, and ruined houses. Isa. xiii. 21. Its voice is excessively disagreeable and melancholy; Job xxx. 29; Ps. cii. 6. Wicked men are compared to owls, in that they hate the light; Isa. xliiii. 20.

OWL, Job 30. 29; Ps. 102. 6; Is. 13. 21, & 34. 11, 15, & 43. 20; Mic. 1. 8.

21. all seek their o. not things of Jesus Christ

OX.—The ox was used for sacrifice, Exod. xxiv. 5; treading out the corn, Deut. xxv. 4; food, 1 Kings iv. 23; draught, 1 Chron. xiii. 9; and for ploughing the ground, 1 Kings xix. 19. He lives long—is liable to few diseases—and maintains his strength on what a horse will not eat. In large farms, oxen are in several respects preferred to horses.

OX knoweth owner, Is. 1. 3, & 11. 7;
Prov. 7. 22, & 14. 4, & 15. 17.

OXEN, Ps. 144. 14; Is. 22. 13; Matt. 22. 4; Luke 14. 19; John 2. 14; 1 Cor. 9. 9.

OZEM, O'-zem, that fasts, their eagerness.—The sixth son of Jesse, 1 Chron. ii. 15.

OZIAS, O-zy'-as.—Son of Joram, Matt. i. 8.

OZNI, Oz'-ny, an ear, my hearing.—The son of Gad, and head of the family of the Oznites, Num. xxvi. 16.

P.

PAARAI, Pa-ar'-a-i, an opening.—The Arbite, one of David's valiant men, 2 Sam. xxiii. 35.

PACE.—A measure of five feet in length; but, perhaps, only a step; 2 Sam. vi. 13.

PACIFY, Esth. 7. 10; Prov. 16. 14.
Ezek. 16. 63. when I am p. towards thee
Prov. 21. 14. gift in secret p. anger
Ecc. 10. 4. yielding p. great offences

PADAN-ARAM, Pay'-dan-ay'-ram, of the field of Syria.—A large country, rendered by the Seventy, Mesopotamia; Gen. xxv. 20.

PADDLE.—A small instrument for digging; Deut. xxiii. 13.

PADON, Pay'-don, his redemption, the yoke of an ox.—One whose children were Nethinims, Ezra ii. 44.

PAGIEL, Pay'-je-el, prayer of God.—The son of Ocran, who made his offering at the tabernacle; Num. vii. 72.

PAHATH-MOAB, Pay'-hath-mo'-ab.—A duke of Moab. The name of a place; Ezra ii. 6; viii. 4.

PAI, Pay'-i, howling, sighing.—A city in the land of Moab, but uncertain where; 1 Chron. i. 50.

PAIN signifies any bodily disease, Job xxxiii. 19; disquiet or uneasiness of mind, Ps. xxv. 18; lv. 4; travail in child-birth, 1 Sam. iv. 19; fear, Ezek. xxx. 4. "The wicked man travailleth with pain all his days," Job xv. 20. He lives a life of care, fear, and grief, by reason of God's wrath, and the torments of his own mind, and his manifold and dreadful outward calamities. "They blasphemed the God of heaven, because of their pains," Rev. xvi. 11. Some observe from hence, the contrary effects that trouble produces in the godly and in the wicked; the one blesseth, the other blasphemeth the Lord. In tribulation the godly rejoice, the wicked rage; for the one in suffering communicates with the cross of Christ, the other with the curse of Adam. Stars shine in the night, which in the day are not seen; and grace is manifest by trouble, which in prosperity lies secret. Trouble tries true religion from false, and discerns grace from nature. "Neither shall there be any more pain," Rev. xxi. 4. In the new earth dwelleth righteousness; and for that reason, there is no more sorrow, pain, or crying; 2 Peter iii. 13.

PAIN, Is. 21. 3, & 26. 18, & 66. 7; Jer. 6. 24; Mic. 4. 10; Rev. 21. 4.

Ps. 116. 3. the p. of hell got hold upon Acts 2. 24. loosed the p. of death

PAINTED, 2 Kings 9. 30; Jer. 4. 30, & 22. 14; Ezek. 23. 40.

PAINTING. 'Though thou rentest thy face with painting;' Jer. iv. 30. 'Though thou distend thine eyes with paint.' Dr. Shaw says, "Ladies do not think themselves dressed, until they have tinged their eyelids with the powder of lead-ore. Now, as this is performed by first dipping into this powder a small wooden bodkin of the thickness of a quill, and drawing it afterwards through the eyelids, over the ball of the eye, we have a lively image of what the prophet may be supposed to mean by "rending the eyes with painting;" Jer. iv. 30. The sooty colour which in this manner is communicated to the eyes, is thought to add a wonderful gracefulness to persons of all complexions

The practice of it, no doubt, is of great antiquity; for beside the instance already taken notice of, we find that Jezebel "painted her face," 2 Kings ix. 30, i. e. she adjusted, or set off, her eyes with the powder of lead-ore. See Ezek. xxiii. 40.

PALACE signifies a dwelling for kings or great men; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 19; Isa. xxxix. 7. "Out of the ivory palaces," Psa. xlv. 8, i. e. palaces adorned, or inlaid, with ivory. The house of God at Jerusalem; 1 Chron. xxix. 1, 19. "The palace is not for man;" not prepared for the name of a son of man, but, as some read, for the name of the word of the Lord God. Josephus says, that the temple was built of large blocks of white marble, beautifully polished, so as to produce a most splendid appearance. "Consider her palaces," Psa. xlviii. 13. The spiritual Jerusalem has been wonderfully raised, and as wonderfully preserved; and believers do well to present that prayer; Psalm cxxii. 7. "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces!"

PALACE, 1 Chr. 29. 1, 19; Ps. 45. 8. 15; Songs 8. 9; Is. 25. 2; Phil. 1. 13.

PALE.—Descriptive of the house of Jacob; "Neither shall his face now wax pale;" that is, his face shall no more be covered with confusion.—The general appearance of plague, disease, and death; Rev. vi. 8. "Behold a pale horse—and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed him." Death rides on a pale horse, and this colour may denote the general appearance of mortality. The effect produced on the persons of men is such that we often see death in them before they themselves feel it. "When thou with rebukes dost correct man for iniquity, thou makest his beauty to consume away like a moth. Thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away;" Job xiv. 20. Herein the beauty of the soul exceeds that of the body; the one is vanishing; the other is abiding.

PALESTINE, Pal'-es-tine, strewed or covered with ashes or dust.—The land of Canaan, so called from the Palestines or Philistines, who possessed a great part of it. It extended from Gaza south, to Lydda north. It was the land of promise, Canaan, or the land of Judea; it was about two hundred miles long, and eighty in the main breadth.

In its palmy days Palestine was "the garden of the Lord—a land of brooks of water, of fountains, and depths that spring out of valleys and hills—a land of wheat and barley, and vines, and fig-trees, and pomegranates—a land of oil, olive, and honey." The sins of its inhabitants have dried up many of its fountains, blasted its vines, and withered its fig-trees; but the bee yet murmurs on the fragrant cliffs of Carmel, and clusters of olives may yet be gathered in Gethsemane. The ruthless Maronites and Druses have not yet exterminated the cedars of Lebanon; and at the fountain of Siloam the moss springs out of the wall, as did the "hyssop" in the days of Solomon. The almond-tree flourishes along the Jordan, and, like a canopy of silver, shines against the sky of a cloudless spring, even as when its snowy blossoms on leafless branches reminded king Solomon of approaching age. Sycamores grow by the wayside, as when Zaccheus climbed into one to gaze on the Saviour; and the Arabian pitches his tent under the terebinth, like Abraham when he received his angel visitors at Mamre. Jericho was anciently the city of palm-trees, and they still exist, bearing much fruit, which the inhabitants delight in, and probably most of us have seen dates from Jericho. The pine, the cypress, still abound, and the beautiful myrtles yield a most delightful fragrance. Sharon yet retains its lovely roses, and near the Mount of Beatitudes, are the gorgeous amaryllis, the descendants of those very lilies to which the Divine Teacher pointed more than 1800 years ago, and bade his disciples "consider" them. Has-selquist was charmed with the jasmine of Palestine; another traveller speaks with rapture of the delicious odour which sprang at every step of his way from Jerusalem to Jaffa, when the rains had revived the rosemary, thyme, balm, and other aromatics; and Maundrell understood the prophetic allusion in the glen of Lebanon, where Canobin lies embosomed. This valley "is on both sides exceedingly steep and high, clothed with fragrant greens from top to bottom, and everywhere refreshed with fountains, falling down from the rocks in pleasant cascades; the ingenious work of nature." But, alas! where nature has been bountiful, man is indolent. The husbandman of Jaffa scratches the sandy mould, throws in a handful of melon-seed, and he forgets it till the heat of summer reminds him of it. How fertile, how lovely, would this land appear, if cultivated.

PALESTINA, Pal-es-ty'-na.—The same as PALESTINE; Exod. xv. 14; Isa. xiv. 29.

PALMS IN THEIR HANDS. Rev. vii. 9, This refers to the heavenly state. Conquerors used to carry palm-tree branches in their hands. Those who conquered in the Grecian combats not only had crowns of palm-tree given them, but carried branches of it in their hands. The Romans did the same in their triumphs. They sometimes wore toga palmata, a garment with the figures of palm-trees upon it, which were interwoven in it.

PALM-TREE.—The Palm is a valuable Eastern evergreen, tall and upright, bearing much fruit, called dates, which are very sweet and nourishing. A large portion of the inhabitants of Egypt, Arabia, and Persia, subsist almost entirely upon this fruit. Camels are fond of the stones. This fruit is about the size of an olive.

The leaves are six or eight feet long, and proportionably broad when spread out, and are used to cover houses, and make couches, baskets, bags, fences, hats, &c. From the fibre of the branches are made good thread, ropes, rigging, &c. Indeed 'the natives (says GIBSON) celebrate either in prose or verse, three hundred and sixty uses to which the trunk, branches, leaves, juice, and fruit, are applied. The palm-tree attains maturity in thirty years from planting the seed, and continues in full strength for seventy or eighty years, bearing annually three or four hundred pounds of dates; and finally dies at about two hundred years old. From its sap, palm-wine is made, called by the natives Araky. This is a beverage which easily intoxicates, and it is thought by Bishop LOWTH to be the "strong drink" mentioned in Isaiah v. 11, and xxiv. 9.

From that species of palm-trees called Lanlan, growing wild in various parts of the East, the common sago is procured. It forms a nutritious diet for the natives, who eat it as we do rice. This kind of palm bears no fruit, but the sort of cabbage on the top which is common to all palms. The sago is obtained from the sap and pith of the tree.

The straight and lofty growth of this fine tree, its longevity and great fecundity, the permanency and perpetual flourishing of its leaves, and their form resembling the solar rays, makes it, says Mr. Parkhurst, a very proper emblem both of the natural and of the divine light. Hence in the holy place or sanctuary of the temple, (the emblem of Christ's body) palm-trees were engraved on the walls and doors between the coupled cherubs; 1 Kings vi. 29, 32, 35; Ezek. xli. 18, 19, 20, 25, 26. Hence, at the Feast of Tabernacles branches of palm-trees were to be used, among others, in making their booths. Compare Lev. xxiii. 40; Neh. viii. 15. Its branches are a symbol of joy and victory; John xii. 13; Rev. vii. 9. It is also an emblem of the active virtues of the Christian; Psalm xcii. 12.

PALMER-WORM.—A sort of caterpillar of great voracity. BOCHART contends, against the majority of learned men, that it is a species of the locust. It occurs only in Joel i. 4; ii. 25; Amos iv. 9.

PALSY, from the Greek, paraluo, I unloose, enfeeble.—It is a disease which deprives the body in whole, or part, of action and feeling; Matt. iv. 24; viii. 6; ix. 2; Mark ii. 3, 5, 10. This disease is caused by a relaxation of the nerves, or by their severance through accident, &c.

PALTI, Pal'-ty, deliverance, flight.—The son of Raphu, who was one of the spies; Num. xiii. 9.

PALTIEL, Pal'-te-el, deliverance.—The son of Azzan; Num. xxxiv. 26.

PALTITE, Pal'-tite.—Descendant of Palti; 2 Sam. xxiii. 26.

PAMPHYLIA, Pam-fil'-le-a, a nation made up of every tribe.—A hilly province of Asia Minor; Acts xxvii. 5. Its southern boundary is the Mediterranean Sea; its northern, Pisidia; its western, Lycia; and its eastern, Cilicia; Acts xiii. 13. Perga and Attalia were its chief cities. It is now known by the name of Teke, and was anciently celebrated for its rich pastures, its luxuriant vines and olives, and still abounds in forests of lemon and orange trees.

PANNAG, Pan'-nag.—Either the name of a place or an article of merchandise, probably a valuable spice of some kind; Ezek. xxvii. 17.

PANT. Ardent desire after the waters of spiritual comfort, Ps. 42. 1. As the hart panteth, &c., Amos 2. 7;

Ps. 38. 10, & 42. 1, & 119. 131; Isa. 21. 4.

PAPER REEDS; Isa. xix. 7. A kind of bulrushes which grow by the banks of the Nile, in Egypt; of the skins or films of this plant, paper was long made. From papyrus, the name it bore, comes paper.

Paper was invented in very early times. The stalk is triangular, rising to the height of eight or nine feet, beside several feet under the water, and terminating at the top in a crown of small filaments resembling the thistle. Of these the Egyptians made baskets, shoes, clothes, and small boats; Exodus ii. 3; Isaiah xviii. 2. When one of the Ptolemies denied Attalus, king of Pergamus, this kind of paper, for writing his library, he invented or greatly improved the manufacture of parchment. After which, books of note were written on parchment, for almost 1300 years. The parchments which Paul left at Troas, and ordered Timothy to bring with him, were probably either the original draughts of some of his epistles, or a marked copy of the Old Testament; 2 Tim. iv. 13. Paper made of linen rags has been in use for about five hundred and fifty years. Latterly cotton rags, and sometimes even straw, and other substances, have been made into paper.

PAPHOS, Pay'-fos, which boils, is hot.—A famous city of Cyprus, lying on the western coast of the island, where Venus had her most ancient and most famous temple. Here the Roman Proconsul, Sergius Paulus, converted by the Apostle Paul, had his seat of residence; Acts xiii. 6, 7.

PARABLE.—A similitude or allegorical fable, founded on something real or apparent, in nature or history; designed to convey and illustrate some important truth. The word, however, is variously used in the Scriptures, to denote a proverb or short saying, Luke iv. 23; a famous or received saying, 1 Sam. x. 12; Ezek. xviii. 2; a thing gravely spoken, and comprehending important matters in a few words, Job xxvii. 1; Num. xxiii. 7, 18; xxiv. 3, 15; Ps. xlix. 4, and lxxviii. 2; a thing dark or figuratively expressed, Ezek. xx. 49; Matt. xv. 15; a special instruction, Luke xiv. 7; and a similitude or comparison, xxiv. 32; Mark iii. 23. According to Bishop Lowth, a parable is that kind of allegory which consists of a continued narration of a fictitious event, applied by way of simile to the illustration of some important truth.

The prophets made use of parables, to give a stronger impression to prince and people of the threatenings, or of the promises they made to them. Nathan reproved David under the parable of a rich man that had taken away and killed the lamb of a poor man; 2 Sam. xii. 2, 3, &c. The woman of Tekoah, that was hired by Joab to reconcile the mind of the same prince towards his son Absalom, proposed to him the parable of her two sons that fought in the field; and one of which having killed the other, they were going to put the murderer to death, and so to deprive her of both her sons at once; 2 Sam. xiv. 2, 3, &c. Jotham, son of Gideon, proposed to the men of Shechem the parable of the bramble, whom the trees had a mind to choose for their king; Judges ix. 7, 8, &c. The prophets often reprove the infidelity of Jerusalem under the parable of an adulterous wife. They describe the violence of such princes as are enemies to the people of God, under the representation of lions, eagles, bears, &c. Nor did our Saviour himself disdain to adopt the same method of instruction; of whose parables it is doubtful whether they excel most in wisdom and utility, or in sweetness, elegance, and perspicuity.—Every parable is composed of three parts; (1.) The sensible similitude. (2.) The explanation or mystical sense. This is frequently not expressed; for, though our Lord sometimes condescended to unveil the hidden sense, by disclosing the moral meaning of his parable, as in Matt. xiii. 3—8, 18—23, compared with Luke viii. 4—15, and Matt. xiii. 24—30, 36—43, yet he usually left the application to those whom he designed to instruct by his doctrine. (3.) The constituent part of a parable is the root or scope to which it tends.

PARABLE, Ps. 49. 4, & 78. 2; Prov. 26. 7, 9; Ezek. 20. 49; Mic. 2. 4; Matt. 13. 34; Luke 5. 21.

PARADISE, Par-a'-dyse, a garden of pleasure.—The garden of Eden, mentioned Gen. ii. 8, is also called in the Septuagint, the garden of Paradise. Several places were thus called; see Gen. iv. 16; 2 Kings xix. 12; Isa. xxxvii. 12, and Amos i. 5. Paradise was, in the beginning, the habitation of man in his state of innocence, in which he enjoyed that presence of his Maker, which constituted his supreme happiness.

In the New Testament, Paradise signifies the invisible residence of the blessed; Luke xxiii. 43. "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise;" in the abode of the spirits of the just, to enjoy the presence and approbation of the Most High; Rev. ii. 7. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God;" Rev. ii. 7. See Eden.

Paradise means the same as the third heaven; (which see.) The word is of Persian origin, and the Persians gave the name of Paradise to the parks and gardens of their kings. In process of time, it came to denote all places of a similar description. It passed from the Persians to the Greeks, to the Hebrews, and to the Latins.

PARADISE, Gen. 2. 15; Luke 23. 43; 2 Cor. 12. 4; Rev. 2. 7.

PARAH, Pay'-rah, a cow, increasing, stirring up.—A city in the tribe of Benjamin, Josh. xviii. 23.

PARAN, Pay'-ran, beauty, glory, ornament.—A desert of Arabia Petrea, southward of Palestine, and north-east of the gulf Elanitis. The whole of this track is rocky and sandy; the coasts are lined with coral reefs, and many petrifications are found. Herc Chedorlaomer and his allies stopped ravaging the surrounding country. It was to this wilderness that Hagar retired with her son Ishmael when she was driven from the dwelling of Abraham. And here, at a subsequent period, the descendants of Ishmael dispersed themselves over the neighbouring countries; and amid the dreariness of this desert the Israelites wandered for thirty-eight years, during which they witnessed many manifestations of the wisdom and power of God. Gen. xiv. 6; xxi. 21; Deut. xxxiii. 2.

PARANA.—A city of Arabia Petraea, three days' journey from Elah, towards the east.

Also a mountain, Deut. xxxiii. 2.

PARCHED.—'Parched ground shall become a pool,' &c.; Isa. xxxv. 7. Bishop Lowth reads, "And the glowing sand shall," &c.; the sand which sometimes deceives the thirsty traveller, by seeming at a distance like water. All this allusion would be well understood by the orientals. In spring and summer, if the east wind continue to blow a few days, the fields are in general so parched that scarcely a blade of any thing green remains; many rivers and streams are dried up, the others are rendered briny, and all nature seems at the point of dissolution. After a plentiful shower, however, the fields revive beyond all expectation; rivers resume their course, and the springs pour forth more delicious water; the whole face of nature is changed, which introduces much higher ideas of refreshment and pleasure than the like causes can suggest to us.

PARCHMENT.—Prepared sheep skin, in the form of rolls, which were much used for writing on, before the invention of paper made of rags. The Apostle was a great reader of books, both Gentile and Jewish; as appears by his citations out of the heathen poets, and his acquaintance with Jewish records; Acts xvii. 28; 1 Cor. xv. 33; 2 Tim. iii. 8; Titus i. 12. And though now grown old and near his exit, yet he was mindful of his books, and desirous of having them to read; and thus he set an example to Timothy, and enforced the exhortation he gave him; 2 Tim. iv. 13. The directions are given favour the opinion that the Apostle was hurried away by his persecutors from the place of his former abode, without being allowed leisure either to accomplish his plans, or to take with him those things which he intended. He probably intended to bequeath them to the faithful; that they might be preserved for the use of the church.

PARTHIA, Par'-the-a, horseman.

—Parthia, a celebrated country of Asia, was bounded on the north by Hyrcania; on the east by Aria; on the south by Carmania; and on the west by Media. It is stated by ancient geographers as having contained twenty-three large cities and about two thousand villages, the most distinguished of which was called Hecatompylos. Parthia now forms a part of the Persian empire.

The district of Persia answering to ancient Parthia is called Nishapore and Komis, the chief town of which is Damghan, supposed to occupy the same site as Hecatompylos, so called from its having a hundred gates; or, because all the roads in the Parthian dominions centered here.

PARTHIANS, Par'-the-ans, horsemen.—The same with the Persians, called Elamites till after the time of Cyrus. They were called Persians in the time of the prophets; and Parthians, about the time of Christ; Acts ii. 9. The Parthians were physically a powerful race of people—accounted the most warlike nation of the east—they were distinguished for their horsemanship, and the exactness of their aim in discharging arrows during their retreat—yet they were notorious for intemperance and dissolute habits, and addicted to every species of immorality. The Parthians and the Medes were present at Jerusalem when the Holy Ghost fell on the apostles; many of the Parthians were Jews by profession; Acts ii. 2.

PARTIALITY.—Unfair and unjust treatment of others, to be avoided; Matt. xxii. 16; Jam. ii. 1, 9; Jude 16

PARTIALITY, “without partiality;” Jam. iii. 17. The original means, without a partial wrangling, suspicious, judging temper; no English word fully expresses its meaning.

PARTITION, that which divided the Jews from the Gentiles; Eph. ii. 14. “Hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us.” By abolishing the law of Jewish ordinances, Jesus has removed that which kept the two parties not only in a state of separation, but also at variance.

PARTRIDGE, ‘hunt a partridge;’ 1 Sam. xxvi. 20. The eastern partridge, when pursued, soon becomes weary, and the Arab chases and knocks it down with a club. The prophet speaks of “the partridge that sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not,” as being like the man who getteth riches, and not by right. As this bird makes no other nest than a hole in the ground, her eggs are very often destroyed by rain or by the feet of animals. Several of them will lay in the same nest, so that the sitting hen cannot cover them all, and many are spoiled. Fifty or sixty eggs are often found in one nest; Jer. xvii. 11.

PARUAH, Par'-u-ah, flourishing, that flies away.—The father of Jehoshaphat; 1 Kings iv. 17.

PARVAIM, Par'-vay'-im.—A country supposed to be called Peru, or Ceylon; 2 Chron. iii. 6.

PASACH, Pay'-sak, the broken piece, thy diminishing.—A descendant of Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 33.

PASDAMMIM, Pas-dam'-mim, a portion or diminishing of blood.—A place in Palestine; 1 Chron. xi. 13.

PASEAH, Pas-e'-ah, a passing over.—A person whose children were Nethinims; 1 Chron. iv. 12; Neh. iii. 6.

PASHUR, Pash'-ur, extending the hole.—One whose children returned from captivity; Ezra ii. 38.

PASSAGE, a ford or pass; Judg.
 xiii. 6; 1 Sam. xiii. 23; Jer. xxii. 20.

PASSION signifies (1) Natural and sinful affections; Acts xv. 15; Jam.
 v. 17. (2) The sufferings of Christ;
Acts i. 3.

PASSOVER, a solemn festival;
 it was instituted in memory of the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt, and of the favour showed to them by God, when the destroying angel, passing through the land, spared their first-born, while he put to death all those of the Egyptians; Exod. xii. 14, 29, 30—51. This festival was also called the feast or the days of unleavened bread; Exod. xxiii. 15; Mark
 xiv. 1; Acts xii. 3. because it was unlawful to eat any other bread during the seven days the feast lasted. (1)
 The passover commenced on the evening subsequent to the fourteenth day of the month Nisan, the first in the Jewish or sacred or ecclesiastical year;
Exod. xii. 6, 8, 18; Lev. xxiii. 4—8;
Num. xxviii. 16. with eating what was called the paschal lamb; and it was to continue until the twenty-first.
 The day preceding its commencement was called the preparation of the passover; John xix. 14. (2) The paschal lamb was to be a male, without blemish, of the first year, either from the sheep or the goats; Exod. xii. 5. It was to be taken from the flocks four days before it was killed; and one lamb was to be offered for each family; and if its members were too few to eat a whole lamb, two families were to join together. In the time of Josephus, a paschal society consisted at least of ten persons to one lamb, and not more than twenty. Our Saviour's society was composed of himself and the twelve disciples; Matt. xxvi. 20; Luke xxii. 14. (3) With regard to the mystical signification of the passover, we know generally from St. Paul, who calls Jesus our passover; 1 Cor.

 v. 7. "Christ our passover was sacrificed for us. The holiness of his nature, or the spotless purity of his heart and life, was prefigured by the paschal Lamb's being without blemish; and in reference to this, the apostle Peter tells his Christian brethren, that "they were not redeemed with silver and gold—but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot; 1 Pet. i. 19. "The Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world;" John i. 29. The paschal lamb was to be killed by the effusion of its blood—and the Saviour laid down his life, or poured out his soul unto death, and shed his blood for the remission of the sins of many;
John x. 17, 18; Matt xxvi. 28. The Israelites enjoyed protection and safety through sprinkling the blood of the victim on the posts of their doors, and eating of the sacrifice. "By faith Moses kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch them;" Heb. xi. 28. So Jesus Christ gave himself for the life of the world, and hence he said, "Unless ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man, ye have no life in you;"
John vi. 51—56; Luke xxii. 20; Matt.
 xxvi. 27. See Feast.

PASTORS.—Shepherds, or ministers of the gospel, whose business it is to feed the sheep of Christ; Jer. iii.
 15; x. 21; xxiii. 1, 2; Eph. iv. 11.
 Their counsels are to be obeyed; Heb.
 xiii. 17. They are to be held in reputation and honour; Phil. ii. 29; and to be highly esteemed; 1 Thess v. 12, 13. The ground of this is, the resemblance they bear in their work and office to Jesus Christ; Heb. xiii. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 25; v. 4.

PASTURE.—A place for feeding flocks and herds of cattle; Gen. xlvii.

4; 1 Chron. iv. 39, 40, 41;—spiritual nourishment; Psalm xxiii. 2; John x. 9. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures." The loveliest image afforded by the natural world is here presented to the imagination; that of a flock, feeding in verdant meadows, and quietly reposing by the rivers of waters running gently through them. It is selected to convey an idea of the provision made for the souls, as well as the bodies of men, by his goodness, who opens his hand, and fills all living with plenteousness. "By me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture;" John x. 9.

PASTURE, Ps. 74. 1. sheep of thy p. 79. 13, & 95. 7, & 23. 2, & 100. 3; Is. 30. 23, & 49. 9; Ezek. 34. 14, 18; John 10. 9.

PATARA, Pat'-a-ra, trodden underfoot.—A sea-port city of Lycia, at which Paul touched; Acts xxi. 1. Patara was famed for its excellent harbours, and the beauty and magnificence of its many splendid temples, one of which was dedicated to Apollo, and contained an oracle equal to that of Delphi. The city was beautified by Ptolemy Philadelphus. Some extensive ruins mark its former magnificence and extent, and attest the opulence of the age both of Adrian and Trajan, amongst which are those of a theatre with its marble seats entire—those of a temple—the outline of the ancient walls with those of the towers which defended them, and the castle which commanded the harbour—a gate consisting of a triple arch with projecting scrolls, is still erect; and without the walls the Necropolis.

PATH, sometimes denotes the general course of life, as feet do particular actions; Psa. cxix. 105.

PATH, 'there is a path which no fowl knoweth,' &c. That is, man has discovered much, yet much remains undiscovered; Job xxviii. 7.

PATHS, 'in thy paths,' Psa. xvii. 5. Eastern roads for travellers are made by the camels' feet; and where there is verdure, they form many paths in one broad way: hence, probably, the allusion; Psa. xvii. 5; xxiii. 3; xxvii. 11; cxix. 35, &c.

PATHROS, Path'-ros, mouthful of dew, or dough.—A city and canton of Egypt. It is probably the Phaturis of Pliny. It derived its name from Pathrusim, the fifth son of Mizraim, who built and peopled it; Gen. x. 14; Isa. xi. 11; Jer. xlv. 1, 15.

PATHRUSIM, Path-rew'-sim. — The son of Mizraim; Gen. x. 14.

PATIENCE.—That noble passion or power of the mind which renders a man capable of enduring the difficulties, afflictions, and disappointments of this life. That grace which enables us with calm and unruffled temper to submit to the will of God under all circumstances; an humble and submissive waiting for and expectation of eternal life, and the accomplishment of God's promises. Also the long-suffering of God, which delays the punishment of the ungodly, and allows them space for repentance; Matt. xviii. 26—29; Rom. ii. 4. Patience is one of the noblest attainments of the Christian.

PATMOS, Pat'-mos, mortal.—An island in the Ægean Sea, whither John was banished, A. D. 94. It is a small, oblong and rocky island, about 18 or 20 miles in circumference. The shores are generally steep and precipitous, and from the sea it appears as if the inhabitants would be in constant danger of rolling down into the sea. The island has now very few trees; though it was anciently famed for its excellent wines, corn, and figs, and was adorned with myrtles and arbuti, and had a considerable population.

On this island John received his Revelations, which, however, were not published till his return to Ephesus. The chief town is in the centre of the island, 5000 feet above the level of the sea, and contains 200 houses and a Catholic convent. The present name of the island is Patmol, or Pamosa.

PATRIARCH.—The head or prince of a family, applied chiefly to those who lived before the time of Moses. hence we speak of "the patriarchal age." Acts ii. 29; vii. 9; Heb. vii. 4, PATRIMONY. The estate by a father to his child, Deut. 18. 8.

PATROBAS, Pat'-ro-bas, paternal.—A disciple of the Apostles; Rom. xvi. 14, 15.

PATTERN, an example, 1 Tim. 1. 16; Tit. 2. 7; Ezek. 43. 10; Heb. 8. 5, & 9. 23.

PAU, Pay'-ew, that cries aloud, appears.—A city of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 39.

PAUL, Paul, a worker.—His former name, Saul, means a destroyer.—He was a Hebrew of the Hebrews, a descendant of the patriarch Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin, and a native of Tarsus, then the chief city of Cilicia. By birth he was a citizen of Rome, a distinguished honour and privilege, which had probably been conferred on some of his ancestors for services rendered to the commonwealth during the wars; Phil. iii. 5; 2 Cor. xi. 22; Acts xvi. 37, 38; xxii. 25, 29; xxiii. 27. His father was a Pharisee, and he himself was educated in the most rigid principles of that sect; Acts xxiii. 6; xxvi. 5. His sister's son and some others of his relations were Christians, and had embraced the gospel before his conversion; Acts xxiii. 16—22; Rom. xvi. 7, 11, 21.

At Jerusalem he studied under Gamaliel, a celebrated teacher of that day, and made great proficiency in the law, traditions, &c. He became a very learned and famous Pharisee. His allusions to the philosophers of that day, and his quotations from the Greek poets, Menander, Epimenides, and Aratus, prove that he was conversant with Greek literature; Acts xvii. 28; 1 Cor. xv. 33; Tit. i. 12. He was a person of great natural ability, of quick apprehension, strong passions, and firm resolution, and he was thus qualified for signal service as a teacher. He was also conscientious in his life, and strictly faithful to the doctrines committed to his trust, and to the churches under his care, as confirmed by Acts xx. 17; xxiii. 1; xxvi. 4, 5; Phil. iii. 6; 1 Tim. i. 13; 2 Tim. i. 3.

His parents completed his education by having him taught the art of tent-making; for among the Jews of the highest birth young men were taught some mechanical employment. It was a favourite maxim with them; "He who does not teach his son to work teaches him to steal." Some render the term, "a maker of mats and mattresses," "maker of tent-cloth," a "worker in leather." Luther translates it "carpet-maker." Probably "tent-maker" is the right translation.

Paul was very hostile, and bitter against Christianity. This was openly manifest when Stephen was martyred; Acts vii. 58. He actively joined in the persecution of the Christians in Jerusalem, and throughout Judea; Acts viii. 3; xxii. 4; xxvi. 10, 11. He obtained letters of commission from the Sanhedrim for the purpose of persecution. While on his journey to Damascus for this purpose, he was miraculously converted, A. D. 35. See Acts xix. 22, 26. In some of his epistles he strikingly refers to his conversion; 1 Cor. xv. 9; 1 Tim. i. 12, 13. Not long after his baptism, and the descent of the Spirit upon him, he went into Arabia; Gal. i. 17. Three years after his conversion, he returned to Damascus; Gal. i. 18, and boldly preached the gospel to the Jews, who bitterly opposed him. He escaped their fury privately by night, and went up to Jerusalem; Acts xix. 23—25; Gal. i. 17, 18; 2 Cor. xi. 32, 33. Persecuted there he left for Tarsus; Acts ix. 28—30, A. D. 39. While Paul was in Cilicia he had those divine visions and revelations of which he speaks; 2 Cor. xii. On which occasion "there was given him a thorn in the flesh." The history of his itinerancy, his persecution, his success, and his trials, are recorded in the Acts of the Apostles.

This heroic apostle suffered martyrdom during the general persecution of the Christians by Nero. The ancients vary in their accounts of the precise time of his death, though all agree as to the manner of his martyrdom. Being a Roman citizen, he was beheaded at a place called the Salvian waters, about three miles from the city, and his body was interred in the Ostium way, where Constantine the Great erected a church, which was afterwards enlarged by Theodosius, and highly ornamented by the empress Placidia. This glorious light of the church did not confine his ministry to preaching the gospel; he wrote fourteen epistles, in which the doctrines of our religion are explained and inculcated with peculiar sublimity and force of language.

PAUL.—"Paul said to Agrippa, I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds." To understand the force of this passage, we must recollect the Roman method of fettering and confining criminals. One end of a chain that was of a commodious length, was fixed about the right arm of the prisoner, and the other end was fastened to the left of a soldier. Fettered in this manner, St. Paul delivered his apology before Festus, Agrippa, and Bernice; and it was this circumstance which occasioned one of the most pathetic and affecting strokes of true oratory that was ever displayed either in the Grecian or Roman senate. What a prodigious effect must this striking address and conclusion, and the sight of the irons held up to enforce it, have had upon the minds of the audience!

PAVEMENT.—A floor; 2 Chron. vii. 3.—Of stones; 2 Kings xvi. 17.—Of sapphire; Ex. xxiv. 10.—Of marble; Esth. i. 6.

PAVEMENT, John xix. 13. This was an area or room of the judgment hall; the floor was made of small square stones of various colours. It was common in palaces, and houses of wealth and splendour.

PAVILION signifies a tent made of cloth, stretched out on poles; Jer. xliii. 10. "And he shall spread his royal pavilion over them." When David expressed his desire to dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of his life, he added, "for in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion." Psa. xxvii. 5. Thick heavy clouds deeply charged, and with lowering aspects, spread about the Almighty as a tent; Psa. xviii. 11. "His pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies." The representation is truly grand and poetic. Deut. iv. 11; Ps. xvii. 2.

PAVILION.—"For in the time of trouble, he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me upon a rock;" Ps. xxvii. 5. The pavilion alludes to the royal tent, which was well guarded, and the most secure place in the camp; therefore the believer is safe with the King.

PAVILION, 1 Kings 20. 12, 16; Ps. 18. 11, & 27. 5. & 31. 20; Jer. 43. 10.

PAY.—To make satisfaction; Exod. xxi. 19.—A just price; Num. xx. 19; Ps. xxxvii. 21; Matt. xviii. 28.

PEACE.—That delightful sensation which arises from the assurance of safety, enjoyment, and security against want and misery. As by sin mankind are at enmity with God, or in a state of war with heaven; so to be delivered from its guilt is called "peace with God;" Rom. v. 1; Isa. xxvii. 5; and from this peace arises that of conscience, Heb. x. 22. This peace is the gift of God through Jesus Christ, 2 Thess. iii. 16. It is a blessing of great importance, Ps. cxix. 165. It is denominated perfect, Isa. xxvi. 3; inexpressible, Phil. iv. 7; eternal, Isa. lvii. 2; 2 Pet. iii. 14. Peace is an apostolical salutation and benediction, including all true peace, Rom. i. 7; Phil. iv. 7; 2 Thess. iii. 16; 2 Cor. xiii. 11.

PEACE.—"Peace I leave with you—not as the world giveth," &c.; John xiv. 27. Here is a beautiful allusion to those empty insignificant forms which men mechanically repeat at meeting or taking leave of each other. Our Lord being about to part from his disciples, intimates as much as this: Since I must shortly be taken from you, I now bid you adieu, sincerely wishing you every happiness,—not as the world giveth, give I unto you,—not in the unmeaning, ceremonial manner in which the world repeats this salutation, Peace, &c.; for my wishes for your peace and happiness are sincere, and my blessing will secure your felicity.

PEACE.—"Follow peace with all men," Heb. xii. 14. A hunting allusion, 'Follow peace, as the hunter does the hare.'

PEACOCK.—A beautiful bird, not known in Palestine till imported by Solomon, 1 Kings x. 22. Its native country seems to have been Persia and India. When Alexander reached the river Indus, he was so charmed at the sight of these birds that he forbade them to be killed, under a severe penalty; and when Hortensius first killed one for supper at Rome, he was tried for the offence.

PEARL.—The production of shell-fish of the oyster kind, found chiefly in the East Indies, near Ceylon, and called Berberi; also at Bahrein, in the Persian Gulf, and in the Gulf of Mexico. They are of a brilliant sparkling white, generally round, and formed in coats like an onion.

Cleopatra had a pearl valued at 80,000 pounds sterling. The Persian emperor had one worth 110,000 pounds sterling; and Philip II. of Spain had one as large as a pigeon's egg, and valued at 144,000 ducats. What is very excellent is likened to pearls; how precious! how hard to be come at in a proper manner! how truly ornamental! and how apt are men to counterfeit them! Matt. xiii. 46; Rev. xxi. 21, 22.

The pearl is put, (1.) For the precious truths of the gospel, or godly admonition; Matt. vii. 6. (2.) The Lord Jesus, or his church; Matt. xiii. 45. (3.) The glorious state of the saints in heaven; Rev. xxi. 21.

PEARLS.—Neither cast pearls before swine. To "cast pearls before swine," is to preach the gospel to persecutors; to apply the promises and privileges of the saints to men really wicked; or to dispense sacraments to persons notoriously profane; or to administer reproofs to obstinate scoffers; Matt. vii. 6. "Lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again, and rend you;" that is, lest the swine trample on the pearls, and the dogs turn and rend you. It was customary with the ancient writers of Greece and Rome, and with the eastern sages, to denote certain classes of men by animals of similar dispositions. Our Saviour adopted the same natural, concise, and energetic method. By dogs, which the Jews much detested, he meant men of odious character, and violent temper; and by swine, the usual emblem of moral filth, the abandoned and profligate. His exhortation meant that, as the priests gave not any of the sacrifice to dogs, so his disciples should not throw away their instruction on those who would blaspheme, nor their religious wisdom, more precious than rubies, on the impure, who would only deride them.

PEDAHEL, Ped'-a-hel, the redemption of God.—Son of Ammihud, of the tribe of Naphtali; Num. xxxiv. 28.

PEDAHZUR, Ped-ah'-zur, saviour, strong.—The father of Gamaliel, head of the tribe of Manasseh; Num. i. 10.

PEDAIAH, Ped-a-i'-ah, redemption of the Lord.—The grandmother of Jehoiakim, king of Judah; 2 Kings xxiii. 36.—Also father of Zerubbabel and Shimei; 1 Chron. iii. 18.

PEELED.—"A nation scattered and peeled," Isa. xviii. 2. Either relating to the practice of the Egyptian priests, who made their bodies smooth, by shaving off their hair, or rather to the country's being made smooth, perfectly plain and level, by the overflowing Nile.

PEKAH, Pe'-kah, opening of the Lord.—The son of Remaliah, commander of the forces of Pekahiah, king of Israel: he conspired against his master, and succeeded him as king; 2 Kings xv. 25.

PEKAHIAH, Pek-a-hy'-ah, it is the Lord that opens.—Son and successor of Menahem, king of Israel: he reigned but two years; 2 Kings xv. 22, 23.

PEKOD, Pe'-kod, noble, a ruler.—A city, Jer. i. 21.

PELAIHAH, Pel-a-i'-ah, the miracle of the Lord.—A Levite who signed the covenant, Neh. x. 10.

PELALIAH, Pel-a-ly'-ah, a thinking on the Lord.—The son of Amzi, a priest; Neh. xi. 12.

PELATIAH, Pel-a-ty'-ah, let the Lord deliver.—A captain who subdued the Amalekites, 1 Chron. iv. 42.—The son of Benaiah, a prince who lived in the time of Zedekiah, king of Judah; Ezek. xi. 1, &c.

PELEG, Pe'-leg, division.—Son of Eber. He was born one hundred years after the flood, and was so named because in his days the earth was divided into nations, in consequence of the confusion of tongues at the tower of Babel; Gen. x. 25; xi. 16.

PELET, Pe'-let, deliverance.—The son of Aznaveth, one of David's valiant men; 1 Chron. xii. 3.

PELETH, Pe'-leth, decay.—The father of On, Num. xvi. 1.

PELETHITES, Pe'-le-thites, judges, destroyers.—These and the Cherethites were valiant soldiers, the personal guards of David; 2 Sam. viii. 18.

PELICAN; Ps. cii. 6; Lev. xi. 18; Deut. xiv. 17.—An aquatic bird, somewhat larger than the common goose. Its colour is nearly white, the neck yellowish, and the back dark brown. It has a long crooked beak, and the forepart of the head towards the throat naked. Pelicans have a bag at their throat, nearly as capacious as a peck measure, into which they gather fishes, &c., for themselves and their young, of whom they are extremely careful. Its feeding its young from the bag on its breast has perhaps been the origin of its giving them its own blood; and thus caused it to be the emblem of paternal, as the stork is of filial affection. This bird is very retired in its habits, sitting for whole days alone among rocks and solitudes. Its voice is plaintive and disagreeable. Hence David compares himself in his distress to the pelican; Ps. cii. 6.

PELION, Pe'-lon, hid, concealed.—A city of Judea, 1 Chron. xi. 27.

PEN.—An instrument for writing. Anciently, when tablets of wax, &c., were used, the pen was generally made of reed. John, in his third Epistle, verse 13, says, "I have many things to write unto thee, but not with pen (calamus,) and ink." The English word pen, comes from the Latin penna, a feather; but the use of quills is a modern invention; the first authentic testimony of their being so used is in Isidorus, who died A. D. 636. In Job xix. 24, mention is made of an "iron pen;" i. e., an instrument with a steel point, with which letters were cut, or engraved, on the leaves of the palm-tree, and afterwards some black colouring matter was rubbed in, in order to make the letters apparent. This, Dr. A. Clarke thinks, was the oldest mode of writing, and it continues among the Cingalese to the present day. "Write it with a man's pen;" Isa. viii. 1.

PEN of iron, Job 19. 24; Jer. 17. 1.

Ps. 45. 1. my tongue is the pen of a ready writer

PENIEL, or PENUEL, Pe-ny'-el, Pe-nu'-el, face or vision of God.—A city beyond Jordan, near the ford or brook Jabbok. It took its name from the circumstance recorded Gen. xxxii. 24.

PENINNAH, Pen-in'-nah, or Penin'-ah, precious stone.—The second wife of Elkanah, 1 Sam. i. 2.

PENNY.—A Roman coin, called denarius, worth about from sevenpence half-penny to eightpence half-penny in our money; Matt. xx. 2, 9, 13; Mark xii. 15; Luke xx. 24. This appears to have been the ordinary price of a day's labour at that time; for the fruits of the earth were very abundant, little clothing was required, so that labour was very cheap.

PENTATEUCH, Pen'-ta-tuke.—The five books of Moses, viz., Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy; from two Greek words, pente, five, and teuchos, a volume.

PENTECOST.—A stated festival of the Jews, called also the feast of weeks, because kept seven weeks, or the fiftieth day after the passover, to commemorate their deliverance from Egyptian slavery. Pentecost signifies 'fifty,' Acts ii. 1; xx. 16. The number of Jews assembled at Jerusalem on this joyous occasion was very great; Acts ii. 9—11. This festival had a typical reference to the miraculous effusion of the Holy Spirit upon the apostles, and the first-fruits of the Christian church, on the day of Pentecost, the fiftieth day after the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

PENURY, Prov. 14. 23; Luke 21. 4.

PEOPLE signifies the whole body of persons that make up a nation, being governed by a certain magistrate, and regulated by the same laws; Gen. xli. 40; 1 Sam. xv. 30; godly progenitors and forefathers departed this life, Gen. xxv. 8; Deut. xxxii. 50; the vulgar or inferior sort of persons in a city or nation, Mark xii. 37; Luke xxiii. 14; Jacob's children and posterity, Gen. l. 20; the Gentiles, Ps. cxvii. 1; both Jews and Gentiles, Luke ii. 10; the army or soldiers of the Romans, Dan. ix. 26. It is also applied to unreasonable creatures, Prov. xxx. 25. God's people are formed for himself, Isa. xliii. 21; his peculiar people, 1 Pet. ii. 9; his treasure, Exod. xix. 5; a people near unto him, Ps. cxlviii. 14. The law of God is in their hearts, Isa. li. 7; they are saved of the Lord, Deut. xxxiii. 29; they are also called the Lord's portion, Deut. xxxii. 9.

PEOPLE.—'Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power,' Ps. cx. 3. The marginal reading is "More than the womb of the morning;" thou shalt have the "dew of thy youth." The morning is, then, here, by a figure, made the parent of the dew, and as this Psalm is considered a prophecy of the Messiah's kingdom, it refers to the ultimate number of those who should give themselves to Christ as voluntary offerings, (for so the word "willing" means,) in the day of his power, a countless multitude, like the dew-drops of the morning. There is a difficulty in the expression, "the dew of thy youth;" but it is thought to refer to the great number of converts in the early days of the church.

PEOR, Pe'-or, gaping, opening.—A mountain on the east of Jordan, near Nebo and Pisgah, and in the country of Moab, See Num. xxv. 3; Deut. iv. 3; Josh. xxii. 17.

PERÆA, Pe-re'-ah.—Includes the southern part of the country beyond Jordan, lying south of Iturea, and east of Judæa and Samaria. It was formerly possessed by the tribes of Reuben and Gad. It was in the strong fortress of this place that John the Baptist was put to death; Matt. xiv. 3—12.

PERAZIM, Per'-a-zim, irruption.—A mountain where the Philistines were defeated; Isa. xxviii. 21.

PERCEIVE—To discover, or find out; 2 Sam. xiv. 1; Jer. xxxviii. 27.

—Spiritually to discern and understand, so as to make improvement; Deut. xxix. 4.—To know; 2 Kings iv. 9; Acts viii. 23; x. 34.

PERDITION signifies utter ruin; Rev. xvii. 8, 11. Judas was the son of perdition; John xvii. 12, because of his wilful malice, his abuse of the grace and instructions of Christ: and was condemned through his own avarice, perfidy, insensibility, and his despair. His crime appears to have been an attempt to destroy not only the Saviour of the world, but also the whole human race; and all this he was capable of through the love of money! Antichrist is likewise called by this name; 2 Thess. ii. 3, because he brings destruction upon others, and is himself devoted to perdition; Phil. i. 28; 1 Tim. vi. 9; 2 Pet. iii. 7; Heb. x. 39.

PERESH, Pe'-resh, a horseman, casting out to be slain.—The son of Machir; 1 Chron. vii. 16.

PERES, Pe'-rez, divided, Persian.—One of Solomon's captains; 1 Chr. xxvii. 3. It was one of the words written on the palace-wall of Belshazzar: Dan. v. 28.

PEREZ-UZZAH, Pe'-rez-uz-'zah, the division of Uzzah, or the strength of Uzzah.—The place where Uzzah was struck dead for touching the ark; 2 Sam. vi. 8.

PERFECT.—Complete, without blemish or defect. It is applied 1. to God, who is absolutely perfect; Matt. v. 48.—2. To that man who has risen to the measure of his stature in Christ; Col. i. 28.—3. To some who are innocent in comparison of others; Job viii. 20.—4. To one who is sincere in heart, and unblamable in life; Gen. vi. 9.—5. To those who imitate God in doing good to the unworthy; Matt. v. 48.—6. To such as have a good degree of understanding; 1 Cor. ii. 6.—7. To inanimate things, as weights, measures; &c. Deut. xxv. 15.

PERFECT 'through sufferings'; Heb. ii. 10. This expression is applied to the victor in the Olympic games, and signifies to be made a recipient of the highest rewards.

PERFUME.—An agreeable odour. In the east perfumes were used to testify great respect; Dan. ii. 46. The Hebrews had two sacred perfumes, one an incense, and the other an oil; Exod. xxx. 23—38. They were addicted to the perfuming of dead bodies, clothes, beds, &c.; Prov. vii. 17.

The use of perfumes at Eastern marriages is common. Not only are the garments scented till they "smell of myrrh, aloes, and cassia; Psa. xlv

8, but it is customary for virgins to meet and lead the procession with silver-gilded pots of perfumes; and sometimes even the air around is rendered fragrant by burning aromatics in the windows of all the streets, through which the procession is to pass. See Song iii. 6.

PERGA, Per'-ga, very earthy.—A city of Pamphylia, on the river Caystrus, near to which, on an eminence, stood a temple of Diana. Here Paul and Barnabas preached; Acts xiii. 14; xiv. 25. A. D. 800, there was a Christian church there. Now it is a place of but little importance. There was another Perga in Epirus.

PERGAMOS, Per'-ga-mos, height, elevation.—The ancient capital of Mysia, and the residence of the Attalia kings, stands on a rich and spacious plain, near the banks of Caicus, about 64 miles to the north of Smyrna. It is now called Bergama. It was famous for its extent and grandeur; for a temple to Esculapius; and for its library of 200,000 volumes collected by the different kings who had reigned there, and which was afterwards removed to Egypt by Cleopatra with the consent of Antony.

Parchment was invented and first made use of at Pergamos. This city was also celebrated for the fertility of its surrounding soil; here Galenus, the physician, and Apollodorus, the mythologist were born. Here are still many remains and appearances of antique buildings, such as vast pillars of marble subverted—in one place the appearance of a palace is evident from the columns of polished marble, which, like buttresses, support the wall for at least fifty paces in length—the ruins of several churches, one of which was dedicated to the apostle John; and beyond the site of the city are vast ruins of arched work—the remains of a theatre, all without inscriptions.

The Christian church here soon degenerated, and tolerated fornication; but appears to have been reformed by John's letter; Rev. ii. For 800 years afterward it was a considerable church. A Greek and Armenian church exist here at the present day. Of the population, now estimated at 30,000 persons, there are 300 Armenian Christians, 1,500 Greeks, and a synagogue of 100 Jews. The remainder are Turks. The streets are wide and clean, for an eastern city. The modern city lies partly on the slope of the hill, but principally in the plain; around the city are olives and vineyards, cypresses and poplars; and beyond them, the plain is richly wooded as far as the mountains.

PERSECUTION. Pain, suffering, deprivation, &c., inflicted upon a person, on account of religious principles, or modes of worship; Acts viii. 1; xi. 19; xiii. 50; Rom. viii. 35; Gal.

v. 11 ; vi. 12 ; 2 Thess. i. 4. It is the lot of all Christians. The Redeemer foretold it ; Mark x. 30 ; 2 Tim. iii. 12. When a time of persecution is spoken of, it means when men are dragged before tribunals, banished, imprisoned, fined and killed, for their religion. There were ten general and dreadful persecutions previous to A. D. 313. Since the Roman Catholic Church has gained power, she has always been prone to persecution. The Inquisition was established for this very purpose, and continues to this day. All Europe has been deluged with Protestant blood, and hundreds of thousands of men, women, and children, have been butchered with the most exquisite cruelty. Persecution is directly contrary to the gospel. See 1 Cor. iv. 12 ; Matt. v. 43—45. “To banish, imprison, plunder, starve, hang, and burn men for religion,” says the shrewd Jortin, “is not the gospel of Christ ; it is the gospel of the devil. Where persecution begins, Christianity ends. Christ never used anything that looked like force or violence except once ; and that was to drive bad men out of the temple, and not to drive them in.” “It is to be greatly lamented that some, who have professed the excellent sentiments of the reformation, have persecuted others who have held erroneous sentiments, in order to make them embrace the truth ; but instead of having that effect, it has embittered their minds, and filled them with inveterate prejudices against the purest principles.”—

PERSIA, Per'-she-a, that cuts, nail, horseman, dividing a horse-hoof.—An ancient kingdom of Asia, bounded on the north by Media and the Caspian Sea, Russian Tartary, and the mountains of Caucasus ; on the west by Susiana, or by the Euphrates and the Tigris rivers, on the east by Carmania, Cabool, Beloochestan ; and on the south by the Persian gulf ; Esth. i. 3. The Hebrew word for Persia, is Phars ; Ezek. xxvii. 10, which is still recognized in Fars, one of its modern provinces ; but Elam is the most ancient name by which it is known to the Hebrews. In the book of Daniel it is called Peres. Persia is about 1,225 miles long from east to west, and 100 in breadth from north to south. The chief river is the Tigris.

The central parts of Persia, form an elevated plain containing extensive deserts which are rather saline than sandy. The most distant is that of Karakum on the north of Khorassan which is sandy. That which lies between Khorassan and Irak Ajemi, called the Great Salt desert, is 360 miles long and 190 broad, and appears to join that which forms the southern part of Kirman ; these along with the deserts of Kiab and Mekran, occupy three tenths of the country. The northern provinces in which rises the chain of the Ararat, and the western parts of the country are mountainous.

My father's empire, said the younger Cyrus to Xenophon, is so large, that people perish with cold at the one extremity, while they are suffocated with heat at the other. This is the case at the present day.

The chief productions of the country consist of wheat, which is excellent, but rice is a more universal aliment, and regarded by the Persians as the most delicious of food. Barley and millet are also sown; on the mountainous ridges are found the cypress, the cedar and several other kinds of pines. The fig, the pomegranate, the mulberry, almond, peach, and apricot are indigenous. The vine and the orange grow in great luxuriance. To the south both cotton and sugar are articles of common cultivation. The jasmine, and the blue and scarlet anemone, are found in the thickets, and the tulip and ranunculus in the pastures. Besides these, tobacco, flax, hemp, manna, gum, Rhubarb, and other fruits of the temperate zone.

The present population of Persia consists of two classes, the fixed and the nomadic tribes, comprising the Arabs, the Mongols, and the Usbeks, amounting to 11,240,000. A peculiar Mohammedan sect, the Sabians, worship the cross, have a sort of baptism, and call themselves disciples of St. John. The Ishmaelites also form a distinct sect. The Parsees are Guebers of the philosophical sect of Sophis; and both Jews and Christians are tolerated in Persia." The various countries now forming Persia were intimately connected with the history of the Jewish nation; it was Artaxerxes Longimanus, who raised Esther to the throne, and who suspended the building of the Temple. It is probable that the Elamites, who were present on the day of Pentecost were instrumental in carrying the Gospel to the country generally. (Ezra. Neh. Esth. Acts ii. 9.)

PETER, Pe'-ter, a stone.—One of the twelve apostles of Christ, a native of Bethsaida, and son of Jonas, and brother of Andrew, who was also an apostle. His first name was Simon, but when the Saviour called him to the apostleship, he changed it to Cephas; John i. 42, 43. He was of a prompt, resolute temper, and sometimes impetuous; but his attachment to the Saviour, was very ardent and sincere, and he ever manifested zeal for the prosperity of his kingdom in the world. His ardour and forwardness are apparent on many occasions. (See his history as narrated in the gospels, and Acts of the Apostles.)

Some of the primitive writers assert that Peter was crucified, as our Lord predicted; John xxi. 18, 19, but where we cannot tell, as there is no clear account given. The Catholics say at Rome. But the question, Was Peter ever at Rome? requires to be settled. The Scriptures say nothing about it. His Epistles were addressed to converted Jews in the province near the Southern shore of the Black Sea; 1 Pet. i. 1. The second was especially intended to guard against the false teachers, and scoffers.

PETER, Epistle of.—He wrote two epistles, which constitute a valuable part of the inspired writings. His style expresses the noble fervour of his spirit, the full knowledge he had of Christianity, and his strong assurance of the truth of it. He writes with that noble neglect of some of the formal niceties of grammar, that you can scarcely perceive the pauses of his discourse, or the distinction of his periods. A noble majesty and freedom distinguish the apostle Peter; a devout person cannot read him without solemn attention and concern. The conflagration of this world, and the future judgment of angels and men, in the second epistle, are described in such awful terms, attended with such awful circumstances, that in the description we see the planetary heavens and the earth wrapped in devouring flames; we hear the groans of an expiring world, and the crashes of nature tumbling into universal ruin.

PHALEC, Fay'-lek, division.—An ancestor of Christ. See his genealogy; Luke iii. 35.

PHALTI, Fal'-ty, deliverance, flight. The son of Laish, who married Michal; 1 Sam. xxv. 44; 2 Sam. iii. 15.

PHANUEL, Fa-new'-el, face, or vision of God.—The father of the prophetess Anna; Luke ii. 36.

PHARAOH, Fay'ro, a disperser, spoiler, king.—A name common to the Egyptian kings, as czar is to the emperors of Russia; Gen. xii. 15. Josephus says that all the kings from Menaeus, builder of Memphis, down to the time of Solomon, for more than 3300 years had this name. Pharaoh is an Egyptian word, and is derived from Phra, which signifies the sun, to which the Egyptian kings likened themselves. Hence we often see them represented with a disc, or figure of the sun upon their heads. Several kings so named in Scripture.—1. He who took Sarah from Abraham; Gen. xii. 15.—2. He who reigned when Joseph was prime-minister.—3. He that persecuted the Israelites; Ex. i. 8, and was drowned in the Red Sea. Moses speaks of him as “a new king who knew not Joseph;” Ex. i. 8.—4. He that gave protection to Hadad, son of the king of Edom; 1 Kings xi. 15—22.—5. He whose daughter Solomon married. 1 Kings iii. 1.—6. Pharaoh Shishak; 2 Chron. xii. 2—9.—7. Pharaoh Necho; Jer. xlvi. 2; 2 Kings xxiii. 29—35.—8. Pharaoh Hophra, who entered into an alliance with Zedekiah; Jer. xlv. 30.

PHARAOH'S HEART BEING HARDENED. “I will harden Pharaoh's heart,” Ex. vii. 3. “I will suffer the heart of Pharaoh to be hardened.” Boothroyd.—“Hardened Pharaoh's heart,” Ex. vii. 13, that is, “The heart of Pharaoh was hardened.”—Hales. God cannot secretly influence a man's will, or suggest any wicked stubborn resolution to his mind, and then punish him for it. There are other ways by which the heart may be hardened, viz., by those very respites, miracles, and mercies intended to soften it, for if they do not soften it they will harden it. The heart may be hardened by his withdrawing that grace it has long resisted; men may be given up to a reprobate mind; as they would not see when they possessed the faculty of sight, the use of that faculty may be taken from them, and they may be abandoned to blindness. But all this is judicial, and supposes previous voluntary wickedness, which it is designed to punish. The dealings of Jehovah with Pharaoh had a tendency to soften rather than to harden his heart; especially as it was not until after he had seen the miracles, and after the plagues had ceased, that he hardened himself and would not suffer the Israelites to depart. The threatened plagues were suspended on a condition with which he refused to comply, and then only were they inflicted. It is, moreover, well known that the Hebrew verbs in the Hiphil conjugation signify to permit, or to suffer to be done, as well as to cause to be done: hence nothing more is meant, than to leave a man to the bent and tendency of his own disposition. Thus Pharaoh was left, and he is said to have made his own heart stubborn against God. He sinned yet more and hardened HIS heart. The proper rendering therefore of Exod. iv. 21, is—I will permit his heart to be so hardened that he will not let the people go. So in Ex. ix. 12, it ought to have been translated, Yet the Lord suffered the heart of Pharaoh to be so hardened that he hearkened not to them. The incredulity, perverseness, and obstinacy of Pharaoh, before whom Moses wrought his miracles, are astonishing; and thus it is represented in Scripture. How affecting the awful announcement to him in Exodus ix. 15, 16. The language strongly implies that his depravity exceeded that of the generality of men, or even kings. It has, however, as rendered in our version, perplexed the minds of some; and the following rendering seems more satisfactory: "For now, had I stretched out my hand, and smitten thee and thy people with pestilence, thou wouldst have been cut off from the earth. But truly on this very account have I caused thee to subsist, or preserved thee, that I might cause thee to see my power, and that my name might be declared through all the earth." It is not of the creation, but of the preservation of Pharaoh that God speaks. This monarch's life was prolonged, that by the Divine administration, which his conduct and the circumstances of Israel required, Jehovah, for his instruction, displays his power over all idols, and that the surrounding nations might acknowledge Him the supreme God and Saviour. Now, this was evidently a work more of benevolence and mercy, than of judgment and wrath; see Rom. ix. 17—19.

PHAREZ, Fay'-rez, division.—Son of Judah; Gen. xxxviii. 29.

PHARISEES, Far'-re-sees, a division, set apart.—The most popular sect among the Jews, who appeared about 140 years B. C. They were remarkable for their rigid way of living, and affected great mortification and abstraction from the world, frequently fasted and made long prayers at the corners of the streets.

They studied the law, were very exact in the outward observance of it, and pretended to more holiness than others, adding voluntary sacrifices to those that were commanded, and making a great show of exactly performing all their vows. By such conduct they gained the good opinion of the populace, and were esteemed persons of great learning and sanctity of manners. After all, they were inwardly consummate hypocrites. They believed in a future state of rewards, &c., and therefore held the Sadducees in the highest abhorrence. Their notion of a resurrection, however, was nothing more than the Pythagorean transmigration.

PHAROSH, Fay'-rosh.—One who returned from the Babylonish captivity; Ezra viii. 3.

PHARPAR, Far'-par, that produces fruit.—One of the rivers of Damascus, or rather a branch of the Barady or Chrysorrhoeas, which waters the city of Damascus and the adjacent country; 2 Kings v. 12.

PHASEAH, Fay'-se-ah.--A person. See Neh. vii. 51.

PHEBE, Fe'-be, shining, pure.—A deaconess of the church at Cenchrea, near Corinth. Thought to have been the bearer of Paul's letter to the church at Rome; the opinion is founded on Rom. xvi. i. 2.

PHENICE, Fe-ny'-se, red, purple.—It does not mean Phenicia, but a seaport town on the western shore of the island of Crete; Acts xxvii. 12.

PHENICIA, Fe-nish'-e-a.—Applied to the whole coast of Syria, on the Mediterranean, from Antioch to Egypt, but it properly denoted only the regions on the continent, belonging to Tyre and Sidon. Some suppose that the names of Phenicia, Syria, and Palestine, are, by the ancients used indiscriminately for one and the same country. Within its boundaries are found the ancient commercial cities of Sidon, Tyre, and Aradus.

The heat and moisture which render the whole tract dangerous to European constitutions, maintain a rich vegetation—oranges, lemons, and pomegranates, form groves at the bottom of the mountains, which project in various directions presenting landscapes highly picturesque. Though neglected, it is a country full of charms and graces. Phenicia was the birth-place of commerce, if not also of letters and the arts. A Phœnician introduced into Greece the knowledge and the use of letters. Phœnician workmen built the Temple of Solomon; Phœnician sailors navigated his ships; Phœnician pilots directed them: and before other nations left their own shores, the Phœnicians had planted colonies on the shores of the Mediterranean at Carthage, Hippo, Marseilles, and Utica; and their manufactures acquired such a superiority over those of other nations, that among the ancients, whatever was elegant, great or pleasing, either in apparel or domestic utensils, received the epithet of Sidonian. These early advantages were owing to their enterprising character, and to their central situation, which enabled them to draw into their narrow territories all the commerce between the East and the West.

When the Israelites invaded Palestine, gold and silver abounded in that country; magnificence and luxury reigned in private apartments; the sovereigns of the little districts into which it was divided were clothed in purple; the people wore golden earrings; and even the camels were adorned with studs, chains, and plates of gold.

Notwithstanding their prosperity and wealth, the Phœnicians were addicted to idolatry.

PHICOL, Fy'-col, perfection of the mouth.—General of the army of Abimelech, king of Gerar; Gen. xxi. 22.

PHILADELPHIA, Fil-a-del'-fe-a, the love of a brother.—A city of Asia Minor, in the kingdom of Lydia, founded by Attalus Philadelphus, king of Pergamos, about 28 miles east of Sardis, and 72 from Smyrna. The only remains of the former city, are those of a lofty wall strengthened by round towers, which once encompassed it; and the ruins of an aqueduct, which having conveyed water of a petrifying quality, whereby vegetable substances were encrusted, the decay of these substances has left their stony moulds, which gave rise to the vulgar opinion that the wall had been built of human bones.

This city is of large extent, spreading upon the declivities of three or four hills—the streets are inconvenient for foot-passengers, from their filthy state—the houses are very mean, and the palace of the Greek bishop is constructed of clay, and little better than a cottage; there are several coffee-houses and baths, which are very much frequented. The city when viewed from a distance is extremely beautiful, and entitles it to the appellation of the "fair city." On looking from the hill, upon which the acropolis stood, the view is most magnificent; highly cultivated gardens and vineyards lie at the back and sides of the town, and before it one of the most extensive and fertile plains in Asia.

The Turkish population has been estimated at 3000 houses; there are also about 300 Greek families, most of whom speak only the Turkish language, and live in friendly intercourse with the former. The Christians have twenty-five places of worship, with a resident bishop and inferior clergy. There are several mosques, with minarets, which add considerably to the appearance of the place. Coarse cotton goods are manufactured here, and the inhabitants are very skilful in dyeing, to which the nature of the water is said to contribute. Considerable trade is carried on; and the town being situated on one of the principal roads to Smyrna, whither a caravan goes and returns regularly, it is much frequented by the Armenian merchants. A Christian church was very early planted in this city, to which John was instructed to write a consolatory epistle; and though the candlestick has never been removed from Philadelphia, yet it emits but a glimmering light, for it has long ceased to be trimmed with the pure oil of the sanctuary, Rev. iii. 7—13.

PHILEMON, Fy-le'-mon, that is affectionate.—A rich, pious, and influential citizen of Colosse, in Phrygia, converted to the Christian faith. Paul addressed a letter to him respecting his slave Onesimus, who was converted by his ministry. This Epistle seems to have been written by Paul during his detention at Rome, A. D. 62 or 63, and was sent, together with the Epistle to the Ephesians and Colossians, by Tychicus and Onesimus. Paley, in his Horæ Paulinæ, has brought many unanswerable proofs of the authenticity of Scripture from the undesigned coincidences between this Epistle and the Acts of the Apostles written by Luke.

PHILETUS, Fy-le'-tus, beloved.—A heretic in the early church. He denied the resurrection, 2 Tim. ii. 17.

PHILIP, Fil'-ip, a warrior, a lover of horses.—The son of Herod the Great, and Cleopatra. From him the city of Cæsarea Philippi received its name; Matt. xvi. 13, &c.

(2.) PHILIP, another son of Herod, by his wife Mariamne. He was sometimes called Herod, and was the husband of Herodias. He was disinherited by his father, and lived a private life; Matt. xiv. 3, &c.

(3.) PHILIP, one of the twelve apostles; a native of Bethsaida in Galilee. Some ancient historians say that he was the individual who requested of Jesus, that he might "first go and bury his father; Matt. viii. 21, 22.

(4.) PHILIP, one of the seven deacons of the church at Jerusalem; Acts vi. 5. He was very successful in preaching the gospel in Samaria; Acts viii. He was divinely directed to go towards the south of Palestine, and on his way to Gaza, he met with the Ethiopian eunuch, who was returning from Jerusalem into his own country, and Philip was instrumental in bringing him to the knowledge of the truth. Having professed the faith, Philip at his request baptized him; and as soon as they were come out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord took away Philip, who was next found at Azotus, from whence he proceeded, preaching the gospel in all the cities and villages that he was called to pass through in his way to Cæsarea, where he appears to have ultimately settled and spent the residue of his life, probably as one of the elders of the Christian church in that city. We find from Acts xxi. 4,–9, that he was the father of four daughters, and that he had a house in which he entertained Paul and his companions.

PHILIPPI, Fy-lip'-py, lovers of horses.—One of the principal cities of Macedonia, lying on the banks of the river Strymon, about 70 miles north-east from Thessalonica. It took its name from Philip, king of Macedon, by whom it was repaired and beautified; Acts xvi. 12. It was rendered famous by the defeat of Brutus and Cassius in its neighbourhood. Here Paul preached, about A. D. 52; and Lydia, and many others, were converted; Acts xvi. 12. This church supported Paul, while he laboured as a missionary at Thessalonica; Phil. iv. 15, 16, and also when at Corinth; 2 Cor. xi. 9; and remitted him money for his support, while he lived at Rome in "his own hired house;" Phil. ii. 25, and iv. 10—13.

PHILIPPIANS, EPISTLE OF.—This valuable Epistle was written by Paul. It must have been very gratifying to the Apostle to find that his Philippian converts were not unmindful of him, when in imprisonment at Rome, as they sent Epaphroditus, one of their pastors, to him with presents, lest he might want necessaries during his confinement. This Epistle was sent to them on his return, A. D. 63, containing acknowledgments of their kindness, solemn warnings, cautions, and admonitions, lest they should follow the enemies of the Cross of Christ, and become lost to him, to themselves, and to salvation. The Epistle is written in an elegant style.

PHILISTIA, Fy-lis'-te-a.—The country of the Philistines, a part of the south-west of Palestine. It was about 40 miles long, and 15 miles broad. Its cities were Gerar, Gaza, Majuma, Askelon, Ekron, Ashdod, and Gath. The Philistines and the Caphtorim descended from Casluhim, the son of Mizraim, who peopled Egypt; and their country is perhaps called the isle or country of Caphtor; Jer. xlvii. 4.

PHILISTIM, Fy-lis'-tim.—Philistia so called, Gen. x. 14.

PHILISTINES, Fy-lis'-tines, those that dwell in villages.—A people of Palestine, who came from the isle of Caphtor, frequently named in Scripture, and very early settled in a small strip of territory along the sea-shore in the south-west of Canaan, having expelled the Avites, who had before possessed it; Josh. xv. 45—47; xiii. 2, 3; 2 Chron. xxi. 16, &c.

PHILOLOGUS, Fy-lol'-o-gus, a lover of learning.—A person to whom Paul sent his salutations, Rom. xvi. 15.

PHILOSOPHY means the love of wisdom; but the Heathen philosophers ascribed every thing to human reason, and wished to be thought superior in all things. They were, therefore, offended at the humbling doctrine of the cross. The apostle Paul warned the Colossians against philosophy and vain deceit; Col. ii. 8. His design was to condemn that vain affectation of wisdom, of which the heathens were notoriously fond, and which stood in opposition to the simplicity of the gospel.

Philosophy also denotes a science, or collection of sciences, of which all things, both of body and spirit, are the objects. The term thus admits of various definitions. That part of philosophy which treats of God, &c., is called THEOLOGY; that which treats of nature, PHYSICS, or NATURAL PHILOSOPHY; and that which treats of men, LOGIC, and Moral and Intellectual Philosophy.

Philosophers are more indebted to revelation than reason for what they know of God and divine things. "It is difficult, if not utterly impossible, to prove that any discoveries of divine truth, or truths respecting the nature of God, have ever been made to unassisted reason; thus in the writings of Ovid we may perceive that he has borrowed from Moses, and Virgil does from Isaiah; also with respect to the ancient philosophers, as Tertullian says, 'which of the sophists was there which did not drink of the prophet's fountain, so that what they had some way or other from our Scripture, that we receive again by tradition.' Justin Martyr calls Plato the Hebrew philosopher; and another says, that he lived among the Jews, and drew many things from the Hebrew fountains, especially his pious conceptions of God and his worship. Hermippus, in his life of Pythagoras, says that he transferred many things from the Jewish institutions into his own philosophy, and styles him the imitator of the Jewish dogmas ; and many things in the writings of the poets and philosophers are so very much like the account of the creation in our Bible, that it is very plain that they had read some of the books of Moses.

PHINEHAS, Fin'-e-has, a bold countenance.—Son of Eleazar, and grandson of Aaron. He was the third high-priest of the Jews, and discharged his office from A. M. 2571 to 2590. He manifested great zeal in vindicating the glory of God, in the affair of Zimri and Cozbi ; Num. xxv. 7, &c.—Also the son of Eli, the high-priest, and brother to Hophni ; 1 Sam. i. 3.

PHLEGON, Fle'-gon, zealous, burning.—A person saluted by Paul ; Rom. xvi. 14.

PHRYGIA, Frij'-e-a, dry, barren.—The largest kingdom of Asia Minor, situated in its centre. The chief cities are Laodicea and Hierapolis. Luke speaks of some of the inhabitants of this province as being at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, when he joins it with Pamphylia immediately below it. In another place he evidently refers to Phrygia Minor ; Col. ii. 1 ; Acts ii. 10 ; xvi. 6. The Phrygians were of an obstinate and stupid temper ; impudent, effeminate, voluptuous, and servile, kept at their duty best by stripes, made wise by sufferings only—superstitious to excess, worshippers of Cybele, and said to be the inventors of augury ; other kinds of divination—the pipe of reeds ; besides all kind of needle work. Acts ii. 10 ; xvi. 6.

PHURAH, Few'-rah, that bears fruit.—The servant of Gideon, Judges vii. 10, 11.

PHUT, Fut.—The third son of Ham, Gen. x. 6. His descendants peopled a district in Lower Egypt.

PHUVAH, Few'-vah, a pair of bellows.—The son of Issachar, Gen. xlv. 13.

PHYGELLUS, Fy-jellus, a fugitive.—A Christian of Asia, who forsook Paul in his necessity ; 2 Tim. i. 15.

PHYLACTERIES, Fy-lak'-te-riz, things to be particularly observed.—Strips or rolls of parchment, inscribed with passages of the law ; fastened on the forehead, wrist or hem of the garment, from a mistaken interpretation of Exod. xiii. 9, 16 ; Num. xv. 37—40. See also Matt. xxiii. 5. Moses had commanded the Israelites to have these phylacteries that they might remember the law, especially the important parts of it. The Pharisees made these large, to be seen of men, which vain ostentation Christ condemned. See Frontlets.

PHYSICIAN.—A healer ; Mark v. 26 ; Gen. i. 2. "They that be whole need not a physician," &c. ; Matt. ix. 12. (1.) Jesus Christ represents himself here as the sovereign Physician of souls. (2.) That all stand in need of his healing power. (3.) That men must acknowledge their spiritual maladies, and the need they have of his mercy, in order to be healed by him. (4.) That it is the most inveterate and dangerous disease the soul can be afflicted with, to imagine itself whole, when the sting of death, which is sin, has pierced it through, in every part.

PI-BESETH, Pi-be'-seth, dispute from the mouth.—A city in Egypt, Ezek. xxx. 17.

PIECE of an Ear, Amos iii. 12.—It seems odd to mention this as what a shepherd rescues from a lion ; but Russel, in his History of Aleppo, says, that about the city they have one species of goat whose ears are often a foot long, and broad in proportion.

PIERCED his side, and forthwith came out blood and water ; John xix. 34—36. It appears from this, that the spear entered the pericardium, or covering of the heart, and that the heart was therefore pierced; as the water proceeded from the former, and the blood from the latter. Hence we have the most decisive evidence that Jesus died for our sins; and thus the conduct of the soldiers was over-ruled to take away all pretences to the contrary, by which his enemies might have attempted to invalidate the reality of his resurrection, by saying he had not really died when taken down from the cross. At the same time two most important prophecies were accomplished.

PI-HAHIROTH, Py-ha-hy'-roth, the pass of Hiroth.—The pass through which the Hebrews marched to the west shore of the Red Sea, Exod. xiv. 2.

PILATE, Py'-lat, who is armed with a dart.—Pontius Pilate was probably a Roman, and was sent to govern Judea in the room of Gratus, A. D. 26 or 27. He held the office for about eleven or twelve years, Luke xiii. 1, &c. By his covetous and cruel government, he caused himself to be hated both by the Jews and Samaritans. At length complaints against him reached the court of Cæsar; and he was recalled to Rome, tried, and banished to Gaul. Afterwards, from poverty and shame, he committed suicide. His deposition took place three years after the death of Christ, under the Emperor Caligula.

PILDASH, Pil'-dash.—A son of Nahor; Gen. xxii. 22.

PILEHA, Pil'-e-hah. — A chief priest; Neh. x. 24.

PILLAR.—A column raised to support a building, and for ornament. An obelisk, or monument of some important event worthy to be remembered, or thought of in future.—Also, the chief support of a family, city or state; Judges xvi. 25, 26, 29; Gen. xxxv. 20; 2 Sam. xviii. 18.

“PILLAR and ground of the truth;” 1 Tim. iii. 15. The Apostle refers to the church—the church of the living God.—The learned Dr. Macknight says, “The church of the living God, as the pillar and support of the truth, is here contrasted with the house or temple of the lifeless image of Diana at Ephesus, which was the pillar and support of falsehood, idolatry, and vice. In the opinion of some, the church of the living God is termed the pillar and support of the truth in allusion to the two pillars which Solomon placed in the porch of the temple, and to which it is said the prophets affixed their prophecies in writing that they might be read by the people who came into the temple to worship. Others think the allusion is to the pillars in the heathen temples, on which tables were hung up, containing laws and other matters of importance, which were designed to be published. But to settle this is of no importance, because, to whichever of the customs the Apostle alluded, his meaning is the same—that the church of the living God, which is the pillar and support of the truth, is not the church of Rome, nor any particular church, but the Catholic Christian Church, consisting of all the churches of Christ throughout the world.”—Peter, James, and John, are said to be pillars; Gal. ii. 9, that is, supporters and defenders of Divine truth.

PILLARS OF SMOKE ‘performed,’ &c. Song iii. 6. An allusion to the processions at eastern marriages, in which were burned rich perfumes carried by virgins in silver-gilt pots.

PILLAR OF SALT; Gen. xix. 26. Or as some understand it, an everlasting monument. Standing still too long, soon that dreadful shower of brimstone and fire overtook her, wrapped her body in a sheet of nitro-sulphureous matter, which congealed into a crust as hard as stone, and made her appear like a pillar of salt, her body being as it were candied in it.—Patrick.

See Lot, p. 566. The word rendered pillar, is used to denote an erect attitude, a standing still, a fixture. The cause of this woman's destruction, and her being turned into a pillar of salt, is stated Deut. xxix. 23. By the "brimstone" may be understood the sulphuric and fatal vapours which always attend volcanic eruptions. Lot's wife has not been the only person who has suffered by proximity to volcanic effluvia; witness the history of the death of the elder Pliny, at Vesuvius, related in the younger Pliny's letters. Some suppose that Lot's wife was enveloped in asphaltum, called by Moses "salt of burning." It is a bitumen, and probably was classed by the Hebrews among salts. Herodotus speaks of salt burning in a lamp. Asphaltum is very inflammable, and justly bears the epithet of burning or fiery. Asphaltum is found on the Dead Sea, or Sea of Sodom, whose waters cover the site of the destroyed cities. Lot's wife then, lingering behind, was surprised by a shower of bitumen or sulphur, falling upon her; amid which she stood erect, motionless, and deprived of life, a mass of bitumen gathering around her, and which becoming hard and permanent as it cooled, was well known as the monument and fixed station of the unhappy woman.

PILLAR in the temple of my God; Rev. iii. 12. This passage alludes to the two pillars, Jachin and Boaz, in the porch of Solomon's temple; 1 Kings vii. 21. Those pillars were, however, removed and carried away by the Chaldeans; in opposition to which, those in the spiritual temple are to abide in their honourable place for ever. The pillars of a sumptuous temple are both the strength and ornament of it; "so shall all, who steadily suffer in my name, be of my future church, so triumphant and glorious. And, as it has been the custom to engrave upon the pillars of lofty buildings the names and achievements of illustrious persons, so shall these, my servants, be characterized with the noblest and happiest of all titles, such as the servants of the living and true God, members of his heavenly kingdom.

PILLARS.—"He cast two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece;" 1 King vii. 15.—In 2 Chr. iii. 15, these two pillars are said to be 35 cubits high. One is calculated by the common cubit, which was but one half of the sanctuary cubit; so that 18 of the one would make 36 of the other; from which, if we deduct one cubit for the plinth or base, there would remain 35.—Perhaps the best mode of reconciling is that proposed by Abarbanel;—that the writer of the Kings speaks of the length of the pillars singly, while the writer of the Chronicles speaks of the length of them together. In this case, as in the former, a cubic must be allowed for the base.

PILLOW.—A cushion to lie under one's head when in bed; Mark iv. 38. The word also refers to the carpets with which the houses of the rich were furnished. Along the sides of the wall or floor, narrow beds or mattresses were often placed upon these carpets; and for their further ease and convenience, several velvet or damask bolsters are placed upon these carpets or mattresses—indulgences that seem to be alluded to by the "stretching themselves upon couches, and by the sewing of pillows to arm-holes;" Amos vi. 4. "Woe to the women that sew pillows to all arm holes;" Ezekiel xiii. 18. It denotes the effeminacy and folly of the people in being seduced by false prophetesses.

PILOT.—One who steers a ship; Ezek. xxvii. 8.

PILTAI, Pil'-ta-i.—A descendant of Levi; Neh. xii. 17.

PINE.—A tree, whose fruit is large, of a turbinated figure, and composed of a beautiful arrangement of scales. The Jews took of the branches thereof to make booths; Neh. viii. 15. It is an emblem of prosperity; Isa. xli. 19; lx. 13.

PINE.—To waste or wear away with grief and anxiety; to grieve; to languish for, or long after; Lam. iv. 9; Lev. xxvi. 39; Ezek. xxxiii. 10.

PINNACLE.—A turret or high summit. The "pinnacle of the temple;" Matt. iv. 5, seems to have been the battlement of the roof of Solomon's porch; which stood on ground made by carrying up a wall of several hundred feet from the valley below, and thus enlarging the space for the temple on the top. It was a dizzy height, (Josephus says, 750 feet) and commanded a very extensive prospect.

PINON, Py'-non, a gem.—A duke; Gen. xxxvi. 41.

PIPE.—A musical wind instrument; 1 Sam. x. 5. "We have piped unto you;" Matt. xi. 17. In Judea it was usual at feasts to have lively music and dancing; Luke xv. 25, and at funerals melancholy music and lamentations. Both of these required a response, either by dancing or lamenting. If not, the complaint arose, "We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced," &c. This became a proverb. The mourning airs in this proverb fitly represent the severity of the Baptist's manners, and the disagreeableness of the doctrine of repentance, which he preached: on the other hand, the cheerful airs beautifully represent our Lord's sweet disposition, affable conversation, and engaging method of giving instruction; so that every thing was tried that could possibly have influence to bring the Jews to repent and believe the gospel; Luke vii. 32.

PIRAM, Py'-ram, a wild ass of them.—The king of Jarmuth; Josh. x. 3, 24—27.

PIRATHON, Pir'-a-thon, his dissipation.—A city of the tribe of Ephraim; Judges xii. 15.

PISGAH, Piz'-gah, a hill, eminence, fortress.—The highest point of the chain of mountains, called Abarim, and of Mount Nebo. To this eminence Moses ascended before his death, and viewed the promised land; Deut. xxxii. 49; xxxiv. 1, &c. And perhaps from the same mountain the tempter showed Christ the kingdoms of this world, and the glory of them; Matt. iv. 8. Two towns appear to have taken their names from this mountain; Josh. xiii. 20; Jer. xlvi. 1; Num. xxiii. 14; Deut. iii. 27; xxxiv. 1.

PISIDIA, Py-sid'-e-a, pitch, pitchy.—A province of Asia Minor, southwest of Lycaonia, west of Mount Taurus, and north of Pamphylia. Its present name is Natolia.

PISON, Py'-son, changing, doubling.—One of the four great rivers that watered the garden of Eden, supposed to be the present Phasis, a divided stream of the Tigris and Euphrates, which runs along the side of Havilah, in Arabia; Gen. ii. 11.

PISPAH, Pis'-pah, a mouth, diminished.—One of the posterity of Asher; 1 Chron. vii. 38.

PIT.—Pits were made to take wild beasts; they were overlaid with branches, and the animals fell into the snare. The word pit sometimes means an empty cistern, or reservoir. Into such a pit Joseph was cast; Gen. xxxvii. 20. Also Jeremiah, ch. xxxviii. 6. Allusions are often made to these; Ps. vii. 15; ix. 15; xxxv. 7; lvii. 6.

PIT 'horrible pit;' Ps. xl. 2. An image probably taken from the horrible dungeons of the Asiatic tyrants; Jer. xxxviii. 6—12.

PITCHER.—A vessel to contain liquor; Gen. xxiv. 14. The blood-vessels which convey the vital juice to the several parts of the body, and keep it in a perpetual circulation from the right ventricle of the heart to the left, are called a pitcher, which is broken at the fountain when death renders it unserviceable for conveying the blood; Eccles. xii. 6.

PITHOM, Py'-thom, their mouth-ful.—A city built by the Israelites for Pharaoh; Ex. i. 11.

PITIFUL, Jam. 5. 11; 1 Pet. 3. 8.

PITY.—Compassion to the poor and distressed. It is divinely enjoined upon us. It is a fruit of the Spirit, and the evidence of a renewed heart; Rom. xii. 10, 15; Col. iii. 12; Gal. vi. 2. This compassion eminently belongs to the Divine Being; Psa. cxlv. 8; ciii. 13, 14. What a display of it in the gift of Christ, and his awful sufferings for the lost race of Adam.

PLACE.—An office, or employ-ment; Gen. xl. 13.—A seat; 1 Sam. ix. 22.—A city; Gen. xviii. 26.—State or condition; Job xviii. 21.—Room or stead; Gen. i. 19.—A text of Scripture; Acts viii. 32.—Advantage, occasion, or opportunity; Eph. iv. 27.—The house of the Lord; Isa. lx. 13.

PLACE, 'his own place.' An expression by which the ancient writers denote going to the eternal destiny. The world of woe was Judas's own place; it was adapted to him, he had prepared himself for it, and it was proper that he who had betrayed his Lord, should remain there; Acts i. 25.

PLAGUE, in Scripture, is used for all diseases and inflictions of temporal sufferings by the immediate hand of God, as in the case of the judgments on Egypt. When applied as synonymous with pestilence, it obviously means a violent and unusually fatal and prevailing disease, whose cause eludes the investigations of man, of which the Psalmist emphatically says, it "walketh in darkness." Of its terrific and destructive power, many examples are recorded.

PLAGUE.—In 1 Cor. x. 8.—St. Paul tells us, that the number of persons who were cut off in the plague was twenty-three thousand; but in Num. xxv. 9. Moses makes them not less than twenty-four thousand, because in this number he includes the thousand who were found guilty of idolatry, and were in consequence slain with the sword; whereas the apostle speaks only of those who died of the pestilence.

PLAGUE, 1 Kings 8. 37, 38; Ps. 89. 23.

PLAIN signifies a level country; Num. xxii. 1; xxvi. 3; xxxiii. 49; an honest man; Gen. xxv. 27. "The way of the righteous is made plain;" Prov. xv. 19. The providence of God makes it so; Isa. xl. 4. "We use great plainness of speech," 2 Cor. iii. 12. i. e. keeping back nothing; disguising nothing; concealing nothing; we wish that all may hear; and we speak so, that all may understand.

PLAINS. — Canaan had several Plains. The coast of the Mediterranean from Mount Carmel to the River of Egypt, a distance of 100 miles, was one delightful tract of nearly level country. The southern part to Joppa, was called by way of eminence "the plain;" and that northward of Joppa, the plain of Sharon, stretched to the foot of Carmel. This district was noted for the fertility of its soil, and the beauty of its herbage and flowers. Hence any flourishing estate is compared to "the excellency of Sharon;" Isa. xxxv. 2. A change from a state of prosperity to one of most abject wretchedness, is expressed by saying that "Sharon is like a wilderness;" Isa. xxxiii. 9. And when the royal poet wishes to denote the beauty and elegance of the bridegroom, he represents him as "the rose of Sharon." Song ii. 1.

PLAIT, Matt. 27. 29; 1 Pet. 3. 3.

PLANETS.—Such stars as revolve round the sun as their centre; 2 Kings xxiii. 5.

PLANT.—To sow seeds, or set plants, to produce flowers or herbs, or trees; Gen. ix. 20.—To settle a people in any place; Ps. xlv. 2.—To be connected with the church of Christ; "planted in the house of the Lord." Believers are called "trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord;" Isa. lxi. 3. The ordinances of the church cause them to grow in grace, and in conformity to Christ, and meetness for heaven. Their verdure, beautiful and fragrant, is magnificent in the summer of prosperity, and in the winter of adversity; Ps. i. 1—3.

PLANTED. "Yea, they shall not be planted; yea, they shall not be sown;" Isa. xl. 24. After the seed has been sown, it is customary in China to let it stay no longer in its place than is sufficient for the sprout to acquire a length of about six inches, when the plants are taken up in tufts, and planted at convenient distances from each other. Idolators who persisted in their evil courses should neither be planted nor sown. They should not secure even an initial state of prosperity. And it is threatened that if any one, upon the failure of the ordinary mode of propagation by seed, should resort to the expedient of planting a slip or an offset from another spot, even that shall refuse to strike its root into the soil. "Yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth."

PLEAD. To plead with God is a part of holy prayer; Jer. xii. 1. "I plead with thee;" Job xxiii. 6. In this work arguments are numerous; but the chief are, (1) A pleading with God from the greatness of our wants, our dangers, or our sorrows; whether they relate to the soul or the body, to this life or that which is to come, to ourselves, or those for whom we pray. (2) We are to argue from the several perfections of the nature of God. (3) From the several relations in which God stands to men, particularly to his "peculiar people." (4) From the rich promises of the covenant of grace. (5) From the name and honour of God in the world. (6) From the name and mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ; Job xvi. 21; John xvi. 23, 24.

PLEDGE.—That which is given in security for the fulfilment of a contract, or promise; Gen. xxxviii. 17. Bread for the family was ground every day, and therefore the millstones were not to be taken in pledge, that the family might not lack bread. "No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge;" Deut. xxiv. 6; Ex. xxii. 26.

PLEIADES, Ple'-ya-des, or Ply'-a-deez.—That cluster of little stars, vulgarly called the seven stars; Job ix. 9. A constellation in the sign Taurus; it exhibits generally six stars, sometimes seven; but ten times that number may be seen through a good telescope.—Madler, a celebrated Russian astronomer, says, "I regard the Pleiades as the central group to the whole astral system and the fixed stars, even to its outer limits, marked by the Milky Way; and I regard Alcyone as the star of all others composing the group which is favoured by most of the probabilities as being the true central sun of the universe."

There is something great implied in the expression, "sweet influences of Pleiades;" Job xxxviii. 31. The astronomer recently discovered that Alcyone, which is distant from the earth $31\frac{1}{2}$ million times the distance of the sun, is most probably a central sun. How vast, how powerful it must be. Is that the residence of the Deity? Is that the place to which he ascended?—"far above all heavens"—"far above all principality and power, and might and dominion," &c. "that he might fill all things," by his omnific governing presence; Eph. i. 21—23; iv. 8—10. Is that "my Father's house," where the ever blessed Trinity dwells, &c. Is that the final and everlasting abode of the righteous? Reflect—is it plausible? Heaven is a place! Is that the specific, glorious locality?

All the planets constituting our solar system; the earth and its satellite or moon; Jupiter, Mars, Saturn, Venus, and others, are revolving round the sun as their centre; that our sun, with all his planets, (including our earth) is but a little group comparatively, amid thousands of vaster and more magnificent groups revolving round one central sun, Alcyone; that sun the centre of the stellary heaven.

PLOUGH.—A very simple instrument used in agriculture in the East. It was furnished with a share and coulter, similar to those which are now in use; 1 Sam. xiii. 20, 21; Joel iii. 10; Micah iv. 3. Figuratively, to plough signifies to labour in any calling; 1 Cor. ix. 10; to contrive and practise; Job iv. 8; cruelly to torment, wound, and mangle; Psa. cxxix. 3. For our sakes he who knew no sin gave his back to the smiters, and permitted those ploughers to make long furrows upon it; Isa. l. 6.

PLOUGH, 'put his hand to the plough.' Symbolically meaning to undertake any business; Luke ix. 62.

PLUMMET.—A plumb line; 2 Kings xxi. 13. "I will stretch over Jerusalem the line and the plummet," i. e. the measure and weight, the like judgment; Isa. xxviii. 17. "Judgment will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet;" I will deal in exact rigour of justice with you, as by line and level: alluding to workmen who observe the greatest exactness. See Amos vii. 8.

POETS, 'certain also of your own poets,' Acts xvii. 28. The poet here alluded to is Aratus, a Greek poet of Cilicia, the native place of the Apostle Paul. He flourished about 277 years before Christ. His principal work was the Phenomena here quoted, and extensively known and esteemed among the learned in Greece, POLLUX, Pol'-luks, a boxer.—A fabulous divinity; Acts xxviii. 11.

POMEGRANATE, Pome-gran'-ate, an apple of seeds.—This tree is a native of Asia, and is very beautiful. The leaves are dark green; the flowers are an elegant crimson, resembling a rose. It is chiefly valued for its fruit, which is the size of a large apple. The fruit is reddish, and filled with numerous seeds, each surrounded with juicy and pleasant tasted pulp. A delicious wine was made of the juice; Song viii. 2. The beauty of the flower has furnished Solomon with several beautiful allusions; Song vi. 11; vii. 12.

It was highly valued by the Israelites; for it was one of the three kinds of fruit brought by the spies from Eshcol to Moses and the congregation in the wilderness; Num. xiii. 23; xx. 5. The Israelites esteemed it as one of the greatest luxuries which they enjoyed in Egypt, the want of which they felt so very severely in the sandy desert. The form of this fruit was so beautiful as to be honoured with a place at the bottom of the high-priest's robe; Ex. xxviii. 33, and on the network which covered the two pillars of the temple, Jachin and Boaz, there were 200 figures of pomegranates, 96 of which were seen on a side; 1 Kings vii. 18, 42; 2 Kings xxv. 17.

POMMELS, or bowls; 2 Chron. iv. 12, 13.

POMP, put for power, honour, magnificence; Ezek. vii. 24, great splendour, great parade, superb attendance; Acts xxv. 23, noise or tumult; Isa. v. 14.

PONDER, to weigh well the part we should act in life; Prov. iv. 26, to treasure up in the memory, in order to compare things one with another; Luke ii. 19. "Mary pondered them in her heart."

PONDER path of feet. Prov. 4. 26. Prov. 5. 21. he p. all his goings, 6. 21. 2. Lord p. the hearts, 24. 12. Luke 2. 19. p. them in her heart

PONTIUS PILATE, Pon'-she-us Py'-lat, marine, belonging to the sea. See PILATE.

PONTUS, Pon'-tus, the sea; 1 Pet. i. 1.—A province of Asia Minor, on the south side of the Euxine, north of Cappadocia, and extending from the river Halys on the west, to the country of Colchis, on the east. In this district is the river Thermadon, beside which the Amazons are fabled to have dwelt. Many parts of Pontus are rugged, mountainous, and barren. But some localities near Gemesh-kana, where the traveller passes through a deep valley watered by a fine stream which is one continued garden of fruit-trees, for several miles of which, he passes beneath the shade of walnut, plum, apple, almond, pear, and quince trees.

POOL.—A collection of waters; Isa. xxii. 9; 2 Sam. iv. 12; 2 Kings xviii. 17; Isa. xxxv. 7; xli. 18; Nah. ii. 8; John v. 2, 7; Ps. lxxxiv. 6.

POOLS of SOLOMON.—The three pools are situated in a valley near Bethlehem, on the road to Hebron. They are on different levels, so that the waters of one descend into the next below it, by which a constant supply of living water is carried along the sides of the hill to Bethlehem and Jerusalem. They are very large. They are all lined with masonry, well plastered and cemented within. The length of the uppermost is 160 yards; the second is estimated at 200 yards in length, and the third is much longer. The width of the three is nearly the same, nearly 100 yards. They are about 30 feet deep.

About a furlong from the upper Pool are the subterranean springs from which the Pools are supplied. Descending through the mouth of a well, to the depth of 12 feet, there are two vaulted rooms connected by a door. At one side of the room the water flows out of the rock in a full and pure stream, and descends by an underground conduit to the pools. From the pools it is conveyed by an aqueduct to Jerusalem. These pools were constructed by Solomon; for they bear the marks of great antiquity. The valley was once adorned with gardens, groves, and palaces, and formed a most delightful retreat. Hence Solomon said, "I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kinds of fruits. I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees;" Eccl. ii. 5, 6. A short distance below the pools in the valleys, there are still some beautiful gardens, watered from the aqueduct.

POOR.—Indigent, needy, necessitous; Matt. xxvi. 11; Lev. xiv. 21; xix. 10.—Spiritually poor; Rev. iii. 17; "And thou knowest not that thou art poor;" that is, ignorant, with a mind void of principle—poor in faith, and hope, and love, and zeal, &c.

POOR.—"But he saveth the poor from the sword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the mighty;" Job v. 15. Better translated thus:—

He saveth from the sword of their mouth;
And with a strong hand the impoverished.

POOR in SPIRIT.—The humble, the contrite, like the Publican; Matt. v. 3; Isa. lxvi. 2; Luke xviii. 13.

PORCIUS FESTUS, Por'-she-us Fes'-tus.—The successor of Felix in the government of Judea; Acts xxiv. 27.

PORATHA, Por'-a-thah, fruitful.—A son of Haman, who suffered with his father; Esth. ix. 8.

PORTER.—An officer of the city, 2 Kings vii. 10; of the temple, 1 Chr. xxiii. 5; 2 Chr. viii. 14; xxxv. 15. These officers amounted to 4000. They had the care of the offerings and the treasure. They bore a military character; they were the soldiers of the Lord, and the guards of his house. They had the charge of every gate, to open and shut them, and were not permitted to depart from their service. They prevented the unworthy, unclean and lepers from entering. Their duties extended also to the night. They were superintended by a superior officer, who walked his round of inspecting the porters as often as he pleased. If he passed a sentinel standing, intent on duty, at his post, he saluted him with "Peace be unto you;" but if he found one asleep, he smote him, and was at liberty to set fire to his garment. Hence the allusion; Rev. xvi. 15. "Behold, I come as a thief, (unawares) blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments."

PORTION.—Spoken of land or goods, Gen. xxxi. 14; Luke xv. 12. "Give me the portion of goods;" it may seem strange that such a demand should be made, and that the parent should have acceded to it, when he knew that it was to minister to his debauches, that his profligate son made the demand here specified. But the matter will appear plain, when it is considered, that it has been an immemorial custom in the east, for sons to demand and receive their portion of the inheritance during their father's lifetime. It is still customary among the Gentoos; and it existed among the ancient Romans and Syrophenicians.

POST.—"Swifter than a post;"

Job ix. 25. Alludes to the dispatches sent on dromedaries, or by foot messengers. Lady M. W. Montague asserts that they far outrun the swiftest horses; and that some foot runners will go 150 miles in less than 24 hours; with what energy, then, might Job say, "my days are swifter than a post." Instead of passing away with a slowness of motion like that of a caravan, my days of prosperity have disappeared with a swiftness like that of a messenger carrying dispatches.

POST.—"One post shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another, to show the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end;" Jer. li. 31. It seems a contradiction to say, "One post shall run to meet another, &c., to show the kingdom of Babylon is taken (not at one end, as our translation has it, but) at the extremity. Yet it was so; for Babylon was taken at each end at the same time; so that the messengers, who carried the news to the king, at his palace in the middle of the city, did run to meet each other, as coming from opposite quarters.

POSTERITY. The generation following, Gen. 45. 7; Ps. 49. 13; 109. 13.

POT. Ec. 16. 23; Ps. 68. 13, & 81. 6; Jer. 1. 13; Zech. 14. 21.

POTENTATE. A mighty sovereign and ruler. It is applied to Christ who is King of kings, and Lord of lords; 1 Tim. vi. 15.

POTIPHAR, Pot'-te-far, bull of Africa, fat bull.—A chief officer of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and general of his troops. Joseph was sold by his brethren to the Midianitish merchants, and by them to Potiphar; Gen. xxxvii. 36; xxxix. 1.

POTIPHERA, Po tif'-e-rah, scatters abroad.—A priest of On, in Egypt, Joseph's father-in-law; Gen. xli. 45.

POTS, 'before your pots can feel the thorns; Pots in the east are heated with thorns; Ps. lviii. 9.

POTS, 'though ye have lien among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.' The first phrase has perplexed translators and commentators. Dr Boothroyd simplifies the passage by translating it:—
'When ye lie down within your own boundaries
Ye shall be as the wings of a dove covered with silver,
And whose pinions are streaked with gold.'

He says there is no authority for the translation, 'pots,' and that none of the old translators have rendered the text 'among the pots.' It is significant of Israel's splendid appearance after finishing his conquests; Ps. lxxviii. 13.

POTSHERDS.—Pieces of broken earthen vessels, to which men are compared; Job ii. 8; Ps. xxii. 15; ii. 9; Prov. xxvi. 23; Isa. xlv. 9.

POTTAGE, 'red pottage;' Gen. xxv. 30. In the east, lentiles are still used with flesh, rice, &c., which make the pottage of a dark red colour.

POTTER.—One who makes earthen vessels; a type of the sovereign power of God; Jer. xviii. 2; Rom. ix. 21;—the breaking of his vessels, an emblem of the destruction of Jerusalem; Jer. xix. 1, 11.

POTTER, Is. 29. 16, & 64. 8; Jer. 18. 6; Lam. 4. 2; Rom. 9. 21.

POTTER'S FIELD, purchased with the money Judas received for betraying his Master. Grotius conjectures, it had been worked out by the potter, and was good for nothing but a burial place; here they interred strangers, Romans, proselytes, and those who died from home at the feasts; Matt. xxvii. 7.

POURTRAY.—To paint or draw a picture; to set forth in lively colours; Ezek. iv. 1; viii. 10; xxiii. 14.

POWDER, dust; Ex. xxxii. 20.

"It will grind him to powder;" Matt.

xxi. 44. On whomsoever the stone, i. e. Jesus Christ, falls in the way of judgment, he shall be ground so small, as to render him capable of being dispersed as chaff by the wind. Some think this alludes, not only to the dreadful crushing of the Jewish state by the Romans, but also to the general dispersion of the Jews through all the nations of the world, which continues to the present day.

POWDER and DUST, Deut. xxviii. 24. The threatening may refer to that calamity sometimes felt in the East, where the intense heat of the sun turns the earth into dust and sand, which being driven about by the wind, injures and pains the eyes, or buries in the deserts whole caravans.

POWER. That attribute or perfection of God, whereby he can do whatsoever he purposeth to do, and prevents what he will not have done; Matt. vi. 13. absolute right and authority; Matt. ix. 6. "The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins;" that is, he that is the Son of man, being God, hath this power. Right and privilege; John i. 12. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth;" Matt. xxviii. 18. Supreme and absolute authority and ability are given me in heaven, so as to prevail with God to be very merciful to man. To send the Holy Ghost; Acts ii. 33. Over angels; Col. i. 16; Heb. i. 4. To give heaven to all that believe in me; Matt. xxv. 34. Power is also given me on earth, to prevail with men to be reconciled to God, and so to gather a church out of all nations; Matt. xvi. 15, 16, and to rule, govern, and defend the same against all its enemies; Acts x. 36, 38, 42; Eph. i. 20, 21. "The body is raised in power;" 1 Cor. xv. 43. It will be able to attend the soul in the highest operations; to be continually exercised in the highest employments without weariness; to bear the weight of glory; to do whatsoever the soul would have it. It will be above the reach of inward infirmities, or outward dangers. See Omnipotence.

PRÆTORIUM.—The house of the Prætor, i. e. of him who was over the army; for the term Prætor anciently signified every magistrate who had command over the army. Also a rank of soldiers, who composed the Prætor's (or governor's) body guard. Any large or magnificent house or palace.
 Also that part of the Prætor's palace, which was set apart for the administration of justice by the Prætor, or Governor; Mark xv. 16.

PRAISE. — To commend. — To praise men is to declare their good qualities, and actions. — To praise God is duly to acknowledge his great ex-cellences; Ps. cxxxviii. &c. Rev. xix.

 5.—Praise is the sweetest part of Divine worship; it is expressive of celestial employment, and is frequently, in some degree, heaven upon earth.
 God, though he needs it not, delights in praise. Where he has given his grace, the heart is an instrument of music to him, and he loves to see them kept still in tune, though he does not always play his own praises upon them. None have so much matter for praise as the saints; they can see more into the beauties of creation and the dealings of providence than can others; but above all they alone see the beauties of redemption, so as to feel the great benefits and blessings of it; believers therefore have the most cause for praising God, and the most delight in the sacred employment;

PRAY.—Commonly, to ask or entreat earnestly with submission—to appeal to the judgment and decision of another—to intercede in the behalf of others, and to petition that some evil may be averted; or some favour or good obtained.

To pray to God, is, 1. To acknowledge his all-sufficiency, and our dependency upon him for all things necessary for us. It is to feel our helplessness and insufficiency to save ourselves.—2. True prayer is ever associated with the influence of the Holy Spirit; Rom. viii. 26; Zech. xii. 10.—3. Faith in the Mediator, Jesus Christ, is most essential to acceptable prayer; Heb. xi. 6; John xvi. 23; James i. 6—8.—4. Prayer is to be offered for “things agreeable to the will of God;” 1 John v. 14, 15.—5. The person must approach God and humbly confess his sins, and from the heart call upon him fervently for the exercise of his mercy, and the bestowal of all needful grace.—6. Prayer should be characterized by great reverence, veneration, and adoration of the Divine Being—with sincerity of heart—and hearty thanksgivings and praise.

The true nature of prayer may be best ascertained from a view of the manner in which it is spoken of in Scripture. It is called inquiring of the Lord; Gen. xxv. 22; supplication; Zech. xii. 10; entreaty; Exod. viii. 8; wrestling with God; Rom.

xv. 30; lifting up the soul; Psa. xxv. 1; pouring out the heart; Psa. lxii. 8; looking up to God; Psa. v. 3; taking hold of God; Isa. lxiv. 7; crying; 1 Sam. vii. 8; asking; John xv. 16; seeking and knocking; Matt. vii. 7, &c. &c. How plainly may we see, from these descriptions of prayer, the unacceptableness and inefficiency of cold, formal, heartless repetition before God.

God will hear and answer such praying. It is evident, 1. From his promises, “Before they call, I will answer, and whilst they are yet speaking, I will hear;” Isa. lxv. 24; Psa. cii. 17; cxlv. 19; 1 John v. 14, 15; Matt. vii. 7—12; John xvi. 23, 24.—In prayer believers often obtain deliverance from all their troubles, according to promise; Ps. xxxiv. 4, 17; 1. 15; cxviii. 5; Luke xviii. 1—9; 2 Cor. xii. 7—10.

PRAYERER.—‘By a river side, where prayer was wont to be made;’ Acts xvi. 13. These proseuchæ were places of prayer, sometimes similar to, and sometimes different to the synagogues; the latter were sometimes in cities, and were covered places; but, for the most part, they were out of the cities, on the banks of rivers, in a grove, or under a tree, where there would be a retired and convenient place for worship.

PRAYERS, ‘long prayers.’—The Pharisees’ prayers often lasted three hours. The rule was to meditate an hour, then pray an hour, and then meditate another hour, all of which were included in their long prayers, or devotions; Matt. xxiii. 14; Mark xii. 40.

PREACH.—To proclaim the gospel, or to announce the glad tidings of salvation to a sinful world. It is the Divine will that it should be so; Mark xvi. 15, 16. And since he gave his last injunction, the truth has spread, and been maintained, by this means; believers have been comforted, edified, and built up upon their most holy faith; 1 Cor. i. 21; Rom. i. 15, 16. The ministry of the gospel must endure as long as the Christian dispensation continues. It is the great lever to raise man from the ruins of the fall.

PRECEPT.—A rule given by a superior; a direction or command. The precepts of religion, says Saurin, are as essential as the doctrines; and religion will as certainly sink, if the morality be subverted, as much as if the theology be undermined.

PRECIOUS.—Costly, of great value, dear to a person. Spoken of the blood or life of a person; Ps. lxxii. 14.—The price of man's redemption; Ps. xlix. 8; 1 Pet. i. 19.—Of Christ himself; 1 Pet. ii. 7.—Of the promises; 2 Pet. i. 4.—Of faith; 2 Pet. i. 1.

PRECIOUS THINGS.—The original implies fruits, flowers, plants, delicacies; Gen. xxiv. 53.

PRECIOUS FRUITS "brought forth by the sun, and by the moon;"

Deut. xxxiii. 13, 14. These denote annual and monthly productions: the former, wheat, barley, grapes, &c.; the latter, figs, olives, &c., which produced many crops.

PRECIOUS THINGS "put forth by the moon," that is, produced by the moisture of the night; Deut. xxxiii. 14.

PRECIOUS things of heaven, &c., Deut.

PREDESTINATE, a term used to point out God's fixed purpose, or pre-determination, to bestow on the Gentiles the blessing of the adoption of sons, by Jesus Christ; Eph. i. 5. which adoption had been before granted to the Jewish people; and without circumcision, or any other Mosaic rite, to admit the Gentiles to all the privileges of his church and people. The apostle remarks, that all this was fore-determined by God, as he had fore-determined the bounds and precincts of the land which he gave them according to the promise made to their fathers

PREDESTINATE, Rom. 8. 29, 30.

PREDESTINATED, Eph. 1. 5, 11.

PRE-EMINENCE,—Superiority, precedence, highest in honour, power, &c., as Christ is; Col. i. 18; Ecl. iii. 19; 3 John 9.

PREMEDITATE, Mark 13. 11.

PREPARE a place for you ; John xiv. 2. This figure alludes to travellers, when one of them precedes his companions to provide a place to lodge in.

PREPARE ye the way of the Lord ; Matt. iii. 3 ; Isa. xl. 3. Primarily referring to the return of the Jews from the Babylonian captivity, but principally to John the Baptist as the forerunner of Christ. Allusion is made to the preparations made by the eastern monarchs, by pioneers going before them to remove obstacles, level roads, raise causeways, &c., in wild countries, not convenient for travelling. Thus Semiramis in her march to Ecbatana came to the Zarcean mountain ; which extending many furlongs, and being full of craggy precipices and deep hollows, could not be passed without taking a great compass about. To leave an everlasting memorial of herself, the precipices were digged down, and the hollows filled up, and at a great expense, she made a shorter and more expeditious way, still called the road of Semiramis.

Carne says that when travelling through the hilly country of Judea, he and his friends found the greater difficulty in continuing their tour because the roads were so rugged even in the best places, deep rutted, and rendered almost impassable by the rain lately fallen, and which had in some places thrown down huge masses of rock.

PREPARED as a bride adorned for her husband ; Rev. xxi. 2. D'Arvieux says, "It is a sort of magnificence in the East frequently to dress and undress the bride, and to cause her to wear, on the marriage day, all the clothes made up for her nuptials. She is presented each time the dress is changed to the bridegroom. His dress is also frequently changed for the same reason." This circumstance gives energy to the above words.

PRESENCE.—Divine existence ; "Whither shall I go from thy presence, &c," Ps. cxxxix. 7.—Had I a mind to escape the inspection of God, whither should I go? Heaven is the seat of his glory, creation the scene of his providence, and the grave itself will be the theatre of his power ; so that my efforts will be equally vain, whether I ascend or descend, or fly abroad upon the wings of the morning light, which diffuses itself over the globe from east to west.—Sight ; 1 Sam. xviii. 11.—Person ; 2 Kings iii. 14.—Face ; 2 Kings xiii. 23.—Manifestation of God upon Mount Sinai ; Isa. lxiv. 1—3.

PRESS. "Press toward the mark," &c.; Phil. iii. 14. I pursue along the line: this is a reference to the white line that marked the ground in the stadium, from the starting place to the goal, on which the runners were obliged to keep their eye fixed; for they who transgressed, or went beyond the line, did not run lawfully, and were not crowned, even though they got first to the goal.

PREVENT.—To hinder, as the word is now used. But this is never its signification in the Bible. It there always means to anticipate, to precede or go before; this being the use of the word at the time that our translation of the Bible was made.

PREVENT, Job 3. 12; Ps. 59. 10, & 79. 8, & 88. 13, & 119. 148; Amos 9. 10; 1 Thess. 4. 15.

PREVENTED, 2 Sam. 22. 6, 19; Job 30. 27, & 41. 11; Ps. 13. 5, 18, & 21. 3, & 119. 147; Is. 21. 14; Matt. 17. 25.

PREY, Gen. 49. 9, 27; Esth. 9. 15, 16.
Ps. 124. 6. not given us as a p. to their teeth

Is. 49. 24. shall p. be taken from mighty, 25.

59. 15. he that departeth from evil, maketh himself a p.

Jer. 21. 9. life for a p. 38. 2, & 39. 18, & 45. 5.

PRICE.—Value, Prov. xxxi. 10. "Her price is above rubies;" no quantity of precious stones can be equal to her worth. Esteem, 1 Pet. iii. 4; an opportunity or advantage Prov. xvii. 16. "Ye are bought with a price," 1 Cor. vi. 20. As a slave who is purchased by his master for a sum of money is the sole property of his master; so ye, being bought with the price of the blood of Christ, are not your own; you are his property.

PRICE, Lev. 25. 16; Deut. 23. 18.

PRICKS.—"Kick against the pricks," or goads; Acts ix. 5; xxvi. 14. An allusion to the restive ox kicking against the sharp-pointed staff, used to drive cattle. Of course, if they kicked against them, they only wounded themselves more deeply.

PRICKS, Num. 33. 55. those that remain be p. in your eyes

Acts 9. 5. it is hard to kick against the p. 26. 14.

PRICKED, Ps. 78. 21; Acts 2. 87.

PRIDE.—Inordinate self-esteem, loftiness of mind, beauty, grandeur, &c., displayed and paraded; ostentation, self-conceit. The proud think themselves superior to others, it may be in their persons, in their beauty, mental powers, riches, or education. Pride is haughty and disdainful; it passes by the poor, and all who are considered inferior in station and circumstances; it is uncondescending, stiff, and dishonourable. But spiritual pride is the most hateful and degrading, and will hereafter meet with a terrible reward. How many Pharisees value themselves on account of their gifts, forms, ceremonies, &c. Others are intoxicated with their talents, their performances, and are ever courting adulation. Is it masculine? No; it is childish. Is it dignifying? No; it is debasing:—"Pride goeth before destruction; and an haughty spirit before a fall."

PRIDE of heart, 2 Chr. 32. 26; Ps. 10. 4.

PRIESTHOOD, means, (1) The office of a priest; Num. xvi. 10. Under the Jewish law, the priest offered sacrifices, taught the people, and prayed for them. Aaron's was an "everlasting priesthood;" it secured to him and his seed the office of priest for many generations; Exod. xl. 15, Num. xxv. 13. But Christ's is an "unchangeable priesthood," as it can never pass from him to another; Heb. vii. 24. (2) A class of persons who perform religious offices, according to the will of God. The saints are an "holy" and a "royal priesthood;" a company of spiritual priests, washed in Jesus' blood, sanctified by his word and spirit, and enabled to offer up spiritual sacrifices of prayer and praise to God through Jesus Christ; 1 Pet. ii. 5, 9; Rev. i. 6. Before the consecration of Aaron and his sons,—fathers, or elder brothers, acted as priests, as Noah, Abraham, Job, Melchisedek, &c., and occasionally every man for himself, as Abel, Cain, &c. See High-priest.

PRINCE.—A chief governor, or a king's son. We read of Princes of tribes and families. All the various branches of Abraham's descendants, like the ancient Germans, or the Scottish clans, kept together as a body according to their tribes and families; each tribe forming a lesser commonwealth, with its own peculiar interests, and all of them at last uniting in one great republic. Hence the Ishmaelites were governed by twelve princes according to the number of Ishmael's sons; Gen. xxv. 16. And the Israelites appear to have been divided into 12 tribes previous to their departure from Egypt. These princes were called elders; Deut. xvi. 18; xxi. 2.

Christ is called the "Prince of Peace," Isa. ix. 6. He is the only purchaser and procurer of peace between God and men; Isa. liii. 5, and of peace between men and men, between Jews and Gentiles; Eph. ii. 15, and he left peace as his legacy to his disciples; John xiv. 27. He is called "the Prince of Life," Acts iii. 15. As God, he is the author of our temporal life, in whom we live and move, and in whose hand is our breath; and as mediator, he is the guide and way to eternal life; John xiv. 6. He is also called, "the Prince of the kings of the earth," Rev. i. 5. He, as king, rules over all, even his greatest and most powerful enemies.

PRINCE of the power of the air; Eph. ii. 2. Referring to Satan. The 'air' denotes the jurisdiction of the fallen spirits.

PRINCIPALITY.—Royal state, or the attire of the head marking the same; Jer. xiii. 18;—chief rulers; Tit. iii. 1;—good angels; Eph. i. 21; iii. 10. To Christ, as Mediator, are subjected the highest and the lowest orders of beings in the universe. Also wicked spirits; Eph. vi. 12; Col. ii. 10.

PRINCIPLE.—An essential truth from which others are derived; the ground or motive of action. The first principles of the oracles of God; Heb. v. 12; vi. 1.

PRINT.—To carve or make a figure on the skin; Lev. xix. 28.

PRINTED 'in a book,' Job xiv. 23. As the art of printing was then unknown, it should be, 'inscribed in a register.'

PRISCA, Pris'-kah, ancient.—A pious woman; 2 Tim. iv. 19.

PRISCILLA, Pris-sil'-lah, ancient.—A Christian female, who was at Corinth when Paul came thither, and had the honour of entertaining him; Acts xviii. 1, 2. She was the wife of Aquila. She shared the labours, privations, and hardships of her husband. Both are generally mentioned together; Rom. xvi. 3; 1 Cor. xvi. 19. They were driven from Rome by the emperor Claudias, and found refuge at Corinth.

PRISON.—A place of confinement, or bodily restraint; Matt. xviii. 30; Acts v. 18; xxviii. 17. "I was delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans." The Roman method of fettering and confining prisoners was singular. One end of a chain, that was of commodious length, was fixed about the right arm of the prisoner, and the other end was fastened to the left of a soldier. Thus a soldier was coupled to the prisoner, and every where attended and guarded him. Thus was St. Paul confined. Fettered in this manner, he delivered his apology before Festus, king Agrippa, and Bernice. And it was this circumstance that occasioned one of the most pathetic and affecting strokes of true oratory that ever was displayed either in the Grecian or Roman senate. "Would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds!"

The grave is called a prison; Isa. liii. 8.—It represents God's power over Satan; Rev. xx. 7; and the bondage in which men are kept by Satan and their own lusts; Isa. xlii. 7.

PRISONERS 'are gathered in the pit;' Isa. xxiv. 22. This practice still prevails in the East, where prisoners are let down through a hole, into a narrow pit, where they are confined at the pleasure of their tyrants.

PRIZE.—The prize; 1 Cor. ix. 24, refers to the crown awarded to the victor in the Olympic games. "I press towards the mark, for the prize." I do not esteem myself to have obtained this glorious prize; but one thing occupies my whole attention; forgetting what I have left behind I stretch every nerve towards the prize before me, pressing with eager and rapid steps towards the goal, to seize the immortal palm which God by Christ Jesus bestows; Phil. iii. 14.

PROFANE.—Openly wicked, wanting in religious reverence to sacred names or things, 1 Tim. i. 9; unholy, or impure, 1 Tim. vi. 20. Esau is called profane in Scripture, because he sold his birth-right, which was a holy thing; not only because the priesthood was annexed to it, but also because it was a privilege leading to Christ, and a type of his title to the heavenly inheritance. When the apostle censured “profane babblings,” he meant those heathen absurdities which were founded in superstition and ignorance.

PROFESSION.—Christians are required to make a profession of their faith. Boldly, Rom. i. 16; explicitly, Matt. v. 16; constantly, Heb. x. 23. Yet not ostentatiously, but with humility and meekness. “They profess to know God; but in works deny him; Titus i. 16. Their profession and practice were at continual variance. PROMISE.—An assurance given, by which a person engages to do or forbear to do something. God, in his word, promises blessings to his people. The fifth commandment, “Honour thy father and mother,” is called the “commandment with promise,” Eph. vi. 2, because God has added this declaration, that they who honour their parents shall have their days lengthened on earth. Jesus Christ has promised to be with his people to the end of the world; Matt. xxviii. 20. The Holy Ghost is called the “Holy Spirit of promise,” Eph. i. 13, being promised to them that believe on Christ, and being the seal and pledge of their everlasting happiness.

PROOFS.—"Alive by many infallible proofs" of Christ's resurrection; Acts i. 3. These proofs were 1. Appearing to several different persons, at different times. 2. His eating and drinking with them. 3. His meeting them in Galilee, according to his own appointment. 4. His subjecting his body to be touched and handled by them. 5. His instructing them in the nature and doctrines of his kingdom.
 6. His appearing to upwards of five hundred persons at once; 1 Cor. xv.

PROPHECY. (1) A declaration of future things; Neh. vi. 12. (2) A declaration of hidden, obscure, and important things; Prov. xxx. 1. (3)

 iv. 14; Rom. xii. 6. (4) The gift of explaining obscure passages of Scripture, or of foretelling things to come;
1 Cor. xii. 10; xiii. 8.

To predict the distant contingencies of futurity, is as far beyond the reach of human sagacity, as the working of miracles is beyond the reach of human power. "To see and foretell future events," Bishop Douglass says, "may be called a miracle of knowledge, as properly as to raise the dead may be called a miracle of power."
 And it is unreasonable to imagine that God would either by the one or the other, interpose for the sanction of imposture. The knowledge of future events, man with the greatest talents, science, and desire, cannot attain.
 One design of the prophetic dispensation was to give a striking manifestation of the true God, as distinguished from all idols and lying vanities; Isa.
 xli. 21—27; xlii. 8, 9; xlv. 6, 7;
 xlv. 20, 21.—Another design was to "testify beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow;" 1 Pet. i. 10, 11. To such predictions our Lord appealed; Luke xxiv. 26, 27, 44. And so did Peter; Acts iii. 22—25; xxvi. 22—23. Hence it is evident that the great design of prophecy was to bear testimony to Christ; therefore it is said, "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy;" Rev. xix. 10.

Isaiah in the 53rd chap. gives a

The woman that joins in public worship is here meant, for to pray or preach publicly was prohibited to women; 1 Cor. xiv. 3—5; 1 Tim. ii. 12. The Jewish law prohibited a woman from going bare-headed. The woman, therefore, neither went into the public streets, nor any open place unveiled.

PROPHET.—A prophet was an eminently distinguished person, raised up by God in an extraordinary manner for the performance of the most sacred functions; Heb. i. 1; 2 Pet. i. 21.

Originally prophets were called seers: they discovered things yet future, declared the will of God, and announced their divine messages, both to kings and people, with a confidence and freedom that could only be produced by the conviction that they were indeed authorized messengers of Jehovah. The gift of prophecy was not always annexed to the priesthood: there were prophets of all the tribes, and sometimes even among the Gentiles. The office of a prophet was not confined to the prediction of future events: it was their province to instruct the people, and they interpreted the law of God: hence the words prophet and prophecy are, in many passages of the scriptures, synonymous with interpreter or teacher, and interpretation or teaching. Reckoning from Moses to Malachi, we find a series of prophets, who flourished in a continued succession during a period of more than one thousand years; all confirming the authority of their predecessors; co-operating in the same designs; and uniting in one spirit to deliver the same doctrines, and to predict the same blessings to mankind.

About the time of Samuel, Schools of Prophets were formed, wherein young men were piously educated, to prepare them for receiving the gift of prophecy. Such schools we find at Bethel, Gilgal, Naioth, Jericho, and Jerusalem; which were inspected by Samuel, Elijah, Elisha, &c.; but it does not appear that these young men were afterwards inspired; 1 Sam. x. xi. xix; 2 Kings ii.

PROVERBS.—This book, excepting the two concluding chapters, was composed by Solomon; ch. i. 1; x. 1; xxv. 1.) The thirtieth chapter was penned by Agar, son of Jakeh, of whom we now where else read; and the last chapter contains the instructions given to Lemuel by his mother, of both of whom we are equally ignorant. From the first verse of the twenty-fifth chapter it has been inferred, that the Proverbs following were collected out of the other writings of Solomon, and placed in the order in which we now possess them. The design of the inspired author of these pointed and sententious maxims, may be gathered from the first three verses; and so admirably adapted to the purposes of instruction have they appeared, that many heathen philosophers and legislators have drawn their brightest sentiments from this book. The Proverbs are frequently quoted in the New Testament: see Matt. xv. 4; Luke xiv. 10; Rom. xii. 16, 17, 20; 1 Thess. v. 14; 1 Pet. iv. 8; v. 5; Jas. iv. 6, &c.

PROVIDENCE.—A care for the future. The word is principally used in reference to that kind superintendence which our heavenly Father exercises over his creatures, supporting them in their being, caring for them, and governing them in all their actions. It is very singular that the Greek word signifies forethought, and the Latin word, foresight. The arguments for the providence of God are generally drawn from the light of nature; the being of a God; the creation of the world; the wonderfully disposing and controlling the affairs and actions of men; from the absolute necessity of it; from the various blessings enjoyed by his creatures; the awful judgments that have been inflicted; and from the astonishing preservation of the Bible and the church through every age, notwithstanding the attempts of earth and hell against them. Providence has been divided into immediate and mediate, ordinary and extraordinary, common and special, universal and particular. Immediate providence is what is exercised by the Lord himself, without the use of any instrument or second cause; mediate providence is what is exercised in the use of means; ordinary providence is what is exercised in the common course of means, and by the chain of second causes; extraordinary is what is out of the common way, as miraculous operations: common providence is what belongs to the whole world; special, what relates to the church; universal relates to the general upholding and preserving all things; particular relates to individuals in every action and circumstance, Ps. xxxv. 6; lxxviii. 4; lxxvii. 19; xcvii. 2; Job xxxvii. 14—23; Rom. xi. 34—36; Matt. x. 30; Luke xii. 7.

PRUDENCE signifies wisdom applied to practice. Discreet and cautious words and conduct; Acts xiii. 7; Eph. i. 8. Prudence in domestic life is closely connected with frugality, and must be observed in every pursuit, action, and undertaking. Our frugality must be in proportion to our income, family, and situation in life. Generally, a little is enough for all the necessities and innocent delights in nature. Without prudence, the largest estate may soon be wasted.

PSALM. — A holy song. The Psalms are very sweet to a Christian, because they contain so much of the experience of a Christian. Most of them were composed by David. The 90th by Moses; the 80th, called the treasury of instruction, by Heman. Those under the name of Asaph, were probably directed to him as leader of the temple choir. Some Psalms are doctrinal, as Ps. i.; some historical, as the lxxviii., cv., cvi.; prophetic, as the cx.; prayer and complaints, as vi. xxxviii., &c.; praise and thanksgiving, as the cxlv., cl., &c. In some, most of these subjects are connected, as Ps. lxxxix.

As to the titles of the Psalms, the Hebrew words therein mentioned, are by some considered as names of instruments of music; or first words of some songs; or to denote the subject of the Psalm. It is thought that Maschil means a poem, or set composition, and signifies that the Psalm is designed for instruction, Ps. xxxii.; that Michtam denotes the precious or golden nature of the Psalm; and perhaps all the Psalms so marked relate to Jesus Christ. Neginoth or Neginath, signifies stringed instruments; Ps. iv., lxi. Nehiloth, wind instruments; Ps. v. Gittith, an instrument invented at Gath; Ps. viii. Alamoth, the treble, or song to be sung by virgins. Ps. xlvi. Shiggaion or Shigionoth, may denote that the Psalm is to be sung with diversified tunes, or has a very diversified subject; Ps. vii., Hab. iii. Aijeleth Shahar, Ps. xxii., meaning, "The Hind of the Morning." This is thought to have a mystical reference to Christ, to whom the Psalm points, and is to be understood as denoting him as the "Hind of the Morning," roused early from his sleep, and hunted through the live-long day by his cruel pursuers.

By others, "Aijeleth Shahar," and some other titles are made to refer to the time at which the Psalm was to be sung; and Mr. Boothroyd thus explains the above words, "at the dawn of day." In this way the "Hind of the Morning" would be the sun, and the Psalm a morning hymn.

PSALTERY. — A kind of harp or dulcimer, supposed to have been like the guitar. The body was wood, and Josephus says, it had twelve strings. The modern Psaltery is a flat instrument, of a triangular form, and strung from side to side, with wire; 1 Sam. x. 5; Psa. xxxiii. 2; cxliv. 9; Dan. iii. 5, 7, 10, 15.

PTOLEMAIS, Tol - e - ma' - is. — A sea-port town of Canaan, on the shore of the Mediterranean, 32 miles south of Tyre; Acts xxi. 7. It was anciently called Accho, Judges i. 31. Its modern name is St. Jean d'Acre.

PTOLEMY, Tol'-e-me, a furrow.—A name borne by all the kings of Egypt, from Ptolemy, son of Lagus.

PUA or PUAH, a mouth, a corner.—Son of Issacher; Num. xxvi. 23.—Father of Tola; Judges x. 1.—A midwife; Ex. i. 15.

PUBLICAN, a collector of taxes. The Romans farmed out their revenue to men who paid into the treasury of the state a certain sum, and took the risk of collecting. These contracts were taken by the principal men, who let out small districts to individuals for specified sums, which they undertook to collect. Printing not being known, and the laws little understood, these inferior agents generally committed gross impositions, and extorted from the people all that they could. They were therefore greatly hated by the Jews; whose pride was mortified by having to pay tribute at all. Matthew, Zaccheus, and probably other publicans, became disciples of Christ; Luke xv. 2; Matt xxi. 31.

PUFFED up, 1 Cor. 4. 6. 19, & 5. 2; 2 Cor. 8. 1, & 13. 4; Col. 2. 18.

PUL, Pul, a bean.—Is the first king of Assyria, and the founder of that empire as proved by Sir Isaac Newton's Chronology of ancient kingdoms. He invaded the kingdom of Israel during the reign of Menahem, but departed without committing hostilities, on receiving a thousand talents of silver; 2 Kings xv. 19, 20. Pul returned to his own country after extending his fame, and probably his dominions, by the submission of several nations that lay in his way.

PUL. The name of a place, the Philæ of history, not far from Syene; Is. lxvi. 19. It was inhabited by a powerful people. It contains some interesting ruins. It is supposed that the Fellahs of Egypt are descended from Pul; Is. lxvi. 19.

PULPIT signifies a platform; Neh. viii. 4. "Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit of wood," to elevate him sufficiently for the people to see and hear him; for it is said, ver. 5, that he was above all the people.

PUR, Pur or Purim, lot or lots, signifies a solemn festival of the Jews, instituted in memory of the providential deliverance they experienced from the cruel machinations of Haman, who had procured an edict from Artaxerxes to extirpate them; Esth. iii. 7. This feast is celebrated on the fourteenth of the month Adar, which answers to our February, for two days.

PURCHASED, Ps. 74. 2; Acts 8. 20, & 20. 28; Eph. 1. 14; 1 Tim. 3. 13.

PURE.—Simple, unmixed, uncompounded, as wine without water, gold or silver without dross; Exod. xxv. 17, 31; Deut. xxxii. 14, absolutely free from spots, stain, or the least mixture of sin; Psa. xix. 8; 1 John iii. 3, one who is single-hearted and sincere, free from any reigning sin; Matt. v. 8, devout and religious; Prov. xxx. 12, clear and free; Acts xx. 26, lawful to be used; Rom. xiv. 20, believers whose hearts are purified by faith; Tit. i. 15, free from error, idolatry, and hypocrisy; James i. 27.

PURE.—"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God;" Matt. v. 8. This was spoken in opposition to the Pharisees, who affected outward piety, while their hearts were full of defilement. The pure in heart have the heart renewed by divine influence, and replenished with holy natures and affections, and they habitually follow after holiness. Such shall see God, in this world by his spiritual manifestations, and hereafter in all fulness and perfection, they shall see him as he is, in his heavenly temple.—In the East it was accounted the highest happiness to be admitted into that splendid circle which surrounded the person of their sovereign. The Hindoos often speak too of devout persons having been favoured with a sight of their guardian deity. Ward tells a story, in which a sage is represented as having been refused the sight of Juggernaut, as he stood charged with many immoral and sanguinary deeds. Hence the force of the expression, see God.

PURPLE, 'a seller of purple,' Acts xvi. 14. The fine purple dye was procured from the shell-fish named 'murex,' or 'purpura.' Purple and scarlet dresses were exclusively appropriated to royalty, the most exalted rank, and idols. The traffic in it, probably, was profitable. "To this day," says the Scottish Mission, "the best scarlet dye, (a term often interchanged for purple,) in all Asia, is produced at Thyatira."

PURSE.—The purse used by the Jews was very different from ours. They carried their money in their girdles as the Easterns now do, and these are here meant by the term purses. Eastern travellers have not only outward girdles, but girdies which they tie next to their skin, from which they extract such money as they may want from time to time, and avoid the notice of robbers, which abound in those parts.

PUTEOLI, Pew-te'-o-ly.—A city in Campania in Italy, about 8 miles from Naples. It was called Puteoli, from the great number of wells in the neighbourhood: it is now known as Puzzoli or Puzzuolo. This once celebrated town of Italy is delightfully situated on a point projecting into the sea, nearly in the centre of the fine bay of Puzzuolo. Its situation as a sea-port is remarkably fine, its prominences form a natural port, admirably covered by the surrounding coast, and so divided into creeks and havens as to afford perfect security to vessels.

In the square of the town stands a beautiful marble pedestal, covered with bas-reliefs, representing in allegorical figures, the fourteen towns of Asia Minor, destroyed by an earthquake, and rebuilt by Tiberius. The cathedral stands on the ruins of a temple, and is built chiefly of ancient materials. The celebrated labyrinth, with its numerous apartments, yet exists—behind the town are the remains of an amphitheatre—the temple of Jupiter Serapis is still conspicuous, from its massive pillars, and the fragments of capitals, cornices, and friezes; but the most striking monument of antiquity is the remains of the mole that formed the ancient port. Several of its piers yet stand unshaken, but under the water; they supported 25 arches. The apostle Paul abode seven days at Puteoli; by the favour of the centurion, on his first journey to Rome; Acts xxviii. 13.

PUTIEL, Pew'-te-el, the fatness of God.—The father-in-law of Eleazar, the son of Aaron; Ex. vi. 25.

PUT off the old man. An allusion to the persons of the drama, who changed their dress with their character; Eph. iv. 22; Col. iii. 9, 10.

PUT ye on 'the Lord Jesus Christ,' Rom. xiii. 14. Be completely clothed with all the virtues and graces which characterized the Saviour our great pattern.

Q

QUAILS.—A species of bird, resembling the red partridge, of the size of a turtle-dove. It is delicate food. It breeds on the shores of the Red Sea; Ex. xvi. 13; Num. xi. 31, 32; Psa. cv. 40. God gave quails to the Israelites in the wilderness on two occasions. First, in the desert of Sin, a few days after they had passed the Red Sea; and again at the encampment of Kibroth-Hattaavah, they are found in great quantities on the coasts of the Red Sea and Mediterranean. God caused a wind to arise which drove them within and about the camp of the Israelites; and it is in this that the miracle consisted, namely, that they were brought so seasonably to this place, and in such immense quantities, as to sustain more than a million of human beings for more than a month. "God rained flesh upon them as dust, and feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea," Psa. lxxviii. 27.

QUAKE, applied to the earth; 1 Sam. xiv. 15; Joel ii. 10; Matt. xxvii. 51; Mount Sinai; Ex. xix. 18. Agitation of the mind and body; Ezek. xii. 18; Dan. x. 7; Heb. xii. 21.

QUARTERNION.—A file of four soldiers, the usual number of a night-watch. Peter was placed under the guard of four quarternions, that is, sixteen soldiers, in order that each might guard him three hours at a time.

QUARTUS, Quar'-tus, the fourth.—A disciple mentioned, and probably one of the seventy whom Christ sent to preach the gospel; Rom. xvi. 23.

QUARREL, Lev. 26. 25; Col. 3. 13.

QUEEN.—The wife or consort of a king; Neh. ii. 6. But the term is often employed in scripture figuratively for the church of God, which is espoused to Christ, the king of his people; Psa. xlv. 9, and for the false church, or antichristian apostacy; Rev. xviii. 7, also to the moon, which the Pagans worshipped as "the queen of heaven," Jer. xlv. 17, 25.

QUENCH. A figurative expression, borrowed from the practice of extinguishing fire, by throwing water upon it. The Apostle applies it to the influences of the Holy Spirit, when he says, "Quench not the Spirit;" 2 Sam. 14. 7; 1 Thess. 5. 19.

QUICKENED. "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die; 1 Cor. xv. 36. While the grain preserves its entireness, the embryo, or principle of future life, remains stationary; but, if through the stimulus of warmth and moisture, the albumen which surrounds the embryo, or the seed lobes or cotyledons, which are appended to it, begin to undergo a process of decomposition, or to die, (for death is dissolution) the embryo in its turn begins to show signs of life, to be quickened, and from this point continues to expand, till by the virtues of the soil, and the general influences of the sky, it has developed a grain precisely like that from which it sprang. We must suffer disintegration that we may unfold ourselves in a new stage of existence. The outward man, like the parts that accompany the embryo, must perish, but the elements thereof shall be gathered up again, after the analogy of the vegetable process, for these parts help to nourish the embryo, and consequently are not lost. If true and faithful believers in Christ, we shall therefore be raised in all the perfections of our nature; as the body will be preserved as well as the soul. Those powers which have been injured by sin, will be restored to a vigorous health, the freshness of perpetual youth shall pervade every part of our system. No infirmities to weigh us down, no vain desires to warp us aside, no bad passions to blot the sunshine of our peace. We shall possess a heavenly body, one full of immortality, like the place we are to inhabit.

QUICKSANDS; Acts xxvii. 17.

"Lest they should fall into the quicksands." There were two famous syrtis, or quicksands, on the African coast, one called the Syrtis Major, lying near the coast of Cyrene; and the other, the Syrtis Minor, not far from Tripoli. Both these, like our Goodwin sands, were noted for numerous shipwrecks.

RAAMAH, Ray'-a-mah, greatness, thunder, braising.—The fourth son of Cush; Gen. x. 7. His descendants peopled Arabia Felix, from whence they brought to Tyre spices, precious stones, and gold; Ezek. xxvii. 22.

RAAMIAH, Ra-am-a-i'-ah, thunder of the Lord.—A returned captive; Neh. vii. 7.

RAAMSES, Ra-am'-ses, thunder.—A treasure city built by the Hebrews, during their servitude in Egypt, for Pharaoh; Gen. xlvii. 11; Ex. i. 11; xii. 37. Grand Cairo is supposed to stand upon its site; Ex. i. 11.

RABBAH, Rab'-bah, powerful, contentious.—The capital of the Ammonites beyond Jordan, near the source of the Arnon, in the mountains of Gilead. It was known as Rabbath Ammon, the Philadelphia of history. Its ancient name is still preserved. It was a noted city in the time of Moses. Under David, Joab, his general, laid siege to Rabbath-Ammon, and there the brave Uriah lost his life; 2 Sam. xi. 1, &c.; xxviii. 29. It became subject to the kings of Judah, and then to the kings of Israel. Terrible judgments were denounced against it; Jer. xlix. 1—3; Ezek. xxi. 20; xxv. 5. It has been for ages "a desolate heap" "a heap of ruins." Ezekiel predicted, "Rabbah shall become a stable for camels;" and this has been fulfilled, for Burckhardt found the Arabs stabling their camels amidst its ruins.

RABBATH, Rab'-bath, powerful, contentious.—The same as RABBATH-AMMON; Deut. iii. 11.

RABBATH-MOAB, Rab'-bath-mo'-ab.—The carnal city of the Moabites.

RABBI, Rab-by, my master.—A title of dignity among the Hebrews, given to their doctors, masters, and teachers. The word is derived from the Chaldean Rab, an appellation distinguishing the chief officers of the Chaldean court; Jeremiah xxxix. 3. Among the Hebrews there were three titles of dignity; Rabh, Rabbi, and Rabban. Rabh signifies great; rabbi, greater; and rabban, greatest. These rabbis were regarded as infallible oracles in religious matters, and usurped not only the place of the law, but of God himself. They decided all religious disputes, and received the greatest homage. Our Saviour exhorts the disciples not to be ambitious of gaining such distinctions and titles as the Scribes and Pharisees sought after, but to look to him as their only law-giver and teacher, whom they were to follow in all matters of faith and worship; Matt. xxiii. 7, 8; John xx. 16.

RABBONI.—A title of the highest respect, signifying, “my great Master.”

RABMAG, Rab'-mag, one who overthrows a multitude.—The name of a Babylonish prince; Jer. xxxix. 3.

RABSARIS, Rab'-sa-ris, master, set over eunuchs.—A prince of Babylon; 2 Kings xviii. 17.

RASHAKEH, Rab'-sha-keh, chamberlain, cupbearer of the prince.—A term of dignity. He was an officer of Sennacherib; 2 Kings xviii. 17. He was proud, insolent, and profane.

RACA, Ray'-ka, a Syriac word of contempt and reproach signifying, empty, vain, beggarly, foolish.—Matt. v. 22. According to Dr. Lightfoot, it signifies a scoundrel; according to Drusus, a worthless scoundrel.

RACE. A running match; 1 Cor. ix. 24; Heb. xii. 1. The course or stadium for the races was marked out by public officers. A vast number of spectators were present, who cheered and animated the competitors. At the goal the prizes were elevated so as to be seen by those who ran, and the heralds endeavoured to inspire them with the hope of victory.

RACE, ‘Know ye not, &c.’; 1 Cor. ix. 24. Know you not that in the Grecian stadium great numbers run with the utmost contention to secure the prize, but that only one person wins and receives? With the same ardour and perseverance do you run, that you may receive the garland of celestial glory. You must observe all the rules prescribed by Christ, otherwise you cannot hope to receive the prize—“so run that ye may lay hold on the prize.” Here it is evident the Apostle places the Christian race in contrast with the Grecian games; in them, only one received the prize, though all ran: in this, if all run, all will receive the prize. “Now every one who contendeth, or striveth for the mastery, is temperate in all things.” Every one who enters the lists as a combatant, submits to a very rigid and severe regimen. They contend that they may receive a fading crown, but we one that does not fade; They run to obtain a fading chaplet; a chaplet only composed of the decayed leaves of a wild olive; but before us is suspended the unfading wreath of immortality. In the Olympic games, the crowns were of the wild olive; in the Pythian, they were of laurel; in the Isthmian of pinetrees; and in the Nemean, of smallage or parsley, which in course of time perished. But the crown for which Christians contend, being a crown of righteousness; (2 Tim. iv. 8.) and a crown of life; (James i. 12; Rev. ii. 10.) never fades, that is, there shall never be any period put to the honours and advantages, of which this crown is the pledge.

RACHAB, Ray'-kab, proud, strong, enlarged.—The wife of Salmon, and mother of Booz; Matt. i. 5.

RACHEL, Ray'-tshel, a sheep.—The daughter of Laban, sister of Leah, and wife of Jacob; Gen. xxix. 6. She was for many years childless, but was afterwards the mother of Joseph and of Benjamin, and died in childbed of the latter; Gen. xxxv. 16—19. Jeremiah and Matthew have put Rachel for the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, the children of Joseph, the son of Rachel; Jer. xxxi. 15; Matt. ii. 18. This prophecy was fulfilled in their captivity beyond the Euphrates.

RACHEL. “In Ramah was a voice heard, lamentations &c. Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not;” Matt. ii. 18.—These words are figurative, and by a bold personification represent the beautiful mother of Israel as awakened, by the sufferings of her posterity in captivity, from the deep rest of the tomb, in which she had for ages been slumbering amid the fields of Bethlehem, and bursting forth into all those expressions of passionate and inconsolable grief, which, on so mournful occasion, an oriental mother might be supposed to indulge.

RACHEL, 'came with her father's sheep.' It is still common for even the daughters of the greatest emirs to attend the eastern flocks; Gen. xxix. 9.

RADDAI, Rad'-da-i, ruling.—The fifth son of Jesse, and brother of David; 1 Chron. ii. 14.

RAGAU, Ray'-gau, a companion, his shepherd.—The name of one of Christ's ancestors; Luke iii. 35.

RAGE, a violent fury; 2 Kings v. 12. A man's jealousy is his rage; Prov. vi. 34.

RAGS, Prov. 23. 21; Is. 64. 6.

RAGUEL, Ra-gew'-el, shepherd or friend of God.—The father-in-law of Moses; Num. x. 29.

RAHAB, Ray'-hab, proud, strong, quarrelsome.—The name of the person who entertained the spies. In Josh. ii. 1—21, and vi. 22—26, we have an interesting account of the part she acted. Some have represented her as a hostess, or innkeeper, which is one import of the original. But still she might have been a harlot; yet she was converted, she believed in God; hence the Apostles Paul and James commend her faith; Heb. xi. 31; James ii. 25.

RAHAB.—A country or city; some suppose Egypt is meant; Ps. lxxxvii. 4; lxxxix. 10; Isa. li. 9; xxx. 7.

RAILER, or drunkard, 1 Cor. 5. 11.

RAILING, 1 Tim. 6. 4; 1 Pet. 3. 9.

2 Pet. 2. 11. r. accusation, Jude 9.

RAIMENT was at first made of the skins of beasts; Gen. iii. 21; but the art of spinning and weaving was soon invented; Ex. xxviii. 42, and even embroidering; Ex. xxxv. 35, which became common in the days of the judges. The common garment, in the days of Christ, was a sort of shirt or tunic, reaching to the ankles, generally with sleeves, but sometimes having only arm-holes. A girdle confined it at the waist. Over this various garments were worn, according to the quality of the person. The dress of females among the Jews always concealed their faces when they walked in public, and such is still the custom. The cut, under the head VAIL, illustrates the present Hindu dress. "I have seen," says one, "Jewesses in the streets of Rangoon and of Ava, wearing the same costume. All classes wore something in the form of a large shawl, called a cloak," or upper garment; Matt. xxi. 8. Some affected the possession of a great number of these garments; Jam. v. 2. Persons could carry various articles in the folds of their shawl; Luke vi. 38; and at night, in that climate, they rarely needed any other bed-clothes. See Ex. xxii. 26, 27. Around this outer garment the ancient Jews were accustomed to have a border or fringe sometimes marked with texts of Scripture. The Pharisees, through ostentation, made theirs remarkably large; Matt. xxiii. 5. When engaged in laborious work, this outer garment was laid aside, as by our Saviour, when he washed his disciples' feet; John xiii. 4; and Peter when he fished; John xxi. 7. When thus retaining nothing but thin under garments, they were said to be "naked;" John xxi. 7. This explains also, Matt. xxiv. 18. These upper garments would of course fit persons of any size equally well. To give raiment was therefore common; and especially when opulent or eminent men gave such entertainments. In such cases, not to accept and put on the proffered robe, was a great affront; Matt. xxii. 12.

RAIMENT, 'to Benjamin he gave five changes of raiment;' Gen. xlv. 22. It is a common custom with all the Asiatic sovereigns to give both garments and money, to ambassadors and persons of distinction, whom they particularly wish to honour.

RAIMENT of CAPTIVITY. — Beautiful garments, in which females dressed, who accompanied the men to battle, that so they might captivate the conquerors if taken; Deut. xxi. 13.

RAIN, 'latter and former rain;' Eosea vi. 3. The rains in Judea are very different from what they are among us. For months together they are unknown, falling plentifully twice a year. The latter rain, literally "the crop rain," fell profusely in Palestine, just before the season of harvest, to plump the grain before it was severed, and this was in March. The "former," or "the springing rain," fell in October, when the seed was newly sown, and caused the green blade to shoot up out of the ground; see Deut. xi. 14; Prov. xvi. 15; Jer. v. 24; Joel ii. 23. The grace of God in Christ is both the latter and the former rain; for by it the good work of our fruit-bearing is both begun and carried on, till the whole is perfected in glory.

In Egypt it scarcely ever rains; the overflow of the Nile, and copious dews, answering the purpose. In tropical climates the winter is the rainy season. Violent winds often attend those rains, and overthrow insecure houses. Hence our Saviour's parable; Matt. vii. 25.

Spiritual blessings are represented under the similitude of the falling rain;—"My doctrine shall drop as the rain," &c; Deut. xxxii. 2. "He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass," &c; Ps. lxxii. 6,—or pastured grass, or land. The Chaldee reads, "He shall descend gently, like rain on the grass which has been eaten by the locust;" Isa. xxvii. 3; xliv. 3; lv. 10, 11. To understand these scriptures, we must remember the parched state of the earth in the East during the summer season, when the verdure is destroyed by the scorching rays of the sun; a fit emblem of the state of the human mind, while estranged from God, and of a low state of piety in the soul of a professor of religion.

RAIN. "And the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell; and great was the fall of it;" Matt. vii. 27; Luke vi. 48. "Though rain in the winter is not very frequent, yet when it does rain, the water pours down with great violence three or four days and nights together, enough to drown the whole country. Such violent rains, in so hilly a country as Judea, must cause inundations very dangerous to buildings within their reach, by washing the soil from under them, and causing their fall. To such events our Lord referred.

RAINBOW.—One of the most beautiful phenomena in nature. We never observe a rainbow but when the rain falls before us, and the sun is at our backs; for the rays of the sun are refracted in the drops of rain, by which refraction the different colours of the bow are produced, the very same with those of the prism.

There is a two-fold bow, distinguished by the order in which the colours stand; the one, the ordinary or primary bow; the other, the extraordinary, or secondary, enclosing the primary. In the ordinary bow the red colour stands uppermost, and the violet undermost; in the extraordinary this order is inverted. The ordinary bow is formed by two refractions, the one when the ray enters the drop, the other at coming out, with one intermediate reflection. If the angle at the eye, formed by the issuing ray and a line parallel to the incident ray, contains 42 deg. 2 min., the red colour appears; but if only 40 deg. 17 min. the violet: and between these two angles, the other colours in their successive order. In the extraordinary bow there are two refractions, and two intermediate reflections. If the angle formed, as before, be 54 deg. 7 min. the violet appears; but if 50 deg. 57 min. the red; and under the intermediate angles the other colours in inverted succession.

God says, Gen. ix. 13. "I do set my bow in the cloud, &c." Or rather, "I have given" or set; for this text does not intimate that the bow was now created for a sign to Noah and his posterity; but that what was formerly created, or rather was the necessary effect in certain cases of the creation of the sun and atmosphere, should now be considered by them as an un-failing token of their continual preservation from the deluge. "As long as that rainbow shall appear, so long will I have you to consider it as a sign and witness that I will no more destroy the earth by a flood."

RAVEN.—A bird about the size of a pullet. Its colour is very black, and its voice harsh and doleful. It delights in solitude, and lives on carrion, &c. The raven which Noah sent forth did not return, probably because it found rest and food on the floating carcasses. It has always been considered a foul and hateful bird; especially by the Jews, whose law pronounced it unclean. How great is God's paternal regard to all his creatures, as we see from his care of this bird; Job xxxviii. 41. He not only feeds the ravens, but if killed, he cares for their unfledged young. "He giveth food to the young ravens which cry;" Psal. cxlvii. 9. If the Lord takes care of ravens, how safely may his people trust him; Luke xii. 24.

REASON.—That power or faculty of the mind by which we compare one proposition with another, so as to judge of their agreement or difference; and by which also we deduce consequences from alleged premises; Dan. iv. 36; Prov. xxvi. 16. "In things," says Dr. Watts, "which are plainly and expressly asserted in scripture, and that in a sense which contradicts not other parts of scripture, or natural light, our reason must submit, and believe the thing, though it cannot find the modus or manner of its being; so in the doctrines of the Trinity and incarnation, which are above the reach of our reason in this present state. But we cannot, nor must we, be led to take the words of scripture in such a sense as expressly and evidently contradicts all sense and reason, as transubstantiation; for the two great lights of God, reason and revelation, never contradict each other, though one be superior to the other."

2 Sam. iv. 2.—The father of Jonadab, and founder of the order of the Rechabites, who were enjoined to drink no wine, to build no houses, to sow no grain, to plant no vine-yards, to have no lands, and to live always in tents. When Nebuchadnezzar, besieged Jerusalem, these Rechabites came to Jerusalem for safety: by these people God intended to convince the Jews of their disobedience; and he ordered Jeremiah to bring them to the temple, and offer them wine to drink, as a trial of their obedience. They refused it, and assigned as a reason the prohibition of their father; Jer. xxxv. 1—11. The Jews were then upbraided with their disobedience to the divine commands, and threatened with vengeance, ver. 12—17. a blessing was promised to the Rechabites verses 18, 19.

RECONCILIATION.—‘In Scripture language, often denotes something done on behalf of the offender, or to obtain his peace with the offended. And so to be reconciled is to be accepted. In this sense it would be improper to say that the offended party is reconciled to the offender, because he needs no pardon from him, nor acceptance with him, having never wronged nor offended him.’ Such is the obvious meaning of reconciliation in 1 Sam. xxix 4; Matt. v. 23, 24; 2 Cor. v. 19, 21. These passages clearly show that it is the guilty person who is reconciled, according to the style of the scriptures; but then it is by pacifying, or making satisfaction.

to the party offended. In like manner, when God is said to reconcile the world to himself by Christ Jesus; 2 Cor. v. 19, it imports, that when the world could do nothing to satisfy or pacify him for their sins, he substituted his own Son in their place as a sin offering, took satisfaction from him on their account, and thus reconciled, or made them acceptable to himself, and does not impute their trespasses unto them. This is also the sense of reconciliation; Rom. x. 11; Eph ii. 16; Col. i. 20.

REDEEM.—To buy back what was sold, pledged, or forfeited; Luke i. 68.

REDEEMER.—One who ransoms by paying the price. Christ redeemed us by suffering in our stead the penalty of the Divine law; 1 Pet. i. 18. It was also the name given to the near kinsman in Israel, whose prescribed duty was to vindicate the cause of his relation, by avenging his death, recovering his inheritance, and marrying his widow, if he died without children.

The original word is sometimes translated 'avenger,' and 'revenger;' Num. xxxv. 12, 19, 21; Deut. xix. 6, 12. The redemption which was expected of him, he was required to accomplish by power or price. If a man was murdered, his redeemer was called to pursue to death the murderer, who, though he had undesignedly or accidentally done the melancholy deed, yet he might be killed by the pursuer, if he failed to reach one of the cities of refuge. Of redemption by ransom or price, we have some examples; Ruth ii. 20; iii. 9; Jer. xxxii. 7, 8. The redeemer ordained by Moses doubtless prefigured the Lord Jesus as the Redeemer of the world. The human race, wholly lost, sentenced to death, and excluded from the inheritance of spiritual and eternal life, no mere created being could redeem. By the dominion of sin over them, they were the captives of Satan, and justly doomed to eternal woe. They had no kinsman to vindicate their cause, to interpose for them by power or price. Who can comprehend the grace of the Lord Jesus, in veiling his divinity in a real human body, that he might sympathize, and labour, and suffer, to save his enemies! What a price did he pay to redeem them from the curse! "he gave himself a ransom for all." By his own blood he redeemed them from the curse and the grave; and by his power he conquered their murderer; and, by the power of his Spirit, he renovates their souls, and will raise their bodies from the dead, and glorify them.

REDEEMED,—'not with silver and gold,' 1 Pet. i. 18. The allusion is to the redemption of the people of Israel, and of the first-born by shekels; Exod. xxx. 12, 13; Num. iii. 46—48. Gold and silver do not mean pieces of gold and silver, but gold and silver coined; for only by such could redemption of any thing be obtained. "Your vain conversation," may refer to the traditions of the elders which our Lord inveighs against; Matt. xv. 3, &c.; and which the apostle Paul was brought up in, and zealous of, before his conversion; Gal. i. 14. "As of a lamb." The Jews have a notion, that the redemption of the Israelites out of Egypt, when a lamb without blemish was taken, and sacrificed and eaten, had a respect to the future redemption by the Messiah; and may not both kinds of redemption be referred to in this place? "Who verily was fore-ordained," alludes to the taking of the Passover lamb from the sheep, or from the goats, and keeping it separate, from the tenth to the fourteenth day of the month, before it was slain.

Heb. 9. 12. having obtained eternal r.

RED SEA.—An arm of the Indian ocean, which for 1400 miles washes the whole extent of the south east coast of Arabia, and the north east coast of Africa. Its breadth varies from 30 to 150 miles; Exod. xv. 4.

As the Edomites had long the command of it, it was called the sea of Edom, or Red Sea, Edom signifying Red. The Red Sea was anciently one of the greatest channels of commerce, only rivalled in importance by the Mediterranean. By it the fleets of Solomon proceeded to the far-famed countries of Ophir and Tarshish—by its means the precious commodities of the eastern world were conveyed to Europe, and this communication formed the most splendid source of commercial wealth.

RED SEA.—"And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left;" Ex. xiv. 22. Sir Gardner Wilkinson, who resided 12 years in Egypt, states that the Exodus occurred during the reign of Thothmes III, who was the fourth king of the 18th dynasty; This Pharaoh or king, was not buried with his ancestors; in fact, he could not have been, for he was drowned in the Red Sea, when pursuing the Israelites. How singular! we find a tomb in Egypt for every Pharaoh of his dynasty; but for this Pharaoh, or king, we find none. Why? Because, we repeat, he was buried in the Red Sea, and it would have been a blot on his monumental history, if they had recorded so sad an event.

We again find that this Pharaoh had two sons. We also find that the second son succeeded to the throne. He is represented in a drawing at Thebes as having come to the throne very young, and under the tutelage of his mother. There is also some reference to an elder son, the first-born; but of him very little is said. Why? Because the elder son was among the first-born who perished under the blast of the destroying angel. Had he lived, he would have been represented as swaying the sceptre.

But was it possible, the infidel asks, for 2,000,000 of Israelites to cross the Red Sea in that night? Were not they in the hands of God? Did he not provide for them? In the late American war, General Burnside had not less than 60,000 men upon the south side of the Rappahannock at the time of his repulse; yet in a few hours of the night he removed all his army across two or three pontoon bridges, with all his artillery and ammunition, without losing a single man. If this great army and their war material could cross the Rappahannock, on a few shaking pontoon bridges, that needed then to be laid down and put in order, surely when the Omnipotent interposed, opened wide a gap in the sea, made its waters stand like a wall, the Israelites surely must have passed safely and rapidly over.

REED. A tall hollow-jointed plant, growing in fenny places, much used in hot countries for buildings, carriages, &c. It is also used for fishing-rods, weavers' reeds, &c. It was anciently used for writing, and answered to the word "pen"; 3 John 13. The use of quills for writing cannot be traced further back than to Isodorus, who died A. D. 636.—Also an instrument of music like a flute.—Also a measure of nine feet three inches; Ezek. xl. 3. An emblem of an irresolute unsteady mind, which believes and speaks one thing to-day, and another to-morrow. Christ asks the Jews if they had ever found any thing in John the Baptist like this; Matt. xi. 7. A weak believer; Matt. xii. 20. "A bruised reed shall he not break;" he shall not condemn such as labour under the burden of sin, but rather quiet their consciences; Matt. xi. 28, 29. Ezek. xxxiv. 16.

REED.—Hyssop, 'put it on a reed,' Matt. xxvii. 48. John says, 'upon hyssop,' xix. 29; that is, a branch of the hyssop tree, which Matthew calls 'a reed.'

REED—'shaken by the wind.' An image of a light, changing, inconstant man; Matt. xi. 7.

REFINE,—spoken of wine; Isa. xxv. 6. The purifying of gold and silver; 1 Chron. xxviii. 18. Prov. xvii. 3. As these articles are purified by the action of fire, so God tries hearts. He sends afflictions to show us the vanity of earth, the evil of sin, the beauty of holiness, to wean our minds from sublunary things, and to fix them, by a gracious hope, on the everlasting inheritance.

REFINE. Is. 25. 6, & 48. 10; Zech. 13. 9;
Mal. 3. 2. 3.

REFINER'S FIRE. — 'And he shall sit as a refiner;' Mal. iii. 2, 3. A few ladies in Dublin were reading the above passage; when one of the ladies gave it as her opinion that the fullers soap, and the refiner of silver, were only the same image, intended to convey the same view of the sanctifying influences of the grace of Christ.

No, said another, they are not just the same image: there is something remarkable in the expression in the third verse, "He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver." They all said, that possibly it might be so. This lady was going into the town, and she promised to see a silversmith, and report to them what he said on the subject. She went, without telling him the object of her errand, and begged to know the process of refining silver; which he fully described to her. "But do you sit, sir," said she, "while you are refining?" "Oh! yes, madam, I must sit, with my eye steadily fixed on the furnace, since if the silver remain too long, it is sure to be injured." She at once saw the beauty and the comfort too of the expression, "He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver." Christ sees it needful to put his children into the furnace, but he is seated by the side of it. His eye is steadily intent on the work of purifying; and his wisdom and his love, are both engaged to do all in the best manner for them.

The lady was returning to tell her friends what she had heard; just as she turned from the shop door the silversmith called her back, and said that he had forgotten to mention one thing; and that was that he only knew that the process of purifying was complete, by seeing his own image in the silver! When Christ sees his image in his people, his work of purifying is accomplished.

REFRAIN, Prov. 1. 15; 1 Pet. 3. 10.
Prov. 10. 19. that r. his lips is wise

REFRESH. — To revive; 1 Cor. xvi. 18. — To take rest; Ex. xxiii. 12. — To obtain strength by food; 1 Kings xiii. 7. — "Times of refreshing;" Acts iii. 19. — A better translation would be, "That the times of refreshing may come." The original word "refreshing" signifies a breathing time, or respite, referring to the space that elapsed from that time till the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. This was a time of respite which God gave them for repentance of sin, and devotedness to him. Such a time of refreshing after troubles frequently comes in this life; but when this life ends, a deliverance comes from all afflictions to them that truly fear and serve God. Taking the word in the sense of refreshment in general, it may mean the whole reign of the kingdom of grace, and the blessings which God gives here below to all true believers, peace, love, joy, and communion with himself.

REGEM, Re'-gem, stoning, purple.

—A son of Jahdai, of the posterity of Judah; 1 Chron. ii. 47.

REGEM-MELECH, Re-gem'-mek, stoning the king, purple of the king.

—See Jer. lii. 12, 13; Zech. vii. 2, 3.

REGENERATION, 'followed me in the regeneration,' Matt. xix. 28, refers to the new condition of all things in the reign of the Messiah. Some think that it means the promised renovation of all things by Christ Jesus at the resurrection of the dead. Read "In the regeneration," as the beginning of a sentence.

REGENERATION, "washing of regeneration," Titus iii. 5, denotes a new-birth, a renovation, or a complete moral change for the better. The figurative expression, "washing of regeneration," is defined in the following phrase, "and (meaning rather, or even) the renewing of the Holy Ghost."

Regeneration differs from conversion, because regeneration is a power conferred, and conversion is the exercise of that power. Regeneration is the principle given to turn unto the Lord; conversion is our actual turning unto him; regeneration is the life itself, conversion its motion. It differs from justification. Justification acquits a man from the charge of guilt; regeneration imparts a new nature. Justification is effected by the obedience, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ; but regeneration is the work of the Holy Spirit. And it differs from adoption. Adoption entitles to heaven, and regeneration is our meetness for its enjoyment.

REGISTERS of names were carefully kept by the Jews; Ezra ii. 62. Probably their kings kept, like those of Persia, a register of the events of their respective reigns; Esth. vi. 1, 2. It was not difficult to erase a name, if the ink resembled that which is now used in Syria; for it can soon be washed off by water; Exod. xxxii. 33.

REHABIAH, Re-ha-by'-ah, the breath of the Lord.—The eldest son of Eliezer; 1 Chron. xxiii. 17. He and his brethren were Levites, and treasurers of the temple.

REHOB, Re'-hob, breadth, extent.

—The father of Hadadezer, king of Zobah; 2 Sam. viii. 3.—A city of Asher, given for a dwelling to the Levites; Josh. xix. 28.

REHOBAM, Re-ho-bo'am, enlarger of the people.—The son and successor of Solomon; his mother was Naamah, an Ammonitish woman; 1 Kings xiv. 21. He was forty-one years old when he became king, having been born in the first year of his father's reign, A. M. 1990. He reigned seventeen years, and died in the year 3046. We find that all Israel assembled at Shechem to anoint him king; 1 Kings xii. They stated their conditions of allegiance to him. Had he complied, the commencement of his reign would have been very auspicious. But instead of that, he foolishly took counsel of inexperienced young men, who advised him to adopt coercive measures. See 2 Chron. x. 1—14. His answer to the people reassembled was most insolent. The consequence was that ten of the tribes revolted from his government in one day. Only Judah and Benjamin continued faithful. Hence the kingdom was divided, and the revolted tribes chose Jeroboam for their king. Rehoboam prepared to reduce the revolted tribes, but was prohibited by a message from the Lord; 2 Chron. xi. 1—4. For some time the government was conducted orderly, and the worship of God maintained. But in about three years Judah and Israel relapsed into idolatry, for which they suffered the invasion of Shishak, king of Egypt; 1 Kings xiv. 22, 25; 2 Chr.

xii. 1—11. Rehoboam was buried in the city of David, and left his son Abijam his successor; 1 Kings xiv. 31.

REHOBOTH, Re-ho'-both, spaces, places.—The name of a well which Isaac dug; Gen. xxvi. 22.—The name of a city built by Asher; Gen. x. 11.

REHUM, Re'-hum, compassionate, friendly.—A Levite; Ezra ii. 2; Neh. iii. 17.—Also the chancellor of Artaxerxes, king of Persia; Ezra iv. 8, 9, &c.

REI, Re'-i, my shepherd.—An officer in David's army; 1 Kings i. 8.

REIGN.—To rule as a king; 1 Kings i. 13; God is the absolute monarch of the world; he governs and disposes of all things in heaven and on earth; Ps. xciii. 1.

Sin is said to reign, when its motions and influences are readily obeyed, and it exercises an absolute uncontrollable power in the soul; Rom. vi. 12.

REMETH, Re'-meth, highly, cast away.—A city in the tribe of Issachar; Josh. xix. 21.

REMISSION, signifies forgiveness or pardon of sin. The term is applied to the liberation of captives or slaves, and the discharge of debtors on the sabbatical year; Deut. xv; Luke iv. 18, 19.

REMISSION. "Which is shed for many for the remission of sins;" Matt. xxvi. 28. Dr. Hales insists that the future tense should be used; not is shed, but shall be shed, according to the frequent usage of the evangelists, and the best classic authors.

REMIT, to forgive; John xx. 23. The apostles received from the Lord the doctrine of reconciliation, and the doctrine of condemnation. They who believed on the Son of God, in consequence of their preaching, had their sins remitted; and they who would not believe, were declared to be under condemnation. It is certain that God alone can forgive sins; and it would not only be blasphemous, but grossly absurd to say, that any creature could remit the guilt of a transgression committed against the Creator.

REMIT sins they shall, John 20. 23.

Matt. 26. 28. r. of sins, Mark 1. 4; Luke 1. 77, & 2. 3. & 24. 47; Acts 2. 28, & 10. 43; Rom. 3. 25; Heb. 9. 22, & 10. 18.

REMMON, Rem'-mon, greatness.—A city in the tribe of Simeon. The same as RIMMON; Josh. xix. 7.

REMMON-METHOAR, Rem'-mon-meth'-o-ar.—A city bordering on the tribe of Zebulun; Josh. xix. 13.

REPENTANCE, properly signifies a change of mind, which, of course, leads to a change of conduct; Acts xx. 21; Heb. vi. 6; 2 Pet. iii. 9. Repentance is not merely a new religious impression, a new creed or form of religion, or a new conduct; it is an entire change of mind, and a turning of the whole heart from sin to God, resulting from a deep conviction of the evil consequences of sin, as produced in the mind by the Holy Spirit. It is attended with godly sorrow—and it leads to faith in Christ for the forgiveness of all transgression.

REPENT. 'It repented the Lord that he had made man,' Gen. vi. 6. God also 'repented of having made Saul king;' 1 Sam. xv. 11. This is not to be understood as if God had conceived any regret at any thing he had done wrong, or that he repents of a false step he had made, as a man does when he perceives he has committed an error. God is not capable of repentance in this sense. But sometimes he changes his conduct towards those who are unfaithful to him, and after having treated them with mercy, he corrects them with severity, as if he had repented of what he had before done in their favour. Also God is said to repent of the evil he was about to inflict; when moved with compassion towards the miserable, or entreated by their prayers, he remits the punishment of their sins, or does not execute the threatenings he had made against them. See Psa. cvi. 45; Jer. xviii. 8. This does not derogate from his truth, because he speaks what he really intends, unless something intervenes to prevent the judgment threatened, upon which he resolved when he threatened to withhold his judgments. Nor from his sincerity, for he has told us that his threatenings have such conditions implied in them. Nor from his immutability; for God does not change his counsel and purpose, but takes off the sentence, which he had passed with reserved conditions.

There is an apparent contradiction between the 29th and 35th verse of 1 Sam. xv. "The strength of Israel will not lie nor repent; for he is not a man that he should repent;" ver. 29. —"And the Lord repented that he had made Saul king over Israel;" ver. 35. These verses cannot have the same sense. One is absolute and literal, the other limited and figurative. We cannot suppose that the writer would be so inconsistent as to write such a palpable contradiction within the compass of seven verses, i. e. from ver. 29 to ver. 35.

In 1 Sam. xv. 29, the word repent is used in its absolute and literal sense. And here the perfection of divine immutability is contrasted with the imperfection of human fickleness. No imperfect knowledge of the future can cause God to change his purpose, since he knows even "a thought afar off;" Ps. cxxxix. 2.

The word repented, in the 35th verse, is used in a figurative sense. There is a figure, often used by the sacred writers, which critics call anthropopathia, from two Greek words, (anthropos,) man or human,—and (pathos,) feeling or affection. This is a figure which, while it adapts the sublime revelations of the divine character to our enfeebled capacities, aids us in forming lofty conceptions of God, by symbols derived from human feelings and relations. It is this figure which is employed in 1 Sam. xv. 35, "And the Lord repented that he had made Saul king over Israel." Not that the sacred writer ascribed human affections to God, but wrote of the divine conduct according to the language of men who look on actions as indicating mental movements.

REPETITIONS; Matt. vi. 7. A frequent repetition of awful and striking words may often be the result of earnestness and fervour. See Dan. ix. 3—20. But great length of prayer will cause much sameness and vain repetition; it naturally creates fatigue and carelessness in the worshipper, and seems to suppose ignorance or inattention in the Deity. See verse 8.

REPROBATES, 2 Cor. xiii 5—7. Persons not approved, rejected. There is an allusion to metals, as denoting that they will not bear that to which they are subjected, but are found to be base, or adulterated. "Reprobate silver shall men call them;" Jer. vi. 30. The apostle Paul says, "I bring under my body;" I subdue my sensitive powers, and mortify my carnal affections, "lest when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway, or reprobate," 1 Cor. ix. 27. Lest I should be a counterfeit, a mere pretender, being void of true grace; and consequently such as God would reject as unfit and unworthy to be rewarded by him. A reprobate mind, that is, a mind so stupid as not to discern between good and evil; Rom. i. 28. "Unto every good work reprobate," Tit. i. 16. Without the proper sterling stamp of faith working by love; and, consequently, not current; not acceptable to God.

RESTITUTION.—The act of justice by which we restore to a person that of which we have deprived him, whether of property, person, or reputation; without which there can be no real, no sincere repentance. The law of Moses expressly requires restitution; Ex. xxii. 3. The Roman laws adjudged a four-fold restitution by persons who were convicted of extortion or fraud; and to this Zaccheus condemns himself; Luke xix. 8.

RESURRECTION.—The revival of dead bodies, and their re-union with the same souls; Acts xxiv. 15; 1 Cor. xv. 12, 13. The resurrection of the dead is a most important article of the Christian faith: it is spoken of in various parts of the Old Testament; Job xix. 25—27; Dan. xii. 2; Isa. xxvi. 19; Hosca xiii. 14, but more clearly brought to light by the gospel; Luke xx. 37; John xi. 24; Acts iv. 2; Phil. iii. 11; 1 Thess. iv. 14, 16. The doctrine of the resurrection was unknown to the wisest heathens. Some glimmerings they had of the soul's immortality, but no knowledge of the reviving of the body. When Paul mentioned the resurrection in his preaching at Athens, even the philosophers of that renowned city made a jest of it, and supposed that by the resurrection he intended some new deity; Acts xvii. 18. It was however a received doctrine among the Pharisees of that day; ch. xxiii. 6—9, but it was strenuously opposed by the Sadducees; Matt. xxii. 23; Acts xxiii. 8, and it drew along with it the denial of the existence of angels and spirits, or the subsistence of the souls of men in a separate condition. And as the doctrine of the resurrection was a prominent article of the gospel testimony, it may help us to account for the peculiar rancour which the Sadducees evinced towards Christ and his apostles, of whom they became the most inveterate enemies and opposers. See Acts iv. 1, 2; v. 17, 18. The resurrection will be at the command of Christ, and accomplished by his power; John v. 28, 29. "The hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man, and shall come forth; they that have done good to the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil to the resurrection of damnation."

The RESURRECTION of Christ is one of the most important facts recorded in the New Testament; the truth indeed of the whole system of Christianity stands or falls with it. "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain; yea, and we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God, that he raised up Christ;" 1 Cor. xv. 14, 15. See Rom. iv. 25; x. 9; 1 Pet. i. 3—5. The resurrection of Messiah was the subject of prophecy. See Psa. xvi. 10, 11, which compare with Acts ii. 25—32, and chap. xiii. 35—38. Christ himself foretold that he should rise again from the dead. See Matt. xii. 38—40; xvi. 21; xvii. 23, and xx. 19; John ii. 18—21; x. 17, 18, and viii. 28. The chief priests and Pharisees who condemned him, acknowledged his having said, that after three days he should rise again; Matt. xxvii. 63. The resurrection of Christ from the dead is a convincing proof of the perfection and efficacy of the atonement for sin which he made by his death. "If Christ be not raised," says the apostle, "ye are yet in your sins;" 1 Cor. xv. 17, plainly intimating, that it was the design of his death to put away sin, thus giving the surest proof of the efficacy of his sacrifice to take it away; for having been delivered for our offences, he was raised again for our justification; Rom. iv. 25; viii. 33, 34.

REU, Re'-u, his shepherd.—The son of Peleg, born A. M. 1787, the father of Serug; Gen. xi. 18, 20.

REUBEN, Rew'-ben, see a son.—The eldest son of Jacob and Leah; born A. M. 2252, Gen. xxix. 32. As first-born of the family he was entitled to peculiar immunities and privileges, all of which he forfeited by an incestuous intercourse with Bilhah, his father's concubine; Gen. xxxv. 22, and the right of inheritance, which was originally his, was transferred to Joseph, and the kingdom or dominion was conferred upon the tribe of Judah. The patriarch, on his death-bed, adverted to the crime of Reuben, and reproached him for it; Gen. xlix. 3, 4.

REUEL, Re-yew'-el, shepherd.—A son of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 4, 17.

REUMAH, Rew'-mah, high, elevated.—A concubine of Nahor, the brother of Abraham; Gen. xxii. 24.

REVEAL.—To discover that which has been concealed, as to reveal a secret; Prov. xi. 13.—To cause a person to understand any part of Divine truth which he knew not; Phil. iii. 15. God revealed himself to the prophets and apostles, not only by suggestion, but by dreams, visions, voices, and the ministry of angels. This degree of inspiration, in strict propriety of speech, should be called revelation; a word preferable to suggestion, because it is expressive of all the ways in which God communicated new ideas to the minds of his servants. It is a word, too, chosen by the Holy Spirit himself to signify the discovery of truths formerly unknown to the apostles. Paul declares that "by revelation the mystery was made known to him, which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it was then revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit;" and in another place, having remarked that "eye had not seen, nor ear heard, neither had entered into the heart of man the things which God had prepared for them that love him," he adds, "but God hath revealed them by his Spirit; Rev. i. 1; Gal. i. 12; Eph. iii. 3, 5; 1 Cor. ii. 9, 10.

REVELATION.—John declares himself as writer of this book. The Revelation, or Apocalypse, in its original import, signifies the discovery of something concealed, and is therefore properly appropriated to designate it,

'The book of the visions of the Apostle John.' To him this book has been ascribed by the Christian church from the first age. It was written by the Apostle John during his banishment in the isle of Patmos, and was imparted to him in order to exhibit the prophetic history of the Church of Christ down to the end of the world. Some of these revelations, therefore, are unfulfilled, and are yet involved in mystery. "To explain this book perfectly," says Bishop Newton, "is not the work of one man, or of one age, and probably it will not be clearly understood till all is fulfilled. It was written A. D. 95.

REWARD.—Signifies a gift or bribe; Deut. xxvii. 25.—The fruit or result of labour; Eccle. ix. 5.—Human applause; Matt. vi. 2—5.—Comfort and joy; Ps. xix. 11.—Also future recompense at the last day, and in heaven; Matt. v. 12.—This reward is not of debt, but of grace; Luke vi. 23; Rom. vi. 23.

REWARD.—"Let this be the reward of my adversaries from the Lord, and of them that speak evil against my soul;" Ps. cix. 20.—This verse is a key to the meaning of the preceding verses in this Psalm; it accounts for the imprecations of ver. 6—19. The imprecations were uttered by his foes. Verse 20 may be thus interpreted; "This (imprecating) is the work of mine adversaries before the Lord, and of those who speak evil against my soul," or life. Dr. A. Clarke observes, "The curses contained in it are more like those which proceed from the mouth of the wicked, than from one inspired by the Spirit of God. Taking the word in the above sense, which I am persuaded is the best, and which the original will well bear, and which several of the versions countenance, then our translation may stand just as it is; only remember, that at the sixth verse, David begins to tell how his enemies cursed HIM, while he PRAYED for THEM!"

REZEPH, Re'-zeff, a pavement, burning coal.—A city of Syria; 2 Kings xix. 12; Isa. xxxvii. 12.

REZIN, Re'-zin, voluntary, a messenger.—A king of Syria, confederate with Pekah, to invade the dominions of Ahaz, king of Judah. He was defeated and slain by Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria; 2 Kings xv. 37; xvi. 5, 6, 9; 2 Chron. xxviii. 5-7.

REZON, Re'-zon, lean, a small, secret, prince.—The son of Eliadah, who revolted from Hadadezer, king of Zobah, and opposed Solomon. He invaded Damascus, and became master of it; 1 Kings xi. 23.

RHEGIUM, Re'-je-um, rupture.—A sea-port at the top of Italy, opposite to Messina in Sicily; Acts xviii. 13. It is now called Reggio. Paul landed there A. D. 61. It was first built by a colony from Chalcis; and afterwards rebuilt by Julius Cæsar, after his defeat of Pompey, and then it was named Rhegium Julium. Reggio stands on a hill, and its environs are delightful, abounding in oranges, citrons, mulberries, vines, palm trees, and other productions of a tropical climate. Population 17,000. The houses are built with the remains of ancient buildings, and the town has a good appearance. It has a cathedral, eleven churches, seven convents, and two colleges.

RHESA, Re'-sah, will.—Christ's ancestor; Luke iii. 27.

RHODA, Ro'-dah, a rose.—A servant of Mary, the mother of John Mark, who opened the door for Peter after his miraculous deliverance from prison; Acts xii. 13.

RHODES, Roads, a rose.—The capital of a celebrated island of the same name, on the south-west coast of Asia Minor. The island is 125 miles in circumference, and was famous for the brazen image of Apollo, or Phæbus, 120 feet high, fixed across the mouth of the harbour, so that shipping passed between its legs. It was the work of Chares of Lindus, the disciple of Lysippus. Its extremities were borne up by sixty pillars of marble, and a winding staircase reached the top, from which was an extensive view of the country. It was thrown down by an earthquake, and after the lapse of 894 years, was sold to a Jew, who loaded 900 camels with the brass which it contained; Acts xxi. 1.

In the centre of the island rises Mount Artemisa, the ancient Atabyrus, with a steep and lofty summit, forming the pinnacle of a chain of mountains, noted for its excellent pine trees. The island is a delightful spot, having delicious plants, trees, and fruit. Every gale is scented with powerful fragrance wafted from groves of orange and citron trees, aromatic herbs, &c. The hills were formerly covered with vines, but are now neglected. Its capabilities of production are great; but it has to contend with oppression. It produces wine, honey, wax, cotton, olives, soap, fine carpets, and camlets. Population 20,000. Its contains antiquities and ruins.

RIBAI, Ry'-bay.—The father of Ittai; 2 Sam. xxiii. 29.

RIBLAH, Rib'-lah, quarrel.—A city of Syria, in the county of Hamath, where the kings of Babylon frequently resided; 2 Kings xxiii. 33; xxv. 6, 20, 21.

RIGHT HAND implies power; Ex. xv. 6; Ps. xvii. 7; xviii. 35; xlv. 3.

RIGHT HAND, 'he shall stand at the right hand of the poor'; Ps. cix. 31. In the court, the pleader stood on the right hand, whether he pleaded for or against a person. Satan stood at the right hand of Joshua to resist him, or plead against him; Zech. iii. 1. Thus Christ pleads for his people; 1 John ii. 1. "If any man sin," &c. "Who shall condemn when Christ is the advocate" ever ready to plead their cause at the right hand of the Judge, Rom. viii. 34. See Ps. xvi. 8; Acts ii. 25.

RIGHT HAND.—This was the position of the highest honour; 1 Kings ii. 19; Ps. xlix. 9; cx. 1; Acts vii. 55.

RIGHT HAND and their left hand, persons that cannot describe their right hand, &c.; Jonah iv. 11. These signify infants of early ages. See Deut. i. 39; Isa. vii. 16.

RIGHT HAND. "To sit on my right hand, and my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father;" Matt. xx. 23.—The translation is wrong. It represents Christ as having nothing to do in the dispensing of rewards and punishments. The Greek word alla (but) is for ei me, as in other places, as Matt. xvii. 8, only: ei me is expressed Mark ix. 8, by alla. 'Not mine to give, unless for whom it is prepared,' &c. Dean Stanhope and Whitby remark, "that the honours and degrees of happiness in his kingdom," are not the Son's to give in the sense in which the apostles supposed—that is, he does not give them arbitrarily, he is not influenced by partiality, or respect of persons, &c., as earthly princes are; but he is guided by equity, justice, and love, from which he can never swerve.

Dr. Doddridge thus paraphrases it:—"This is not a privilege which is mine to give by partial friendship, or to the first and most importunate asker; nor can I dispose of it to any but (to those) for whom it is prepared by my Father, who has appointed that the exaltation and happiness of heaven shall be proportioned to the degrees of holiness attained in this life.

RIGHT EYE, &c.; 'right hand offend thee, &c.'; Matt. v. 29, 30. The meaning of cutting off, and plucking out here, is, to forsake the dearest objects that are the causes of sin.

RIGHTEOUSNESS, justice, holiness. The righteousness of God is the absolute and essential perfections of his nature ; sometimes it is put for his justice ; Job xxxvi. 3 ; Isa. xlv. 19, 23 ; xlvii. 13 ; li. 5, 6, 8. The term righteousness is frequently used, both in the Old and New Testament, to denote the obedience of Christ, by which all who believe are justified from all things ; Acts xiii. 38, 39 ; Rom. v. 18, 19 ; viii. 3, 4 ; Ps. xl. 6—9 ; Isa. liii. 5—12 ; Jer. xxiii. 6 ; 2 Cor. v. 21 ; Gal. ii. 21 ; iii. 21. The word is also applied to the good works of believers, because they flow from love to God, faith in Christ, gratitude for pardoning mercy, and because they have the divine glory for their aim and object ; Luke i. 75 ; Rom. xiv. 17 ; 1 Cor. xv. 34 ; 2 Cor. ix. 10 ; Phil. i. 11 ; Heb. xi. 33. "They shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born;" Ps. xxii. 31. That is, they shall announce the true religion of the Lord Jesus, from one generation to another, to the end of time.

RIGHTEOUS over much ; Eccl. vii. 16. Thought by some to refer to ostentatious display in the gift of alms ; Matt. vi. 1, excess of fasting, &c. Dr. Wardlaw thinks the advice ironical ; "if you would avoid the enmity of the world, remember that religion is a thing in which they like moderation ; and beware of assuming an ostentatious appearance of sanctity which the world cannot tolerate except with disgust."

RIVER.—A large stream of water.
 The rivers mentioned in Scripture are the Jordan, Kishon, Jabbok, Arnon, Abana, Pharpar, Euphrates, Hiddikel, Gihon, Pison, Chebar, Ahavah, and Ulai. The Nile is alluded to, but is not mentioned by name, "The river of Egypt," is not the Nile, but a small stream falling into the Mediterranean, near Gaza. "From the river to the ends of the earth," means from the Euphrates to the end of the then known world. No river in Palestine withstands the drought of summer but the Jordan, and that becomes greatly diminished. The others, through torrents in the rainy season, become mere rivulets in summer, and sometimes wholly disappear. Hence Job compares false friends to such; Job vi. 15.

RIVER.—Figuratively, 1. The irruption of an invading army; Isa. lix. 19; Jer. xlii. 7, 8.—2. An emblem of exuberant blessings; Job xxix. 6; Ps. xxxvi. 8.—Overflowings of divine love and grace; Rev. xxii. 1.

RIVERS of Babylon, there we sat down; Ps. cxxxvii. 1, 2.—These rivers of Babylon may have been the Tigris and Euphrates, or their branches; or the streams that flowed into them. In their captivity and dispersion, it was customary for the Jews to hold their religious meetings on the banks of rivers. Willows were so plentiful in Babylon, on the banks of the Euphrates, that Isaiah calls it the 'brook or rivers of willow;' and Sir R. K. Porter says, "Its banks were hoary with seeds, and the grey hoser willows were yet there, on which the captives of Israel hung up their harps, and while Jerusalem was not, and refused to be comforted.

RIVERS, 'a tree planted by the rivers,' Ps. i. 3. Referring to the palm-tree. In hot countries, a tree planted without water would perish in a few days. Every garden has a reservoir of water drawn from a river or springs, or collected in the rainy season. The orange garden of the Emir of Beirut is divided into squares which are bordered with stone, in which are cut out troughs, which having little outlets at every tree, refresh it in passing by. "Rivers," would have been better translated 'divisions of water.'

RIVER, Ec. i. 22, & 4. 9; Job 40. 23; Ps.

36. 8, & 46. 4, & 65. 9; Is. 43. 18, & 66. 12; Rev. 21. 1, 2.

RIVERS, Job 20. 17, & 29. 6; Ps. 119. 136; Prov. 5. 18, & 21. 1; Is. 32. 2, & 33. 21; Mic. 6. 7; John 7. 38.

RIZPAH, Riz'-pah, stretched out.—The daughter of Aiah, and mother of Mephibosheth; 2 Sam. iii. 7.

ROARING LION.—"Your adversary as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour;" 1 Pet. v. 8.—The roar of a lion, in its native forests, is most terrific. He prowls about in the night, ready to seize animals when he finds them. He cunningly watches every opportunity to seize his prey, takes it to his lair, and devours it at his leisure. When his hunger is great, he is very daring, faces almost any danger, and rushes with impetuous ferocity upon his victim. A bullock is torn from the team, or a man from off the waggon, and even sometimes a man is dragged from the watch-fires.—Satan is called a roaring-lion, to denote his eagerness for his prey, and because he is rapacious, cruel, and devouring.

2 Cor. 11. 8. I r. other churches

Job 5. 5. r. swalloweth up, 18. 9.

John 10. 1. climbs up as a thief and a r.

ROBBERY, Ps. 62. 10; Prov. 21. 7; Is. 61. 8; Amos 3. 10; Phil. 2. 6.

ROBE.—A kind of garment; Ex. xxviii. 31. Our Saviour says, "Beware of the scribes, who desire to walk in long robes," Luke xx. 46. The scribes wore these garments in token of greater gravity than others: Christ condemns not the garb, but their affectation of holiness, whereby they deceived the people. Heavenly glory is likewise set forth by white robes; Rev. vi. 11. "White robes were given them," speaking of the martyrs: their innocence was cleared, and they made perfectly happy.

ROCK in HOREB, 'smite the rock, and there shall water come out of it,' Ex. xvii. 6. A stone is pointed out as the rock here spoken of, which is a vast block of red granite, 15 feet long, 10 broad, and 12 high; it lies in the wilderness of Rephidim, to the west of Mount Horeb, a part of Sinai. There are sufficient traces of this wonderful miracle remaining at this day. This rock has been visited, drawn, and described, by various eminent travellers, and they state that holes and channels appear in the stone, which could only have been formed by the bursting out and running of water. No art of man could have done it, if any motive could have been supposed for the undertaking in such a place as this.

ROCK, 'inhabitants of the rock,' Isa. xlii. 11. 'That dwellest in the clefts of the rocks;' Jer. xlix. 16. Alluding to Idumea and its capital. The ruins of Edom, or Petra, magnificent dwellings cut out of the rocks, are the most astonishing in the world—specimens of unexampled industry and skill, and of prodigious strength, and unrivalled security.

ROCK, 'upon this rock will I build my church;' Matt. xvi. 18. It was customary in Judea to build on a rock, or other firm foundation; Matt. vii. 24. The original of Peter is in Greek, Petros, and means a stone, and not a rock. The original word for rock is petra; the meaning therefore is, "Thou art Petros, 'a stone,' and upon this 'petra,' rock (Christ himself, probably pointing to himself) will I build my church. There is a change of the word, by which the allusion is plain, and by which it is evident that Peter was not the 'rock' intended.—'Thou art stone and upon this rock':—The construction of language requires that the word 'this' should refer to something antecedent different from 'thou,' or you. 'Thou' is in the second person, and 'this' is in the third. 'Petros' is masculine, and 'Petra' is feminine. Language cannot do more to prevent mistake. Jesus asked for a confession; Peter gave it. The conversation turned upon that confession, and not upon Peter—"Thou art stone, an emblem of thy future, firm, and unflinching endurance of persecution, and even death itself, in labouring to promote the interests of my church, which is founded upon me, according to thy confession, 'thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God;' which confession I denominate A ROCK, against which the gates of hell shall never prevail. 'Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ;' 1 Cor. iii. 11. How then can Peter be the foundation of the church? Where is Jesus Christ to be placed if he be?

ROCKS 'rent;' Matt. xxvii. 51. An infidel who had ridiculed this phenomenon, when he examined the clefts critically, said to his fellow-travellers, "I have long been a student of nature and the mathematics, and I am sure these rents were never made by an ordinary or natural earthquake; for, by such a concussion, the rocks must have split according to the veins, and where it was weakest in the adhesion of parts; for so I have observed it in other rocks, when rent by an earthquake: and reason tells me it must always be so. But it is quite otherwise here, for the rock is split athwart and across the veins in a most strange and supernatural manner. It must be the effect of a real miracle, which neither art nor nature could ever have effected. I thank God that I have seen this standing monument of miraculous power, by which God gives proof of the divinity of Christ.

ROCKS.—These were very common in Palestine, and they became figures of important things. On account of their height and difficulty of ascent, they often served as an asylum for persons pursued by their enemies. When six hundred of the men of Benjamin had escaped the fury of their incensed brethren, they fled to the rock Rimmon, and defended themselves in it for four months; Judg. xx. 47. And Samson, when he had burnt the harvest of the Philistines, and slaughtered many of their men, sought protection from their revenge on the rock Etam; Judg. xv. 7, 8. David anxious to escape the wrath of Saul, went down into a rock; or a rocky cave; 1 Sam. xxiii. 25.

From this practice, whatever contributed to the security of a person or nation was figuratively called a rock, or the rock. Balaam, describing the security of the Kenites, exclaims, "Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in the rock;" Num. xxiv. 21. Isaiah, to denote the perfect security of the righteous, observes, "His place of defence shall be the munition of rocks;" Isa. xxxiii. 16. David expresses his hope that God would conduct him in safety through his troubles, by saying, 'He will set me upon a rock;' Ps. xxvii. 5.

The prophet rebuking Edom for her blind confidence in her own strength, accosts her thus:—"O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rocks, that holdest the heights of the hills, though thou shouldst make thy nest as high as the eagle's, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the Lord;" Jer. xlix. 16.

The Psalmist frequently says, "The Lord is my Rock." "He only is my Rock and my salvation: he is my defence; therefore I shall not be greatly moved;" Ps. lxii. 2. See also Ps. xviii. 2; xxviii. 1; lxxi. 3, &c., &c. And Moses, when contrasting the God of Israel with the idols of the Gentiles, asserts, "Their rock is not as our rock, even our enemies being judges;" Deut. xxxii. 31.

In the cliffs of rocks were often swarms of bees, which produced great quantities of honey. Modern travellers inform us that at the present time their number is so great that the air on many of the rocks is strongly scented with honey. Canaan was a land literally flowing with milk and honey. To this circumstance Moses alludes, when he says, "God made them to suck honey out of the rock;" Deut. xxxii. 13. In the East, and in Africa, bees deposit their honey on the surface of the cliffs of rocks, and, for its protection, cover it with a dark coloured wax. The wax soon becomes hard. The traveller makes an incision in this wax covering, and by applying his mouth to the aperture, sucks out as much honey as he wants. This circumstance beautifully "illustrates the above-quoted scripture—"God made them to suck honey out of the rock." Thus the Psalmist observes that, if the haters of the Lord would have submitted themselves, he "would have satisfied them with honey out of the rock;" Ps. lxxxii. 16.

The rocks also by raising their lofty heads above the plain, intercepted the scorching rays of an eastern sun, and cast a cool refreshing shower to a great distance. The prophet Isaiah has borrowed from this circumstance a most beautiful comparison of the Redeemer's kingdom, he says, that "he shall be as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land"—that is, a land whose hot climate produces lassitude, thirst, and weakness. So the Redeemer shall by his atoning death, secure the sinner from the wrath to come. Reliance upon Christ, and its precious refreshment were thus signified by a rock.

ROLL.—See Book.

ROME, Roam, strength, power.—A large city of Italy. It was built by the Etrurians, and was but a mass of rude huts; but it was rebuilt, enlarged and beautified by Romulus and Remus, 750 years before the Christian era, when Hezekiah reigned in Judea. Walls were erected for protection, and the number of public edifices increased, till at length the city contained 420 temples, crowded with statues, and each divinity had a particular college of sacerdotal servants. It covered seven hills; and was about 20 miles in circumference; and under Augustus its population was two millions. It was the capital of the Roman empire, and the seat of the imperial court. The ancient Romans were idolators, and very corrupt in their manners.

Its population is gradually declining, and is now only about 100,000. It is the well-known residence of the pope. The ruins of ancient Rome are yet magnificent, and its modern embellishments, make it still a splendid city. St. Peter's cathedral is the grandest place of worship in the world; its erection cost, at least, £12,000,000 sterling. In its architecture, sculpture, and painting, are displayed in the highest perfection.

The pope has three palaces;—the Lateran, remarkable for its size and height—the Quirinal, the summer residence of the pope, characterized by its size, magnificence, and adjoining gardens, fountains &c. And the great palace of the Vatican. All the great architects and artists that Rome has produced, Bramanti, Raphael, Michael Angelo, were employed. The number of its apartments is estimated at more than 1,000. It is built with great grandeur and has numerous statues, among which are Apollo Belvidere, the Laocoon, and the Antinous.

Among the ancient edifices the Pantheon is conspicuous, a structure distinguished equally for beauty and elegance—the amphitheatre of Vespasian—the vast baths of Dioclesian, now connected with a convent—Adrian's mausoleum—the triumphal arches of Constantine, Septimus, Severus, and Titus—Trajan's pillar, and that erected in honour of Marcus Aurelius; with several of the ancient roads, and the catacombs.

The Apostle Peter denoted Rome by the figurative title of Babylon. John, the Divine, points it out by the same name, and describes it in such a manner as can only agree to Rome; 1. By its command over all nations; 2. By its cruelty towards the saints; and, 3. By its situation on the seven hills. Paul came twice to Rome, first when he appealed to Cæsar; and, secondly, a year before his martyrdom. (1. Peter v. 13. Rev. xiv. 8; xvi. 19; xvii. 5, 9; xviii. 2, 10, 21.)

ROMANS Epistle to.—That the Apostle Paul was the author of this Epistle has been the opinion of the Christian Church from the beginning. It was written by him when at Corinth, A. D. 58. Tertius was the amanuensis of the Apostle; chap. xvi. 22, and Phebe, a deaconess, appears to have carried this Epistle to Rome, ch. xvi. 12. At that time Rome was the metropolis of the world. Some of the ancient writers suppose that the church there was planted by Peter and Paul. There is not, however, the least historic evidence that Peter was ever at Rome, and it is evident that Paul had not been at Rome when he wrote this Epistle. In all probability this church was planted by those persons who were at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, and who were called "strangers of Rome, Jews, and proselytes." It is quite natural to suppose that these, on their return, would relate the extraordinary transactions they had witnessed, as connected with the miraculous effusion of the Holy Ghost. This led to the formation of a church in that renowned city. The great object of the Apostle in this Epistle was to demonstrate the superiority of the gospel to every other system of religion; chap. i 16. This he does by proving both Jews and Gentiles justly under the curse: that the One God has in all ages, delivered from that curse by one method,—by faith in the promised Saviour; that in this Saviour, Jesus our Lord, the deliverance is complete, comprising justification, sanctification, and eternal life, which blessings both Jews and Gentiles, even all who shall believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, shall assuredly enjoy.

The learned Macknight says, "This Epistle is a writing which, for sublimity and truth of sentiment, brevity and strength of expression, for regularity in its structure, and especially for the unspeakable importance of the discoveries which it contains stands unrivalled by any mere human composition, and as far exceeds the most celebrated productions of the learned Greeks and Romans, as the shining of the sun exceeds the twinkling of the stars."

ROOF, 'uncovered the roof,' Mark ii. 4. In Palestine the roofs of houses are frequently made of the palm and other trees, with the leaves remaining on them, and covered with mud. Such a roof would be easily broken up.

ROOM, a seat, Luke xiv. 8; place, Acts xxiv. 27; freedom from fear and danger; Ps. xxxi. 8. Every encouragement to seek salvation, from the ample provision of saving grace; Luke xiv. 22.

ROOT. This word denotes stability, Col. 2. 7.—The cause of a thing, 1 Tim. 6. 10.—Strength, Is. 14. 30.—A particular sin, Heb. 12. 15.—Foundation, Job 23. 9.—Parents, Dan. 11. 7.—Christ, Is. 11. 10; Rev. 5. 5. Job 5. 3, & 31. 12; Ps. 52. 5.

ROSE.—An emblem of the prosperity of Christ's kingdom; Isa. xxxv. 1. Christianity shall restore this wilderness world to order and beauty.—The Redeemer is compared to the Rose of Sharon, and lily of the valley; Song ii. 1. The Damascus rose and the rose of Sharon are the finest kinds. They are this day much admired in the east, and are extremely fragrant. See Lily.

ROT. To be offensive, Prov. 10. 7; Is. 40. 20.

ROUND TIRES like the moon; Isa. iii. 18. Ornaments, or moon-like figures strung together, and worn as a neck-lace; or jewelled crescents worn in front, or by the side of oriental head-dresses. Something similar is worn by the women of Egypt, Western Asia, which they call chumarah, moon.

ROYAL, spoken of apparel, Esth. vi. 8; bounty, 1 Kings x. 13; crown, Esth. ii. 17; dainties, Gen. xlix. 20; diadem, Isa. lxii. 3; estate, Esth. i. 19; law, James ii. 8; majesty, 1 Chr. xxix. 25, pavilion, Jer. xliii. 10; and statute, Dan. vi. 7, saints; 1 Pet. ii. 9.

ROYAL APPAREL, 'Herod arrayed in royal apparel;' Acts xii. 21, 22. Josephus expressly says, that Herod's fine robe was richly wrought with silver, which, reflecting the rays of the rising sun with an unusual and almost insupportable splendour, gave his flatterers an occasion of complimenting him with the title of a deity. Mr. Fleming imagines they referred to the glory with which the shekinah used to appear, and that Herod, being impious enough to assume the honour of it, provoked the Divine Majesty beyond any further sufferance, so that he sent a disease upon him, which rendered him equally contemptible and miserable.

RUBY.—A precious stone, of a red colour, mixed with purple, and in its perfect state a gem of great value. A perfect ruby, above $3\frac{1}{2}$ carats in size, exceeds in value a diamond of equal size. A deep-coloured ruby, exceeding 20 carats in weight, is called a carbuncle; Job xxviii. 18; Prov. iii. 15; viii. 11; xx. 15; xxxi. 10.

RUBBY, Songs 5. 10; Lam. 4. 7.

RUDIMENTS.—The first principles or ground of any art or science; Col. ii. 8, 20.

RUE.—A medical plant common in gardens. It has an unpleasant smell, and a bitter pungent taste. The word occurs in Luke xi. 42, only.

RUFUS, Rew'-fus, red.—The son of Simon the Cyrenian, who assisted Christ in carrying his cross; Mark xv. 21. Another person so named mentioned Rom. xvi. 13.

RUHAMAH, Rew'-ha-mah, having obtained mercy.—The name given to those Israelites who had not bowed the knee to Baal. See Hosea ii. 1.

RUMAH, Rew'-mah, exalted.—A place; 2 Kings xxiii. 36.

RUSH.—An aquatic plant, common on the banks of the Nile, &c. Job viii. 11. It is the same as the "bulrush," Exod. ii. 3; Isa. xviii. 2, and the "paper reed," Isa. xix. 7. It is the Cyperus papyrus of LINNÆUS, commonly called "the Egyptian reed." The stalk is triangular, rising to the height of nine or ten feet, beside three or four under water, and terminating in a crown resembling the thistle.

RUTH, Rooth, satisfied, filled.—A Moabitish female, married to Boaz. See the book of Ruth. Her name is in the genealogy of the Saviour; Matt. i. 5. The book of Ruth is an appendix to Judges, and an introduction to Samuel. The history related is very interesting, and circumstances are detailed with the most beautiful and affecting simplicity. The adoption of Ruth, a heathen, converted to Judaism, has been generally considered a pre-intimation of the admission of the Gentiles into the church. A further design of this book is to evince the care of Providence over such as fear God.

S

SABACTHANI, Sa-bak-thay'-ny, thou hast forsaken me.—One of the last words of Christ; Matt. xxvii. 46. Dr. A. Clarke reads, "Forgotten me," stating that this word makes very good sense, and comes nearer the "sabachthani" of the evangelists. "Why hast thou forgotten me!" are words often used by David in times of distress; Psa. xlii. 9.

SABBAOTH, Sab'-a-oth, hosts, armies; Rom. ix. 29; James v. 4. Jehovah is called "the Lord of Sabaoth," because all created hosts are his. Angels, ministers, Christians, stars, planets, &c., are all marshalled and ruled by the omnipotent God.

SABBATH.—The word means rest, cessation from labour.—In six days God created all things, and rested on the seventh day, which he appointed to be observed as a day set apart for religious services. This day was to be a day of worship, in memory of the creation of the world by Jehovah, and a day of repose for man and beast, that they might not have their bodily strength exhausted by interrupted labour; Gen. ii. 1—3; Ex. xx. 10, 11; Ezek. xx. 20. 2. On this day the people were to abstain from all work;

Ex. xx. 10; xxiii. 12; xxxi. 12—17; xxxv. 2; Deut. v. 14, 15; Jer. xvii. 22. It was unlawful to gather manna; Exod. xvi. 22—30, to light a fire for culinary purposes; Ex. xxxv. 3; Num. xv. 32—36, and to sow or reap; Exod. xxxiv. 21. To these enactments the Jewish doctors added a variety of other regulations, not enjoined by the law of Moses; Matt. xii. 2. But the services of the temple might be performed without profaning the sabbath, such as preparing the sacrifices; Lev. vi. 8—13. Numb. xxviii. 3—10; Matt. xii. 5; 3. The sabbath commenced at sun-set and closed at the same time on the following day; Matt. viii. 16; Mark i. 32. Whatever was necessary was prepared on the latter part of the preceding day, that is, on our Friday; hence, the day preceding the sabbath is in the New Testament termed the preparation; Matt. xxvii. 62; Mark xv. 42; Luke xxiii. 54, and John xix. 14, 31, 42.

Under the Christian dispensation, which unites Jews and Gentiles, the Sabbath is altered from the seventh to the first day of the week, on which the Redeemer rose from the dead. On the "first day of the week" Jesus Christ made repeated visits to his disciples, who were evidently assembled together for religious purposes; John xx. 19, 26. On the first day of the week the disciples came together to break bread and hear Paul preach; Acts xx. 7. Upon "the first day of the week" the Corinthians were required to lay by their contributions for the poor; 1 Cor. xvi. 2. And the first day of the week is called "THE LORD'S DAY;" Rev. i. 10.

SABBATH, the sabbatical, or seventh year in which the land of Canaan was to rest, or lie uncultivated, all debtors were liberated, and all lawsuits ceased; Lev. xxv; Deut. xv. 1. From the "year of release," the prophet borrows the beautiful description of the office of the Saviour; Isa. lxi. 1, 2.

SABBATH, 'the sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath,' Mark ii. 27. Man was made first, and then the sabbath ordained for his welfare; Gen. ii. 1—3.

SABBATH, 'second sabbath after the first,' has perplexed critics. It probably meant the second sabbath after the first day of unleavened bread; Luke vi. 1.

SABBATH holy, Ex. 16. 23, 29, & 20. 8—11, & 31. 14; Acts 13. 42, & 18. 4.

SABEANS, Sa-be'-ans, captivity, conversion.—A people tall of stature, and of more majestic appearance than common; Isa. xlv. 14. They are supposed to be the descendants of Abraham by Keturah, whose son Jokshan begat Sheba. The sons of Keturah were sent by Abraham into the east; Gen. xxv. 6, and inhabited Arabia Deserta, on the east of the land of Uz. See Job i. 15, also Ezek. xxvii. 22, and Joel iii. 8.

SABTAH, Sab'-tah.—The third son of Cush; Gen. x. 7.

SABTECHAH, Sab'-te-kah.—The fifth son of Cush; Gen. x. 7.

SACAR, Say'-kar.—An officer; 1 Chron. xi. 35.

SACKBUT.—A musical instrument, generally thought to have had four strings; but Isidore considers it a kind of flute or hautboy; Dan. iii. 5.

SACKCLOTH, was a coarse cloth, made of the hair of horses, and the coarsest hair of camels and goats. It was the common clothing of very poor people, and was much used for tents, awnings, &c. Elijah and John the Baptist wore such; indeed, it was anciently very common for all prophets to be thus humbly clad. Hence, the false prophets wore "a rough garment to deceive;" Zech. xiii. 4. It was also used by mourners, being a black colour; Isa. l. 3.

SACKCLOTH, Gen. 37. 34; Job 16. 15; Ps. 30. 11, & 85. 13; Is. 22. 12; Rev. 11. 3.

SACRIFICE.—An offering to God, made on an altar by a regular priest; an oblation meant only the simple offering of a gift. The justice of God required the death of the offender; but, being tempered with mercy, it accepted a sacrifice in his stead. All the sacrifices, with their several ceremonies, were either acknowledgments of sin, or images of the punishment due to it; and had a relation to Christ, the gospel sacrifice, in whom all these types had their fulfilment. They signified the expiation of moral guilt by the sacrifice of Christ, who is called the Lamb of God; John i. 29, and the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world; Rev. xiii. 8. See Offering.

SACRIFICE. “But this man after he had offered one sacrifice, &c.; Heb. x. 12. The word “man” is a supplement improperly and unnecessarily employed. In verse 11, it is said, “And every priest standeth daily ministering,” &c., that is, every common priest. “But,” (outos) “this one” literally, “having offered one sacrifice.” “This” is the antithesis, referring to Christ, and which, if the clipsis be gramatically applied, must mean, this priest.

“One Sacrifice.” It was PERFECT. The repetition of the ceremonial sacrifices proved their imperfection. That offered by Christ was one. It was perfect in point of dignity. The victim was God’s only begotten Son. Perfect in point of manner. How strictly fulfilled were the prophetic declarations. With what readiness he met the hour of trial—with what meekness he approached the cross—with what fortitude he drank the cup—with what energy he encountered the foe—with what triumph he closed the scene.—Perfect in point of efficacy. By his one sacrifice, he propitiated an angry Deity—magnified a broken law; and obtained eternal redemption for us. Perfect in point of sufficiency, “Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.”

SACRIFICE. ‘By him, let us offer the sacrifice of praise,’ Heb. xiii. 15. The Jewish people could not offer their own sacrifices; they were to bring them to the priest, and he was to offer them. So cannot we now offer up our prayers and praises to God but by Jesus Christ, and so the apostle here applies the case.

SACRIFICES unto devils; Lev. xvii. 7. The word translated “devils,” is, literally “hairy ones,” and refers to the idolatrous images of goats, worshipped by the Egyptians. In Isaiah xiii. 21, it is translated “satyrs,” where the Seventy render it demons. Maimonides says that the Zabian idolators worshipped demons under the figure of goats, believing that demons appear in that form; this was the reason they called them hairy, or shaggy ones. Some of the Egyptians held goats to be sacred animals, and like goats they represented the god Pan, and their fauns, satyrs, and other idols. The Israelites learnt this devil-worship in Egypt. Herodotus, Strabo, Pindar, and Plutarch, testify that amongst the ceremonies of the goat-worship, it was customary for the Egyptian women to prostitute themselves to abominable intercourse with the goat that represented their god. This impious system will explain Lev. xx. 16.

SACRILEGE.—Robbing God, or profaning sacred things; Rom. ii. 22; Belshazzar was guilty in this respect; Dan. v. 2; also the Jewish nation; Mal. iii. 8.

SAD, 1 Sam. i. 18; Ezek. 13. 22; Mark 10. 22.

SADDUCEES, Sad'-dew-sees. just, justified.—A sect among the Jews, so called from their founder Sadoc, who lived about 263 years before Christ. Their principal tenets were the following: (1.) That there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit; Matt. xxii. 23; Acts xxiii. 8; and that the soul of man perishes with the body. (2.) That there is no fate or Providence, but that all men enjoy the most ample freedom of action; or the most absolute power of doing either good or evil, according to their own choice. (3.) They paid no regard to any tradition, adhering strictly to the letter of scripture, but preferring the five books of Moses to the rest. It has been conjectured that they rejected all the sacred books but those of Moses, because Jesus Christ preferred to confute them out of these.

SADOC, Say'-dok, just.—The son of Azor, Matt. i. 14.

SAFE, Ps. 119. 117; Prov. 18. 10, & 29. 25.

SALA, Say'-lah, branches. Christ's ancestor, Luke iii. 35.

SALAH, Say'-lah, mission, branches.—The son of Arphaxad, and father of Eber. Gen. xi. 12—15; Luke iii. 36.

SALAMIS, Sal'-a-mis, shaken.—A city noted in the island of Cyprus, on the Syrian coast, where Paul and Barnabas preached, A. D. 45. Acts. xiii. 5.

SALATHIEL, Sa-lay'-the-el, I have asked of God.—Son of Jeconia, See 1 Chron. iii. 17; Luke iii. 27.

SALCAH, Sal'-kah.—A city of Bashan; Deut. iii. 10.

SALEM, Say'-lem, peace.—The original name of Jerusalem; Psa. lxxvi. 2.—A city of the Shechemites; Gen. xxxiii. 18.

SALIM, Say'-lim, fox, fist, path.—The well-watered place where John baptized, near Jordan; John iii. 23.

SALLUM, Sal'-lum.—A son of king Josiah.

SALMON, Sal'-mon, peaceable.—The son of Nashon; he married Rahab, and became the father of Boaz; 1 Chron. ii. 11; Ruth iv. 20, 21.

SALMONE, Sal-mo'-ne, peaceable.—A sea port city in the island of Crete; Acts xxvii. 7.

SALOME, Sa-lo-me, peaceable, or peacemaker.—The daughter of Herodias and Herod Philip, who asked the head of John the Baptist.—The wife of Zebedee, and mother of James the Greater, and John the Evangelist; Matt. xx. 20—22; xxvii. 56; Mark xv. 40.

SALT, is in many places dug from the earth, or obtained by evaporating sea-water, or from the water of salt springs. It was appointed to be used in all the sacrifices offered to God; Lev. ii. 13. It is the symbol of wisdom; Col. iv. 6; of incorruption; Num. xviii. 19; and of maintenance or hospitality; Ezra iv. 14; where "maintenance from the king's table" may be rendered literally "salted with the salt of the palace." The Jews were accustomed to rub salt on new-born babes, or bathe them with salt water; Ezek. xvi. 4. Large quantities of pure salt on land renders it barren; Jud. ix. 45; Zeph. ii. 4. In small quantities it serves as a valuable manure; Luke xiv. 34. When our Saviour told his disciples that they were the salt of the earth, he meant, that being themselves endowed with grace, they ought to season others, and preserve them from corruption. The truths of the Gospel are in opposition to the corruption of the world.

SALT 'has lost its savour;' Matt. v. 13. Mr. Maundrell says that in the Valley of Salt near Gebul, and about four hours' journey from Aleppo, there is a small precipice caused by the continual taking away of the salt. "In this," says he, "you may see how the veins of it lie. I broke a piece of it, of which the part that was exposed to the rain, sun, and air, though it had the sparks and particles of salt, yet it had perfectly lost its savour. The innermost, which had been connected to the rock, retained its savour.

SALTED 'with fire,' signifies, as salt is sprinkled on the victim preparatory to its being devoted to God. See Lev. ii. 13, so should the apostles by trials, calamities, &c. represented here by fire, be prepared as a sacrifice and offering to God; Mark ix. 49.

SALU, Say-lu.—The father of Zimri; Num. xxv. 14.

SALVATION denotes any deliverance; but is chiefly applied to the eternal deliverance of mankind by the Lord Jesus Christ. Of this the various miraculous deliverances of Israel were remarkable types or emblems. Because Christ is the author of the whole, he is sometimes called Salvation, which is equivalent to Saviour.

The deliverance of Israel from the bondage of Egypt—their deliverance from the pursuit of Pharaoh's soldiers,—these are called salvation; Ps. cvi. 8—10. So he was their Saviour; Isa. lxiii. 8, 9. David's victory over Goliath is called "salvation;" 1 Chron. xi. 14. But all earthly deliverances, past, present, or future, must be insignificant when compared with the great salvation effected by Jesus Christ. His name is Jesus, (Matt. i. 21) and "he shall save his people from their sins;"—His name is "Jesus who delivered us from the wrath to come;" 1 Thess. i. 10.

Is. 17. 10. & 62. 11; Luke 2. 30.

SAMARIA, Sa-ma're-a.—A province of Canaan, west of the Jordan; John iv. 3—5; Acts ix. 31. This part of the Holy Land derived its name from the city of Samaria, and comprises that tract of country once occupied by the tribes of Ephraim, and Manasseh, within Jordan, lying between Judea and Galilee. It was thus bounded on the north by Galilee; on the east by the river Jordan; on the south by Judea; and on the west by the Mediterranean Sea. Its chief cities were Sychar, Antipatris, and Samaria.

The situation of the city of Samaria was extremely beautiful and strong by nature. It stood on a fine, large, insulated hill, surrounded by a broad deep valley; it was environed by four hills, one on each side, that were cultivated with terraces to the top, sown with grain, and planted with fig and olive trees. Samaria was made the capital of the ancient kingdom of Israel by Omri, king of Israel, who made it the seat of his government. By his successors it was greatly improved and fortified, and, after resisting the repeated attacks of the kings of Assyria, it was destroyed by Shalmaneser, who reduced it to a heap of stones: Micah i. 6; 2 Kings xvii. 6.

Samaria rose from its ruins during the reign of Alexander, after whose death it was subject to the Egyptian and Syrian kings, until it was besieged, taken, and razed to the ground by the high priest Hyrcanus. It was afterwards rebuilt, and enlarged by Herod the Great, who gave the name of Sabaste, and erected a temple there, in honour of the emperor Augustus (Sebastes) Caesar. Samaria is now a small and poor village, but it is very interesting, from its natural situation, and some ruins of its former grandeur.

SAMARITANS, Sa-mar'e-tans.—Inhabitants of Samaria; John iv. 9. After Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, had carried away the ten tribes of Israel captive, he re-peopled Samaria with a colony of Babylonians, Cushians, and other idolaters. These, after a time, quitted the worship of idols, embraced the Jewish religion, and built a temple on Mount Gerizim; and their offspring, now mixed with apostate Jews, are called Samaritans. Hence arose that inveterate enmity between the two nations, of which we meet with numerous examples in the New Testament. How fragrant and bitter their rage was is evident from the instance of the woman of Samaria, who appeared amazed at our Lord, who was a Jew, should so far deviate from the national antipathy as to ask her, who was a Samaritan, even for a cup of cold water; for the Jews, adds the sacred historian, have no friendly intercourse and dealings with the Samaritans; John iv. 9. With a Jew, the very name of a Samaritan comprised madness and malice, drunkenness and apostacy, rebellion and universal detestation. When instigated by rage against our blessed Saviour, the first word their fury dictated was "Samaritan—thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil," John viii. 48. Nor did the Samaritans yield to the Jews in virulence and invective, reproaching them for erecting their temple on a spot that was not authorized by the divine command; and asserting Gerizim was the sole, genuine, and individual seat which God had originally chosen to fix his name and worship there; John iv. 20.

SAME, Ps. 102. 27; Heb. 13. 8; Rom. 10. 12; 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6; Eph. 4. 10.

SAMGAR-NEBO, Sam'-gar-ne'-bo.

—A prince of Babylon; Jer. xxxix. 3.

SAMLAH, Sam'-lah, raiment.—A king of Edom; Gen. xxxvi. 36.

SAMOS, Say'-mos, full of gravel.—

An island in the Archipelago, on the coast of Asia Minor. Here Pythagoras was born, and Lycurgus buried. It was celebrated for its fertility and the excellence of its fruits. It is admitted to be the richest island in the Archipelago. It now exports great quantities of wines, raisins; and it has mines of lead, silver, and gold.

On the east end of the island are the remains of the ancient city of Samos, the munificence of which was much lauded in antiquity. The city walls still exist, cased inside and outside with white marble—the ruins of a large theatre—those of several other considerable edifices—several bases and pedestals of the temple of Juno, celebrated both for its extraordinary size and the style of its architecture; and also five statues which originally belonged to the same building. The inhabitants worshiped Juno, who was said to have been born there; Acts 20. 15.

SAMOTHRACIA, Sam-o-thray'-she-a.—An island in the Ægean Sea, so called, because peopled by Samaritans and Thracians; Acts xvi. 11. Now called Samotraki.

SAMSON, Sam'-son, his son, his servant.—The son of Manoah, of the tribe of Dan. He was born A. M. 2843, and was a Nazarite from his infancy; Judges xiii. 21. He was appointed by God to deliver Israel from the oppressive yoke of the Philistines, and he conquered them several times. His history is recorded in the book of Judges.

SAMSON slew a thousand men with the jaw-bone of an ass; Judg. xv. 15. This need not seem incredible; the confusion of the flying Philistines on his bands snapping, and the natural and supernatural strength of Samson, show its possibility; and history records ordinary cases bearing a like feature. Flavius Vopiscus reports, that Aurelian, in the Sarmatic war, slew 48 with his own hands in one day, and in divers days, 950.—Boothroyd reads "smote" for "slain."—See Jaw Bone.

SAMUEL, Sam'-u-el, heard of God.—The Son of Elkanah and Hannah, of the tribe of Levi, and family of Kohath; he was born A. M. 2833; 1 Sam. i. 1, &c. When the child was weaned, his mother took him to Shiloh, and devoted him to the Lord. The high-priest Eli cheerfully accepted the donation, and "Samuel ministered unto the Lord;" 1 Sam. iii. 1.

Samuel was an eminent prophet, historian, and judge in Israel. He wore an ephod, anointed kings, and offered sacrifices; but he was not of the race of Aaron. He died in the ninety-eighth year of his age.

SAMUEL, First Book of.—The author of this book is not clearly known. Some have supposed that Samuel was the writer, whose history it chiefly contains. It contains the political and ecclesiastical history of the Israelites from the birth of Samuel to the death of Saul, a period of about 80 years.

SAMUEL, Second Book of.—This book was written, it is supposed, by the prophets Nathan and Gad. It comprises the history of about forty years, and is connected with the preceding book. It contains, amongst other matters, an account of David's victories, his sin and punishment, the birth of Solomon, and his last war with the Philistines. These two books of Samuel are also called the First and Second of Kings, being two of those four books which narrate the history of the kings of Israel and Judah.

SAMUEL. "And the sons of Samuel; the first-born Vashni, and Abiah.—There is a double error in this verse. The original for Joel has dropped out (see 1 Sam. viii. 2) and the Hebrew Vashni, which signifies the second, and which refers to Abiah, is turned into a proper name. The Syriac and Arabic read as in 1 Sam. viii. 2.

SANBALLAT, San-bal'-lat, bush, enmity in secret.—The governor of Samaria, and an enemy to the Jews; Neh. ii. 10, 19.

SANCTIFY.—To make holy, to treat as holy, or to set apart for holy services; Exod. xix. 10; and 23; xxx. 29; Deut. v. 12; Isa. viii. 13; Eph. v. 26; 1 Thess. v. 23.

SANCTIFY YOURSELVES; 1 Sam. xvi. 5; change your clothes, wash your bodies in pure water, and prepare your minds by devotion.

SANCTIFICATION.—The progressive conformity of the heart and life to the will of God; 1 Thess. v. 23;—it includes dying to sin, and living in holiness; 1 Pet. ii. 24;—in its nature it is a divine work; Tit. iii. 5; 1 Pet. i. 2;—a progressive work; Job xvii. 9; Prov. iv. 18;—an internal work; Eph. iv. 23;—a work always visible in its effects; Acts xi. 23; Rom. vii. 4;—a work which is never left till it be perfected; Phil. i. 6;—a work necessary to our peace, usefulness, and eternal happiness; Rom. vi. 20—22;—Eph. v. 26, 27; Heb. xii. 14;—its evidences are, freedom from sin; Rom. vi. 2, 6, 18;—the love and practice of holiness; Ps. li. 7, 10; Rom. vi. 22;—humility; Job xlii. 5, 6; Eph. iii. 8;—deadness to the world; Gal. vi. 14;—patient submission to the will of God under afflictions; Job ii. 10; Ps. xxxix. 9;—growing desires after heaven; 2 Cor. v. 4—8; Phil. i. 23.

SANCTUARY.—A holy house—denoting the tabernacle; Ex. xxv. 8; Heb. ix. 1, 2.—The word sometimes signifies “the holiest of all,” in which the God of Israel dwelt by the Shechinah, or visible symbol of his presence, a bright effulgent cloud upon the mercy-seat, between the cherubims of glory; Lev. iv. 6. It also denoted the temple.—Sanctuary means also a refuge, defence, or protection; Ps. lxxiii. 2; lxxiii. 17; Isa. viii. 14; Ezek. xi. 16; Dan. ix. 17.

SAND, put for a great weight; Job said, ‘My grief is heavier than the sand;’ vi. 3; slippery, precarious, uncertain; Matt. vii. 26, sand of the sea. An aggregate body of innumerable individuals. “Their widows are increased above the sand of the sea.” “I will multiply thy seed—as the sand which is upon the sea-shore;” Gen. xxii. 17.

SAND, ‘built his house upon the sand;’ Matt. vii. 26. The fishermen in Bengal, in the dry season, build their huts on the sand, from which the river has retired. But when the rains set in, which they often do suddenly, the waters come down in torrents from the mountains, and in one night multitudes of these huts are swept away.

SAND, Gen. 22. 17, & 32. 12; Job 6. 3, &

29. 18; Is. 10. 22; Matt. 7. 26.

SANDALS, at first, were only soles fastened on the feet with strings or thongs; afterwards they were covered like shoes; Mark vi. 9; Acts xii. 8. Sandals were reckoned the meanest part of the dress, and of little value. How depraved must the magistrates of Israel have been, "who sold the righteous for bread, and the poor for a pair of shoes;" Amos ii. 6; viii. 6.

SANHEDRIM, or SENATE.—The chief council of the Jewish nation, consisting of 70 or 72 judges; and said to have taken its rise from the 70 elders appointed to assist Moses. To this council our Lord alludes; Matt. v. 22; xxvii. 1; John xi. 47, &c. &c.

SANSANNAH, San-san'-nah.—A city; Josh. xv. 31.

SAPH, Saff, rushes.—A giant; 2 Sam. xxi. 18.

SAPHIR, Saf'-fir, a city.—A city in Judea; Micah i. 11.

SAPPHIRA, Saf'-fy'-ra, that tells, writes books.—A woman that perished by the hand of God, for attempting to deceive the Holy Spirit; Acts v. 1.

SAPPHIRE, Saf'-fire.—A precious stone, of a beautiful sky-blue colour, with small golden spots, second only to the diamond in lustre, hardness, and price. Originally procured from mount Sephar, hence its name; but the finest are found in Media; Gen. x. 30; Ex. xxiv. 10; xxviii. 18; Rev. xxi. 19.

SARA, SARAH, Sarai, Say'-rah, lady, or princess.—The wife of Abraham, she was his sister, but not by the same mother; Gen. xx. 12.—Also, a daughter of Asher; Num. xxvi. 46.

SARAPH, Say'-raff. — A person mentioned 1 Chr. iv. 22.

SARDIS, Sar'-dis, prince, or song of joy; in Syriac, a pot or kettle.—A city of Asia Minor, formerly the capital of that wealthy monarch Cræsus, king of the Lydians. It was celebrated for its great opulence, for the voluptuousness and debauchery of its inhabitants, for its numerous warriors, and for the many sieges it sustained against the Cimmerians, Persians, Medes, Macedonians, Ionians, and Athenians. So complete has been its overthrow, that its site is unknown, if it be not the modern Sart, a poor village in which reside a few persons who call themselves Christians; Rev. iii. 1.

SARDIS. 'Thou hast a few names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments, and they shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy.'

—This seems to allude to a custom among the Jews, when the officers of the Sanhedrim inquired into the genealogy of the high-priest, and examined his body. If they found him every way qualified, they gave him a white garment, and sent him back to minister among his brethren; but if unqualified, they put on him a black garment, and a veil of the same colour, and excluded him from the sanctuary.

SARDIUS, Sar'-de-us.—A gem of a deep red or blood colour, said to derive its name from Sardis. The best now come from Bagdad. It was the first jewel in the breast-plate of the high-priest; Ex. xxviii. 17; Ezek. xxviii. 13; Rev. iv. 3; xxi. 20.

SARDONYX, Sar'-do-nicks. — A precious stone, having the colours of the onyx and the sardius united; Rev. xxi. 20.

SAREPTA, Sa-rep'-ta, a goldsmith's shop, where metals are melted and tried.—A city of Sidon; Luke iv. 26. It was the temporary residence of the prophet Elijah, and the place where he performed the miracle of preventing the diminution of the barrel of meal, &c., and where he raised the widow's son to life again; 1 Kings xvii. Only a few houses remain.

SARGON, Sar'-gon, one who takes away protection, the garden.—A king of Assyria; Isa. xx. 1.

SAYRID, Say'-rid.—A city; Josh. xix. 10, 12.

SARON, Say'-ron, his field.—A country Acts ix. 35. Also, a city near Joppa, in the plain of Sharon

Or the name may mean the residents of several towns and villages in the plain of Sharon.

SARSECHIM, Sar-se'-kim, master of the wardrobe of the perfumes.—A captain or prince in the service of the king of Babylon; Jer. xxxix. 3.

SARUCH, Say'-ruk, a branch, layer, twining.—One of Christ's ancestors; Luke iii. 35.

SATAN, Say'-tan, contrary, adversary, accuser.—A name applied in Scripture to the devil, or the chief of the fallen angels. By this name Christ reproved Peter, for his worldly notions of the Messiah and his kingdom: "Get thee behind me, Satan," or adversary, &c., Jesus calls him not ho satanas, Satan, but simply opponent. Stand aside, thou who opposeth me in this matter. Thou dost not understand these divine things; Matt. xvi. 23.

SATYR.—Supposed to be the wild goat, horned owl, or some kind of monkey. It is a fabulous animal in the Greek mythology, composed of man and goat. But a real animal is signified by these passages. It is involved in obscurity; Isa. xiii. 21; xxxiv. 14.

SAUL, Sawl, demand, sepulchre, destroyer.—The king of Idumea; Gen. xxxvi. 37.—The son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, the first king of the Israelites; 1 Sam. ix. 1, 2.—His history is closely connected with that of David. Saul was very tall and handsome; 1 Sam. ix. 2, 3. But his elevation to the throne made him proud, and he soon became tyrannical, peevish, fretful, and often outrageous; 1 Sam. xix. 10; xx. 30. He often treated his friends as foes, and sought to destroy their lives. More than once he tried to assassinate his son; and without cause he ordered the innocent priests of the Lord at Nob to be murdered; 1 Sam. xxii. 11—20. On account of his wickedness the Lord forsook him, and when in difficulties, he had recourse to the witch of Endor for counsel; see 1 Sam. xxviii. This consultation led to his ruin. He was soon after defeated in battle, and he committed suicide; 1 Chron. x.

SAVE.—To preserve from danger, or from eternal death; to deliver from the guilt or the power of sin; Matt. i. 21. Jesus Christ saves his people from sin, and from destruction; and having merited their salvation by his death, he applies the purchased redemption, by shedding abroad the love of God in their hearts, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

SAVIOUR, or Deliverer, is a name given to Jehovah, and in a subordinate sense, his servants, sent to deliver, by displays of miraculous power, the chosen people; but it is generally appropriated to the Messiah, whose deliverance of his people, all the works of the saviours of Israel pre-figured; Hosea xliii. 4; Isa. xliii. 11; xlv. 21; Matt. i. 21; John iv. 42; Acts v. 31.

SAVOUR, 'sweet-smelling savour,' that is, grateful, acceptable; Eph. v. 2. This phrase was derived from the opinion that the Deity himself was present at the sacrifice, and ate of the flesh, and inhaled the perfumes.

SAVOUR of death—of life; 2 Cor. ii. 16. Alluding to triumphal processions in the East, in which fragrant incense and odours were burnt near the conquerors. The apostle alludes to the different effects of strong perfumes to cheer some, and to throw others into violent disorders, according to the different dispositions they are in to receive them. The people strewed the streets with flowers, which shed a grateful fragrance to those whose lives were granted them; but to others, who were doomed to die after the procession, the fragrance had indeed a deadly smell. Ministers of the gospel diffuse the fragrance of the knowledge of Christ.

SCEVA, Se'-vah, disposed, prepared.—A Jew who lived at Ephesus, and who was chief of the synagogue there; his seven sons practised exorcism; Acts xix. 14—16.

SCHISM, Sizm, division; 1 Cor. i. 10; xi. 18; xii. 25. It refers to differences of opinion, and perhaps also the alienation of the affections of the members of a church, and not, as some understand the word, separation from a religious society.

SCIENCE, 'false so called,' 1 Tim. vi. 20. The vain and corrupt speculations of Heathen philosophers.

SCHOOLS of the prophets were first erected in the cities of the Levites. Convenient edifices were built for the abode of the prophets and their disciples, termed the sons of the prophets; and at their head some truly inspired prophet was placed as governor, who is called their father; 1 Sam. x. 2; 2 Kings ii. 12. Samuel was one, and perhaps the first of those fathers; 1 Sam. xix. 20, and Elijah was another; 2 Kings ii. 12, who was succeeded by Elisha; 2 Kings iv. 38. The sons of the prophet lived together in community; 2 Kings vi. 1: they were instructed in the law, and the principles of religion, and in the sacred art of psalmody; 1 Sam. x. 5, and 1 Chron. xxv. 1, 7.

SCHOLAR, 1 Chr. 25. 8; Mal 2. 12.
Gal. 3. 24. schoolmaster to bring

SCHOOLMASTER, or teacher of children; an office which the typical law of Moses performed in the church till Christ came; Gal. iii. 24; compare Gal. iv. 1—7. Sometimes they had only the care of their children, to regulate their behaviour, &c. These schoolmasters were generally severe and imperious. Thus the thundering law was to declare, and lead to the great Teacher, Christ.

SCOFFERS. Persons who try to turn all religion into ridicule, with a design to depreciate truth and represent it as contemptible, Hab. 1. 10; 2 Pet. 3. 3.

SCORNFUL, Ps. 1. 1; Prov. 29. 8; Is. 23. 14.

SCORPION;
Luke xi. 12. A large reptile, remarkable for its irascibility and malignancy. It is found in tropical countries. They are from two to five inches long. Some are yellow, some brown, and some black. The sting is in the tail. It has eight legs. The torment produced by their sting is dreadful. Some of its species are said to be white, and about the size of an egg, and when coiled up it is difficult to distinguish one from the other. To this Luke xi. 12, alludes. This venomous reptile abounds in ruins, and among the rocks of Egypt and Arabia. Scorpions symbolize men of violent passions and mischievous deeds; Ezek. ii. 6; Rev. ix. 3.

SCORPIONS, 1 Kings xii. 11; 2 Chron. x. 11. Whips made with thorns.

SCOURGE.—Scourging, or whipping was both a Jewish and Roman punishment. The whip was made of thongs, ropes or twigs, and having three lashes, thirteen strokes with which made thirty-nine stripes, the number allowed to be inflicted by the law; though it permitted forty, forty two must have been given, if another stroke had been added in the ordinary way; Deut. xxv. 3; 2 Cor. xi. 24. The offender was stripped from his shoulders to his middle, and tied by his arms to a low pillar, that he might bend forward, that the scourger the more easily might strike his back.

SCOURGED JESUS.—The Romans always scourged slaves before they crucified them; Matt. xxvii. 26; Mark xv. 15; John xix. 1.

SCOURGE of tongue, Job 5. 21.

Is. 28. 15. overflowing s, 18, & 10. 26.

SCRIBE.—A clerk, writer, or secretary; 2 Sam. viii. 17; xx. 25; 1 Kings iv. 3; 2 Kings xix. 2; xxii. 8.

SCRIBES.—Learned Jews who devoted themselves to transcribing, and interpreting the law, and to assist kings and magistrates in keeping the registers of national affairs; Matt. vii. 29; Mark i. 22; ix. 14, &c. The word also is applied to men of learning, especially to those skilled in the Mosaic law, and so it is used by the writers of the New Testament. Grammateus (the Greek word for Scribes) always implies a man of letters, or learning, capable of instructing the people.

SCRIP.—A sort of bag, or wallet, in which travellers carried their provision, and other things, and which they carried about their necks. They are now made of hair, cloth, or thick worsted; Matt. x. 10; 1 Sam. xvii. 40; Luke xxii. 35.

SCRIPTURES.—The writings.—A name applied by way of dignity to the contents of the Bible, and which are given by inspiration; 2 Tim. iii. 16; Matt. xxii. 29; Mark xiv. 49; Acts xvii. 11; xviii. 24; 2 Pet. iii. 16.

2. Pe'. 1. 20. no prophecy of the s. is of any private interpretation

3. 16. wrest as do other s to own

SCROLL. 'The heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll;' Isa xxxiv.

4. Scroll here refers to ancient books. Some were like ours with leaves, and others rolls of parchment, written generally on one side, and from being several feet long, rolled up in a very small compass.

SCYTHIAN, Sith'-e-an tanner.—An inhabitant of Scythia, a large country near the Euxine and Caspian seas. The inhabitants were then barbarians; Col. iii. 11.

SEA.—The Hebrews gave this name to all large bodies of water, to lakes and rivers, as well as to the Great Sea; Gen. xiv. 3; Ex. xiv. 2; Isa. xxi. 1; Jer. li. 36; Luke v. 1; John vi. 1, 18. Hence we read of 1. The SEA OF GALILEE was anciently called the Sea of Cinnereth; Num. xxxiv. 11, or Cinneroth; Josh. xii. 3; in the time of the Maccabees Genesar; 1 Macc. xi. 67; and in the days of our Saviour, the Sea of Tiberias; John vi. 1, from the great city of that name which stood on its banks, and Gennesareth, from the neighbouring district of the same name; Mark vi. 53.

2. The DEAD SEA was anciently called the Sea of the plain; Deut. iv. 49; the Salt Sea; Deut. iii. 17; Josh. xv. 5; and the East Sea; Ezek. xlvi. 18; Joel ii. 20. By Josephus and other writers it is called lake Asphaltites, from the bitumen found in it. The term, Dead Sea, seems to have been given to it from the opinion (erroneous, though general) that no living creature could exist in the waters, and that even birds fell dead into the water in attempting to fly over. It is sometimes called the Sea of Sodom, because it occupies the site of that place, and of the other cities of the plain which were destroyed for their wickedness in the days of Lot. It is said that the ruins of these cities may now be discerned under the water when it is low.

3. The GREAT SEA is the Mediterranean, called sometimes, the Inner Sea, in contra-distinction to the Red-Sea, which is called the Former Sea; Zech. xiv. 8. It may be here remarked, that orientals turn their faces eastward in various religious rites, and commonly call the east before, the west behind, the left hand north, and the right hand south. The word beyond, for the same reason, means east. The Mediterranean is about two thousand miles long, and varies in breadth from eighty to five hundred miles; it is beautifully sprinkled with islands, and bordered by fertile and opulent countries. No tides are perceptible in it except in narrow straits.

SEA, Ps. 33. 7. & 72. 8; Prov. 8. 29; Is. 48. 18, & 57. 29; Zech. 9. 19; Rev. 4. 6, & 10. 6, & 15. 2, & 21. 1.

SEAL, denotes the instrument so named—chiefly the impression made by its application. The inscription on the seal showed to whom it belonged, and was used to give validity to an order, or security to property; Gen. xli. 42; Esth. viii. 8, 10; Matt. xxvii. 36.

SEAL, 'set me as a seal.' Seals were suspended round the necks of great men; Song viii. 6.

SEAL, 'hath set to his seal that God is true;' John iii. 33. It was customary to accompany the name on a seal by some religious expression, or sacred symbol. So this expression is on the believer's signet.

SEAL, 'having this seal,' 'this inscription;' 2 Tim. ii. 19. It was the custom formerly, to put inscriptions or devices on foundation stones, to preserve the memory of those who had erected the buildings. The New Jerusalem is described as having twelve foundations, with the names of the twelve apostles inscribed upon them. The apostle Paul here refers to this ancient practice, so that his design is to represent to us not a seal in the ordinary use of the word, but an inscription and device which assures us of the firmness of this foundation, and gives the reason for it.

SEALED, 'with that Holy Spirit of promise;' Eph. i. 13. The Spirit produces on the minds of believers of the truth of the gospel, a correct resemblance of its divine excellence, so that they become epistles of Christ, seen and read of all men; 2 Cor. iii. 2, 3.

SEALED, 'Him hath God the Father sealed;' John vi. 27. Dr. A. Clarke supposes that some such custom of sealing the victim, after it had been selected, prevailed among the Jews, as among the nations contiguous to them. He has quoted a passage from Herodotus, in order to show the method of selecting and sealing the white bull sacrificed to Apis, in Egypt, upon which he remarks; "The Jews could not be unacquainted with the rites and ceremonies of the Egyptian worship: and it is possible that such precautions as these were in use among themselves; especially as they were so strictly enjoined to have their sacrifices without spot, and without blemish." In allusion to this custom, it is, he supposes, that our Lord says of himself, "Him hath God the Father sealed." 'Infinite justice found Jesus Christ to be without spot or blemish, and therefore it sealed, pointed out, and accepted him as a proper sacrifice and atonement for the sin of the whole world.' He

“through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God.” Heb. ix. 14.

SEED-TIME, called Zero, comprised the latter half of the Jewish month Tisri, the whole of the Marchesvan, and the former half of Chisleu, that is, from the beginning of October to the beginning of December. During this season the weather is often misty, cloudy, with mizzling or pouring rain. At the end of October, or early in December, the former or early autumnal rains begin to fall, when they usually ploughed their lands, and sowed their wheat and barley, and gathered the latter grapes.

SEEK.—"When thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, Lord, will I seek;" Ps. xxvii.

8. Dr. A. Clarke thus renders the passage:—"Unto thee, my heart, he hath said, Seek ye my face: Thy face, O Jehovah, I will seek. O my heart, God hath commanded thee to seek his face: Then, his face I will seek."

Some have referred it to the church, thus: Unto thee, his church, God hath said, Seek ye, all who compose the church, my face, or friendship, and communion with me. To which, I, his church, have answered, Thy face, O Jehovah, I will seek.

SEER.—An appellation given to a prophet, from his foreseeing, or declaring future events; 1 Sam. ix. 9; 2 Sam. xv. 27; 1 Chron. xxi. 9.

SEGUB, Se'-gub, fortified, raised.—The son of Hezron; 1 Chron. ii. 21.—The son of Hiel; 1 Kings xvi. 34; Josh. vi. 26.

SEIR, Se'-er, hairy, demon, tempest.—The father of the ancient Horites; Gen. xiv. 6; Deut. ii. 12.—Also the name of the country where he resided, near the Dead Sea; Gen. xxxvi. 20—30.—Also a mountain on the frontiers of Judah and Dan; Josh. xv. 10.

SEIRATH, Se'-i-rath.—A place in the land of Moab, not far from Bethel and Gilgal; Judges iii. 26.

SELAH, Se'-lah, a rock.—It was the capital of Idumea. Mount Hor overlooks its ruins. It was formerly called Petre from its rocky position; prophets call it "the clefts of the rock;" Jer. xlix. 16; 2 Kings xiv. 7. Its ruins attest its former splendour. There are remains of arches, palaces, temples, theatres, magnificent tombs excavated in the solid rock, and extensive ruins of other buildings are scattered over this once wonderful place. Read Keith on Prophecy.

SELAH.—A term which often occurs in Hebrew poetry, and is thought to denote merely a pause, or change of song or measure.

SELA-HAMMAH-LEKOTH, Se-la-ham'-mah-le'-koth, the rock of divisions.—A place in Judea; 1 Sam. xxiii. 28.

SELEUCIA, Se-lew'-she-a, beaten by waves.—A sea-port, 15 miles north west of Antioch, and on the Orontes; Acts xiii. 4. It derived its name from Seleucus Nicator, and was sometimes called Seleucia ad Mare, to distinguish it from nine other cities of the same name in Syria. Although Seleucia was a large and well-fortified city, there is not now a single habitation remaining, nothing but ruins.

SENNACHERIB, Sen-na-ke'-rib, or Sen-nak'-ke-rib, bush, destruction of the sword.—The king of Assyria, son and successor of Shalmaneser: he began to reign A. M. 3290, and reigned only four years; 2 Kings xix. 7, 20.

37. With an immense army he invaded Judah, besieged Lachish, reduced that city, and threatened to invest Jerusalem; on which Hezekiah engaged to pay him a tribute of 300 talents of silver, and 30 talents of gold. This did not satisfy him. Hezekiah sought advice of Isaiah, who recommended him to confide in God. He did so; and omnipotence destroyed the invader's army. Sennacherib was afterwards slain by his two sons.

SENNACHERIB. Destruction of his army; 2 Kings xix. 35; 2 Chron. xxxii. 21; Isa. xxxvii. 36. Probably the blast or hot pestilential south wind, called the Simoom, as directed and inflicted by angelic agency. Thevenot mentions one of these winds, which, in 1665, suffocated 4,000 persons, and another in 1668, which suffocated 20,000 men in one night. The destruction of the same army before Pelusium, in the reign of Sethos, king of Egypt, is attributed, by Herodotus, to an immense number of mice, that infested the Assyrian camp by night, so that their quivers and bows, were gnawed in pieces. Herodotus calls the Assyrian king Sennacherib, as the Scriptures do, and the time referred to in both is perfectly accordant. They only differ as to the cause of the destruction of the army:—Herodotus derived his information from the Egyptian priests, who had the greatest aversion to the Jews, and would relate nothing which would give reputation to either.

SEPHAR, Se'-far, a book, scribe; in Syriac, a haven.—A mountain of the east, near Armenia; Gen. x. 30.

SEPHARAD, Sef'-ar-ad, a book; descending, ruling.—A place in Judea; Obadiah 20.

SEPHARVAIM, Sef'-ar-vay'-im, two books, two scribes.—A country of Assyria; 2 Kings xvii. 24, 31. Its situation uncertain.—Also a city; Is. xxxvii. 13.

SEPHARVITES, Se'-far-vites.—Inhabitants of Sepharvaim; 2 Kings xvii. 31.

SEPULCHRES, or places for burying the dead, were usually hollow rooms dug into rocks, with an upright door to enter into them, to which a large stone was put; Gen. xxiii. 6; Judg. viii. 32; 1 Sam. x. 2; 2 Sam. ii. 32; Isa. xxii. 16. The Jews placed them without the cities, on account of the noxious effluvia arising from them. The royal family only were buried in Jerusalem; 2 Chron. xxiv. 16. Natural caves were often used for interment; and in these thieves and lunatics sometimes resided. Hence the grave is called a pit; Psa. lxxxviii. 3—12. Our Saviour's sepulchre was "hewn out of a rock;" and the door being sealed, his body could not be removed unknown to the guards. The size of the stone which formed the door was an ample security. "A great stone" was generally selected for this purpose; Matt. xxvii. 60.

SEPULCHRES, 'whited sepulchres;' Matt. xxiii. 27. The Jews whitened their sepulchres for ornament, and to prevent defilement by approaching them too near; see Nun. xix. 16.

SERGIUS-PAULUS, Ser'-je-us-Paw'-lus, maker of nets.—The deputy governor of Cyprus ; Acts xiii. 7.

SERGEANTS, Sar'-a-jants, Acts
xvi. 35. The lictors, those having rods.
Public officers who went before magistrates with the emblems of authority. In Rome they bore the fasces before the senators ; viz. a bundle of rods with an axe in its centre, as a symbol of office. Their office resembled that of a beadle in England.

SERPENT.—The only kind of serpent mentioned in Scripture is the flying serpent, so called, say some, from their swift-darting motion. They were called fiery from their colour and their venom ; Isa. xxx. 6. Several profane authors mention serpents found in the east with wings like a bat. Herodotus saw them at the city of Butus, and describes them minutely. Bochart quotes many authors to prove that they are the same as the hydra of the Greeks and Latins.

SERVANTS, were 1. Aliens, purchased or taken captive in war ; these their masters kept, exchanged, or sold. The 2. were Hebrew slaves, who from poverty had sold themselves, or by their parents to satisfy the demands of a creditor. These continued in slavery until the year of jubilee.

The 3. order of servants were such by choice ; thus, Joshua was the servant of Moses, Elisha of the prophet Elijah, and the apostles the servants of Jesus Christ. From the parable of the proprietor of a vineyard and his labourers ; Matt. xx. 1—15, we learn concerning the servants in Judea, or at least in Jerusalem, 1. that early in the morning they stood in the market-place to be hired ; 2. that the usual wages of a day labourer there were a denarius, or about seven-pence half-penny of our money ; and 3. that the hours of working were till six in the evening.

SERVANT, 'took upon him the form of a servant,' Phil. ii. 7. Allusion is here made especially to the manner of Christ's death ; for crucifixion was a servile punishment inflicted on vile and incorrigible slaves.

SERVANTS, 'again he sent forth other servants,' &c. Matt. xxii. 4.
Grotius says, that it was sometimes customary to give two invitations to a feast. This was the case also among the Nestorians.

SEVEN.—That is, 'many;' Gen.
xxxiii. 3.

SEVEN—Eight.—A definite number is specified for an indefinite: seven implies perfection; eight, therefore, denotes more than sufficiency: suggesting we should give out necessities, as well as superfluities; Eccles. xi. 2.

SEVEN WAYS.—Meaning, 'many ways;' Deut. xxviii. 7.

SEVENTH DAY.—"And on the seventh day God ended his work;" Gen. ii. 2. The Septuagint, the Syriac, and the Samaritan, read the SIXTH day instead of the SEVENTH, which is the genuine reading, originally that of the Hebrew text; the error having arisen from the SIMILARITY of the two numeral letters, VAU and ZAIN, six and seven.

SEVEN EARS of corn came up; Gen. xli. 5. Infidels have considered this a liberty taken with nature, in order to show a symbol. But a species of wheat does grow in Egypt, which does actually bear, when perfect, this number of ears on one stalk, as its natural conformation. It differs from ours in having a solid stem, or at least a stem full of pith, in order to yield sufficient nourishment and support, to so great a weight as the ears which it bears.

SHADOW.—See Hiding-place. Defence, protection. In sultry eastern countries, this metaphor is highly expressive of support and protection. The Arabs and Persians use the like figure, 'May the shadow of thy prosperity be spread over the heads of thy well-wishers.'

SHADOW, 'as a servant earnestly desireth, (or gapeth after) the shadow;' Job vii. 2. Eastern labourers accurately measure time by the length of their shadow. Our shadow is the shortest when the sun is due south, right over our heads, and the longest just before the sun disappears; when we are "gone," our sun is set. The servant rejoices as his shadow gets longer.—It was also customary to put a stick in the ground. When the sun rises the shadow of the stick is immediately to the west. As they work in relays, between the east and the west, lines are drawn on the ground, dividing the distance into as many parts as are required. Mr. Gadsby saw this contrivance, and he says, "The distance was divided into five parts, and the day was about ten hours long, ten men were united, and were to work in relays of two each. The sun had just risen when I saw it. Two men were at work, and they would continue to labour until the shadow of the stick appeared on the first line. They would then leave off and another two take their place, until the shadow appeared on the next line, when they would retire, and another two succeed in like manner, until all the ten men had had their fair share of the day's work."

SHADOW 'of a great rock in a weary land;' Isa. xxxii. 2. Travellers through the burning sand of the desert are glad to sit under the cooling shade of a projecting rock. It not only excludes the rays of the sun, but it has itself a refreshing coolness grateful to the weary traveller.

SHADOW. 'The law having a shadow of good things to come;' Heb. x. 1. Alluding to the different states of a painting, when the first sketch only is drawn, and when the piece is finished; or to the first sketch of a painting when compared with what is yet more expressive than even the completest painting, an exact image.

SHADOW our days are a, 1 Chr. 29. 15; Ecc. 8. 13. & 6. 12; Job 8. 9; Ps. 102. 11, & 109. 23, & 144. 4.

SHAHAZIMAH, Shay-haz'-e-mah.—A city; Josh. xix. 22.

SHAKE 'off the dust of your feet,' Matt. x. 14. The Jews regarded every other part of the world as profane and polluted; hence this symbolical action; Mark vi. 11; Luke ix. 5.

SHAKE thyself from the dust; this alludes to the custom of sitting on the bare ground; the custom of male and female, and of rich and poor; of richly adorned females and men, spending their time in conversation. Their dresses necessarily gather up dust, and they now and then arise, shake their clothes, or flowing robes, adjust them, and sit down again; Isa. lli. 2. The captive daughter of Zion, therefore, brought down to the dust of suffering and oppression, is commanded to arise and shake herself from the dust of degradation; and then, with grace, dignity, composure, and security to sit down, and take again her seat and rank among the company of the nations of the earth, which had before afflicted her, and trampled her to the ground

SHALMANESER, Shal-ma-ne'-ser, peace, perfection, or reward.—The king of Assyria, who succeeded Tiglath-pileser; see 2 Kings xvii. 3; xviii. 9. He began his reign A. M.

3267, and reigned fourteen years. He conquered Israel when Hoshea was its king, and three years afterward, finding out a negotiation with Egypt to set themselves free from his yoke, he overran Israel with his armies, ravaged the country, destroyed their fenced cities, killed many of the inhabitants, captured Samaria, the metropolis, and transported Hoshea and the chief citizens to Media and other eastern parts of his empire; 2 Kings xvii. Among these was Tobit, whose history is given in the Apocryphal book which bears his name. At this time Hezekiah reigned in Judah, and Sabacus reigned in Egypt. The successor of Shalmaneser was Sennacherib.

SHAMARIAH, Sham-a-ry'-ah.—A son of Rehoboam; 2 Chron. xi. 19.

SHAMBLES, 'sold in the shambles, that eat'; 1 Cor. x. 25. Alluding to the custom of bringing the flesh of the animal to market, the blood of which had been poured out in sacrifice to an idol.

SHAME.—(1.) That affection which proceeds from an inward apprehension of guilt, dishonesty, or filthiness. In the state of innocence, there was no shame, nor any occasion for it; Gen. ii. 25. (2.) Trouble and perplexity of mind, on account of guilt and disappointment; Ezra ix. 6; Rom. vi. 21; v. 5. (3.) Derision, contempt, harassment; Ezek. xxxvi. 6. (4.) What is shameful; as an idol, whose worship was abominable, and tends to bring its practisers to shame; Hos. ix. 10.

SHARAI, Shar'-a-i, my lord, my song.—One who had married a strange wife in Babylon; Ezra x. 40.

SHARESER, Sha-re'-zer, overseer of the treasury.—The second son of Sennacherib, who slew his father in the temple of his god Nisroch; 2 Kings xix. 37.

SHARON, Shay'-ron, his plain, field, song.—The campaign, or open country, situated at the south of Mount Carmel, along the coast of the Mediterranean, extending to Caesarea and Joppa. It was a region of great fertility, and, therefore, became proverbial of any place of beauty or fertility, see Isa xxxiii. 9. It is still fertile, and produces in the spring white and red roses, the narcissus, the white and orange lily, the carnation, and other flowers.—Sharon, or Lasharon, a city whose king was taken and slain by Joshua; Josh. xii. 18.

SHARP.—Convictions produced by the preaching of the gospel; Ps. xlv. 5, compare with Acts ii. 37; Heb. iv. 12; Rev. i. 16.—A piercing look; Job xvi. 9. "Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend;" Prov. xxvii. 17. One friend may be the means of exciting another to reflect, dive deeply into, and illustrate some subject, without which excitement this had never taken place.

"But let me sharpen others as the hone Gives edge to razors, though itself have none!"—Horace.

SHARP 'arrows of the mighty, with coals of Juniper;" Psa. cxx. 4. 'They (the false tongues) are like the sharp arrows of the mighty, or the glowing embers of the broom.'

SHAUL, Shay'-ul.—The son of Simeon; Num. xxvi. 13; Gen. xlvi. 10.

SHAVE 'her head, and pare her nails;' Deut. xxi. 12; signs of mourning.

SHAVSHA, Shav'-sha, a secretary.—One of David's officers; 1 Chron. xviii. 16.

SHEALTIEL, She-al'-te-el, I have asked of God.—The father of Zerubabel; Ezra iii. 2.

SHEAR.—To cut the wool from sheep; Gen. xxxi. 19. At the time of sheep-shearing feasts were made, to which the neighbours and relatives of the family were invited, as we see in the case of Absalom; 2 Sam. xiii. 23. "The shearing-house" was probably the place where the shepherds met for the annual sheep-shearing; 2 Kings x. 12.

SHEAVES—The fruit of labour, or joy after sorrow; Psa. cxxvi. 6; this passage refers to the joy of the Israelites on their return from captivity; Isa. lxvi. 20.—The Paschal sheaf was brought into the temple, as the first-fruits of the barley-harvest; Lev. xiii. 10—12.

SHEBA, She'-ba, captivity, repose, old age.—A son of Raamah; Gen. x. 7.—The son of Joktan; Gen. x. 28.—Son of Jokshan; Gen. xxv. 3.—A city; Josh. xix. 2.—See also 1 Chron. v. 13; 2 Sam. xx. 1.—A province, in the south east of Arabia, between the Red Sea, and the Indian Ocean. It was famed for spices, gems, and gold; Psa. lxxii. 10; Isa. lx. 6; Jer. vi. 20; Ezek. xxvii. 22. The queen of Sheba visited Solomon; 1 Kings x. 1; Matt. xii. 42.

SHEBARIM, Sheb'-a-rim.—A place near Ai and Bethel; Josh. vii. 5.

SHEBAT, She'-bat.—The fifth month of the Jewish civil year, and the eleventh of the ecclesiastical year.

SHEBNA, Sheb'-nah, who rests himself.—A treasurer and secretary to king Hezekiah; 2 Kings xviii. 18; Isa. xxii. 15, &c.

SHEBUEL, Sheb'-u-el, the turning.—The eldest son of Gershon, son of Moses; 1 Chr. xxiii. 16.

SHECHEM, She'-kem, part, shoulder, early.—The son of Gilead; Num. xxvi. 31.—The son of Hamor, and prince of the Shechemites; Gen. xxxiv. 1, &c.

SHECHEM.—A very ancient city of Samaria. It is also called Sechem, Sichern, Sychem, and Sychar, in the New Testament; afterwards Neapolis; now Nablous, Naplous, and Napolosa. It is 35 miles north of Jerusalem. It was ravaged by the sons of Jacob; Gen. xxxiv. Near it was Jacob's well; John iv. 6. And the parcel of ground which Jacob bought of Hamor for a burial-place; where the remains of Joseph, Eleazer, and Joshua, were deposited.

After the ruin of the city of Samaria, Shechem became the metropolis of Samaria, and was called Sychar. Near it occurred our Saviour's conversation with the Samaritan woman, which resulted in the conversion of so many citizens; John iv. It was enlarged and beautified by Vespasian, about forty years after Christ's death, and was by him called Neapolis, or the New City. It is at this day a fine town, containing ten thousand inhabitants, of which about one hundred are nominal Christians. It is now called Naplouse.

SHED for many for remission, Matt. 26. 28.

Rom. 5. 5. love of God is s. abroad

Tit. 3. 6. Holy Ghost be s. on us

SHEDEUR, Shed'-e-ur, field, destroyer of fire.—A chief of the tribe of Reuben; Num. i. 5.

SHEEP—A well known animal, of the greatest utility, and famed for meekness and docility. In Syria there are two varieties of sheep: one differing little from ours,—the other, more common and more esteemed, having a tail of extraordinary bulk, often weighing twelve or fifteen pounds, and sometimes much more. It seems to consist of a substance between fat and marrow, and was commanded to be offered in sacrifice to God; Lev. iii. 9. The wealth of ancient kings, and other great men, consisted chiefly in flocks and herds; 2 Kings iii. 4; and this is still the case in some eastern countries, especially where the people are few, and the pastures luxuriant. Christians are compared to sheep, for their innocence and excellence. Christ is "the Lamb of God," that is, the great atoning sacrifice; John i. 29.

SHEEP.—The disciples of Christ; Zech. xiii. 7; John x. 11, 16; 1 Pet. ii. 25.

SHEEP, 'follow him;' John x. 4. Eastern sheep follow their shepherds as readily as dogs follow their masters in England.

SHEEP 'by name;' John x. 3. It is usual among eastern shepherds to give names to their sheep as we do to dogs and horses. 'Passing by a flock of sheep,' says Mr. Hartley, I asked the shepherd to call one of his sheep. He did so, and it instantly left its pasturage and companions, and ran up to the hand of the shepherd with a prompt obedience and signs of pleasure, that I had never before observed in any other animal.' It is also true, 'that a stranger they will not follow, but will flee from him.' The shepherd told me that many of his sheep were still wild; that they had not yet learned their names, but that by teaching, they would all learn them. The others which knew their names, he called tame.

SHEEP GATE.—Probably so called, from the sheep for sacrifice passing through it to the temple; Neh. iii. 1, 32; xii. 39.

SHEEP, Ps. 49. 14, & 74. 1, & 78. 52.

SHEHARIAH, She-ha-ry'-ah.—One of the chief men of the tribe of Benjamin; 1 Chron. viii. 26.

SHEKEL.—A Jewish weight, rather more than nine pennyweights-troy, valued at 2s. 3³/₄d.; but the golden shekel was worth £1 16 6, English money; Gen. xxiv. 22; Ex. xxx. 13.

SHEKINAH.—The symbol of the Divine glory and presence which dwelt in the tabernacle and the temple—a glowing, bright, and preternatural splendour—the glory of God; Exod. xxxiii. 9; Ps. xcix. 6, 7; Isa. vi. 1.

SHELAH, She'-lah, that breaks, that undresses.—A son of Judah; Gen. xxxviii. 11.

SHELEMIAH, Shel-e-my'-ah, God is my perfection.—One who married a strange wife in Babylon; Ezra x. 39.—Also a priest; Neh. xiii. 13.

SHELOMI, Shel'-o-my, peace, happiness.—A commissioner for dividing the land of Canaan; Num. xxxiv. 27.

SHELOMITH, Shel'-o-mith, peaceable, perfect.—The daughter of Dibri; Lev. xxiv. 11.—Daughter of Zerubbabel; 1 Chron. iii. 19.—Son of Shimei, a Levite; 1 Chron. xxiii. 9.—Son of Izhar, a Levite; 1 Chron. xxiii. 18.—Daughter of Rehoboam;

2 Chron. xi. 20.—Son of Zichri; 1 Chron. xxvi. 25.

SHELUMIEL, She-lew'-me-el, happiness.—Son of Zurishaddai, chief of the Simeonites; Num. i. 6; vii. 36.

SHEM, Shem, name, renown, placed.—The son of Noah, was born A. M. 1558; Gen. vi. 10. He was with his father in the ark during the deluge; and in his modest and dutiful behaviour towards his father, he was rewarded with his special benediction; Gen. ix. 23—25. The greatest prerogative of Shem was, that the Messiah descended from him. At the age of a hundred and six, he begat Arphaxad, and died when six hundred years old, A. M. 2158. His posterity obtained for their inheritance the best provinces of Asia.

SHEMAIAH, Shem-a-i-ah, obeys the Lord.—Father of Shimri; 1 Chr. iv. 37.—Son of Joel; 1 Chr. v. 4.—A prophet of the Lord, sent to Rehoboam; 1 Kings xii. 22. Thirteen other persons of this name are mentioned in Scripture; 1 Chr. iii. 22; ix. 14, 16; xv. 8, 11; xxiv. 6; 2 Chr. xvii. 8; xxix. 14; xxxi. 15; xxxv. 9; Ezra viii. 16; Neh. vi. 10; Jer. xxix. 24—32; xxxvi. 12.

SHEMARIAH, Shem-a-ry'-ah, God is my guard, diamond.—A friend of David; 1 Chron. xii. 5.—One who married a strange wife in Babylon; Ezra x. 32.

SHEMEBER, Shem'-e-ber, name of force.—The king of Zebouim; Gen. xiv. 2, &c.

SHEMER, She'-mer, guardian, thorn.—The person who sold to Omri the mount on which Samaria was built; 1 Kings xvi. 24.

SHEMINITH, Shem'-e-nith, eight.—The title of several Psalms, meaning, perhaps, the harp of eight strings.

SHEMUEL, She-mew'-el.—A son of Ammihud; Num. xxxiv. 20.

SHENAZAR, She-nay'-zar.—A successor of Jechoniah; 1 Chr. iii. 18.

SHENIR, She'-nir, lantern, light that sleeps, he that shows.—A name of Mount Hermon; Deut. iii. 9.

SHEPHERD.—Literally, a keeper of sheep. In compassion to us God is frequently spoken of under the endearing character of a Shepherd; Psa. xxiii. 1, 2; lxxx. 1. The prophets exhibited Christ in the same way; Is. xl. 11; Ezek. xxxiv. 23. He at his coming adopted the same similitude; John x. And in the same way the Apostles represented him; Acts xx. 28; Heb. xiii. 20. "The great Shepherd of the sheep"—"which he hath purchased with his own blood."

SHEPHERD, 'chief shepherd;' 1 Pet. v. 4. See 1 Sam. xxv. 7. In Spain, where many Eastern customs are preserved from the Moors, they have to this day over each flock of sheep, a chief shepherd. Ten thousand compose a flock, which is divided into ten tribes. One man has the conduct of the whole, and absolute dominion over fifty shepherds and fifty dogs. He chooses them, chastises them, or discharges them at will.

SHEPHERDS, prophetically, means rulers, or commanders, civil or ecclesiastical; Jer. vi. 3; xxv. 34; Nah. iii. 18.

SHEPHERD'S TENT, 'removed as a shepherd's tent;' Isa. xxxviii. 12. As suddenly as the tent of a shepherd is taken down, folded up, and transferred to another place.

SHEPHUPHAN, She-few'-fan.—The son of Bela; 1 Chr. viii. 5.

SHERAH, She'-rah.—The daughter of Beriah, who dwelt at Beth-horon; 1 Chron. vii. 24.

SHEREZER, She-re'-zer.—One sent into the house of God to pray before the Lord; Zech. vii. 2.

SHERIFFS; Dan. iii. 3. Dr. Boothroyd reads 'presidents.' They were, probably, civil magistrates.

SHESHACH, She'-shak, bag of flax, the sixth bag.—A name given to Babylon; Jer. xxv. 26; li. 41, probably derived from one of its idols.

SHESHBAZZAR, Shesh-baz'-zar, joy in tribulation.—A prince of Judah, probably the same as Zerubbabel; Ezra i. 8.

SHETH, Sheth.—The same as SETH; 1 Chron. i. 1.

SHETHAR-BOZNAI, She'-thar-boz-nay-i, that makes to corrupt.—An officer of the king of Persia; Ezra v. 6.

SHEVA, She'-vah, vanity, elevation, tumult, fame.—Secretary to king David; 2 Sam. xx. 25.

SHEWETH him 'all the kingdoms'; Matt. iv. 8. The territory of Judea was small, and from elevated places, mountains, &c., neighbouring kingdoms were visible.—Macknight and Porteus. Judah was now divided into several provinces and tetrarchies, popularly called kingdoms; these might be all that were intended. "To shew," may signify 'to describe.'

SHEW-BREAD, or bread of faces, that is, of the Presence, so called, because it was constantly placed in God's presence. Twelve loaves, according to the twelve tribes, were every Sabbath-day, put upon the golden table, to be exposed for the whole week. This bread was forbidden to be eaten by any except the priests; therefore in the extraordinary case of David, nothing but his urgent necessity could exempt him from sin; 1 Sam. xxi. 3—7; Matt. xii. 4. It seems to have been intended to remind the Hebrews of their dependence on God for daily support; and also as an emblem of Jesus, the bread of life; John vi. 48.

SHIBBOLETH, Shib'-bo-leth, ear of corn.—A word by which the Gileadites tested an Ephraimite; Judg. xii. 6.

SHIBMAM, Shib'-mah.—A city of Reuben; Num. xxxii. 38.

SHIELD.—The principal piece of defensive armour among the ancients. It was made of strong thick leather. Thus the shield of Ajax was made of bull's hides, sevenfold thick. It was held on the left arm, to ward off blows. God is called a shield, as it is the symbol of strength and protection. Faith is likewise called a shield; Eph. vi. 16, because it derives strength from Christ for overcoming the temptations of Satan; Gen. xv. 1; Psa. v. 12; lxxxiv. 11; Eph. vi. 16.

SHIGGAION, Shig'-gay'-on, a song of trouble.—The title of Psalm 7, and found in Hab. iii. 1. The Hebrew signifies to stay, or wander; some conjecture that it denotes the song to be various, running from one kind of tune into another, and expressive of great anguish of heart. Others suppose it to be an instrument of music.

SHIHON, Shy'-on.—A city of Palestine; Josh. xix. 19.

SHILHIM, Shil'-him.—A city of Judah; Josh. xv. 32.

SHILLEM, Shil'-lem.—A son of Naphtali; Gen. xlvii. 24; chief of the Shillemites; Num. xxvi. 49.

SHILOAH, Shy-lo'-ah, sent, dart, branch.—A small brook running at the foot of Mount Zion; Isa. viii. 6.

SHILOH Shy'-loh, sent forth, peace, abundance.—1. One of the names of Jesus Christ. The Great Deliverer; he that frees from the law, sin, and death; Gen. xlix. 10. It denotes the Redeemer, the author of our happiness, and our sole peace-maker with God.

2. SHILOH, a famous city of the tribe of Ephraim, about twenty-five miles north of Jerusalem. Here Joshua fixed the tabernacle of God; and here it continued 310 years.

SHILONI, Shy-lo'-ny.—One of the captivity chosen to dwell at Jerusalem; Neh. xi. 5.

SHIMEAH, Shim'-e-ah, that hears, that obeys.—David's brother; 2 Sam. xiii. 32.

SHIMEI, Shim'-me-i, that hears, name of the heap.—The son of Gera, a kinsman of king Saul; 2 Sam. xvi. 5, 6, &c.—David's vine keeper; 1 Chr. xxvii. 27.—A Levite; Ezra x. 23.

SHIMEL.—From David's advice to Solomon respecting Shimei, it has been asserted that the Scriptures inculcate assassination; 1 Kings ii. 8, 9, 36—46. With respect to Shimei, David had fulfilled his promise. He had only engaged that he would not put him to death on the day when Abishai had requested permission to do it (compare 2 Sam. xix. 23, with 1 Kings ii. 8,) and he left it to Solomon to treat with him as he thought just, in reference to his future conduct. David knew that he was Shimei still, and would so act as to bring upon himself due punishment. Solomon accordingly sent for Shimei, and commanded him to reside in Jerusalem, and not to depart thence, under pain of death, on the day when he should pass over the brook Kishon, a condition to which Shimei thankfully acceded; 1 Kings ii. 37, 38. Three years afterwards, the latter transgressed this convention, and went to Gath, (verse 40,) a suspicious quarter, in consequence of which Solomon, after charging him with the violation of his oath, commanded him to be put to death, (41—46.)

SHIMMA, Shim'-mah.—Brother of David; 1 Chr. ii. 13.

SHIMON, Shy'-mon. — Father of Ammon; 1 Chr. iv. 20.

SHIMRI, Shim'-ry. — A son of Shemaiah, of the posterity of Simeon; 1 Chron. iv. 37.

SHIMRITH, Shim'-rith.—A Moabish woman; 2 Chr. xxiv. 26.

SHIMSHAI, Shim'-shay, my sun. A scribe who wrote a letter against Jerusalem; See Ezra iv. 8.

SHINAB, Shy'-nab. — King of Admah; Gen. xiv. 2.

SHINAR, Shy'-nar, watching of him that sleeps.—A province of Babylonia, where they attempted to build the tower of Babel; Gen. xi. 2; x. 10.

SHINE.—The manifested favour and glory of God; Ps. lxxx. 1. "Shine forth"—restore thy worship; and give us evidences of thy presence now, as our fathers had under the first tabernacle, and afterwards in the temple built by Solomon. "Make thy face to shine upon thy servant;" Psa. xxxi. 16. only let me know that thou art reconciled to me, and pleased with me; and then come what will, all must be well. See Psa. lxxvii. 1, and cxix. 135. To be illuminated; Isa. lx. 1. "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." To be in an unclouded state, as the sun in the firmament of heaven; Job xi. 17. "Thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning." The way of the wicked is gloomy, dark, and dangerous; that of the righteous is open, luminous, and instructive; See Prov. iv. 18; Matt. v. 16; Phil. ii. 15.

SHINING of a flaming fire by night; for upon all the glory shall be a defence; Isa. iv. 5. This is a manifest allusion to the pillar of cloud and also of fire, which attended the Israelites in their passage out of Egypt, and to the glory that rested on the tabernacle. This defence is a similitude taken from the outside cover of rams' skins and badgers' skins that were upon the curtains of the tabernacle; as if every dwelling of Mount Zion, and every assembly, were as dear to God as that tabernacle was.

SHIP.—A general name for all large sailing vessels. "There go the ships;" Psa. civ. 26. The tribes of Zebulon and Dan early engaged in commerce; Gen. xlix. 13; Judg. v. 17. Solomon, then Jehoshaphat, had a considerable trade by sea; 1 Kings x. 22. The Trojans were powerful at sea; but the Tyrians and Zidonians were more so; and then the Carthaginians, and the Greeks. After the Saracens had ruined the Grecian commerce, the Venetians and Genoese became powerful in that way. About 330 years ago, the Spaniards and Portuguese became the most commercial people. Then the Dutch took the lead; but now the English do more business by sea than any other nation.

SHIPWRECK, 1 Tim. 1. 19.

SHIPMITE, Shif'-mite.—From SHIPHI; 1 Chr. xxvii. 27.

SHIPATAN, Shif'-tan.—Father of Kemuel; Num. xxxiv. 24.

SHISHAK, Shy'-shak, present of the bag, of the pot, of the thigh.—A powerful king of Egypt, who declared war against Rehoboam; 2 Chron. xii. 2, 3, &c. Probably he was the Sesostri of history. He was one of the greatest warriors of antiquity. His invasion of Jerusalem is confirmed by recent discoveries in Egypt. A column found in the ruins of Thebes, has upon it a representation of Shishak dragging thirty or forty vanquished nations before his Egyptian gods. The learned interpret one of the figures to be the Jewish nation, and the hieroglyphic to be YOOD, MELCHI, the kingdom of Judah. Even the names of the fenced cities; 2 Chron. xii. 4; are contained in the inscriptions, as having been taken by Shishak. Dr. Cumming says, "Among the captives, one engraving I have seen represents Rehoboam, and under the figure of Rehoboam, one of the captives, with a Jewish face so marked as to be ultra-Jewish, is written in hieroglyphics, YEHUDA MELEK, the king of Judah. And this was written 3000 years ago, as confirmatory of the record in 2 Chron. xii. and of the Bible itself.

SHITTAH, Shit'-tah, that turns away, scourges.—A tree, perhaps the box; Isa. xli. 19.

SHITTIM, Shit'-tim, that turns away.—A district of Moab, which gave name to a valuable wood, supposed to be the black acacia, very hard and incorruptible; Num. xxv. 1.

SHITTIM WOOD was used in building the tabernacle, and in making the sacred utensils, &c. Supposed to be the Acacia vera which grows in all the deserts, from the northern part of Arabia to the extremity of Ethiopia. It is about the size of a mulberry-tree, the bark of a greyish black; wood pale yellow, and very hard; branches thorny; flowers, sometimes white, but generally yellow, and the fruit, which resembles a bean, contained in pods, like the lupin. Both the wood and the flowers have a very pleasant smell. From this tree is obtained the gum Arabic, by making a gash with an axe. Its leaves are almost the only food for camels while travelling in the great deserts.

SHOBAB, Sho'-bab, returned, turned back.—One of the sons of David; 2 Sam. v. 14.

SHOBACH, Sho'-bak, bonds, captivity; Syriac, a dove-house.—A Syrian general, defeated by David; 2 Sam. x. 16—19.

SHOBAL, Sho'-bal.—A son of Caleb; 1 Chron. ii. 50.

SHOBEK, Sho'-bek.—A prince; Neh. x. 24.

SHOBI, Sho'-by, returned.—A friend of David; 2 Sam. xvii. 27.

SHOCHOH, Sho'-koh, defence.—A city; 1 Sam. xvii. 1.

SHOE.—A covering for the feet, made of leather, linen, wood, &c. Among the Hebrews, slaves went barefoot; others generally had their feet and legs covered when they went abroad; and women of quality wore shoes or gaiters of very costly texture. Songs vii. 1; Ezek. xvi. 10. Shoes were ordinarily of no great value; so that a pair of shoes denotes persons treated with contempt and cruelty; Amos ii. 6. Soldiers often wore shoes of iron and brass; and to this day, many of the eastern people wear iron plates on the heels and the fore-sole of their shoes. The Hebrews' eating of the first passover with their shoes on, loins girded, and staffs in their hand, imported that they were immediately to begin their journey; Ex. xii. 11. Putting off the shoes, imported reverence, and was done in the presence of God, or on entering the mansion of a superior; Ex. iii. 5; Josh. v. 15. Want of shoes denoted mourning, debasement, and slavery; 2 Sam. xv. 30; Ezek. xxiv. 17; Isa. xx. 2, 4. The plucking off a shoe and giving it to another, imported resignation of right to him; Ruth iv. 7.

SHOE, 'casting out my shoe;' Ps. lx. 8. It was the office of the slaves to take care of their master's sandals. "They shall serve me like slaves, taking care of my sandals when put off;" (Boothroyd) denoting a state of servitude. The sense of verses 7 & 8, appears to be this; "Gilead and Manasseh have submitted unto me; Ephraim furnishes me with valiant men; and Judah with men of prudence and wisdom. I will reduce the Moabites to servitude; I will triumph over the Edomites, and make them slaves; and the Philistines shall add to my triumph."

SHOES, 'I am not worthy to bear;' Matt. iii. 11. Denoting great humility, as the meanest slaves untied the shoes or sandals, and sometimes carried them after their masters. It was regarded as the meanest office.

SHOE'S LATCHET; John i. 27. The latchet of the sandal was the string or thong by which they fastened it. It was the office of a servant to unloose them. John therefore meant that he was unworthy to perform the lowest office for the Messiah.

SHOMER, Sho'-mer.—The father of Jehozabad, who murdered Joash; 2 Kings xii. 21.

SHOOT. To cast arrows and darts; 2 Kings xiii. 17; xix. 32; 2 Chron. xxvi. 15. The righteous judgments of God; Ps. lxxiv. 7.

SHOPHACH, Sho'-fak.—A captain of the Syrian host, slain by David; 1 Chron. xix. 18.

SHOPHAN, Sho'-fan.—A city of Gad; Num. xxxii. 35.

SHORT. A small space of time, Job 20. 5; 1 Cor. 7. 29; 1 Thess. 2. 17.—Weakness, inability, Num. 11. 23; Is. 50. 2; 69. 1. Num. 11. 23. Lord's hand waxed s. Ps. 89. 47. remember how s. my time is Rom. 3. 23. come s. of glory of God Ps. 102. 23. he s. my days. 89. 45. Is. 50. 2. is my hand s. 59. 1. Matt. 24. 22. except days be s. Prov. 10. 27.

SHOSHANNIM, Sho'-shan-nim, lilies of the testimony.—A word in the titles of Psalms xlv. lx. and lxxx. probably a musical instrument of six strings.

SHOULDER, 'The government shall be upon his shoulder;' Is. ix. 6. That is, the ensign of government, or the like, which was borne upon or hung from the shoulder. The keys of the ancients were sometimes made of brass, but more generally of wood, and being shaped like a reap-hook, would easily lodge upon the shoulder.

SHOULDERS, 'daughters carried upon their shoulders;' Isa. xlix. 22. In the east, thousands of parents so carry their children.

SHOUT. The voice of an enemy in war, Jer. 50. 15; 51. 14.—The voice of lamentation; Lam. 3. 8.—Of impious flattery, Acts 12. 22.—Of joy, Ec. 32. 18. Num. 23. 21; Is. 12. 6, & 42. 11, & 44. 23; Zeph. 3. 14; Zech. 9. 9.

Ps. 47. 5. God is gone up with a s.
1 Thess. 4. 16. Lord descend with s.

SHOW, to make public exhibition; Col. ii. 15; to attract popular notice; Gal. vi. 12; Luke xx. 47; a shadowy image; Ps. xxxix. 6; to give evidence; Eph. ii. 7; to make manifest by a good and useful life, the transforming grace of God; 1 Pet. ii. 9.

SHRINES, 'silver shrines;' Acts xix. 24. Literally, 'silver temples of Diana,' that is, silver models, or representations in miniature, of the temple of Diana, and probably containing a silver image of the goddess.

SHUA and SHUAH, Shu'-ah, pit, crying, humiliation.—Brother of Caleb; 1 Chron. iv. 11.—Daughter of Heber; 1 Chron. vii. 32.—The son of Abraham; Gen. xxv. 2.—See also, Gen. xxxviii. 1, &c.

SHUAL, Shu'-al, fox, hand, fist, traces.—Supposed to be a country in the land of Israel; 1 Sam. xiii. 17.

SHUBAEL, Shu'-ba-el.—Son of Amram; 1 Chron. xxiv. 20.

SHUHAM, Shu'-ham.—A descendant of Dan; Num. xxvi. 42.

SHUITE, Shu'-hite.—Bildad, the Shuite, was probably a descendant of Shuah, son of Abraham; Job ii. 11.

SHULAMITE, Shu'-lam-ite, peaceable one, perfect.—A name applied to the church, taken from the name of Solomon's wife; Songs vi. 13.

SHUMATHITES, Shum'-mathites.—One of the six families that came out of Kirjath-jearim; 1 Chron. ii. 53.

SHUNAMMITE, Shu'-nam-mite.—A woman of Shunem. She was a pious and generous female, and along with her husband, ministered to the comfort of Elisha; Josh. xix. 18; 2 Kings iv. 12.—Also a native of Shunem, Abishag; 1 Kings i. 2.

SHUNEM, Shu'-nem, their change.—A city of the tribe of Issachar, five miles south of Tabor; Josh. xix. 18.

SHUNITES, Shu'-nites.—Posterity of Shuni; Num. xxvi. 15.

SHUPHAM, Shu'-fam.—A prince; Num. xxvi. 39.

SHUR, Shur, wall, ox.—A city of Arabia Petraea, which gave name to the desert of Sur in the same country.—Also a desert; Gen. xvi. 7; Ex. xv. 22.

SHUSHAN, Shu'-shan, lily, rose, joy.—On the banks of the river Ulai, in Persia. It is said to have been built by Memnon, before the Trojan war. It was the winter residence of the Persian kings from the time of Cyrus, being sheltered by a high ridge of mountains from the north-east wind; but in the summer, it was so intensely hot as to be scarcely habitable. Here Daniel had his vision of the ram and he-goat; Daniel viii.

The walls of Shushan were upwards of thirteen miles in circumference. It is now in ruins, which extend twelve miles from the one extremity to the other. The mounds are abundant. One is a mile in circumference, another two miles, about 100 feet high. They are formed of clay, pieces of tile, with layers of brick and mortar. Large blocks of marble, covered with hieroglyphics, are frequently discovered by the Arabs when digging in search of hidden treasure. At the foot of one of these mounds, or pyramids, stands the tomb of the prophet Daniel.

SHUSHAN-EDUTH, Shu-shan'-e-duth.—An instrument of six strings; Ps. vi., title.

SHUT. To withhold; 1 John iii. 17.—To cover; Ps. lxxix. 15.—To be desolate; Isa. xxiv. 10.—To keep secret; Dan. viii. 26.—To be kept as in a strong hold; Gal. iii. 23; "shut up unto the faith;" that is, unto the religion of the Lord Jesus, which should afterwards be revealed. The unalterable state of saints and sinners; Matt. xxv. 10: "The door was shut."—Dreadful words to the wicked! no hope remains. Death shuts the door of mercy; and after death despair is their only portion. The hope of future good is the balm of life; where that is not, there is despair; where despair is, there is hell.

SHUT, 'then came Jesus, the doors being shut and stood in the midst;' John xx. 26. Not through the door, but by his power he opened the door.

SHUT up or left, Dent. 32. 36.

Matt. 23. 13. s. up kingdom of heaven

Gal. 3. 23. s. up to the faith

Rev. 3. 7. he openeth and no man s. Is.

22. 22.

SHUTHALITES, Shu'-thal-ites.—Children of Shuthelah.

SHUTHELAH, Shu'-the-lah, plant, verdure, moist pot.—A son of Ephraim; Num. xxvi. 35.

SIA, Sy'-a.—A returned captive; Ezra ii. 44.

SIBBECHAI, Sib'-be-ka-i.—David's valiant man who slew the giant Saph; 2 Sam. xxi. 18; 1 Chron. xx. 4.

SIBBOLETH, Sib'-bo-leth, burden.—See SHIBBOLETH.

SIBMAH, Sib'-mah, conversion, captivity, old age, rest.—A city of Reuben, near Heshbon; Isa. xvi. 8.

SIBRAIM, Sib'-ray-im.—A city of Canaan, between Hamath and Damascus; Ezek. xlvii. 16.

SICHAR, Sy'-kar.—See SHECHEM.

SICHEM, Sy'-kem.—See SHECHEM.

SICK. Bodily disease; 1 Sam. xxx. 13; Luke vii. 10.—A sense of sin; Matt. ix. 12. "They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

SICK of love, Songs 2. 5, & 5. 8.

SIDDIM, Sid'-dim.—The Vale of Siddim is the spot upon which stood the five cities of the plain—Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Bela, which were destroyed by fire from heaven on account of the impiety of the inhabitants. It is evident from the description of this valley, as well as from Lot's choosing it for the pasturage of his cattle, that it was a delightful and fruitful spot; Gen. xiii. 10, 11.

SIDON, Sy'-don, hunting, fishing, venison.—Sidon was the capital of the Phœnicians, founded soon after the deluge, by Sidon, the son of Canaan; Gen. x. 15, 19. Sidon lay at the extreme north-west of Canaan. The Sidonians built ships, and were the founders of maritime commerce. They were the first manufacturers of glass. Sidon still subsists as a town, and carries on some traffic with the neighbouring coasts. It is now called Saide, or Seide. The inhabitants are estimated at 15,000, chiefly occupied in spinning cotton, which, with silk, and boots, shoes, and slippers of morocco leather, form the principal articles of their trade. Fragments of columns and remains of the ancient city may still be discovered.

SIFT, Is. 30. 23; Amos 9. 9; Luke 22. 31.

SIGHT, put for the sense of seeing, Mark x. 51; saving knowledge, Luke iv. 18; a spectacle, Luke xxiii. 48; a vision, Ex. iii. 3; fearful appearances, Luke xxi. 11; 2 Cor. v. 7.

SIGHT 'to the blind;' Luke iv. 18. Thought to allude to the wretched state of those prisoners, who according to the inhuman custom, still prevalent in the East, had their eyes put out.

SIGN.—That which expresses or represents another thing; as the rainbow which was appointed to be a sign or token of the covenant; Gen. ix. 12, 13; Ex. iv. 17. Also circumcision; Gen. xvii. 11; Rom. iv. 11; xv. 19. A manifestation of miraculous power; Acts ii. 22. Something indicating some future wonderful event; Luke xxi. 11. A type or prediction; Isa. viii. 18.

SIGN of FIRE, 'set up a sign of fire in Beth-haccerim;' Jer. vi. 1. Kimchi observes, that the word signifies a high tower, for the keepers of the vines to watch it. If it were so, it was a very proper place to set up the sign of fire in, to give notice to all the surrounding country. It was usual with the Persians, Grecians, and Romans, to signify in the night by signs of fire, and by burning torches, either the approach of an enemy, or succour from friends. The former was done by shaking and moving their torches; the latter by holding them still.

SIGNET.—A seal, often set on a ring; Gen. xxxviii. 18; Ex. xxviii. 11, 21, 36; Dan. vi. 17; Hag. ii. 23.

SIHON, Sy'-hon, rooting out, conclusion.—A king of the Amorites, who put himself at the head of his army to oppose the Hebrews, on their way from Egypt to Canaan. He was slain and his army routed; Num. xxi. 21.

SIHOR, Sy'-hor, black, trouble, early in the morn.—A small river in the southern part of Canaan. Some think it a name for the Nile. A rivulet called Sihor-Libnath flowed from mount Carmel; Josh. xiii. 3; xix. 26.

SILAS, Sy'-las, considering, marking.—The name is a contraction of Silvanus. An eminent Christian minister, who accompanied Paul in visiting the churches of Syria and Cilicia. He was a pious and distinguished minister of the gospel; called one of the "chief men among the brethren." Paul made choice of Silas to accompany him in his travels, when he visited the churches of Syria and Cilicia; Acts xvi. 29; 2 Cor. i. 19.

SILENCE.—Utter destruction; Is. xv. 1.—Great calamities; Jer. viii. 14. A state of death; Ps. xciv. 17; cxv. 17.

SILENCE in Heaven; Rev. viii. 1. Expressive of the deep impression which previous scenes had made on the heavenly hosts—especially the wonders of redeeming love. They were silent, lost in wonder, admiration, and silent praise. Their silence also denotes that they were expecting with the deepest reverence, the stupendous things which the Divine Majesty would yet make known.

SILENCE, Ps. 31. 18, & 32. 3, & 35. 22, & 60. 3, 21, & 83. 1, & 94. 17; Jer. 8. 14; Amos 6. 13, & 8. 3; 1 Cor. 14. 34; 1 Tim. 2. 11, 12; 1 Pet. 2. 15; Rev. 8. 1.

SILENT, in darkness, 1 Sam. 2. 9. Ps. 28. 1. be not s. to me, 30. 12. Zech. 2. 13. be s. all flesh before SILK, is not mentioned in the Bible, except in Ezek. xvi. 10, 13. The original word means to draw out gently; and as there is no historical evidence that silk was known in the days of Ezekiel, it might be better to translate the word, very fine linen; the threads of which are drawn out with great care in spinning.

SILLY, Job 5. 2; 2 Tim. 3. 6.

SILOA, Sil'-o-ah, or Sy-lo'-ah.—The same as SHILOAH.

SILOAM, Sy-lo'-am.—A fountain, or pool of water, south-east of Jerusalem, at the foot of Mount Zion. Its waters were received into two large pools; and what overflowed from the lower one passed into the brook Kidron. The upper pool was sometimes called the "King's pool," probably because his gardens were watered from it. Near this stood the tower of which Christ speaks; Luke xiii. 4; John ix. 7; Go wash in the pool of Siloam, &c.

SILOE, Sil'-o-e, or Sy-lo'-e.—The same as SILOA.

SILVANUS, Sil-vay'-nus, one who loves the woods.—A faithful preacher whom Paul associates with him in the Epistle to the Thessalonians; ch. i. 1.

SILVER, 'who shall not regard silver,' &c. Isa. xiii. 17. The rage and cruelty of the Modes would lead them to despise wealth, so that they would rather murder their prisoners, than spare them for the ransoms.

SILVER CORD; Eccl. xii. 6, the spinal marrow.

SIMEON, Sim'-e-on, that hears or obeys.—The son of Jacob and Leah; Gen. xxix. 33; born A. M. 2253.—He was head of a tribe, who were, according to the Divine prediction, scattered in Israel. He was brother to Dinah by the same mother, and was active in resenting the insult that was done her by the son of Hamor. Jacob on his death-bed showed his indignation against the conduct of Simeon in this instance. See Gen. xlix. 5. This tribe, when it came out of Egypt, consisted of 59,300 fighting men; Num. i. 23, but of the generation that entered the promised land, they numbered only 22,200; Num. xxvi. 14, 15.

SIMEON.—An aged saint who lived at Jerusalem, full of the Holy Spirit, and waiting for the redemption of Israel; Luke ii. 25. It had been revealed to him that he should not taste of death till he had seen the Messiah. Visiting the temple he did see him. Ascertaining in him, by a supernatural impulse, the long expected deliverer, he took the child up in his arms, gave thanks to God who had thus performed the mercy promised unto the fathers by the prophets, and said, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel;" Luke ii. 26—32. Having said this, he returned the infant to its mother, and added, "Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel, and for a sign which shall be spoken against; yea, a sword shall pierce through thine own soul also, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed," verses 33, 34.

SIMEON.—A Christian minister of Antioch; Acts xiii. 1.

SIMILITUDE.—Likeness, form, or figure; Num. xii. 8; Ps. cxliv. 12.

SIMON, Sy'-mon, that hears or obeys.

—There were several of this name.

(1) Simon Peter, a distinguished disciple of our Lord. The celibacy of the clergy finds no example in his case, as we know that he had a wife; Mark i. 29, 30.—(2) The Cyrenian, who is thought to be the same as Niger, the teacher at Antioch; Matt. xxvii. 32. It is said that he died a martyr for the faith.—(3) SIMON ZELOTES, or the Canaanite, one of Christ's apostles. He was called Zelotes, because he had been one of those Galileans who refused to pay tribute to the Romans. The term Canaanite is applied to him, because he was born in Cana of Galilee, or more probably from the Hebrew word Kanaim, synonymous to the Greek word Zelotes. Some suppose that he preached the gospel in Egypt, Cyrenaica, Lybia, and Mauritania, if not also in Britain. Others affirm that he was murdered at Lunir, in Persia, along with Jude; Mat. x. 4.—(4) SIMON, the brother or cousin of our Saviour, and the son of Cleophas; Mat. xiii. 55.—(5) SIMON, the Pharisee, who invited Christ to an entertainment; took offence at his allowing Mary Magdalene to anoint him. Jesus, by the parable of the two debtors, convicted him of his fault; Luke vii. 36—50.—(6) SIMON MAGUS, from whom Simony had its name. Simony means making merchandise of ecclesiastical livings, &c. Acts viii. 18.—(7) Also Simon, a tanner, Acts ix. 43; and Simon the father of Judas Iscariot; John xii. 4, &c.

SIMON MAGUS, 'Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee;' Acts viii. 20. This is not an imprecation, but a strong way of admonishing Simon of his danger, and of expressing how much rather the apostle would see the greatest sum of money lost and cast away, than receive any part of it on such shameful terms.

SIMOOM.—The pestilential wind or blast, by the Arabs termed the Sam-wind; by the Persians, Samoun; by the Turks, Simoom, or Samiel, is noticed in Jer. iv. 11. Its effects are most dreadful; and the most awful calamity with which any of the fair regions of the East are visited. It is alluded to in Ps. ciii. 15, 16, and 2 Kings xix. 7, 26, 35.

SIMPLE, harmless, free from deceit. To be "simple concerning evil," is to have little knowledge of the art of committing it; Rom. xvi. 19. The "simplicity that is in Christ," is either the plain self-consistent truth of the gospel, or an unfeigned faith in this truth; 2 Cor. xi. 3.

SIMPLE, Prov. 1. 4, 22, 32, & 7. 7, & 8.

5, & 9. 4, 13, & 19. 25, & 21. 11.

SIN, Sin, bush.—A wilderness south of the Holy Land, in Arabia Petraea. It lies between Elim and Sinai. Dr. Shaw and his companions traversed these plains in nine hours. Before the Israelites came into this desert, they had a previous encampment by the Red Sea; Num. xxxiii. 10, 11. (2) SIN is the name of a town in Egypt; Ezek. xxx. 15, 16; Ex. xvi. 1; xvii. 1.

SIN is any opposition to God's will, whether it be in doing what he has forbidden, or omitting to do what he has commanded. "All unrighteousness is sin;" 1 John v. 17. The same apostle defines sin as "the transgression of the law;" 1 John iii. 4. The spirit of the law, as well as of the gospel, is, that "we should love God with all our powers, and our neighbour as ourselves." All disobedience is contrary to love; therefore sin is the violation of the precept, whether the act refer immediately to God, or to our neighbour.

SIN, Original.—Is that whereby our whole nature is defiled, and rendered contrary to the nature and law of God; Psa. li. 5; and hence the inward part is said to be very wickedness; that is, the heart is enmity against God; Psa. v. 9. This is the sin that dwells in us; Rom. vii. 17, 20, and works in us all manner of concupiscence; Rom. vii. 8, 23.

SIN, sometimes means a sin-offering; Gen. iv. 7; 2 Cor. v. 21; Heb. ix. 28; Hosea iv. 8.

SIN, 'not had sin,' John xv. 22. A Hebraism, meaning, 'so much sin.'

SIN, 'he hath made him to be sin for us, [even him] who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him; 2 Cor. v. 21. In Lev. iv. 21; xvi. 5; and Psa. xl. 6; the word used for sin, is also used for a sin-offering; and in this sense the first occurrence of the word in this verse must be understood. The latter clause is a very strong phrase, to signify our being accepted of God, as perfectly righteous, when considered as by faith united to Him who was perfectly so. There is an evident and beautiful contrast between Christ being made sin, and our being made righteousness; that is, we are treated as perfectly righteous, as he was treated as guilty.

SIN. 'If we sin wilfully, &c.—there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin;' Heb. x. 26. The sin here mentioned, is a total and final apostacy, when men, with a full and fixed resolution, despise and resist the Spirit; and renounce the gospel of salvation; and all this after they have known and professed the Christian religion, and continue to do so obstinately and maliciously. This is the great transgression: the apostle seems to refer to the law concerning presumptuous sinners; Num. xv. 30, 31. They were to be cut off.

SINS as scarlet; Isa. i. 18. This was the favourite colour of the ancient heathen prostitutes; Jer. iv. 30. To discharge this strong colour, which was produced, like cochineal, from a worm or insect, was then impossible to human art or power; but by the free grace of God, sins of the deepest dye can be obliterated. There appears also to be an allusion to the custom of fastening a piece of scarlet cloth to the horns of the scape-goat; Psa. li. 7; Rev. vii. 14; Lev. xvi. 20. The scarlet cloth was significant of the deep stain of sin.—'Though your sins have been as scarlet and crimson, a deep dye, a double dye, first in the wool of original corruption, and afterwards in the many threads of actual transgression; though you have been often dipped, by your many backslidings into sin, and though you have long lay soaking in it, as the cloth may do in the scarlet dye, yet pardoning mercy will thoroughly discharge the stain.'

SIN-OFFERING.—The Sin-offering and the Trespass-Offering are described in Lev. iv. and v; but the exact difference between the transgressions to which they have reference is very obscure. It seems probable that the sin-offering was for the violation of prohibitory statutes; and the trespass offering was for neglect of imperative statutes. It was not so entirely consumed by fire as the burnt-offering. The victim was brought to the door of the tabernacle; the offender put his hand upon its head, confessed his sins, and supplicated pardon, saying, 'I beseech thee, O Lord; I have sinned, I have trespassed, I have rebelled; but now I repent, and let THIS' (that is, his sacrifice) 'be my expiation.' The animal was then slain, and reconciliation enjoyed with God. It is thus we confess our sins, in an humble dependence upon the atonement of Jesus Christ, and look for salvation through his precious blood. Restitution, so often mentioned in Scripture, formed an indispensable part of the duty of him that presented these offerings. If he held his neighbour's property unjustly, he not only now restored it, but added a fifth part; Num. v. 5, 8. Ex. xxii. 3, 8.

SINAI, Sy'-nay, or Sy'-nay-i, bush; in Syriac, enmity.—A celebrated mountain of Arabia Petraea, on which God gave the law to Moses. It consists of a prodigious pile of mountains, comprehending many peaks, and extending 30 or 40 miles in diameter. There are two lofty peaks in the range, the more elevated of which, 8000 feet high, is supposed to be Mount Sinai, and the other 6000 feet high, is supposed to be Horeb; Exod. xix. 11; Deut. xxxiii. 2; Judges v. 5; Psa. lxxviii. 8, 17. From the law being mentioned in Exodus, as delivered on Mount Sinai, and Mount Horeb in Deuteronomy, it has been insinuated, that these two books are unworthy of credit; some injudicious persons having represented them in maps as two distinct mountains. Sinai and Horeb are two different peaks of one and the same range of mountains; and hence it is, that what in one passage of Scripture is related as having been done at Horeb, is in another place said to have been done at Sinai, or in the wilderness of Sinai.

SINCERE.—To be free from hypocrisy or dissimulation. It means pureness of mind, without double-dealing. The word is derived from the Latin sincerus, composed of sine, without, and cera, wax; or pure honey; 1 Cor. v. 8. The Greek word eilikrines, sincerity, means evident purity as held up in the light of the sun just as we examine water; 2 Cor. i. 12.

SING, SINGING, an ordinance of divine worship, in which we express our joy in God, and gratitude for his mercies. It has always been a branch both of natural and revealed religion, in all ages and periods of time. The Gospel not only authorises it by example, Matt. xxvi. 30; but expressly enjoins it; Eph. v. 19; Col. iii. 16. President Edwards observes that "as it is the command of God that all should sing, so all should make a conscience of learning to sing; as it is a duty that cannot be decently performed without learning. Those, therefore (where there is no natural inability), who neglect to learn to sing, live in sin, as they neglect what is necessary in order to their attending one of the ordinances of GOD'S worship."

Singing was by the early Christians usually performed in a standing posture. The mode of pronunciation was clear and intelligible, not greatly varying from a recitative tone. Those modern tunes which almost preclude intelligible enunciation, tend to defeat the object of the ordinance. Jewish hymns were accompanied with different musical instruments.

SING ALOUD, 'upon their beds,' Psa. cxlix. 5. While conversing together on the divan or couches on which they ordinarily reclined, let them sing praises.

SINIM, Si'-nim, the south country.—The name of Pelusium, a city in Egypt; Isa. xlix. 12.

SINITE, Sin'-ite.—The race of Canaan's eighth son; Gen. x. 17.

SINK, Psa. 69. 2, 14; Luke 9. 44.

SION, Sy'-on, noise, tumult.—A name of Mount Hermon; Deut. iv. 48.

SION.—See Zion.

SIPHMOTH, Siff'-moth.—A place to which David sent spoil; 1 Sam. xxx. 28.

SIRION, Sir'-re-on, a breast plate.—The north east part of Lebanon; Psa. xxix. 6.

SISAMAI, Sis-am'-a-i.—1 Chron. ii. 40.

SISERA, Sis'-e-ra, sees a horse or swallow.—The general of Jabin, king of Hazor, slain by Jael; Jude iv. 2.

SISERA, 'stars in their courses fought against Sisera;' Judges v. 20. This has been stigmatized as a piece of Jewish rant and hyperbole.—A tempest meeting the enemy in the face discomfited them; and the torrent Kishon (so suddenly swelled by the rain, (which common opinion ascribed to the PLANETS,) as to sweep away the greater part of Sisera's army in their precipitate flight. The whole is very poetical, though infidels may sneer; their cavils are characterized by want of taste, and wilful ignorance and malignity of disposition.

SISTER often denotes, in Habrew, a near female relation. It is used also for a sister by the same father only, or by the same mother. Thus Sarah is called sister to Abraham, though probably she was only his niece. Also, the cousins of Jesus Christ are called his brethren and sisters; Matt. xiii. 55, 56; Mark vi. 3; Sometimes it denotes resemblance of character and condition; Jer. iii. 8, 10; Ezek. xvi. 45; Matt. xii. 50.

SIT, SITTING.—Reigning, ruling, and judging; Judg. v. 10. (1.) To "sit upon the earth or dust;" Isa. iii. 26; xlvii. 1; Lam. ii. 10; Ezek. xxvi. 16, or on a dunghill, signifies to be in extreme misery. (2.) "To sit in darkness;" Psa. cvii. 10; Isa. xlii. 7, is to be in prison and slavery. (3.) To "sit as a widow;" Isa. xlvii. 8, is to mourn as a widow. The common way of sitting in the east, is upon the ground, or floor, with the legs crossed.

The people of better condition have the floors of their chambers, or divans, covered with carpets for this purpose; and round the chamber broad couches, raised a little above the floor, spread with mattresses handsomely covered, which are called sofas. Sitting down means exaltation, or sitting on a chair of state or throne; for which a footstool was necessary. "Chairs," says Sir John Chardin, "are never used in Persia, but at the coronation of their kings. The king is seated on a chair of gold set with jewels, three feet high. The chairs are always so high, as to make a footstool necessary. And this proves the propriety of the scriptures, which always join the footstool to the throne;" Isa. lxvi. 1; Psa. cx. 1. Besides the six steps to Solomon's throne, there was a footstool of gold fastened to the seat; 2 Chron. ix. 18, which would otherwise have been too high for the king to reach, or to sit on conveniently.

SIT down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. This alludes to a nuptial banquet; Matt. viii. 11.

SIT down 'in the dust;' Jer. xiii. 18; 'on the ground;' Isa. xlvi. 1. Sitting was a posture of humiliation under circumstances of affliction and distress; Judg. xx. 26; Job ii. 8, 13; Isa. iii. 26.

SIT. 'How doth the city sit solitary;' Lam. i. 1. There were numerous medals struck in honour of the event of Titus's destruction of Jerusalem; one very rare coin is now in the British Museum. It represents the conquered country as a desolate female sitting under a tree, and affords an extraordinary fulfilment of Isaiah's prediction; ch. iii. 26, delivered at least eight hundred years before, as well as a striking illustration of the above passage.

SITTING in the midst of the doctors; Luke ii. 46. The representation of Christ disputing with the doctors, as it has been called, in words and pictures, is an injury to the character of our blessed Redeemer. Not one word is said of his disputing, but only of his asking some questions, and answering others, which was a very usual thing in those assemblies; and, indeed, the very end of them. All was, no doubt, conducted with the utmost modesty and decorum; and if he were, with others, at the feet of these teachers, (where learners generally sat; Luke x. 39; and Acts xxii. 3,) he might be said to be in the midst of them, as they sat on benches of a semi-circular form, raised above their auditors and disciples.

SITNAH, Sit'-nah. — A well in Gerar; Gen. xxvi. 21.

SIVAN, Sy'-van. — The Babylonish name of a Hebrew month, answering to May and June; Esth. viii. 9.

SITUATION pleasant; 2 Kings 2. 19;
Ps. 48. 2.

SIXTH HOUR. — "Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour;" Matt.

xxvii. 45.—“All the land does not mean all the world, but only the land of Judea. Beza translates the passage, “over the whole country.”

SKIN for skin; Job ii. 4. A proverbial expression, borrowed from the mode of transacting business in ancient times by exchange. Every one will give the skin, or animal, which it perhaps represents, which he valued much, for one of greater value, or more adapted to a particular purpose. But others consider the language to be figurative, and render the clause, “skin after skin.” They think that the sense is, that a man may bear to be stripped of all that he possesses, provided only that his life is safe. To strip off the skin still denotes in the Arabic to destroy a man's fortune.

SKIN for skin, Job 2. 4, & 10. 11, & 19.

26; Jer. 13. 23; Heb. 11. 37.

SKIP, Ps. 29. 6, & 114. 4; Songs 2. 8.

SKIRT.—It was an ancient custom for the bridegroom to spread the skirt of his garment over the bride; to signify his right to her, his authority over her; Ezek. xvi. 8. Ruth said to Boaz, ‘Spread thy skirt over me, i. e. be my husband;’ Ruth iii. 9.

SKIRTS discovered, &c. Jer. xiii. 22. Alluding to the barbarous practice of wholly stripping female captives in war; Isa. iii. 17; xx. 4; xlvii. 3; iv. 21. The parts of the mantle that hung round the feet were denominated the skirts, which were sometimes large and flowing, as in the case of Saul, when David cut off the skirt of his robe; 1 Sam. xxiv. 4; xv. 27. The Jews carried and concealed articles in the skirts of their mantles. To this practice there is an allusion in Jer. ii. 34; Lam. i. 8, 9; Hag. ii. 12.

SKIRTS ‘of his garments;’ Psa. cxxxiii. 2. Properly the collar and not the skirts.

SKY.—The azure vault which surrounds the earth; Job xxxvii. 18. The signs of fair and foul weather were observed from the appearance of the sky; Matt. xvi. 2, 3, which some read thus:—

“When it is evening, ye say, ‘A calm!
For the sky is red!’

And in the morning, ‘To-day a tempest:
For the sky is red and lowering.’

Hypocrites! the face of the sky ye know how to discern:

But ye cannot (discern) the signs of the times.”

SLACK, to delay, 2 Kings 4. 24; to be indolent, Prov. 10. 4; Zeph. 3. 16. See Deut. 7. 10; Hab. 1. 4; 2 Pet. 3. 9.

SLAIN ‘a man;’ Gen. iv. 23. See Lamech.

SLANDER, the uttering of false accusations against another. It may consist in surmises or assertions; in imputing bad motives to correct actions; in partial accounts of our neighbour's conduct; in putting false constructions on words or conduct; in magnifying real faults; in imputing consequences to our neighbour's conduct, which do not, or may not follow; and in any way of speaking, designed to injure one's fame, safety, or welfare. Christians should guard against the appearance of this odious vice.

SLAVE.—One who has no property in himself, but is bought by another. Such are all mankind, whom Christ has redeemed from the slavery of sin; 1 Cor. vi. 20. See Deut. vii. 8; Isa. lxi. 1.

SLAVERY is of very remote antiquity. It existed before the flood, Gen. ix. 25. And when Moses gave his laws to the Jews, finding it already established, though he could not abolish it, yet he enacted various laws and regulations. The Israelites might have Hebrew servants or slaves, as well as alien-born persons, but these were to be circumcised, and were required to worship the only true God; Gen. xvii. 13—17. For the statutes of Moses concerning humane treatment towards slaves; see Lev. xxv. 39—53; Ex. xx. 10; xxi. 20, 21; Deut. v. 14; xii. 18; xvi. 11, and xxiii. 15, 16.

SLEEP.—Bodily repose; Esth. vi. 1; Ps. iv. 8.—Indolence; Prov. xix. 15.—Spiritual insensibility;

Eph. v. 14; Rom. xiii. 11.—The sleep of death; 1 Kings i. 21; Jer. li. 39; Dan. xii. 2; John xi. 11.

SLEEP on now; Matt. xxvi. 45, 46.—It seems strange that Jesus, after having twice roused his disciples and enjoined them to watch, should in these words tell them to repose, and then immediately after add, "Rise, let us be going." When he said, "Sleep on now," there was no indication of the enemy's approach. But it would appear that very soon there were indications of his coming, which caused the Redeemer to say quickly, "Rise, let us be going," &c.

Whitby paraphrases, "Sleep on now, and take your rest (for by your watching you can show no further kindness to or concern for me;) behold the hour," &c. So Grotius understood it. Some think that a censure, by sarcasm, is couched under the words;—thus,—“Since you have thus far failed to watch, sleep on the rest of the time, and take your rest, if you can.” Others, with the Vulgate, make the sentence interrogative;—“Do ye now sleep on, and take rest? Behold the hour, &c. This interpretation is confirmed by Luke xxii. 46.

SLEEP, 'for so he giveth his beloved sleep;' Psa. cxxvii. 2. Not well translated:—"It is in vain that you rise up early and sit up late, and eat your bread with anxious care, for he gives it to his beloved, sleeping, or while he sleeps;"—figuratively, in a state of mental repose,—the mind not corroded by worldly cares.

SLEEP deep, Gen. 2. 21, & 15. 12; 1 Sam. 28. 12; Job 4. 13; Ps. 76. 6; Prov. 19. 15; Is. 29. 10.

SLEIGHT of men. A mode of tricking and deceiving, Eph. 4. 14.

SLIDE, Deut. 32. 25; Ps. 26. 1, & 37. 31; Jer. 8. 5; Hos. 4. 16.

SLIGHTLY, Jer. 6. 14, & 8. 11.

SLIME, was used by the builders of Babel instead of mortar. It is called in the Septuagint version asphaltos; and is bitumen, or a kind of pitch. Great quantities of it are still found about Babylon. Herodotus, Dioscorides, Justin, Vitruvius, Strabo, Diodorus, Siculus, &c., state it was used as mortar.

The slime pits of Siddim, were mud holes or springs, out of which issued this liquid bitumen, or naphtha. It was used in the process of embalming, and was hence called "Gummi funerum," and "Mumia."

SLING.—

One of the earliest weapons invented by man. By long practice, wonderful skill is attained in the use of it, as was the case with the Benjaminites, who, "with either hand, could sling stones at an hair, and not miss;" Judg. xx. 16.

SLIP, "let them slip," that is, to run out, like water at the joints of a leaky vessel; Heb. ii. 1.

SMELL of his raiment—of a field;
Gen. xxvii. 27; Psa. xlv. 8. The latter passage refers to the perfuming of garments by the Easterns. Pliny says, that the land after a long drought, moistened by the rain, exhales a delicious odour, with which nothing can be compared.

SMITE “thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also;” Matt. v.
 39. This passage does not imply non-resistance when one is unjustly attacked; but the avoidance of revenge or retaliation. Turn to him the other cheek also. Rather than revenge, be willing to suffer patiently a repetition of the same injury.—Such language specially applied to persecuted Christians who were to differ from the resentful Jews, who ever fostered hatred and strife.

SMITE. ‘God shall smite thee;’
Acts xxiii. 3. This was not an imprecation, but a prediction, and was fulfilled about five years after, when Ananias was dragged from an aqueduct, where he had concealed himself from a tumult, and was assassinated.

SMITE ‘mine hands together;’
Ezek. xxi. 17, denotes indignation, and in the east was equal to an oath.

SMITE ‘him with the tongue;’ Jer.
 xviii. 18, or ‘on the tongue;’ falsehood being still punished in the East, by smiting on the mouth with a strong piece of leather, like the sole of a shoe: sometimes a bodkin is run through the tongue.

SMITERS, ‘I gave my back to the smiters;’ Isa. l. 6. This infliction Jesus suffered; Matt. xxvii. 30. “And my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair!” The Easterns held the beard in great veneration; and to pluck a man’s beard is one of the grossest indignities that can be offered. An Arab having received a wound in his jaw, chose rather to hazard his life than to suffer the surgeon to cut off his beard.
 It is also very offensive to spit in any one’s presence; and if this is such an indignity, how much more spitting in the face! This they did to the Saviour; for adds the prophet, ‘I hid not my face from shame and spitting.’

SMOKE.—Metaphorically, a false religion, filling the world with darkness and error; Rev. ix. 2.—The greatness of God’s anger; Ps. xviii. 8.
 —Grievous judgments; Is. xiv. 31.

SMOKING FLAX, Is. xlii. 3; Matt. xii. 20. An allusion to the expiring wick (made of flax) of a lamp, when the oil is nearly consumed, and the light feeble and dying. It indicates a state of humble and feeble piety
 —a low state of religion.

SMOOTHER, Ps. 55. 21; Prov. 5. 3.

SMOTE ‘upon my thigh;’ Jer.
 xxxi. 19. A method by which the Jews and others, expressed their sorrow; see Ezek. xxi. 12. So Cyrus acted upon receiving the news of the death of his generous friend Abradatus.

SMYRNA, Smer’-nah, myrrh.—A celebrated city and sea-port of Asia Minor, on the Archipelago, having a fine harbour. The ancients called it “the lovely, the crown of Ionia, the ornament of Asia.” Here Homer was born. Ten times destroyed, Smyrna has ten times risen from her ruins with new splendour. It has been subject to many revolutions, having been in the possession of Æolians, Ionians, Lydians, and Macedonians. The ancient inhabitants were much addicted to luxury and indolence, but celebrated for their valour and intrepidity when called into action.

Of this city no ruins of importance remain. Only the foundations of the stadium remain, but the area is sown with grain. There are a few remains of the walls, which were of immense strength and thickness. The ancient city was built on a rising ground. The present town is much lower, about four miles in circuit, and it extends about a mile along the water, in approaching from which it presents a very beautiful appearance. The streets are narrow, dirty, and ill-paved. The bazaars are not splendid. There are two very fine caravanserais inclosing square courts, which being covered with cupolas, make a very handsome appearance; the shops too are very fine.

A Christian Church was planted here very early; and the disciples maintained their holy faith with such purity and exactness, that in the divine epistle sent them by John, there is no reproof, but only praise and direction; Rev. ii. 8, 9, 10. At the time Christianity was introduced here, Smyrna was in all its glory, abounding in wealth, works of art, and schools of learning. Persecutions soon raged against the Christians; but after Polycarp and many others had laid down their lives for Christ, multitudes were converted. It has often suffered from earthquakes, plague, fires, and war; but at present it is one of the most flourishing places in the Levant; having a large and good harbour, and sustaining an active commerce with all nations. During the late revolutionary struggle, this city suffered dreadfully; but as Greece is now free, it may be expected to regain its ancient prosperity. By the last accounts, before the revolution, it contained 100,000 souls. The Greek church numbered 10,000.

SNARE.—Literally refers to a trap, or net, to catch birds or fishes; Job xviii. 10; Prov. vii. 23, &c.

SNARE, 'recover themselves out of the snare of the devil'; 2 Tim. ii. 26. The original signifies, to awake from a deep sleep, or from a fit of intoxication, referring to an artifice of fowlers, to scatter seeds impregnated with drugs, which cause birds to sleep, that they may draw the net over them with the greater security.

SNARE, Ex. 23. 33; Judg. 2. 8.

Ps. 11. 6. on wicked he will rain s.

SNARED, Ps. 9. 16; Prov. 6. 2, & 12. 13;

Ecc. 9. 12; Is. 8. 15, & 28. 13, & 42. 22.

SNOW, falls occasionally in Palestine, and always in flakes as large as a chestnut. Hence the expression, 'He giveth snow like wool;' Ps. cxlvii. 17. It was brought from the mountains, and sold in the hot season, to cool wine, &c., as ice is in our cities. Its water was very cleansing; Job ix. 30.

SNOW.—"Will a man leave the snow of Lebanon, WHICH COMETH from the rock of the field," &c.—Jer. xviii. 14.—The passage is obscure. Dr. Roberts paraphrases it,—"Will any one in his senses go from better to worse? And yet ye have forsaken me, says Jehovah, to serve idols!" Hence the comparison "Will any man leave the snow of Lebanon for the rock of the field?" Snow was most refreshing in the heat of summer; (according to Dr. E. Clarke, the loftiest parts of Lebanon were covered with snow) a naked rock in the field must have retained intense heat. Therefore, "Will any one leave the refreshing snows of Lebanon to bask upon a hot rock in the middle of a field, or shall waters exposed to the heat of the sun be preferred to the flowing waters that come from the melted snow of Lebanon?"

SNOW IN SALMON; Psa. lxxviii.

14.—It relates to prosperity. The Persians to this day describe honour and prosperity, by the expression being made white. Boothroyd renders 'Salmon,' darkness or shallow.

'The Almighty having scattered those kings' Hath by this turned death-shade to splendour'

SNOW WATER.—By the ancients it was regarded as peculiarly cleansing; Job ix. 30; xxiv. 19.

SNOW.—'as the cold of snow in the time of harvest;' Prov. xxv. 13. Alluding to the refreshing influence of snow, used to cool wine and other drinks, which it renders pleasant.

SNOW as, Ps. 51. 7; 68. 14; Is. 1. 18; Dan. 7. 9; Matt. 28. 3; Rev. 1. 14.

SNUFFED, Mat. 1. 13; Jer. 2. 24.

SO, So, measure for grain.—A king of Egypt, who joined Hoshea against the Assyrians; 2 Kings xvii. 4.

SOAP, a word which occurs only Jer. ii. 22, and Mal. iii. 2. It seems to mean some cleansing herb; probably the borith, or saltworth, a very common plant in Syria and parts adjacent. The natives burn it, and use the ashes. The water becomes impregnated with a strong salt, very proper for removing stains from cloth. There is also an unctuous kind of earth called "steatitis," or soap-earth; of much esteem in the baths of the east for cleansing and softening the skin. Dr. Harris thinks that the two mules' burden of earth, taken by Naaman, were for this use; 2 Kings v. 17.

SOCHO, So'-koh, tents, tabernacles. Two cities of this name, the Upper and Lower; 1 Chron. iv. 18.

SODOM, Sod'-om, their secret, their time, their cement.—The capital of Pentapolis, which was for some time the residence of Lot, and was destroyed by fire from heaven; Gen. xiii. 12, 13. It stood on the ground now covered with the Dead or Salt Sea. This dreadful catastrophe is attested by ancient historians, and confirmed by modern travellers. See Dead Sea.

SOJOURNER, one who dwells in a strange country, and has no possession of his own; Gen. xxiii. 4. "And Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there." He felt himself a stranger and a pilgrim, and by his unsettled state he was kept in mind of the city which hath foundations, that is permanent and stable, whose builder is the living God; See Heb. xi. 8, 9.

SOLDIERS, the Roman soldiers insulted and mocked Jesus Christ; Luke xxiii. 11, 36. Ministers of the gospel in the first age were called soldiers; Phil ii. 25. "My brother, and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier." Paul considers a Christian minister as a soldier, on account of the hardships and difficulties to which he must be exposed if he faithfully preaches the gospel of Christ.

SOLDIER.—A Christian who is at war with the world, the flesh, and Satan; 2 Tim. ii. 3, 4.

SOLOMON, Sol'-o-mon, peaceable, perfect, recompenser.—The son of David and Bathsheba: born A. M. 2971. He was selected to build the temple; and was one of the best kings of Israel. He began to reign at eighteen years of age, and reigned forty years; 2 Sam. xii. 24. He fell into vice; but was reclaimed from evil practices before he died, A. M. 3029. The following is an outline of his history:—He married the daughter of Pharaoh, king of Egypt. On his offering a most costly sacrifice the Lord appeared to him, and offered to grant him whatever he should ask; 2 Chron. i. 6. He asked for wisdom; 2 Chron. i. 10. His prayer was answered, and his wisdom became conspicuous; but on some occasions he lacked prudence. He was to administer justice faithfully to the poor and the rich; he studied to preserve his dominions in peace; and by his wise management “silver and gold became as plenteous at Jerusalem as stones, and cedar-trees as the sycamore trees that are in the vale, for abundance.” By an attention to commerce he greatly enriched his subjects, and acquired powerful allies. Solomon resolving to fulfil his father's solemn injunction, of building a temple to the glory of God, communicated his intentions to the king of Tyre, requesting that he would provide him a person qualified to superintend the work, together with proper labourers and materials. Hiram complied with the wish of his neighbour; and this magnificent structure was prosecuted with eagerness, and, on being completed, was consecrated in the most solemn manner. On that great festival Solomon appeared as the conductor of his people's devotions; and the prayer which he pronounced at the dedication of the temple was fervent, and pathetic, solemn, and humiliating. It is the lowly language of a sinner bowing himself to the dust in the presence of his Creator, and acknowledging that the greatest of his performances is unworthy of the divine notice.

Though gifted with eminent wisdom, and though the greatest part of his reign was truly glorious, yet he fell from his dignity into apostacy; “he loved many strange women, together with or besides the daughter of Pharaoh, who was his lawful wife;” 1 Kings xi. It was this connection with strange women, therefore, which disgraces the close of Solomon's life; and this lawless love drew him aside after the abominations of the Heathen.

It is probable that Solomon repented of his folly, and again enjoyed the favour of God. Read the book of Ecclesiastes which he wrote in his old age, and mark his estimate of true religion. ‘Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: says he, Fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.’

SOLOMON'S SONG.—A sacred poem composed by the King of Israel. It represents the mutual love of Christ and his church under the endearing figure of a bridegroom and bride. This book if rightly read, and properly understood, gives a beautiful representation of Christ's love to his people; a love stronger than death, since it triumphed over the grave and became perfected in his resurrection, and the Author of eternal life to them that believe. The Jews would not allow their children to read this book till their judgment was sufficiently matured, lest, in the fervour of youth, they should interpret in a bad sense the spiritual ideas of Solomon.

SOLOMON ‘had 40,000 stalls of horses, &c.’ 1 Kings iv. 26. In 2 Chron. ix. 25, it is only 4000, which translation is correct.

SOLOMON'S PORCH.—The porch or covered way on the east of the temple, John x. 23; Acts iii. 11.

SON.—Son is put for a male child, Gen. iv. 25; a successor, Isa. xix. 11; a scholar, 1 Sam. iii. 6; Prov. i. 8; 1 Tim. i. 2; a people, Exod. iv. 22; Ezekiel is called the “Son of man” about eighty-nine times; and Christ about eighty times in the evangelists.

Son of God, the well-known title of the Lord Jesus Christ. Both angels and men are sometimes called sons of God, Job. xxxviii. 7; 2 Cor. vi. 18. the former as created immediately by his hand, in which sense we also find it applied to the first man, Luke iii. 38. and to the latter in consequence of their adoption into his family, Rom. viii. 14, 15. But the appellation of "the Son," or "Son of God," is given to Jesus of Nazareth, in such a peculiar and exalted sense as will apply to none but himself. He is termed God's dear Son, or as the margin reads, "the Son of his love," Col. i. 13. Of this glorious person we are informed that he is the Word, who in the beginning was with God, and was God, by whom all things were made, John i. 1, 2, 3. that he possessed glory with the Father before the world was, ch. xvii. 5; that he was before all things, Col. i. 17; that he existed in the form of God, and thought it not robbery to be equal with God, Phil. ii. 6. And in his incarnate state, he is declared to be the Word made flesh, John i. 14.

SON.—"The form of the fourth is like the son of God;" Dan. iii. 25. Boothroyd reads, Like 'a son of God.' Like one of the angels who are called sons of God. A. Clarke renders the original 'a son of the gods,' that is, a divine person or angel. What notion could this idolatrous king have had of the Lord Jesus Christ?

SOUL, often signifies 'life,' Psa. xxxv. 4; lix. 3. The soul is that spiritual, rational, and immortal part or substance in man, which distinguishes him from the brute creation, and which causes him to resemble his Maker. It has a consciousness of its own existence, and actuates, directs, or disposes, in all the relations of life. The Scripture ascribes to beasts a soul, which may be a second acceptation of the word, as having the same import with breath or respiration, which is the general principle of animal life. But the Scripture allows to man alone an immortal soul, possessing the knowledge of God, wisdom, immortality, the hope of eternal life. Soul is sometimes used for a human creature, or the whole person both soul and body. Gen. xii. 5. Acts ii. 41.

Ever since the world was made it has been too narrow for the capacities of a soul. Hence men in every nation, however barbarous, have tried by one way or by another to pierce the veil that conceals from us the invisible future state. But what are the results of such speculation? They show that the spirit of man feels its own immortal nature, and at the same time our need of Divine revelation. For let us see to what uncertain knowledge of a future state even those men only attained, who stood on the summit of philosophical learning. Cyrus, who had been educated in the schools of the most illustrious Persian sages, said, at the approach of death, to his children, "I cannot imagine that the soul lives only while it remains in this mortal body. I am rather inclined to think, that when separated from this body, it will possess more understanding and greater purity!" Socrates, the prince of heathen philosophers, in his last hour, could only say to his judges, "We are about to part; I am going to die, and you to live. Which of us goes the best way is known to God alone!" All that Cicero, the great and polished Roman, could say upon this subject was, "I do not wish that what I am about to write of a duration of existence beyond the present life, should be regarded as certain, like a divine oracle. Upon this subject I entertain no more than conjectures."

Neither have the wise of this world in our day any better staff to lean upon, while they refuse to rest their hopes on the truths of Divine revelation.

But while these wise men can show us nothing more, as the fruit of their deep and laborious speculations, than a barren conjecture, that there is a future state, and an eternal existence of the soul, it is the privilege of the Christian to exclaim, in his severest sufferings, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" "We know," says the apostle, "that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." The believer can refer you, not to a dream of his own imagination, but to the word of Him who is called eternal life, who confirmed his words by miracle, who approached the tombs of the dead, and called them to life by a word; yea, who in his own person rose again and ascended visibly into heaven. Listen to Him, when he saith, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

Palestine, the farmer sometimes sows with an armed man attending him, lest he should be robbed by banditti of his seed.—The Jews, in their captivity, had been sowing good seed, had watered it with their tears, and now would gather their sheaves rejoicing.—So ministers and others, (as did Christ and the apostles) frequently labour under difficulties, sowing in tears, but their sorrows shall be turned into joy at the great harvest day, when Christ the judge shall come.

SOW 'beside,' or upon 'all waters'; Isa. xxxii. 20. Alluding to the sowing of rice upon the water, and before sowing, while the earth is covered with water, the ground is trodden by oxen, horses, and asses, who go mid-leg deep! As the rice is sown on water, so it is transplanted in the water. The Hindoo farmer sows his rice near a pool, that if the rains be less than usual, he may water his young rice. The passage points out the success of those who, in gospel times, should sow the word in all lands;—the hearts of the people shall be like well-watered ground, that shall bring forth abundantly.

SPARROW.—A very small and well-known bird. It is gregarious, and remarkably lively; and when lamed, or deserted by its mate, seems quite disconsolate; Ps. cii. 7. They were so cheap at Jerusalem, that "five were sold for two farthings;" Luke xii. 6. The care of divine Providence is therefore most strikingly depicted when his minute attention to them is declared; Matt. x. 29; Psa. civ. 24—31.

SPARROW. "I watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the house-top;" Ps. cii. 7. The bird alluded to is the passer solitarius; and not the common house-sparrow, which is not solitary in its habits. The bird to which the repentant king of Israel compared himself, is a real thrush, in size, in shape, in habits, and in song, with this difference from the rest of the tribe, that it is remarkable throughout all the East, for sitting solitary on the habitations of man. Moved by its melody, and comparing its lonely habits with his own, David exclaimed in the fulness of an afflicted heart, "I have watched, and am become as a thrush alone on the house-top."

SPECTACLE 'unto the world;' 1 Cor. iv. 9. An allusion to the Roman spectacles, where men were brought upon the theatre to fight with wild beasts, or with each other. They fought in the arena, or level floor, and this was surrounded by circular seats, rising above one another to a great height, and was capable of containing many thousand spectators. In the concluding spectacle, were brought forth the gladiators, naked and defenceless with immediate and inevitable death before them in all its horrors, and destined to be mangled and butchered in the direst manner. So that these men might well be called, "men appointed for death!" and this being the last appearance on the theatre for that day,—for if any escaped, they were reserved for another day, they are said here to be set forth the last.

SPECTACLE to angels, 1 Cor. 4. 9.

SPEECH. "There is no speech nor language, &c." The words "there is" and "where," are supplied; hence the proper reading may be, "No speech nor language, their voice is not heard." This is very beautiful, and has been noticed by many biblical students. The heavens are thus represented as silent, yet powerful preachers, declaring by their extended line the glory of God through all the earth, and to the end of the world; and, as Calvin observes, they have this advantage over the most learned of mankind, that they can speak to all nations, and that at the same time, by "a common language to teach them all at once;" Pa. xix 3, 4.

SPICES.—Aromatic drugs, fragrant gums, as, cassia, cinnamon, myrrh, flowers, perfumes, roots, &c. It was customary among the Jews, at the funerals of great persons and valued relations and friends, to prepare a bed of spices; 2 Chron. xvi. 14, of which they made a perfume by burning them, in order to perfume the dead body.

SPICES. Songs 4. 10, 14, 16, & 8. 14.

SPIDER.—A curious venomous, cruel, and crafty insect, used to describe wicked men. The trust of the hypocrite is compared to a spider's web; Job viii. 14. Because such persons, subdued by the strong habits of sin, hope on fruitlessly, till the last thread of the web of life is cut off from the beam; and then they find no more strength in their hope than is in the threads of the spider's web.

SPIDER. Prov. 30. 28; Job 8. 14; Is. 59. 5.

SPIES.—Vagabonds, lying in wait for the property of others, Gen. xlii. 9; those who lie in wait to listen, catch, or hurt, Luke xx. 20; the persons sent by Joshua to examine the state of the land of Canaan; ch. ii. See Heb. xi. 31.

SPIKENARD, 'very costly;' John xii. 3; Song i. 12. Spikenard was a highly aromatic plant, obtained from the Indies. From this was made the very valuable perfume used at the ancient baths or feasts; which was so valuable, that, according to Horace, as much of it as could be contained in a small box of precious stone, was considered as a sort of equivalent for a large vessel of wine, and a handsome gift for a guest to contribute at an entertainment, according to the custom of antiquity. This ointment was brought from India at a great expense. Herodotus states an alabaster box of ointment among the precious gifts that Cambyses sent for a present to the king of Ethiopia. In the days of Christ, a single pound of it cost 300 denarii, or pence, equal to £10 12s. 6d. It was usually carried in a box closely sealed, and the opening of it was called the breaking it, because the seal of the box was broken.

SPIKENARD, Songs 1. 12, & 4. 13. 14.

SPIRIT of GOD moved upon the face of the waters; Gen. i. 2. By the "Spirit of God" is meant, not a violent wind, as some have supposed; not fire, nor the sun, as some have thought; nor yet angels, nor a magnetic attraction, by which all things were drawn to a common centre. But that Holy Spirit is intended, whose influences Christ compares to wind; John iii. 8; and which, as a mighty rushing wind on the day of Pentecost, filled the house where the disciples were sitting; Acts ii. 12. This was followed by the disciples speaking with other tongues, because they were filled with the Holy Ghost; Acts ii. 4. In this sense the words were used by Moses.

"The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." It means brooding over; for the word expresses that tremulous motion made by the hen while either hatching her eggs, or fostering her young. It probably signifies the communicating of a vital or prolific principle to the waters. The Divine power was actively in operation over the waters. See Holy Spirit.

SPIRIT, 'and soul, and body;' 1 Thess. v. 23. Spirit, mind, or intellect. Soul, the seat of the affections, appetites, and passions. Body, in which these dwell.

SPIRIT. "Do ye say that the Scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us lasteth to envy? Because he giveth more grace; &c." James iv. 5, 6.—This passage is very obscure. The following is the probable meaning of the Apostle:—"This the Scripture treateth upon every where; and do ye think it speaketh thus in vain? Certainly every word thereof is to excellent purpose, and shall be verified upon us. Doth, then, that Spirit of God, which we profess to have dwelling in us, lust after envy, and envy the good things of others? Surely not: so far is he from that, as that he giveth more grace where he hath given some already."

SPIRITS in prison; 1 Pet. iii. 18—20.—Christ, as God, had gone by his Spirit, inspiring his servant Noah to denounce the approaching deluge, and preach repentance to the incorrigible antediluvians who perished in their sins, and whose "spirits" were in "the prison" of hell, when the apostle wrote; being confined there till the judgment of the great day.—'By which also, he went and preached to those whose spirits are now in prison.'

SPIRITUAL means that which belongs to spirits. The church is a spiritual house; her members are renewed in Spirit. Jesus is her foundation; and his Spirit and grace connect them with him and with one another; 1 Pet. ii. 5. Prophets and ministers are spiritual men, because their office lies in spiritual exercises; Hos. ix. 7.
 God's law is spiritual; it is a transcript of the divine nature. It is given by the Holy Ghost, and extends its authority to duties of a spiritual nature; Rom. vii. 14.

Christians are required to be spiritually minded; that is, to have their joys, exercises, objects, and motives spiritual. Such as have not this spiritual-mindedness are said to be dead, while such as possess it have life and peace; Rom. viii. 5—9.

 SPITE, Ps. 10. 14; Matt. 22. 6.

SPIT "Then did they spit in his face;" Matt. xxvi. 67. Among the Easterns such an act was regarded as the greatest insult; Deut. xxv. 9; Mark 8. 23; Isa. 1. 6. Spitting and shame are there combined, and even spitting on the ground before a person's face is looked upon as one of the greatest possible insults that can be offered to an Arab.

SPITTING, Is. 50. 6; Luke 18. 32.

SPOIL, plunder; Psa. xlv. 10. Christ is said to have spoiled principalities and powers, when he gained a complete conquest over his foes; in allusion to victors who anciently stripped the vanquished of all their arms.

'SPOILED principalities and powers;' Col. ii. 15. Christ is here represented as a great conqueror, who having vanquished and subjugated all the empires of false religion, and overturned the mighty establishments of Judaism and Paganism, celebrates a magnificent triumph over them, leading them in procession, openly exposing them to the view of the whole world as the captives of his omnipotence, and the trophies of his gospel! Thus, in a Roman triumph, after a decisive battle gained, and the complete conquest of a kingdom, the most illustrious captives in war—kings, princes, and nobles, with their wives and children—were, with the last dishonour and ignominy, led in fetters before the general's chariot, through the public streets of Rome, which were crowded by all classes of persons, in the highest excesses of joy.

SPRINKLED. 'Hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience;' Heb. x. 22. Here is, probably, an allusion to the sprinkling of the blood on the door-posts before the Passover, which door-posts, perhaps, signified the heart of man, which is the gate or door by which the King of glory is to enter.

STANDING IDLE, Matt. 20. 6. Before a large mosque in Hamadan, is a maidan or square, which serves as a market-place. "Here," says a traveller, "we observed every morning, before the sun rose, that a numerous band of peasants were collected with spades in their hand, waiting to be hired for the day to work in the surrounding fields. This custom, which I have never seen in any other part of Asia, forcibly struck me as a most happy illustration of our Saviour's parable: particularly when passing the same place late in the day, we still found others standing idle, and remembered his words, Why stand ye here all the day idle? as a most applicable question to them, they answered us, Because no man hath hired us.

STANDING, 'The publican standing afar off,' Luke xviii. 13. In the temple there was the holy of holies—the part apportioned for the Jews—and the court of the Gentiles. Probably the publican stood at the end most distant from the holiest place, or even in the court of the Gentiles.

STARS "God made the stars also;" Gen. i. 16. The stars are suns, similar to the sun in our system, which gives us light and heat every day. Each of these suns has an appropriate number of planets moving around it; as these stars are innumerable, therefore there are innumerable worlds, all dependent on the power, protection, and providence of God.

Dr. Herschel supposes they form primaries and secondaries, that is, suns revolving around suns, as planets revolving about the sun in our system. This must be the case in what is called the milky way, the stars being there in prodigious numbers. The milky way is the white or hazy belt in the heavens, supposed to be the light of innumerable fixed stars, or suns. On one occasion this great astronomer found that in 41 minutes not less than 258,000 stars had passed through the field of view in his telescope.

God numbers the stars and knows them by their names. Ps. cxlvii. 4. We have a few of their names in Scripture, as Chiun, Mazzaroth, Arcturus, Orion, Pleiades. The star which conducted the wise men to the infant Jesus was probably a meteor, which moved in the air; Matt. ii. 2. Jesus Christ is called the Morning Star, by a similitude borrowed from that which arises shortly before the sun; as he introduced the light of the gospel-day, and brought a fuller manifestation of the truths of God, than the prophets whose predictions are now accomplished. By stars are sometimes meant, the princes and nobles of a kingdom, Dan. viii. 10; and sometimes pastors or ministers of the Gospel, who ought to shine like stars in their lives and doctrine. Rev. i. 20. The angels are called stars, Job xxxviii. 7, who joined in extolling God for his work of creation. In Scripture, an extraordinary multitude is often expressed under the similitude of the stars of heaven.

verts at Corinth, baptized by Paul, with some of his family. They are called the first-fruits of Achaia. He was highly esteemed by the Apostle Paul; 1 Cor. i. 16; xvi. 15.

ed.—One of the first seven deacons, Acts vi 5, 6; and the first martyr for Christ; Acts vii. 1, &c. He is supposed to have been a Hellenistic Jew converted to the Christian faith. He was highly qualified for Christian office; for he was full of faith and the Holy Spirit; Acts vi. 5. 8. His character persecution, and martyrdom are gra-

STEWARD. A person whose business it was to provide all the members of a family with food and raiment.
See Gen. xv. 2; xliii. 19; 1 Kings
xvi. 9; Matt. xx. 8. He received all the cash, expended what was necessary for the support of the household, and kept regular accounts, which he was obliged at certain times to lay before his master. "Stewards of the mysteries of God;" 1 Cor. iv. 1. The mysteries of God, or the doctrines of the gospel, relative to the salvation of men, by the death of Christ, constituted a principal part of the divine treasure intrusted to the hands of Christian ministers. Whatever gifts or endowments a man may possess, they are the Lord's property, and to be employed to promote his glory. With respect to the unjust steward, Luke
xvi. 1—13, he was not commended because he had acted dishonestly, but because he had done wisely for himself. Christ would have Christians act as wisely and diligently in employing their riches in acts of piety and charity, as worldly men do, in laying out theirs to the greatest temporal profit; not to get wealth by unjust means, but rather to lay out what Providence hath blessed them with in works of mercy, that so they may "lay up for themselves treasures in heaven."

STIFF-NECK. Mr. Bruce, when in Abyssinia, observed that kings had a horn on their diadems; and that

STING of death; 1 Cor. xv. 56. St. Paul says, "the sting of death is sin." Death could not have entered into the world if sin had not entered first: it was sin that not only introduced death, but has armed him with all its destroying force; the broken law, and the curse denounced against the transgressor, constitute the poignant sting of death; by this, both body and soul are slain. See Isa. xxv. 8; Heb. ii. 14, 15; Rev. xx. 14; Hos. xiii. 14.

STIRRETH. "As an eagle stirreth up her nest;" Deut. xxxii. 11, 12. See Eagle.

STOCKS. "Made their feet fast in the stocks;" Acts xvi. 24.—These stocks were the Cippi, or large pieces of wood, used among the Romans, which not only loaded the legs of the criminals, but often distended them, thereby giving them much pain.

STOICS, a sect of heathen philosophers, founded by Zeno, born at Cantium, in the island of Cyprus, so called from his teaching in Stoa, or porch, at Athens. He was born B. C. 360. They regarded pain, poverty, bereavement, &c., as only imaginary evils; and the gratifications of life as only imaginary pleasures, and therefore preserved a cool indifference under all circumstances. Paul argued with them when in Athens; Acts xvii. 18. Some of Zeno's opinions owe their degree of truth to his knowledge of the Old Testament, and some he gathered from the writings of Socrates and Plato. One of his favourite sayings was, that "men, having two ears, should hear much; and having but one mouth, should speak little."

STOMACHER, Isa. iii. 24. Some suppose this to have been a girdle or zone, such as is now commonly worn by the Asiatic women, and which consists of a shawl folded wide, and put loosely and tastefully around the waist, leaving the corners hanging down, sometimes in front, and sometimes behind.

STONE—1. Jesus Christ; Ps. cxviii. 22; Isa. xxviii. 16; Matt. xxi. 42.—2. A true believer; 1 Pet. ii. 5.

STONE, 'shall fall on this stone shall be broken;' Matt. xxi. 44. Alluding to the Jewish custom of stoning. Standing on the edge of a high scaffold, the man was violently struck off by one of the witnesses; if he died by the fall and the blow, nothing more was done; if not, a heavy stone was hurled upon him, which killed him; Luke xii. 18.

STONE, 'seven eyes;' Zech. iii. 9. The eye is the emblem of Providence; the number seven denotes perfection.

STONE, 'not be left one stone upon another, &c.;' Matt. xxiv. 2. Titus commanded the whole city of Jerusalem and temple to be razed from the foundation. The soldiers were not then disobedient to their general. Avarice combined with duty and resentment: the altar, the temple, the walls, and the city, were overthrown from the base, in search of the treasures which the Jews, beset on every hand by plunderers, had concealed and buried during the siege. Thus literally was fulfilled Christ's prediction.

STONE, 'white stone;' Rev. ii. 17. In heathen courts of judicature, a person's condemnation was announced to him by giving him a black stone; and his acquittal, by giving him a white stone.—In the agonistical games, the judges awarded the prizes by the use of these stones; a white one, with the name of the person and the value of the prize being given to such as were victorious. The new name written may refer to a hospitable tally kept between families. It was divided into two equal parts, and the parties interchanged names inscribed on the tally. With this they travelled, and the contracting parties and their descendants mutually showed their hospitality. As they were carefully and privately kept, no one might claim the privilege they conferred, besides the person for whom they were intended. By this allusion, therefore, the promise made to the church at Pergamos, seems to be to this purpose:—"To him that overcometh, will I pardon and give a pledge of my affection, which shall constitute him my friend, and entitle him to privileges and honours, the value or extent of which none can estimate.

STONE. "The Stone which the builders rejected, &c.;" Ps. cxviii. 22. See Corner-stone.—At the building of Solomon's temple, one of those stones which David ordered to be made ready for use, was not approved by the builders, and consequently was rejected. But God, for different reasons, commanded, by a prophet, that this stone should be made the corner stone. The Easterns regard the corner-stone as the one peculiarly holy stone in a temple, and believe that it confers sanctity on the whole edifice. It is, therefore, probable that, either by Urim or Thummim, or by a prophet, God was consulted in the matter.—The answer was—That which they have declared to be unserviceable must be the corner-stone. It must have been for a very important reason, that God positively appointed this stone to be the corner-stone. But the New Testament discloses it to us, in Matt. xxi. 42, and 1 Pet. ii. 7, showing us that it referred to the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Jewish nation conducted themselves towards the Messiah, precisely as the builders did towards this stone, and rejected him; but God chose and ordained him to be the corner-stone, to support and sanctify the whole church.

STONES 'of darkness,' that is, stones buried deep in the earth; Job xxviii. 3.

STONES—pillows, &c.; Gen. xxviii. 11. The Arabs often wrap their head in their mantle, and sleep abroad, with a stone for their pillow.

The general colour of the stork is white, having the long wing-feathers black; the legs are red, and naked a great way up; when it stands erect it is from three to four feet high, and its body is about the size of a goose. The stork is a bird of passage, which in winter migrates into hot climates. Hence the prophet says, "The stork in the heavens knoweth her appointed times," &c.; Jer. viii. 7. The Psalmist says, "As for the stork, the fir-trees are her house," Ps. civ. 17. With us she makes her nest upon some high tower, or the top of a house; but in Palestine, where the houses are flat, she builds in the highest trees.

STRAIN AT A GNAT; Matt. xxiii. 24. Should be "Strain out a gnat." See Gnat. The Jews had a law which forbade the eating of any creeping thing; Lev. xi. 41. Of this they were strictly observant. They considered a person who ate a gnat as an apostate. Hence they very carefully strained their liquors, lest they should transgress the above command. The passage alludes to the custom of filtering wine, for fear of swallowing any insect. The passage indicates that the sins of the Jews were as much larger than those they scrupled, as a camel is larger than an insect.

STRAIT GATE, 'enter ye in at the strait gate.' A metaphor taken from the custom at marriage feasts, of having a gate designedly made narrow, through which those that were bidden might enter, but which might exclude those who were not bidden; Matt. vii. 13; Luke xiii. 24. Strive means to agonize, and alludes to the athletic exercises in the Grecian games. Hence Christ, by whom we enter to partake of the gospel feast, compares himself to a door, or gate; John x. 1, 2, 7, 9. A man must strive to enter this gate, as it conducts to heaven. It is strait; for pride, worldly pleasures, selfishness, &c., must be renounced, or a man cannot enter. He must be stripped of all these, deny himself, break through all restraints, and sometimes suffer reproach for the sake of Christ.

STRAIT betwixt two, having a desire to depart, &c. Phil. i. 23. The word rendered to depart, is used by Homer to express the loosing of the cable of a ship, in order to sail from a port. Hence there may be here an allusion to a ship stationed at a particular place, and riding at anchor, and at the same time likely to be forced to sea by the violence of the winds. The words may be paraphrased, "For I am, as it were, borne two different ways, having on the one hand a more earnest desire, out of regard to my own immediate happiness, to be unbound; to weigh anchor, as it were, and, quitting these mortal shores, set sail for that happy world where I shall be immediately with Christ, which is better, beyond all comparison and expression, than a longer abode here would be, were I to regard only my own immediate comfort and happiness."

STRANGER.—A person having no certain dwelling-place; Gen. xxiii. 4. —One who reckons this world as not his rest, and looks for a better country, that is, a heavenly one; Ps. xxxix. 12; Heb. xi. 13.—One who has not been reconciled to God, nor brought to the experience of the privileges and promises allotted to the church of Christ; Eph. ii. 12.

STRANGERS and PILGRIMS. A stranger sojourns in a place only for a time; a pilgrim passes right on. The resident or settled inhabitants of a country, are very anxious to acquire money and property. But they who stay but for a few weeks in a country, or who only travel through it, are not very anxious to secure permanent accommodation, which they would soon have to leave. Thus true Christians consider themselves but as sojourners here; for they look for a better country, that is, a heavenly.

STRAW—Bricks; Ex. v. 18. The eastern bricks are only clay well moistened with water, and mixed with straw and dried in the sun. Straw seems to have been a necessary composition in this sort of bricks, to make the parts of the clay adhere together.—The Egyptian pyramids of unburnt bricks, Dr. Pococke says, seem to be made of the earth brought by the Nile, with some pebbles and shells in it; it is mixed up with chopped straw in order to bind the clay together.

STRENGTH is applied to God; Exod. xv. 13; 1 Chron. xvi. 28; Psa. xxix. 1; xcix. 4; to angels, Psa. ciii. 20; to the natural power of man, Judg. xvi. 5, 19; spiritual strength; Col. i. 11. "Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power;" i. e. according to that sufficiency of strength, which may be expected from him who has all power, both in the heavens and in the earth. The apostle prayed that the Ephesians might "be strengthened—in the inner man;" Eph. iii. 16. The outward man is strengthened with earthly food; the inward man, by spiritual and heavenly influences. Knowledge, love, peace, and holiness are the food of the inward man; or rather Jesus Christ, that bread of life which came down from heaven; he that eats this bread shall live and be strengthened by it. Ministers of the gospel are directed to strengthen and comfort the saints; Isa. xxxv. 3, 4.

"Strengthen ye the feeble hands,
 And confirm the tottering knees,
 Say ye to the faint-hearted, Be ye strong;
 Fear ye not: Behold your God!
 Vengeance will come; the retribution of God:
 He will come, and will deliver you."

SUMMER.—The warm season of the year; Gen. viii. 22. In countries north of the equinoctial line, it begins in June, and ends in September. South of the equinoctial it begins in December, and ends in March. Seasons of prosperity, and opportunities of salvation, are called summer; Prov. x. 5; Zech. xiv. 8.

SUN.—The glorious luminary in the heavens, the great source of light and heat to the earth and other planets. "The sun," says Bishop Sherlock, "is the great Spirit of the world, in the light of which all things are made to rejoice; perpetual spring attends his course; all things revive at his approach, and assume a new face of youth and beauty; winter and frost lag behind him; nature grows deformed, and sickens at his departure."

The diameter of the sun is about 800,000 miles. His distance from our earth is ninety-five millions of miles; so that light, which flies at the inconceivable swiftness of two hundred thousand miles in a second, requires eight minutes to reach our earth! A cannon ball, shot thence, and moving with unabated swiftness, viz. (according to Durham), a mile in eight and a half seconds, would take about thirty years to reach our earth! The spots which often appear on the sun have never been satisfactorily accounted for. Herschel thought them to arise from chasms in the sun's atmosphere, caused temporarily by the ascent of gases.

Multitudes, from the brightness and usefulness of the sun, have worshipped it under the characters of Baal, Chemosh, Moloch, Phæbus, &c. Even with the Jews, the worship of the sun was practised; and Josiah had to take away the horses, and burn the chariots consecrated in the temple to the sun; 2 Kings xxiii. 11. After his death, we again find the Jews worshipping the sun; Ezek. viii. 16.

Various similitudes are derived from the sun.

To represent a very great calamity they say, "the sun was obscured, and the moon withdrew her light;" Isa. xiii. 10; xxiv. 23; Jer. xv. 9; Ezek. xxxii. 7; Amos viii. 9. To express a long continuance of anything that is glorious and illustrious in scripture style it is said, "It shall continue as long as the sun endures;" Psal. lxxii. 5, 17. The compass of the whole earth is marked out by these words, "From the rising of the sun, to the going down of the same;" Psalm l. i. cxiii. 3. "The Lord God is a sun and shield;" Ps. lxxxiv. 11; to illuminate, invigorate, and warm; to protect and defend all such as prefer him and his worship to every thing the earth can produce. And so of Christ in a parallel passage; Mal. iv. 2. "Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings;" See Isa. lx. 1, 2, 19. "The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood." Joel ii. 31; Acts ii. 20. A total eclipse, in which the sun is entirely darkened, and the moon assumes a bloody hue, signifies the fall of the civil and ecclesiastical state in Judea.

"A woman clothed with the sun," and having the moon under her feet, signifies the church, clothed with the righteousness of Christ, and rising superior to worldly things; Rev. xii. 1.

SUN...MOON.—"The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night;" Ps. cxxi. 6. Sun 'shall not smite,' alludes to a coup de soleil, or sun stroke, common in the East. A hundred persons have been known to perish this way, in a hot season, at Benares alone.

The effect of the moonlight on the eyes in the East is very injurious. The natives tell you, and they did the same in Arabia, always to cover your eyes when you sleep in the open air. It is rather strange that the above passage should not have been thus illustrated as the allusion seems direct. The moon here really strikes and affects the sight when you sleep exposed to it, much more than the sun, a fact of which I had a very unpleasant proof one night, and took care to guard against it afterwards. The sight of a person who should sleep with his face exposed at night, would soon be utterly impaired or destroyed.—Cairne.

SUN be darkened. Matt. xxiv. 29. In similar language Isaiah foretells the destruction of Babylon; Isa. xiii. 10; for it was usual in prophetic language to describe an utter overthrow in any political power by the extinction of the luminaries of heaven. Sun, moon, and stars were terms prophetically used to denote the various orders of persons in a state, and being darkened denoted that the Jewish state should be destroyed. The destruction of Jerusalem ended the political existence of the Jews, as a nation; sacrifice and oblation ceased, and the children of Israel have long been without a king and without a prince.

SUN. 'Neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat;' Rev. vii. 16. In these northern climates, the latter part of the text, especially, is but feebly understood. Mr. Leslie, a missionary in the East Indies writes; "The hot season was very trying, but it is now past and the rains have commenced, which have cooled us a little. For a succession of days and nights, I got nothing like continual sleep, but lay almost continually on the hard floor of my room, that being the coolest place; and several times I had to go out in the night, and obtain relief by lying in the open air. Truly I never understood, till then, the comfort of the prospect held out to us of a land where the sun doth not light on them nor any heat."

SUPERScription, or writing.

It is said, that on a tablet, carried before the criminal to execution, the Romans inscribed the name of his crime. Such a tablet, at least, was placed above Jesus on the cross. "This is the King of the Jews;" intimating that he was King of the Jews, a fact which the Romans disregarded; John xix. 19. This inscription was written in three different languages, that none might be ignorant of its import. It was written in Greek, which was the general language of commerce in western Asia, and which was familiar to many Jews from Europe, Egypt, &c. It also was written in the Syriac, called "Hebrew," the vernacular language of Palestine; and it was written in Latin, for the Romans, many of whom would assemble at Jerusalem during the Paschal week.

SUPPER. "A certain man made a great supper, and bade many;" Luke xiv. 15—24. When Sir John Malcom was invited to dine with the eldest son of the Shah, the invitation was given two days before, and one of the prince's attendants was dispatched at the hour appointed for the banquet to tell him that all things were ready.

And Morier also informs us, that having been engaged to dine with a Persian Khan, he did not go till his entertainer had sent to the English Ambassador and his train, to say that supper waited. So the invitations to the great supper described in the parable seem to have been issued a considerable time before the celebration; and as the after invitation was sent according to Eastern etiquette, to the guests invited, they must be understood as having accepted the engagement, so that the apologies they severally made were inadmissible, and could only be regarded as an affront put upon the generous entertainer, and an ungrateful return for all the splendid preparation he had made for their reception.

SURETY.—One who gives security for another. Thus Judah became surety to his father for Benjamin; Gen. xliii. 9; xlv. 32. Sins are called debts, Matt. vi. 12; and Jesus Christ is called the surety; Heb. vii. 22. Christ fulfilled the law by the holiness of his life, and underwent the penalty when he offered up himself a sacrifice to satisfy divine justice. The Scripture discommends suretyship, or engagement for the payment of another person's debt; Prov. xxii. 26; xi. 15.

SWAN.—The Hebrew word so rendered is very ambiguous, and is translated; Lev. xi. 30, mole. The Septuagint renders it "Ibis," and Parkhurst considers it to be the goose, because the word imports breathing in a strong manner, or hissing, as the goose is known to do. It occurs Lev. xi. 18; Deut. xiv. 16.

SWELLING of JORDAN, Jer. xii. 5. The allusion is to the periodical overflowing of the banks of the Jordan. The sense of the proverb is, 'If thou be not able to encounter less dangers, how wilt thou be able to conquer greater?'—'Lion from the swelling of Jordan'; Jer. xlix. 19. The banks of Jordan are so beset with bushes and trees, that the water cannot be seen till you approach to the river's brink. In this thicket several sorts of wild beasts used to shelter; which being driven from their coverts by the overflowing of the waters, roamed through the adjacent country to the great terror of the inhabitants. This gives us the meaning of the prophet's allusion, 'He shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong.'

SWIFT—'The race is not to the swift'; Ecc. ix. 11. It is not by swiftness, nor by strength and valour, that races are gained, and battles won. God causes the lame often to take the prey, and prize; and so works, that the weak can overthrow the strong; therefore no man should confide in himself. All things are under the government, and at the disposal of God.

SWIM, 2 Kings 6. 6; Ps. 6. 6; Ezek. 47. 5.

SWINE, 'The unclean spirits entered into the swine'; Mark v. 12, 13. It has been objected by infidel cavillers, that this was an unjust action, being a great injury to the owners; but these swine were, in all probability, Jewish property, and kept and used in express violation of the law of God; and, therefore, their destruction was no more than a proper manifestation of the justice of God.

SWINE.—Unclean persons—infidels; Matt. vii. 6.

SWINE'S SNOOT.—'As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman who is without discretion'; Prov. xi. 22. The women in the East wear nose jewels. Imprudence in a female is as unbecoming as such ornaments in the nose of a swine. She is ornamented bodily, but she is mentally and morally debased.

SWORD. (1) A warlike instrument for defending one's self, or attacking an enemy. (2) War, and its attendant calamities; Lev. xxvi, 25; Jer. xlii. 16.

SWORD of the Spirit.—The word of God is called the "sword of the Spirit"; Eph. vi. 17. because it comes from the Spirit, and receives its fulfilment in the soul through the operation of the Spirit. An ability to quote this on proper occasions, and especially in times of temptation and trial, has a wonderful tendency to cut in pieces the snares of the adversary. "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword"; Heb. iv. 12. This word penetrates deeper into a man than any sword; it enters into the soul and spirit; into all our sensations, passions, appetites, and thoughts; and sits as judge of the most secret intentions, contrivances, and sentiments of the heart. See 2 Cor. x. 4; 1 Thess. ii. 13; Rev. i. 16; ii. 16.

SWORD, 'drew his sword;' Matt. xxvi. 51. On this occasion there were two swords; Luke xxii. 38. These were probably provided to guard against the robbers and wild beasts which then greatly infested the country.

SWORD, 'and they shall fall by the edge of the sword;' Luke xxi. 24. One million, one hundred thousand Jews perished in the siege of Jerusalem.

SWORD, 'a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also.' A figurative expression, signifying that the sufferings and death of her son should deeply afflict the soul of Mary; Luke ii. 35.

SWORD, 'gird thy sword upon thy thigh;' Ps. xlv. 3. Sir J. Chardin says, the eastern people have their swords hanging down at length, and the Turks wear their swords on horseback under their thigh. This passage and Song iii. 8. show they wore them after the same manner anciently.

SWORD—bathed, 'my sword shall be bathed in heaven;' Isa. xxxiv. 5. Lowth reads it, 'For my sword is made bare in the heavens.' Barnes renders it, 'For my sword rushes intoxicated from heaven.'

SYNAGOGUES, Sin'-a-gogs, Jewish oratories for prayers, reading the scriptures, teaching, and exhortation, erected throughout the Jewish territories after the return from Babylon; Matt. vi. 5; Luke vii. 5; Acts xviii. 26, &c. Synagogues were sometimes built near rivers for the convenience of purification.

SYRACUSE, Si'-ra-kewse, draws violently.—The largest and richest city of the Greeks, on the east side of Sicily.

It was built 700 years B. C. It was 22 miles in circumference. Archimedes was slain by the Romans there 200 years B. C. The present population is about 15,000; Acts xxviii. 12. Here Paul tarried three days, as he went prisoner to Rome. Christianity was early planted here, and still continues, at least in name. The city has wholly lost its splendour; Acts xxviii. 12. There are still some valuable ruins, proving its former magnificence.

SYRIA, Sir'-re-a, sublime, deceiving.

—In Hebrew it is called Aram, from the patriarch Aram. It is a country of Asia, having the Mediterranean on the west, Mount Taurus on the north, the Euphrates and Arabia on the east, and to the south, Judea. Damascus was for a long time its capital; afterwards Antioch; 2 Sam. viii. 6.

SYRO-PHENICIA, Sy'-ro-fe-nish'-e-a, purple, drawn to.—Phenicia, properly so called, of which Sidon was the capital. In Mark vii. 26, the Canaanitish woman is called a Syrophenician, because she was of Phenicia, which was then regarded as part of Syria.

TAANACH, Tay'-a-nak, who humbles thee.—A city of the Manassites; Josh. xii. 21.

TAANATH-SHILOH, Tay'-a-nath-shy'-loh.—A place in Palestine; Josh. xvi. 6.

TABBATH, Tab'-bath, good, goodness.—A place; Judg. vii. 22.

TABEEL, Tay'-be-el, good God.—One who wrote to Artaxerxes against the Jews; Ezra iv. 7.

TABERAH, Tab'-e-rah, burning.—An encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness; Num. xi. 3.

TABERNACLE. (1) A tent, or temporary building, made to be carried from place to place. (2) That particular tent in which the Israelites performed their religious exercises, while in the wilderness. It was called "the Tabernacle of the Congregation;" Ex. xxxiii. 7. Here, till the building of the temple, was kept the ark of the covenant, which was a symbol of God's gracious presence with the Jewish church; Ex. xxvi. 1; Heb. ix. 2, 3. It was forty-five feet long and twenty-one feet wide. A curtain divided it into two apartments, the eastern one, called the Most Holy Place, being fifteen feet square. Within the Holy Place stood the altar of incense, the candlestick, and the table of shew-bread. Within the Holy of Holies was the ark of the covenant, with its mercy-seat, and overshadowing cherubim, and between which rested the shechinah, or visible glory. See Ark.

It was a splendid and costly structure; but having been removed often, it became entirely worn out by the time Solomon's temple was ready.

The tabernacle was a type of Christ's human nature, wherein God dwells personally; Heb. viii. 2; ix. 11. The natural body is the tabernacle of the soul; 2 Cor. v. 1; 2 Pet. i. 13. The church's "tent was enlarged," and

"her curtains stretched out," her "cords lengthened," and her "stakes strengthened," when the Gentiles were converted to Christ, and the gospel state established; Isa. liv. 2; and they are to be still more wondrously so in the millennium. "The tabernacle of God is with men," when they enjoy his eminent fellowship and favour; Rev. xxi. 3.

TABERNACLE.—And gather thou all the congregation together unto the door of the tabernacle; Lev. viii. 3. Dr. Colenso objects, and says, "The width of the tabernacle was 18 feet and allowing 2 feet to each, only 9 could have stood in front of it. Supposing that all the adult males, 600,000, had taken their place side by side in front, even of the whole end of the tabernacle, they would have reached, allowing 18 inches between each rank, 600,000 feet, or nearly twenty miles." He further says, the people were summoned to the tabernacle that they might see the consecration of Aaron and his sons; "which was taking place inside," &c.

See the weakness of this Objector! In Exod. xxix. 4, it is clearly stated, "And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt wash them with water." At verse 11, it is said, "by the door of the tabernacle," the same at verse 32. How inconsistent then for the Bishop to insinuate—that the congregation might see what was passing inside the tabernacle; that is, the consecration of Aaron and his sons, which evidently took place outside in the court of the tabernacle. It is true that the tabernacle was only 21 feet wide, (not 18, as he states,) but the court was 100 cubits long, or 175 feet, and 50 cubits wide, or 82½ feet. This court was enclosed by curtains, which could be drawn up, or opened. Besides, it is said, Ex. xl. 6, "Thou shalt set the altar of the burnt offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation." It is evident therefore that the consecration of Aaron and his sons was outside; for the altar, the brazen laver, and the table, could not have had sufficient space inside, and the altar would have set fire to the whole fabric; hence the altar was outside.

TABERNACLE, 'a tabernacle for a shadow;' Isa. iv. 6. An allusion to the portable tents of shepherds to keep them and their flocks, to screen them from tempests and heat.

TABERNACLE for the sun; Ps. xix. 4, 5. Alluding to the ceremony of betrothing, which was performed under a canopy or tent, erected for the occasion; the parties being adorned with suitable attire and ornaments, and the whole company, but especially the bridegroom, esteeming it a season of joy and gladness.

TABLETS; Isa. iii. 20. These were small boxes, or bottles, containing rich perfumes. They were ornamented, and attached to a neck-lace that hung down to the waist.

TABOR, Tay'-bor, choice; in Syriac, contrition.—Its shape is conical; its height a full mile, and the circumference of its base four or five miles. On the top is a beautiful plain about a mile in circumference, and enclosed by trees, except towards the south. From the top is one of the most delightful prospects in the world. On the north-west is seen the Mediterranean; west and south the noble plain of Esdraelon; south and east is Galilee, and north-east stretches away the beautiful Sea of Tiberias, famed for many miracles. On this mount Barak assembled his army, and, at the foot of it, defeated the host of Jabin; Judg. iv. 6, 8. It is thought by some that here our Saviour was transfigured. Also the name of a city given by the Zebulonites to the Levites of Merari's family; 1 Chron. vi. 77; and of a place near Bethel; 1 Sam. x. 3.

TABRET.—A kind of small drum, usually beat on as an accompaniment to the pipe, &c.; Gen. xxxi. 27; 1 Sam. x. 5; xviii. 6; Job xvii. 6; Isa. v. 12; xxiv. 8; xxx. 32.

TACHES.—Hooks, clasps, or loops and buttons; Ex. xxvi. 6, 11, 33; xxxvi. 13; xxxix. 33.

TADMOR, Tad'-mor, the palm-tree, change.—A city of great renown built by Solomon; 1 Kings ix. 18; Ezek. xlvi. 19; xlviii. 28; was probably so named from the palm-trees growing about it; as it was afterwards called by the Romans Palmyra, or rather Palmira, on the same account, from Palma, a palm-tree. The word Tamar was afterwards changed into Tadmor, and the Arabs still give it that name. "And he built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in Hamath;" 2 Chron. viii. 4. It was one of the most magnificent cities in the world, and was built by Solomon in order to receive the caravan traffic from the East.

It is not known how it was reduced to ruins; but it is little more than a vast forest of Corinthian pillars, erect and fallen, and the most gorgeous monuments. Some historians declare "The world never saw a more glorious city; it was the pride of ancient times." "It was a city not more remarkable for the state of its buildings and the unwontedness of its situation, than for the extraordinary personages who once flourished there, among whom were the renowned Zenobia, and the incomparable Longinus."

It was built on a fertile island, in the desert, surrounded by barren sands. It was 120 miles north-east of Damascus, 100 west of the Euphrates, and 130 south-east from Aleppo. Its ruins are now inhabited by about thirty poor families. The ruins are several miles in extent, and astonish all travellers by their magnificence.

Thousands of pillars lie prostrate upon the ground, so that the spectator is at a loss to connect or arrange them in any order or symmetry, or to conceive what purpose or design they could have answered. 'In the space covered by these ruins,' says Volney, we sometimes find a palace of which nothing remains but the court and walls; sometimes a temple whose peristyle is half thrown down; and now a portico, a gallery, or triumphal arch. Here stand groups of columns whose symmetry is destroyed by the fall of many of them; there we see them ranged in rows of such length, that, similar to rows of trees, they deceive the sight, and assume the appearance of continued walls. If from this striking scene we cast our eyes upon the ground, another almost as varied presents itself. On all sides we behold nothing but subverted shafts, some whole, others shattered to pieces or dislocated in their joints; and on which side soever we look, the earth is strewn with vast stones half-buried, numerous and mutilated with broken entablatures, friezes, disfigured reliefs, effaced sculptures, violated tombs, and altars defiled by dust.

TAHAPANES or TAHPANHES, Ta-hap'-pa-nes, or Tah'-pau-hes, secret temptation.—A city of Egypt, supposed to be Daphne, the metropolis of Egypt, in the days of Jeremiah. It stood not far from Pelusium, and was the first city entering Egypt from Judea; Jer. ii. 16; xliiii. 7—9; xlv. 1; xlv. 14.

TAHPENES, Tah'-pe-nes, stand-ard, flight.—A queen of Egypt; 1 Kings xi. 19, 20.

TARSHISH, Tar'-shish, contemplation of the marble.—The second son of Javan; Gen. x. 4.—A Persian nobleman; Esther i. 14.—Supposed to be some place on the east coast of Africa, or in India; some suppose it to be Tartessus in Spain which abounded in gold and silver. Perhaps like Sheba, it signifies, in prophecy, any people remote from India, distinguished for commerce by sea; Ps. xlvi. 7; lxxii. 10; Isa. ii. 16; xliii. 3; lx. 6—9.

TARSUS, Tar'-sus, winged, feathered.—The capital city of Cilicia, on the river Cnidus, six miles north east of the Mediterranean. This city rose to great eminence in the days of Augustus, and rivalled the city of Athens, Antioch, and Alexandria, in wealth and grandeur, in literature, and in science. It was called Juliopolis, in honour of Julius Cæsar, who spent several days there, during his march against Pharnaces. As a place of education, it excelled Athens and Alexandria, all the other Greek cities having schools of philosophy, and of the polite arts. Here was born the great apostle of the Gentiles, with whose name that of Tarsus, will ever be associated; Acts ix. 11. It has been subjected to so many misfortunes during the political changes which so frequently occur in eastern countries, that hardly a vestige remains of its former magnificence, nor does the modern city. perhaps occupy one-fourth of the area of the ancient. The Cnidus formerly ran through the middle of the city, but now runs half a mile to the east of the modern town; Acts xxi. 39.

TARTAK, Tar'-tak, chained, bound, shut up.—An idol of the Avites; 2 Kings xvii. 31.

TARTAN, Tar'-tan, searches the gift of the turtle.—An officer of Sennacherib; 2 Kings xviii. 17.

TELHARESHA, Tel-ha-re'-sha.—A place where some Israelites dwelt during the captivity; Neh. vii. 61.

TELL it not in Gath; 2 Sam. i. 20. It is customary among the Arabs, after a victory, to make songs and sing them, to celebrate the warlike deeds of their chiefs. Niebuhr tells us, that an Arab tribe so thoroughly defeated a pasha of Bagdad, that the Arab poets made a song on the victory, which became so common as to be heard in Bagdad. Thus the genius of the people leads them to compose verses on public occasions; and it appears that the Hebrew poet is speaking of songs that he supposed the Philistines would compose on the death of Saul, which was such a matter of triumph to them, and sing them in the public places of Gath, and in the streets of Askalon.

TEMPERANCE.—In reference to Felix; Acts xxiv. 25, this word signifies the restraint of all the passions and evil inclinations; and may be applied to prudence, chastity, and moderation in general, rather than restricted to moderation in eating and drinking. It is opposed to every excess by which the mental faculties are beclouded, or the moral habits rendered inchoate.

TEMPLE.—A house or dwelling set apart for the worship of God. Solomon's temple, began B. C. 1008, and finished B. C. 1000. The number of workmen employed in its erection was 184,000, during 7 years and 6 months. All the stones were prepared at some distance, so that no sound of a hammer was heard while it was being built. The form was the same as the tabernacle, but every part almost of the edifice and its furniture was on a larger scale, suited to a great nation. It consisted not only of the temple proper, which comprised the portico, the sanctuary, and the holy of holies; but also of spacious courts, chambers, and various apartments, surrounding the temple, and much more extensive than it. David's preparations for it, amounted in weight to 46,300 tons of gold and silver; 1 Chron. xxii, xxviii, xxix. The sins of the nation caused the glory of the temple soon to pass away. From the day of its dedication, when the glory of Jehovah filled it, and promised to dwell in its most holy place, not more than 33 years elapsed, when it was plundered of its immense riches by Shishak king of Egypt; 1 Kings xiv. 25, 26; and, nearly 400 years later, it was utterly destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, B. C. 558. After a lapse of 52 years, on the return of the first company from captivity, the second temple was begun by Zerubbabel; but it was not finished for a number of years, and never possessed its most important objects,—the ark, the symbolical cloud, the holy fire, and Urim and Thummim, which caused the loud lamentations of the pious Israelites; Ezra iii. 12, 13; Hag. ii. 3. The monster Antiochus Epiphanes spoiled and polluted this temple, and suspended its worship; 1 Mac. i. 62. At the end of three years, Judas Maccabeus repaired and purified it, and restored the services of the priests and Levites. It was in a state of decay, when Herod the Great, to expiate his manifold evils, resolved to rebuild the temple of Zerubbabel. He commenced this work, B. C. 17, and in about nine years the temple was fit for divine service; but labourers were employed in rearing the out-building many years, down to the time that Florus was governor of Judea. This temple some consider the third, but the Scripture speaks of it as the second. Historians allude to it with admiration. It was built of white marble, exquisitely wrought, and of large stones, some of which were 25 cubits long, 8 high, and 12 thick. To this our Lord refers, Mark xiii. 1; Luke xxi. 5. "Its appearance," says Josephus, "had every thing that could strike the mind, and astonish the sight; for it was on every side covered with solid plates of gold, so that when the sun rose upon it, it reflected with a strong and dazzling effulgence, that the eye of the beholder was obliged to turn away from it, being no more able to sustain its radiance, than the splendour of the sun." To strangers who approached the capital, it appeared, at a distance, like a huge mountain covered with snow; for where it was not decorated with plates of gold, it was extremely white and glistening.—Carpenter.—Tacitus denominates it "a temple of opulence." This splendid work has passed away; not a stone remains; its site was ploughed up by the enemies of the Jews. See Jerusalem.—The temple symbolises the same objects as the tabernacle; Ps. xi. 4; John ii. 19, 21; 2 Thess. ii. 4; 1 Cor. vi. 19; Rev. vii. 15.

TEMPLE, gate of the temple called Beautiful; Acts iii. 2. Probably the eastern gate of the court of the women. It was called Beautiful, because the folding doors, lintel, and side-posts, were overlaid with Corinthian brass, silver and gold. For grandeur and value, it surpassed all other gates. Josephus says that the temple had nine such gates; but that called Beautiful far exceeded them in size, value, and magnificence.

TEMPLE, 'I saw no temple therein;' Rev. xxi. 22. 'No temple, nor sun, nor moon,' implies that there will be no need of the means of grace—the ordinances of public worship. What we now receive mediately, we shall then receive immediately.

TEMPLE of DIANA; Acts xix. 26, 27. This temple was reckoned among the seven wonders of the world. It was 425 feet long, 220 broad, and had in it 127 pillars 60 feet high. It was 220 years in building, and probably additions were made to it during 400 years. It was raised at the expense of all Asia Minor. It was so magnificent, that Xerxes, when he burnt all the temples in Asia, spared this; but one Herostratus set fire to the noble fabric, merely, as he confessed, to get himself a name. The inhabitants of Ephesus being very rich, soon raised a fabric more beautiful than the former; the women even bringing their gold, silver, and other precious ornaments, as contributions towards its erection. This was the temple which excited so much attention and veneration in the apostles' time.

TESTAMENT, more properly rendered 'covenant,' Heb. ix. 15—20. It means also, the will of a testator; Gal. iii. 15; Heb. ix. 16, 17. The Greek word is that by which the 70 have translated the Hebrew word for Covenant. The old Scriptures are called the Old Testament, or Covenant, or Dispensation; 2 Cor. iii. 14. The dispensation of the covenant of grace, as contained in the gospels and epistles, is called the New Testament, or Covenant. It is last in order, and shall never be abolished; Heb. ix. 15; Acts xv. 10.

TESTAMENT, Matt. 28. 28; Luke 22. 20; 1 Cor. 11. 25; 2 Cor. 3. 6. 14; Gal. 3. 15; Heb. 7. 22, & 9. 15, 16, 17, 20; Rev. 11. 19.

TESTATOR.—One who leaves a will; but the original term, thus rendered, ought to have been translated victim, or appointed sacrifice; Heb. ix. 16, 17.

TESTATOR, Heb. 9. 16. death of the T. 17. while the t. liveth

TESTIFYING, Heb. 11. 4; 1 Pet. 5. 12.

TESTIMONY.—The word often denotes the whole revelation which God has graciously given in his word, as the rule of faith and practice. The word abounds in Ps. cxix. The two tables of the ten commandments are so called; Ex. xxv. 16, 21; xxxi. 18. They were a witness of the covenant between God and his people; hence the ark containing them was called the Ark of the Testimony. The gospel is frequently called a Testimony; John iii. 32, &c., &c.

TETRARCH, Te'-trark.—A prince of a fourth part of a state, who had the power, without the title or crown of a king; Matt. xiv. 1; Luke iii. 1; ix. 7; Acts xiii. 1.

THADDÆUS, Thad-de'-us, that praises.—A surname of Jude; Matt. x. 3.

THANKSGIVING.—Grateful acknowledgment of benefits. It implies, 1. a real sense of value in the things received; 2. a reception of them with complacency; 3. a cheerful avowal of the obligation conferred; 4. love to the bestower; and 5. hearty desires to honour Him who blesses us; Phil. iv. 6; 1 Tim. ii. 1.

THARA, Thay'-rah.—Christ's ancestor; Luke iii. 34.

THEBES.—See Egypt, and No, or No-Ammon.

THEBEZ, The'-bez, muddy.—A city; Judges ix. 50.

THEOPHILUS, The-of-fe-lus, a friend of God.—A Christian of rank. To him Luke dedicated the gospel which he wrote; Acts i. 1; Luke i. 3.

THESSALONIANS Epistles to.—The First Epistle is the earliest written of all Paul's letters. He enjoined it to be read to all the adjacent churches ; ch. v. 27. His object was to confirm them in the faith, and to promote their piety.

The Second Epistle, written soon after the first, commends their faith and charity, rectifies their mistakes in supposing that the day of judgment was at hand ; admonishes them of certain irregularities, &c.

Observe its exact representation of the Papal power, under the characters of the 'Man of Sin,' and the 'Mystery of iniquity.' For considering how directly opposite the principles here described (ch. ii.) were to the genius of Christianity, it must have appeared at the time highly improbable that they should ever have prevailed in the Christian Church ; and so a prediction like this, which answers so exactly in every particular to the event, must prove that its author wrote under divine influence.

THESSALONICA, Thes-sa-lo-ny'-kah, victory against the Thessalonians.

—The capital of Macedonia. It was anciently called Halis, and Thermae ; but Philip, the father of Alexander the Great, called it Thessalonica, to commemorate his victory over the Thessalians. About A. D. 52, Paul, Silas, and Timothy, planted a church here. It was at that time a city of great commerce and wealth, and it abounded with Jews. The Saracens took it about 800 years after Christ ; and after various revolutions, it fell under the power of Turkey. It is at this time one of the chief ports of modern Greece, containing before the late revolution 60,000 inhabitants, of which 12,000 were Jews. Its present name is Saloniki.

THEUDAS, Thew'-das, a false teacher.—An impostor who appeared about the period of the Christian era, and assuming an exalted character, drew after him about four hundred persons, who with their leader were all put to death. He was mentioned by Gamaliel ; Acts v. 36, but nothing certain is now known of him. Josephus mentions a demagogue of this name, who set up for a prophet, and drew a great number of people after him, pretending that if they would follow him to the river Jordan, and take their goods along with them, he would there give the word, and the waters should, as of old, divide between them, allowing them to pass over dry-foot. The procurator Caspius Fadus, however, sent a party of horse after him, by whom he was taken, and afterwards beheaded, while his numerous followers were slaughtered.

THIEF—robber ; John x. 1. The former means one who secretly takes away the property of another ; the latter, one who does so by violence or bloodshed.

THIGH.—To put the hand under the thigh was a solemnity used in taking an oath, the reason of which is unknown ; Gen. xxiv. 2, 9 ; xlvii. 29. Josephus says, that this custom was observed in his time.

THIRTY pieces of silver ; about £3 15s. ; Matt. xxvi. 15. It is said, that after the siege of Jerusalem, thirty Jews were sold for a penny ; a just retaliation to them who had sold their Messiah for thirty pieces of silver, which was the known set price for the basest slave ; Ex. xxi. 32.

THOMAS, Tom'-as, a twin.—One of the apostles; Matt. x. 3. He remained several years at Jerusalem after the Pentecost, and then went to preach among the Parthians, Medes, Hyrcanians, and Bactrians. He suffered martyrdom in Melia-poor, in the East Indies, where, three hundred years ago, the Portuguese discovered Christians who called themselves by his name.

THORN in the flesh, evidently means a great and painful affliction; See Num. xxxiii. 55; Josh. xxiii. 13. Some bodily weakness caused by his rapture, and which might have affected his looks, speech, or gesture.—Whitby.—Perhaps the heavenly glory made a stronger impression on Paul's nerves than his strength could bear, and affected him with a degree of palsy, and with a tremulous pronunciation; See Dan. viii. 27; x. 8, 17; Newcombe.—Paralytic symptoms; Whitby, Doddridge, Bloomfield, Boothroyd, &c.—Nervous debility, affecting the spirits and speech; Dr. Watts. I believe the Apostle to refer simply to the distresses he endured through the opposition he met with at Corinth, which was as painful and grievous to him as a thorn in the flesh;—Dr. A. Clarke.

THORNS — 1. Worldly cares, riches, and pleasures; Luke viii. 14. — 2. Perverse unbelievers; Ezek. ii. 6.

THORNS in your sides.—Alludes to whipping with a whip made of thorns called the scorpion, which was applied to the sides and not to the back; Num. xxxiii. 55; Judg. ii. 3.

THOUSAND YEARS. — “And he laid hold on the dragon, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years;” Rev. xx. 2, 3. On this portion of time is founded the Millenium, or a thousand years of happiness for the church of Christ.

THOUSANDS, ten thousands, &c. are sometimes put for great numbers in general; Lev. xxvi. 8; Deut. xxxii. 30; Psa. lxxviii. 17; Is. lx. 22; 2 Pet. iii. 8.

THREATENING, Eph. 6. 9; Acts. 4.

29, & 9. 1; 1 Pet. 2. 23.

THREE DAYS and three nights. It was the custom of the orientals to reckon any part of a day of twenty-four hours for a whole day, and to say it was done after three or seven days, &c., if it were done on the third or seventh day from that last mentioned. As the Hebrews had no word exactly signifying a natural day of twenty-four hours, they used night and day, or day and night, for it; so that to say that a thing happened after three days and three nights was the same as to say that it happened after three days, or on the third day. Thus the Greeks commonly speak of three days ago, when they mean that a day only intervened.

THREE YEARS seeking fruit; Luke xiii. 7. Christ referred to a sort of white fig, which is three years in coming to perfection, so as to bear fruit, and if it does not then bear it is considered hopeless.

THREE, 2 Sam. 24. 12; Prov. 30. 15, 18, 21, 29; Amos 1. 3, 13, & 2. 1; 1 Cor. 14. 27; 1 John 5. 7, 8; Rev. 16. 13.

THRESHING-FLOOR.—This important part of a Jewish farm was prepared in the open field, as it is at this day in some countries, by trampling and rolling a sufficient spot of ground, generally on some gentle eminence, for the sake of the wind. Here the smaller kinds were beaten out with a long staff or flail, the larger kinds with oxen or horses. These drew a set of rollers, over which was constructed a seat for the driver of the team; Isa. xxviii. 27. To separate the chaff and grain the fan was used. The grain was cleared of heavier substances, such as portions of dirt, by means of the sieve. To depict the direful ruin of the wicked, it is said, "They shall be as the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor;" Hos. xiii. 3; Job xxi. 18. The church is likened to a threshing-floor; for here Christ gathers his glorious harvest, and here he will thoroughly cleanse it; Matt. iii. 12.

THRONE, the seat of a monarch. Being always higher than a chair, it needed a footstool, where, in token of reverence, applicants bowed themselves; Psa. xcix. 5. Solomon's throne was raised six steps, and was of solid gold and ivory. The word is used to denote kingly authority; Gen. xli. 40; and hence angels are called thrones; Col. i. 16. Government or kingdom; Gen. xli. 40; 2 Sam. vii. 12, 16.

THRONES. 'Ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones;' Matt. xix. 28. The ancient heads of the tribes sat near the throne, and assisted the king in his judgments. The apostles were to be Christ's ministers, next the Messiah in dignity and office, by whom he was to govern the church.

THROUGHOUT ALL AGES, World without end; Eph. iii. 20, 21. This is one of St. Paul's self-invented and most expressive phrases, 'throughout all ages,' &c. It defies any version to come any thing near it, and commands our wonder. It has been read, 'throughout all generations, for ever and ever;' that is, while earth, with its successive generations, continues, and far beyond the limits of time, even for ever and ever.

THYATIRA, Thy-a-ty'-rah, a sweet sacrifice of labour.—A city in the frontiers of Mysia and Lydia, about 26 miles north of Sardis; Acts xvi. 14; Rev. ii. 18, 19. It is situated near a branch of the Caicus, in the centre of an extensive plain. At the distance of four or five miles, a belt of mountains surround it. It was once famous for its purple dye; Acts xvi. 14. There are now about 1000 houses in the place, but poor. The streets are very narrow and dirty. Its modern name is Ak Hisar.

THYINE-WOOD.—A tree much like the cypress; Rev. xviii. 12.

TIBERIAS, Ty-be'-re-as, good vision.—The inland sea of Tiberias lies in a deep basin, surrounded by lofty hills, excepting the narrow entrance and outlet of the river Jordan. Its waters are sweet and salubrious, and they abound with excellent fish. Formerly a great number of persons maintained themselves by fishing in this lake; and we are told that, at one time, 230 boats, each managed by 4 men, were constantly thus employed. It is called the Sea of Chinnereth; Num. xxxiv. 11; Josh. xiii. 27; the Sea of Chinneroth; Josh. xii. 3; the Sea of Galilee; Matt. iv. 18; xv. 29; the Sea of Tiberias; John vi. 1, and the Lake of Gennesaret; Luke v. 1. As it was the only considerable collection of waters within the scene of the transactions narrated by the Evangelists, it is frequently referred to in the gospels, by the simple term Sea or Lake; Matt. xvii. 27; Luke viii. 22. The Jordan maintains its course through the middle of the Lake in a strong current. It is sometimes very rough and stormy.

TIBERIUS, Ty-be'-re-us. — The Roman emperor who reigned when Pilate was governor of Judea; Luke iii. 1. Caesar Augustus having married Livia, Tiberius' mother, adopted him as his heir. In the beginning of his reign Tiberius behaved with moderation; but afterwards became peevish, cruel, and oppressive. He made Pilate governor of Judea. In the fifteenth year, John the Baptist began to preach, Luke iii. 1; and Christ went about doing good.

TIBNI, Tib'-ny. — A traitor; 1 Kings xvi. 21.

TIDAL, Ty'-dal. breaks the yoke. — A king whom Abraham conquered; Gen. xiv. 1.

TIGLATH-PILESER, or TILGATH-PILNESER, Tig'-lath-py-le'-zer, or Til'-gath-pil-ne'-zer, that takes away. — King of Assyria, and the son and successor of Sardanapalus; 1 Chron. v. 6; 2 Kings xv. 29. He reigned 19 years at Nineveh, and died in the year 3276, leaving the kingdom to his son Shalmaneser.

TIKVAH, or TIKVATH, Tik'-vah, or Tik'-vath, hope, a congregation. — The father-in-law of Huldah, the prophetess; 2 Kings xxii. 14; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 22.

TILON, Ty'-lon. — A descendant of Judah; 1 Chr. iv. 20.

TIME and TIMES, and the dividing of time; Dan. vii. 25. Prophetically a time means a year; times, two years: and dividing of time, half a year; the whole makes 42 months. Those months reckoned at 30 days each, make 1200 days, the prophetic day being a common year.

TIMÆUS, Ty-me'-us, perfect, admirable. — The father of blind Bartimeus; Mark x. 46.

TIMNA, or TIMNAH, Tim'-nah, image, enumeration. — A concubine; Gen. xxxvi. 12. — One of the posterity of Esau; Gen. xxxvi. 40; 1 Chr. i. 36. — A city of Philistia; Judg. xiv. 2.

TIMNATH-SERAH, Tim'-nath-see'-rah, image of the morning. — A city of Ephraim; Josh. xix. 50.

TIMON, Ty'-mon, honourable. — One of the seven deacons; Acts vi. 5.

TIMOTHEUS, Ti-mo'-the-us, honoured of God, valued of God.—The same as Timothy.

TIMOTHY, Tim'-o-the, honoured of God.—He was a native of Lystra. His father was a Greek, but his grandmother Lois, and his mother Eunice, being pious Jewish women, trained him up in the knowledge of the Scriptures; Acts xvi. 1; 2 Tim. iii. 15. It is supposed he was converted to the Christian faith during the first visit made by Paul and Barnabas to Lystra, Acts xiv. When the apostle came from Antioch in Syria to Lystra the second time, he selected Timothy to be the companion of his travels, having previously circumcised him; Acts xvi. 1-3; and ordained him in a solemn manner by imposition of hands; 1 Tim. iv. 14; 2 Tim. i. 6. From this period, frequent mention is made of Timothy, as the attendant of Paul in his various journeys, assisting him in preaching the gospel, and in conveying his instructions to the churches. He was first bishop of the church at Ephesus. Paul addressed two epistles to him about A. D. 56, or 58.

They were written from Rome, not long before his death. In these he is instructed in the choice of officers for the church, in the proper department of a Christian minister, in the method of church government and discipline, the importance of steadfastness in Christian doctrine, the perils and seductions that should come, &c.

TIN, Num. 31. 22; Is. 1. 25; Ezek. 22. 18.

TINKLING ORNAMENTS; Is. iii. 18. They are still worn in the East. Mr. Lane thus speaks of them; "Anklets of solid gold, or silver, are still worn by ladies, but are not so common as formerly. They are very heavy, and knocking together, as the wearer walks, make a ringing noise; hence it is said in song, "The ringing of thy anklets has deprived me of reason." It was customary among the Arabs for girls or young women to wear a string of bells on their feet. I have seen many little girls in Cairo with small round bells attached to their anklets. Perhaps it is to the sound of ornaments of this kind, rather than of the more common anklets that Isaiah alludes. "The pride which the Jewish ladies of old took in making a tinkling sound with these ornaments of the feet is severely reprov'd.

TIPSAH, Tiff'-sah, passage, pass-over.—A city of the tribe of Ephraim; 1 Kings iv. 24.

TIRATHITES, Ty'-rath-ites.—One of the families of scribes that dwelt at Jabez; 1 Chron. ii. 55.

TIRHAKAH, Tir'-ha-kah, inquirer.—King of Cush, or Ethiopia; 2 Kings xix. 9.

TIRHANAH, Tir'-ha-nah.—Son of Caleb; 1 Chr. ii. 48.

TIRIA, Tir'-e-a.—A descendant of Judah; 1 Chr. iv. 15.

TIRSHATHA, Tir'-sha-thah, over-tures, the foundation.—A title given to prince, or governor; Ezra ii. 63.

TIRZAH, Tir'-zah, benevolent, pleasant.—A city of the Ephraimites, the royal residence of the kings of Israel, from Jeremiaah to Omri; Josh. xii. 24; 2 Kings xv. 14, 16.

TISHBITE, Tish'-bite, makes captives.—The name of Elijah, taken from the name of the town Tisbe, in Gilead, beyond Jordan; 1 Kin. xvii. 1.

TISRI, Tis'-ry.—The first month of the Hebrew civil year, and the seventh of the sacred year.

TITHE, 'Ye pay tithe of mint, anise, and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, &c.' Mat. xxiii. 23. Mint is a well-known garden herb. Anise, a plant of the aromatic kind. Cummin is much like fennel, but smaller; its seeds have a bitterish warm taste, and a disagreeable aromatic flavour. See Isa. xxviii. 25, 27. The law did not oblige the Jews to tithe these herbs, but those things which were properly a source of revenue. Christ did not discommend their giving tithes of mint, anise, and cummin, but complained of their inconsistency, while they neglected more essential commandments, and substituted insignificant observances for justice, mercy, and truth.

TITHES, Gen. 14. 20; Mal. 3. 8; Amos 4. 4; Matt. 23. 23; Luke 18. 12.

TITTLE.—A point, or corner, by which letters, much alike, are distinguished one from another; Mat. v. 18.

TITUS, Ty'-tus, honourable.—Titus was a Greek, and one of Paul's early converts. Of the time, place, or manner of his death, we have no certain account. Tradition says he lived to the age of ninety-four years, and was buried in Crete, where he had been left by Paul; Tit. i. 5.

TITUS, Epistle to.—It is valuable for its elucidation of the nature and duties of the Christian ministry—the manner of accommodating our exhortation to the characters of the persons we address—the necessity of a minister's setting an example of what he teaches—the doctrine of obedience to civil rulers—the necessity of good works, and the proper treatment of foolish questions and heretics. The epistle was written from Ephesus, shortly after Paul had visited Crete; ch. i. 6.

TOB, Tob, good, goodness.—A district east of Jordan, north part of Manasseh; Judges xi. 3, 5.

TOB-ADONIJAH, Tob-a-do-ny'-jah.—A Levite, who was sent with others to instruct the cities of Judah in the principles and duties of their religion; 2 Chron. xvii. 8.

TOBIAH, To-by'-ah, goodness of the Lord.—An Ammonite, and enemy of the Jews, who strenuously opposed the rebuilding of the temple; Nch. ii. 10; iv. 3; vi. 1, &c.

TOBIJAH, To-by'-jah, the Lord is good.—A Levite; 2 Chron. xvii. 8.—See also Zech. vi. 10, 14.

TOI, To'-i, wandering.—The king of Hamath; 2 Sam. viii. 9, 10.

TOKEN of Confirmation, as the rainbow; Gen. ix. 12, 13; and circumcision; Gen. xvii. 11.—“Show me a token for good;” Ps. lxxxvi. 17. Impress thy dignifying name upon my heart, and let thy indwelling there influence my conduct, that I may be known as a servant of God. “I am thine, Lord, save me.” Give me the witness of thy Spirit; and when my life ends, take me to thy heaven.

TOLA, To'-lah, worm, scarlet.—The tenth judge of Israel; Judg. x. 1.—The son of Issachar; Num. xxvi. 26.

TOLAD, To'-lad, nativity.—A city of Simeon; 1 Chr. iv. 29.

TOMBS of the Prophets, “ye build the tombs of the prophets;” Matt. xxiii. 29. Christ did not condemn the practice, but the ostentatious motives that occasioned it. It was reckoned honourable, and commendable. Josephus informs us that Herod repaired in a most splendid manner the sepulchre of David. It is now customary for the Mahomedans to build and adorn the tombs of their saints.

TOMBS, ‘out of the tombs—dwelling among the tombs;’ Matt. v. 2, 3. The Jewish burial grounds were at a small distance from their cities and villages. The graves of the principal citizens were distinguished by having cupolas, or vaulted chambers of three, four, or more square yards built over them; and as these very frequently lay open, and occasionally afford shelter for any passer-by from the inclemency of the weather, the demoniac might, with propriety enough, have had his dwelling among the tombs. Dr. Shaw, and other travellers, sheltered themselves in this way in some of the burial grounds of the east.

TONGUE.—1. That member by which we articulate sounds; Jam. iii. 5.—2. The language spoken in any country; Deut. xxviii. 49. There was only one language till the confusion of tongues at Babel. The Hebrew tongue was the same that God gave to Adam; but it may have undergone alterations from Adam to Moses. The simplicity of its construction, the conciseness and energy of its expressions, its peculiar fertility, its affinity to the most ancient oriental languages, the etymology of the names whereby the first of mankind were called, which naturally occurs in this language, the names of animals, which are often significant of their nature and habits; the most ancient book, viz. the Old Testament being, for the most part, in this language, &c., seem to indicate that it was the original language of the human species.

TONGUE, 'is a fire, a world of iniquity;—it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature, &c.,' Jam iii. 6. The original is very beautiful, and is an allusion to a wheel catching fire, as not unfrequently happens, by its rapid motions, spreading its flames around, and at last involving the whole machine in destruction. The true version is, it setteth on fire the wheel of human life, and thus finally destroyeth the whole body. Some are of the opinion that allusion is here made to the penal wheel of the Greeks, not unknown to the Jews, on which they were accustomed to extend criminals, to induce them to confess, or to punish them for crimes; under which wheels fire was often placed, to add to their torments.

TONGUE, Smite with the;—"Come and let us smite him with the tongue;" Jer. xviii. 18. With the tongue should be rendered on the tongue. Lying and false testimony are even at the present day in the East punished by smiting the person on the mouth with a strong piece of leather, like the sole of a shoe. Sometimes a bodkin is run through the tongue.

TOPAZ, To'-paz.—A precious stone of a greenish yellow, of every degree of shade. It has the lustre of glass, and is very valuable. It was placed in the breast-plate of the Jewish high-priest; Ex. xxviii. 17; Ezek. xxviii. 13; Rev. xxi. 20. It was called Topazion in Greek, from an island of that name in the Red Sea, where it was anciently found; but an inferior kind is common in Abyssinia, Peru, Bohemia, and Scotland, some of which are indeed very beautiful. The Oriental are the most valuable; and one possessed by the Great Mogul, in India, weighing 137 carats, was valued at 200,300*l.*

TOPHEL, To'-fel, ruin, folly, insipid.—A place; very near it Moses delivered the Deuteronomy; ch. i. 4.

TOPHET, To'-fet, a drum, betraying.—Tophet was a part of the valley of Hinnom, south-east of Jerusalem, where the Canaanites, and afterwards the Israelites, sacrificed their children to Moloch. The name, perhaps, alludes to the manner of drowning the cry of the infant sacrifices by beat of drum, which, in Hebrew, is called Toph. Tophet is here used by a figure, for the place where the Assyrian army was destroyed, which appears to have really happened on the opposite side of Jerusalem.

In order to disqualify this valley from being a place of worship, and thus the more thoroughly to have Moloch discarded, Josiah caused it to be a place for dead carcasses, and filth of every kind; 2 Kings xxiii. 10, Jer. xix. From that time it was universally abhorred, and abandoned to loathsomeness. In order to prevent the pestilent influence of such a place, perpetual fires were kept burning there. Hence it grew to be an image of hell, and ultimately the name Gehenna was definitively applied to the place of future and eternal punishment.

TORCH.—A light used at marriage processions. It was made of rags, formed into a roll, and well saturated with oil. The torch-bearer carried in his other hand a pitcher, TORCH, Zech. 12. 6; Nah. 2. 3, 4.

TORMENTORS.—A name given to Eastern jailors, because they treated the debtors cruelly, to extort payment; Matt. xviii. 34. They were put to the greatest tortures. In the punishments of the East, China, &c., a great variety of these are practised. Imprisonment is also a much greater punishment in the Eastern parts of the world than here: State criminals are not only forced to submit to a very mean and scanty allowance, but are frequently loaded with clogs or yokes of heavy wood, with which they cannot either lie or sit at ease; and by frequent scourging, and sometimes by racking, they are quickly brought to an untimely end.

TOUCH not, taste not, handle not; Col. ii. 21. Some of the Easterns think that their furniture, dishes, &c. are polluted and spoiled, if touched by persons of another religion. If so touched, they break them, as the Jews were to break their earthen vessels when touched by an unclean animal; Lev. xi. 38. Dr. Clarke was one night entertained very kindly by a Turk; after leaving the place, the next morning, Dr. C. returned for a book he had left behind, when he found his kind host breaking and throwing away the earthenware plates and dishes, from which his guests had eaten, and purifying the other utensils, &c. by passing them through fire and water.

TOUCHED.—“We have not an high-priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities;” &c. Heb. iv. 15.—Having assumed human nature being, ‘made like his brethren;’ having submitted to all its trials and distresses, and being “in all points tempted like as we are,” he is able to succour most tenderly all his disciples in the same state of distress, if they call upon him, or lay their burdens at his feet. TOWER.—1. A high stage, erected in cultivated fields, on which a watchman was stationed toward harvest to guard against thieves; Jer. vi. 27.—2. A fortified building to afford protection against enemies, or to annoy them; 2 Kings xvii. 9.

TOWER of David; ‘Thy neck is like the tower of David.’ This elegant building was on Mount Zion, and built of marble; Song iv. 4.

TOWER of the Watchman; 2 Kings xvii. 9. These towers were erected for shepherds to watch their flocks; or for keepers of gardens, orchards, and vineyards, to guard the fruits; Matt. xxi. 33. The name of the Lord may be taken for the Lord himself; he is a strong tower, a refuge, and a place of complete safety to all who trust in him. What a strong fortress is to the besieged, the like is God to his persecuted, tempted and afflicted followers.

TOWN CLERK.—The public Accountant or Secretary, was an office of dignity, and responsibility. He was chosen by the people, chiefly to register the names of the conquerors, and their rewards, in the theatre.

TRACHONITIS, Trak-o-ny'-tis, rough, rocky. —Trachonitis properly pertained to Arabia and not to Canaan. It had Ituræa on the south, Bashan on the west, Damascus on the north, and the desert Arabia on the east. It abounded with rocks and craggy rough mountains, and hence was called by the Greeks Trachonitis, i. e. the rough or mountainous country. It was infested with robbers, and pertained to the tetrarchy of Philip; Luke iii. 1.

TRADITION usually means opinions, laws, or customs, conveyed from one generation to another. Paul applies the term to the communications of the apostles delivered to the churches by word or writing; 2 Thes. ii. 15. We know no oral traditions of the apostles, and in religion we cannot believe any truth, or obey any precept acceptably, unless we have evidence that God has revealed it, for otherwise we respect man rather than God. Traditions of the elders; Matt. xv. 2. The Jews pretended that these are explanations of the written law which God gave to Moses, Aaron, his sons, Joshua, the priests and prophets, till at length they were committed to writing, and called the Mishna or the second law, A. D. 190. On these were written Gemara, or perfection, and both works united, bear the name of the Talmud, or instruction.

TRADITION, Matt. 15. 3; Gal. 1. 14; Col. 2. 8; 2 Thess. 2. 15, & 3. 6; 1 Pet. 1. 18.

TRANCE.—A state of mind, in which a person is wrapped into visions of future or distant things, while the body seems insensible; Num. xxiv. 4, 16; Acts x. 10; xi. 5; xxii. 17; 2 Corin. xii. 2, 3, 4.

TRANQUILLITY, Dan. 4. 27.
TRANSFORMED, Rom. 12. 2; 2 Cor. 11. 14, 15.

TRANSFIGURE.—To change the figure and appearance, as Christ did on the mount; Matt. xvii. 2; Mark ix. 2; Luke ix. 28; 2 Pet. i. 18.

TRANSGRESS without cause; Ps. xxv. 3. Impiously transgress. —Vainly transgress. —Boothroyd. Or to act treacherously without provocation.

TRANSGRESSION. "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven," &c. Ps. xxxii. 1, 2. Transgression signifies the passing of a boundary; doing what is prohibited. Sin signifies the missing of a mark; not doing what is commanded. Iniquity signifies what is turned out of its proper course or situation, any thing morally distorted or perverted. Guile signifies fraud, deceit. To remove these evils three acts are mentioned:—forgiving, covering, and not imputing. 1. Transgression must be forgiven, or as the word signifies, borne away by a vicarious sacrifice. 2. Sin must be covered, hidden from the sight. 3. Iniquity must not be imputed to the offender, that is, must not be reckoned to his account. 4. Guile must be annihilated in the soul.

TREASURE.—Provisions, money, military weapons, writings, &c., collected and securely kept; Jer. xli. 8; Ezek. xxviii. 4; Dan. xi. 43. Snow, wind, hail, rain waters, are the treasures of God; Job xxxviii. 22; Psa. cxxxv. 7. Treasure is often used to express any thing whatever in great abundance; as in Col. ii. 3. "In Jesus Christ are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." St. Paul says, Rom. ii. 5. "Thou treasurest up wrath against the day of wrath." Thou provokest more and more the wrath of God against thee; by heaping up sins, thou heapest up the judgments of God upon thyself. As men add to their treasure of wealth, so dost thou add to thy treasure of punishment.

TREASURE, "in earthen vessels," 2 Cor. iv. 7. Probably signifying the outward mean condition of the apostles, and ministers of the gospel, and alluding some suppose to Gideon's lamps and pitchers; but especially to the ancient method of hiding treasures of money in earthen vessels or pots. "The original implies vessels made of shell, delicate and brittle."

TREASURES of darkness; Isa. xlv. 1—3. "Treasures of darkness," that is, locked up and hidden in secret places. When Cræsus, the king of the Lydians, was subdued by Cyrus, he gave up his treasures, with an exact account, in writing, of the whole, and the particulars with which each wagon was loaded, when they were carried away; and they were delivered to Cyrus at the palace of Babylon. The gold and silver taken by Cyrus in Asia, being converted into pounds sterling, amounted to £126,244,000.

TREASURE, 'hid in a field;' Mat. xiii. 44. Not a pot or chest of money, which, as an eminent critic observes, might have been carried away without the purchase of the field, but rather a gold, or silver mine.—When men are brought properly to value salvation, they will be ready to make any required sacrifice to obtain it.

TREASURY; Mark xii. 41. This treasury was a chest, the sacred depository for receiving gifts and offerings to God, into which the people put what they pleased; it was placed in one of the rooms of the temple, and the voluntary offerings were for its repairs. In the women's room there were no less than 13 boxes for receiving money designed for the poor and sacred uses. The wealth of the temple was deposited in a chamber, peculiarly adapted for it.

TREE, signifies 1. A happy and glorious immortality; Rev. ii. 7. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." As in the Grecian games, to which there may here be an allusion, the conqueror was crowned with the leaves of some tree; so the believer who continues steadfast in the faith, and incorrupt in his life, shall eat of the tree of life, and be crowned with an incorruptible crown. See a description of the tree of life in Rev. xxii. 2—14. Tree or trees denote good men; Psa. i. 3; Is. lxi. 3.—The wicked; Matt. vii. 19;

Jude 12.—A king or monarch; Dan. iv. 19—23.—The nobles of a kingdom; Is. x. 18, 19.—Offspring; Is. xi. 1.

TREE of LIFE.—"The tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil;" Gen. ii. 9. These two trees were symbolical, or designed by the Creator to give instruction, in the manner which is done by our positive institutions. One was the "tree of life," to which he had free access. It was designed as a symbol to him of that life which stood connected with his obedience; and therefore when he sinned, he was debarred from eating it, by the flaming sword and cherubim, which stood every way to guard it.

The other was "the tree of knowledge of good and evil," and which was the only tree of whose fruit he was forbidden to eat. As the name of the first of these trees is given it from the effect which should follow obedience, so the name of the second is derived from the effect which would follow disobedience. Man, on the day he should eat thereof, should know good in a way of loss, and evil in a way of sufferance.

TREE PLANTED.—"And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper;" Psa. i. 3. There is an allusion to the planting of trees in Eastern gardens, by the side of rivers or little canals, otherwise their roots and verdure would soon perish. The water can be turned off or on at pleasure; the person having only to turn a sod by his foot from the side of one stream to cause it to flow in the direction required. This is called watering the land with the foot; Deut. xi. 10.

An orange garden at Beirut is divided into sixteen squares, four in a row, with walks between. The walks are shaded with orange trees of a large spreading size, in a most flourishing state, and are really beautiful. Each of those squares in the garden was bordered with stone, and in the stone work were troughs, very artificially contrived for conveying the water all over the garden, there being little outlets cut at every tree for the stream, as it passed by to flow out and water it.

TRIALS, those afflictive dispensations of providence to which Christians are subject in this life; Psa. lxxvi. 10. "Thou hast tried us, as silver is tried." Afflictions and trials are represented as a furnace where ore is melted, and a crucible where it is refined. "The trial of your faith is more precious than gold;" 1 Pet. i. 7. Genuine faith is proved to be so by adversities, especially such as the primitive Christians were obliged to pass through. The word then was, "Renounce Jesus, and live:" "Cleave to him and die:" for every Christian was in continual danger of losing his life.

TRIAL, Job 9. 23; Ezek. 21. 13; 2 Cor. 8. 2; Heb. 11. 36; 1 Pet. 1. 7, & 4. 12.

TRIBES.—A division or family of people. The tribes of Israel were the descendants of Jacob's sons. As Jacob blessed both Manasseh and Ephraim, who were Joseph's sons, there were 13 tribes, and yet no tribe of Joseph. The land of promise, however, was divided only into 12 portions, because the tribe of Levi was to be supported by tithes. There being twelve tribes who each paid to Levi a tenth of every thing, their condition was more easy than the other tribes.

TRIBUTE MONEY; Matt. xvii. 24. The half-shekel, about fifteen pence, paid yearly by every male for the temple; Ex. xxx. 13. It was paid to princes or rulers to whom the people were subject. Vespasian afterwards ordered it to be paid to the Roman treasury.—Jesus Christ shows clearly that religion does not exempt men from civil duties. “Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar?” Matt. xxii. 17; Rom. xiii. 7. If he had said, Yes, the Pharisees would have accused him as an enemy to the Jews and their country, and of preferring the Roman government. If he had said, No, they would have accused him of hatred and disloyalty to Cæsar’s rule. What did the wisdom of Jesus dictate? He said, “Show me a penny.” He inspects it. “Whose image is this?” The image of Cæsar upon the current coin proved that they who used it were subject to Cæsar’s government. “Whose image is this?” “Cæsar’s.” Then, (mark his consummate wisdom!) “Render unto Cæsar the things that are,” by your subjection, “Cæsars; but render unto God” also, “the things that are evidently God’s;” and always “obey God rather than man.”

TRIED.—“When he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life;” Jam. i. 12.—Tried signifies approved, as gold silver, or gold, is approved, when tested by the Assayer, or goldsmith. The passage refers to the conquerors in the Olympic games, who were rewarded with civic crowns, made of fading herbs, or the leaves of trees. After a victory, the general assembled his troops, and in the presence of the whole army bestowed rewards on the meritorious. The highest reward was the civic crown, bestowed upon him who had saved the life of a citizen, with his name and deed inscribed upon it. It was composed of oak leaves, and it was presented to the saviour by the saved. Under the Emperors the civic crown was generally presented by the prince. The recipient wore it at the spectacles, and sat next to the senate. When he entered, the audience rose up as a mark of respect.—The soldier who first mounted a rampart, or entered the camp of the enemy, was presented by the general with a golden crown. The man who first boarded an enemy’s ship; or he who first scaled the walls of fortifications, and he who delivered from a blockade, each received a valuable crown. They were preserved with the greatest care, and worn on public occasions.

TRIMMED, Matt. 25. 7; Jer. 2. 33.

TRIUMPH.—“Thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ;” 2 Cor. ii. 14. The term was applied by the Greeks and Romans to the honour conferred on a victorious general. The people gave him a magnificent entrance into the capital, attended by the spoils of war; and by the princes, nobles, generals, or people, whom he had made captives. The victor was drawn in a magnificent chariot by four white horses. Other animals were sometimes used. When Pompey triumphed over Africa, his chariot was drawn by elephants; that of Mark Anthony by lions; that of Heliogabalus by tigers; and that of Aurelius by deer. In the triumphal processions fragrant odours were diffused around; and flowers, exhaling a grateful smell, were scattered in the way, and on the altars of the gods incense was burned during the procession, and sacrifices offered, and the whole city was filled with the smoke of sacrifices and perfumes.

TROAS, Tro’-as, penetrated.—A maritime city of Phrygia, or of Mysia, in the Hellespont; Acts xvi. 8; xx. 5, 6. Near it stood the ancient city of Troy, and here was laid the scene of Homer’s Iliad. After a siege of ten years, it was taken by the Greeks. This occurred, according to Sir Isaac Newton about nine hundred and four years before the birth of Christ, or during the reign of Jehoshaphat. A new city of the same name was soon built, about four miles nearer the sea. Here Paul often preached, lodging with one Carpus; Acts xvi. 8; xx. 5—12; 2 Tim. iv. 13. A Christian church long existed here; but is now extinct, and the place lies in ruins.

TRUMP, 1 Cor. 15. 52; 1 Thess. 4. 16.

TRUMPET.—An instrument of loud music, still in common use. It was originally made of the horn of a ram or ox, and subsequently of metal. The bugle is a modern improvement of this instrument. On that new moon festival which commenced the Jewish civil year, that is, the first day of Tizri, was held the Feast of Trumpets; Lev. xxiii; Num. xxix.

TRUMPET 'give an uncertain sound;' 1 Cor. xiv. 8. The meaning is, foreign tongues spoken in their assembly, would be as useless to the Corinthians, as the military trumpet to any army, if it did not give distinct notes expressive of summoning together, sounding a retreat. &c.

TRUTH.—The positive matter of fact; contrary to falsehood. Moral truth is the conformity of words and actions to the thoughts of the heart; as when a man speaks what he thinks, and is in reality what he seems to be. It is taken for the true principles of religion, the true doctrine of the gospel; and Jesus Christ, being the Author, is emphatically styled "the Truth," because he is the substance of all the types; John xiv. 6.

TWINKLING, 1 Cor. 15. 52.

TWO LEGS, and Piece of an Ear; "As the Shepherd taketh out of the mouth of the lion two legs or piece of an ear, so shall the children of Israel be taken," &c. Amos iii. 12. Few of you shall escape, and those few with difficulty, just as a shepherd, of a whole sheep carried away by a lion, recovers only two of its legs, or part of its ear, just sufficient to prove identity.—Those that escape shall be of as little worth as the two legs, &c.—"In the corner of a bed." As the corner, in the East, is the most honourable place, and a couch in the corner of a room, is the place of the greatest distinction, so the metropolitan cities, which are in the corner, in the most honourable place in the land, whether Samaria in Israel, or Damascus in Syria, shall not escape these judgments.

TYCHICUS, Tik'-c-kus, casual, happening.—A disciple employed as a messenger to several churches. He was of the province of Asia, and accompanied the Apostle in his journey from Corinth to Jerusalem. Paul terms him his "dear brother"—a "faithful minister of the Lord"—and his "companion in the service of God;" Acts xx. 4; Eph. vi. 21, 22; Col. iv. 7, 8.

TYPES.—Figures or symbols of something future and distant, or examples to prefigure those distant things; 1 Cor. x. 11.

TYRANNUS, Ty-ran'-nus, reigning prince.—A teacher in Ephesus, in whose school Paul preached; Acts xix. 9. He was probably a covert to the Christian faith, and willingly allowed the apostle the use of his seminary.

TYRE, Tire, strength.—A large city of Phœnicia, supposed to have been built by a colony of Sidonians, and hence called the daughter of Zidon; Josh. xix. 29; Isa. xxiii. 15; Matt. xi. 21. It was at first built four furlongs from the shore, on an island; but the city which soon reared itself on the opposite land, grew into greater size and note. After a siege of thirteen years by Nebuchadnezzar. B. C.

537, it was destroyed, but the inhabitants escaped with their effects to the insular city. The latter then flourished for 200 years, when Alexander took it, having built a causeway to it out of the ruins of the old town. It was the emporium of commerce and the arts. Their ships found the way even to England, for tin from the mines of Cornwall. Its kings swayed a powerful sceptre, and their colonies were scattered over all the Mediterranean. The chief deities of the place were Hercules and Astarte. About 200 years after Christ it was destroyed by Niger, emperor of Rome. After this it flourished 500 years, under the Seljukian Turks, and was then taken by the crusaders, and was finally destroyed A. D. 1289, by the Sultan of Egypt. A. D. 1516 it was seized by the Turks, who are yet masters of all that country. The predictions of Isaiah and Ezekiel, that this city for its wickedness should be utterly destroyed, have been fulfilled; Isa. xxiii.; Ezek. xxvi.; xxviii. Maundrell, who visited this spot in 1697, found not a house entire, and only a few miserable inhabitants, harbouring themselves in vaults, and subsisting chiefly by fishing. A village adjacent then bore the name. There is now a considerable village built among the ruins; the population of which Mr. Jowett estimates at about 1500. It is now called Shur or Zur.

TYRUS, Ty'-rus.—The same as TYRE.

U

UCAL, Yew'-cal, power, prevalent.—A person to whom Agur gave his instructions; Prov. xxx. 1.

UEL, Yew'-el.—A person mentioned Ezra x. 34.

ULAI, Yew'-la-i, strength.—A river of Persia, near the city of Shushan. On its banks Daniel had his visions; Daniel viii. 2—16.

ULAM, Yew'-lam, porch, their strength.—A descendant of Saul; 1 Chron. vii. 16.

ULLA, Ul'-lah, elevation; 1 Chron. vii. 39.

UNBELIEF.—Infidelity, or a distrust of any narrative, person, or doctrine. Unbelief of God's word is the great sin in the world. It is the cause of disobedience to his commands; and that man will be eternally condemned over whom it shall finally prevail; Matt. xiii. 58. It is a dreadful crime, rejects Jesus and his salvation, and is the root of all other sins. Unbelief is either negative, in such as have not heard the gospel; as in the heathen; 1 Cor. vi. 6; 2 Cor. vi. 14; or positive, as in those who, though they hear the gospel, and profess to regard it, yet believe not with their hearts; Luke xii. 46; Tit. i. 15. Unbelief is either with respect to a particular declaration of God, as when Zacharias discredited God's promise of a son to him; Luke i. 20; or universal, having respect to all the declarations of God. It is either partial, importing some degrees of distrust; Mark ix. 24; or total, where there is no trust at all; 1 Tim. i. 13.

UNBELIEVERS, Luke 12. 46; 2 Cor. 6. 14.

UNCTION from the Holy One; 1 John ii. 20.—Alluding to holy anointing oil; Psa. xlv. 7. The Holy Spirit dwelt in the church to teach every thing requisite for salvation, and to qualify for sacred office. As oil was used in the consecration to office, and as oil was regarded as an emblem of the gifts and graces of the Spirit; so it is put for the Spirit himself, who presided in the church, and from whom all gifts and graces flowed.

UNICORN.—A fierce and powerful animal, often mentioned in Scripture. It is generally thought to mean the Rhinoceros, which has a strong horn between its forehead and nose, with which it rips up trees into splinters for food. Some have thought that the Buffalo was the true unicorn. The pictures which represent the unicorn in the form of a horse, with a horn in its forehead, are probably wholly fictitious. But an animal with one horn has been discovered by the Rev. John Campbell, as he states in his Travels in the interior of South Africa, and completely answering to that described by Job xxxix. 9—13. See also Deut. xxxiii. 17; Psa. xxii. 21; xxix. 6; xcii. 10; Num. xxiii. 22; xxiv. 8; Isa. xxxiv. 7.

UNITY of the SPIRIT; Eph. iv. 3.—Relates to that union of judgment and affection which exists in a true church, and characterizes every true believer. By the Spirit they have been enlightened, regenerated, sanctified, and brought to Christ, and into his church. They have the same faith; the same hope, the same understanding, and they worship the same God and Father of us all. This great blessing was the subject of prophecy and promise; Jer. xxxii. 39. The Redeemer prayed for the accomplishment of this promise, as an evidence to the world that he was the true Messiah; John xvii. 21. And on the day of Pentecost his prayer was answered; Acts iv. 32.

UPPER ROOM; Acts i. 13.

"They went into an upper room." This was either a room in the temple, or in the house of a disciple, where they usually met. In Luke xxiv. 53, it is said that after their return from mount Olivet "they were continually in the temple praising and blessing God:" therefore the upper room, was that apartment of the temple mentioned above. But we have the fullest proofs that upper rooms in private houses were also used for the purpose of reading the law, and conferring together on religious matters. As the people came to Jerusalem from all parts, three times a year, to celebrate the appointed festivals, the houses were open to strangers.

UPPERMOST ROOMS [places or couches,] at feasts, and the chief seats, &c.; Matt. xxiii. 6. In the Jewish synagogues, the elders sat with their backs towards the ark or chest, which contained the book of the law, and their faces towards the congregation, who looked towards the ark; and these seats were more honourable than others, and hence called the chief seats.

UR, Ur, fire, light.—A city of Chaldea, where Abraham and Terah resided, and where the Lord manifested himself to him; Gen. xi. 28.

URBANE, Ur'-ba-ne, civil, courteous.—A person mentioned Rom. xvi. 9.

URIAH, Yew-ry'-ah, light of the Lord.—The husband of Bathsheba, and David's general. He was distinguished by his loyalty and bravery in the army of Israel; but barbarously, even murderously treated by his monarch; 2 Sam. xi. 1—22.

URIAS, Yew-ry'-as.—The same as URIA; Matt. i. 6.

URIEL, Yew'-re-el, God is my light or fire.—A Levite; 1 Chron. vi. 24.

—The grandfather of king Abijah; 2 Chron. xiii. 2.

URIJAH, Yew-ry'-jah, the Lord is my light or fire.—A high priest of the Jews, in the reign of Ahaz; 2 Kings xvi. 10, 11.

URJAH.—A prophet, the son of Shemaiah, of Kirjath-jearim; Jer. xxvi. 20, 21. He was contemporary with Jeremiah, and prophesied the same things as he did respecting Jerusalem. At length he was put to death by the wicked Jehoiakim; ver. 22—24.

URIM, Yew'-rim, lights.—Urim and Thummim. The former signifies light, and the latter, perfection; terms employed to distinguish the clearness and perfection of the answers returned by this oracle, from the darkness and mutilation which characterized those of the heathen world. The Urim and Thummim were probably the stones set in the high priest's breast-plate, which had engraven upon them the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. It is supposed that the High priest stood before the ark: that the question of the inquirer was submissively repeated before God (which question usually related to political matters, and was designed to ascertain the will of God as to any affair, or any enterprise,) that the high priest then looked upon the breast-plate, and according to the lustre from the Shechinah that was reflected by any of the stones, or that illuminated in an extraordinary degree certain letters engraven on the stones, to distinguish them from the rest, together with, perhaps, some supernatural impulse on his mind, the high priest shaped his answer. This is the opinion of Josephus, the celebrated Jewish commentator. It appears also from these writers, that none might consult this oracle but the king or the united congregation.

USURE, 1 Tim. 2. 12.

USURY.—The gain for the loan of money. The Jews were allowed to lend money upon usury to strangers; Deut. xxiii. 20, but were prohibited to take usury from their brethren of Israel, at least, if they were poor; Exod. xxii. 25; Lev. xxv. 35—37.

From the scriptures speaking against the practice of usury, some have thought it unlawful; Ps. xv. 5; Prov. xxviii. 8; Ezek. xviii. 8. But usury there only means immoderate interest, or oppression, by taking advantage of the poverty of our nature; and that it seems as lawful for a man to receive interest for money, which another gains with, improves, but runs the hazard of in trade, as it is to receive rent for our land, which another gains with, improves, but runs the hazard of in husbandry.

He is able to save from the power, guilt, nature, and punishment, of sin; to the uttermost—to all intents, degrees, and purposes; and always, and in and through all times, places, and circumstances.

VAIL or VEIL

—A kind of curtain, intended to screen from public view. Rebecca “took a veil and covered herself,” when she was about to be first introduced to the presence of Isaac; Gen. xxiv. 65. It was considered to be a token of modesty; 1 Cor. xi. 3—10. Moses made a veil of blue, purple, and scarlet, for the purpose of separating the most holy place from the sanctuary; Exod. xxvi. 31—33. This was a highly significant emblem or type; for it represented the human nature of Christ, or, as the apostle expressly calls it, “his flesh,” whereby he hath consecrated for us “a new and living way into the holiest of all, in virtue of the blood which he shed to make atonement for sin;” Heb. x. 19, 20. It also signified the separation between Jews and Gentiles, which is now removed by the death of Christ; Eph. ii. 14, and when he yielded up his spirit into the hands of his heavenly Father, and cried out, “It is finished,” the veil of the temple was rent asunder from the top to the bottom; Matt. xxvii. 51, to show that the middle wall or partition which had hitherto separated Jews and Gentiles no longer existed. The prophet Isaiah speaks of a veil of ignorance cast over the human mind, which was to be done away by the preaching of the gospel; Isa. xxv. 6—8. And Paul mentions a veil as remaining upon the hearts of the unbelieving Jews, the effect of which was such that, in reading the scriptures of the Old Testament, they could not perceive that typical institution to be abolished by the death of Christ—for “even unto this day,” says he, “when Moses is read, the veil is upon their hearts; nevertheless, when their heart shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away;” 2 Cor. iii. 13—16; John ix. 39.

VALLEY 'of the shadow of death;' Psa. xxiii. 4. An image borrowed from the dusky caverns in the rocks, and the dismal vales, where the Jews buried their dead, and where death seemed to hover and cast over them a dark shadow.—Or, alluding to the valley of the forest of Hareth, inhabited by bears, lions, and tigers, whose dens are in the deepest shades. Death is appalling to most; for after death the judgment. Death is like a gloomy valley; but it must be passed by all. But the real believer feareth no evil in passing through it, because he is conducted by that "great Shepherd of the sheep, whom God brought again from the dead." Yes, in his last and greatest need, his atoning love, his faithful care, his precious promises, will, like a powerful rod, or crook, hold up his steps, till, through the dreaded valley, he passes to the heavenly mountain on which John saw the Lamb standing with a great multitude redeemed from the earth; Rev. xiv. 1.

This valley was proverbial for its sterility; Isa. xvii. 9. It was called also the "Valley of the Giants," probably from the great stature and strength of its original inhabitants; Josh. xv. 8; xviii. 16. The Valley of Eschol, near the Jordan, took its name from Abraham's ally; Gen. xiv. 24. Its grapes were so luxuriant, that one bunch required two men to carry it; Num. xiii. 23; xxxii. 9. VIGILANT. Watchful; 'Be vigilant';

—be always watchful; never be off your guard; your enemies are alert, they are never off theirs. A believer's watchfulness is somewhat like that of a soldier on guard. A sentinel posted on the walls, when he discovers an hostile party advancing, does not attempt to make head against them himself, but informs his commanding officer of the enemy's approach, and leaves him to take the proper measures to repel the foe; so the Christian does not attempt to fight temptations in his own strength, his watch-

VINE.—It is a noble plant of the creeping kind, famous for its fruit, called grapes, and for the juice of which wines are made. The Scriptures celebrate the vines of Sorek, Sibmah, Jazar, and those of Gaza, Sarepta, Libanus, Sharon, Eshcol, and Tyre.

Jacob, in blessing Judah, said;—"Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass's colt unto the choice vine, he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes;" to show the abundance which should fall to his lot; Gen. xlix. 11. Noah planted the vine after the Deluge; Gen. ix. 20. Many ancient writers state that Noah did not know the force of wine; having never used it before, nor having seen it used. He was the first that gathered the juice of the grape, and preserved it till by fermentation it became a potable liquor.

Before his time, men only ate the grape like other fruits.

The bunch of grapes cut in the valley of Eschol, and brought on a staff between two men to the camp of Israel; Num. xiii. 21—26, show how large the fruit was in that country. Travellers mention some growing there of a prodigious size. They say that there are bunches of grapes there weighing from ten to fifteen pounds. Also, in the valley of Hebron, so large, that two men could scarcely carry one.

Bochart says, that a triple produce from the same vine is gathered every year. In March, after the vine has produced the first clusters, they cut away from the fruit that wood which is barren. In April a new shoot, bearing fruit, springs from the branch that was left in March, which is also lopped; this shoots forth again, loaded with the latter grapes. Those clusters which blossomed in March come to maturity, and are fit to be gathered in August; those which blossomed in April, are gathered in September; and those which blossomed in May, must be gathered in October.

The law of Moses did not allow the planters of vineyards to eat the fruit before the fifth year; Lev. xix. 24, 25. The Israelites were required to indulge the poor, the orphan, and the stranger, with the use of the grapes on the seventh year. A traveller might take and eat the grapes in a vineyard as he passed along, but he was not to carry any away; Deut. xxiii. 24.

The juice of the grape was often pressed out by treading. The grapes were put into a large cistern, formed of mason work, and two or three men trod the grapes. They generally supported themselves by ropes from a beam overhead. Hence Christ is represented as saying of his sufferings, "I have trodden the wine-press alone;" Isa. lxiii. 3.

VINE—1. The Hebrew church; Ps. lxxx. 8; Jer. ii. 21.—2. Christ the Head of the church; John xv. 1.

VINE, 'a fruitful vine by the sides of their house.' The Easterns are very fond of covering their houses with vines; Psa. cxxviii. 3.

VINE of Sodom. "For their vine is as the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrha: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter;" Deut. xxxii. 32. The plant called by the Arabs Asher, or Osher, is the vine of Sodom. The fruit is as round as an orange, and of a pale colour. It contains air, and something silky, like a spider's web. It looks fair and delicious to the eye, but on being pressed, it explodes with a puff. It is said to be poisonous.

VINE and Fig-Tree, 'shall sit every man under his vine, &c.' Micah iv. 4. An allusion to the delightful Eastern harbours, which were partly composed of vines, and the agreeable shady retreat enjoyed under them, might also be found under their fig-trees. They were common in the Egyptian gardens. The passage points to a state of peace and tranquillity, as in troublesome and warlike times it is unsafe to venture beyond the walls of the town.

VINE. 'I will not henceforth drink of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.'—"My Father's kingdom denotes heaven, the dwelling-place of God. Heavenly enjoyment is sometimes compared to a feast. Ruinoel thus gives the sense:—"I shall no longer eat and drink with you on earth: from this time all participation in the affairs of this life will be at an end, and the society which I have hitherto had with you, until finally I shall taste of happiness with you in heaven, and our mutual bliss will be forever enduring." In Acts x. 41, Christ is said to have eaten and drunk with his disciples; but wine is not there mentioned. He ate and drank with them merely that they might believe him to be really alive.

VINEGAR.—An acid commonly derived from saccharine fermented liquors. When distilled it becomes perfectly colourless, and is increased in strength. It seems that weak sour wine was called vinegar by the Romans. Thus Matthew (chap. xxvii. 34) says "they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh." Dr. A. Clarke says, "it was a common custom to administer a stupefying potion, compounded of sour wine, frankincense, and myrrh, to condemned persons, to alleviate their sufferings; or so to disturb their intellect, that they might not be sensible of them." The rabbins grounded this on Prov. xxxi. 6. Our Lord, of course, refused such aid. By his first tasting, before refusing it, we may infer, that if it had been merely adapted to quench thirst, it would not have been refused. Labourers in harvest refresh themselves with this weak wine, or vinegar; Ruth ii. 14. Matthew says "vinegar," and Mark says "wine." Grotius says, The word oxos, which is that used by Matthew, is not meant vinegar, but a very inferior wine, used only by the meanest persons. It was so called from its acidity; on this account it was used well spiced with myrrh, frankincense, &c.

VINEYARD.—A piece of ground planted with vines. The vineyard was prepared with great care, the stones being gathered out, a secure fence made round it, and a scaffold or high summer-house built in the centre, where, as the fruit ripened, a watchman was stationed, and where there was always shelter for the workmen at their meals, and a suitable place to keep the tools. It represents the church of God; Jer. xii. 10; Isa. v. 1—7; Matt. xxi. 33.

VIPER.—A serpent which brings forth its young alive, and not, as is generally the case, by eggs. It seldom exceeds eighteen inches in length. There is no creature more malignant and venomous; the bite of some species produces death in a few hours. See Job xx. 16; Isa. xxx. 6. Dr. Harris is sure that the "cockatrice," mentioned Isa. lix. 5, is a viper.

VIPERS.—Wicked children of wicked parents; Matt. iii. 7; xii. 34.

VIRGIN. Figuratively, the church, or people of Israel; 2 Kings xix. 21; Isa. xxiii. 12; xxxvii. 22; Jer. xiv. 17; xviii. 13, &c. The name is also applied to cities never conquered, or devoted to idolatry, Isa. xxxvii. 22;

VIRGIN, 'Present you as a chaste virgin to Christ,' 2 Cor. xi. 2. Among the Greeks, a person was employed to educate and form young women, especially those of rank and figure, designed for marriage, and then to present them to their intended husbands; and if this officer permitted them, through negligence, to be corrupted between the espousals, and the consummation of the marriage, great blame would naturally fall upon him.

VIRGINS. 'Ten virgins took their lamps, &c;' Matt. xxv. 1 The whole parable alludes to the solemnities of a marriage among the Jews, when the bridegroom fetched home his bride from her father's house, attended with his friends, the children of the bride chamber, which was usually done in the night, and at the same time, the bride was waiting for him accompanied with virgins or bride-maids, carrying lamps; Psa. xlv. 14. "At a marriage, the procession of which I saw some years ago," says Mr. Ward, "the bridegroom came from a distance, and the bride lived at Serampore, to which place the bridegroom was to come by water. After waiting two or three hours, at length, near midnight, it was announced, as if in the very words of Scripture, "Behold! the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." All the persons attending, now lighted their lamps, and ran with them in their hands to fill up their stations in the procession; some of them had lost their lights, and were unprepared, but it was then too late to seek them, as the cavalcade moved forward to the house of the bride, at which place the company entered a large and splendidly illuminated area, before the house, covered with an awning, where a great multitude of friends, dressed in their best apparel were seated upon mats. The bridegroom was carried in the arms of a friend, and placed in a superb seat in the midst of the company, where he sat a short time, and then went into the house, the door of which was immediately shut, and guarded by Sepoys. I and others expostulated with the door keepers, but in vain. Never was I so struck with our Lord's beautiful parable, as at this moment:—"and the door was shut."

VIRTUE.—Energy to produce an effect,—courage; 2 Peter i. 3—5, holiness of heart and life. The latter is its more common signification, but in defining it, writers are not agreed. Some define it "universal benevolence;" others "the imitation of God;" others, a wise regard to our own interests;" others "moral goodness." We may say it means in general whatever is opposed to vice; Phil. iv. 8.

VISAGE, Is. 52. 14; Lam. 4. 8.

VISIBLE and INVISIBLE, Col. 1. 16.

VISION. The act of seeing. Also a "supernatural appearance," by which God revealed his will, Acts 9. 10, 12; 2 Cor. 12. 1. The vision was often in sleep, and sometimes by a temporary trance, Is. 1. 1. 1 Sam. 3. 1; Ps. 89. 19; Matt. 17. 9; Acts 10. 19, & 16. 9.

VISION, VALLEY OF.—Denotes Jerusalem, because encompassed with high mountains, and favoured with many visions or revelations; or because the temple was built on Mount Moriah, signifying the Mountain of Vision; Isa. xxii. 1.

VISIT, VISITING, frequently signifies to chastise or punish; Ex. xxxii. 34. Jer. v. 9.

VISITING 'the iniquity of the fathers upon the children;' Ex. xx. 5; Num. xiv. 18; Dent v. 9. Evidently upon such children as tread in their sinful steps, compare Ezek. xviii. It is only when children copy and improve on the crimes of their wicked parents, that they draw down upon their heads redoubled vengeance: so that the innocent never suffer for the guilty, except in such temporal calamities as necessarily result from their parents' crimes. As when the profligacy of one generation involves the next in poverty, or the like. On the contrary, so benevolent is the God of Israel, that the eminent piety of one man is sometimes rewarded with blessings on thousands of his descendants. This was the case with Abraham and his descendants. Yet this is the God whom deists represent as cruel and vindictive.

VOCATION, or calling Eph. iv. 1.
 This includes the Christian profession, with all the doctrines, precepts, privileges, and duties of the Christian religion.

VOICE.—A sound emitted by man or beast; Gen. xxvii. 22. God's voice is, (1.) The thunder, which loudly declares his existence and providence;
Psa. xxix. 3. (2.) His laws, teaching, and promises; in which he declares his will to men; Exod. xv. 26. (3.)
 His providences, wherein he publishes his own excellencies, awakens us from our stupidity, and calls us to our duty; Mic. vi. 9; Amos i. 2. To mark John the Baptist as not the true Messiah, but a proclaimer of his appearance, he is called a voice; Isaiah xl. 1.

VOICE of one crying &c. Matt. iii.
 3. Great preparations were made for the journeyings of eastern monarchs.
 Whenever they entered on an expedition, or took any journey, especially through desert and unfrequented countries, harbingers were sent before them, to prepare all things for their passage, and pioneers to open all the passes, to level the ways, and to remove all impediments. Hence, in allusion to this practice, John the Baptist is called the harbinger of Christ.

VOW.—A solemn engagement to God, to perform some duty, or to abstain from something sinful; which vow was not to be broken; Gen.
xxviii. 20; Lev. vii. 16; xxvii. 2;
Num. xxx. 2; Judg. xi. 30; 1 Sam.
i. 11; Eccles. v. 4; Acts xviii. 18;
xxi. 23. The performance of vows is strictly enjoined in Scripture; Deut.
xxiii. 21; Ps. xxii. 25; lxvi. 13.
 Some vows are evil, and evil in their tendency. Such vows are neither to be made nor kept. Of this kind was the vow or curse under which the Jews bound themselves to murder Paul;
Acts xxiii. 12.

WALL. A line of stones built for a boundary or defence; Num. xxii.
24; Josh. ii. 15. It denotes defence, strength, stability; Isa. xxvi. 1.

WALL.—The preceding words signify, 'Surely there had not been left to Nabal by the morning light so much as a dog;' 1 Sam. xxv. 22. 24.
In 1 Kings xiv. 10; xxi. 21; 2 Kings
ix. 8, the rendering should be 'every male;' and in 1 Kings xvi. 11, 'a single male.' The renderings above are given in the words of Boothroyd's version, and the clauses printed in italics, should be substituted for the coarse translation given in the texts here referred to.

WALL OF FIRE.—"I will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and I will be the glory in the midst of her;"
Zech. ii. 5. At this time the Jews were captives in Babylon; and their city, Jerusalem, was desolate, and all its walls broken down. Yet God would restore them, and be the guardian of their beloved city: "For I," &c. "A wall of fire" seems a singular expression to us; for whoever built a wall of fire? It refers to a practice of the Eastern shepherds and travellers, who, in order to protect their flocks and tents from the attacks of wild beasts, were accustomed, at night, to make fires all around them, over which the most furious animals always dreaded to pass. The custom is still adopted—fire being the greatest preservative from ferocious animals. Hence the promise is great. "I, saith the Lord, will be a wall of fire," &c. The "glory in the midst," is an allusion to the symbol of the Divine presence in the holy of holies; Rom ix. 4.

WANTONNESS, Lasciviousness
carnal lusts; Rom. xiii. 13; 2 Pet. ii. 18.

WAR. A contest of nations, carried on by force. War originates in the wicked passions of men; Jam. iv.
1—3; Luke ii. 14. It is an awful mass of evils and crimes, and has been permitted by a righteous God to scourge the nations whose lusts drive them to its perpetration. Murder, robbery, Sabbath-breaking, violation of chastity, neglect of every domestic duty, waste of treasure, pride, revenge, jealousy, and stratagem, are the fruits of war.

The implements of war have been constantly becoming more deadly.
The inventory of Uzziah's arsenal was "shields, spears, helmets, habergeons, bows, and slings." Then he invented machines to shoot stones from the ramparts; 2 Chron. xxvi. About 100 years after, we find battering rams were used; Ezek. iv. 2. How different are the present modes of attack and defence! What misdirected ingenuity and science have been employed in rendering man a more dreadful destroyer! God commanded the Hebrews to destroy the Canaanites; but the wicked wars of the world derive no authority from that circumstance.
The Jewish wars may fairly be considered in the light of executions. At any rate, there was express divine command, which will not be pleaded for any modern war.

Christ is "the Prince of peace;" his doctrines inculcate "peace on earth;"
and when his kingdom shall universally prevail, "the nations shall learn war no more." Christians should therefore be men of peace, and should use all proper exertions to banish war in all its forms from the earth ; Matt. v. 9 ; Rom. xii. 18. Peace societies have of late done much to enlighten the public mind on this weighty subject. It is certain that before we can have the full millennium, wars must cease.

WAR, and WARFARE, are terms which, besides their literal acceptation, are frequently employed to denote that spiritual conflict in which the believer is called daily to engage with the world, with his own depraved propensities, and with the powers of darkness, denominated by the apostle Paul, "spiritual wickedness in high places;" Eph. vi. 12 ; 1 Pet. ii. 11 ; Rom. vii. 23. "We wrestle not (merely) against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

WAR in Heaven ; Rev. xii. 7. The war commenced by Constantine the Great against Paganism—Dr. Gill.—It may refer to the struggles of the primitive saints with their enemies and persecutors.

WARRETH, 'no man that warreth entangleth himself, &c. ;' 2 Tim. ii. 4. For the purpose of keeping the military disembarrassed from the cares and distractions of secular life, the Romans prohibited marriage to their soldiers. To this prohibition the apostle here alludes.

WARS. "And ye shall hear of wars, and rumours of war ;" Matt. xxiv. 6. This prophecy is very remarkable. When Christ uttered it, Judea was in a state of peace, but Christ foresaw approaching the devastations of war.—Parties were formed, and particular emperors had their respective partisans who were bitter and violent against each other. Four emperors, Nero, Galba, Otho, and Vitellus, suffered violent deaths in the short space of 18 months. The war with the Romans broke out in A. D. 66, and ended A. D. 71. It was caused by the oppressive and tyrannical measures of Gessius Florus, Procurator of Judea, who was appointed by Nero, in the year 65. He even shared the booty of the robbers which then abounded in Judea, and so allowed and sanctioned them in committing their depredations on society. There were also several wars of the Jews among themselves, and of the Romans with the Syrians, Samaritans, and other neighbouring nations, before Jerusalem was destroyed.

WAR with the SAINTS. "And it was given unto him (Antichrist) to make war with the saints ;" Rev. xiii. O what blood has the Papal power shed. It has often been drunk with the blood of saints. Immense numbers have been murdered for opposing its false and ridiculous doctrines, and foolish childish forms !

A million of the poor Waldenses perished. In about thirty years from the institution of the Jesuits, 900,000 orthodox Christians were slain. The Duke of Alva boasted of having put 36,000 to death in the Netherlands, by the hands of the common executioner, during the space of a few years. The Inquisition destroyed, by various tortures, 150,000 Christians within thirty years. These are but part of the victims of Popery. It has the same spirit still, but it lacks the power. The carnal mind tends to a showy religion, like that of antichrist, and even some ministers play the popish harlequin at the altar and in the pulpit O foolish, childish men !

WASH mine hands in innocency; Ps. xxvi. 6. This alludes to the ceremonies of the priests washing when they went in to minister; Exod. xxx. 20, 21; it also alludes to the priests at the altar, who used to go round it when they laid the sacrifice upon it. At the four corners they sprinkled and poured out the blood; but as wicked and hypocritical men sought their cleanness in water only, their gross superstition is here reprov'd.

WASH, WASHED, WASHING, purification.—1. Moral; Ps. xxvi. 6; lxxiii. 13.—2. Spiritual; Ps. li. 2; Ezek. xvi. 9.—Pardon and sanctification; 1 Cor. vi. 11; Rev. i. 5; vii. 14.

WASHED, 'our bodies washed with pure water.' The allusion is to a custom of the Jews, who were obliged to wash their bodies, and make them clean when they prayed.—Thus signifying that holiness of body must be joined to purity of heart; 1 Tim. ii. 8.

WASHING the FEET.—This was an act of true hospitality in Oriental countries, where the feet, covered only with sandals, were much injured by scorching dust; washing the rest of the body was less necessary; John xiii. 6—10.

WASH—feet; John xiii. 5. It devolved upon servants to wash the feet of guests; 1 Sam. xxv. 41. The Hindoos, like the Jews, walk home bare-foot from bathing. Hence John xiii.

WATCH.—A Roman guard, consisting of sixty soldiers, allowed the Jewish rulers to quell tumults; Matt. xxvii. 65.

WATCHES.—The Jews in ancient times divided the night into three, the evening, the middle, and the morning, each including four hours; Ex. xiv. 24; Judg. vii. 19; 1 Sam. xi. 11;—in after times they divided the night into four, in imitation of the Romans, who relieved their sentinels at the end of every three hours; Matt. xiv. 25; Mark vi. 48. These parts of the night were usually denominated the first, second, third, and fourth watches; but they were sometimes styled the evening, midnight, cock-crowing, and morning; Matt. xiv. 25; Luke xii. 38; Mark xiii. 35.

WATCHFUL, vigilant to guard against dangers. Watchfulness is urgently inculcated upon Christians. We must be watchful against the temptations of Satan; Rom. x. 12;—the allurements of the world; Ps. xxxix. 1; Mark viii. 15;—the deceitfulness of our hearts ; Heb. iii. 12 ; erroneous doctrines ; and against whatever would hinder our piety and usefulness. We are to watch for the teachings of Providence ; Ps. v. 8 ;—the fulfilment of prophecies ; Rev. xvi. 15 ; righteous deliverance from trouble ; Ps. cxxx. ;—proper topics, spirit, and seasons of prayer ; Eph. vi. 18 ;—death and judgment ; Mark xiii. 37.

WATCHMEN.—Symbolically, God's ministers or prophets ; Isa. lii. 8 ; Jer. vi. 17.

WATCHMEN, 'I have set watchmen—which shall never hold their peace ;' Isa. lxii. 6. Alluding to the temple service, in which there was appointed a constant watch, day and night, by the Levites. Now the watches in the east, even to this day, are performed by a loud cry from time to time by the watchmen, to mark the time, and that very frequently, and in order to show that they themselves are constantly attentive to their duty. 'The watchmen in the camp of the caravans to their rounds, crying one after another, 'God is one, he is merciful ;' and often add, 'take heed to yourselves.'"

WATCHMEN, are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark ; Isa. lvi. 10, 11. We can easily understand all these allusions to the usual characteristics of the dog, with the exception of being dumb. Dogs, in eastern countries, were very liable to degenerate, owing to the extreme heat, and would become indolent and dumb. There is a species of dogs in upper Egypt, resembling the shepherd's dog, with voices so weak that their barking can scarcely be heard ; and dogs taken to the West Indies and Africa, degenerate in the same way.

WATER, a fluid which occupies a large portion of the globe. Moisture raised by the heat of the sun, in the form of vapour, being carried about in the air, and meeting in a collective mass, produces clouds ; these, uniting and becoming heavier than the surrounding air, fall down on dew or rain, to make fruitful the earth. Much more rain falls on the higher than on the lower ground, and the water entering through crevices in the hills, and finding its way through the earth to the surface again, produces springs. The streams of these uniting, form brooks, which unite into rivers ; and after adding to the beauty of the country, and accomplishing many very useful purposes, empty themselves into the sea. Water is 816 times heavier than common air ; a pint of it weighs one pound, and a cubic foot about one thousand ounces, or sixty-two and a half pounds. Ice is crystallized water ; and by a remarkable exemption from the common laws of heat, becomes lighter as it grows colder. In this is strikingly exemplified the wisdom and goodness of God. Dreadful would have been the consequences, if, like other fluids, water had grown heavier by loss of heat.

WATER was the ordinary beverage of the Jews, which was drawn from the public wells and fountains ; John iv. 6, 7, and which was to be refused to no one ; Matt. xxv. 35. The water of the Nile, in Egypt, is singularly delicious and wholesome. This circumstance gives peculiar energy to those words of Moses, when he announced to Pharaoh, that the waters of the Nile should be turned into blood; and that the Egyptians should "loathe to drink of the water of the river;" Ex. vii. 17—19. In the language of the prophets, waters often denote a great multitude of people; Isa. viii. 7. "The Lord bringeth upon them the waters of the river;" that is, the Assyrian army. And in Rev. 17. 15, "The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples and multitudes, and nations and tongues." It is put for children or posterity; Num. xxiv. 7; "He shall pour the water out of his buckets." And in Isa. xlvi. 1; "Which are come forth out of the waters of Judah." For the clouds, Ps. civ. 3, "Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters;" who founded, as it were, the heavens upon the clouds. Waters sometimes stand for tears; Jer. ix. 1. "Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears." For the ordinances of the gospel, where the graces and comforts of the Holy Spirit are dispensed, Isa. lv. 1; "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters." The graces and comforts of the Holy Spirit are frequently compared to waters, as in Isa. xii. 3; xxxv. 6, 7; John vii. 37, 38. For the purifying operations of the Holy Spirit; John iii. 5; Ps. li. 2. Water is also put for troubles and afflictions; Ps. lxxix. 1.

WATERS that fail; Jer. xv. 18. Or are not seen—have no reality. Alluding to the deceitful mirage, or appearance of water in the burning desert, produced by the sun and vapour.

WATER-SPOUTS.—A large mass of water collected into a sort of column, one end of which is on the sea or land, and the other in the clouds; and by which water, in the former case, is sometimes raised into the clouds, and sometimes, in both cases, descends from them in torrents. They are symbolical of affliction; Ps. xlii. 7.

WATER-POTS. "There were set there six water-pots of stone, containing," &c., John ii. 6.—Earthen urns, the work of antiquity, were found both by Clarke and Carne, some years ago, in Cana, buried among the ruins of centuries. They were capable of holding from 18 to 27 gallons each, and were probably those used by the ancient inhabitants.

WAVERING. — A doubting, changeful mind; James i. 6; Heb. x. 23.

WAVES.--Symbolically afflictions; Ps. xlii. 7; lxxxviii. 7.

WAY.—A path for travellers. The word is frequently used to signify the habits of a person, or the method of doing any thing; Gen. vi. 12; Jer. x. 2. The customary dealings of God are called his "way;" Psa. xxv. 10; Isa. lv. 8.

The Lord Jesus is called "THE WAY;" John xiv. 6; for "no man cometh to the Father but by him." He is the "NEW and LIVING WAY" which is consecrated through the veil of his flesh; Heb. x. 20.

—"In his blest life
We see the path, and in his death the price,
And in his great ascent, the proof supreme Of immortality."

Jesus is the way that leads to the Father; the truth that reaches the knowledge of God, and directs in the way; the life that animates all those who seek and serve him; and which is to be enjoyed eternally at the end of the way. Christ is the way, 1. By doctrine; John vi. 68.—2. By his example; 1 Pet. ii. 21.—3. By his sacrifice; Heb. ix. 8, 9.—4. By his Spirit; John xvi. 13. No human being could have entered the heaven of heavens, had not Jesus himself opened the way. The way is called "new," or fresh, and living; this is evidently an allusion to the blood of the victim newly shed, uncoagulated, and consequently proper to be used for sprinkling. The blood of the Jewish victims was fit for sacrificial purposes only so long as it was warm and fluid; and might be considered as yet possessing vitality. Christ is here, in this allusion, represented as newly slain, and yet living; the blood ever considered as flowing, and giving life to the world. The way by the old covenant neither gave life, nor removed the liability to death. The way to peace and reconciliation under the old covenant was through the dead bodies of the animals slain; but Christ is living, and ever liveth to make intercession for us; therefore he is a new and living way.

WAYS, 'In the ways hast thou sat for them as the Arabian in the wilderness;' Jer. iii. 2. Chardin has given a very strong and lively description of the eagerness with which the Arabians look out for prey. "The Arabs wait for caravans with the most violent avidity, looking about them to all sides, raising themselves up on their horses, running here and there to see if they can perceive any smoke, or dust, or track on the ground, or any other marks of people passing along."

WEALTH.—Abundance of money, land, houses, &c.; Deut. viii. 18. God gives wisdom, understanding, bodily strength and health. God gives fertility to the earth, and brings every proper purpose to a right issue: and to God, the wealthy man must account for the manner in which he has expended the riches given him. "Wealth gotten by vanity shall be diminished;" Prov. xiii. 11. Property that is not the result of honest industry and hard labour is seldom permanent. The general experience of men shows that wealth ill gotten seldom reaches to the third generation. "A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children;" he files many a prayer in heaven in their behalf; and his good example and advices are remembered and quoted from generation to generation.

WEAN is from the Anglo-Saxon awendan, which signifies to convert, transfer, turn from one thing to another, which is the exact import of the Hebrew (gamal;) Hence, to turn a child from the breast, to receive another kind of aliment; and hence the word wean, still in use in the northern parts of Great Britain, which properly signifies a child taken from the breast.

WEASELS are of two kinds,—the house and the field weasel. They are very subtle and strong, though small. They prey on serpents, moles, rats, mice, and sometimes on poultry; Lev. xi. 29.

WEB, Job 8. 14; Is. 59. 5, 6.

WEAVE.—The art of weaving was more perfect in Egypt anciently than in any other country. Herodotus mentions it as a peculiarity that in that country weaving was done by men. The cotton and linen cloth found upon some mummies is very beautiful.

WEDDING.—See Marriage.

WEDDING GARMENT; Matt. xxii. 12. It is usual for eastern sovereigns to confer a robe of office, for admission to their presence, on particular occasions. On the marriage of a king's son, such a robe would not be omitted. On such an occasion as this it could not be expected that travellers should be provided with a suitable habit. The eastern monarchs, having wardrobes for presents, and for such purposes, explains their capability of meeting all such exigences. The wedding dresses are of the most magnificent kind, and the meanest person would resent with indignation an unsuitable appearance on such a momentous occasion.—Dr. Doddridge. "And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment." The garments worn on nuptial feasts were long white robes, which they obtained by applying to the governor of the feast. It was the neglect of this application which made the man speechless, when the king said, "Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding garment?"

The parable is beautifully illustrated by the prophet Zephaniah, ch. i. 7, 8; "The Lord hath prepared a Sacrifice; he hath bidden his guests. And it shall come to pass, in the day of the Lord's sacrifice, that I will punish the princes, and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with strange apparel." The wedding garment, as spiritually understood, is that meetness which we must have before we can partake of the marriage supper of the Lamb; Rev. xix. 7—9. That meetness consists of faith in the sacrifice of Christ; renewal of soul by the Holy Spirit, giving us holiness of heart and life.

WEDGE of gold of fifty shekels weight—I coveted—took—and hid it in the earth in the midst of my tent; Josh. vii. 21. This verse gives a notable instance of the progress of sin. It enters the eye—sinks into the heart—actuates the hand—and leads to secrecy, and dissimulation, and death. Compare James i. 15.

WEEK, primarily denotes a revolution of time consisting of seven days. The Hebrews had three sorts of weeks. The first was weeks of days, which were reckoned from one Sabbath to another. The second was weeks of years, which were reckoned from one sabbatical year to another, and which consisted of seven years; and they had, lastly, weeks of seven times seven years, or of forty-nine years, which were computed from one jubilee to another. The seventy weeks of Daniel were weeks of years, and not of days, and consequently must include a period of four hundred and ninety years—that is, from the seventh year of Artaxerxes Longimanus (B. C. 457) when he gave forth the commandment to Ezra for restoring the church state of the Jews; Dan. ix. 24—26

Ezra vii. to the period when reconciliation should be effected by the death of the Messiah, was to be four hundred and ninety years, and this chronologically agrees exactly with the time of Christ's death.

WEIGH, implies (1) To examine by scales; Ezek. iv. 16. (2) To inspect rigidly; Prov. xvi. 2; Isa. xxvi. 7. The shekel weighed 10 dwt. Sixty of these made a maneh, weighing 2lb. 6ozs. Fifty manehs made a talent, or 3000 shekels, weighing 125lbs. Such are the computations of HORNE; but on this subject there is much uncertainty.

WEIGHED 'in the balances,' Dan. v. 27. This may allude to the weight of deficient money; but it is worthy of notice, that it was a custom of the Mogul to have himself weighed every year before his grandees, and by his weight the physicians determined the state of his health. The ceremony was performed within his house, or tent, in a fair spacious room, into which none were admitted but by special leave. The scales in which he was thus weighed were plated with gold; and so was the beam, on which they hung by great chains, made likewise of that most precious metal. The king, sitting in one of them, was weighed first against silver coin, which immediately afterwards was distributed among the poor; then he was weighed also against gold; after that against jewels (as they say,) but, I observed (being there present with my lord ambassador,) that he was weighed against three several things, laid in silken bags on the contrary scale. When I saw him in the balance, I thought on Belshazzar, who was found too light.—Sir Thomas Roe's Voyage to India.

WEIGHT, 'lay aside every weight, &c.' Heb. xii. 1. Those who were to run in a race freed themselves from all weight or burden, and such things as might entangle them, as long garments, which, cleaving to them, would prove their continual hindrance. The word is used, Acts vii. 58, where it is rendered laid down; the witnesses laid down, that is, put off and laid down their clothes, which explains the metaphor.

WELLS.—Great precautions were taken anciently, as well as in modern times, to prevent the moving sands from choking up the wells, by placing a stone over the mouth, Gen. xxix. 2—8; after the requisite supply had been drawn up; or by locking them up, which Sir John Chadrin thinks was done at Laban's well, of which Rachel perhaps kept the key; Gen. xxix. 9. The stopping up of wells is to this day an act of hostility in the east, as it was in the days of Abraham and Isaac; Gen. xxvi. 15—18; and also long after, among several ancient nations. Wells and fountains were lurking-places of robbers and assassins, and enemies were accustomed to lie in ambush at them, as they are now. To this Deborah alludes in her song; Judg. v. 11. See Jacob's Well. "Wells of salvation," Isa. xii. 3; which compare with John iv. 10, 14, and vii. 37, 38.

WEST. 'A cloud rise out of the west—a shower;' Luke xii. 54. This was a popular observation of the ancient inhabitants of Palestine, the winds which are attended by rain being generally west.

WHALE.—The largest fish known. It is mentioned Job vii. 12; Ezek. xxxii. 2. The original signifies a great monster, and so it ought to have been translated in Matt. xii. 40. See Jonah.

WHEAT.—A well known grain; it is made into bread. The ordinary kinds of wheat are well known. The wisdom of God is strikingly shown in the stalk of Egyptian wheat. If it were hollow and weak like ours, which has only to support one ear, it would break with the weight. But it is solidly filled with a sort of pith, and thus rendered sufficiently firm. The Holy Land produced wheat and barley so abundantly, that sixty or a hundred fold sometimes rewarded the husbandman; Gen. xxvi. 42; Matt. xiii. 8. It was exported to neighbouring countries in great quantities; 1 Kings v. 11; Acts xii. 20. Wheat is also put for those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ; Matt. iii. 12. "He will gather the wheat into the garner;" either he will take his saints into heaven, or put them in a place of safety. See Matt xiii. 38.

WHEEL broken at the cistern, is stated as one of the causes of dissolution; Ecc. xii. 6. It alludes to the Asiatic wheels, by which they raise water from their wells, tanks, and deep cisterns, for domestic purposes, or to irrigate the grounds. Thus when the blood becomes stagnant, the lungs cease to respire, the blood no longer oxidizes, all motion voluntary and involuntary ceases, and the body, the house of the immortal spirit, is no longer tenable, and the soul takes its flight into the eternal world.

Some mode of punishment is intended by "bringing the wheel over them;" Prov. xx. 26. The king thrashes them in his anger, as the wheel does the grain on the threshing-floor. "Why tarry the wheels of his chariot?" It has been justly observed that this is a striking image of maternal solicitude, and of a mind divided between hope and fear; Judges v. 28.

WHEEL, 'Make them like a wheel, &c.' Psa. lxxxiii. 13—15.—The word translated wheel means any light thing that may be driven round, and is read by some, "thistle-down," or "whirling-chaff." The allusion of burning a wood, is taken from the practice, in uncultivated countries, of setting the woods on fire, as the first step towards clearing the land, a custom alluded to by Homer. By the burning of mountains, is meant the fern and furze upon them. The verses are generally understood as a prediction respecting those who invade the inheritance of Jehovah, and say, "Let us take to ourselves the house of God in possession."

WHIRLWIND.—A strong blast rapidly moving in a circular manner. They are common in the deserts of Arabia. They are very often most destructive, sweeping down houses, trees, &c.; Job xxxvii. 9; xxxviii. 1, &c. The prophet alludes to them as occurring in the deserts which border on the south of Judæa; Isa. xxi. 1, &c. Ezekiel speaks of one coming from the north; Ezek. i. 4. But it most frequently blows from the south, and is attended with fatal consequences to the traveller. Mr. Bruce describes one of these tornadoes, in a plain near the Nile, as lifting up a camel, and throwing it to a great distance with such violence, as to break several of its ribs; and whirling himself and two of his servants off their feet, and throwing them with violence on the ground. A hut also was demolished by it, and half the materials were dispersed all over the plain, leaving the other half standing. How striking is the imagery of the prophet, taken from this phenomenon: "The whirlwind shall take them away as stubble;" Isa. xl. 24. "Chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind, and like a rolling thing before the whirlwind;" Isa. xvii. 13.

WHITE is a term frequently used in scripture, to denote purity and the favour of God; Psa. li. 7; Isa. i. 18. To walk or be clothed in white signifies to be prosperous, successful, and victorious, to be holy, happy, honoured, and rewarded; Rev. iii. 4, 5, 18; iv. 4; vii. 9, 13, 14. White linen is said to be the righteousness of the saints, Rev. xix. 8; and this is the righteousness in which they stand before the throne; it is a righteousness wrought in them by the merits of Christ's blood, and the power of his Spirit.

WHITE GARMENTS. 'Let thy garments be always white;' Ecc. ix. 8. White garments were worn on occasions of festive joy, and the expression in this passage is of the same meaning as the apostolic exhortation, 'rejoice evermore.' Compare Isa. lxi. 3; Rev. iii. 4, 5; vii. 9, 10.

WHIT.—"He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit;" John xiii. 10. Mr. Statham says, "I never understood the meaning of these words until I saw the better sort of East Indian natives return home after performing their customary ablutions. As they return to their habitations barefoot, they necessarily contract, in their progress, some portion of dirt on their feet. When therefore they arrive at home, the first thing they do is to mount a low stool, and pour a small vessel of water over their feet to cleanse them from the soil they may have contracted in their journey homewards; if they are of the higher order of society, a servant performs it for them, and then they are "clean every whit." Does not this figuratively represent the defilement which a Christian contracts, although he may have been cleansed by faith in a crucified Saviour; and the necessity of a continual application of the precious blood of atonement to the conscience, in order that the soul may be clean, every whit?"

WICKED.—"The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked;" Jer. xvii. 9. Deceitful—tortuous—full of windings—insidious—lying ever at the catch; striving to avail itself of every available circumstance to gratify its propensities to pride, ambition, evil desire, and corruption of all kinds. Desperately wicked.—Grievously infirm and debilitated, wretched and weak in resistance, a prey to the least temptation, and in consequence, distressed beyond all things.—"Shrewd," says an old commentator, "is the heart of man, and unsearchable, who shall know it?" It even hides itself from itself; so that the owner does not know it.

WIDOW, a woman whose husband is dead. The brother of the husband dying without issue, Deut. xxv. 5, &c., was to marry the widow. Two motives prevailed to the enacting of this law. The first was, the continuation of estates in the same family; and the other, to perpetuate a man's name in Israel. It was looked upon as a great misfortune for a man to die without an heir, and for his inheritance to pass into another family. Probably they might look upon a marriage as not fully consummated when there was no procreation of children. This law was not confined to brothers-in-law only, but was extended to more distant relations of the same line, as we may observe in the example of Ruth, who married Boaz after she had been refused by a nearer kinsman. God frequently recommends to his people to be very careful in affording relief to the widow and orphan; Exod. xxii. 22. "Ye shall not afflict any widow or fatherless child."

WILD MAN.—"And he [Ishmael] will be a wild man, &c., Gen. xvi. 12. Thus the Arabs, the posterity of Ishmael, have ever maintained their prophetic character; they have remained, under every change of condition, a wild people, their hand has still been against every man, and every man's hand against them. Gibbon says that the Arabs have maintained a perpetual independence—that the body of the nation has escaped the yoke of the most powerful monarchies, and that the arms of Sesostris, and Cyrus, of Pompey and Trajan, could never achieve the conquest of Arabia. They are armed against mankind. Plundering is their profession. Their alliance is never courted, and can never be obtained, and all that the Turks, or Persians, or any of their neighbours can stipulate from them, is a partial and purchased forbearance. Even the British who have established almost a residence in every country have entered the territories of the descendants of Ishmael, to accomplish only the premeditated destruction of a fort, and to retire.

"On the smallest computation," says Sir R. K. Porter, "such must have been the manners of those people for more than three thousand years; thus, in all things, verifying the prediction given of Ishmael at his birth, that he, in his posterity, should be a wild man, and always continue to be so, though they shall dwell for ever in the presence of their brethren." And that an acute and active people, surrounded for ages by polished and luxurious nations, should, from their earliest to their latest times, be still found, indeed, a wild people, dwelling in the presence of all their brethren, (as we may call these nations,) unsubdued and unchangeable, is a standing miracle—one of those mysterious facts which establish the truth of prophecy. "This prophecy alone," says Bruce, another traveller, "in the truth of which all sorts of religion agree, is of itself a sufficient proof, without others, of the divine authority of the scriptures."

WILDERNESS. When the Israelites had passed through the Red Sea, they entered "that great and terrible Wilderness," which has ever since been famous by their wanderings in it, and by the memorable events which occurred during those wanderings. This desert is of a triangular form. Its base extends on the north, above 150 miles, and borders on the countries of Moab and Edom and the desert which separates Canaan and Egypt. Its southern part runs down between the two branches of the Red Sea, already mentioned, and terminates in a cape where those branches divide. Its length from south to north is about 250 miles. It is nearly covered with barren mountains; and these towards the north are composed of chalk rocks, but in the south mostly granite. Hence it was called, "Arabia the stony." The soil is a dry gravel; and produces only thorns, tamarisks and firs, with a few shrubs. Springs are very rare; and the few that exist, are either sulphureous and hot, or brackish and disagreeable. The waters and soil are impregnated with salt; and in some, mines of rock-salt exist. In some valleys, where the earth has been washed down from the adjacent hills, the ground may be cultivated, and a scanty crop obtained. About five or six thousand wandering Arabs now occupy this country, who are divided into three tribes. The northern parts abound with ruins, some of a magnificent character; the remains, probably, of the structures raised by the ancient Idumeans and Edomites.

On the western edge of this wilderness, the children of Israel ascended out of the Red Sea. The promised land lay to the north-east, at about 200 miles distance; but the direct course passed through the territory of the Philistines, a brave and numerous people, who would doubtless have opposed their progress. With these, the Hebrews, weak, undisciplined, and debased by a long bondage, were ill prepared to contend. God, therefore, led the people about through the wilderness of the Red Sea;" Ex. xiii. 17.

WILDERNESS, Deut. 32. 10; Prov. 21. 19; Song 3. 6, & 8. 5; Is. 35. 1, 6, & 41. 18, 19, & 42. 11, & 43. 19. 20.

WILD HONEY. "His meat was locusts and wild honey;" Matt. iii. 4. Such as he got from the clefts of the rocks or hollow trees, which abounded in Judea; or probably a kind of honey flowing from certain kinds of trees, as the palm and tamarisk trees, &c. In 1 Sam. xiv. 26, it is said that "when the people were come into the wood, behold, the honey dropped."

WILES.—Crafty tricks; Num. xxv. 18. Enticing temptations; Eph. vi. 11.

WILL is the faculty of the soul whereby we freely choose or refuse. Will is a free principle. This is the most essential discrimination between matter and spirit. Matter can have no choice, spirit has. "It is God which worketh in you both to will and to do;" Phil. ii. 13. The power to will, and the power to act, must necessarily come from God, who is the Creator of the soul and body, and of all their powers; but the act of volition, and the act of working, come from man. God gives the power to will; man wills through that power. See John xv. 5. "That ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God;" Rom. xii. 2. This is his revealed will contained in his word, which is called good, because it enjoins only what is for our benefit; it is acceptable; by obedience to it we shall be accepted; and it is perfect, the observance thereof will make us perfect; 2 Tim. iii. 17. This is the grand design of the Divine Being in revealing his righteous will to men.

"Placed for his trial on this bustling stage,
From thoughtless youth to ruminating age
Free in his will to choose or to refuse,
Man may improve the crisis, or abuse;
Else, on the fatalist's unrighteous plan,
Say to what bar amenable were man?
With nought in charge, he could betray no trust;
And if he fell would fall, because he must;
If love reward him, or if vengeance strike,
His recompense in both unjust alike."

WILL. "Ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this or that," &c.; Jas. iv. 13—17. The Jews generally began nothing without saying, If God (or the name referring to God) will. BEN SYRA, an eminent Jew, says, "Let a man never say he will do any thing before he says, "If God will." So Cyrus, king of Persia, when he went into Armenia to hunt, and when a hare was started, and was seized by an eagle, said to his friend, "This will be a good hunting, if God will."—The Turks submit every thing to the Divine will—as the victory of a war, or a journey, a scheme, enterprise, or any thing of the least importance which they desire to be done; they never purpose any thing, but under this condition, In Shallah, that is "If God will."

WIN, Phil. 3. 8.

WINNETH, Prov. 11. 30.

WIND, a flow of air from one place to another. There are trade winds, which blow constantly from east to west, and monsoons, which blow three or six months at once from one point, and as long from the opposite. The Simoom is the most terrible wind of eastern countries. Coming over the vast deserts, it brings intense and suffocating heat and dryness, with billows of sand and dust, carrying with it fiery streaks, like threads of silk; he who breathes it, dies instantly. Its approach is known by a redness in the air, and when sufficiently near to admit of being observed, it appears like a haze, in colour resembling the purple colour of the rainbow, but not so condensed. It rarely lasts more than seven or eight minutes. A person exposed to this terrible blast, is attacked by a violent giddiness and burning thirst; headache and frequent fits of shivering come on; and these end in violent fever. The effects of the Simoom on the bodies of its victims are peculiar. At first view they appear to be asleep; but if a leg or an arm be smartly shaken, or lifted up, it separates from the body; the body shortly after becomes black. If travellers see it approach, and lay their faces to the earth till it passes, they commonly escape. Camels and other animals do this by instinct. It is, of course, most dangerous when it comes unperceived in the night. Whole caravans have perished in it. It is not improbable but that this wind was the "messenger of the Lord," which destroyed 185,000 men of Sennacherib's army in one night; 2 Kings xix. 35.

WINDOWS, flood-gates or clouds; Gen. vii. 11. "Those that look out of the windows be darkened." The optic nerves, which receive impressions through the medium of the different humours of the eye from surrounding objects; they are darkened—the humours becoming thick, flat, and turbid, are not capable of transmitting those images so clearly as formerly; Ecl. xii. 3.

WINE, a liquor made from grapes, much in the manner that cider is made from apples. There is no evidence that wine was known before the deluge. Noah was probably the first who preserved the juice of the grape, till by fermentation it became proper wine. Before him, men only ate grapes like other fruits. His ignorance of its strength caused his intoxication; Gen. ix. 20, 21. The "mixed wine;" Prov. xxiii. 30, rendered in Isaiah v. 11, "drunk offering," may mean wine rendered more potent by the addition of myrrh, and other drugs, or of defrutum, that is, wine inspissated by boiling it down. Homer speaks of Helen giving such wine to her guests when oppressed with grief, to raise their spirits. Thus the drunkard seeketh mixed wine; Prov. xxiii. 30; and "mingles strong drink."

WINE — 1. Temporal blessings; Gen. xxvii. 28; Hos. ii. 8; Ps. 4. 7. — 2. Gospel provision; Isa. xxv. 6; lv. 1. — 3. Divine indignation; Ps. lxxv. 8; Rev. xvi. 19.

WINE, 'These men are full of new wine;' Acts ii. 13. The words more properly mean sweet wine. We are informed by Plutarch that the ancients had ways of preserving their wine sweet a great while; and such wines were known to be very intoxicating.

WINE mingled with myrrh; Mark xv. 23. The Jews used to give wine and strong liquors to those who were condemned to die, at their execution, to stupefy them, and take off some part of the fear and sense of their pain. Some honourable women at Jerusalem are reported to have mixed this drink; it is, therefore, not unlikely that Mary Magdalene and others prepared the mixture for our Lord, in order to cheer and refresh his spirits; this was different from what the soldiers gave him, for that was gall and vinegar.

WINE. 'New wine into old bottles;' Matt. ix. 17. The allusion is to bottles made of the skins of beasts, which in time decayed, waxed old, and became unfit for use; such were the wine bottles, old and rent, the Gibeonites brought with them and showed to Joshua; Josh. ix. 4, 13, and to which the Psalmist compares himself; Ps. cxix. 83.

WINE of the wrath of God, without mixture; Rev. xiv. 10. It was customary to execute the sentence of death on offenders, by making them drink a cup of wine, in which some strong poison had been infused. Such was the execution of Socrates by a cup of poison.

WINE which cheereth God and man; Judg. ix. 13.—An improper application. It should be gods, that is, the hero-gods of heathens. Jothan is speaking to men of an idolatrous city. Or it would allow to be translated, "cheer both high and low," both prince and people. The meaning is, all conditions of men are exhilarated by wine.

WINE-PRESS. "I have trodden the wine-press alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment, &c." Isa. lxiii. 3, 4. Grapes are trodden by the feet in some parts of the east in a kind of cistern, called the wine-press. The legs and feet are bare, and the clothes are bespattered with juice.—The passage predicts the sacrifice of Christ. It means, Salvation is the work of Christ alone.

WINGS. The sails of a ship; Isa. 18. 1, 2.—Wings are emblems of exaltation;—"They shall mount up with wings as eagles," that is, they shall be highly exalted; Isa. xl. 31. "Hide me under the shadow of thy wings;" Ps. xvii. 8;" "How often would I have gathered thy children together even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings," &c., Matt. xxiii. 37. The metaphor is beautifully significant of Divine protection; When the hen sees a bird of prey coming, she makes a noise to assemble, her chickens, that she may cover them with her wings from danger. Jesus published the gospel of reconciliation throughout the land, they would not regard, therefore the Roman eagle came and destroyed them. The hen's affection to her brood is so very strong as to become proverbial. God says in Exod. xix. 4. that "he bare his people on the wings of eagles;" that is, that he had brought them safely out of Egypt, as an eagle carries its young ones under its wings. The name of wings is given to the sun-beams, Mal. iv. 2. "The sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings." This being applied to Christ, denotes that he should appear in the flesh, and by his doctrine, merit, and Spirit, should bring a remedy for all spiritual sicknesses and diseases. "He rode upon the cherub, and did fly; he flew on the wings of the wind;" that is, the cherub supported and led on the tempest, in which the Almighty rode as in his chariot through the firmament of heaven. See Psal. ciii. 20. and civ. 4.

WINGS, 'If I take the wings of the morning, &c.' Ps. cxxxix. 9, 10. Light has been proved by many experiments to travel at the astonishing rate of 194,188 miles in one second of time. But could I even fly upon the wings or rays of the morning light, which diffuses itself with such velocity over the globe from east to west, instead of being beyond the reach of, or, by this sudden transition, being able to escape thy notice; thy hand or power could still, at pleasure, prevent or arrest my progress, and I should still be encircled with the immensity of thy essence.'

WINTER, The coldest of the four seasons of the year; Gen viii. 22. It included the latter half of the month

Chisleu, the whole of Tebeth, and the former part of She-beth, that is, from December to February. In this season, snows rarely fall, except on the mountains, but seldom continue a whole day; the ice is thin, and melts when the sun ascends above the horizon. As the season advances, the north wind and the cold, especially on the mountains, which are now covered with snow, are intensely severe, and sometimes even fatal: the cold is frequently so piercing, that persons born in our climate can scarcely endure it. The roads become slippery, and travelling becomes both laborious and dangerous, especially in the steep mountain paths (Jer. xiii. 16; xxiii. 12); and on this account our Lord, when predicting the calamities that were to attend the siege of Jerusalem, told his disciples to pray that their flight might not be in the winter; (Matt. xxiv. 20.)

WIPE away all tears from their eyes," Rev. vii. 17. In the most affectionate and fatherly manner, God shall remove all causes of distress and grief. The saints in heaven have pure unmixed happiness. This is the happiness of those who are washed from their sins. See Isa. xxv. 8. Rev. xxi. 4.

WIPE, 2 Kings 21. 13; Neh. 13. 14; Prov. 6. 33; Is. 25. 8; Rev. 7. 17, & 21. 4.

WISDOM. By wisdom we are not to understand knowledge. Even in the ordinary concerns of life, we feel the difference between knowledge and wisdom. A man may know much; he may attain high eminence in literature; he may make many important discoveries in science; and yet he may have no true wisdom.

Neither by wisdom are we to understand prudence, in relation to the ordinary concerns of life. It is true that wisdom dwells with prudence, and finds out knowledge of witty inventions; Prov. viii. 12. and we value the man who discovers it in all his plans and actions. But how often does a man acquire fame for prudence and sagacity, who, nevertheless, betrays the most awful infatuation as to his best interests. Wisdom is the fear of God, the knowledge of God, the love of God, a right state of heart before God.

WISE MEN, or MAGI. The magian religion existed anciently in Persia. It was so revived and extended by Zoroaster, that he has been regarded as the founder of the sect. They had temples, in which were kept perpetual fires. The priests of the Magi, being the only learned mathematicians and philosophers of the age in which they lived, the term Magician became synonymous with a learned man. The magi, who visited our Saviour at his birth, were probably Persian doctors or princes: Matt. ii. 1.

These Eastern philosophers ardently studied astronomy, to which many added astrology, or foretelling future events by the stars.

WITCHCRAFT, Witches, Wizards, and those who pretend to deal with familiar spirits, are represented in scripture as pretending to possess a power to evoke the dead, to perform supernatural operations, and discover hidden things, by spells, charms, and spiritual or infernal agency. Many of the Israelites had, no doubt, learnt these curious arts from their long residence among the Egyptians; hence laws concerning witchcraft.—See Exodus xxii. 18. Lev. xix 26, 31. xx. 15. Deut. xviii. 10, 11 1 Sam. xxviii. 3, 9.

Such designing persons were acquainted with the art of Ventriloquism, by which they made the sound of their voice to be heard as if it issued from their belly, or from the ground; and then pretended that it was the evil spirit speaking, Isa. viii. 19; xxix. 4.

WITNESS, one who gives evidence. The Holy Spirit "beareth witness," by producing in us the graces of Christianity; Rom. viii. Christ is called the "faithful witness;" Rev. i. 5, because he faithfully declared the things of God, and sealed his testimony with blood. The prophets and pious persons of the Old Testament, are a 'cloud of witnesses' to the faithfulness and mercy of God. The apostles are competent witnesses of the things they affirm in the New Testament, because they saw and heard the things of which they speak. They are credible witnesses, because they had no interest to deceive, and suffered great hardships, and even death, for the sake of their testimony.

WOLF, Wolves.—An animal of the dog kind, crafty, greedy, ravenous, fierce, and of a quick smell. Wolves abide in forests, and live on smaller animals; Matt. vii. 15. They can bear hunger long, but are then very fierce, and will attack either man or beast; Jer. v. 6. The species most common in Syria, Africa, &c., is the hyæna.

 WOLVES, Ezek. 22. 27; Hab. 1. 8; Zeph.
 3. 3; Mat. 7. 16, & 10. 16; Acts 20. 29.

WOMAN has been defined as compounded of woe and man, as if called man's woe, because she tempted him to eat of the forbidden fruit; but this is no meaning of the word. Woman is a contraction of wombman, and means the man with the womb. A very appropriate version of the Hebrew ishah, the feminine of (ish) a man. Hence we see the propriety of Adam's observation (Gen. ii. 23.), "She shall be called ishah, WOMBMAN, or female-man, because she was taken out of the ish, man." Most of the ancient versions have felt the force of the original term, and have endeavoured to express it as literally as possible. The Vulgate renders it virago, which is a feminine form of vir, a man. Symmachus uses andris, a female form of aner, a man; and the Arabic imrat, she-man, from imree, a man. Our own term, as we have seen, is equally proper, when understood, being a literal translation of the original; and we may thank the discernment of Anglo-Saxon ancestors for giving it.

WOMAN, what have I to do with thee? John ii. 4. This apparently harsh reply has been condemned by infidels, &c., as indicating want of respect to Mary's maternal character, and a want also of common civility. But if we compare this language with what was employed by the most accomplished of his contemporaries, as well as by the easterns now, it will be found that the term Woman, as applied to Mary, censurable as it may appear to us, is, in the classical and oriental dialects, perfectly consistent both with sentiments of respect and the most approved forms of politeness. Thus Cyrus, prince of Persia, addressed the beautiful Pantheia his captive, whom he wished to console in her altered circumstances, by the title of woman. Augustus spoke to Cleopatra in the same style. Horace describes "the lady of his love" by the same epithet. The most polite men of antiquity applied the term to females of the highest respectability. Roberts, an intellectual missionary, says, that, in Hindostan and in other parts of the East, the sex are yet always addressed with this common appellation. It is evident too from the narrative itself that the language was not considered harsh by his mother, for she immediately prepared the attendants to execute his order, and though this movement might seem tardy, it is evident that the delay proceeded from no reluctance to comply with her wishes, but from the purpose of waiting for the times and circumstances that would give the fullest attestation to his intended miracle.

WOMAN. "And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints;" Rev. xvii. 6.—This predicts the murderous spirit of the Papal church. It has been calculated that fifty or sixty millions have gone to the grave through papal persecution. The soil of the greater part of Europe has been drenched with the blood of martyrs; as proved by the histories of the slaughters of the Waldenses and Albigenses; the butcheries of the Duke of Alva in the low countries, the massacres in France, Ireland, and other places, in England in the time of Queen Mary, &c., &c. O Popery, bloody are thy hands! but God shall yet avenge his saints by punishing thee! O "man of sin," an eternal hell shall be thy doom!—And yet at this day (1870) many in England are shaking hands with this murderous monster. Dress up antichrist in splendid robes, attend him with sweet music, diffuse around him fragrant incense, attend him with harlequin-dressed priests (who ever mean money) and white surpliced boys, &c., and you will fascinate the gentle ladies, and the intelligent gentlemen, who will fall down and worship the beast.

WOOL was an article of merchandise in ancient times, as appears from Ezek. xxvii. 18. "Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares—and of wool." Sins which are aggravated are compared to crimson; but when they are said to be white as wool, it denotes that they are fully pardoned; Isa. i. 18. "He giveth snow like wool;" Psa. cxlvii. 16; falling down in large flakes; and nothing in nature has a nearer resemblance to fine white wool. See Job xxxvii. 6.

WORD.—An intelligible sound. Any discourse is so called; Gen. xxxvii. 14; Deut. iv. 2. The term is applied to the sacred Scriptures; Luke xi. 28; Jam. i. 22. It is also a name of Christ; John i. 1; Heb. iv. 12—14, and xi. 3. Why he is so called we are not expressly told. Perhaps because he is the intelligible indication of the Father's will and character, as words are of our thoughts; Heb. i. 2, 3; and because he spake creation into being, communicated with the patriarchs and prophets, declared the gospel when on earth, now intercedes in heaven, and will give sentence at the last day.

WORDS. 'Words of the Lord are pure words; as silver tried in a furnace, &c.' Psa. xii. 6. The allusion is to metal that has passed through a very severe refining process. The words of God are so pure as to have no alloy whatever in them. "Purified seven times," means perfectly refined, seven being a number frequently expressive of perfection, perhaps, because on the seventh day God had completed the world.

WORK, any-thing done. Creation is the work of God; Gen. ii. 2. The works of God's providence are his preservation and government of the world; John v. 17. The work of redemption is attributed to the three persons of the Trinity; the beginning is from the Father; the dispensation is through the Son; and the application by the Spirit; John vi. 29.

By good works are understood all manner of duties, as well as thoughts, words and actions, towards God or man, which are commanded in the law of God, and proceed from a pure heart and faith unfeigned, and are referred unto God's glory; Eph. ii. 10. Good works are the way to the kingdom, not the cause of entering it; but they are imperfect; Eccl. vii. 20—and of course are not meritorious; Luke xvii. 10. They are, however, the only evidence of our title to heaven; Jam. ii. 18—20. They show our gratitude to God; Ps. cxvi. 12, 13—and are profitable to men; Tit. iii. 8.

WORKMAN, Matt. 10. 10; 2 Tim. 2. 15.
WORKMANSHIP, Ex. 31. 8; Eph. 2. 10.

WORLD, in its largest acceptation, denotes the whole of created nature comprehending the heavens, earth, sea, the elements, angels, men, and animals; in short, all created beings; and in this sense it is used when the evangelist says of Christ, "the world was made by him;" for "without him was not any thing made that was made;" John i. 3, 10. And also the apostle Paul, speaking on the same subject, even uses the word in the plural: "The worlds were framed by the word of God;" Heb. xi. 3. "By whom also he made the worlds," ch. i. 2. But the term is very often used to indicate, "the men of this world," who are said to lie in wickedness; 1 John v. 19. See Eph. ii. 2; John xii. 31; 2 Cor. iv. 4. These are called "the world," not only because they compose the greater part of the inhabitants of this world, but chiefly on account of their pursuing the things of this world as their chief good. Hence the psalmist describes "the men of this world" as having their portion in this life; Psa. xvii. 14.

WORLD, 'all the world;' Luke ii. 1. The country of the region of Judea. Sometimes it means the extensive Roman empire.

WORM dieth not, and the fire is not quenched; Mark ix. 44. Alluding to the ancient ways of funeral interment and burning. "The body will not then be frail as it is now, but incapable of consumption or dissolution. In its natural state, the worms may devour the whole, and die for want of nourishment; the fire may consume it, and be extinguished for want of fuel; but there shall be perpetual food for the worm that corrodes it, and perpetual fuel for the fire that torments it. The words of the apocryphal writer, in Judith xvi. 17, greatly illustrate this interpretation. It is said, "the Lord Almighty will take vengeance on the wicked in the day of judgment, putting fire and worms into their flesh, and they shall feed them, and weep for ever."

WORMS, 'He was eaten with worms;' Acts xii. 23. Probably this was the disease known as morbus pedicularis. It is loathsome, offensive, and most painful.

WORMWOOD.—An herb, of a very bitter taste. In the Septuagint, the original word is variously rendered, and generally by terms expressive of its figurative sense; for what is offensive, odious, or deleterious; as idolatry, profaneness, apostacy, &c.; Deut. xxix. 18; Heb. xii. 15.

WORSHIP.—An act of adoration, strictly due to God only, but performed to other objects also, whether idols or men. Compare Gen. xlii. 6, and xliii. 26, 28; Acts x. 25. As all idolatry consists in transferring that worship to the creature which is due only to the adorable Creator, so it was not merely prohibited by the Jewish law, but also made a capital offence to be punished with death; Deut. xiii. 6—11. To this Job refers, ch. xxxi. 26—28. Public worship, where it has not degenerated into mere form, is of great utility. It gives Christians an opportunity of openly professing their faith in, and love to Christ. It preserves a sense of religion in the mind, without which society could not well exist. It enlivens devotion, and promotes zeal. It is the means of receiving instruction and consolation. It affords an excellent example to others, and excites them to fear God.

WORSHIPPING of angels; Col. ii. 18. These expressions apply in a peculiar manner to the Essenes. For Josephus informs us, that they had something very peculiar among them, relating to the angels. He says that when they received any into their number, they made them solemnly swear that they would keep and observe the books of the sects and decrees of the angels with care.

WRATH of God is his indignation at sin, and punishment of it; Rom. i. 18. "The wrath of God is revealed from heaven against ungodliness and unrighteousness of men." The cup of God's wrath—the cup of trembling, &c., is frequently expressed or referred to in the sacred writings; Deut. xxxii. 33; Job xxi. 20; Isa. li. 17—22; Jer. xxv. 15; Rev. xiv. 8. It is a metaphor for the cups of poison, which some criminals had to drink.

WRITING was usually practised on hard substances, such as stones and metals;—thus, the decalogue was written on two tables, or smooth flat pieces of stone; Ex. xxxiv. 1; Deut. x. 4. Thin plates of brass, lead, or wood, were used, which when plain, and slightly coloured with a black dye, were written on with a piece of chalk, or some similar substance, capable of being easily effaced; but which were more generally covered with a thin coating of wax; and in that case the letters were inscribed with a bodkin, or stylus of hard metal, ivory, or bone, sharpened at one end for the purpose of writing, and smooth at the other, so that whenever it was necessary to make erasures, the writer had only to turn the broad end of the pencil, smooth the wax, and renew the letters as before. Such tablets were much used by the ancient Romans.—Quintilian.—Boards of the same, or a similar kind, are still found in many parts of the East. In Barbary, the children are taught to form letters on a thin board, bedaubed with whiting, so as to be rubbed off and renewed with pleasure. Did not Zacharias write on such a table? See Luke i. 63.—See Books.

WRITETH, 'Writeth up the people.' An allusion to princes, or governors of a city, that used to keep a register of all their people; Psa. lxxxvii. 6.

WRITTEN. "In the volume of the book written of me;" Psa. xl. 7. The LXX, or Septuagint, render it in the head of the book. CHRYSOSTOM describes this to be the envelope on which was written, "About the coming of the Messiah," which HARMER says amounts to this, that the sum and substance of the Old Testament is, "Messiah cometh;" so that these words might be ticketed or inscribed on the wrapper, just as we now letter a book on the back of the binding.

YEAR.—A space of twelve months. The Jews had both a civil and a sacred year; in the first they regulated their national concerns, and in the other, their religious affairs and festivals. The civil year commenced in the month Tizri; that is, at the autumnal equinox; and their sacred year in the month of Nisan, or ancient Abib; Exod. xii. 2; and this corresponded either to March or April, according to the passover moon. The sacred year was instituted as a new era to commemorate the deliverance of Israel from the yoke of the Egyptians; Ex. xii. 2. It might be considered as a presage of the gospel day, because it began in the very month in which Christ was crucified, and thus put an end to the ancient dispensation; John xix. 30. Every third year they added a month, to make up for the days lost in consequence of measuring the months by revolutions of the moon, which made the year consist of 354 days. This intercalary month they called Ve-adar, or second Adar.

It is now conceded by most learned men, that the creation occurred at or about 4004 years before the birth of our Saviour. The practice of numbering the years from the birth of Christ was not adopted for several centuries after that event. Different countries had their different eras for commencing; such as the foundation of a metropolis, or the reign of a king. The last method was used in England till the time of Cromwell, when the Christian era was adopted. Anno Domini, generally written A. D., means year of our Lord. Anno Mundi, or year of the world, marks the date from creation.

There is much confusion in all chronology, from the incorrect modes of computing the year, practised by early nations. The use of lunar months, of twenty-nine and a half days each, made the year too short. Many plans were adopted to regulate the year, but none came near making the lunar and solar year correspond, till Julius Caesar, by the help of his astronomers, brought it to a considerable degree of accuracy. He abolished the lunar month, and established a solar year, of 365 days 6 hours, divided into 12 artificial months, consisting alternately of 30 and 31 days. The odd six hours in four years made a whole day, which was added by counting the 24th day of February twice. The year on which this was done was called leap year. The new reckoning however, was not perfectly exact, for the true year consists of only 365 days 5 hours and 49 minutes, so that the Julian year was eleven minutes too long. This surplus in 130 years amounted to a whole day, and in 1600 years had created an error of ten days. In the year 1582 Pope Gregory XIII., at the instance of Lilio, the Roman astronomer, proposed to strike out this excess of ten days, and to omit three leap years in every four centuries. This was for a while called New Style, and was gradually adopted both by Catholic and Protestant states. It was not introduced into England till the middle of the last century [1752,] at which time the differences amounted to eleven days. Our present calendar is very nearly though not quite correct. The surplus, as now left, would not amount to 7 hours in 1000 years.

In prophetic style, a year is 360 years, and a month 30 years, and a day being put for a year; and so three years and a half, and "times, time, and half a time," or 42 months, or 1260 days, denote the 1260 years' duration of Antichrist; Rev. xi. 2, 3; xii. 6, 14.

To-day he is the Lamb newly slain, and he continues to appear in the presence of God for us; for ever, to the conclusion of time, he will be the way, the truth, and the life, none coming to the Father but through him. And through eternity it will appear that all glorified human spirits owe their salvation to his infinite merit; Heb. i. 12; John viii. 58; Rev. i. 4.

YIELD, to give increase; Hosea viii. 7; to consent, Prov. vii. 21; to give up, Acts v. 10. "Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin," Rom. vi. 13. Do not yield to temptation. It is no sin to be tempted; the sin lies in yielding. While sin exists only in Satan's solicitation, it is Satan's sin, and not ours: when we yield, we make Satan's sin our own: then we enter into temptation. See Rom. vii. 5; Jam. iv. 1. "But yield yourselves unto God;" let God have your wills; keep them ever on his side; there, you are safe; and there, they will be active. See Rom. xii. 1; 1 Pet. ii. 24, and iv. 2. The yoke alludes to the pole laid on the necks of oxen to enable them to draw burdens, the plough, &c. The service of Christ is pleasant even in adversity and persecution. The conscience is at rest, the mind is cheered, and the soul animated with the hope of eternal life. How precious is this service when compared with that of sin!

ZAAANAN, Zay'-a-nan, country of flocks.—A city of Palestine; Mic. i. 11.
ZAAANNIM, Zay'-a-nan'-nim, movings.—A boundary of the tribe of Naphtali; Josh. xix. 33.

ZAAVAN, Zay'-a-van.—One of the children of Ezer; Gen. xxxvi. 27.

ZABBAI, Zab'-ba-i.—Son of Bebai; Ezra x. 28.

ZABDIEL, Zab'-de-el, dowry of the Lord.—A captain of king David; 1 Chron. xxvii. 2.

ZACCAI, Zak'-kay-i.—A person whose children returned from the Babylonish captivity; Ezra ii. 9.

ZACCHÆUS, Zak'-ke'-us, pure, justified.—The chief of the publicans, the collectors of taxes. The publicans paid government a certain sum for the taxes of a specified district, and then collected them on their own account and risk. This was called farming a revenue. Many of them were cruel and extortionate, and by that means acquired wealth. Zacchæus was wealthy, and loved the world. Happily for him he heard of Christ, and believed in him. The fruits of repentance and faith, he manifested. The love of Christ overcame his love of the world. In him was a rare instance of restitution, and benevolence; Luke xix. 2.

ZACCUR, Zak'-kur.—A Reubenite; Num. xiii. 4. —A Levite; Neh. xiii. 13.—The son of Imri; Neh. iii. 2.

ZACHARIAH, ZACHARIAS, ZECHARIAH, Zak'-a-ry'-ah, Zak'-a-ry'-as, Zek'-a-ry'-ah, memory of the Lord.

ZACHARIAH.—The king of Israel; he succeeded his father Jeroboam the second, A. M. 3220. He was a wicked prince, and swayed the sceptre only six months. He was slain by the treachery of Shallum, who usurped the throne; 2 Kings xv. 8—11.

ZACHARIAH.—Son of Jehoida, high priest of the Jews, supposed to be the same with Azariah; 1 Chron. vi. 10, 11. He was slain by order of Joash A. M. 3164; 2 Chr. xxiv. 20—22.

ZACHARIAS.—A priest of the family of Abia; he was the husband of Elizabeth, and father of John the Baptist; Luke i. 5, 12. "They were both righteous before God, walking in all his commandments blameless."

ZADOK, Zay'-dok, righteous, justified.—The son of Ahitub, high-priest of the Jews, of the race of Eleazar. He was faithful to David when he fled from Absalom, and David afterwards rewarded him for his fidelity; 2 Sam. viii. 17; xv. 24, &c. There were several others of the same name:—A son of the former, and ancestor of Ezra; 1 Chr. vi. 12; Ezra vii. 2.—

The father-in-law of Uzziab, and the grandfather of king Jotham; 2 Kings xv. 33. Zadok was a priest's name.

ZALAPH, Za'-laf.—The father of Hanun, who repaired the wall of Jerusalem; Neh. iii. 30.

ZALMUNNA, Zal-mun'-nah, shadow, image.—A king of the Midianites; Judges viii. 5.

ZAMZUMMIMS, Zam-zum'-minis, thinking wickedness.—A gigantic race dispossessed by the Ammonites; Deut. ii. 20.

ZAPHNATH-PAANEAH, Zaph'-nath-pa-a-ne'-ah, discoverer of secrets, saviour of the world.—The name which Pharaoh gave to Joseph; Gen. xli. 45.

ZAPHON, Zay'-fon.—A city of Gad; Josh. xiii. 27.

ZAREATHITES, Zay'-re-ath-ites.—The posterity of Caleb; 1 Chr. ii. 53.

ZARED, Zay'-red.—A brook beyond Jordan, on the frontiers of Moab; it runs into the Dead Sea; Num. xxi. 12.

ZAREPHATH, or SAREPTA, Zar'-e-fath, or Sa-rep'-tab, ambush of the mouth.—A city of the Sidonians, between Tyre and Sidon, on the Mediterranean Sea; 1 Kings xvii. 9, 10.

ZARETAN, Zar'-e-tan, tribulation, perplexity.—A city of Manasseh, west of the Jordan, where the waters stood in heaps as Joshua passed below; Josh. iii. 16; 1 Kings vii. 46.

ZARETH-SHAHAR, Zay'-reth-shay'-har.—A city of Reuben, beyond Jordan; Josh. xiii. 19.

ZEAL, a fervent passion or earnest desire for anything, but especially in the cause of religion; 2 Kings x. 16; Tit. ii. 14. St. Paul speaks of some Jews having a "zeal of God, but not according to knowledge;" Rom. x. 2; that is, they had an earnest desire to maintain the honour of the ritual to which they were accustomed; but know not that righteousness whereby a person is justified before God. It is of unspeakable importance that our zeal be enlightened and pure. When it is cherished in connexion with ignorance, bigotry, or prejudice, it leads on to fury and persecution, and every evil work; John xvi. 2; Acts ix. 1, 2.

God's zeal is his high and holy regard to his own honour, and to the welfare of his people; 2 Kings xix. 34.

ZEBAH, Zee'-bah, victim, immolation.—A prince of Midian, slain by Gideon; Judges viii. 5, 21.

ZEBEDEE, Zeb'-e-dee, abundant portion.—The father of the apostles James and John; Matt. iv. 21.

ZEBOLM, or SEBOIIM, Ze-bo'-im, or Ze-bo'-e-im, deer, goats.—One of the five cities consumed by fire; Gen. x. 19; xiv. 2; xix. 25.

ZEBULUN, Zeb'-u-lun, dwelling, habitation.—The sixth son of Jacob and Leah; Gen. xxx. 20; he was the head of a tribe. When this tribe came out of Egypt, their fighting men amounted to 57,400 men, commanded by Eliab, the son of Elon: they increased 3100 in the wilderness. They had their inheritance between the sea of Galilee and the Mediterranean, and enriched themselves by fisheries, commerce, and the manufacture of glass. They were very honest in their dealings; and, notwithstanding the distance, were punctual attendants on the worship of God at Jerusalem; Gen. xlix. 13. Their country was signally blessed with the early instructions and miracles of our Saviour; Isa. ix. 1, 2; Matt. iv. 13, 15. There was a city of this name in the tribe of Asher; Josh. xix. 27; Judges xii. 12.

ZACHARIAH, Zek-a-ry'-ah, mindful of the Lord, a man of the Lord.—One of the minor prophets. He was the son of Berechiah, and grandson of Iddo; Zech. i. 1. Zachariah began to prophesy in the second year of Darius Hystaspes, a little after Haggai. He predicted the coming of Christ, his entry into Jerusalem, ch. ix 9; Matt.

xxvi. 14, 15; xxvii. 3—10, and the spiritual blessings which Messiah should dispense.

ZEDEKIAH, Zed-e-ky'-ah, the Lord my righteousness.—The son of Josiah, and the last king of Judah. He began to reign when he was 21 years of age, and reigned 11. He revolted, but was subdued, and carried prisoner to Nebuchadnezzar, who caused his children to be murdered before his face, and then his eyes to be plucked out; after which he loaded him with chains, and sent him to Babylon, where he died; Jer. xxi. xxvii. See 2 Kings xxiv. 17, &c.—A false prophet of Samaria; 1 Kings xxii. 11, 24.—Another false prophet, Jer. xxix. 22.

ZELAH, Ze'-lah.—A city of the tribe of Benjamin, where Saul was buried; Josh. xviii. 28.

ZELEK, Ze'-lek, noise of him that laps.—The name of one of David's thirty valiant captains; 2 Sam. xxiii. 37.

ZELOPHEHAD, Ze-lo'-fe-had, the shadow of fear.—A person who died without sons, leaving five daughters who received their portion in the Land of Promise; Num. xxvi. 33.

ZELOTES, Ze-lo'-teez, jealous, full of zeal.—The surname of Simon the Canaanite; Acts i. 13.

ZELZAH, Zel'-zah, noon-tide.—A village; 1 Sam. x. 2.

ZEMARAIM, Zem-a-ray'-im.—A city of Benjamin near Bethel; Josh. xviii. 22.—Mount Shemer; 2 Chron. xiii. 4.

ZENAN, Ze'-nan.—A city of Palestine, in the tribe of Judah in the valley; Josh. xv. 37.

ZENAS, Ze'-nas, living.—A doctor of the law, and an eminent disciple of Paul; Titus iii. 13.

ZEPHANIAH, Zef-a-ny'-ah, the Lord is my secret, the mouth of the Lord.—The son of Maaseiah, called the second priest; 2 Kings xxv. 18, put to death by Nebuchadnezzar; Jer. xxi. 1.—The son of Cushi, a prophet of the Lord, who lived in the days of Josiah, king of Judah. He foretold the Chaldean invasion, the ruin of the enemies of the Jews, and the ultimate triumph of the church.

ZEPHATH, Ze'-fath, beholds, attends.—A city of the tribe of Simeon; Judges i. 17.

ZEPHATHAH, Zef'-a-thah. — A valley; 2 Chron. xiv. 10.

ZERAH, Ze'-rah, east, brightness.—The son of Simeon; Gen. xxxvi. 13. King of Ethiopia, or of Cush, who came against Asa, king of Judah; 2 Chron. xiv. 9, 10.—The great grandfather of Achan; Josh. vii. 1.

ZERAHIAH, Zer-a-hy'-ah.—A Levite; 1 Chron. vi. 6.

ZEREDA, Zer'-e-dah, ambush.—A city of Ephraim, the native place of Jeroboam; 1 Kings xi. 26.

ZEREDATHAH, Ze-red'-a-thah, sometimes called ZARTHEN.—A city in the tribe of Ephraim, in which were cast the great works of brass for Solomon's temple; 2 Chron. iv. 17; 1 Kings vii. 46.

ZERERATH, Zer'-e-rath.—A country of Canaan; Judg. vii. 22.

ZERESH, Ze'-resh, misery, stranger.—Raman's wife who recommended her husband to destroy Mordecai; Esther v. 10, 14.

ZERI, Ze'-ry.—A singer in the temple; 1 Chron. xxv. 3.

ZERUAH, Ze-rew'-ah, leprous, hornet.—The mother of Jeroboam; 1 Kings xi. 26.

ZERUBBABEL, Ze-rub'-ba-bel, a stranger at Babylon, dispersion of confusion.—The son of Salathiel, and of the royal race of David; Matt. i. 12; 1 Chron. iii. 19. He returned to Jerusalem from Babylon under the reign of Cyrus, A. M. 3468. Cyrus committed to him the care of the sacred vessels. He laid the foundation of the second temple, and lived according to the Divine promise, to finish it; Zech. iv. 11; Ezra iii. 8.

ZERUIAH, Zer-u'-ah, pain, tribulation.—The sister of David, and mother of Joab, &c.; 2 Sam. ii. 18.

ZIBA, Zy'-bah, army, strength, stag.

—A servant of king Saul; 2 Sam. ix. 2. He was a friend of David, and was appointed a steward to manage Saul's estates; 2 Sam. xvi. 1.

ZIKLAG, Zik'-lag, measure, pressed down.—A city of the Philistines, south of Judah, which Achish, king of Gath, gave to David as an asylum, when David fled from the persecuting rage of Saul; 1 Sam. xxvii. 6.

ZILLAH, Zil'-lah, shadow.—One of Lamech's wives; Gen. iv. 19, 22.

ZILPAH, Zil'-pah, dropping.—Leah's maid; Gen. xxix. 24; xlv. 18.

ZIMRAN, Zim'-ran, song, singer, vine.—A son of Abraham, by Keturah; Gen. xxv. 2.

ZIMRI, Zim'-ry, my field, my vine.—The son of Zerah; 1 Chron. ii. 6.—Son of Salu; Num. xxv. 14.—A general of Elah, king of Israel: he murdered his master, and reigned in his stead; 1 Kings xvi. 9, &c.

ZIN, Zin, or Sin, buckler, coldness.—A city in the south of Canaan; Num. xxxiv. 4.

ZION, or SION, Zy'-on, a monument, sepulchre, turret.—The highest mountain in Jerusalem, on which the temple was built by Solomon, and where David built the city of David; Psa. xlviii. 2.

ZION. "Daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers; Isa. i. 8. "Extensive fields of ripe melons and cucumbers adorned the sides of the river Nile; there they grew in such abundance, that the sailors freely helped themselves. Some guard, however, is placed upon them. Occasionally, but at long and desolate intervals, we may observe a little hut, made of reeds, just capable of containing one man; being, in fact, little more than a fence against a north wind. In these I have observed, sometimes, a poor old man, perhaps lame, feebly protecting the property. It exactly illustrates the above passage. The abundance of these most necessary vegetables brings to mind the murmurs of the Israelites; Num. xi. 5, 6. 'We remember—the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic; but now our soul is dried away.'

ZION, 'shall for your sake be ploughed up as a field, &c.' Mic. iii. 12. The holy city was taken by Titus, the Roman general, after a long siege: and though on account of the extraordinary beauty of the structure, Titus gave the strictest orders to preserve the temple, yet the obstinacy of the Jews, and the fury of the soldiers, frustrated his design. It was burned with fire, entirely demolished, and the ground ploughed by Terentius Rufus, an officer in the Roman army.

ZIPH, Ziff, mouth, this mouthful.—A city and district of Hebron, in Judah; Josh. xv. 24.—A city near Maon and Carmel of Judah; Josh. xv. 55.

ZIPHION, Ziff-e-on.—A son of Gad; Gen. xli. 16.

ZIPHON, Ziff-ron.—A border of the land of Canaan; Num. xxxiv. 9.

ZIPPOR, Zip'-por, bird, crown.—The father of Balak; Num. xxii. 2.

ZIPPORAH, Zip'-po'-rah, beauty, trumpet.—The daughter of Jethro, and wife of Moses. She was the mother of Eliezer and Gershom; Ex. ii. 16, 17, 21.

ZIZ, Ziz, flower, lock of hair.—A cliff near which the Ammonites and Moabites marched to fight Jehoshaphat; 2 Chr. xx. 16.

ZOAN, Zo'-an, motion.—The Tanis of the Greeks, one of the most ancient cities of Egypt; Num. xiii. 22.

ZOAR, Zo'-ar, little, small.—A city near Sodom, spared for an asylum to Lot, in answer to his prayer; Gen. xix. 22.

ZOBA, Zo'-bah, an army.—A city of Syria; 2 Sam. x. 6.

ZOBEBAH, Zo-be'-bah.—A descendant of Judah; 1 Chr. iv. 8.

ZOHAR, Zo'-har, white, shining, dryness.—The father of Ephron; of him Abraham bought the cave of Machpelah; Gen. xxiii. 8.

ZOPHAR, Zo'-far, rising early, a bird, crown.—The Naamathite, one of the three friends who came to visit Job in his distress; Job ii. 11.

ZOPHIM, Zo'-fim.—A plain near Mount Pisgah; Num. xxxiii. 14.

ZORAH, Zo'-rah, leprosy, scab.—A city of Judah; Josh. xix. 41.—A city of Dan, the birth-place of Samson; Judg. xiii. 2.

ZOROBABEL, Zo-rob'-a-bel.—See ZERUBBABEL; Matt. i. 12.
